Our 2nd Anniversary!

Two years ago we came to Wayne and we have met with greater success than we had reason to expect. We came with a new, well selected stock. Our trade was good at the start and has been increasing every day since. To meet an increasing trade we have put in more than double the stock we had last year. We now have the largest and best selected stock of clothing ever brought to Wayne county. Our stock would be a credit to a town twice the size of this. The class of goods we sell has induced people to come from neighboring towns to trade with us. When we located in Wayne we believed there was room for a first-class, one-price, cash clothing store and we are glad to state we were not mistaken. Our success has proven that the people appreciate our efforts. Some of our competitors predicted that we would be here about six months; others said that one year would satisfy us that Wayne would not support an up-to-date clothing store such as we are conducting. Our method of buying and selling goods has proven that the old way of selling clothing on long time cannot compete with us. The class of goods we sell cannot be bought outside of a city. We can prove to your entire satisfaction that you need not go to Omaha or Sioux City for good clothing for our prices are lower and our selection will please you. If you have not looked at our clothing it will pay you to do so before you buy. Our goods are all marked in plain figures and we sell strictly at one price. If you should change your mind after you have bought the goods you can return them and your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Some people do not pay their debts because unable to do so; others, when called upon to cough up, lie out of having the dough. We have had all kinds of people hunting for office, in Wayne county, and talk about "Iowa records," ye gods!
About the last thing heard anent the small pox last spring was a red-hot roast in the Republican directed to the board of health, etc., on their management of affairs. This week the Republican says: "The people of Wayne are generally agreed that the small pox epidemic of last winter and early spring was pretty well handled in our city and that its disappearance from the city is largely due to the intelligence exhibited by the authorities in dealing with the situation."
D. Danielson and Henry Goll had a little de-feculty last Saturday morning. They are brothers-in-law, Mrs. Danielson, Mr. Goll's sister, being in an insane asylum. The DEMOCRAT is informed by Sheriff Cherry that Mr. Danielson and Ran Frazier were in Goll's shop and got into an argument over the subject of Emma Goldman, Danielson maintaining that the killing of McKinley was a dastardly job, but the authorities had no case against the woman for it. Both gentlemen were in a noisy mood and Mr. Goll ordered Danielson out of his shop. Then the latter said something about Henry whipping his wife and the butcher threw him out. This is quite a different story from that printed in the Wayne Republican, which paper states that it was Henry's love of country that prompted him to throw his brother-in-law out on the street. Danielson is a populist in politics but he is probably just as true a citizen to his country as many republicans. His place of business was properly decorated as a tribute of sorrow over the president's death, and we must give him the same rights we give the strong man, who is able defend himself from such mean attacks as that inflicted upon him by the Republican, until he has proven himself to be a bad citizen. If the life and death of the illustrious McKinley teaches anything it is justice, charity and above all else, gentleness. The DEMOCRAT can see no expression of love for the dead statesman, nor loyalty to country, in coarse brutality nor in a scathing arraignment of the defenseless.

People would naturally take it that if there were any real anarchists in Wayne county C. J. Rundell ought to be one. Mr. Rundell has always been one of the political eye-sores to the republicans and they never tire of hating him. But when a drunken man dropped in on J. C. last Saturday and asked "won't it be a good thing for our party?" the old man promptly kicked the poor fool out, and it is reported, stepped on him outside.

The Closing Scene.
Before 6 o'clock it was clear to those at the bedside that he was dying, and preparations were made for the last sad offices of farewell from those who were nearest and dearest to him. Oxygen had been administered steadily, but with little effect, keeping back the approach of death. The president came out of one period of unconsciousness only to relapse into another. At 7 o'clock he was grouped in an anxious waiting. They knew the end was near, and that the time had come when they must see him for the last time in earth. This was about 8 o'clock. One by one they ascended the stairs—Secretary Root, Secretary Hitchcock and Attorney General Knox. Secretary Bryan was the last to see the president in his last agony. PRESIDENT MCKINLEY.

Milburn House, Buffalo, Sept. 14.—President McKinley died at 2:15 o'clock this morning. He had been unconscious since 7:30 o'clock last night. His last conscious hour on earth was spent with the wife to whom he devoted a lifetime of care. He died unattended by a minister of the gospel, but his last words were a humble submission to the will of God, in whom he believed. He was reconciled to the cruel fate to which an assassin's bullet had condemned him, and faced death in the same spirit of calmness and peace which has marked his long and honorable career. His last conscious words, reduced to writing by Dr. Mann, who stood at his bedside when they were uttered, were: "Goodby, all; goodby. It is God's way. His will be done."

His relatives and the members of his official family who were at the Milburn house, except Secretary Wilson, who did not avail himself of the opportunity and some of his personal and political friends took leave of him. This painful ceremony was simple. His friends came to the door of the sick room, took a longing glance at him, and turned tearfully away. He was practically unconscious during this time.

His Wife Goodbye.
But powerful heart stimulants, including oxygen, were employed to restore him to consciousness for his final parting with his wife. He asked for her, and she sat at his side and held his hand. He consoled her and bade her goodby. She went through the heart trying scene with the same bravery and fortitude with which she has borne the grief of the tragedy which ended his life.

The immediate cause of the president's death is undetermined. His physicians disagree, and it will possibly require an autopsy to fix the exact cause.

The president's remains will be taken to Washington, and there will be a state funeral. Vice President Roosevelt, who now succeeds to the presidency, may take the oath of office whenever he happen to hear the news. The cabinet will, of course, resign in a body, and President Roosevelt will have an opportunity of forming a new cabinet if he so desires.

The rage of the people of Buffalo against the president's assassin when they learned his night that he was being held in custody. Thousands surrounded the jail, and the entire police force of the city and two regiments of militia were utilized to insure his protection.

Death Announced.
The announcement of the death to the members of the cabinet was made by Webb Hayes, who said: "It is all over."

Mrs. McKinley last saw her husband between 11 and 12 o'clock. At that time she sat by the bedside holding his hand. The members of the cabinet were admitted to the sick room singly at that time.

The actual death probably occurred about 2 o'clock. It being understood that Dr. Rixey delayed the announcement until the morning, the members of the cabinet were waiting in the hall. The waiting newspaper men received the notification, and in a trice there was the keenest excitement on the broad avenue, but there was no sentiment of disorder.

When the news was imparted to those downstairs, a great sigh of anguish went up from the strong men there, and the members of the cabinet, senators and close friends remained but a few minutes. Then, with mournful tread and dense fog settled like a pall over the city. The Milburn house became a tomb of silence. Lights—now extinguished—were dimmed, visitors were denied admittance, and the mourning family and their intimate friends were left alone with their distinguished dead.

The Closing Scene.
Before 6 o'clock it was clear to those at the bedside that he was dying, and preparations were made for the last sad offices of farewell from those who were nearest and dearest to him. Oxygen had been administered steadily, but with little effect, keeping back the approach of death. The president came out of one period of unconsciousness only to relapse into another. ident a complete change in the executive administration of the government would be made. The president's death would be the oath of office was wholly a matter of conjecture.

President Arthur took the oath at 2 o'clock a. m., after the death of President Garfield, and that case Justice Brady of New York administered the oath.

There is no requirement that the oath shall be administered by a justice of the United States supreme court, although that procedure is adopted when circumstances permit.

Without unseemly haste the members of the cabinet will tender their resignations, and the new president will then be free to initiate his own and choose his own cabinet.

Shortly after midnight the president's breathing was barely perceptible. His pulse had practically ceased, and the extremities were cold. It was recognized that the president was dying. The family who had remained through the day began to leave the house, not caring to be present at the end.

Such an intense state of anxiety existed among the watchers that rumors gained frequent circulation that death had already actually occurred. The arrival of the coroner gave rise to one such rumor, and a flood of groundless dispatches were sent saying that the end had come. These were speedily set at rest by an official statement from the house that the reports of death were groundless, and that the president still lived.

Coroner Wilson said that he had been called to the Milburn residence as soon as possible after the announcement of death. He had seen a reputable local paper issue a telegram from Secretary Cortelyou announcing that the president died at 2:15 this morning.

WASHINGTON MOURNS.
People Stayed Up All Night in the National Capital.
Washington, Sept. 14.—The white house received a telegram from Secretary Cortelyou announcing that the president died at 2:15 this morning.

The official announcement received at the white house is as follows: "Buffalo, Sept. 14.—Colonel S. B. Montgomery, Executive Mansion, Washington: The president died at a quarter past 2 o'clock this morning."

When the blow fell and the official announcement came that President McKinley had passed away at 2:15 o'clock the crowds which had been on the streets restlessly and sorrowfully awaiting news of the end retired for the night, as had all the government officials save a few clerks at the state and navy departments. Secretary Hay had given directions as to what should be done, and Acting Chief Clerk Martin and other employees, as soon as they received official confirmation of the news, immediately sent cables to each and every United States ambassador, minister and charge where these were absent from the capital, notifying them that President McKinley died at 2:15 o'clock this morning and instructing them to so inform the governments to which they are accredited.

BRYAN IS SHOCKED.
Cabinet Speaking Management on Account of President's Death.
Chicago, Sept. 14.—On the sorrowful tidings from the president's bedside Colonel W. J. Bryan said last night to the Associated Press: "The president's death is a great loss to our country. I simply will not believe that he can die from an assassin's bullet until I hear that he has breathed his last. While there's life there's hope."

Colonel Bryan arrived here from Lincoln, Neb., at 8:50 p. m., over the Burlington road and was driven at once to the Sherman house. He was to have addressed a democratic meeting Saturday, but when he heard the news from Buffalo he said he would in all probability leave for Lincoln this morning. While Colonel Bryan was talking his head was bowed and he appeared greatly dejected. Over and over again he repeated the words: "I cannot believe his life is to end this way."

"I have already spoken of the horror of which I regard the assassin's crime, ating the nerve strain. Dr. N. W. Wilson, sanitary officer of the exposition, sent a remote party as a consultant making an inspection, when he was notified by one of the guards of the injury to the president. Dr. Wilson proceeded to the hospital and by virtue of his office assumed control pending the arrival of the surgeons. This was at 4:35 p. m. The first to arrive was Dr. Mann to stand opposite the operator as first assistant, and Dr. Parmenter to stand opposite the operator as second assistant. Dr. E. I. Loe of St. Louis, a visitor at the exposition, who came to the hospital before the other surgeons arrived, was asked by Dr. Mann to stand opposite the operator as an additional assistant. Dr. P. M. Rixey, who was summoned from the Milburn house, whether he went in complete ignorance of the shooting or whether the operation began. Dr. Roosevelt had gone to Niagara Falls, and a special train to bring him to Buffalo was ordered by Harry Parry, general manager of the Erie Central railway. It should be mentioned that the first or uppermost shot went through the president's clothing and made an abrasion at the center of the sternum. The bullet was found inside the waistcoat and did no essential harm. The president took the other kindly and was well under his influence within the next ten minutes. The abdomen having been aseptically prepared, an incision three inches long was made perpendicular to the body and including the opening made by the ball—a 32-caliber—that was located four inches below the left nipple and an inch and a half to the left of the median line. The incision went through a deep layer of fat before the peritoneum was reached, hence the incision was enlarged another inch. A piece of cloth—probably a handkerchief—was found in the track of the missile, which looked as if it had been "punched out" by the bullet. Upon opening the peritoneum a double row of silk sutures and the viscous was drawn up into the operation wound and the perforation after examination was closed with a double row of silk sutures. A little oozing of the stomach contents had occurred through the opening—all of which was wiped away. A further incision was made in the lower part of the abdomen in order to examine the dorsal of the stomach, upon which an opening was found. This was sutured in a manner like that of the first incision. The intestines were examined for possible wounds, but happily none were found, and these were wrapped in moist gauze. A previous hypodermic injection had been made and now twenty-five minims of brandy were similarly administered. A further search for the missile failed to discover it, but it became apparent that it had done no other vital damage, with the strong probability that it lost itself in the stomach.

DETAILED OF THE OPERATION.
New York Medical Journal's Description of the Work.
New York, Sept. 15.—The New York Medical Journal, in its issue this week will print the following account of the operation upon President McKinley following his shooting at Buffalo last Friday. This report is furnished by a Buffalo physician who was present at the operation.

Beginning with the arrival of the president at the hospital, the account says, the hospital internes removed the president's clothing, ascertained the location of the wounds and made ready for the surgeons, who had been summoned by telephone. Dr. Edward C. Mann administered one-fourth of a grain of morphine hypodermically, which served a good purpose in alleviating the nerve strain. Dr. N. W. Wilson, sanitary officer of the exposition, sent a remote party as a consultant making an inspection, when he was notified by one of the guards of the injury to the president. Dr. Wilson proceeded to the hospital and by virtue of his office assumed control pending the arrival of the surgeons. This was at 4:35 p. m. MR. IRELAND'S TRIBUTE.
St. Paul Prelate Praises the Departed President.
St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 14.—Upon receipt of the news of President McKinley's death Archbishop John Ireland dictated the following statement to the Associated Press:

"The nation mourns. Well may she mourn. She has lost her chief magistrate, her country's best beloved, its bravest and its noblest. He was the noble citizen, proud of being a son of the people, brave on the battlefield amid his country's peril, jealous of its glory, and ever ready to lay down his life for its interests. He was the typical president of the republic—large minded in his vision of the questions bearing upon the country's future—resolute in using the authority for what seemed to him its better weal; ready as the leader of a self-governing people to hearken to the popular voice and, so far as principle and conscience permitted, obey its behests, even to the sacrifice of his personal view. Political opponents differed from him in matters of public policy, but his sincerity, his spirit of justice and patriotism.

"William McKinley is now dead, stricken down by the hand of a vile assassin. It makes the nation's sorrow doubly deep. For to sorrow is added shame—shame before her own eyes, before those of the world, that in the hands of civil liberty there should have been found a man so overwhelmingly bad as to murder her president; to murder him who served so well his fellow men; to murder him who cherished so tenderly the free institutions of America.

"In our hour of sorrow we turn to the God of nations and commend to him our country."

PRESIDENT'S DEATH

WAS INEVITABLE

Autopsy Shows That the Abdominal Wound Was Certain to Have Fatal Results.

GANGRENE FOUND IN PLACES

Real Trouble Was Failure of President's Constitution to Rally From Shock and Mend the Damage Done by Bullets.

Buffalo, Sept. 15.—The following report of the autopsy upon the body of President McKinley has been issued. The bullet which struck the president broke through the skin and the outer wall of the stomach near its lower border. Both holes were found to be completely closed by the sutures, but the tissue around each hole had become gangrenous. After passing through the stomach the bullet passed into the back wall of the abdomen, hitting and tearing the upper end of the kidney. This portion of the bullet track was also gangrenous, the gangrene involving the pancreas. There was no sign of peritonitis or other disease of the organs. The heart walls were very thin. There was no evidence of any disease of the heart, but the part of nature and death resulted from the gangrene which affected the stomach around the bullet wounds as well as the tissues around the further course of the bullet. There was no evidence of any surgical or medical treatment and was the direct result of the bullet wound.

Harvey D. Gaylord, M. D., Herman G. Matzinger, M. D., P. M. Rixey, M. D., Matthew D. Mann, M. D., Horman Mynter, M. D., Charles D. Stockton, M. D., Edward G. Janeway, M. D., W. W. Johnson, M. D., Eugene Washin, M. D., Charles C. Smith, M. D., Edward L. Munson, Assistant Surgeon, U. S. A., Hermann L. Baer, M. D., and Matthew D. Mann, M. D., were present upon whom fell the responsibility of operating upon the president immediately after he was shot, in the course of a conversation talk, said:

"First of all we never any contention or unseemly discussion among the physicians as to the method of treatment of a case similar to the present one in importance. In no case was there ever a better understanding as to what should be done. We worked together as one man. There were honest differences of opinion, but among us sometimes as to which was the better mode of procedure under certain conditions, but the minority always were convinced.

The criticisms that were made as to the insufficiency of the original examination and the failure to locate the bullet at the time of the operation; were they not in fact, the report made." Dr. Mann replied, "is a sufficient answer to your question. It shows very plainly that the location of the bullet was when the operation was performed. The case that resulted from gangrene which appeared in the path of the bullet. Even our efforts to locate the bullet were unsuccessful. I believe it went into the muscle at the small of the back. We followed the hole made by the bullet until it went into the muscle. The x-ray instrument was not used as it was not handy. The serious damage was done to the organs gangrenous at the time of the operation, where it now rests."

Concerning the First Bullet.
"Your report says the first bullet striking in the breast did no harm." "Yes, that is correct. The bullet evidently struck the button and then struck the flesh was quite flabby and had it not met some obstruction it surely would have killed the president. The investigation developed the fact that the first bullet struck the president on the right side, but between the second and third ribs. In our original examination we said it was to the left of the breast bone. The mistake in the first examination was made at the time of the shooting when the question was not so much as to the exact location of the wound as to the heart getting to it to save the president's life."

"The report speaks of a lack of evidence of repair work on the part of nature. Won't you explain just what bearing this has on the case?" "That statement to mean that the general system of the patient failed to respond to the demand on it for a revival from the shock suffered by the president. The patient was in a low state of vitality; not to poor health, mind you, but to a system that was considerably run down and needed rest and recuperation."

"Doesn't know if it was poisoned." "It has been suggested, Dr. Mann, that the bullet which went into the stomach was poisoned. I am sure that that was what caused death. Do you think there is any basis for the reports?" "I am sure that the reports have received a number of telegrams and letters alleging that the bullet was poisoned," Dr. Mann replied. "I don't know whether it was or not, but a bacteriological examination of the remaining bullet in the pistol will be necessary to conclude that. This conclusion will be very difficult to reach, but it is necessary to know through which the bullet passed are dead. This is very remarkable indeed. The area of the dead flesh in the stomach was perhaps as great as a slice of bread. The expert, Dr. Washin, the Marine hospital expert, was strongly inclined to the opinion that the bullet had been poisoned.

"I think in justice to the other physicians and myself something should be said about the bullet. It was necessary to state that nothing was done to save the president's life as possible and to state the facts simply. They were given as hour to hour talks of the president's condition, but the public informed from day to day of the actual condition of the state of affairs."

Another of the physicians, who requested that his name be not used, said: "So far as the treatment of the case was concerned, there was no surgical and medical standpoint, it was successful. The abdominal wound was fatal from the start. The physicians should have been given the full report of the autopsy, because it revealed the fact that the abdominal wound was necessarily fatal and that nothing could be done to save the president's life. The government, the family and the profession were fairly represented among the physicians, and the surgeons making the autopsy."

Flags on German Fleet Hoisted and Stars and Stripes Unfurled.
Danzig, Sept. 14.—When Emperor William heard of the death of McKinley he immediately ordered the German fleet to half-mast their flags and hoist the stars and stripes on their masts. Dantzig, July 14.—Emperor William sent the following dispatch today: "To Mrs. McKinley, Buffalo: Her Majesty, the empress, has expressed our most sincere sorrow in the loss which you have suffered by the death of your beloved husband, felled by the ruthless assassin's bullet. I have granted you my sympathy and the great seal of the state of Ohio, this 14th day of September, 1901, in testimony of my sympathy. By the governor: Louis C. Laylin, Secretary of State."

SORROW IN ENGLAND.
Flags Are Half-Masted in the Cities—The London, Sept. 14.—Flags are half-masted all over the city. Expressions of grief and sympathy are heard on all sides. All papers are issuing extra editions in honor of the late president. The editorials are highly eulogistic of McKinley and Roosevelt. Exchanges here and in Liverpool were closed in honor of the late president. King Edward telegraphed Ambassador Choate: "Most truly do I sympathize with you and the whole American nation at the loss of your distinguished, ever to be regretted president."

A PROTECHNIC PROPHET.
Freak of Fireworks With Roosevelt's Name is Recalled.
Buffalo, Sept. 14.—There are a usual stories of premonitions of the accession of Roosevelt to the presidency. State Senator Laughlin says that not over four weeks ago, while a display of fireworks was being made at Pan-American exposition grounds a huge column of the then vice president was shown in fire. Underneath were the words "Our Vice President." Hardly had the picture been lighted when a great explosion occurred and left standing in huge letters under Roosevelt's picture the words "Our President." In a minute or two the words "our" were extinguished, and the other words, and for fully seven minutes the single word "President" stood out in bold relief. Laughlin says everybody in the place was impressed with the occurrence, and now it would seem prophetic.

He was one of the most popular railway men in Dubuque.

BY DAD.
WILLIAM M'KINLEY
 Hushed is the voice of party hate,
 McKinley;
 Beside your bier the people wait,
 McKinley;
 Oh, patriot martyr, tried and true,
 Beneath Columbia's skies of blue
 A stricken nation mourns for you,
 McKinley.
 Safe-housed in mother earth's kind breast]
 McKinley,
 Thon't gone to thy eternal rest,
 McKinley,
 A well earned rest, Oh, noble chief,
 Beyond the reach of unbelief—
 Thine now the glory, ours the grief,
 McKinley.
 Secure upon the scroll of fame,
 McKinley,
 Stands out thy pure untarnished name,
 McKinley.
 The freemen's tears are freely shed,
 And yet, soft is thy peaceful bed—
 God help the living, not the dead,
 McKinley.
 —A. L. Bixby in State Journal.

We will have to accept it. The authority ought to be o. k. Whenever a man jumps his debts and then swears he hasn't anything, while running a couple of farms he refers to as "mine" and good Nebraska farms at that, he ought to be able to tell us about other people who don't pay their honest debts. By dad, that's his long suit.

By dad, why doesn't the Republican turn on the "search light?" We are all from Missouri and ready to be shown. This suspense Eph is keeping us in week after week is something terrible. Turn on the light, old man, turn her on!

D. C. Main says he thinks he'll have to vote for Gue for county treasurer just to make sure that Mr. Gue will get one vote. They say it's about the same thing in Winside only the one vote will be W. M's.

Perhaps that "race" some of the boys had last week would suit the Norfolk visitors to the county fair. It was same breed as the Norfolk people are used to.

It isn't always the noisy, turbulent and revengeful citizen who is the more patriotic, nor is this the class of men who feel most keenly the anguish and sorrow of a murdered president. "Still waters run deep," shallow streams show just what is in them. We have some very shallow material of this sort in Wayne. It has been brought to the notice of the public previous to the assassination of President McKinley.

Any time a dollar looks too big to you, to give up for a year's subscription to the DEMOCRAT, hand us a bushel of potatoes. Nothing said about quality, either.

Bryan on McKinley
 Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 18.—A tribute by W. J. Bryan to the dead president has been given out. Quoting the words of Major McKinley, "God's will, not ours, be done," Mr. Bryan recalls the pathetic scenes at the deathbed and continues:
 "The terrible deed at Buffalo, rudely breaking the ties of family and friendship and horrifying every patriotic citizen, crowns a most extraordinary life with a halo that cannot but exalt its victim's place in history, while his bravery during the trying ordeal, his forgiving spirit and his fortitude in the final hours give glimpses of his inner life which nothing less tragic could have revealed. But inexpressively sad as is the death of Mr. McKinley, the illustrious citizen, as is the damnable murder of McKinley, the president, that melts seventy-five million hearts into one and brings a hush to the farm, the factory and the forum.

"Death is the inevitable incident of every human career. It despoils the sword and shield of the warrior and laughs at the precautions suggested by science. Wealth cannot build walls high enough or thick enough to shut it out, and no house is humble enough to escape its visitation. Even love, the most potent force known to mankind, the characteristic which links the human to the divine—even love is powerless in its presence. Its contingency is recognized in the marriage vow, "Until death do us part," and is written upon friendship's ring. But death, even when produced by natural causes, of a public servant, charged with the tremendous responsibilities which press upon a president, shocks the entire country and is infinitely multiplied when the circumstances attending constitute an attack upon the government itself.

"No one can estimate the far reaching effect of such an act as that which now casts a gloom over our land. It shames America in the eyes of the world, impairs her moral prestige and gives enemies of free government a chance to mock at her, and it excites an indignation which, while righteousness itself, leads to acts which will partake of the spirit of lawlessness. As the president's death overwhelms all in a common sorrow so it imposes a common responsibility, namely, to make the executive life secure to his family and the country without insecurity to the freedom of speech or the press."

IN MEMORIAM
 Wayne was a city of mourners yesterday as never before. And yet our city was no exception to what was going on in every city, town and hamlet in the United States. Eyes in England and other European countries there was an observance of the day in memorial to the martyred president, William McKinley. At two p. m. every store, office and shop was closed, even the saloons strictly observing the request. The veterans of the '60's led the way to the opera house which was well filled. The interior had been draped in deep mourning for the occasion. In the center was a large bier with the words "Our President." Upon this rested a fine portrait of McKinley, while to the right was Lincoln's picture and to the left Garfield's. The memorial service was opened by singing "America," then prayer by Rev. Cunningham. A quartet of Wayne's best singers, Misses Cook and Hitchcock and Messrs. Davies and Wilbur, with Miss Buffington at the piano, then rendered "Lead Kindly Light," a beautiful thing and most feelingly sung. J. D. King, conductor of the services, then called upon Prof. J. M. Pile who spoke of McKinley as a citizen. Then Frank Fuller eulogized the dead as a soldier, Prof. Gregg as a statesman and Rev. Welden paying the dead leader a most touching tribute as a Christian. Geo. Wilbur sang "Jesus Lover of My Soul," and the service came to a close with the singing of "Nearer My God, to Thee" and the benediction by Rev. Carpenstein.

 Mrs. Eugene Mueller of near Winside was in town from Monday until Wednesday in an attempt to get the sheriff to go up and get her man. Judge Hunter loaned the old lady 30 cents to get her back to Winside. The question naturally arises, how will the judge get even?
 Susie, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Lewis, died on Sunday Sept. 15, at the age of 20 years, death being the result of consumption. The funeral services were held at the M. E. church Tuesday. The deceased had many friends who will mourn her untimely death.—Herald.

In talking about fairs this year great allowance must be made for the unfavorable weather of July and August. It was a question whether to hold one in Wayne even after the premium list had been sent out. The hot weather naturally discouraged the promoters. The DEMOCRAT wants, at this time, to extend its best thanks to the business men who generously patronized the fair book. It was the first time the DEMOCRAT ever got out the job—which largely accounts for the coldness of the other papers toward the project—and the first time a sufficient number were printed and distributed. Over $6 was expended in postage to mail the books and the balance properly distributed.

 Among this week's arrivals are Miss Lancaster of Boyd county, Miss Nelson of Cedar county and Miss Shirts of this county. They will continue the work for a year.
 No classes met yesterday afternoon. Both students and teachers attended the services at the opera house. Prof. Pile spoke of McKinley as a citizen and Prof. Gregg spoke of him as a statesman.
 The College has received letters from most of last year's graduating class; in which they tell of the progress of their schools as well as their hopes and plans. All are getting along nicely and have only words of praise for the preparation made here.
 Miss Cora Simmons who completed the Elocution course in '04 attended the social Saturday evening and visited classes Monday. She took dinner with Mrs. Pile. All who knew her were pleased to see her and her visit was very pleasant.
 The programs of the literary societies begin promptly at 7:30. The meeting for this evening is set for that time. The public is welcome to attend all the exercises but we hope they will make an effort to come before the exercises begin.
 Several new students will enter next week and others are expected during the term. The outlook for a very large attendance during the winter is all that can be desired. With additional robbin, pianos, apparatus, etc., all will be accommodated even better than in the past.
 A visit to the various classes is not only a source of pleasure but one of profit to the visitor. Scarcely both teachers and students are working with more enthusiasm than at any time in the past and that is saying a great deal for we have always a fine class of students in doing the best of work.

Ten Years Dreaming
 Randolph Times: 14 to 0.
 "Twas 'nace work, old man."
 We won and won big Thursday afternoon. For ten years Randolph has dreamed of shutting out Coleridge in a ball game and the dream came true yesterday. Old timers say that for the first time in their lives they saw Eddy Woods, the veteran ball player and manager, completely discouraged. And when the Coleridge boys get discouraged it's a sure guess they're against the real thing, for if ever there was a gamey gang of ball tossers Coleridge can claim the honor. From the first inning, when Gilliam swung the willow for a safe smash and scored followed by two more, the Coleridge boys realized they were defeated.

AHERNS, WAYNE, NEBRASKA

A FEW NEBRASKA FIRSTS
 As Set Forth by the State Historical Society.

The First Nebraska Indians—so far as now ascertained—were a branch of the Pawnees who inhabited this country 500 to 1000 years ago. They lived in lodges made of poles and sod, built on the tops of rounded hills, generally overlooking a valley. They made pottery from clay mixed with pulverized clam shells; they opened up limestone quarries in order to get the flint from the limestone. The remains of their homes and works are found beneath three to ten feet of soil in Cass, Lancaster, Douglas, Otoe and other eastern counties, sometimes with large oak trees above them. Further study of them now being made by the State Historical Society is expected to yield more information.

The First White Men on Nebraska soil who left a clear and undisputed record of their visit were the Mallot brothers, Frenchman, who in 1739 came up the Missouri, wintered with the Pawnees on the Loup near Genoa, and the next spring followed the Platte to the forks, then up the North Platte some distance, then across to the South Platte, and up that stream to the vicinity of Denver, thence south to Sante Fe. The Coronado expedition in 1540 and other Spanish expeditions from Sante Fe undoubtedly came near Nebraska, possibly came into it,—the question is not certainly settled.

The First White Settlement in Nebraska was Bellevue, named in 1805 by Manuel Lisa, a Spanish trader; established in 1810 by the American Fur Company, of St. Louis.

The First White Child born in Nebraska, whose name and date of birth are definitely known, was Samuel Pearce Merrill, son of Rev. and Mrs. Moses Merrill, Baptist Missionaries to the Otoes. He was born at Bellevue, July 13, 1835.

The first Army Post in Nebraska was Fort Atkinson established in 1819, abandoned in 1827. It was on the site of what is now the village of Calhoun, Washington county. There were no doubt children born and marriages made at Ft. Atkinson, but the record of them has not been preserved.

The First Nebraska Newspaper was the Palladium, set up and printed at Bellevue, Nov. 14, 1834, published by Thomas Morton and D. E. Reed.

The First Nebraska Court House was erected in July, 1856, at Calhoun, Washington county.

The First Steamboat to navigate Nebraska waters was the "Western Engineer," in 1819, carrying Lieut. Long's party of exploring to the mouth of the Platte.

The First Nebraska Railroad opened to the public was the Union Pacific. Ground was broken at Council Bluffs Dec. 2, 1863. The first regular train was run March 13, 1868, from Omaha to North Bend—60 miles.

The First Nebraska School began Nov. 25, 1833, at Bellevue, taught by Mrs. Moses Merrill. The school children were mostly Otoe Indians and half-breeds.

 From NVE & BUCHANAN CO.
 Receipts of cattle are coming strong. Three-fourths of the offerings are western rangers and there is a scarcity of corn fed cattle. Beef steers—Demand is active for fat cattle and prices are from 15 to 25c higher than first of last week. Cows and mixed stock—The supply of cows and heifers is very fair but demand is active and prices rule steady to strong with last week's quotations. Good to choice stock is scarce and sells readily at stronger prices; medium grades are steady to weak and common and canning grades sell as well as at any time. Stockers and feeders—The receipts in this line are very liberal but demand from all sides is good and market can safely be quoted a quarter higher than last week for desirable kind both heavy and light. The medium and common grades have not advanced as much but everything sells in good season. Western grass beef meats with good demand from all packers and on anything killers can use market is active and strong. Hog receipts still moderate although some heavier than last week and market is booming. Today with about 6500 on sale market opened 5 to 10c higher, grew ten higher, closed easy. Range $6.60 to $6.85 bulk $6.70 to $6.75. The advance carries the market nearly 25c higher than last Wednesday. Sheep receipts very heavy, market fully a quarter lower.
