GILLESPIE GOT TOO GAY.

Leaves Numerous Friends to Mourn an Unseemly Departure:

A young man named Charley Gillespie, who has been attending college, has a whole lot of Wayne people missing this week. He carefully planned a grand coup, that is he cooped in all the coin he could borrow from his friends on the strength of a draft he was waiting for, and which, when it arrived, proved to be a frosty article. B. Preston is out some $12 on the young man's cupidity, and a large number of students mourn his departure from 50 cents up to as much as Gillespie could work them for. The stores are also at much worry to account for numerous purchases of merchandise. It takes a long time for some people to find out somethings about other people. When an investigation was made of Gillespie's trunk which was left behind, all that was found was a lot of girls' pictures.

A Cold Proposition.

Wayne Herald: The senatorial contest at Lincoln becomes more mixed as the days pass by and who knows but what Hon. John R. Hays, who made such a gallant run for congress, may be fitted out with a senatorial plum. He's "north of the Platte."

Dissolution Notice.

The firm of Harrington & Robbins have this day by mutual consent dissolved partnership. Mr. Chas. Robbins retiring and Mr. Dan Harrington continuing the business. Dated January 9th, 1901.

"The democrats over there are all willing to drop to 1, and are ready to drop Bryan if it is necessary in order to get rid of the silver issue." The above is a statement appearing in the Sioux City Tribune of Wednesday evening as coming from the publisher of the DEMOCRAT. Perhaps the shortest explanation of it is that the Sioux City Tribune people are all gold standard folks. What we did say to the Tribune editor was: That McKinley prosperity, aided by a divine providence, beat Bryan. That under present prosperous conditions existing in Nebraska the democrats would not favor again taking up the 16 to 1 theory, and that if Bryan did so his party would drop him. That, of course, being only an opinion and perhaps not from a reliable source.

State of Nebraska, ss I, Fred Volpp, Treasurer of Wayne county, in the State County of Wayne, do hereby certify that I believe the foregoing to be a correct report of moneys on hand, collected and disbursed from July 1, 1900 to Jan. 2, 1901, inclusive: FRED VOLPP, Co. Treasurer. Subscribed in my presence and sworn to before me this 7th day of Jan. 1901. BERT BROWN, Co. Clerk. This is to certify that we have examined the above report, that the same is correct as shown by the books of the Treasurer's office, and that all vouchers for the same have been properly delivered to the county clerk. Approved Jan. 7th, 1901, by county board. E. H. CARROLL, R. RUSSELL, AUGUST WITTLER, Co. Commissioners.

Too Easy to Spell Correctly.
Waverley Magazine: It used to be said that no gentleman could be so ill bred as to spell correctly. Like Napoleon, statesman of the past century were too busy in state affairs to mind orthography. The old duchess of Gordon's rule in these matters was a convenient one:
"You know, my dear, when I don't know how to spell it, I always draw a line under it, and if it is spelled wrong it passes for a very good joke, and if it is spelled right it doesn't matter."

DIDN'T LOOK LIKE A HERO.
Jim Had Seen Some Warm Export cases, and Had a Steady Job.

Frank Leslie: It was in the Baldwin locomotive works that two men came up carrying a long iron shaft, which had been cut in two so that an iron ring could be inserted between the two halves. An empty crucible a foot wide and deep hung from a ring. The forward end of the pole held a cross-bar, making it, as it were, a huge T. Two men held the T part of the pole, the third grasped the small end. The crucible hung between. The remainder of the molten metal from the caldron was tipped into one crucible, and the men trotted off with it, the two in front with great care, the man behind driving them complacently; the oddest team in the world. He steered them through a doorway, and they emptied their crucible into a small mold. As they went they kept step in an unusual manner. Instead of stepping out right foot with right foot, the left man's right leg and the right man's left leg went forward together, knee with knee, foot with foot. We asked why.

"That," said our guide, "is to prevent them from tripping. If they should fall, you know, that metal would pour over them."

"Of course, such a thing never happened."

"Yes, it did once. One of the men went down. The other jumped clear, but the fellow on the floor swam in it."
"Horrible! Of course he died instantly, poor man?"

"No, the foreman of the carrying gang, taking in the situation, made several terrific leaps for him—jumped right into the middle of it—picked him up and threw him out of it bodily. Then he jumped clear of it himself with the stuff dropping from his shoes. They both went to the hospital, but they are all right now. How was that? By the way, that's him, the foreman, Jim H—, over there now. He is still looking after those fellows."

We looked over to where a big muscular fellow was directing a gang of men manipulating molten metal. He was not displeased and he did not look like a hero, but thereafter the grime that covered him seemed very noble indeed. And he would not say a word of his feat when we sought to talk with him about it. But Jim H— will probably never want for a job as long as Baldwin's is working.

Sure Enough Prosperity.
Denver Post: A careful canvass by the ministers of Newton, Kan., reveals the fact that only about one-third of the people of the city desire to go to heaven. The remainder seem to think that Kansas is good enough for them.

A VETERAN SPEAKS.

The Honorable Moses B. Crane of Tacoma, Wash., Tells How Old Soldiers May Help Themselves.

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 7, 1901.—(Special.) I used to have Heart Disease, but thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills I now have Heart's Ease.
"Five years ago, I was a continual sufferer of Heart Disease. Exposures during the war, and a tendency to grow over-fleshy had greatly aggravated this dread disease. I often had to sit up at night, I had it so bad when I would lie down. Life looked pretty blue to me, as I thought there was no relief, until one day I read an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I bought a box that same day, and it was the best day's work I ever did. Before I had used all the first box I could eat and sleep better than I had done for many years, and after three months' faithful treatment, my health was completely restored. I am an old man now, but my step is as elastic and my brain as clear, as when I was thirty years of age."

These are the words of the Hon. Moses B. Crane, Secretary of Odlin Lodge, No. 123, I. O. O. F. of this city. The Hon. Mr. Crane is also Senior Vice-Commander of G. A. R. Post No. 5, Tacoma.

Those who know Mr. Crane have the fullest confidence in his honesty and truthfulness, and know that he would not give this unsolicited testimonial unless he had actually experienced the relief which he indicates in his letter. Dodd's Kidney Pills are having a wonderful sale among Mr. Crane's friends, and their name is legion in this part of the country. There does not seem to be a single case of Heart Disease, Kidney or Bladder Weakness, or Rheumatism, that Dodd's Kidney Pills do not permanently cure.

CHURNING BY WIND.

There is No Good Excuse for Doing This Work by Hand in These Days of Machinery.

Churning by wind saves labor; whether the windmill be factory made galvanized iron or some five-dollar homemade go-devil affair matters not. The cut shows the lower portion of a windmill's framework, the power being transmitted by the rod connected with the top of the well. A drive-wheel turned by the windmill, a clutch or ratchet, and a pulley wheel on the churn are the machinery used.

CHURNING BY WINDMILL POWER.
My drive wheel is a silent clutch wheel, but those who have none can use an old mower wheel, as illustrated, with a ratchet wheel on the shaft. An old pinion would make a fair substitute for the ratchet. The catch lever is boxed loosely to the shaft and connected with the pumping roll. The speed can be changed by having two or more holes in the lever. This device changes the reciprocal motion into circular by means of old castings which can be found on every farm. It will not do to use a piston on a windmill for such a purpose, as it is liable to stop on the "deal center," then when the wind freshens the result would be to smash things unless some one were there to start it past the center. But with the ratchet appliance it needs no watching. The churn always starts when the wind moves the windmill. The upward stroke alone does the work. The momentum of the heavy iron wheel keeps up motion during the down stroke. There is no good excuse for churning by hand and letting the wind fly past.—E. C. Bennett, in Farm and Home.

FINISHING TOUCHES.

They Distinguish the Work of the Progressive Dairyman from That of the Cow-keeper.

The scrupulous neatness shown in the care of cows; the cleanliness of the stable and the milk vessels; the practice of milking with clean, dry hands and discarding the first streams drawn from each teat; the removal of milk from the stable to a clean milk room for weighing, straining and aeration as soon as it is drawn; keeping the milk at a low temperature in summer and preventing its freezing in winter; careful delivery of the milk or cream in fine condition at the factory; careful attention to the comfort of the cow in summer as well as in winter; to the quality, quantity and composition of the cow's feed and the water supply; forethought and preparation for an abundant supply of pasture or soiling crops, such as will keep up the milk flow summer and winter without interruption during the entire period of lactation; these are some of the finishing touches which distinguish the work of the dairyman from that of a cow-keeper, the practice of the thoroughbred from that of the scrub dairyman.

A well-kept horse and an attractive wagon and harness, a neat, intelligent and obliging deliveryman; shipping cans and measures, sterilized, sweet-shelling, well-filled bottles, with the intelligent care of the milk from cow to customer, are some of the finishing touches that build up a retail milk trade at paying prices and distinguish a thoroughbred dairyman from a scrub cow-keeper and milk-peddler.

In every branch of dairy work, the profit and satisfaction is realized from careful attention to the finishing touches.—Dairy and Creamery.

TIMELY DAIRY NOTES.

Great care should be had in drying up a cow.

A great many spoiled udders can be traced to carelessness in drying up.

Buttermilk is very beneficial in many kinds of stomach troubles, and is healthful for everyone.

Don't expect your milk cow to furnish her quota of milk and butter if she be left to hustle with the rest of the stock. If she is to do her best she must be fed regularly and well, and must be protected from the cold storms and sudden changes of winter. Winter milking don't pay unless the cow is well treated.

Behorred cattle are more peaceable, easier to fatten, more contented, and can be cared for easier than one with horns. While the operation may be painful it is not as cruel as allowing large cattle with horns to harass the smaller animals. The stock owner will save many times the amount of money it will cost him to have his animals, dehorned, in fee and in favor.—Farm Journal.

HOME BUTTER-MAKING.

Some Reasons Why Private Dairying Should Not Be Allowed to Pass Away.

A correspondent of the Michigan Farmer puts a strong argument for the private dairy instead of patronizing the creamery. He says it would cost him about $300 a year to send the milk from his 20 cows to the creamery and pay for making it into butter. It costs some people more than that, as they have to keep an extra man, extra team and extra wagon; also find fuel to heat water for cleaning cans and for heating the skim-milk for calves and pigs. Instead of this he spends about two hours a day, or 600 hours in a year, taking care of his milk and making butter, which is equal at about rates to 50 cents an hour for his time. All his utensils, aside from the separator, cost him less than $15, have been in use ten years and are good for 25 years more. Most of the creamery patrons receive about 14 cents net a pound for their butter, which he thinks is pretty poor business. He acknowledges that in the general market creamery butter is quoted higher than dairy butter, but a large percentage of dairy butter is sold to private customers at a better price than creamery butter, and he thinks three-fourths of the private families in Grand Rapids use dairy butter, and most of them do so because they prefer it to creamery butter. We are glad there is one who thinks that private dairies can compete successfully with the creameries, for we have feared that the creameries were getting in such favor that dairymen might think a farm was no use unless near a creamery, cheese factory, condensary or milk route, while we feel sure that a young, healthy and industrious couple who had a good knowledge of dairying, especially the raising of young stock, and other branches, could make a good living on a good farm if they were not within 20 miles of either of those conveniences, or even within 20 miles of a railroad. The secret would be to reduce all crops into such shape that the most value could be got at the least weight, and that the time of marketing would not be every day or at any time when the work was needed at home. Butter, cheese, wool, salt pork, bacon and ham, eggs and dressed poultry find a market any day in the week, and so do apples and potatoes.—American Cultivator.

NUTS AS DAILY FOOD.

When Eaten by Themselves They Do Not Constitute a Perfect Article of Human Diet.

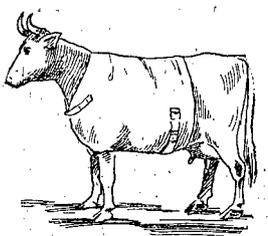

As indicated by the numerous nut foods on the market and the discussions in papers and magazines of systems of diet in which nuts play a prominent part, there is a quite general interest in the subject. The claims made for some nut foods often seem extravagant and unreasonable. Apparently they lack any basis of experimental evidence, nor is it probable that the best-informed physiologists would advise the wholesale use of nuts as a diet to the exclusion of more usual and generally accepted foods.

According to the Maine experimental station, from 50 to 65 per cent. of the nuts most commonly eaten (almonds, Brazil nuts, filberts, hickory nuts, pecans and walnuts) is shell. These nuts contain little water. The protein is fairly high, but fat constitutes the largest part of the edible portion. The carbohydrates, which usually occur in large proportion in vegetable foods, are present only in small amounts. The chestnut is an exception, containing, as it does, nearly 40 per cent. carbohydrates. The percentage in coconuts, acorns and litchi nuts is also fairly high. The meat of nuts, excepting those last mentioned, contains nearly 50 times as much fat and less than one-fifth as much carbohydrates as wheat flour, and has about double the fuel value, i. e., energy-producing power. A pound of unshelled nuts will furnish about half as much protein and the same amount of energy as a pound of flour. Owing to their high fuel value and low protein content, nuts would not make a well-balanced food when eaten by themselves.

KEEPING COWS WARM.

How to Make a Serviceable Blanket of Old Carpet or Waste Bur-lap, Doubled.

The stable ought to be warm enough to keep the cattle comfortable, but many are not, and the owners despair of making them warm enough. In cold barns the cows as well as the horses should be blanketed. To cover the most vital part of the cow the blanket need not cover the rump, and thus will not need to go back far enough to bother the milkers, or to get soiled by the cow lying on a moist platform. The cut shows a good form for a cow's blanket. It can be made of old carpet, or of bur-lap, doubled.—N. Y. Tribune.

ONE MILLION FOR A PAINTING.

The Fabulous Price Said to Have Been Offered for a Work of Titian.

Boston Transcript: The preposterous report that some one had offered $2,000,000, or $1,000,000 for Titian's celebrated painting of "Sacred and Profane Love" in the Borghese collection at Rome, is due in all probability to the universal hunger for astonishing people, although it may have some color of possibility to the imagination of kindergarten fanciers. The enormous sum has been paid for Raphael's "The School of Athens" in the National Gallery especially, which came from the Marlborough collection; also for the works of other old masters, but never any such incredible price as this. Yet it would be a hard matter to set the exact limit of value in the case of a sale of Titian, more particularly such an example as the absurdly misnamed "Sacred and Profane Love." If there exists in the world a picture worth $1,000,000, who would be bold enough to take the right of Titian, the potentate of painters, to be the author of the work? The picture is known by the title of "Sacred and Profane Love"—a title which Titian did not give it, and which has needlessly puzzled many commentators. It is now generally considered simply as a fanciful or romantic composition.

But Franz Wickhoff, a German critic, has evolved a theory, which has a good deal to recommend it, that this picture represents an incident from the Greek book of the "Argonautica" of Valerius Flaccus, the Latin poet, where it is related that Medea, the enchantress, daughter of Aetes, king of Colchis, unwilling to yield to her lover, the Greek Jason, is visited by Venus, who pleads for the lover and endeavors to persuade Medea to follow her into the wood where Jason is waiting. Titian has represented this scene as taking place in the open air; the dawn is just breaking and rosy streaks appear on the horizon. A young woman richly dressed is seated on one side of a fountain, on the side of which she has placed a costly casket. Her right hand is in her lap and holds a bunch of magic herbs. Deeply moved, she gazes fixedly before her, lending ear to the voice of the persistent voice of another woman seated near. The form of this woman, around whom there flutters a red mantle, is of a marvelous beauty. She rests her right hand upon the fountain edge and with her left holds on high a vase from which issues a light smoke. Between the two women the god of love is splashing in the water with his chubby little hands.

Mr. Wickhoff maintains that this beautiful nude picture Venus is easily recognizable, even were her son not there to indicate her presence. The woman to whom she spoke, and who, though unwilling to yield to her, still feels herself drawn by an irresistible power, is Medea, who betrayed the king, her father, and followed Jason, the stranger and enemy of her people.

The New Cup Defender.

Now being built, is confidently expected to be the fastest sailing vessel ever built. Its construction is being kept a secret, but it is whispered that it will easily hold the cup. America is rapidly coming to the front. A good example of this is in that famous household remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has defended the title for over half a century past. It holds the record for the cure of dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, nervousness, biliousness and a gripe.

The Stroumless Life.

New York Weekly: New reporter (tired out)—Today is Saturday, and you know that the state has a Saturday half-holiday law which is being held the cup. America is rapidly coming to the front. A good example of this is in that famous household remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which has defended the title for over half a century past. Cuticura SOAP

And a single anointing with CUTICURA, the great skin cure and purest of emollients. This treatment, when followed in severe cases by mild doses of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, to cool and cleanse the blood, is the most speedy, permanent, and economical cure for torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, and pimply skin and scalp humors with loss of hair ever compounded.

Millions of Women

USE CUTICURA SOAP, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings, and chafings, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and inflammations, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women and mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used these great skin purifiers and beautifiers to use any others. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, the BEST toilet and BEST baby soap in the world.

Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humor. Consisting of CUTICURA SOAP (to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle), CUTICURA OINTMENT (to soothe and relieve itching, inflammation, and irritation), and CUTICURA RESOLVENT (to cool and cleanse the blood). A SKIN CURE is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, and scaly skin, scalp, and blood humors, with loss of hair, when all else fails. Sold throughout the world.

Dear Sir:—It is my pleasing duty to inform you at the request of your agent, Messrs. Alexander & Danna, 67 of Chambers street, New York city, that they have now definitely and conclusively established your claim as the sole surviving relative and general heir-at-law of their late esteemed client, Mr. Aretas McFaught of Church Place and Fifth Avenue, New York.

As the amount of your inheritance is very considerable, it is estimated at approximately at between $1,000,000 and $15,000,000, say three millions of sterling money, we have thought it right to advise you of your good fortune without delay. Our attorney, Captain Wood, will hand you this letter in person and will be pleased to take your instructions. We are, sir, your obedient servant, J. C. Ayer & Co., 211 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

CHAPTER I.

My American Millions.

It was in the middle of the night (as I thought) when Savory—my man, my landlady, valet and general factotum—came in and woke me. He gave me a letter, saying simply, "The gentleman's a-waiting, sir," and I read it twice, without understanding it in the very least.

Could it be a hoax? To satisfy myself I sat up in bed, rubbed my aching and still half-sleepy eyes and read it again. It ran as follows:

DEAR SIR:—

It is my pleasing duty to inform you at the request of your agent, Messrs. This spell at home, in the heart and center of life, was enough to hurt one's head. I was now on the headquarters staff, with an appointment in the intelligence department, and I was not exactly flattered, as a young soldier, with a war office appointment, by the ways of a finished man about town. Goggles, buttonholes and white tie were half of it, and with the other half I had hardly been able to keep out of debt.

That, at least, and without looking for it, was all over now. Savory had suffered more than once from the narrowness of my budget, but he had been very good and patient, and I was glad to think that he would be the first to benefit by my good fortune.

"Would you like your money?" I asked, as I buttoned up my coat and made ready to start for the office a little later in the day.

"Well, sir, I am rather hard pressed. The quarter's rent is overdue, and the landlord called twice yesterday. If you had not sent me this letter, I should have had to go to the workhouse."

"How much do you want?"

"Seventeen pounds, eleven, for the rooms, and Mrs. Savory's bill is £9."

I had taken out my checkbook while he spoke, and wrote him a check for £50.

"A little check! There! Keep what's over after you've bought a nice bit of jewelry for Mrs. S. You've been long suffering, and you shall be the first to share my luck."

Out in the streets, along King street, down Pall Mall, I trod the pavement with the conscious air of a man who had heard good news, and I was not far from being right. As I walked I saw, it plainly in my face and ruffled me on my beaming looks and buoyant demeanor. They had not left me when I looked through the swinging doors of Sykes & Sarfield's bank, and I was no longer the humble supplicant for a pitiful overdraft, but the possessor of a fine balance, who could hold his head high and make no objection to being invited outside, but today I encouraged him to enter at my heels.

CHAPTER II.

At the Intelligence Office.

As I left the bank, which I had been most cordially received, with my sovereign purse full and the nice crisp notes for £25 carefully put by in my pocket, I felt at last to believe in my fortune. There is a solid, unshakable reality in the clink of good gold, while the supple civility of the great financiers, who had so lately regarded me as an object of contempt, proved how completely my position was changed.

The morning's adventures and surprises had occupied much time, and I had not got to bed until late, and I was tired. I went to bed, and I was not long in falling asleep. I was not long in falling asleep. I was not long in falling asleep.

"Not often, Captain Wood, but if I have come too early I can call later on."

"By no means. I am dying to hear more. But first of all, this letter. It's all bona fide, I suppose?"

"I don't know, but it is from our firm. There is no possible mistake. We have made it our business to verify all the facts—indeed, this is not the first we have heard of the affair—but we did not get to it until you wrote to us last night. This morning, however, the man has brought a full acknowledgment of your claims, so we came on to look for you."

"We have had our eye on you for some time past, Captain Wood," said the little lawyer smilingly. "While we were waiting for the letter, we were sure you would be infinitely obliged to us. But still I can't believe it quite. I should like to be convinced of the reality of the matter. You see, I haven't thoroughly taken it in."

"Read this letter from our New York agents," said Captain Wood. "It gives more details, and he handed me a typewritten copy of the letter on two quarto sheets of tissue paper, also a number of cuttings from the New York press. The early part of the letter referred to the search and discovery of the heir-at-law, and stated frankly that there could be no sort of doubt that my case was clear and that they would be pleased, when called upon, to put me in full possession of my estate."

"From that part of the letter I gathered that there could be no sort of doubt that my case was clear and that they would be pleased, when called upon, to put me in full possession of my estate."

Good day," and I passed into the office.

I shared my room at the "Intelligence" with a colleague, Swete Thornhill, of the artillery, a lively youth out of hours, but about looking up from his paper, "Wonder you took the trouble to come at all."

"I was detained by something special. Important business, anyhow. It's the affair of yours," I answered, rather nettled.

"Yes it is, when it throws me out of my stride. I wish you'd make up your mind either to come or stay away altogether. There has been a regular hue and cry for you all the morning, and I've been disturbed abominably. I have those calculations of the comparative penetration of the new projectiles in hand, and they take some doing."

"Well, keep your hair on. I don't want to disturb you. But who is it, anyhow?"

"The boss chief himself, Collingham, Sir Charles. He has sent three times for you, and came in twice. Wanted you for something pressing. Now, I believe he is doing the job himself. Wise man. Do it a blamed sight better than you or any man Jack of us."

At this moment an office messenger came in with a huge bundle of papers, which he deposited on my table. They were enveloped in the usual green "jacket," which meant extreme urgency, and on the outside was written, in a big, bold hand, "Captain Wood—urgent."

"He'll do most of the talking, I expect," went on Swete Thornhill maliciously. "He's fit to be tied. Go in, and once, and take your punishment."

The distinguished officer at that time head and chief of our department was Major General Sir Charles Collingham, G. C. B., G. C. I., G. C. S., a noted and fearless soldier of the day, ardent, fearless, highly skilled, strong in counsel, foremost in the field, who had served almost everywhere, in all the wars, great and small, of recent years and had made a close study of the science of his profession as well. He had traveled far and wide, knew men and many cities, was as much at home at court as in camp, popular in society, which he cultivated in his spare moments, although he allowed nothing to stand in the way of his work. The service came first and foremost in the matters of all important, transcendently useful department, as he thought it, over which he presided.

Sir Charles expected—nay, exacted—a like strictness from his staff officers, whom in all matters of duty he ruled with a rod of iron. None of us liked to face him when he was put out, which it may be said, was not seldom the case, for he was a man of a cross grain. Under a stern face and rough manner he had a kindly nature far below, for he did not wear his heart upon his sleeve, certainly not for an erring subordinate, as he considered me just then.

I felt rather sheepish and uncomfortable as I appeared before the great man. The general, tall in stature, very thin, straight, and of a strong, weather-beaten face—the deep bronze contrasting sharply with the bristling white mustaches and long flowing white hair—the fierce, steely blue eyes—commanded respect.

He began on me at once. "By the Lord Harry, this won't do, Wood!" he cried, with amazing volubility and force. "You're a good fellow, but you're yourself! Slept late! Of course you will sleep late if you waste the night firing and phoning with that little madcap devil, Frida Fairholme. As for your work, it's all wrong. The mess of this office neglected. Now you are late for parade, and you know I insist upon punctuality. And I practice what I preach, was here at the clock sharp for the morning, and you had been to Hounslow and back on my bike. But there, you'll end by putting me out of temper. Don't do it again."

"Great Scott, sir, I said myself, yet wondering why I a man of millions, submitted to such slavery, and I turned to go."

"Ah, by the way, Wood, bring me this report of yours, will you, on the defense of the Canadian frontier. It is ready, I suppose?"

"Well, no, Sir Charles, not quite. I have been delayed by—"

"Great Scott, you're roaring, instantly blaring in white heat. You lazy, idle young villain! I believe you want to drive me mad. You know as well as I do that the foreign office is pressing for this report, and that I've already been to Hounslow and back on my bike. But there, you'll end by putting me out of temper. Don't do it again."

Your Uncle Sam is held responsible for most any old thing these days. On injuries received before he was born a pension claim has been made by a Michigan man. A brother, some twenty years older, served in the war and was reported dead. Though the report afterward proved false, the shock to his mother was very serious and her next child, the present claimant, was born a cripple and has never had the use of his lower limbs. He now maintains that the act of the government in reporting his brother dead was responsible for his injuries.

A Canadian census will be taken during the first week in April next. It will be comprehensive, including an enumeration of the inhabitants and commercial and industrial statistics of all kinds. Substantially the Canadian census will be taken as the census is taken in England. It will not drag along for a month. The enumerators will do their work simultaneously, in the same day. This system insures accuracy. There are no changes of residence by which inhabitants will be omitted or counted twice. Even tramps will be caught in the same district and will not be recounted in another district. A sufficient number of men will be employed to complete the entire count in a few hours.

Tripped Wait Up:

It is a good thing to swear off from bad habits on the first of the year, even if you soon go back to them. Many men who swear off would remain sworn off were it not for the boisterous and insane ridicule with which they are everywhere greeted; let a young man determine to turn over a new tree, and all his friends will laugh the loud strident horse laugh, and predict that he will be worse than ever in two weeks. He never gets a word of encouragement, unless it be from some passing clergyman, and he soon begins to feel that the virtuous life made him a pariah. There was once a young Lincoln man who was drinking pretty swift and often; and one New Year's day he registered a solemn vow that he would drink no more. He stuck to the vow for weeks, and was looking and feeling like a new man; but his alleged friends laid all sorts of traps, and prepared all sorts of conspiracies, to trip him up, and finally they succeeded, and the young man in question finally became a wreck, and there are dozens who read this who can name him at once. When a man wants to reform and get a general brace on himself, he ought to be encouraged; but people are mostly wolves, and they would rather drag a man down than help him to his feet.—Walt Mason.

Grover Cleveland has arisen from the dead long enough to be interviewed upon the future of the democratic party. As might be expected, the ex-president favors a reorganization. He takes the position that the party has drifted away from the true principles of Democracy. How he arrives at this conclusion is easy of understanding. From his point of view he was the originator of the real principles of the democratic party in late years. Other democrats, however, and by the way, the great majority of them, do not take that view, but believe that Mr. Cleveland was the one who strayed away from the straight democratic path and attempted to lead the organization dangerously close to the republican fold. The rank and file of the party did not like Mr. Cleveland's brand of democracy, and they made their dislike manifest at the national convention in Chicago, held in the summer of 1896.—Butte (Mont.) Miner.

It now appears that the John Pierce house lottery pulled off in Sioux City was one of the hold-est swindles of the 19th century. Mr. Bills, of Vinton, Iowa, does not hold the winning ticket, and never did hold it. The announcement made to the thousands of ticket holders the day of the raffle, was undoubtedly just for a blind. A New York millionaire, one of Pierce's creditors, held the sure thing. After some 60,000 people had been held up for a dollar per head the remaining tickets were "thrown in a drawer" to this millionaire creditor. In the meantime the Sioux City papers are cracking up this wonderful man Pierce as having been one of Sioux City's greatest of all "promoters," the house lottery swindle being an example of the man's shrewdness and business tact. He is a good thing that the Sioux City papers are exceedingly sorry to see leave their town. Sioux City should not grieve too much over its loss; there are plenty of the same kind left here, and even though it lose some of its big hold-up men it has a Jack-the-bugger and a police force left that would make up any deficiency in promoting the "Sioux City way."

Andrew Jackson.

The celebration of Jackson's birthday by democrats and others is to be encouraged if it shall lead to an examination of the principles for which that great and good democrat stood. To celebrate his birthday without appreciation of his democracy is mere superfluity. Something more than meat and wine and oratory is needed and should be had if the lessons of Andrew Jackson's life are to serve a useful purpose.

Jackson was easily the greatest democrat of his day both as a statesman and as a politician. He exercised a wonderful influence over the people. In office or out of office, he was equally potential as a leader of men. On his shoulders fell the mantle of Jefferson. A very different type of man, he nevertheless resembled Jefferson in many respects. In Jackson some of Jefferson's teachings bore fruit which was not visible in his own day.

Jefferson, personally aristocratic and exclusive in his tastes, profoundly learned and widely read, foreshadowed an era of popular rule and popular participation in government which was hardly realized in his own time. The presidents that preceded John Quincy Adams may be said to have been ready at hand. Their selection, while brought about by the proscribed forms, was in reality due to influences not necessarily popular. Management by powerful individuals, as in the cases of Madison and Monroe, preeminent service, as in the cases of Washington, John Adams and Jefferson, and accident and intrigue, as in the case of John Quincy Adams, had precluded anything like a great popular demand for a particular man at a particular time.

In the triumph of Jackson the people triumphed. They made him a candidate in spite of bitter opposition even among the leaders of his own party, and his election and inauguration gave evidence for the first time of the stupendous popular uprisings which in recent years have become recognized features of presidential contests wherein men of undoubted qualities of leadership are engaged.

Without pretension or craft, plain, honest, unassuming, as gentle in repose as a woman and as courageous and terrible in action as a lion, full of love for and appreciation of the plain people—and all people to him were plain—as unconscious as a child of the distinctions of class and caste, intensely devoted to duty and to the interests of the whole people, Jackson was an ideal democrat, was so recognized in his lifetime and has been so regarded by his countrymen since he passed away. He had the strength of his convictions. He was not afraid to follow them to their logical conclusion. He never doubted the loyalty or capacity of the people, and, in turn, they never doubted him. His was a successful administration because from beginning to end it had the unflinching approval of the people.

Most of the distinguished party chieftains of the United States have been unjustly assailed and even slandered, but the hostility to Jackson went farther than this. He was represented not only as a vicious character bent on the overthrow of decent society but as an ignorant vulgarian, altogether beneath contempt. Shocking stories of orgies in the white house were told about him. By his adversaries it was not believed that he could read or write. When the stately papers bearing his name began to Headache may be called a woman's ailment, because she suffers from it. But almost all women have to endure its pain with each recurring month. This fact points at once to the intimate relation between the health of the delicate womanly organs, and the general health of the whole body. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription banishes headache by banishing its cause. It cures the diseases which irritate the delicate womanly organs, fret the nerves and waste the strength. It increases the vitality and builds up the nervous system. "Favorite Prescription" contains no opium, cocaine or other narcotic.

"I want to praise your medicine," writes Mrs. Sarah J. Burney, of Crescent City, Putnam Co., Fla. "I have been sick for twenty years, and have been almost in bed five years, and now I am able to work all day. I have taken eight bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and four of 'Cancer Medical Discovery' and am well of 'Felle's.' I praise your medicine to all. I had the headache but it is gone. My throat is well and cough gone, and all my old troubles are better. I tried many other kinds of medicine and four doctors."

appear it was explained that they were prepared for him by some of his dissonant but brilliant associates. Assailed in his public and private character and pursued even to his domestic circle, such was his self-control that, in spite of certain well-known infirmities of temper, he reserved his more passionate outbreaks not for the enemies who outraged him personally but for the enemies of his country who plotted its ruin.

Jackson's administration gave mighty impulses to democracy and to union, to equal rights and to common justice in government. It gave the people confidence in themselves and taught them that the government was their very own, to be participated in by them and an obedient servant responsive to their sovereign will. It admitted the people to office as they had not been admitted before and thus, instead of paving the way to the spoils system, as has been falsely alleged, it gave the people a sense of their responsibility to themselves and to the republic. It destroyed the odious bank monopoly and put an end to a scandal that was rapidly becoming unupportable. It made gold and silver coins, both of them worth 100 cents on the dollar, the money of the government and thus established an example which, if followed, would have saved the country from the error of legal tender paper money and all the follies that have grown out of that departure from sound finance. It put down nullification and secession with a strong arm and strengthened the union sentiment of the country immeasurably against the day of wrath that was to come. All this and more the republic owes to the administration of Andrew Jackson.

Of particular importance at this time, the career of Jackson may be studied in vain by one who seeks justification for the array of class against class. There was a class issue in his time, but it was not raised by the democracy. Some of the rich and proud and exclusive undertook to make it appear that in Jackson the ignorant and vicious rabble had triumphed and for a time much bitterness existed between some eminently respectable elements and the party in power; but the dignity, the even handed justice, the undoubted authority and devotion to principle which characterized the administration and his followers soon disarmed critics of this description and ultimately led to a better understanding all around.

Owing to the attitude of the bank party and to some other of the more violent opponents of democracy there might easily have been reprisal on the part of the victorious masses, but they and their leaders had no policy but justice and no aim but the equality of all before the law. Under no administration before or since that of Jackson was there less demagoguery and under none were the rights of person and property more highly respected.

Democrats and so called democrats of this day should go to Jackson for instruction and admonition. They will find no encouragement for sectionalism, none for disunion, none for class crusades, none for unsound finance, none for monopoly and none for demagoguery. On the contrary, they will find a virile democracy pursuing justice for the love of justice, assailing error because it is error and advocating no policy not calculated to bring men more closely into brotherhood and to promote equality in all things.

ANOTHER SMOOTH GAME.

The Wedding Racket Worked on a Minnesota Farmer.

We learn from the Minneapolis Journal the following account of a little incident which happened up in Minnesota, but might very naturally happen in this county. Read it and then if a gang comes around to your place that looks like the same critters—set the dogs on 'em.

The most ingenious and elaborate swindle of the century was perpetrated on an unsuspecting farmer of Carver county and his family one day last week. As a result of it the worthy agriculturist is out $450. One evening just as the farmer had finished his chores a fine looking man in clerical garb drove up to the house in a buggy. He requested shelter for the night and was given the best room in the house. The stranger admitted that he was a minister of the gospel and that he was on his way to visit some relatives thirty miles away. Having his own horse and buggy he preferred driving from Minneapolis, as the roads and weather were good. The stranger was exceedingly urbane. He made himself pleasant to the daughters of the family, discussed religious matters with them and the folks and asked a blessing with unctious earnestness and read prayers.

Next morning the stranger read prayers again and was being shown around the farm when another buggy drove up in which sat a young woman and man. They said they wanted to be married and asked to be directed to the nearest ordained minister. The idea immediately occurred to the farmer's wife that some relief from the dull monotony of farm life could be obtained by having the marriage occur at her own house, provided, of course, that the reverend gentleman who was temporarily her guest, would consent to officiate. The daughters of the farmer were much pleased at the prospect. The young couple gave their names and ages, swore to the identity of their respective mothers and fathers, lined up along side of the family organ and looked properly impressed as the reverend gentleman read the marriage service.

To give proper eclat to a somewhat unusual occasion the farmer's oldest daughter played Mendelssohn's wedding march on the organ, the good wife served pumpkin pie in generous fat slices, besides cake and coffee. Everybody seemed as pleased as possible, and especially the young married couple, who showered blessings on the generous old farmer, his kind-hearted wife, and above all, on the denigrating individual with the bald spot on the back of his iron-gray head who had performed the ceremony. The farmer and his family gladly signed the marriage certificate as witnesses and the bride and groom departed. After that the minister delivered a well wined homily on the uncertainties of married life, the necessity for mature reflection on the part of the person intending to marry and of the responsibilities of the minister in such matters. Then the farmer helped his reverend guest to hitch up, received a blessing for his hospitality and went back into the house to discuss with his family the advantages of even brief intercourse with men of such attainments as those of their late guest.

Now for a sequel. A day or two ago the farmer was notified that a note of his, of which he had no recollection, had been discounted at the Carver county bank, the amount being $450. The worthy man drove to town, examined the note, found that the signature attached to it was indeed his and that the witnesses were his wife and daughter. Then it flashed upon him that the signatures were those which he and his family had attached innocently enough to the document recording the marriage at their home. The signatures were required because they were witnesses of the ceremony. Senator F. E. DuBois of Shakopee has brought this case to the attention of the state officials.

It will not blister, but will keep up a gentle heat, and invariably relieve all soreness in one night. Apply at first sign of lightness or soreness in lungs. When plaster is removed, pin woollen cloth to clothing over lungs, for a few days. If the above is followed pneumonia will be reduced one tenth. It seldom fails.

Sheep Feeding Results.

S. E. Auker, a prominent farmer and feeder of Wayne, was at the yards today and disposed of two cars of wethers of his own feeding. Mr. Auker tried the rather unusual experiment of turning these sheep after cattle and results were entirely satisfactory. He says that he would rather have sheep than hogs to follow cattle where he was feeding corn in the shock. These sheep were turned into the cornfield from which the corn had been cut with a harvester and kept there some days before being put on full feed. Then they were put with the cattle. Three pens were used for feeding purposes. The cattle would be given corn in the shock in one pen and after they had picked what they could get they would be worked over into the next pen and the sheep allowed to run in and clean up the balance. It was found that the sheep would pick up every little piece of the stock that was dropped and by standing on one end of a stalk, strip it and eat up every particle that had any substance in it. Then they would paw the stalks aside and pick up any stray kernels that had been dropped by the cattle. When the droppings of the cattle were dry they would paw out the whole kernels. After the stalks were all fed up he had to fall back on snapped corn, giving them eight bushels per day until they were ready for market. Mr. Auker sums up results this way: 49 sheep cost at South Omaha, $1,569; eight bushels of corn per day for forty days, $77; hay and salt, $10. When put on feed they weighed at South Omaha 92 lbs. As they brought $4.30 today it will be seen that Mr. Auker's method of sheep feeding payed all right. It might be added that he only lost two head during the time that they were on feed.—South Omaha Journal-Stockman.

A War That is Over.

The sad, the pitiful, the cruel war in the Philippines is "over." Its termination has been cabled to us, oh, how many times!

And now in the season of peace on earth and good will to men comes the news from the Philippines that Private Lyon Skinner of Company D, Forty-third Volunteer Infantry is to be shot for the offense of having gone to sleep on his post.

While the War Department discredits the news, it also admits that it is not necessary that its dignity should be disturbed by any such insignificant event as the mere shooting of a private.

Let us hope that the news is not true. It is true, however, that in his latest letter home, Private Skinner wrote, "Down the Philippines any way! And everyone thinks as I do."

It is also true that in eight volunteer regiments ordered home on the expiration of their term of enlistment not a single man has been found who wants to enlist again. They undo the Skinner sentiment, profanity and all they hear eloquent testimony that the war is not over.—New York World.

Farm for Sale or Rent.

On account of illness in the family and the necessity of a change of climate, I feel compelled to sell my fine farm four miles northwest of Reiden. The place was improved for my permanent home and is up in first class shape. The farm consists of 240 acres, all good farm land, but there are 50 acres left in pasture, and 20 acres sowed down to grass land. On the place is an orchard in fine condition and bearing all the fruits native to this climate. The entire farm is laid off into fields and all well fenced. About the house, protecting it and the orchard is a grove with dense hedge. The farm house is one story and a half high. It is built warm and for permanent economy. Laying under the whole house is a cellar, brick walled, the walls forming the house foundation. The barn was just built last fall. It is 40x80, built back into the side hill, with stone foundation walls, and on the ground floor is stalled off for 40 head of horses and 100 head of cattle. The hay mow will contain hay enough to winter 100 head of cattle. The grain bins for feed, are conveniently arranged under this one roof, besides such accessories as hay loaders, etc. Plenty of good water on the place, with well handy to both house and barn, and pumped by a wind mill. Tanks, feed bunks, cribs, machinery, sheds, etc., etc., as found on any farm of this size where the owner has intended to make it his permanent home. This is just the place for a man wanting a finely improved farm home in the finest section of Nebraska and will be sold for less than any man could buy and improve a like place. Write at once as I must leave as soon as possible.

BY DAD.

I think it would be a good scheme for Wayne county to insist upon the county superintendent getting married or else put that office back in charge of Aunt White, at the next election. Just notice his bill for postage, for three months; $20.90! The county treasurer used $7 worth of postage and the county clerk $19 for freight and postage (mostly freight). One thousand and forty-five letters are a good many to write, in 90 days, to plain school ma'ams.

Wouldn't those advisory and instructive letters B. W. McKen of Washington, D. C., writes the Winside Tribune, simply frost your frostella? Benjamin must occupy a seat at the right of his satanic majesty, Mark Hanna, to have become so imbued with the belief that the welfare of Nebraska rests upon the instruction he does out to its inhabitants through the Winside Tribune.

A local divine who recently held revival meetings in a rural district became disgusted at the tardiness of the attendants to become converted. He was unable to get any one to "stand up on the Lord's side," so he asked the congregation to arise and sing a hymn, at the conclusion of which he said, "Now, all who want to go to hell, please sit down."

What has become of our curfew whistle? I haven't heard it since the last frog concert. It can't be possible that all the children have gotten beyond the curfew curtailments.

Rev. Ringer, of the Lutheran church, visited this Presbyterian nest of iniquity, one day this week, and during a rather mixed conversation with the "devil," said he didn't think it right for the Wayne editors, to be always going after the preachers but never attending church so the parsons could play even. If Rev. Ringer will just go to doing the Lord's work without fear, favor nor price, the same manner we editors run our papers, there won't be any vacant seats in his synagogue when he arises to sermone.

Julius Tower favors a "crusade against vice," in Wayne, and would like to commence with the bowling alley. Julius could no doubt enlist the hearty co-operation of the billiard hall proprietor, the cigar slot machine owners and the saloon keepers. They all feel the need of that kind of a crusade.

Editor Cunningham says he has made no resolutions for the new century. He claims the course of his paper in the past has been as near correct as he can hope to make it in the future, and for once he no doubt knows what he is talking about.

Sam Davies was "killing" time in a certain business house, the other day, when a lady entered and had a quiet talk with the proprietor. It happened that Sam was personally interested in the subject of the lady's conversation and after she had withdrawn he took up the talk where she had left off, which so surprised the proprietor that he asked: "How is it I have to talk so darn loud to make you hear when you catch on if other people speak in a moderate tone?" "I dunno," answered Sam, "but I always could hear a woman's voice better than a man's." Well, by dad, we all have our weak spots.

John Katz says there are advantages as well as disadvantages in being a little deaf. For instance when a customer has selected a suit of clothes and says "charge it please," Mr. Katz says he can't hear a word of it. If so embarrassed the purchaser that he invariably shells out the coin or "will be back in a few moments."

The "beautiful snow" arrived Wednesday

but, thank heaven, the poets have not been heard from.

A local physician hands me the following concerning a staunch Christian scientist, which is not only amusing but absolutely true:

The husband of a Christian Scientist teacher, lately married, who did not believe in doctors or sickness, called upon a physician one cold, stormy night in January. He was in a great hurry.

"What is the matter?" asked the doctor, sticking his night-cap out at the door.

"Oh," said the man, in an anxious tone, "my wife is very sick, and wants you to come at once."

"She sick?" answered the doctor, in surprise; "why, man, she has turned half the town into the belief that there is no such thing as pain."

"But it's different now," replied the man. "We're—that is, you know—well, she's going, or rather, she expects—we've been calculating for some time to have a—a—bab—yes, a child—a boy or a girl. It's—it will, or would be our first; and we thought you better be round."

"Well, my dear man," said the doctor, "tell your wife that I am sorry she has so far forgotten her calling as to give in to the sin of a fancied pain or two. These twinges that come with such clock like regularity are nothing but the timed temptations of Satan. Tell her that there is no such thing as pain; that she isn't going to have a baby; that she isn't a woman, but the ghost of Euripides; that she isn't even married. Tell her that I am not a doctor, and never was, and that this is one of the loveliest nights in June. Good night, sir!"

Winside News.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Dobbin went to Omaha last Saturday, where Mrs. D. goes for medical treatment, having been in poor health for some time.

Miss Boyde, the nurse who has been here attending to Pete Garman, left for Sioux City Tuesday.

The new butcher shop is now running and is an exceptionally neat and place, and its proprietor, Mr. Hupp, will do his best to please you.

John Crosby was up from Hoskins Sunday. Mrs. H. L. Miller returned to her home in Sioux City Monday.

D. J. Cavanaugh was in Sioux City Saturday.

Charles Miller has commenced putting up the summer ice supply. The ice is 18 to 22 inches thick and of a good quality.

We understand that Ed. Lucas has sold his interest in the dry line to Dave Leary who will go it alone in the future.

Mrs. J. Johnson came up from Wayne the first of the week, and will take charge of the cooking department at the hotel.

The Merry Cotton Pickers combination gave a show here last Monday night which was considered rather on the "bum."

Attorney Siman has a receipt which he wishes to add to some of the collections being made. The receipt is for producing a clear, cool head. In fact it will clear most anything. Mr. Siman thinks after having given it a fair trial the other evening, that it might even clear a lawyer's conscience if repeated a few times. Here it is. Take a full, generous swallow of kerosene oil and follow immediately by a cup of strong salt water. Persons wishing any further information regarding receipt can have it gratis by calling at Siman's office.

CARROLL NEWS

It is rumored that we are to have another lumber yard, to be conducted by G. Merrill and Rodney Manning, and that some of the lumber is now on the way. If such is the case, we hope that they will carry a good stock of material and at reasonable prices.

Mrs. Ella Morris who was suffering from pronounced bronchitis, is improving under the care of Dr. Phillips.

From information gleaned it is said Mrs. C. M. Andrews is about to dispose of her business to a party who lives in Iowa, and the matter is now under consideration. The man speaks several languages, is a good physician and if he sells his goods at reasonable prices, there is a bonanza in the drug business for him, as people are willing to support such a person, and not be compelled to send away from home for articles needed in that line.

The Hancock sale was fairly attended, and the writer was informed that everything brought a good price.

The Honey restaurant sale was a fizzle, as when it came to business, the buyers had not the wherewith to put up.

J. R. Manning shipped several car loads of cattle from this place to Chicago last Saturday.

There was an auction sale of buggies and other traps here last Saturday afternoon. The prices realized were fair.

There seems to be a demand for quarters of beef in this section. Who is the man to supply the demand?

Henry Evans of Wayne, on his way to Bloomfield, stopped over at Carroll for a hour, and visited with his brother-in-law B. Wineland and family.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Garwood paid Wayne a visit last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Horn visited Charles Morris' last Monday.

Mrs. James Farnestock and daughter, Neva, are visiting with friends in Carroll this week.

The house movers arrived here last Monday, and intend moving Jens Anderson's house to the new location this week. Jens is very anxious to get on his new place as soon as possible.

It would be more to the interest of the children if the people in their choice for school directors, would select heads of families, as they would be more interested than those who have no children to attend school.

On last Tuesday occurred the death of Edward, the 6-months old son of Joseph Jones, after a few hours illness. Funeral services were held at the M. E. church on Thursday morning, and interment took place at the Carroll cemetery.

Put away those little dresses That our darling used to wear. For he never more will need them, He has climbed the golden stair.

The sympathies of the people are extended to the family in their bereavement.

The onion show at the Workman hall was a faze. Edward Morris visited with Samuel Williamson last Wednesday night.

The "Jack and Edna" show on Wednesday night, which was of a vaudeville turn, was well attended and gave general satisfaction, so that they remained over and gave a performance on Thursday evening.

The people here are loud in their denunciations against the treatment accorded the children attending school, and are very loud in their attacks upon Prof. Kelly and two of the directors, Messrs. Merrill and Bailey; and several have intended to keep their children from school, unless the matter is remedied.

It seems that the children are driven off the school grounds, and are compelled to stand outside in the cold, if they should arrive early, until the doors are unlocked. The writer, as well as others, supposed that the school yard was intended for a place of recreation; but the children here, it seems, are debarr'd of that pleasure. There was a party outside of town intended sending his children, but after hearing the treatment accorded the children, has not decided whether he will do so or not. It behooves the citizens of this burg at their next school election to elect a school board who are interested in the welfare of the children, and not for their own selfish desires.

Commissioners' Proceedings.

Board adjourned to January 8, 1901.

January 8, 1901.
Board met in regular session. Present, Commissioners Carroll, Russell and Wittler, and Bert Brown, clerk.
On motion the county superintendent's salary is fixed at $300 for the year 1901.

On motion the printing of commissioner's proceedings and all legal notices is let as follows: To the Wayne Republican, to the Nebraska Democrat and to the Wayne Herald, at one-half legal rates (1-3 of 1 legal rate to each paper) and the printing of the delinquent tax list to the Wayne Republican, to the Nebraska Democrat, and to the Wayne Herald at one third of full legal rates to each paper.

LIFE INSURANCE POLICIES bought for cash or loaned on at low rates. JAMES BARTON.

M. S. Davies sold a fine Bentley piano Wednesday to T. B. Hughes who resides in the west of Wayne.

Melipon Coffee sells rapidly, consequently the supply is always fresh. For sale only by D. H. Sullivan.

Mrs. Mathias Thies, of Altona, suffered a very bad double fracture of a limb, Wednesday. Dr. Leisenring was called to attend her injuries.

W. E. Bond, McKivker's baker, has been very low with pneumonia at the Love hotel. His mother and sister came Wednesday to care for him.

Genuine Rocky Mountain Tea is never sold in bulk by peddlers or less than 35 cts. Don't be fooled, get the tea made famous by the Madison Medicine Co.

LADIES, it will pay you to call on Mrs. Skadden, four blocks east of the Methodist church, for plain sewing and dressmaking. Shirt waists and wrappers a specialty.

E. B. Young went to Dodge county yesterday on a Sunday school mission. Mr. Young comes pretty nearly covering the whole state and is very successful in his chosen field of labor.

"A penny saved is a penny earned." Branklin.

Why don't you take some plan of saving the pennies systematically and profitably? On the policy of the Northwestern Life & Savings Co. of Des Moines, you can save from five cents a day on up to any amount you wish. It is safer than a bank and more profitable than any other investment. See E. R. Surber, the general agent, and get him to explain the plan to you.
