THE DEMOCRAT

WAYNE, NEBRASKA.
W. S. GOLDIE, Editor and Publisher.
SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER YEAR, IF PAID IN ADVANCE, $1.00.

R. A. Tawney who ran for state representative in 1900, has just bought a Pierce county farm for $16,000. If R. A. had been elected some people would be figuring on what his graft had been.

The Pierce Leader mentions the name of R. A. Tawney as candidate for congress. Mr. Tawney is an exceptionally good and competent man, so level-headed, in fact, that he will demand the renomination of John S. Robinson.

While in Omaha last week the DEMOCRAT man was informed by those "in touch" with Gov. Savage that he would not under any consideration be a candidate for a nomination to that high office.

The Presbyterians have revised their creed and decided that the babies who die don't go to hell, after all. This may be a move in the right direction but it won't help the millions of little tots whom the Presbyterians have been sending to everlasting hell the hundreds of years past. Is there anything on earth more damnably ridiculous than a church creed, anyway?

The powers that appoint Nebraskans to fat places in Porto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines must wear smoked glasses. The honor of all Nebraska is staked on Tom Cook, Brad Slaughter, Seth Mobley and A. R. Gurzon. Good Lord! That quartette would smell to heaven, even after John Thurston had wrapped it in one of his government blankets "unsplashed as the stars."

The Madison Mail, Ex-senator Allen's populist paper, has already "taken a fall out of" several prominent democrats of the state. A few years office-holding and continuous dabbling in politics apparently makes the best of men selfish, mean and "batty." If there is any public man in arrears to the democratic party, that man is Senator Allen. It is an easy matter to stir up a political row, most any damp-hool newspaper can do it.

The crazy old cuss, who edits the York Times, and slopped all over Savage for the latter's pardon of the king-bee of the g. o. p., thusly summarizes the present situation of the fusionists:

York Times Fusionists will do well not to get too gay. There will be no trouble in the republican party this year. Everybody will not be exactly suited with the ticket, but it will be so much better than any ticket the fusionists ever have, or ever will, nominate, that no republican will hesitate for a moment in choosing between them. If any fusionist wants to see trouble that is real misery, let him look at the rotten, leprous, decaying old carcass of fusion.

Here is a South African war picture painted with a woman's tears. You'll not find it in the official reports. It is a bit of war horror taken from a British officer's letter to the folks at home.

If you will look far out on a plain you'll see a little cottage. It is almost in ruins, for it is in the track of a war.

A troop of English soldiers surrounds the house and an officer enters. He finds no man in the place, but a frightened, pallid-faced woman is weeping over a dead girl on a cot. The soldiers try to comfort the woman. They offered to escort her to a safer place. They assured her that they are men, not savages, and that they cannot and will not harm a woman.

Still she sobs, and finally the awful truth comes out. She has heard the stories of soldiers' brutality and cruelty. She had a firmly fixed idea that these soldiers of England kill children and women for amusement; that they love the sight of, blood and pain.

She killed her own child when she saw the soldiers coming.

"War is hell," said brave old General Sherman, and that is always true. But it is sometimes so hellish and fiendish as to stagger humanity.

The British may deny the stories of outrage and savagery that leak through from South Africa in spite of the active censor.

The best proof of the truth of these stories is the case of the mother who murdered her daughter rather than allow her to fall into the hands of the British soldiers.

The sacrifice of love is an appalling indictment of "civilized" England.

Washington News

February 6, 1902.

The bill introduced by Mr. Hill, of Connecticut, which provides for the redemption of silver dollars in gold, when presented to the amount of five dollars and over, has been favorably reported by the Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures, and is now on the House calendar. A minority report, signed by the Democratic members of this committee, is also on file, in opposition to the bill. To carry out the provisions of this measure, should it become a law, would require the Secretary of the Treasury to hold as a reserve fund $150,000,000 more in gold than is now required, and to accomplish this result, would contract the currency to that amount, and doubtless would require the issuance of bonds by this Government, to keep up the fund. This bill expresses the wishes and desires of the large national bank interests of the east.

Mr. Hill, the author of the bill, is a national banker himself, being vice-president of one of these institutions in his state. The bill as recommended by the committee has been on the House calendar for the past two weeks, and while there has been ample time to bring the matter up, it has not yet been called up for action. The cause of this delay is that many of the Republican members from the west have expressed themselves as strongly opposed to any such measure, claiming it would have a tendency to contract the currency, depress prices, and in all probability bring on a panic in the near future, as, by the provisions of this bill, silver would simply be a redemption money. It is the desire of the republican administration, however, to force this measure through, before they encounter too much opposition in their own ranks. Speaker Henderson has written to many of the republican members from the west, confidential letters asking them for an interview as to their views on this measure, and it is believed that the bill will not be allowed to come up in the House by the Speaker, unless he has the assurance from the members that a sufficient number of votes can be mustered to pass the measure. Unless a marked change should take place in the sentiment of some of those republicans, there will be no active opposition to the bill on the republican side.

In the meantime it is there on the calendar, the only business that is ready, yet there it stands, the Speaker for the present having assumed the position that it could not be called up at this time. If it should be made the order of business in the near future, it is probable that both the Republican and Democratic parties will hold a caucus, as it is a measure of vital importance and if carried into effect, will be another step toward fastening more tightly upon this country the single gold standard.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., son of the Standard Oil magnate, is conspicuous as a Sunday school teacher. Rockefeller, Jr., recently delivered an address before the Young Men's Christian association of Brown university, to which Rockefeller, sr., has recently contributed $75,000 for a building for religious and social purposes.

Young Rockefeller's text was, "Business as a Life Work." In the beginning young Rockefeller said: "Many men of today think that dishonesty is the best policy, and that business and Christianity are diametrically opposed to each other. We have come here for the purpose of expressing the belief that the most successful business men can be, should be and are the most successful Christian men."

Mr. Rockefeller then explained: "I do not refer to those men who are successful through the employment of unfair methods; I do not mean those who are prosperous today or tomorrow. Such success is temporary; it is transient; it is not true success. I mean by success that success which will last unimpaired for forty or fifty years—the success gained by those men whose guiding star is integrity. Such success does not come to a man who is not thorough and through what he should be."

Then Mr. Rockefeller took up the most interesting point of his discourse. He said:

"As a man extends his business you say it is just for him to do it at the expense of other smaller concerns? Large concerns often shut out the smaller men who cannot compete. The smaller man may lack the experience, the plant, the funds and proper preparations and cannot sell so cheaply as his larger competitor."

Oftentimes we cannot reconcile this fact. It seems to us contrary to the Golden Rule. Let us go back and examine the true causes. The big businesses increase because they can by the use of advanced methods and appliances place their goods on the market cheaper than can the smaller concerns. They are thus able to benefit a great number of people.

Considered from this standpoint they are certainly justifiable, for they are doing the greatest good to the greatest number of people, even though it may be at the expense of a few. A war may cost many lives, but it is for the good of the country at large. The growth of a large business is merely a survival of the fittest.

Consider whether it is best to use modern means of turning out products, doing better what we do and doing much more, or for a larger number to be engaged in a smaller number of industries, which are being conducted on old-fashioned methods. The modern methods should be employed, even at the expense of the few.

The American Beauty rose can be produced in the splendor and fragrance which bring cheer to its beholder only by sacrificing the early buds which grow up around it. This is not an evil tendency in business; it is merely the working out of a law of nature and a law of God.

There is no real divergence between business and the Christian life. The Christian world needs the ability of the business man his wisdom and pre-eminent strength. It needs also his financial help. Educational, philanthropic and many of our great religious movements are the result of the spirit of our Christian business men. The business man needs Christianity because it protects him against the temptations common in business life and gives him an opportunity to expend his money wisely.

Mr. Rockefeller was correct when he said: "Oftentimes we cannot reconcile this fact," but in his subsequent effort to apologize for the trusts he proved a failure. His claim that the trusts produce the greatest good to the greatest number will not find supporters among the housewives of the land whose household expenses in this triumphant era of the trusts are more than doubled.

The trust did not originate because of any modern necessity; it originated in the selfishness and greed of individuals; and the very fact that any single individual can, through this system, pile up the enormous fortune which young Rockefeller's father has accumulated, provides proof, even to the unlettered, that it is the few—the very few indeed—rather than the many that are benefited by the trust system.

It is interesting to hear this son of a trust magnate basing his plea for an iniquitous system upon Christianity. It is interesting to hear this young man say that "the business man needs Christianity because it protects him against the temptations common in business life and gives him an opportunity to expend his money wisely." If the Christianity of the Rockefeller family is not spurious, why has it not protected that family from seeking unfair advantages over their fellows?

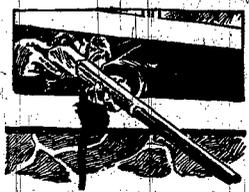

The idea of a professional Sunday school teacher addressing a class of young men and telling them that the trust system is "merely the working out of a law of nature and a law of God," is too absurd a proposition to deal with patiently.

No one would seriously object to young Rockefeller defending the iniquitous system by which his family has become the wealthiest in the land, but when he makes this defense he should do so in the name of Rockefeller, and not in the name of God. He should do so in the name of the policy of greed and avarice, not in the name of Christianity. The pavements of Hades are constructed of the material out of which is made the sort of "Christianity" which Mr. Rockefeller employs as a basis for the trust system.

It is comforting to all lovers of eternal justice to know that the good men who have in hand the revision of the Westminster concession of faith have decided by a unanimous vote to modify that portion which relates to the future punishment of folks too little to bear up under the weight of a depressing moral responsibility. Ever since the days of John Calvin there have been people who devoutly and fervently believed that many infants were foreordained from the foundation of the world to spend the fleeting hours of eternity in a place where the mercury never drops below 189 in the shade. Gradually kinder sentiment has been developed in the hearts of believers until there are few who do not shudder at the very thought that little children even though they perish in their sins, should receive a sentence of eternal punishment. From man's frail conception of justice, it no doubt appears that some children deserve perpetual torture; but "the Lord is good and His mercy endureth forever," and He can no doubt perceive why a little child is not so perfect as a little man, and may be willing to forgive at the point where man's condemnation would just begin to warm up to the work in hand.

I'm glad to know the gruesome ghost No longer will our senses bore; That babies, dying, need not roast Beyond earth's portals any more.
Their spirits never will be pained With larger spirits, misbehaved; Grown man alone is, foreordained To either suffer or be saved.
Earth life is nothing after all Save one of nature's cruel jokes; The ones who die when they are small Are better off than other folks.
—Birby.

Of the assassin may be more sudden, but it is not more sure than the dire punishment meted out to the man who abuses his stomach. No man is stronger than his stomach. When the stomach is diseased the whole body is weakened.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It cures diseases of other organs when it cures the diseases of the stomach, on which the several organs depend for nutrition and vitality.

"I would say in regard to your medicine that I have been greatly benefited by them," writes Mr. J. S. Bell, of Leando, Van Buren Co., Ia. "It was at one time as I thought almost at death's door. I was confined to my house and part of the time to my bed. I had taken gallons of medicine, but it only fed the disease, but I must say that 'Golden Medical Discovery' has cured me, and to-day I am stouter than I have been for twenty years. I am now forty-three years old. I have taken in all twenty-nine bottles of Golden Medical Discovery, besides two or three dozen vials of Dr. Pierce's Peppermint Cure, but now I take no medicine."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation.

The Rundell store came near going up in smoke last Saturday, and if it had there is no telling who else in that part of town wouldn't be figuring on rebuilding this week. The big gasoline lamp exploded when the store was full of customers—and this is an "ad" for you, Ralph—and only for J. R. going right after the thing, through fire and smoke, a bad fire would have been started. People who saw the accident say it was a wonder the young merchant did not get badly burned in his risky action.

Chris Holtz, a carpenter working with Geo. Luedders, had a close call last week. He was helping build a big barn for Peter Severs, out near La Porte, and when up on a scaffolding slipped on some snow. He pitched straight downward but had barely touched the air when his pants legs —he wore two pairs—caught on a big spike or bolt, and there he hung like a bean pod on a May pole. Chris says he will "go up on the ground" next time.

"Come to 'Elli Bill"

Norfolk News: The News recently saw a letter from Lincoln in which the writer stated that he had a talk with Clancy, the governor's private secretary, concerning the hospital at Norfolk. Clancy paid his respects to the people of Norfolk in terms more emphatic than elegant, and intimated that what might be a mess of muddled oats. After relieving himself along this line at some length, Clancy suggested that good men be sent down to the next session of legislature to work for the passage of a bill restoring what the governor has robbed us of, and promising that Governor Savage in 1903 will sign any bill that the legislature passes. Will he, though?
If the governor, thinks a bid of this kind will bring him any support from Madison county he must take us for a pack of dampfools, indeed. If he thinks he can override the rights of the people of this section of the state, cause us the expense of maintaining a lobby at Lincoln at the next session of the legislature and privately work against our interests, and then secure our assistance for his re-nomination at the next republican convention by promising to sign our bill if we succeed in forcing it through the legislature, then he is certainly very much mistaken. We would not take the governor's promise if he would reduce it to black and white, for the reason that we do not believe he is a man of his word.
Even if he would put up a bond to carry out his agreements, he could not have the vote of one republican either in the convention or at the polls, if he succeeds in making the nomination.
Gov. Savage has shown himself weak and spiteful in every critical question that has been brought before him, and he is a disgrace to the republican party and the state of Nebraska. It is hoped that the party will not attempt to carry the load of Bartley's pardon by re-nominating Savage, but if it should do so, then it must expect to suffer overwhelming defeat.

The DEMOCRAT has been busier of late than a cranberry merchant at a more gas—well, almost as much as you get in the DEMOCRAT.

Women and Jewels.
Jewels, candy, flowers, man—is the order of woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem, then let her fortify herself against the insidious consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's Germap Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure-all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedy at Raymond's drug store. Get Green's Special Almanac.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

The winter term of the Wayne county Farmers' Institute was held on the 6th and 7th days of this month in pursuance of the notices published. There were some things connected with it discouraging, and others encouraging, and calculated to inspire hope and confidence in the intelligence and advanced thought of the residents of town and county. Although the meeting had been advertised in three consecutive issues of both the FARMER and Democrat, there are many individuals who are now insisting that they had never heard of the contemplated Institute, and who innocently say, "why didn't you advertise it?" I know of no way to more thoroughly advertise the Institute unless one shall visit each family and sit down and read to the family its own newspaper.

It is true that both days were cold, but I have full confidence that if a sale of a lot of old household odd farm trunk, or a circus had been advertised in the same way, the advertisement would not have called the notice of these persons, and that, notwithstanding the inclement weather, the attendance from both country and town would have been several times larger than the attendance on the first day of the Institute and the forenoon of the second day. This community assumes to be cultured and knowledge seeking people and for several winters a course of lectures have been supported at an expense of from six to seven hundred dollars each, and I assert that never have they had lectures that have in any particular surpassed the lectures of this Institute, nor have the subjects talked about had one-half the practical value of the subjects considered at this Institute. Why this apathy toward a Farmers' Institute in this community? I strongly conjecture that this indifference in the county arises largely from the lamentable fact that too many farmers persist in thinking that their fathers know everything about farming and stock raising worth knowing, and that they know all their fathers know, and therefore there is no probability that they will gain any information at the Institute of any value whatever. Too many wives in town and country think that no one can make butter, or cook meat or beans, or keep house, or train grain better than they can, and to attend a lecture on these subjects is a waste of time.

And again, in town there is a too prevalent idea that a Farmers' Institute is designed exclusively for old hay seeds, and that nothing can be said there, either interesting or instructive, to the higher toned town resident. And now let me here suggest that as long as you farmers persist in showing indifference toward your means of getting information on even your own vocation, town people will not entertain a very exalted opinion of your acquirements.
The attendance on the afternoon and evening of the second day was large, and for good order and close attention and apparent intelligent appreciation of the lectures, the audience were models. And when, at the close of the meeting, the speakers stated that they had never addressed a more attentive and apparently appreciative audience, I thought the compliment well merited.

The addresses of E. V. Forell on "The Purpose of the Institute," of D.
E. Ashburn on "Farm Dairying," and of Dr. A. T. Peters on "Prevention of Animal Diseases," in the afternoon of the first day were interesting and replete with useful information to the farmer and stock raiser.
The addresses of L. D. Stilson on "Ornamental Tree Planting," of E. V.
Forell on "School Agriculture" in the evening, pointing as they did from learned, gifted, and experienced gentlemen, of inestimable value, and should have been heard by every ambitious farmer and town house owner.
The paper prepared and read by Mrs.
J. M. Pile in the forenoon of the second day on "What is not Domestic Economy" was decidedly fine, and a treat to those who heard it. The audience unanimously requested that she should furnish the Nebraska Farmer with a copy of it for publication, so which request she generously consented.

"Feeding Sheep in Nebraska" by Hon. M. E. Greeley of South Dakota, was so admirably handled that to listen to it, would have paid any farmer for a long ride on a very old day. He demonstrated by figures and illustrations, that sheep feeding and sheep raising in Nebraska is an industry that should not be neglected.

In the afternoon of the same day he spoke on "The Care and Management of Poultry." He demonstrated so forcibly the profits on poultry, when properly handled that it seems as though every farmer who listened to his address would not neglect for another year to prepare for the business.
His address in the evening on "Landed Home" was well calculated to stimulate every young man, to an effort to become the owner of a piece of God's green earth for a home. If there is a young man in the country who could not be stimulated to habits of industry and economy by that address, nothing can, and he will never be fit for anything but a soldier or a tamp.

A paper prepared by our townsman F. M. Northrop, on "Growing Forage Crops," showed that this subject had been carefully studied by him and his critical observations centered on it, and if our farmers would carry home and apply the suggestions therein contained, their profits would be increased ten per cent. His paper will be published in the Nebraska Farmer.

In the afternoon Mrs. Bertha D.
Law of Minnesota delivered an address on "Cooking Cheap and Nutritious Foods," and in the evening on "The American Girl in the Home." Both of these addresses, in their con-position, style of delivery and subject matter, it is safe to say, have never in this county been surpassed. No housewife, mother or girl could afford to miss these addresses. It is passing strange that wives should cling to the idea that they know all that is worth knowing about cooking, and can in no way be benefited by suggestions from those who have made cooking and the composition of foods a special study.
And it is doubly strange that mothers should imagine that their way of bringing up and educating their daughters, is the very best that can be devised. Neither time or space will permit me to give even a synopsis of these addresses and essays. Those who, through indifference, neglected to attend this Institute, missed a very entertaining and profitable school.
H. H. MOSES.

Any Old Thing.
Judge Crane in the county court in Brooklyn granted permission recently to Mrs.
James Clark Bryden Fitzsimmons to change her name to Simonds after February 9. In 1898 she got an absolute divorce from Mr.
Fitzsimmons and permission to use her maiden name. She has six children, whom she says are held up to ridicule by school children, who refer to them as the little "Fitzes" and in a contemptuous manner say they are the children of "Bob" Fitzsimmons. The petitioner says that she understands that Fitzsimmons is a pugilist.

The late Amer of Afghanistan was not a great admirer of the British system of government. On one occasion a very high personage was conferring with him and said, in relation to some matter: "That is a very grave question, and I must refer you to his majesty's government." The Amer, who did not clearly distinguish the parts of the British constitution, replied: "When you ask me a question I am able to answer it at once; when I ask you, you say you must ask seven hundred other gentlemen. I prefer our Afghan way of doing business."

Order of Hearing
The State of Nebraska, ss.
Wayne county, ss.
At the session of the County Court held at the County Court room in Wayne, in said county, on the 6th day of February A. D.
1902.
Present E. Hunter, County Judge.
In the matter of the estate of Dorothy Bernhardt deceased.
Whereas, letters Testamentary have this day been granted to Theodore Bernhardt executor of the estate of Dorothy Bernhardt deceased, it is hereby ordered, that creditors be allowed six months to present their claims against said estate for adjustment and allowance, and that said Theodore Bernhardt be allowed twelve months to settle up said estate from the 10th day of January A. D.
1902.

It is further ordered that notice be given to the creditors of said estate to appear before me at the County Court, room of said county on the 10th day of July, 1902 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, by publication in the NEBRASKA DEMOCRAT, a newspaper published in said county, for four weeks successively prior to the 7th day of March, 1902.
E. HUNTER County Judge.

A Big Cut in Price.
The Nebraska State Journal has reduced its price to subscribers outside of Lincoln and suburbs from $7.00 to $5.00 per year, including the big Sunday paper, or $4.00 per year without Sunday. The price of the Sunday issue will be $1.50 per year.
By this action it is presenting its state readers with thousands of dollars, but the result will be thousands of new subscribers, thus enlarging its usefulness and adding to its value as an advertising medium. Instead of any lessening in the effort to make it a first-class State Paper, the Journal will be improved in every department, making it the best newspaper in the state for Nebraskaans.
It is published at the State Capital, which has always been the center of things political and social of a state nature. The Journal's state telegraphic service excels that of all competitors which, with its complete associated press reports and special telegraph service from Washington, make it the paper for Nebraska people.
A. L. Bixby's department is one of the most widely read in the west, and the fair and unprejudiced editorial treatment of all state matters has made the Journal thousands of warm friends.
This big reduction in price which now makes the six week day papers eight cents a week, and the seven day paper ten cents a week, will make the Journal the most widely read paper throughout Nebraska.

LINCOLN'S LAST PRIVATE RESIDENCE, SPRINGFIELD

Lincoln's Most Important Law Case.
Probably the most important lawsuit Mr. Lincoln was engaged in as counsel was one in which he defended the Illinois Central railroad in an action brought by McLean county, Ill., in 1865 to recover taxes alleged to be due the county from the road. In the lower court the case was decided in favor of the railroad. The county appealed to the supreme court, and there it was argued twice and a decision finally rendered in favor of the road. Soon afterward Mr. Lincoln went to Chicago and presented his bill for $2,000 for legal services. The official to whom he was referred, supposed to be the superintendent George E. McClellan, who afterward attained such prominence as general, looked at the bill and expressed great surprise. "Why, sir," he exclaimed, "this is as much as Daniel Webster himself would have charged! We cannot allow such a claim." Stung to the quick by the rebuff, Lincoln withdrew the bill, hurriedly left the railroad office and started for home. On his way thither he was informed some legal acquaintances he met of the occurrence, and they after much persuasion prevailed upon him to increase the demand to $3,000 and bring suit for that sum. This was done at once, and on the trial of the case six lawyers testified that the bill was reasonable and judgment for that amount went by default.

An Artist's Biscuits.
Washington Star: There is a Washington portrait artist who prides himself on his ability to cook. He has a summer home at Arundel-on-the-Bay, and during the hot weather he always has a number of bohemian friends with him. His wife was away from home when a contingent of friends drifted in upon him one Saturday night last summer. They were accorded a royal welcome and the evening was spent in sipping on the water and sipping mint juleps, a favorite concoction of the artist's.
When morning came the host was up early to prepare a steaming hot breakfast. Hot biscuits had been placed on the bill of fare, and he started out to make them. He stirred the flour and water, and then happened to think that there was no baking powder in the house. A box of seltzer powders he always kept in his room. Why wouldn't they do in place of baking powder? he queried. An excellent substitute, he answered himself.
The seltzer powders were stirred into the dough, which immediately began to rise. Amazed, he succeeded in getting the dough into the pans. A quarter of an hour later, when he opened the oven door, each biscuit touched the roof of the oven. They had the shape of mushrooms. There was great laughter at the breakfast table when the ephraim biscuits were brought on. One of the guests saved his and brought it to Washington, where he showed it to a local baker. The baker, with a laugh, registered the opinion that he didn't think the American people had reached the stage where they demanded a medical biscuit.

THE STYLE OF LINCOLN.

Some Felicitous Expressions From His Tongue and Pen.

HIS MODES OF THOUGHT ORIGINAL.

Free From Pedantry, His Literary Polish Was Rare of the Early "West"—Lofly and Impressive Sentences and Stinging sarcasm.

[Copyright, 1899, by the Author.]

Properties says that "the ivy thrives best when left to itself; the wild strawberry in rocky shades, and wild birds sing better than art can teach them."
The accuracy of this view is attested, as often before, by the example which Mr. Lincoln has given to the world in his literary style, which exhibits a power and when needed a delicacy of expression unequalled in the literature of his kind in modern days. Mr. Lincoln received no education except the mere learning to read and write, and all else was acquired either by desultory reading of classical authors or by attention with his fellows of the frontier practice, who had obtained such a degree of literary polish as was practicable in the early days of the region known as "the west." Nor is there anything forced or pedantic in his style. It is not even "raw," but with all his force of expression he at the same time wrote with the ease and grace of a polished scholar. It has been said that his modes of thought were so general, and hence he demanded odd and bizarre modes of expression. Such is undoubtedly the fact, but it is particularly noticeable that his (sometimes) startling expressions do not shock one by their abruptness, and certainly never by their coarseness or vulgarity. He has no favorite expressions as such and no pomp or involution of language, and when he uses expressions out of the beaten literary track it is designed by him to strongly enforce a point or to elucidate a novel idea. Another thing more prosaic is that, although he never studied grammar, except at New Salem in school, his writing is always grammatical. I think no instance can be found to the contrary, an attestation that he cared as much for the humbler offices of literature as for the more ornate.

When he was 23 years of age, he thus wrote to the voters of his county:
"Every man is said to have his peculiar ambition. Whether it be true or not, I can say for one that I have no other so great as that of being truly esteemed of my fellow men by rendering myself worthy of their esteem. How far I shall succeed in gratifying this ambition is yet to be developed. I was born and have ever remained in the most humble walks of life. I have no wealthy or popular relations or friends to recommend me. * * * If the good people in their wisdom shall see fit to keep me in the background, I have been too familiar with disappointment to be very much chagrined."

This is his first public utterance, and it betrays the workings of his mind, showing alike his ambition, his humility and his pessimism. One cannot but see that he writes as if he conceived that he was somehow entitled to the position (which he was not, at all), and that he had a right to feel aggrieved if it should be denied to him. It also exhibits his despondency as menning to say "Just my luck!" It also shows his humility, in effect saying, "I can endure abuse with equanimity, as I have had abundant experience in that line." But the sequel attested that he knew the situation better than any else, for when he did get into the legislature he took the lead at once over veterans in that line.

Denunciations of the slave power had become very threatening by the time that he took up the tale, but he revived attention to it by his peculiar mode of treating the unsavory subject, and he exhibited and demonstrated its odiousness, fallacy and impolicy in a variety of ways, some original in essence and others trite in an ethical sense, but original in the modes of expression. As one example, he says that the acceding to one man a right to enslave another bears "strong resemblance to the old argument for the 'divine right of kings.' By the latter the king is told just as he pleases with his wild subjects, being responsible to God alone. By the former the white man is told just as he pleases with his black slaves, being responsible to God alone. The two things are precisely alike, and it is but natural that they should find similar arguments to sustain them."

At another time he said, "Every man, black, white or yellow, has a mouth to be fed and two hands with which to feed it, and bread should be allowed to go to that mouth without controversy."
The inconsistency, if not indeed by poverty, of professed Christians upholding the institution of slavery he rebukes thus: "To read in the Bible, as the words himself, that in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, and to preach therefrom that in the sweat of other men's faces shalt thou eat bread, to my mind can scarcely be reconciled with honest sincerity. When brought to my final reckoning, may I have to answer for robbing no man of his goods. Yet more tolerable even than that for robbing one of himself and all that was his. When, a year or two ago, these professed holy men of the south met in the semblance of prayer and devotion and in the name of him who said, 'As ye would all men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them,' appealed to the Christian world to aid them in doing to a whole race of men as they themselves would have no man do unto themselves, they were thinking they committed and resulted God and his church far more than did satan when he tempted the Saviour with the kingdoms of the earth. The devil's attempt was no more false and far less hypocritical."

The abject condition of the negro after the Dred Scott decision could not be more powerfully and graphically portrayed than thus: In order "to aid in making the bondage of the negro universal and eternal, it (the Declaration of Independence) is assailed, and sneered at, and construed, and hawked at, and torn till if its framers could rise from their graves they could not at all recognize the powers of earth since so rapidly combining against him. Manhood is after him, ambition follows, philosophy follows, and the theology of the day is fast joining the cry. They have him in his prison house; they have searched his person and left no prying instrument with him. One after another they have closed their heavy iron doors upon him, and bolted in with a lock of a thousand keys, which can never be unlocked without the concurrence of every key—the keys in the hands of 100 different men and they scattered to 100 different places, and they stand muting as to what invention in all the dominions of mind and matter can be produced to make the impossibility of the escape more complete than it is."
It can even be sarcastic on occasion. In a letter he says: "On the question of liberty as a principle we are not what we have been. When we were the political slaves of King George and wanted to be free, we called the maxim that all men are created equal 'a self-evident truth,' but now when we have grown fat and have lost all dread of being played ourselves we have become so greedy to be masters that we call the same maxim a self-evident lie. The Fourth of July has not quite dwindled away. It is still a great day for burning firecrackers."
Who but Lincoln could have attested the selfishness of slavery thus: "The plainest print cannot be read through a gold eagle, and it will be ever hard to find many men who will send a slave to Liberia and pay his passage while they can send him to a new country—Kansas, for instance—and sell him for $1,500 and the rise?"
What could be more felicitously stated than this: "The Nebraska bill finds no model in any law from Adam till today. As Phillips says of Napoleon, the Nebraska bill is 'grand, gloomy and peevish, wrapped in the solitude of its own originality, without a model and without a shadow upon its path.'"
The horrors of slavery which he thus narrates: "A gentleman had purchased 12 negroes in different parts of Kentucky and was taking them to a farm in the south. They were chained, six and six together. A small iron gleiv was around the left wrist of each and this fastened to the main chain by a shorter one at a convenient distance from the others, so that the negroes were strung together precisely like so many fish upon a trot line. In this condition they were being separated forever from the scenes of their childhood, their fathers, their mothers, and brothers and sisters, and many of them from their wives and children, and going into perpetual slavery, where the lash of the master is proverbially more ruthless and unrelenting than any other where, and yet amid all these distressing circumstances, as we would think them, they were the most cheerful and apparently happy creatures on board. One, whose offense, for which he had been sold, was an overfondness for his wife, played the fiddle almost continually, and the others danced, sang, cracked jokes and played various games with cards from day to day. How true is that 'God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb,' or, in other words, that he renders the worst of human conditions tolerable, while he permits the best to be nothing better than tolerable!"

The peroration to his agricultural address at Milwaukee in September, 1859, is in these beautiful expressions: "It is said an eastern monarch once charged his wise men to invent him a sentence, to be ever in view, and which should be true and appropriate in all times and situations. They presented him the words: 'And this too shall pass away.' How much it expressed! How chastening in the hour of pride! How consolatory in the depths of affliction! 'And this, too, shall pass away.' And yet, though it is not quite true. Let us hope rather that by the best cultivation of the physical world beneath and around us, and the intellectual and moral world within us we shall secure an individual, social and political prosperity and happiness whose course shall be upward and onward, and which, while the earth endures, shall not pass away."
How beautiful and impressive are these sentiments, thrown off in the haste and inconsiderateness of epistolary correspondence: "I am in no boastful mood. I shall not do more than I can, but I shall do all I can to save the government, which is my sworn duty as well as my personal inclination. I shall do nothing to its harm. What I deal with is too good for malicious dealing." The following extract from a letter, evidently written in great haste and amid the pressure of official cares, has been often reproduced and is often admired, but it cannot be repeated too often: "The Father of Waters again goes unwept to the sea. Thanks to the great northwest for it. Nor yet wholly to them. Three hundred miles up they met New England, Empire, Keystone and Jersey hewing their ways right and left. The sunny south, too, its more colorful than one, also, had a helping hand. On the spot their part of the history was jotted down in black and white. * * * Nor must Uncle Sam's web feet be forgotten. At all the watery margins they have been present, not only on the deep sea, the broad bay and the rapid river, but also up the narrow, muddy bayou, and wherever the ground was a little damp they have been and made their tracks. Thanks to all. For the great republic, for the principle it lives by and keeps alive, for man's vast future, thanks to all."
Such gems of literature are incident to any of his lingual or indited productions, alike to deeply studied state papers and hasty scribbles. They do not "smell of the lamp." They are spontaneous and unadorned and are both in general in style and also have a peculiar brand or bouquet which reveals their authorship as unerringly as if they were authoritatively marked Lincolnian, and which is the informal title which critics have bestowed upon them. His bold sentences have the ring of a giant, and his simple sentences are like the words of a child. He writes with the ease of Shakespeare, but with the force of thought and expression, while a thousand dices for minute thoughts clad in a dozen fine phrases will perish in a night. H. C. WHITNEY.

Chicago Tribune: For four nights the tall young woman with the long, shapely neck and wide pompadour head sat bolt upright in her seat at the hall where she lectured, giving a series of stereopticon entertainments. For four nights the under-sized man had sat patiently behind her and tried to content himself with occasional glimpses of the canvas.
On the fifth night he weakened.
"Madam," he said, leaning forward and speaking in an apologetic whisper, "I won't ask you to telescope your neck, but for heaven's sake please lean back in your seat a little while, so I can see over your head. I paid $2 for this seat, and I'm not getting any."

Senor Taveza continued his walk, wondering who might that "hermano" be. After walking a few blocks he realized that the "hermano" was a light-colored rat.

THE KANSAS PEOPLE ARE IN LOVE WITH WESTERN CANADA.
They Say the Land There is the Finest on Earth.
A great number of delegates have been influenced through the agency of Mr. J. S. Crawford, the Canadian Government representative at Kansas City to visit Western Canada, and whether from Missouri or Kansas the story is always the same—they are pleased with the new country being opened up. Isaac H. Levagood writes from Didsbury, Alberta, as follows: "I met three delegates from Kansas yesterday at Didsbury, and took them home with me and took them out in the afternoon and showed them some of the finest land that lays on top of God's green earth. They are more than pleased with this country. They stayed with me last night; this morning I took them to Didsbury, and they went north. When they come back they are coming to my place and I am going to help them to run some lines and they are going to locate in sight of my house. There have been over 1,200 acres of land changed hands here in our neighborhood in the last spring. When I located here last fall we had the finest stock of any of the settlers; to-day I am in the center of the settlement. We have thirty-six children that are of school age in our district, and we will have our school district organized next month, when we will proceed to build our school house. The longer we stay here the better we like the country; that is the way with everybody here. They all seem to be satisfied and doing well. I have talked with a great many men here and they told me that they had made the $20 when they got here, and to-day they have got 150 acres of good land and five or six hundred dollars' worth of stock. Crops are looking fine here. I think this will be a good winter wheat country. One of my neighbors has a small piece and it looks fine."
