Business Being Out.

The old fashioned business method of depending upon the customer to find a product is being abandoned in many lines of business. It is being replaced by a more modern method of advertising and promotion. This is especially true in the case of the automobile industry, where the manufacturer spends large sums of money to get his product before the public. This is done through a variety of means, including newspaper advertisements, magazine articles, and direct mail campaigns. The result is that the customer is no longer the one who finds the product, but rather the one who is presented with it. This is a significant change in the way of doing business, and it is one that is being adopted by many other industries as well.

The result of this change is that the manufacturer is able to reach a much larger audience than he could by relying solely on the customer. This is especially true in the case of the automobile industry, where the manufacturer is able to reach people who are not yet ready to buy a car. By advertising and promoting his product, the manufacturer is able to create a desire for it, and to get it into the hands of people who are ready to buy. This is a very important part of the business process, and it is one that is being adopted by many other industries as well.

The Power of Reason.

A. H. Jones, of Cleveland, Ohio, writes with regard to the article of the 15th issue of the Journal. He says: "I have read your article with interest and with much profit. It is a very good one, and it is one that is being adopted by many other industries as well."

He then goes on to say that he has been very successful in his business because of his use of reason. He says that he has been able to reach a much larger audience than he could by relying solely on the customer. This is a very important part of the business process, and it is one that is being adopted by many other industries as well.
