MARTIN HERMANN'S WILL

A STORY OF CITY LIFE

By MAU ALFRED ROCHEFORT

CHAPTER VIII

It was a fine day in the city. The sun shone brightly, and the birds were singing in the trees. The people were out and about, and the city was full of life and activity. Martin Hermann was walking down the street, looking thoughtful. He had been thinking about the will that he had just received, and the questions that it raised in his mind.

He had just received a letter from his father, telling him that he had died, and that he had left all his property to Martin. Martin had been surprised at this, for he had never expected to inherit anything from his father. He had been a poor boy, and his father had been a rich man. But now, Martin was a rich man, and his father was a poor boy.

Martin had been thinking about this for some time, and he had decided that he would not accept the will. He would rather live as a poor boy than as a rich man. He would rather work for his living than sit on a pile of money. He would rather be happy and content than rich and unhappy.

He had decided that he would not accept the will, and he had written his father a letter telling him so. He had not heard from his father since, and he was wondering if the letter had reached him. He was walking down the street, looking thoughtful, when he saw a man who he knew.

The man was an old man, with white hair and a long white beard. He was wearing a dark coat and a hat. He was walking towards Martin, and Martin stopped to talk to him.

"Hello, Martin," said the man. "How are you?"

"Hello, Mr. Smith," said Martin. "I'm well, thank you."

"I'm glad to hear that," said Mr. Smith. "I've been thinking about you a lot lately. How are your mother and father?"

"They're both well, thank you," said Martin. "My mother is still in the hospital, but she's getting better every day."

"That's good to hear," said Mr. Smith. "I hope she'll be home soon. I've been thinking about you a lot lately. How are your studies?"

"They're going well, thank you," said Martin. "I'm doing pretty well in school."

"That's good to hear," said Mr. Smith. "I'm glad to hear that. I've been thinking about you a lot lately. How are your friends?"

"They're all well, thank you," said Martin. "I've been seeing them a lot lately. They're all doing pretty well in school."

"That's good to hear," said Mr. Smith. "I'm glad to hear that. I've been thinking about you a lot lately. How are your plans for the future?"

"I'm not sure," said Martin. "I'm thinking about going to college, but I'm not sure if I should. I'm thinking about going to work, but I'm not sure if I should. I'm thinking about going to college, but I'm not sure if I should. I'm thinking about going to work, but I'm not sure if I should."

"I'm glad to hear that," said Mr. Smith. "I'm glad to hear that. I've been thinking about you a lot lately. How are your plans for the future?"

"I'm not sure," said Martin. "I'm thinking about going to college, but I'm not sure if I should. I'm thinking about going to work, but I'm not sure if I should. I'm thinking about going to college, but I'm not sure if I should. I'm thinking about going to work, but I'm not sure if I should."

NEW CENTER OF POPULATION.

It is a fact that the population of the United States is increasing at a rapid rate. This is due to many causes, but the most important is the immigration of people from other countries. The population of the United States in 1900 was about 75 million, and in 1910 it was about 90 million. It is estimated that by 1920 it will be about 100 million.

The population of the United States is not only increasing in number, but also in density. This is due to the fact that the population is becoming more concentrated in the eastern half of the country. In 1900, the eastern half of the United States had about 50 million people, and the western half had about 25 million. In 1910, the eastern half had about 60 million people, and the western half had about 30 million. It is estimated that by 1920, the eastern half will have about 70 million people, and the western half will have about 30 million.

The concentration of population in the eastern half of the United States is due to many causes. One of the most important is the fact that the eastern half of the United States has a longer coastline than the western half. This makes it easier for people to travel to and from the eastern half of the United States. Another important cause is the fact that the eastern half of the United States has a longer history than the western half. This makes it easier for people to find work and homes in the eastern half of the United States.

The concentration of population in the eastern half of the United States is also due to the fact that the eastern half of the United States has a more developed economy than the western half. This makes it easier for people to find work in the eastern half of the United States. The eastern half of the United States has a longer history of manufacturing and commerce, and this has led to the development of a more advanced economy.

The concentration of population in the eastern half of the United States is also due to the fact that the eastern half of the United States has a more favorable climate than the western half. This makes it easier for people to live in the eastern half of the United States. The eastern half of the United States has a more moderate climate, with less extreme temperatures than the western half.

The concentration of population in the eastern half of the United States is also due to the fact that the eastern half of the United States has a more fertile soil than the western half. This makes it easier for people to grow crops in the eastern half of the United States. The eastern half of the United States has a more fertile soil, which is better suited to growing crops than the western half.

The concentration of population in the eastern half of the United States is also due to the fact that the eastern half of the United States has a more abundant supply of water than the western half. This makes it easier for people to live in the eastern half of the United States. The eastern half of the United States has a more abundant supply of water, which is better suited for living than the western half.

STORY OF A SMOOTH DIME.

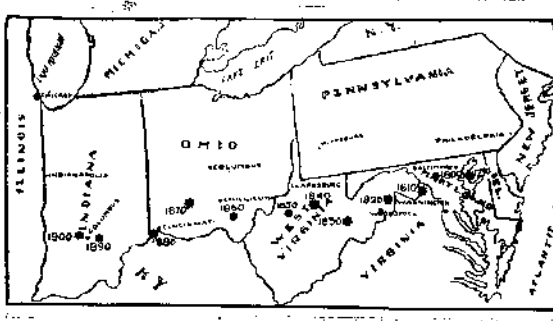

The story of a smooth dime is a story of a man who had a very smooth dime. The man was a poor man, and he had a very smooth dime. He had been saving for a long time, and he had finally saved a very smooth dime. He was very proud of his very smooth dime, and he showed it to all his friends.

The man was walking down the street, looking at his very smooth dime. He was very proud of his very smooth dime, and he showed it to all his friends. He was walking down the street, looking at his very smooth dime. He was very proud of his very smooth dime, and he showed it to all his friends.

to Whom I May Confide.

The ladies portrait is that of my daughter Jennie, who was afflicted with Catarrh of the Eye. I took her to several eye doctors and they pronounced her case almost hope. I then went to the school for the blind in this state, which she attended for two years. In July, 1900, Dr. J. C. Clark of Sioux City, was consulted in regard to her case and he gave great hopes of restoring her sight by the use of glasses. He fitted her with the glasses which she now wears, which have no improved her vision. She is now attending in the public schools in Wayne, Nebraska, and is doing very well.

The above cut is an exact reproduction of the No. 1 grinder, for grinding all kinds of grain or corn on the cob. We furnish this mill with two sets of burrs, both coarse and fine grinding. These sweep mills have as large a capacity as a geared mill on account of their extra large cones and will work a horse lighter on account of there being no friction taken up by gears. On these burrs we give you a written guarantee for five years from the factory which, if there are any defective burrs, they will replace within that time free of charge. We also have the No. 2 in this same make with a greater capacity for corn on the cob. This mill has an extra crushing capacity which prepares the corn for the burrs. It also has a larger hopper. This mill will grind as fine as any burr mill and with less draft than any geared mill made. Those who are thinking of getting a feed grinder it will pay you to get the

for it has all the points that any geared mill has. Call at the office and get one of the Grain King memorandum books free of charge.

STORIES OF DR. RIBBATH.

How the Doctor of the New York Times

The New York Times has published a series of articles about Dr. Ribbath, a prominent physician. The stories describe his medical achievements and his contributions to the field of medicine.

Dr. Ribbath's work has been widely recognized and he is considered one of the leading authorities in his field. His research and clinical experience have led to significant advances in medical science.

Senator Davis's political career was marked by several key achievements. He served as the first chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and was instrumental in the passage of several important bills.

The proposed compulsory reserve act would require banks to maintain a certain percentage of their deposits in reserve. This would help to ensure the stability of the banking system.

The Chinese government's terms for the Szechwan problem were seen as a major setback for the United States. The terms included the cession of territory and the payment of large sums of money.

The flooding along the Mississippi River has caused the evacuation of thousands of people. The water has reached record levels and is expected to continue for several more weeks.

Dr. Ribbath's research on the treatment of various diseases has been published in several medical journals. His findings have provided valuable insights into the nature of these diseases.

The stories of Dr. Ribbath's life and work have inspired many young people to pursue careers in medicine. His dedication to his profession is a true example to follow.

House Coats!

One of the most useful garments any gentleman can possess is a house coat. There is no one so fond of comfort as he is to the square inch, than any garment he can own. He has them in every imaginable style. All wool tricot—lapses and pockets, put in satin, and satin quilted linings in several shades. Another popular style is the flannel shape—satin or cloth—very and fancy plaid lining and collars. We have also several other desirable styles and the prices range from $5.00 to $10.00. We like to show them in our coats. Twenty different styles to select from.
