When dawn's sick, my sunbeam-sister
Sits for hours, and hours on end,
She speaks in whispers to her mother,
And grows sick slowly, sister, grows sick.
And in her eyes and sweet in her hand,
And there is no helping or comfort
Whole day and the night long.
Then I, the sunbeam-brother,

HASHEESH.

The Cause of Insanity Among the Native Indian.

The experts of the opinion of Sidney Hodge as to the cause of insanity among the natives of India are worth a careful study. The opinion of medical men generally is that the use of hasheesh is the cause of insanity among the natives. Hasheesh is a drug made from the leaves of the hemp plant, and is a powerful narcotic. It is used in the form of a decoction, or in the form of a powder, and is generally taken in the morning before breakfast. The effect of the drug is to produce a state of mind which is described as one of "exquisite happiness." The drug is said to be the cause of insanity in India, and it is said that it is the cause of insanity among the natives of India. The drug is said to be the cause of insanity among the natives of India. The drug is said to be the cause of insanity among the natives of India. The drug is said to be

Creeping Consumption

Do not think for a single moment that consumption will ever strike you a sudden blow. It does not come this way.

It creeps its way along.

First, you think it is a little cold; enough but a little racking cough; then a little loss in weight; then a restless cough; then the fever and the night sweats.

The suddenness comes when you have a hemorrhage.

Either stop the disease while it is creeping.

You can do it with

[illegible]

Told by a Retired Burglar.

"When I looked into the clothing room of a house that I was in one night," said the retired burglar, "I saw a man sitting in a chair perched up on the dining room table. That seemed a singular place for a man to get to at such drunk as, but I thought I'd have to find out what it was for, so I took a seat on the floor to wait for him to come down. I waited and waited, and he didn't come down. Then I began to think that he was drunk and had fallen asleep, and I was afraid he might wake up and interrupt me. So I took a seat in the further chair in the library and waited for him to wake up. When I'd waited what I thought was a reasonable time without hearing from him, I looked in again, and there he was, still sitting there, just like mine.

"But the queer thing is that night, there was something peculiar about him, and I ventured to have my own sight on him now, and then. I saw that he wasn't drunk at all, but a rack of rheumatism, which is not so far off in appearance from drunk, so I thought I'd try after being sure in the case. The [illegible] I'd [illegible] and [illegible] for hours, but his clothes had worn off in the meantime. Why, I'd set there waiting for him to go to bed so long that it was quite too late for burglary."

Chess an Ancient Game.

When Alexander was asking for more territory to conquer, and when Chesparas was conducting himself more as a grown than as a fully grown gentleman, realizing the trifling nature of a "little skirmish or a queen's affairs, were playing chess. Those were the days of either of these monarchs persons with leisure to be expended upon something worth while were playing chess.

It is more and fifty years ago, this alleged pastime. Recent excavations in the pyramid field of Sakkara show that North of the pyramid King Tetti, of, King Teti, two great chess sets have been discovered which were erected for two high officials.

In one of the rooms there is a wall painting which shows the royal sports. They hunted and fished in those days, and they played chess.

Peculiar Pastime.

The Orientals of Bokhara indulge in a peculiar pastime, which is attributed to nomadic "cow-boy" in Turkestan, who are idlers. A description goes back the plate of the ball, and [illegible] necessary for it.

[illegible]

RECENT INVENTIONS.

Book down cases are revolutionized by devices inserted in the front of the case to correspond with holes formed in the frontispiece to admit air to the inclosed and interior of the case.

To assist in holding wrapping paper and in dispensing holes in the material, is inserted near a flexible metal ring, the ends of which pass each other and engage one of a series of notches to expand the ring to the proper size.

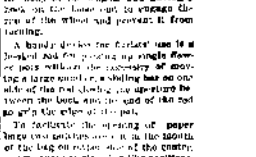
For locking the objects of lady's toilet, while traveling, a new device consists of a rubber band attached to the body of the object, and having a hook on the free end to engage the rim of the wheel and prevent it from turning.

A handy device for dentists' use is a hooked rod for grasping an single flower pots without the necessity of moving a large number, a sliding bar on one side of the rod closing the aperture between the hook and the end of the rod so grip the edge of the pot.

To facilitate the opening of paper lamp cut bottles, one is in the form of the bag on either side of the center, or two rows are also in like positions, so as to expand part open of the bottle so that they may be grasped separately to expand the mouth of the bottle.

Merry go-rounds are being built in England in which the animals jump forward and backward at intervals, instead the usual, the horses being suspended from pulleys running on a circular overhead track, motion being imparted in the track of the proper shape to lift the rider at each bounce.

An English inventor has patented a life saving coat to be worn on sea voyages, which is shaped like an ordinary coat and may be worn as such, inflatable pockets being provided, which are filled with air through a mouthpiece carried in the pocket and attached in a tube connected with the interior of the coat.



The Boer war is most popular in Holland, according to Ian Maclaren.

Dr. A. Theodor a Thomas, philologe, who also speaks several modern among the epistles of Northern Sweden and Norway disguised in the cage of their dialect, is about publish a work on their language, life and manners.

Chapman & Hall are to publish a complete library edition of Smollett's works in the same general style as their reproduction of Fielding. It will consist of twelve volumes and will have an introduction by W. E. Henley.

Mrs. Craigie, who is still called on her title page and the announcements of her plays "John Oliver Hobbes," is engaged upon the sequel to her last novel, "The School for Saints," and is also at work upon a historical play which will be called "Cromwell and Lucinda," but neither of the works will be before the public for some time to come.

Wemyss Reid declares that the original of Rochester in "Jane Eyre" was the brother of Charlotte Bronte's friend, Ellen Nussey, and was a West Riding merchant who had all the unpolished force and decayed egotism which sometimes marked the Yorkshire gentry of those days. Charlotte, Mr. Reid adds, "idealized him into Rochester and pleased herself by the midst of circumstances of which his own life knew nothing."

The death of Mrs. Lynn Linton calls attention to the circumstances that many of the most famous women novelists came of a clerical stock. Jane Austen was the daughter of a Hampshire rector, the Brontes were the daughters of the vicar of Haworth, Olive Schreiner is the daughter of a South African missionary, and Mrs. Humphry Ward is the granddaughter of the Rev. Thomas Arnold, the famous headmaster of Rugby.

The elegant editions abroad of the best books of well known modern authors seem to have left the popular taste. Rider Haggard's "King Solomon's Mines" ran to thirty copies and is being exploited. This was followed by "Treasure Island," which has done almost as well, and now Chassle announces Mr. Quiller Couch's "Dead Man's Rock," a book of adventure that is less known, but which is likely to meet the popularity of its two predecessors.

Miss. Pate's Burglar Alarms.

Visiting Miss. Pate's superb castle it strikes a guest not long ago that a very curious incident happened. Indeed to open the window in the middle of the night, and, to his surprise, bells began to ring in every quarter of the grounds.

Very much scared, for realizing that he had, after all, only set a burglar alarm going, the guest descended to reassure the household, when he instantly found himself in danger from a dozen roving dogs, who had slipped their freedom and were growling and snapping in the ugliest manner.

At breakfast next morning he learnt all about this curious bit of Miss. Pate's eccentricity at it. The singer has a great dread of burglars. Some time ago a gang of crew gentlemen from London attempted to obtain admission to her mansion for a little object, and since that date Miss. Pate has set up every kind of burglar alarm she knows.

"The queer part about one of these is," said the gentleman noticing, "Her Margaret dog, an emotional lamb, who might be called an ass with a little [illegible] of [illegible], is kept rigorously chained to a patent kennel, into the chain is so arranged that should anyone attempt to open a window on a [illegible] floor in the night the dog is released and free to roam at his pleasure, so that the prevent that he would not [illegible] for the burglars and do his duties. The idea is ingenious and on the [illegible] discovered, not a little dangerous."
