Alex Campbell of Wilbur precinct was one man who enjoyed getting married according to reports of his neighbors. Mr. Campbell went to Carroll a week ago last Sunday night for the wedding ceremony, the bride being Miss Bessie Bally, formerly housekeeper for Postmaster McNeal.

The reason Mr. Campbell was late for the marriage was because he had to superintend the introduction of some spring or summer calves into this vale of tears. Then Monday night about 100 of his neighbors gave him a band concert, the musical instruments being cow bells and oyster cans. Tuesday night another party visited the newly wed in the nature of eleven skunks, and while they didn't make the welkin ring their game was so strong that Alex's neighbors say it sounded for miles about.

F. A. Dearborn was an arrival from Chicago Wednesday night to attend some business matters. The DEMOCRAT is informed that Mr. Dearborn will sell the residence lots north of Dr. Ivory's residence to Messrs E. Cunningham and Harvey Ringland, and that the latter parties will build upon them.

While on the train to Sioux City last Saturday the DEMOCRAT man saw as neat a piece of "grafting" as is often performed. Two sharpers sat in a five-cent game of poker with Mike Eagan, a saloonkeeper of Martinsburg. The latter was dealt a four-ace hand and bet it hard, the two men "staying" having up about $375. The grafter held a straight flush, of course, and as soon as the train struck the stock yards district he and his pal flew with the coin.

Driscoll Had His Pistol.

A Girl, a Gun and a Sun-of-a-Gun Mix Up at Hotel Boyd.

There was all colors of excitement in the vicinity of the Boyd hotel yesterday afternoon, all caused by a couple who wanted to be spliced, and an angry father who wouldn't stand for it. About two o'clock Marshal Miner got a telephone message from Al Driscoll of Wakefield, informing him that Driscoll's daughter had run off with a fellow and for the marshal to intercept the couple at the Wayne county court house, arrest the girl and phone the father of it. The marshal made double quick time to the court house but failed to find the run-aways. County Clerk Brown was also on the watch for them, Mr. Driscoll evidently not wanting to leave a loop-hole for the young people to crawl through. Returning down town Marshal Miner found his prey at the hotel Boyd. He did not arrest the girl, but found her a chapéron, and then phoned Driscoll of the result. "All right!" yelled Driscoll over the wire, "I'll be up there in forty minutes." The would-be groom grew decidedly nervous when he learned that his wouldn't-be father-in-law was coming to give him a blessing. He urged Marshal Miner to search the old man for a gun, he was afraid of being perforated by the irate father. Miner met Driscoll as the latter drove up to the livery barn, and the first thing asked him if he carried a gun. "No sir, I have not," responded Al, but something in his voice told the marshal that it would be wise to keep close to Driscoll. Arrived in the room at the hotel Driscoll commanded his daughter, whom he claimed was just past seventeen years old, to go with him. "The girl said she wouldn't do it, and when her father made a rush to catch her she flew to the cover of her lover, the latter telling Driscoll to leave her alone. "I'll fix you, you!" shouted Driscoll, as his hand shot to his rear pocket, but the marshal "was Johnny on the spot." Instead of Driscoll's hand grasping the gun he got his paw in the grip of the marshal's "sudden death" left, while George's right pulled up the pistol. This lightning like sleight-of-hand performance stopped the "flow of blood." Driscoll left the marshal in command of the field while he hunted for County Attorney Welch. The latter made a legal

AN ARCHBISHOP DIES.

The End Came to Mgr. Feehan at his Home Near Chicago.

Chicago, July 15.—Archbishop Patrick A. Feehan, who died two years in charge of the Roman Catholic archdiocese of Chicago, died at 3 o'clock Saturday after a long illness.

Some time ago, for the purpose of relieving himself of the duties of his office, he appointed Father P. J. Muldoon, auxiliary bishop of Chicago. This position is not in the line of succession and it does not follow that Bishop Muldoon will take the place of the archbishop.

Archbishop Feehan was born in Tipperary, Ireland, in 1823. He was educated at Maynooth college, Kildare, and came to the United States in 1852, choosing St. Louis as the first field for his ministerial work in this country.

While in St. Louis he was president of the seminary of Grandet, and gained a great reputation as a pastor of the church of the Immaculate Conception. He was consecrated bishop of Nashville in 1865. In 1880, when Chicago became an archepiscopal see, Bishop Feehan was made the first archbishop.

The branch of the catholic church which Chicago is the center is the richest in the west and one of the wealthiest in the country. There are nearly 300 churches in the city and about 400 priests. Under Archbishop Feehan's guidance the work of the church grew and prospered from the first.

During the Chicago fire, which he believed was the most important in Chicago, as well as one of the most influential in the church, his voice and delivery were good. His language well chosen, his sermons well delivered, he showed marked ability, and the church always had a healthy material growth under his direction.

His energy and clever business ability the church in Chicago much more than recovered the heavy loss sustained in the Chicago fire, which was estimated at $5,000,000.

During the Archbishop Feehan loomed up head and shoulders above his brethren, being about six feet six inches tall and proportionally built. He was a thorough Celt. His size and his cheerful nature made him a favorite with the people.

The only other change in the cabinet that for many months has been foreshadowed. In addressing the first meeting of his followers at the foreign office, he informed them that he could not count on the continued assistance of Sir Michael Hicks-Beach.

The new premier, when he entered the conference room, was accompanied by the duke of Devonshire and others, and received quite an ovation. When Balfour rose to address the meeting all again stood up and cheered him.

Attorney General Griggs is the only member of the cabinet thus far to succumb to the grip disease, and he plays at the Washington club under the name of William Patrick.

Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, is master of the latest craze in the nation of the American Federation of Labor some years ago delegates made speeches in Italian, in French, in German and in English.

A fortunate New York schoolmaster was he who lost his job four years ago. He claimed that he was illegally discharged and he would sue.

King Edward is a great lover of dogs and has had many favorites. The present chosen and constant canine companion of his majesty is an Irish terrier.

Learn to be contented. Jessie Morrison was found guilty of manslaughter and sentenced to five years in jail.

Hush is reported to have become a popular dish at the White House. The president's chef, $50,000 a year, besides having an ample fortune of his own.

Thompson has the republican press guessing, all right, but what he will need in November is votes. The Democrat stands pat on the proposition that voters who are alive to their interests and the interests of the state will vote for Thompson. It does not make any difference to 99 out of every 100 citizens of Wayne county whether the governor-elect be a republican or democrat. It is only the politicians who are looking for easy appointive berths who are interested from a political standpoint. Read both sides of the question and if you can afford to vote for one democratic candidate in a life time, make it Thompson.

Hartington Herald: Who is Mickey? J. H. Mickey is not a corporation tool, as the opposition has already tried to paint him. He is a broad minded, substantial, God-fearing business man, in whose hand all the great interests of the state will be safe. He is one of Nebraska's pioneers who has grown rich as the years have rolled along. He is an old soldier and has thus proved his devotion to his country. His best friends call him one of God's noblemen. Mickey is all right.

The Herald probably knows as much about Mickey as it does about the ten commandments. A Wayne business man who grew up in Mickey's home town says the candidate for grabbing stinks. That he made his wealth out of the misfortunes of people whom, had he been "broad-minded" and "God-fearing," he should have helped. That Mickey is disliked in his home town just as money scalpers here in Wayne, with long church pedigrees, are disliked. But that's not the reason we do not want him for governor. It has been proven beyond the shadow of a doubt that if Mr. Mickey is elected governor he will be long to the railroad corporations and not the people. If you want such a man for governor, then vote for him; that's your privilege. But don't offend the Almighty by calling him one of "God's noblemen."

William Jennings Bryan advises Dave Hill:

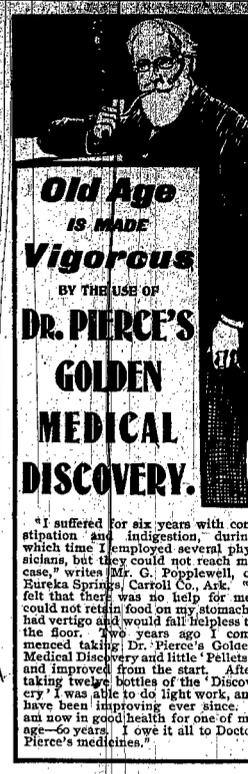

If Mr. Hill had any influence that was the time to exert it. We needed harmony then and his particular friends were the discordant ones, but he was "STILL—VERY STILL."

He wants to push tariff reform to the front now, but when the republicans nominated the foremost champion of ultra protection and when his influence might have aided tariff reform he was "STILL—VERY STILL."

He now pretends to be very much disturbed by the trusts, but he knew that the trusts were opposing the democratic ticket in 1896 and he knew that they would control the policy of the republican administration if they succeeded in electing that ticket, but he was "STILL—VERY STILL."

He describes imperialism as a menace to the country and yet when the republicans were winning the victory out of which imperialism grew and were employing imperialistic methods to coerce voters he was "STILL—VERY STILL."

He ought not to be too noisy now. He claims to have voted the ticket in 1896—it is even said that he can prove it by a thumb mark on the ticket—but if he has so much influence why did he not use his influence for the ticket? A man who is big enough to aspire to the presidency ought to have some influence; he ought to be able to do more than control his own vote. If Mr. Hill was able to influence one thousand votes in the United States he has a thousand times as great a claim on the republican party as on the democratic party, for all his influence was thrown to the republican ticket. At the Tilden club banquet he eulogized Mr. Cleveland after the latter had made his impudent and insolent speech calling upon the democratic party to repent.

Old Age
IS MADE
Vigorous
BY THE USE OF
DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN
DISCOVERY.

"I suffered for six years with constipation and indigestion, during which time I employed several physicians, but they could not reach my case," writes Mr. G. Poppewell, of Eureka Springs, Carroll Co., Ark. "I felt that there was no help for me, could not rest on my stomach, had vertigo and would fall helpless to the floor. Two years ago I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and little by little, and improved from the start. After taking twelve bottles of the 'Discovery' I was able to do light work, and have been resting ever since. I am now in good health for one of my age—60 years. I owe it all to Doctor Pierce's medicines."

A Card from General Viquain

Lincoln, Neb., July 11.—To the Editor of the World-Herald: I know nothing about John H. Baldwin's conference and agreement in regard to Mr. Mickey's nomination, several days before the republican convention, but I will tell you what I do know. On the evening of the republican state convention at about 6 o'clock I entered the Auditorium by the northwest door. The crowd was not very dense then, and within twenty feet of the door I passed ex-Collector Houtz, who remarked to a gentleman with whom he was talking: "There is possibly the man you will have to beat." I turned to see who Houtz was talking to and he introduced me to Mr. Mickey; it was the first time I ever met Mr. Mickey.

The excitement was then at fever heat; the fight was between Dinsmore and Robertson, with a probability that another ballot might nominate one of the two. I remarked to Mr. Mickey; and Houtz that "I cannot see how Mr. Mickey can possibly secure the nomination. It looks to me like Dinsmore or Robertson." Mr. Mickey then replied "It won't either." I then asked him who it was going to be and he replied: "It won't be either Dinsmore or Robertson."

I came to the conclusion after the convention nominated Mr. Mickey that he knew it would probably be himself. My friend Houtz is, if I mistake not a Union Pacific man, was alone with Mr. Mickey and his remark as I went by, "There is possibly the man you will have to beat," would indicate that Houtz was well posted on the matter as Mickey or Baldwin. The next day, thinking over the whole matter, I concluded in my own mind the following: Each railroad, the Burlington & Missouri, the Union Pacific and the Elkhorn, had agreed among themselves that they would make a friendly fight for the republican candidate, and that when it became evident that neither the Burlington & Missouri nor the Elkhorn could make it they would make the Union Pacific man, Mr. Mickey.

Wolves never devour one another so long as lambs are around. But there are too many lambs and they are going to pull W. H. Thompson through by a handsome majority. It is useless for us to say that the republican candidates for governor are railroad men; the history of the state is there to prove it; and the same may be said of all other republican candidates for the state offices, and blind indeed are the men who honestly deny it.—Victor Viquain.

The Same Old Story

J. A. Kelly relates an experience similar to that which has happened in almost every neighborhood in the United States and has been told and re-told by thousands of others. He says: "Last summer I had an attack of dysentery and purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which I used according to directions and with entirely satisfactory results. The trouble was controlled much quicker than former attacks when I used other remedies." Mr. Kelly is a well known citizen of Henderson, N. C. For sale by Raymond.

Summer complaint is unusually prevalent among children this season. A well developed case in the writer's family was cured last week by the timely use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy—one of the best patent medicines manufactured and which is always kept on hand at the home of every family. This is not intended as a free puff for the company, who do not advertise with us, but to benefit little sufferers who may not be within easy access of a physician. No family should be without a bottle of this medicine in the house, especially in summer-time.—Lansing, Iowa, Journal. For sale by Raymond.

A Letter from Thompson
The undeniable fact that Mickey was selected by the railroads to be governor of Nebraska has caused the republican press to attempt to blacken the character of Candidate Thompson with the same mud. Even when such an assumption is proven absolutely false, as regards W. H. Thompson, the republican papers, such as the Lincoln Journal, endeavors to make the lie stick.
The following from Mr. Thompson, if incorrect, would settle his candidacy at once, and it is an easy matter for the republicans to prove Mr. Thompson a falsifier if he has stated an untruth:
Grand Island, Neb., July 3.—Mr. C. J. Bowly, Crete, Neb. Dear sir and friend: I received yours of the 1st inst. with the clipping from the Sterling Sun of July 1. Do you know I never could understand why some men will deliberately state a thing as a fact, which is derogatory to another man's character, without knowing anything about it. Men do this who would not for the world steal a penny from him, and yet without hesitancy, they attempt to steal from him that which is worth more than all the pennies that could be accumulated. I am not now, and never have been at any time engaged by any railroad corporation, either directly or indirectly, as attorney or otherwise, and never received one cent of fees. I noticed a squib of the same kind, purporting to have been clipped from some Sioux City, Ia., paper, printed in yesterday's Lincoln Journal. A lawyer's life, in a professional way, is an open book, hence, no one need go misinformed in regard to it. Thanking you for calling my attention to the same, I am yours truly,
W. H. THOMPSON.

The correspondent of the Sioux City Tribune is undoubtedly a paid republican campaign liar of the first water, and that paper, having failed to correct the influence its story may have in Nebraska's political stands in the same category.

John S. Robinson Renominated
As expected, the democrats and populists at Columbus, Tuesday renominated John S. Robinson for a third term as congressman from this district. If Mr. Robinson cannot be elected against Hon. J. J. McCarthy then the district is indeed hopelessly republican. The people know what Robinson will do, that he is not only honest and able, but going to stay that way. Mr. Robinson has, the DEMOCRAT believes, a host of republican friends in Wayne county who will stick to their motto and "let well enough alone" as regards a congressman from this district.

Thompson and Mickey.
Columbus Telegram. For ten years the democrats and populists of Nebraska have been working together, but never as harmoniously as today. In former years the action of the two state conventions left many sore spots, but this year every democrat and populist seems wholly satisfied with the ticket. It was a happy issue out of what for a time appeared a serious situation. With such a ticket and with all loyal democrats and populists reformed in November by 20,000 majority.
Valentine Democrat: While the fusion ticket is a good one and a winner, the head of the ticket is a particularly good selection. Mr. Thompson is a clean, capable and honest man and a democrat from the ground up. He has been a resident of Nebraska for nearly a quarter of a century and in his large acquaintance in the state there is not one who can say anything against him as a lawyer, a democrat or as a man. As his republican neighbor, Mr. Bently, truly says: "If elected he will compare more than favorably with most governors Nebraska has had."
Winside Tribune: W. H. Thompson is not a large man but what there is of him is completely filled with lungs, with an admirable outlet, and we sincerely advise our French friend, Mr. Mickey, to not rashly run up against him in joint debate.
Holt County Independent: W. H. Thompson is perhaps the ablest man ever nominated in Nebraska for the office of governor. He ranks with the very best lawyers in the state and, in giving up his splendid practice to respond to the unanimous draft made upon him by the populist and democrat conventions, he is making a great sacrifice for the cause he loves and has ever championed. He now stands upon a platform which he helped to build and to which he is committed. Any child in the primary department of our public schools can read and thoroughly understand the exact meaning of this platform and no philosopher in America can construe or misconstrue a line of sentiment contained therein to mean other than that which its plain wording implies.

Nebraska City News: The Omaha Bee recently published a picture of Mr. Mickey representing that gentleman as a farmer. It was a good picture. Mr. Mickey looked like such farmers as you see in pictures. He was standing in an alfalfa patch, and wore a full dress suit, a white shirtwaist, a fedora hat, set jauntily on his head, and he wore kid gloves. That is not the costume an Otoe county farmer wears when in an alfalfa field.
Aurora Sun: Mickey is one of the kind of farmers that farms the farmer and then closes him out of business at the end of each year. He possesses farm lands in Polk county to the amount of 2,240 acres, and tries to make people believe that he has acquired all this land by the hard knocks that is experienced by the average farmer. Every farmer in the state of Nebraska knows better. He has made it by drawing the sap from the hard earnings of the man who toiled day and night farming his farm, and in the end piled up these great landed interests he boasts so much about in Polk county.

Norfolk News: The World-Herald calls upon the News to take back what it said about the fusion candidate for governor, W. H. Thompson of Grand Island, being a leading attorney for the Burlington railroad company. The News would not be guilty of originating any such heinous charge against a fusion candidate. It did not make the charge, having no information on the subject, but took it from the Lincoln correspondent of the democratic Sioux City Tribune, who was supposed to know what he was talking about inasmuch as he represents a democratic paper.
The News should not "originate" any such story as that the Sioux City Tribune is a "democratic paper." The Tribune boasts of being an independent newspaper, or, in other words, it is under the thumbscrews of its patrons.

The Shona Apple.

A promising new apple is shown in the illustration and although the trees are not yet on the market, wherever the fruit has been shown it has attracted much attention. The form is shown in the drawing; in color the Shona is shaded yellow to yellow-rose and for its color alone it will command a high price on the market. While the flavor is not all that could

Growing Crops on Muck Land.

The value of muck either for composting purposes, as manure, or for use on muck lands is a mistake. Plants that thrive in this manner are strong in vitality and easily resist disease.

Fattening Chicks for Market.

It does not pay to yield to the temptation of high prices for chickens especially in seasons when the market is summer and early fall in raising stock for next winter's laying. On the other hand, it is often profitable to raise stock for the express purpose of marketing in summer or to work off in this manner any of the chicks that have been hatched from eggs laid by hens known not to be good layers.

Corn and Sorghum as Catch Crops.

Mention has been made in this department of the value of catch crops especially in seasons when the other food crops have been cut short. While various crops are grown for the purpose mentioned it is generally considered that corn or sorghum or both are the most satisfactory crops for use in any field corn and sweet corn are sure crops, as a rule, for the seed may be sown even as late as this date and furnish much good feed for the winter.

Planting for a Succession of Bloom.

Considering the low price of flower seeds of the main attractive varieties of annuals, there is no reason why there should not be a long season of beautiful bloom around every home if the seeds are properly handled. Many of the annuals are short bloomers, and this is the case with some of the most desirable.

More About Skim Milk for Poultry.

In order that hens may produce eggs they must have an abundance of albumen and this is best obtained in milk cheaper and better than in any other food for poultry. It has been urged that the skim milk on the farm be given to the laying hens or to the growing pigs, but the milk is better used for the laying hens in any section where eggs bring a good price in the market.

Corn Smut and Its Treatment.

The illustration shows the effect of the corn smut on the growing ears, and it is evident that the disease needs attention each season if the corn fields of following years are to be free from this troublesome difficulty. Probably the only way of getting rid of the smut entirely is to gather the smut pustules before they break and scatter the spores.

A Remedy for Asparagus Rust.

The rust on asparagus plants has long been a source of loss to growers and all the plans have been tried to overcome the trouble, but with the degree it has been demonstrated that Bordeaux mixture is a remedy and it has been noticed as well that where the plants were well cultivated and on fairly good soil the effect of the Bordeaux mixture was more certain.

Summer Care of the Poultry House.

At this season of the year the farmer is likely to be busy with the larger affairs of his work and neglect the poultry houses. As a matter of fact, nine out of ten poultry houses remain uncleaned during the summer except for the removal of droppings if the houses are occupied.

The first customer, Miss Peterson waited on was a cautious old lady with duplex eyeglasses, who seemed fixed in the opinion that the bashful, gentle, little saleswoman meant to swindle her. She looked at a box of buttons of gingham before she found one that seemed to suit her. At this she started. Then she carried it out to the door and finally, glancing at the embarrassed girl, snapped:

"Do you mean to tell me, young woman, that this is a fast color?"
Miss Peterson was frightened. There was a quivering change in the stout customer's raucous voice.
"Please, ma'am, I'll go and ask the manager," said the demure girl.
"Humph! These some doubt about it, then, is there?" sneered the fat woman; "then we'll let it go. I thought it looked cheap!"

And the indignant customer flounced out of the store, leaving little Miss Peterson with tears in her eyes and a trembling sense of her own inefficiency.
"When they ask you things like that," said Mrs. Gillam, the star saleswoman of Benton & Brown's dry goods emporium: "all these goods are guaranteed. We haven't got any snide stuff in the store."

But little Miss Peterson was getting discouraged. She managed to run her sales up to $8.95 the second day, but when Saturday night came the manager paid her off without a word or a smile, and she went painfully aware that he wasn't satisfied.

"Go after the man," advised Mrs. Gillam one day, when she saw Dorothy hang back while another girl captured a splendid male purchaser. "The men are easy. They buy quick, and if you can help them out a bit they'll never forget it. Don't be so bashful, Dorothy. The men aren't half as cranky as you report. They won't eat you, that's sure."

But it was long in May nearly two months after her arrival in Red Cliff that Miss Peterson began to suspect that Dorothy was not all she seemed. She was a little woman, but she had some latent ability for business. She was busy with a fidgety old woman, who consumed precious minutes inspecting the cheap handkerchiefs, when a young man came in and asked for the manager.

"Something today," smiled Mrs. Gillam, bustling up to him.
"I'll wait for this young lady," he said politely, indicating Dorothy.
Here was a little victory, indeed. To be preferred to the manager, whom everybody knew as the most agreeable and the best informed employe in the store! Little Dorothy blushed crimson and her heart fluttered with scared delight. How could she do that! It seemed hours till the old woman finally selected her dozen hemstitched cambrics, but when Dorothy turned the strange woman's attention to the red-lined handkerchiefs, she seemed bolder quite well than he had bought something before—yes a parasol!

It had been a quick sale, and though she couldn't think of any good reason why he should insist on her services, she felt glad somehow.
"I'd like to look at silk waists," he said, drumming nervously on the counter.
"I don't think we have any men's waists, at least not in silk." She was afraid to look at him.
"Oh, my! a lady's waist, please," he laughed softly, but without any hint of impatience. "It's for my mother."
"What size, please?" a moment's silence. When he did not answer she looked up at him with some face and repeated, "size, please."
"—That is, I'm not certain, but I—"
"I—think about your size."
Poor Dorothy, who had been flustered by this unexpected reply that she didn't hear the rest. She ran round to where Mrs. Gillam was slipping new boards into some measure and, as a matter of course, she saw Mrs. Gillam. There's a man round there wants a silk waist for his mother, and he says she's my size." The motherly Mrs. Gillam could help laughing at the ingenuous excitement of Dorothy, but she measured her quickly and whispered, "Thirty-four inches. Don't look so flustered now."

He bought the waist all right, waited respectfully for his parcel and walked out without further embarrassing the girl. When he appeared again next morning, Dorothy was waiting with quiet courtesy and bought belt, beautiful silken thing with silver ornaments, and a love of a pendant purse. And thereafter for nearly two weeks Dorothy's days passed in a daze. She came to buy something for her mother. Dorothy found herself hurried with all sorts of guesses about him. He was clearly a handsome fellow, but he must be well off. What a good son he was to—always getting pretty things for his mother. "And good sons," she thought, "always made by good—"
She was blushing furiously when he walked with his muscular good-morning and "I'd like to buy some silk gloves for my mother," Dorothy thought, wondering at her own audacity.
"Yes, please, miss. I think your size will fit her exactly."
She little odd that he couldn't ask his own mother what size of gloves she wore, but she got out her array of filmy hand covers and he bought a pair. "That was a red letter day for Dorothy. She sold her biggest bill—nearly $75 worth—and the other girls and women began to envy her this gallant, prodigal young customer, to make matters more interesting, for the first time he now ordered his purchases, "sent," and for hours after he was gone Dorothy, greatly excited and pleased, she knew not why, kept repeating his name and address: "George H. Sherrick, 207-Butte street."
"Sherrick? George H. Sherrick?"
Mrs. Gillam when Dorothy told her she had a new admirer, looked up at the Golden Chicken Inn. He lives with his mother up in Butte street—old lady's an invalid, rheumatism or something, but Dorothy had been in Boston out the same time you started in at the store."

Butte street, like most of the environs of Red Cliff, was a narrow, crooked alleyway between the houses. Dorothy, perhaps by the merest accident, strolled out that way often when the May Sunday afternoons grew hotter, but one sultry evening while she was a mile or so above the Sherrick cottage, watching the chipmunks scurrying among the rocks, a sudden storm broke like a cloudburst above the canon and drove her down the road like a scared rabbit. The downpour caught her before she reached her house, and as she was passing it, blinded by the rain and deafened by the thunder, she felt a strong hand laid gently on her arm and in her ear a well-remembered voice, saying:

"You must come in, Miss. If you please. Mother saw you running from the storm."
Thus reassured and right glad of shelter she permitted Sherrick to lead her into the cozy house.
"My mother, Miss—," he paused for her name.
"Dorothy—Dorothy Peterson," said the girl. But looking up and vaguely mindful that his mother was "just her size," she saw in the invalid's chair a portly, white-haired old lady, of at least 200 pounds. The kindly voice of

The letter is in possession of C. G. Hornor of this place and came to him from his mother, Mrs. W. H. This letter, together with other documents was found by Mr. Hornor several months ago in an old trunk.

The conspiracy of Burr to establish an empire in the west had failed. Both Burr and Blennerhassett had been arrested. Distressed over his waning fortune and zealous for his honor, he wrote to "James Wilson, esq., attorney at law, Wood court house, near Marietta," to represent him in the courts, and to inform Wilson that he intended to seek for his enemies such satisfaction as might be found in the code duello.
Blennerhassett's Letter.

The letter is dated Natchez, Miss., April 15, 1807. It miscarried in the mails and was recovered from Cincinnati, May 12, 1807. Wilson did not receive the letter until June 11. Its contents were as follows:

Its ninety-five lines are written on two pages of post-gate, 25 cents. It is marked on the paper.

RECALLS AARON BURR'S CONSPIRACY

An Oklahoma Man Has a Letter Written by the Unfortunate Blennerhassett

WRITTEN IN A PRISON

After the "Empire of the West" Plot Failed, He and Burr Were Jailed and the Letter Was Written to Friend in Ohio.

Guthrie, Ok., June 21.—The revival of interest in the career of Harmon Blennerhassett, who was left to his wife by Aaron Burr's conspiracy against the republic and the slayer of Alexander Hamilton, brought to light an interesting letter written by Blennerhassett just the time he was under arrest, his fortune crumbling away, his island palace on the Ohio river in ruins and the glamor with which Burr had dazzled him fading into a black oblivion.

George Ade's Modern Fables

Copyright, 1922, by Robert Howard Russell.

Once there was a Wife who gave the Money-Getter a Vacation by going into the Country for a Month. Dearie took her to the Train and all the way she kept saying that it did not seem just right to romp away on a Pleasure Trip and leave him Shell-Rock.

He began to fear that she would Weaken. Then he had $40 worth of Dutch Luncheon in the Ratnaskeller and arranged the Shocks of Reds, Whites and Blues. He told himself that the only True Enjoyment was found in Bachelor's Hall.

His Hicky Acquaintances came in shortly thereafter to see the Show. As they were not accustomed to seeing Reds and Whites. They told him that he had a Sweet Joint! After they had been to the Merry Clip and there was nothing to do and one of them started some rowdy Work on the Piano. Another backed into a $30 Statuette and put it out of Business and then offered to pay for it, but the foot note it cost only 18 cents at a Department Store.

At 10 P. M. the Wife, who was in a Hurry Seven, referred to her Time-Table and saw that a certain Monotony in the lamp reading Macaulay. She had to say of knowing that Papa had just been strung for a Month's Rent in a Progressive Jack Pot.

In the Morning when Papa arose and looked at the cold Welsh Rabbits and saw the Cigar Ashes all over the Place and when he had a Taste as if he were taking care of a Lap-Rabbit, the glad Bohemian Existence did not look as Good to him as he had when lighted up the Night before. Especially as he had got the Zoop for some $20 Bupkineries.

Still, there is no one case of Remorse that is going to head off a Man who wants to be rejuvenated. He pulled together on the Second Day and resumed the Merry Clip and there was nothing to do in the Macaulay Line. Home did not get him until the Lights had winked out in the other Places. He would not leave the Stag Club or the German Garden until they had begun pushing the Chairs on the Tables.

For the first two Weeks it was Impulse. In time, however, it struck him that there was a certain Monotony in spending one's Money on the Night Owls and showing up with the Milkman. The Poker Players were into him and he began to suspect that he needed a Guard Dog.

Like every other Man who sends his Wife to a Summer Place he ended his Hurrah by making a few Resolutions and en, so he told her that while he was slaying and lopping in the City, it would give him a pleasant surprise to find that Darling was out in the Woods listening to the Birds. He insisted that she should stay until she was thoroughly Rested. Of course he did not dare to make it too strong. He played the Self-Sacrifice Gag and threw in a Dash of Marital Solitude and made an awful Try at imitating one who has been soaked by a Great Sorrow. As the Missus looked at him through her Tears and held his Salary-Hook in hers, little did she suspect that he had framed up a Poker Game for that Night and Ready to bet his infamular Fags at the Boarding House.

It was a lovely Time-Table that he had mapped out. He submitted it to Pet before she went away and she put her O. K. on it. He then took the Telegram Office and him. Brookhart at the strange Boarding House. A day or two interrupted by a small Bundle of Food at the Dairy Lunch. He had to take the infamular Fags at the Boarding House.

BY DAD.

I have suffered from nephritis, I have had acute phrenitis, And a touch of hepatitis. In an aggravated form; I have had appendicitis, And the symptoms of carditis. But this jolt of tonsillitis Is a little bit too warm. I have soaked my neck with oceans Of all-healing balms and lotions, I have swallowed pills and potions People said were good for me; Druggists patron have been gainful From my patronage disdainful— For my neck is just as painful As a common neck can be.—bixby

Dad Halliday wears "the belt."

Eight-year old Johnny Johnson asked a popular society young woman about her age, the other day, and received a very evasive answer. Johnny didn't like being turned down in that manner, so when at the home of the lady in question he was allowed to look over some of her old playthings. After an industrious search he found a birthday card "given to a good girl on her 12th birthday, May 14, 1887." The little detective lost no time finding a lead pencil and piece of paper, then he took the problem to "Jennie" see if he had gotten the correct answer.

The Cherokee Democrat hopes Walt Butler won't be the editor, if that new democratic daily newspaper at Des Moines materializes. Butler, says the Democrat, "is liable to go off 'half cocked.'"—Sioux City Journal.

That isn't the way the Hon. Walt "went off" from that "pitch" game he had in Wayne. But maybe don't allers stand on the ace, duce and jack, in politics, by dad.

In yesterday's dailies I notice that "President Roosevelt Gets a Rest." Great Gaud! hasn't he been getting the "rest" all the time? That yacht he fitted up in gold lace and trimmings at the expense of the laboring classes! What does Roosevelt want? The Kingdom Come and a high board fence around it?

A fakir with a lot of imported glass has headquarters in John Lewis' annex. A number of glass samples are on a stand outside. Along comes E. P. Olmsted, picks up a piece of glass, holds it to his nose and smells "hard." Every dampfoot present commences to laugh.

A. J. Ferguson gets off a juicy one at Bro. Kates' expense. "I never could understand," says the colonel, "why Mr. Kate can't bear everything or anything when he's here so much."

Two or three printers happened to meet the other day, and one complained about a hard-luck proposition he had run up against. "Well," remarked another, "I've just had a wrought-iron package handed me, too." Then the third jumped in with: "See old Gibson over there? He runs a horse ad with me; was to pay 6 cents an inch per week; gave me $7.00 and at end of the month I sent him a statement for a balance due of $1.68. On the margin of the statement he wrote that there was a mistake in first issue which made it a damage to him, and left a balance due him of $1.75, and to please give him credit for two years subscription for the same." "Oh, that's nothing," echoed the third printer. "Why, we took an order for 50c worth of milk tickets and after delivering the tickets the fellow sent half of them back with the comforting intelligence that he would just take a quarter's worth." "Good!" ejaculated the first printer; "but my story beats those for the beer. A bank clerk came around several times to get me to jew you fellows down on the price of 5000 notes. After a whole week's deliberations I got stuck; took it at half price; had to set it up two or three times, and had George Heady let me work out my own poll tax it would have been more profitable employment. On the first of the month I presented the bill to D. C. Main for payment, and then dura me if he didn't just cock his eye at it and remark in a sorrowful tone: 'That's a pretty big bill; but then I guess we might as well pay it; we have to keep you fellows, anyway.' The above stories may not be in the exact words they were told, but, by dad, they are true and show that a printer's life is no more a bed of roses than is that of the paralytic who can't arise. Is it, any wonder that some of us "stick mean things in the paper?"

The Sioux City Tribune has a long editorial headed, "No Uniform for Woman." Judging from what we have seen of the uniform on some of these hot summer days, we can't see how the Tribune writer could say so much about it. It is a little thing to bother about.

The editor of an exchange left shortly after the Fourth on a trip to his native home in Scotland. In his paper, in speaking of his trip, he says: "As we leave soon after the Fourth we will be so full of patriotism that our friends need have no fear of the coronation nonsepe turning our heads. We go to see a greater queen than Edward's, and she is our mother."

A friend writes the DEMOCRAT Dear Dad: Find enclosed some of the long green to the amount of one dollar in payment of your breezy sheet for another year. Don't know when your year is up, sometime soon, I think. Without your paper I'd be more lonely than a nursing baby that had lost its bottle. Best of success to you "Dad." That's all right, "Porky." We thank you, and assure you that your subscription is paid a year in advance. That's the way all good people do who appreciate a good thing—pay in advance. If you have the DEMOCRAT you don't need much else. Lots of nursing mothers are now using it to quiet their infants. A better race of people are being born on account of it's being used in so many homes.

The first time we were on earth it rained for forty days and forty nights. Did you Noah about it?

A good many of the papers are discussing the difference between tornadoes, cyclones, hurricands, etc. "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet."

Cyclones by any other name would be as feet. Give us a cyclone cave—we need no other boon, And you can call it hurricane, tornado or simoon.

Goltz Could Get There Winside Tribune: Now that the Wayne county democrats have duly bound themselves to support a populist for the legislature, let us hope they will nominate a good one. Winside has a true and tried populist, a man well fitted for the position and for whom this part of the county would vote almost unanimously. If the vote will nominate A. C. Goltz there is little doubt of his election.

Obituary

Robert Milton Wallace died at his home 2 1/2 miles southwest of Wayne, Tuesday, July 8, 1902, aged 79 years, 7 months and 3 days.

Mr. Wallace was born in Shelby county, Kentucky, and when a year old his parents moved to Springfield, Ill. At the age of 6 years he moved with his parents to western Illinois, Hancock and then Warren county. He resided there until 1882 when he with his family journeyed westward, stopping for a year at Atlantic, Iowa. In April 1883, he came to Wayne county, making this his home the remainder of his life.

The deceased was a member of the United Presbyterian church for more than 40 years and was always found on the right side of every moral question. His pure, upright life enabled him to battle the disease much longer than he otherwise could have done.

A sorrowing wife, who has been his associate for 43 years, and five children, three sons and two daughters are left to mourn his loss. Two brothers, E. E. Wallace of Mammoth, Ill., and F. G. Wallace, Atlantic, Io., survive him.

Mr. Wallace was a kind and thoughtful father and was especially blessed in having all his children home to minister to his needs in his recent illness which resulted in death. The direct cause of his death was a complication of kidney and bladder troubles.

Why? Some Vehicles Don't Last Why? When well made and poorly made vehicles look so much alike as so many do, how is the dealer to know what to buy? First and foremost he asks, 'Who made them?' If the Marshalltown factory made them he can rely upon the quality. The Marshalltown name goes, so do the vehicles. They are made to run clear of the repair shop and no excuse to wear out or break down prematurely. There is difference in material, there is difference in workmanship, there are different methods of painting and finishing. The Marshalltown people use the right material and have the right workmanship. Our sales have proven that they are right. We have many new styles. If you have not looked them over you have missed a point.

SHORT STORIES.

The callousness and even the grim humor of condemned criminals is well exemplified by the following stories:

On walking to the scaffold in solemn procession a criminal once called to the governor of the prison: "Just oblige me, gov'nor," he said, "by telling me the day of the week?" "Monday" answered the surprised governor. "Monday!" exclaimed the prisoner in disgusted tones. "Well, this is a fine way of beginning a week, ain't it?" And he marched on with disgust imprinted on every line in his face.

On another occasion an officious hangman whispered as he placed the white cap on his victim's head: "If there's anything you'd like to ask me I'll be pleased to answer, yer know." The victim earned his neck forward and said in an equal low, but very much more anxious voice: "You might tell me, is—is this plankin' safe?"

Representative Dalzell was sitting gloomily in a corner of the ways and means committee room.

"What's the matter, John?" asked Representative McClellan. "You look as though you were in much distress."

"I am," replied Dalzell. "I have got to make a speech on this Philippine civil government bill and I am as nervous as a cat. I always have stage fright before I make a speech."

"And that reminds me," he continued. "Years ago President McKinley and I were waiting at a hotel to be driven to a hall where we were both announced to speak. Mr. McKinley sat calmly smoking his cigar while I paced up and down just as I am."

"Major," I said, "don't you ever get nervous? You are as cool as a cucumber, and I am as nervous as the valedictorian of a young ladies' seminary."

"My dear Dalzell," he replied "the difference between us is this: You have got your speech in your head and I've got mine in my pocket."

Professor Hall, the noted psychologist and president of Clark University, tells the following story illustrative of the child-like faith and credulity of the negro: It appears that Professor Hall by invitation visited the negro church. The preacher was most earnest and impressive in his eulogies of the Baptist religion. He was bent on instilling in the minds of the members of his flock the idea that the Baptist religion was the only religion.

With the recital of each virtue O that deminution he waxed more eloquent. Finally, leaning forward and with bated breath, he closed with this forcible argument: Brethren and sisters, I now tell you why de Baptist religion am de best: First, because it am second, because der ain't no odder religion, and thirdly and lastly (with emphasis), my brethren, it am de only religion because I am entered according to de act of congress.

This last assertion aroused and impressed his congregation completely. But it seemed what astonished Prof. Hall, who found later upon inquiry that the minister justified his declaration by the fact that on a Baptist tract that had found its way into his hands were the customary words, "Entered according to the act of congress."

The republican newspapers over the state are putting up the howl that W. H. Thompson says, and no one will dispute him, that he never was attorney for the B. & M. or any other railroad in his life. The republicans need not fear, the fusionist do not desire to split the vote Mickey will receive from the railroads. Mr. Thompson only wants the votes that are against railroads and corporations controlling the affairs of this state. —Aurora Sun.

"I envy that clock," said the shabby party, who had failed to impress the grocer with his tale of woe. "Because why?" queried the grocer. "Because it goes on tick," replied the S. P.

"It's all in the make up" said the man behind the counter. "You and the clock are exactly opposite in the matter of construction."

"How's that?" asked the other. "The wheels of the clock are brass, but it's face isn't," answered the grocer, "while your face is brass, but your wheels are not, see?"

Lincoln Post: If, having tried many cases in court against railway companies, makes W. H. Thompson a railroad attorney, then the State Journal and it's annex are not liars. Mr. Thompson was never attorney for the Burlington & Missouri or any other railroad in his life. Please bear this in mind when reading that he is a railroad attorney.
