STORY OF THE SEA.
Tale Told by the King of the Good Ship Tepee.

There is a story, the oldest and truest, of a man who sailed across the sea in a little boat, and who, after a long and hard voyage, came to a land where he found a woman who was as true and as good as he himself. This is the story of the sea, and of the love that grew between a man and a woman who were separated by the waves of the sea, but who were reunited by the hand of fate.

The man was a sailor, and he had sailed for many years. He had seen many things, and he had learned many lessons. He was a good man, and he was a true man. He was a man who had a heart as big as the sea, and a soul as pure as the sky.

One day, as he was sailing across the sea, he saw a small boat in the distance. He went to it, and he found a woman who was as true and as good as he himself. She was a woman who had been separated from her husband by the waves of the sea, and she was looking for him. She was a woman who had a heart as big as the sea, and a soul as pure as the sky.

They were reunited, and they lived together in a little boat. They were a man and a woman who were as true and as good as each other. They were a man and a woman who had a heart as big as the sea, and a soul as pure as the sky.

The man and the woman were a man and a woman who were as true and as good as each other. They were a man and a woman who had a heart as big as the sea, and a soul as pure as the sky.

Pistols and Pestles.

The duelling pistol now occupies its proper place in the museum of the collector of relics of barbarism. The pistol ought to have been the pestle that served out pills like bullets, so be it that the pestle is in evidence, and will be probably, until everybody has tested the virtue of Ayer's cathartic pills. They treat the liver as a friend, not as an enemy. Instead of driving it, they soothe it. They are commended to the throat, and they are administered thoroughly and faithfully under obstructing conditions, and if the obstructions are removed, the liver will do its daily duty. When your liver wants help, get this pill that cures it.

MRS. CURTIS, NEW YORK.
Tells Her Experience With Ovaria.

A full throbbing pain, accompanied by a sense of tenderness and heat low down in the side, with an occasional shooting pain, indicates inflammation of the ovaria. If the pain is confined to the region of your ovaries, you are suffering from the first stages of ovarian inflammation.
