MR. MURPHY, the Turkish ambassador in London, has occupied that post for over forty years. The late Mr. Van de Weyer was Belgian minister at London for over thirty years, and Baron Brunow represented Russia there almost as long.

MR. JONAS, the recently appointed consul to Prague, has published a letter to the effect that a cablegram from Vienna, which appeared in a New York paper, concerning his person and his relations to the Austrian government, is false in every particular from beginning to end.

MAION RUTHER, whose stipendiary salary for gathering foreign news is at least according to the English papers, started on a small scale in Aix-la-Chapelle in 1849. Not only is his agency yielded him millions, but his profits in speculation through his only knowledge of important events have been enormous.

A correspondent of the New York Morning Journal gives this hint: Should cholera give us a real this year, I beg to repeat the advice given by a medical man to his patients during the cholera year of '48 in Great Britain: Wear a band of red flannel round the abdominal regions and practice temperance in all things, with a occasional sip of whisky and red pepper.

The business men of the United States, says the Standard and Franchise, are settling down to the fact that business in the future is to be done on a different basis than in the recent years.

In place of the rash, quiet, steady trade, and the profits tend to be made on smaller margins. It will eventually prove better than a "booming" business and a "booming" lot of failures.

The King of Italy has ordered, at his own expense, eight life-sized marble statues to be placed in the existing niches in the facade of the palace. The personages to be denominated are to be eight kings of Naples, viz: George, Frederick II, Charles I. of Anjou, Alfonso of Aragon, Charles V. Charles III. of Bourbon, Joachim Murat, and Victor Emmanuel. The sculptors selected are all Neapolitans.

Washington special: It was expected a change would be made in the internal revenue collectorship of Nebraska this week, but such strong objections have been filed favoring the retention of Collector Post, and so many protests and charges have been presented against the applicants that action on the case may go over several months.

On the morning of the Fourth, while Mr. Overholt, of Columbus, was fording the Platte river with a wagon and team and three horses, one of the horses of the team stepped into a deep hole and the other horses crowded round so that for a time he looked pretty dubious for the whole crew. Three horses were drowned, and Mr. O. came near losing his little boy.

Still the sugar flourishes in all his blustering freshness, says the Omaha Republican. David him out of the seat about a month ago from Illinois, and bound to Oakland, was robbed on the outgoing St. Paul train of $80. He carelessly expressed his money at the depot and slightly flattered by a gentleman from Oklahoma, who struck up an acquaintance with him. And as the train pulled out three men boarded the train and demanded the payment of bills from the friend. The money would readily change a $20 bill and as he produced the money took so many of them snatched the roll and all four fled, making good their escape.

A disfiguring riot recently to the eyes of the Wynnewood Reporter was a boy about fifteen years old so drunk that he could hardly walk, trying to get into the back door of a saloon, on the evening of the 4th, and another boy trying to get him away.

The Omaha Reporter says that J. P. McKee, the lawyer that captured by James F. Herring last spring, escaped from the jail in that place the other night. He asked J. S. Solkris, who was sleeping in the jail in the absence of the sheriff, to let him go to the closet. Believing him trustworthy, and not thinking of an attempted escape, he let him out of his cell about two minutes. That was the last seen of him. McKee had been in the jail for some time, but failed to get track of him. A reward of $25 has been offered for his capture.

NEWS NOTES.
Judge Lawrence, of New York, in the annual court, rendered a decision in the case of the New Mexico Land Company (limited) versus Stephen B. Elkins and others denying a motion to continue an injunction which restrained Elkins from transferring to any other party any portion of the New Mexico land in New Mexico. This suit was brought by the company to establish the title to one-sixth interest in the land known as the "Mora tract." It is alleged that the land was owned by Thomas S. Childs, S. S. Shields of Yorktown tract, company, with W. C. Maul.

FOR HER SWEET SAKE

A group of three—Ronald Sylvester and his two sisters, Blanche and Grace—were seated in the room which did the duty of parlor, library and dining-room, in the tiny house which had been willed to them by their grandfather. Added to this bequest was a sum of money invested in the funds, the interest of which, with strict economy, would feed and clothe the recipients. The remainder of the old gentleman's property went to Reginald, the child of his son Jasper, and was to accumulate until he became of age, with the exception of what was necessary for him to disburse for living expenses.

When he was to reach his majority he was to enter into possession of the large inheritance, provided he should consent to fulfill the instructions contained in a sealed note, which was not to be opened until then.

It however, he refused to obey his grandfather's wish, the money was left to either hand indirect heirs, with the exception of an amount equal to that set apart for the maintenance of Blanche.

Blanche, the eldest of the three, was a girl of twenty-four years, and her eyes were full of tears as she looked at the two girls who were sitting beside her. She had been told that the money was to be divided equally among the three, but she knew that if she refused to consent to the conditions of the will, the money would go to her father's other children.

Blanche looked at her sisters, Grace and Rosa, who were sitting beside her. They were both looking at her with expressions of anxiety and concern. Grace was the youngest of the three, and she was the most beautiful. She had a sweet smile and a gentle voice, and she was the one who had been the most devoted to her grandfather.

her eyes, the brightness of manner, the glow of love, Reginald knew that you loved anyone you don't want you to go and fall in love with some stranger, I would break my heart."

And tears overflowed, the blue eyes, which had but the moment before been so bright and merry.

Reginald flushed. Then he turned and looked at Grace with an expression in his eyes that would have told, did the whole truth, had she been looking towards him.

But she stood with her head turned away, so that he could only see the delicate contour of her pretty profile and the graceful sweep of her hair, which she had pulled softly, but with a tremor in his voice which told of some deep underlying agitation, "look at me."

Grace advanced, but she obeyed. The thought which had been presented to her mind had made her opening spring time of life seem all of a sudden changed and cold as though its water had come.

She raised her eyes to Reginald's face and for an instant they looked straight at each other.

Then Reginald put his arms about her and drew her to him and kissed her.

"You are to be my wife, Grace—that is the way on which I want to marry you. Do you think I could ever love anyone else? I thought you know me better. Naughty little girl; you were jealous. But it is such an encouraging sign, that if you will confess it freely, I will forgive you."

"Yes," he murmured, "asked Grace, smiling through her tears, "I only know that I felt as though my heart had turned, all at once, into something that hurt me. But what will Ronald say? We must go."

It was with a new and strange feeling of awe, which Grace said this. Previously Reginald had been to her like a brother. Now, he was so much dearer, and yet she had lost all feeling of ease with him. The too, this depth of emotion which filled her heart was distressing as well as delightful.

"You are so much dearer to me now," Reginald's kisses had burned upon her lips she had changed from a careless happy-hearted girl into a thoughtful, loving girl. But she must have time to become accustomed to regarding Reginald in the light of a lover. "Thus it was that she became restless in his society and would fain have flown away from him into solitude, where she could commune with her own heart."

Although Reginald comprehended but dimly the state of her mind, he followed her obediently into the house, where Ronald was waiting to meet her. He had resigned himself patiently to the task of coaching the ardent student.

After seeing him safely beside her apartment, Grace disappeared, and did not become visible again until tea-time, and then she was so unusually quiet that Blanche looked at her several times with a constantly increasing anxiety, which culminated at last in threatening to send for the doctor.

Reginald was about to speak, but an entrancing look from Grace checked him, and he later on she whispered to him, she went with him to the gate.

"Keep what has passed a secret, Reginald, until you know the contents of the sealed letter. I would never consent to stand in the way of your future prospects."

"And you wish not to win you, my darling, will either be the making of the marriage of my life?"

"Yes, yes, yes, Reginald. People will talk harshly of me if they hear of a projected marriage between us. Promise to keep it a secret for a while."

"I will promise anything to please you, Grace. But remember one thing—I will never give you up."

"Grace, look at this!"

There was an excited exclamation in her voice, which caused Grace to turn. She saw that Reginald was holding a small envelope, which he had just received from the post. He looked at it with a smile, and then he looked at Grace.

"It is from your father," he said. "He has just died, and he has left you the money."

Grace looked at him with a look of surprise and joy. "My father has died?" she asked.

"Yes," he said. "He has left you the money, and he has also left you the house."

LOCAL MATTERS.

A new mill is building in Creighton. Our business men were very busy Saturday.

Monday was a scorcher and you could almost see corn grow.

Straw hats cheaper than ever at Oxford & Strickland's.

The crematory is turning out 1500 pounds of gilt edged butter a week.

Mr. Panabaker is doing good and efficient work on Main street between first and second.

J. P. Gaertner supplied the Lutheran church with three-hand-some pulpit chairs this week.

A great deal of barley and rye have been cut and wheat and oats are nearly ready.

W. O. Gamble has put down a walk at his residence similar to the one in front of Taylor's bank.

A couple of splendid showers passed a few miles south of town Sunday afternoon, but only a few drops fell here.

Posters are out announcing a public sale of stock and farm implements at Meurs' stock yards Saturday, August 1st.

We understand that the meetings of the club will be held on Wednesday evening at the club.

We are to have a fair this fall! A splendid man asked the thrifty earth yesterday morning.

C. O. Fisher has resigned his position at Bailey & Dyer's lumber yard.

A. T. Wither has some very fine peans, as we know by trying them.

C. C. Besteder had a colt very badly cut up in a barb wire fence Sunday night.

Dr. J. S. Romine, the dentist will begin his visit, Wayne, July 26th to 31st inclusive.

The Monday Club had a luncheon party with Mrs. P. A. English this afternoon.

W. O. Gamble heads the list with one hundred and sixty acres of fine broom corn.

Love's drug store is being raised up to grade, Harry Wallace is doing the "finishing."

"The Power of the Gospel" will be the subject of the morning sermon at the M. E. church next Sunday.

E. L. Hatch and his mother Mrs. Potts, have bought of P. A. English the property now occupied by E. A. Philcox.

The band boys expect to get instruments as soon as satisfactory arrangements can be made to procure them.

Don't forget the free lecture before the teachers institute in the Presbyterian church this evening. All are invited.

Dr. J. S. Romine, the dentist will make his twelfth visit to Wayne July 25th to 31st inclusive. Call early and make engagements for work.

A good soaking shower came down last night and we do not expect to hear any complaint about the corn needing rain for two weeks at least.

If some one will send a good tailor to Wayne, he will confer a favor on both the tailor and the town. There is a good location here for the right man.

The cellar under Smith & Sons' store has been cemented, and the firm expects to avoid the trouble from water in the cellar that they have heretofore experienced.

An exchange has a long article giving girls advice as to how to manage a man. It ought to be read as the famous receipt for cooking a hare. "First catch your man."

F. M. Nordrup lectured before the Normal Monday evening on "The Law," Frank Fuller Tuesday evening on "What, When, and How to read." Mr. Lodge lectures this evening.

Anyone who has paid penalty on overdue taxes can have the same refunded by calling at the Treasurer's office.

D. W. Britton Co. Treas. We've been watching the Republican to see how many inhabitants Wakefield has by the new census, but thus far there has not been a twitter. Wayne has 818 Bro. Herb.

We are requested to say that unless the boys quit smoking and playing with matches in and around barns and corn cribs about town that they will be arrested and lodged in the lock-up.

The street commission now informs us that three thousand loads of hay have been put on Main street and are to be removed by the end of the week.

A sermon on "Bible Preaching" by Rev. C. W. the Presbyterian church this morning.

Several match games of which the fate of the county depended, were played this week.

We have heard a number of persons speak of the superior quality of the lumber that is being put into the new mill.

New Watermelons, Peaches, Pears, Apples, Raspberries, Oranges, Bananas and all kinds of vegetables Friday evening at Whilout's.

Perfect peace is not possible even in the deepest retirements. A wolf will creep into the most pastoral life.—Rocky Mountain Celt.

Some one sent us a copy of the issue of the Rocky Mountain Celt for July 4th, published at Denver, printed very attractively in red, white and blue.

A horse belonging to Wm. Wagner of Plum Creek precinct was stolen Monday night and no trace of horse or thief has yet been discovered.

R. Watworth informs us that a bolt of lightning struck in a bunch of horses on his ranch yesterday morning and killed one of his best mules. A couple of horses were knocked over but not seriously hurt. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

Base Ball.

The match game of ball between the La. Portes and Red Stockings of Oorn Creek was played on the grounds of the latter last Saturday as was announced last week. A large number of spectators from the neighborhood witnessed the game. The following is the score by innings:

EDS. HERALD-TRIBUNE.

Wayne Neb.

Dear sirs; The Family of which Jonas K. Ryther was a member wish to express through the columns of your paper their sincere and heartfelt thanks to the people of Wayne, Wakefield and vicinity for the assistance so freely and promptly rendered by them in the search for the missing body of their son and brother Jonas K. E. Ther.

We would also thank the Wayne Lodge 128 A. F. and A. M. for the good work performed by them in burying the body decently and we also appreciate the sympathy extended by them to us. We also extend our thanks to the ladies that in token of their esteem for him while living prepared the floral wreath to accompany his casket.

Other papers will please copy, especially the Wakefield Republican.

Yours &c

NELSON RYTHER.
