TRAINED WILD ANIMALS.

The Constant Fight to Which They Are Subjected.

The constant fight to which they are subjected is a most interesting one. It is a fight for survival, a fight for life. They are trained to perform feats of strength and endurance, to overcome the most difficult obstacles. They are trained to fight against the elements, against the weather, against the heat of the sun, against the cold of the winter. They are trained to fight against the most dangerous of enemies, against the most powerful of predators. They are trained to fight against the most formidable of opponents, against the most skilled of hunters. They are trained to fight against the most insidious of diseases, against the most deadly of poisons. They are trained to fight against the most terrifying of disasters, against the most devastating of catastrophes. They are trained to fight against the most overwhelming of odds, against the most crushing of defeats. They are trained to fight against the most agonizing of pains, against the most excruciating of tortures. They are trained to fight against the most humiliating of humiliations, against the most degrading of indignities. They are trained to fight against the most shameful of shames, against the most disgraceful of dishonors. They are trained to fight against the most shameful of shames, against the most disgraceful of dishonors. They are trained to fight against the most shameful of shames, against the most disgraceful of dishonors.

ONE OF THOSE PUZZLING CASES

COST OF BOER WAR.

EXPENDITURES NEARLY EQUAL TO REVENUE SINCE 1895.

From the Bureau of Finance, Washington, D. C., a report is published showing that the expenditures of the government since 1895 have nearly equalled the revenue.

The report shows that the total expenditures of the government since 1895 have amounted to $1,100,000,000, while the total revenue has amounted to $1,000,000,000. This shows a deficit of $100,000,000.

The report also shows that the expenditures of the government have increased steadily since 1895, while the revenue has remained relatively stable. This is due to the increasing cost of the Boer war and other military operations.

The report further shows that the expenditures of the government have increased in every year since 1895, while the revenue has only increased in some years. This has resulted in a growing deficit.

The report concludes that the government must find ways to reduce its expenditures and increase its revenue in order to maintain a balanced budget. This may involve cutting back on military spending and increasing taxes.

The report also notes that the government has been successful in reducing its deficit in some years, but this has been due to temporary factors such as the sale of public lands.

The report further states that the government has been successful in reducing its deficit in some years, but this has been due to temporary factors such as the sale of public lands.

AS A CHECKER-BOARD.

WHOLE WORLD IS PLACED BEFORE THE PRESIDENT.

As the President of the United States, the whole world is placed before him. He is the final authority on all matters of national and international importance.

The President's role is to ensure the smooth operation of the government and to represent the United States in international affairs. He is also responsible for signing laws and appointing and dismissing judges.

The President's power is derived from the Constitution and the people. He is elected by the Electoral College and serves a four-year term.

The President's duties are many and varied. He must keep the public informed of the state of the Union and propose legislation to Congress. He also has the power to grant pardons and reprieves.

The President's role is a unique one in the world. He is the only person who is elected by the people and who has the power to represent the entire nation.

The President's power is limited by the Constitution and the laws of the United States. He must act in the best interests of the nation and its people.

The President's role is a challenging one. He must be able to make difficult decisions and to stand up to pressure from all sides.
