HORROR IN MOSCOW

CORONATION FETES HAVE A FRIGHTFUL CULMINATION.

Nearly a Million People in the Crowd and Thousands Were Trampled Under Foot in the Mad Scramble for Food.

Horror in Moscow.

The festive plain of Khodynky, or Khodynskoye, where Napoleon I concentrated his troops before his march on Moscow nearly a century ago, was the scene of one of the most awful disasters in the history of Russia Friday morning. A thousand people, mostly peasants, met their lives in a panic at a monster feast given by the Czar to the people.

The disaster occurred between 5 and 6 o'clock a. m. It was intended that the banquet should commence before noon, but the immense throng, which had gathered around the booth where the mugs were to be presented and the food distributed brought to grips that the efforts made were overpowered and thrown to the ground in the struggle which commenced for the food and gifts, many of the adventurous being trampled under the dead. The efforts of the police to control the people were futile, and men, women and children were trampled upon by hundreds, the shrieks and groans of the victims being heard afar.

It is said that the festivities will amount to between 2,000 and 3,000, and it is impossible yet to specify a correct, or even approximate, list of the dead. An official statement issued Sunday morning places the number of dead reported at 1,389 and the seriously or fatally injured at 246. But, in contrast with this official statement, there are 1,200 corpses lying at the morgue, besides the many dead and dying, which are known to have been removed from the fields by friends.

The Czar gave orders for the sum of 1,000 rubles to be given to each bereaved family and that the victims be buried at his expense.

OVER A SCORE ARE DROWNED.

Disastrous Floods in Two Mississippi Towns.

A dispatch from Neosho, Mo., says: Two suburbs of this city, Stark City and Fort Scott, nothing, are in the place and Diamond, South Joplin. No one got drowned in Joplin, though several had a narrow escape. Two children were swept away at Neosho, but one was saved, Hundreds in Joplin and Webb City are ruined. Many houses were swept away. Among those in the vicinity of the Joplin Depot, Southern Kansas, Cane was washed back to shelf and was then floated up six feet above its every business house. Many buildings were washed away, among them being the building of the Joplin Dispatch, together with the office. A number of other houses were washed away. Of the twenty-eight houses in Diamond, fourteen have been taken from the wall.

National, St. Louis, June 16.
Third Congressional, Columbus, August 27.

DEMOCRATIC.

National, Chicago, July 7.

The treasury deficit for May is $4,000,000.

Congress will probably finish up its work this week and adjourn.

The latest pate the loss of life in St. Louis from the great storm at 250.

The Army worm is devastating Union and adjoining counties in Iowa.

Chicago has raised $40,000 to help defray the funeral of the democratic party to take place in that city July 7.

Yellow fever is now getting in its deadly work among the Spanish soldiery in Cuba. They are dying by the hundred.

The fate of the Hawaiian possibility at the great feast might to be a terrible warning to the fellows that are always making a rush for pie.

The attendance at the St. Louis convention on the 10th, will discover that the recent optimistic that city failed to blow down the hotel rates.

A negro at Columbus, Georgia, took Jesse Slayton from court where he was being tried for an alleged assault upon a white woman, and hanged him.

Tom Reed's manager says "Mr. Reed will not accept the nomination for vice president under any circumstances. We expect to nominate some for president."

Whipple, the Canadian "weather prophet," says the blame of the terrible St. Louis tornado to the electrical currents converging in that city. He claims they carried the electrical currents from all parts of the country to that center.

The Cherokee, Iowa, convention adopted by unanimous acclamation Gov. Larrabee for renomination. He has represented the district for three terms in a manner creditable alike to himself and the district, and his fellow republicans are ready to accord him the same compliment.

Gov. D. McGregor was in the city on Friday shaking hands with old friends and making many new ones. He is pretty busy at present looking after his chances for the nomination of governor. If McGregor don't get the desired plum it won't be for want of hustling on his part, and in fact most people around these parts think he is about as well fixed for the place as any among the many aspirants.

The action of Douglas county on last Saturday as their convention in choosing to stand on the platform of Attorney General Churchill for vice president was rather a check down to pour down the throat of that gentleman. Douglas county has 110 delegates and if we are correctly informed at least quite a respectable number of them are for Harrison. It would seem as though there is now a golden opportunity to get this man out of the Northwest part of the state and the republicans of this section might be called upon for the men from Dixon.

While the great majority of the people of this country are silver bulbites they do not believe in free and unlimited coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1, or in other words do not want a dollar that will go into circulation as a dollar worth 50 cents, but have to be backed up by the property of the nation in order to maintain its parity. The gold also monometallists, as the man who would put out a nickle dime, or quarter to drive all other kinds of money out of circulation, and thus be certainly what silver is 16 to 1 would do. Which certainly calls for sincere deliberation in this matter and no true friend of silver can afford to ask for anything else.

At the convention of law men and editors of all the Russian but work a proclamation of amnesty was declared that is quite sweeping to the reformatory orders.

The Czar's manifesto, issued upon the occasion of his coronation, remits all arrears of taxes in Siberia, Finland and Poland, reduces the land tax by one half for ten years, and remits or reduces all fines, besides all petty convictions involving imprisonment or fines up to 500 rubles, with the exception of persons convicted for robbery, embezzlement, usury, extortion, fraudulent bankruptcy or offenses against honor.

All exiles in Siberia after twelve years in the minister parts are to be allowed to choose their place of residence, except in capital cities and governments, but their civil rights will not be restored. Exiled criminals have a third of their sentence remitted, life sentences are commuted to twenty years, and many other punishments are lightened.

Regarding political prisoners, the Minister of Justice is authorized to grant, according to the nature of the offense, remission to individual amnesty individually from prosecution, provided they have been kept confined since their offense.

Further clemency is to be granted to hitherto distinguished from Lithuania and Poland who took part in the Polish rebellion, but who are not guilty of murder, cruelty, robbery or arson, and are released from further police supervision and are granted full freedom in the choice of a residence, provided they take the oath of allegiance. Refugees who are guilty of the offenses mentioned above are to undergo three years' supervision by the police.

To the citizens of Wayne and adjacent counties:

We as members of the G. A. R. feel more grateful to you than we can express in a formula of words for the many deeds of kindness, the many acts of affection that have been extended to us so unexpectedly, and in many cases unsolicited, that it warms our hearts so much that if any of us have hardened our hearts against the workings of a cold outside world or expressed our selfishness having been pushed aside, we want it understood it was not meant for the citizens of Wayne. God bless you, we love you, not so much for the favors rendered us by the assistance, but for the noble feeling put in with which it was given. Ladies who had our clothes scissored of flowers, pressed them to us, saying, bringing them to us. At this, every man placed their flowers at our disposal, the business men said from the time the order was issued by the Commander in Chief to observe Memorial Day, we will see to it that all the expenses are paid, and true to their word the men of the city paid, and showed a much more than we needed to defray all expenses, and then wanted to know if we would have some more, and all their business houses closing their services. Can anything more be said? Can anything more be needed? The same assured and also every thing, their business, and when such a people of Wayne and state give us such a welcome the cup runs over so we in humble gratitude the tender feelings of our hearts. Again we say also friends accept our thanks, and may you live long to enjoy the blessings of liberty, which we have been so dearly bought, and at the same time we wish to you as a reward will offering for anything we have merited in doing.

OLD SHAWGO CALIFORNIA LETTER.

Los Angeles Cal. May 17, 1896.

COMMERCIAL EDITOR:—According to promise I am going to send by occasional letters some features for Memorial day as we give plenty of time for them to get to you. When they arrive "look for them" as I am sitting down and putting this time. I think there will be five hundred dollars worth of flowers that will be at your office. There will be two hundred along. The quote is cut and so large that I think we can get enough to go around. I am a little afraid some time from an Old Army man, who stood at Vicksburg. I'll be right in Decorat Day, and I know I can get a good one. I have not seen the Independent, but I have seen some of the papers and I know it will be good. I have not been to the Home station. The old boys gather at the station to see the people and it is a great gift to see so many old men in their suits of blue. Blue is the color. There are not so many in '76, but today they are a fine looking lot of men. They report about 1400 on the rolls, but quite a number are out of lodging. I believe the old G. A. R. check cost day on average. I have been to just according but one I would confess or not haven't the conversing. There are several cases here that number from 100 to 500. The churches and queen houses send invitations to the poor offering their houses free for the services on Memorial Sunday and Memorial day; I would like to hear of Wayne doing the same. We are having beautiful weather and I suppose the people are with us in fall. On the 7th we had a thunder storm detecting over a small area, but it lightened and thundered quite a time in Nebraska, which is a very unusual occurrence here. Hay making is now going on and the crop is not very heavy owing to a lack of rain and cold weather in April. Frost did considerable damage to fruit. Times are very close and a great many are out of employment. We learning the fishing business so I understand Grover is going to fish. We are all well and enjoying ourselves. With best wishes to all, I am,

A SHY DANCER.

Stories Told by Westerners of the Antics of the Sand Hill Crane.

The sand hill crane is a very bright bird. A Recorder writes says that are very amusing in consequence of significance and alertness. It feeds on the mesa plains or in the barren, where nobody, where it can see a long way in good daylight, or one of a flock is posted as sentinel, and this bird stands with his head upon, ready to give an alarm. It can be killed by decoying it with pasteboard figures cut to imitate one and shape and painted, but mounted birds are better. A pot is dug deep enough to conceal a man. The decoys are put out, and the cranes are seen as they come over. The best region in which them is in the Columbia river watershed and north of 49 in the Pacific coast states.

When one shoots a bird of the flock and bagged of a crane in midair, it falls lifeless like a card house on a tent. But such apparent collapses are sometimes deceptive, as for instance:

"Sidney I could reach him he would off into the air with wheeling flight. Again he hit the ground with fearful violence, but again he got on his feet. Running up, thinking so get this alive for a decoy, I tried to trip him on the head and stun him. He fought fight, and I need my gun as I looked off, and he took to his wings."

The sand hill crane is something of a fighter of much of wonderful and curiously safe sense in a dangerous. They hold long and sharp and are capable of putting out a man's eye.

The sand hill crane has some curious habits that make him of much popular interest to the student of birds. One on the pretty portion of Oregon have latly in the spring, at which the sexes birds seem to be divided. These balls are picturesque affairs from the human social point. There are various dances, which are part of a fancy education, a pretty alone jig. Sometimes the birds leap over one another's backs and flap their wings, giving their peculiar cry. Sometimes these birds have difficulty in taking their lives little like humans, bathhouse and swinds.

Lady Hermington.

"The most gorgeous Lady Hermington," as she was christened by her very old admirer, Dr. Parr, has long since passed into the regions of oblivion, for the poetical world. As an authoress she never succeeded in reaching any mark, though she worked at the business as hard as any of her successors of the present day. Her novels were many and fashionable. Mrs. Gore like in their method, one filled with strange and wonderful scraps of French. Sentimental books of beauty her fancy effects had at fancy prices, and when The News was first started under the ownership of Charles Dickens she was offered an engagement as a paragraph. Exceedingly intelligence and point. Gone is over for it. She was offered either £400 in a year, county, or £250 for six complete sketches, and to efficiently do so the latter, with the research it would at the end of the transaction be a living in the meantime, indeed from London up and work, and from every income paid by the great of her novels, she proved that she was poverty and impoverished.

She died April 1st, 1861, but her child in later days, poor lady, after giving of "Arabian Nights" fancy with her magnificent dreams, lost her fine that her position to the literary world was not at any time one of a well to merely. Dexterity she lived amongst a set of the world which always exhausted her name with Cecil of Disney and an suppose, not without reason. At all events, they never appear to have taken any steps to defend themselves against the charges of papers like The Age, which satisfactorily would be class of journals that spring up in our own day, and rather well out judgment by defeats.—London Spectator.

Magnetized Forest Steels.

"Every day something new is found about electricity and its effects," said Mr. Fry of the Southern Pacific. "Do you know that nine tenths of the dentistes that now every seen are magnetized? Well, they are, and all that is necessary to prove this is to apply the point of your knife or, better still, a small pen point against the steel rib. The attraction is very pretty, and it is caused by the carrying of the artist's tools of the forest rule. The methods in central lands the first time the cranes, and the presence of the metal causes a certain quantity of the field to find a permanent halgement in the steel.

"Everything out the rule, it is very likely that the owner steels of the ladies are similarly affected. Think what the consequences would be if a young man with steel cuff buttons should hug a girl with magnetized corset stays!"—New Orleans Times Democrat.

Vegetable Prevention.

It may be well to mention that no eminent physicians who have been investigating the properties of the different vegetable substances that as one of current unwholesome breakfasts of character and reduces nervous irritability. Peas create fatty tissue and encourage lipomatous, while turnips have just the opposite effect. Celery has the reputation of curing trouble, while onions is beneficial in pulmonary affections, and lettuce acts as a sedative owing to the opium contained in its milky juice, which keeps the skin clear and fresh. Red beets are loved by children, and will add plumpness to the thinnest form, promoting the growth of muscle.—New York Journal.

Liberty, Equality and Fraternity.

Liberty is not in itself, but is valuable only as it leads to equality, and equality that did not lead into fraternity would perish. Equality will change itself into Liberty. Inequality as fast as possible. Hours that are [illegible] there is [illegible] and pleasure shall [illegible] and Fraternity will [illegible] the [illegible] Dryfuss.—W. D. H. Howells in Harpers.

CHAPTER I.

"So maybe I also love you! You dear. No, surely, you really love me. Tell me, tell me, I want to hear it, I want to hear it, I want to hear it!"

Fanny herself, in some excitement, spoke. Darling, darling, darling, for one short moment before, I was sure it had been a dream. But, oh! the joy, the joy! Yes, I was a little tipsy, I suppose, as I said to myself, I never had any more wine, and I felt very happy. Perhaps I had drunk a little too much champagne, or "Chablis" or "Sauterne" or some other sort of wine, for therefore, as the first one, I felt already quite tipsy myself.

"We would be like two turtle doves," I said.

Lilian smiled. "The biggest pounds, one of them is dead." Fanny said, "Yes, I agree with you." Lady Dorothy said, "Yes, I agree with you." Lady Dorothy said, "Yes, I agree with you." Lady Dorothy

FIRST HORSES WERE SMALL.

Some Queer Things About Equine Evolution.

Every one said that a horse is horse, with two or three toes. Sometimes it is a mere freak, but often, as subsequent research, it is a reversion to an ancestral type. The earliest horse known appeared in the Eocene epoch, and was hardly larger than a fox. It had four toes, which developed into a single hoof. There was gradually a further form that had five toes, but no hoofs to represent it. These long-legged and long-eared Eocene ancestors of the horse probably were elegant little creatures, and, like the fox, they lived in the shadow of large quadrupeds of deeper organization, which they in turn fed upon.

The next more remote ancestors of the horse were probably more elegant little creatures, resembling modern tapirs. They had three toes, and they lived in the shadow of the Eocene horses, which in turn fed upon them. Still further back, perhaps, were the ancestors of the tapirs, and these were probably more elegant little creatures, resembling modern rabbits. They had five toes, and they lived in the shadow of the tapirs, which in turn fed upon them. Still further back, perhaps, were the ancestors of the rabbits, and these were probably more elegant little creatures, resembling modern rats. They had five toes, and they lived in the shadow of the rabbits, which in turn fed upon them. Still further back, perhaps, were the ancestors of the rats, and these were probably more elegant little creatures, resembling modern shrews. They had five toes, and they lived in the shadow of the rats, which in turn fed upon them. Still further back, perhaps, were the ancestors of the shrews, and these were probably more elegant little creatures, resembling modern moles. COMMENCEMENT.

The evening of Thursday, May 28th, was an ideal one, the air just cool enough to be bracing and to make the spoken words falling fairly comfortable to all present. The programme consisted of the members of the class of this year, ending just long enough for a few moments between the acts. It was in marked contrast to their class, the school room was to be a thing of the past, student associations were to be severed, literary associations formed. The school of life was to open its doors and beckon them in. Many faces in the highest hopes of their self-sacrifices, and certainly each a witness of the class of '96 can afford to feel proud of the memory in which they rendered the artistic course of study. We know that Fred Jones and Miss Mabel Hazlard, were proud of their class and the class in turn cannot speak in terms too high of the encouragement and help they have always received from their instructors.

The invocation was offered by Rev. Wright after which came that time-old song, "Moonlight on the Lake," during the rendering of this song by the International quartette the room was dark except the light high up in the stage, and the beautiful full moon shone and arguably over the scene on the rear of the stage, with a boat filled with singers glided across the water up and down and finally disappeared through Lower and. Written Tuesday was the valedictorian having for his subject "University of California Education" and that it is a subject that not only reflected credit upon himself but in a way that he expatiated, could he might well be proud of. Pearl E. Newell came next with "Does It Pay," referring to education, and she certainly was successful in the demonstrating in a convincing manner that it does pay. Our own great nation was held up by the young lady as a shining example of what education can and will do for a people. From first to last the full attention of the audience that followed her interesting text of Memphis Tom in a charming manner.

"Evangelical Americanism" was the title of Miss Marion's oration. She pictured clearly, the trial and [illegible] of Americans with the World's attractions and scored in a startling way the fools that [illegible] millions of dollars into foreign lands to see sights on their wonderful [illegible] as the attractions at their own doors. Here she [illegible] lectures and well did she deliver duty in handling it. The double quartette of the school, consisting of the [illegible] Stone, Reynolds, Jones and Miss Jones, Miss Arthur and Walden Turner and Robert [illegible] rendered a beautiful song after which came the center of the class. Miss Tiers, who took for her subject, "The Need of Strict Legislation Today." Now to Miss [illegible] Jones [illegible] quietly [illegible] when she said [illegible] "Women," [illegible] what she was going to say about it. She contrasted the "old woman" with the one of today and [illegible] the lady did not suffer by comparison, and in a voice that could be heard in all parts of the auditorium in [illegible] "Connecticut Highwaymen" was Miss Stone's theme, and well did the [illegible] form her part in showing [illegible] those of whom it [illegible] paid and written were the [illegible] those whom [illegible] ten, the better and [illegible] her subject was in good [illegible] in a very pleasing way from the very opening to the close. The pupils of Mr. Beck's room next marched upon the stage, took their places and sang the audience with a delightful song. Charles Reynolds took for his subject "Value of Competition" and demonstrated that the best there is in man is gotten out by competition. Difficulties to be overcome only able to encourage those coming in contact with them. Of whom the speaker himself is a shining example, and well did he show how they all can be overcomed by all who have the right metal in them. His manner was fearless and his address throughout showed the student and scholar. The entire room was by Pearl Reynolds and well did she perform the duty. Each member of the class and their acquaintances had some of the excellent [illegible] in rhyme and in a way that charged mighty that very young lady was not only able to put her thoughts in verse, but that she possessed the ability and voice to tell it to an audience. She held the undivided attention of her audience throughout in a manner that plainly indicated that she's only was interested and many expressions of commendation could be [illegible] Tuesday.
