THE DUTY OF BANKERS.

What We Owe in Our Common and to Each Other.

By Dr. H. C. Jones, Editor Wayne Republican.

I submit myself to you for an opinion on the duty of bankers as it affects the public interest in these times of depression and financial stringency. I do not mean to say that I am a banker, but I am a citizen and I have the right to express my views on a subject which affects the interests of all of us.

Many would say that a banker's duty is to serve his customers and to make money for himself. This is a very narrow view of the banker's duty. A banker is a public officer and his duty is to serve the community.

The public interest in banking is a subject which has been discussed by many writers from time immemorial. It is a subject which has been discussed by many writers from time immemorial.
