Knowledge Worth Having.

The knowledge of the world and of our own country is a most valuable possession. It is the foundation of all our progress and the source of all our power. It is the key to all our knowledge and the door to all our wisdom. It is the light that guides us through the darkness of ignorance and the fog of superstition. It is the strength that enables us to overcome our enemies and the courage that gives us the power to stand up for our rights. It is the treasure that no thief can steal and no fire can burn. It is the inheritance that we should all strive to acquire and the goal that we should all seek to reach.

RIGHTFUL HEIR OF A KING.

When the late King of the Netherlands died, his only son, Prince Leopold, was the rightful heir to the throne. However, Prince Leopold was a minor at the time of his father's death, and his mother, Queen Louise, was the regent. She ruled the kingdom for several years until Prince Leopold reached the age of majority. During this time, the kingdom was governed wisely and justly, and the people prospered. Prince Leopold's reign was a period of peace and stability for the Netherlands.

THROUGH THE STRAITS.

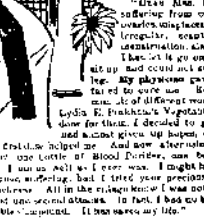

The British fleet, under the command of Admiral Sir John Jellicoe, was sent to the Mediterranean Sea to protect British interests. The fleet consisted of several battleships, cruisers, and destroyers. It was a powerful force that was well-equipped for any challenge. The fleet's mission was to maintain peace and stability in the region and to protect British trade routes. The fleet's presence was a deterrent to any potential aggressors and a source of confidence for the British people.
