A WOMAN'S ERROR

By Marion V. Hollis

In the early part of the year 1900, a young woman named Alice, who had just graduated from a normal school, was employed as a teacher in a small town in the West. She was a beautiful girl, with a sweet disposition, and was very popular with her pupils. Her salary was $100.00 per month, and she was allowed to board at the school. One day, while she was teaching, she was called to the principal's office. The principal, a man of middle age, with a stern face, looked at her for some time before he spoke. "Alice," he said, "I have some news for you. We are going to discontinue your services. The board of trustees has decided to employ a man as a teacher in your place. They think a man is more suitable for the position. You will have to find another school to go to."

Alice was shocked and distressed. She had never expected to be dismissed. She had worked hard and faithfully, and she had never had any fault found with her. She felt that she had been treated unjustly. She went home and told her mother about the news. Her mother was also shocked and advised her to look for another school as soon as possible. Alice searched for several weeks, but she could not find any other school. She was in a desperate situation. One day, she was walking in a park and saw a man sitting on a bench. He was a stranger, but she felt drawn to him. She sat down next to him and they talked for some time. The man was kind and sympathetic. He told her about his own life and how he had come to this town. He said that he was a man of means and that he was looking for a wife. Alice was attracted to him and she fell in love with him. She decided to marry him, and she told her mother about it. Her mother was angry and told her that she was making a mistake. Alice, however, was determined. She had found a man who she thought was better than any other man she had ever known. She married him and they lived together for some time. But Alice's mistake was not over yet. Her husband was not what she thought he was. He was a man of bad habits and he was very jealous. He wanted her to be with him all the time and he would not let her go. Alice was in a miserable state of mind. She was unhappy and she was lonely. She longed for her mother and for the life she had left behind. One day, she decided to run away. She packed her few belongings and she went to her mother's house. Her mother was overjoyed to see her and she took her in. Alice had made a great mistake, but she was now back home and she was safe.
