No Sunday Mail

There will be no mail from the east next Sunday morning nor the following Sundays until another change is made in the time card. Judging from the "roar" that is being made all along the line it is improbable the railroad company will refuse a mail train from the east for any considerable time. News Agent, Sam Davies, says if he drives to Emerson for the Sunday papers some one else has got to help pay expenses. The DEMOCRAT believes the change a good thing. Let us have a nice quiet Sabbath; everybody go to church and be good. If anything startling does occur in the great outside world we can hear about it by phone or telegraph.

DIED

Mrs. Charley Lund died very suddenly Tuesday night under most distressing circumstances. Mr. Lund returned from Chicago on the evening train. Being very tired he went soundly to sleep upon going to bed, and it appears Mrs. Lund had trouble with her heart during the night, an affliction of years' standing, and getting out of bed she fell against a piece of furniture and onto the floor. When Mr. Lund awoke at early dawn her dead body was his first intimation of there anything wrong. It was, of course, a terrible shock to him and their only child a grown up daughter. They had also an adopted son about seven years of age.

The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

A Most Liberal Offer

All our former readers should take advantage of the unprecedented clubbing offer we this year make, which includes this paper, The Iowa Homestead, its Special Farmers' Institute Editions and the Poultry Farmer. These three publications are the best of their class and should be in every farm home. To them we add, for local, county and general news, our own paper, and make the four one year only $1.25. Never before was so much superior reading matter offered for so small an amount of money. The three papers named, which we club with our own, are well known throughout the West, and commend themselves to the reader's favorable attention upon mere mention. The Iowa Homestead is the great agricultural and live stock paper of the west; The Poultry Farmer is the most practical poultry paper for the farmer, while the Special Farmers' Institute Editions are the most practical publications for the promotion of good farming ever published. Take advantage of this great offer, as it will hold good for a short time only. Samples of these papers may be examined by calling at this office.

The "solar plexis" corset is the latest. It is claimed for it that it leaves the solar plexis of the female form divine free and "un-squeezed."

Some men get up in the world by leaps and bounds. Rev. C. F. DeGroff, a South Dakota preacher, has quit preaching and ascended the editorial chair of a newspaper at Letcher.

Dispatches from Princeton state that the stork is again hovering over the home of Grover Cleveland. Grover is likely to have a good-sized family before he gets to be president again.

New Hampshire has followed the example of Vermont and declared for local option. Some day, perhaps, the people of Iowa may also have better sense.

Jas. Tillman, murderer of N. C. Gonzales, has been indicted for murder and will have his trial next week. A conviction of Tillman will be a credit to South Carolina, but such result can hardly be hoped for.

J. E. Colby of Beatrice is the lucky number to draw $9000 from the state treasury for the alleged purpose of compiling the statutes. Gov. Mickey, praises to him, vetoed this measure, but the "railroad gang" passed it over his head.

Carter H. Harrison was again elected mayor of Chicago Tuesday by some 7000 votes. This is a great victory for the spoilsman. In Norfolk D. J. Koenigstein was defeated 40 odd votes. Koenigstein favored the wide-open policy and it's peculiar that he didn't win out.

The Missouri Democratic Press Association has expelled a member for having a $1,000 bill in his possession and failing to explain where he got it. Well, any editor who can get possession of that sort of a William doesn't need to belong to any cheap editorial association to learn how to run a newspaper.

At Wabash, Indiana, four women burned the feathers from their hats because a preacher told them that no woman wearing plumes could hope to enter the kingdom of heaven. Most of them could not be induced to give up their corsets by such an argument, because they expect to get in by a tight squeeze.

What's the use in us fellows worrying about government ownership of railroads? We will all be dead before we get a chance to ride on one of that kind. Besides, if the government owned them it might not advertise, and we would have to pay cash. Let's keep our attention riveted to "railroad ownership of government."

State Representative Anderson who is also editor of the Wausa Gazette, in speaking of the new revenue law says: "If honest and efficient officials are elected to put the provisions of the new law into effect there is no doubt that it will work out satisfactory and the people of Nebraska rise up to bless the honest efforts of the legislature of 1903." wouldn't that jar a "blessing" from the rocks?

There are always a great many stories concerning very old people. A man aged 77 was asked if his father lived to be very old. He replied by saying that the old cuss was up stairs putting his grandfather to bed. Another story, not quite so old, is that a Kentucky man and wife, aged 96 and 94, had just buried a son, aged 78. On the road home from the funeral the old lady remarked: "John, somehow I never did think we would ever raise that child."

THE LOBBY AT WORK

Special to The Sioux City Tribune
Lincoln, Neb., April 4.—The copper-bottomed, doubled-riveted cinch the railroads of Nebraska have upon the legislature was demonstrated yesterday when the house refused to instruct the attorney general to enforce the maximum freight rate law or to regulate the tariffs now in force in this state. When the federal supreme court held that the law could not be enforced because the showing made by the roads in 1894 was convincing of their inability to continue in business if those figures prevailed, it also said that there was nothing in the passage or construction of the law that vitiated it, and that at any future time, when the condition of the roads justified it, those rates might be enforced.

Figures were submitted to the legislature yesterday showing that in many instances rates were from 25 to 50 per cent, higher than the law gives as a limit and that the roads are carrying twice as much freight as then, at less per ton than eight years ago. These were brushed aside on the plea that the house did not have time to consider the bill, after which it calmly proceeded to discuss a lot of pet bills of members and to pass some private graft bills behind which there has been a persistent lobby for weeks.

Kennedy of Douglas proved that the income of the Burlington railroads, was in its freight department to-day, was 75 per cent, larger than in 1894, and that its net earning of $8,000,000 a year then were now more than doubled. The railroad lobbyists were brazenly circulating about the house as he talked, and at the first opportunity their chief spokesman moved that the previous question be put. It was done and railroad agitation for the session ended.

The Union Pacific, which has joined hands with the Northwestern for the purpose of putting the Burlington out of politics, worked shoulder to shoulder with the lobbyists of the latter road and lined up over half of the membership of the house. The modern method of lobbying in Nebraska does not consist in buying men's votes. The railroads have found an easier and more decent way.

In each county through which their road passes each corporation has a bunch of energetic employes, who possess considerable influence in politics. By a combination with the shippers who are looking for favors and the men who are looking for office it is possible usually to put up legislative candidates who will be friendly when they get to Lincoln. The road's lobbyists are on guard, and if they find members inclined to listen to anti-railroad men, the road calls in friends of the road. These come from the member's constituency and he believes the voice of the pluggie is the voice of the people.

Free passes for members, their friends, their relatives, in fact anybody the members vouch for, are on tap at headquarters. The Burlington's agent has been seen to pull out his pass book and write upon the wall of the house a ticket for some member. The Union Pacific does things more discreetly. The member must take an order down to the city ticket office, where the ticket is issued formally. But it is not a difficult task to secure an order.

Eight republican representatives are railroad attorneys at home. Through them the railroads killed terminal taxation, passed a revenue bill that bears harder upon every class of property in the state save that of the railroads, and beaten every effort to secure a regulation of rates. Republican leaders have been powerless to stop this open display of friendship to the railroads. Privately they express the fear that the next legislature, which elects a senator to succeed Dietrich, will be of different political complexion. Railroad taxation will be the issue in the next state campaign without a doubt, and the railroads have dug a deep hole in which they may find themselves precipitated with an adverse state government as well as legislature. Only the demoralization of the opposition, say shrewd politicians will avert this disaster.

Tom Johnson and "Golden Rule" Jones are two Jays that evidently can't be downed.

A German scientist has discovered that an excellent quality of illuminating oil can be made from bacteria. Nobody will object to Rockefeller getting a corner on all the germs.

Editor Ashton of the Ponca Journal writes very feelingly of the death of his only child, as follows: She came to a most welcome home, stayed a little while, and has gone. It was as a pleasant dream with a rude awakening. Her little sister Catherine lies in the prairie cemetery up in South Dakota. Gwendolyn was laid to rest on a Nebraska hillside last Sunday, following her sister by exactly four and a half years. It was a cruel fate that deprived a father and mother of their all. It seemed very mockery that the Reaper should deny them by just a few minutes of so small a comfort as a little photograph of the loved one. We wheeled her in her little carriage to the photograph gallery last Friday afternoon. She fussed a little on the way, then when to sleep. Ah! what a sleep! Arriving at the gallery the covers were removed from her face. Asleep! Yes, the sleep that knows no waking. The little life had just gone out.

"There is a home that seems vacant again, and hearts that are sad; and a hand that can scarce pen these lines. Yet they tell us it is all for the best. It may be so. The innocence of babyhood cannot have known sin and we commend her to that infinity whose justice we have never doubted."

THE YOUNG GAMBLER

To-day a young man who once stood high in business circles in Des Moines is a fugitive from justice.

Why? Gambling.

It is an old story—older than the pyramids—and its telling will fit any community. The young man goes into a game at a gambling house. He loses all his own money. He can ill afford it. In the hope of finding his money where he lost it (an unaccountable tradition in humanity), he takes some of his employer's money. He loses that. He plays with fate, takes more, wins and loses until finally the day of judgment comes for him.

Foolish. Foolish is a weak term. He bets on another man's game. The dealer makes his money by winning. He is not in the business for his health. In order to win customers must lose. The young man who gambles is a weakling.

He may be "smart" in the ordinary nomenclature. But there are weak spots in him. He is weak in morals, to begin with. And he is weak mentally. He has an idea that success may be won without adequate effort. He cannot see why the business world demands an equivalent. Much less does he see the quid pro quo in the very nature of all things. Energy, thrift and old-fashioned virtues. They will do for the plodders. He will bind the world to him by a stroke of fortune.

In other words, he is by so much, feeble minded. Young man. Look the world in the face. It is a square world. And a stern world. But it can be moved! If you will do its work it may even smile on you. But if you try to cheat it will surely smite you!

Perfect Health

Is within the reach of almost every woman. The weakness, nervousness and irritability from which so many women suffer is in general due to disease of the delicate womanly organism. When the disease is cured the general health is re-established. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well. It promotes regularity, cures diarrhoea and enfeebling drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. When these diseases are cured, headache, backache, nervousness and weakness are cured also.

"I was very weak and nervous when I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' about a year ago," writes Mrs. M. S. Brevette, of 2100 Broadway, New York City. "I had been suffering for seven long months, and had taken medicine from a physician all the time, but it seemed to make me feel much worse. My stomach was so bad (so my doctor told me), and my nerves were in such a state that I would start at the least noise. I felt irritable at all times; was not able to do any of my own household work; had to keep help all the time. I suffered God and myself alone knew. I was very despondent when I commenced taking your medicines, but the first bottle seemed to help me. I took five bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' two of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' also two vials of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and am highly recomended these medicines to all who suffer as I did. I never had better health than I now enjoy, and it is all owing to Dr. Pierce's medicine."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

And all its forces are in league against the young man who gambles.—Omaha News.

Grover Cleveland is going to "swing 'round the circle" a little himself. He is actually going as far west as Denver. As he has acted with the republicans for the past six years they will doubtless see that he is properly received and entertained at different points along the route. This old blunderbuss is a back number and if he thinks the democratic party of this country want any more of him, he is a bigger lobster than even Henri Waterson pictured him.

While Walt Mason was suffering from a severe spell of the spring ache recently he afflicted the readers of the Lincoln News with the following: "O come with me, my love, my pet, and let us rake the lawn; for spring has come already yet, and winter-time has gone. So come along, Amelia dear, my darling and my prize, and chase those pigs away from here, dod-rot their blooming eyes. And while I paint the pea-green pump, you sort o' skate around, and make those vagrant chickens hump—I'd run them to the pound. Just hear the little birdlets sing! How joyous are they now! Their song is all of love and spring—jim-twist that wall-eyed cow! It's mighty queer that all the stock, t'ween here and Oregon, won't do a thing but come and walk on this blamed blue grass lawn. Amelia, love, you're too durned slow, you make my stomach ache; the grass and weeds and things will grow much faster than you rake. Why don't you swipe that yellow dog, and break it's measly back? And there's a gutta-percha hog—give it a thundering whack. This blamed old paint is mixed with lard; it runs and will not stick; this thing of cleaning up the yard would make a dead man sick. Amelia, go and cook the grub, or sweep the floor, my dear, or wash some garments in the tub—you are no good out here. I'll have to do the job alone, for you're a female crank; I've got my shirt front painted roan; O blank the blank blank!

A disordered stomach may cause no end of trouble. When the stomach fails to perform its functions the bowels become deranged, the liver and kidneys congested, causing numerous diseases, the most fatal of which are painless and therefore more to be dreaded. The important thing is to restore the stomach and liver to a healthy condition, and for this purpose no better preparation can be used than Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Advertisements having appeared in various publications wherein Sears, Roebuck & Co., offer Wheeler & Wilson sewing machines, we wish to warn the public that they are not our authorized agents and that we do not sell our machines to them nor any other catalogue house or department store. Their advertisements are not for the purpose of promoting the sale of our machines. They are using our reputation as makers of the highest grade machines only, in order to get the names of possible buyers and persuade them to purchase one of their cheap STENCILED MACHINES, the manufacturers of which they are, evidently, ashamed to make public. Ask Any House-Wife.
About the one thing necessary next to the "know how" in making bread, and she will answer "kneading." Ransack the world and gather together the best flour, the best yeast, the best water and the best of every ingredient that goes to make up the best bread recipe known to woman-kind, mix them together in a haphazard way and with only slight kneading and even a tramp will refuse it with scorn. On the other hand get the best ingredients, mix them in the proper proportions, knead them thoroughly and you are certain of having the kind of bread that mother used to make. The best ingredients and best recipe or formula are a necessity in making mixed point as in making bread. Through mixing or grinding is as necessary to mix good point as kneading to make good bread. In both cases there must be kneading or grinding and mixing until every article of the original ingredients has become a part of the harmonious whole. It takes muscle and a good deal of it to thoroughly knead bread. In exactly the same way Health & Milligan's best prepared point is made; it is properly ground and mixed and it will spread evenly and smoothly and will not chalk or peel. Sample shades at NEELY & CRAVEN.

RHEUMATISM CURED AT LAST
Good News For All Who Suffer With Rheumatism, Free.
To all who suffer with Rheumatism I will gladly send free the wonderful story of how my mother was cured after years of suffering, together with the most elaborate treatise on Rheumatism ever published.
No matter what your form of Rheumatism is, whether acute, chronic, muscular, inflammatory, deformant, sciatic, neuralgia, gout, lumbago, etc.—no matter how many doctors have failed in your case—no matter how many so-called "sure cures" you have tried I want you to write to me and let me tell you how my mother was cured.
I am neither doctor nor a professor—simply a plain man of business—but I have a CURE for Rheumatism, and I want to tell everyone who suffers with Rheumatism all about it. I wish to be clearly understood and trust that all who are suffering with this terrible disease however apparently beyond the reach of cure, will write to me this day and I will send you by return mail this work of mine. I appeal especially to the "chronically ill" who are wearied and discouraged with "doctoring" and to those who have been cast aside as "incurable." All you have thought about Rheumatism may be wrong. Let me tell you our experience. Surely if you have Rheumatism, or have a suffering friend, it will pay you to investigate my offer, anyway, and prove for yourself these claims I make.
Send me your address today—a postal card will do—and I will mail you this wonderful story. If you have any friends suffering with Rheumatism no matter where located send me their address, and I will mail them a copy. My address is VICTOR RAINBOLT, Bloomfield, Indiana.

How to Ward off an Attack of Rheumatism
"For years when spring time came on and I went into gardening, I was sure to have an attack of rheumatism and every attack was more severe than the preceding one," says Josie McDonald, of Man, Logan county, West Va. "I tried everything with no relief whatever, until I procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and the first application gave me ease, and before the first bottle was used I felt like a new person. Now I feel that I am cured, but I always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house, and when I see any symptoms of a return I soon drive it away with one or two applications of this liniment." A FORTUNE IN A MISSING PAPER.

Hidden Document in a Blacksmith Shop to Bring Wealth to a Virginian.
New York Herald: Mrs. Eliza Garrett of Onancock, Va., died suddenly a month ago leaving her property in the hands of her husband, Mr. Garrett, who had just returned from the North Carolina. Mrs. Garrett's large fortune went to her relatives, leaving her husband, George W. Garrett, who had lived in Onancock, penniless.
Garrett told the commonwealth's attorney at Onancock of a quarrel and separation between him and his wife about thirty years ago, and left leaving for North Carolina. Mrs. Garrett followed him and brought him to return, coming to live with her property in the town where she was born. A paper was drawn up by a blacksmith in a remote country village, who was also a notary. Mr. Garrett attached no importance to the paper, believing the blacksmith dead and the paper valueless.
The attorney, however, wrote for it, and the document that had lain in the blacksmith's shop for thirty years came, and, though covered with black and soot, is legible. Judge John W. Blackwell in the Onancock county court, says he can swear to Mrs. Garrett's signature and no doubt exists as to Mr. Garrett's right to the property.

The New West.

New York Post: The revolution, alike in financial position, and in external aspect, which has been going on before our eyes in New York and other eastern cities, has been proceeding at an even more notable pace with the great inland towns. The change has been so swift, and in many ways so dramatic, that it has been difficult, even for observers on the spot, to detect and properly depict its varying phases. It is quite possible, for this very reason, that easterners, absorbed in bewildered contemplation of the new conditions, have overlooked the changes involved in the new west and south.
It is not less than a decade ago that the agricultural west was commonly described as all but isolated community. Its banking institutions had very generally closed their doors, its roads were largely in the hands of receivers, its trade was prostrate, and its politics were dominated by theorists whose main contention was that the west had been abandoned to the deliberate oppression of eastern and foreign capital. Today the prosperity and prestige of the same region is the common theme of discussion. When the eastern markets were chiefly concerned, this winter, over the question whether the huge mass of free capital now being poured into the west be left in Wall Street or withdrawn for productive purposes at home, when England expected to see the west visit our western railroads, and when the populist party has already become a political tradition almost as nearly forgotten as the Know-nothings of the '40s—it is obvious that it is a new west in every sense which has arisen out of the trials of the past ten years.

If I Were King

JUSTIN HUNTLY M' CARTHY

Copyright, 1901, by Robert Howard Russell.

His words fell like the beat of a passing bell upon the ears of an absolutely silent crowd and for some few years-long seconds the silence brooded over the silent throng of people on the fringe of the crowd caught at each other's fingers and gasped. Was that splendid gentleman their old friend, Francis Villon, who had begun to laugh at their first words, but the laughter dried upon their lips as he ended.

From the church sounded the exultant music of the Te Deum ceased to swell and in its place crept forth upon the altar the king, dressed in a simple robe. The king had been at the ear of the organist that morning and had planned his effects well. The melancholy, low, peevish notes of a Minstrel's surburle and protest.

Guy Tabarie, flourishing his notched and bloody sword, thrust his round body forward.
"What art in this?" he asked.
And Villon answered him:
"Such a jest as I would rather weep over tomorrow than laugh at today. For the pitcher breaks at the well's mouth, and he who has drunk of it, I believe that it has scraped a little shame from its master's coat."

He turned to the war-sword and handed it to Noel le Joly, who, for one of the few times in his life, astonished into forgetfulness of courtly etiquette by a sudden, open-mouthed exclamation, the astonishing revelation that had just been made to him. The gleam of the war-sword recalled him to himself, and he bowed to the king with a grave courtesy which meant something more than the fulfillment of a formal duty. Noel le Joly turned to Tristan.

"Master Tristan, perform your office upon this man," he said, and he pointed towards Villon.
With great alacrity, Tristan moved towards Villon, but his motion was met by such angry murmurs from the crowd, and such a howling of protest, that he turned back and followed Villon to victory, that even he shrank back instinctively before its meaning.

"King, in this justice," he said, and he pointed towards Villon.

Even while he spoke, Tristan came out of the church carrying in his hand a great gold chalice, and he poured a little piece of candle, scarce an inch high, was burning. He gave it into the hands of one of the soldiers of the Scottish Guard, who held in his strong grasp and stood as immovable as a statue, while the thin faint flame pointed spear-like towards heaven in the warm and windless air.

Louis stopped and whispered to a page behind him who bowed and entered the church. Then the king spoke again in a low, hoarse, and trembling voice.
"So long as this candle burns, so long Francis Villon lives. If while it burns, one of you is moved to take it from the hearth on the gallows, so much the better for Master Villon, and so much the worse for his substitute. Herald, proclaim our pleasure."

At a sign from Montjoye, the royal herald, two pursuivants stirred the air with a pair of golden trumpets. Then Montjoye spoke:
"The king's grace and the king's justice is ready to grant life and liberty to Francis Villon, if he will be found willing to take his place on the gallows and die his death that he may live his life!"

Montjoye's words died away a great silence fell upon the assembled people, a silence so still and cruel that men's hearts grew cold and the warm air seemed to be aching over the fields of ice. The king leaned over and addressed his prisoner confidentially:
"Master Villon, Master Villon, you see what kind of a man and what the sweet voices of the multitude."
Villon answered boldly:
"Sir, it is no news to me that men love the living and hate the dead."

Louis signalled to Montjoye.
"Proclaim again," he said; and once more the pair of pursuivants blew their trumpets and once again Montjoye made his singular proposition of pardon to the assembled people.
"CHAPTER XVII.
"WITNESSES TO MEN."

It fell this time upon fresh ears, the ears of an old woman who was patiently pushing her way through the crowd, and she looked at the king with a certain respect. She had succeeded in making her way to the open space as the last words were spoken, and she had caught the full significance of Montjoye's speech. Looking wildly around her, she saw where Villon stood, in an armorial figure held captive, and she attempted to realize the meaning of what she beheld, she dropped her head and turned forward to the king, where she fell on her knees with clasped, entreating hands.
"Sir, my dear mother, go away!" he cried, and he made a vain attempt to move his mother, a movement instantly restrained by the crossed weapons of his captors. At the same moment Katherine de Vaucelles came forward, and she looked at the king with the same respect as the old woman, who had found her at her prayers, and who had heard that the king desired her presence. She looked at the king with the same respect as the old woman, who had found her at her prayers, and who had heard that the king desired her presence.

The Devil waked up
From his forty-day rest
With a yawn and a stretch
Quite tired and depressed.
Said Satan: "By Jinks,
This is Easter, and now
For another year's work,
And a hard one, I vow."
With a wink and a smile
The Devil arose,
And went up to church
In his very best clothes.
There, taking a seat
In a pew at the rear,

He calmly awaited
The worshippers here.
While the bell in the spire,
With a clamorous peal,
Brought the rich and the poor
Crowding the open door.
Then the rector loomed up
In his surplice and stole,
And the vast congregation
Bowed down as one soul.
Now the Devil peeped out,
Cocking his eye and that,
And saw not one woman
But had a new hat.

And the owners of which,
As the sermon progressed,
Kept their envious eyes
On their next neighbor pressed.
Said the Devil: "Ho! ho!
The surplice was a flower,
And, really, the sermon's
Of little avail."
"Tomorrow we start
In the old-fashioned way—
The bill is without answer."
And the Devil's to pay."

THE exchange of Easter gifts has come to be such a source of profit to merchants that one may purchase almost any article desired especially adapted to Easter use. The lily and the butterfly are especial symbols of Easter, although early flowers peculiar to spring are also typical of the season.
Any pretty or useful article is suitable for an Easter gift. Ornate prayer books, handsome prayer book markers, Easter cards, booklets and flowers have been sold souvenirs for years past. Now almost any pretty article accompanied by an Easter card or Easter compliments is quite suitable.
Among the ready-made souvenirs the useful penwiper is always prominent. Penwipers cost little and may be easily adapted to all sorts of shapes, odd and apart. For instance, several pieces of flannel and white alternating, are sewed together at one side and adorned with an empty eggshell painted to represent a Humpty Dumpty; or the ornamental shell may have a tiny chick seemingly just pecking its way out of its little house. Rabbits in a woven straw nest are often used for the penwiper cover. The rabbits may be bought at any toy shop and, made of plaster, they are often very quaint and lifelike. Eggs filled with pink cotton, with a tiny doll wearing a picturesque wide ribbon bonnet, just peeping out of the cotton, make quaint decorative contents. Sold of the cotton, the effect is even more odd. The eggshells may be obtained in perfect condition if a small hole is made in each end of the shell with a pin and the contents carefully blown out.
Embroidered dollies, tea-cloths, table centers and tray cloths are always acceptable gifts for women. This season embroidered linen seems to have a greater vogue than ever. The Easter pieces are commonly adorned with some springlike patterns, such as sprays of violets, daffodils, lilies of the valley, anemones, crocuses or similar flowers. Such designs may be had at any shop where embroidery patterns are sold.
Leather and burned woodwork are so popular that the woman who understands the art is fortunate, for, with a few hours application, she can produce remembrances for her friends which would cost her many dollars if bought in the open market. Charming boxes with lids and side panels ornamented with a lily pattern in burned wood are among the most admired specimens of the work now shown in the shops. Handkerchiefs, stationery, collar and cuff, stamp and bill boxes may be made on this plan. Picture frames covered with burned leather are seen in the shops and have great apparent popularity. Flower patterns, modified for ornamental use, are the designs represented.
The pincushion, ever odd, ever new, has been an unalloyed friend to the woman of few ideas. Lily pincushions are novelties. To make one is an ordinary cushion—it may be purchased in the shops beautifully shaped and ready for covering—and fit it neatly with very pale green satin. Edge the cushion with frills of soft white lace, and among the lace scatter sprays of artificial lilies of the valley, which may be bought at any milliner's shop.

Artificial calla lilies may be made by folding quadrants of stiff white paper, sticking them into a flower, and then trimming off the corners into curves. Several pieces of yellow worsted will serve as stamens and when sewed into place among the lace the imitation is found in the flower as if really fast one.
Sachets in pairs scented with violet or lily of the valley are very dainty and pretty, the one made of purple and the other of white satin. The corners of the sachets are often knitted with clusters of narrow ribbon, pale green being used for the violet and pale green of a still more delicate shade for the lily of the valley. If the maker can paint, it lends an added charm to ornament the sachets with a flower design.
Blotters are shown in the shops outlined in the form of large lilies. They are made of white blotting paper, with ornamental covers, on which the shading in the flowers are deftly suggested. And are tied with dainty bows of palest green or white satin ribbon.
Handkerchiefs cases appropriate to the season may be made by fashioning them of white or pale green satin and painting them with sprays of violets or lilies of the valley. Sachets of these scents then line the inside of the boxes.
Fainting on silk or satin is not so elaborate a process as many assume, and, if properly provided, the flower is a simple one. Moreover, transfer pictures, which very closely imitate painting, may be purchased in shops where fancy work is done. These pictures, which are painted designs may be had with not more skill than that required to transfer the patterns to the cloth.
Sachets and boxes of the shape of butterflies, the satin body contains the scent and the gauze painted wings are wired to look very much like life. Very good effects may be obtained by treating the wings with gold, silver, paint or sprinkling them with jewel dust, an inexpensive substance sold at the benefit of makers of fancy work.
Easter pictures make charming gifts. These should be the photographs of some great master's pictures of the resurrection. Pictures of the crucifixion and of the dead Christ are many, but it will be found that those depicting the resurrection are rare. A fine painting of the resurrection can be purchased—and that gifted master who fashioned the peerless Campanile at Florence, Giotto, has left one, a fresco, in the Servigian chapel at Padua, and another Giotto frescoed one upon the walls of San Maria Novella at Florence. Signorelli frescoed another on the cathedral walls at Orvieto. The entombment and the descent from the cross are subjects that have frequently occupied the brushes of the great masters, but for most of them the risen Christ was a figure unattended. When a photograph of an Easter picture can be purchased—and the copies of the old masters are all sold in the collections of famous photographs, agencies for which are located in most cities—the silver or gray print is prettier than the ordinary photographs and can be mounted in passe partout style with very good effect.
Silver knickknacks of all sorts make excellent Easter souvenirs. This season they are seen in all the shops.
Pretty Easter baskets filled with flowers, bonbons or fruits are exchanged between folk who have advanced to years where goodies are better appreciated than artifice trifles.
Flowers in pots or in hanging baskets are gladdening to the heart of the housewife who loves to have her home beautiful. The flowers are delivered by the florist, who for a little more money, will add a handsome jardiniere in which to store the flower pot.
In fact, there is no limit to the variety of gifts sent about this season in honor of the return of the Easter season.

The pincushion, ever odd, ever new, has been an unalloyed friend to the woman of few ideas. Lily pincushions are novelties. To make one is an ordinary cushion—it may be purchased in the shops beautifully shaped and ready for covering—and fit it neatly with very pale green satin. Edge the cushion with frills of soft white lace, and among the lace scatter sprays of artificial lilies of the valley, which may be bought at any milliner's shop.

Artificial calla lilies may be made by folding quadrants of stiff white paper, sticking them into a flower, and then trimming off the corners into curves. Several pieces of yellow worsted will serve as stamens and when sewed into place among the lace the imitation is found in the flower as if really fast one.
Sachets in pairs scented with violet or lily of the valley are very dainty and pretty, the one made of purple and the other of white satin. The corners of the sachets are often knitted with clusters of narrow ribbon, pale green being used for the violet and pale green of a still more delicate shade for the lily of the valley. If the maker can paint, it lends an added charm to ornament the sachets with a flower design.
Blotters are shown in the shops outlined in the form of large lilies. They are made of white blotting paper, with ornamental covers, on which the shading in the flowers are deftly suggested. And are tied with dainty bows of palest green or white satin ribbon.
Handkerchiefs cases appropriate to the season may be made by fashioning them of white or pale green satin and painting them with sprays of violets or lilies of the valley. Sachets of these scents then line the inside of the boxes.
Fainting on silk or satin is not so elaborate a process as many assume, and, if properly provided, the flower is a simple one. Moreover, transfer pictures, which very closely imitate painting, may be purchased in shops where fancy work is done. These pictures, which are painted designs may be had with not more skill than that required to transfer the patterns to the cloth.
Sachets and boxes of the shape of butterflies, the satin body contains the scent and the gauze painted wings are wired to look very much like life. Very good effects may be obtained by treating the wings with gold, silver, paint or sprinkling them with jewel dust, an inexpensive substance sold at the benefit of makers of fancy work.
Easter pictures make charming gifts. These should be the photographs of some great master's pictures of the resurrection. Pictures of the crucifixion and of the dead Christ are many, but it will be found that those depicting the resurrection are rare. A fine painting of the resurrection can be purchased—and that gifted master who fashioned the peerless Campanile at Florence, Giotto, has left one, a fresco, in the Servigian chapel at Padua, and another Giotto frescoed one upon the walls of San Maria Novella at Florence. Signorelli frescoed another on the cathedral walls at Orvieto. The entombment and the descent from the cross are subjects that have frequently occupied the brushes of the great masters, but for most of them the risen Christ was a figure unattended. When a photograph of an Easter picture can be purchased—and the copies of the old masters are all sold in the collections of famous photographs, agencies for which are located in most cities—the silver or gray print is prettier than the ordinary photographs and can be mounted in passe partout style with very good effect.
Silver knickknacks of all sorts make excellent Easter souvenirs. This season they are seen in all the shops.
Pretty Easter baskets filled with flowers, bonbons or fruits are exchanged between folk who have advanced to years where goodies are better appreciated than artifice trifles.
Flowers in pots or in hanging baskets are gladdening to the heart of the housewife who loves to have her home beautiful. The flowers are delivered by the florist, who

BY DAD.

Here's a statement that will do more towards increasing nursery stock than President Roosevelt's notorious statements. Madam Schumann Heink, the famous contralto with the Grau opera company is the mother of nine youngsters and she said, in Chicago Tuesday, that every kid she gets improves her voice and enlarges her range one note. "Yes, yes, it's true," she declared; every time I have a baby I can sing one note higher than I could before." Madam Heink is eminently correct, by dad. I have noticed that every time I have had one—arrive at my house—that it took an extra "note"—about a 40 spot—to gather it in. Sing higher? Of course we can. It makes us—dam—sing all the time.

A certain family in this man's town had a square meal the other day. You see there is about seven kids in the family and each member called, once for Robison's seeds at the DEMOCRAT office, and once for McCarthy's seeds from the Herald. The sacks of beans were then all thrown in one pan and a good big dish of the real Boston food provided for the whole tribe. The only thing that is now bothering the chief schemer of the trick is to know how to get the reports to the Agricultural department at Washington, D. C.

Editor Gibson in his Republican last week, insinuated in a most pitying tone that the editor of the DEMOCRAT was a donkey. By dad, I've been often of the same opinion. There isn't anything so disgusting as a fellow as to look over what he has done so poorly. But then, picking up a copy of the Republican for a moment soon brushes away the hard thoughts of oneself, for here we find not only the ears and tail, but the genuine bray of the jackass. So far as abusing the preachers is concerned the DEMOCRAT pleads not guilty. Being a preacher signifies nothing more to the DEMOCRAT than being a saloonkeeper or gambler, if the preacher is not a gentleman and makes a damphool of himself. When it is some common, ordinary, poor cuss about town, who doesn't claim to be anybody and who isn't credited with having an over supply of horse sense—because he hasn't had the breeding nor opportunity—gets a calling down from the chief executive of the city, the other words is told that if he doesn't shut up he'll be jerked up, such papers as Gibson's are bound to mention it. There may be people who do not believe it, and it may cause the DEMOCRAT some trouble to follow the rule of the letter, but everyone gets the same treatment from it, and any time we need a jacking-up you'll find us fighting on our own dung hill—just like a donkey.

The State Journal says the late legislature died a peaceful death. Why shouldn't it? The members were all provided with transportation "home."

Did you ever notice what a forgiving spirit some of these people, who imagine they "live close up to Lord," display? Just pass a little criticism upon some "prominent member" of a certain church and see how long it will take for the rest of the "flock" to climb your frame. And at the same time the good christians of some other denomination will be doing the "horse laugh" over the sport. It always did seem funny to me why a 2x4 preacher would spend a whole hour harping on the evils of dancing—when he had never danced in his life—and beer-drinking—when he knew not the glories in a schooner on a hot day—and never say a word about the coals of fire; the damnableness of lying to beat some poor devil out of $1.50; the nasty habit of "knocking" on people who do not agree with you on creed, politics or how the world should be reformed. By dad, I'd rather live the life of a boozier and meet all the "snakes" at the end of the lane, than be full of "religion," covetousness, lying, jealousy, be worth $250,000 and have a carping little soul too infernally mean to pay house rent in hell.

Someone asked Frank Kruger if he expected to have ships (chips) and "schooners" in his new saloon, when Joe Kove broke in with "no, he's going to keep boats, and I speak for one right now." Joe must think he is the only pebble there is floating down stream.

Editor Ecker of the Winside Tribune says the people on this grand line of the C. St. P., M. & O. can now spend Sunday morning reading their bibles. That may do for Ecker because he has reformed, but then the unrelenting sinners—we'll read the "pic ures", whis!

The women who like tight shoes and tight stays shouldn't kick on tight husbands.

Mary had a little calf A year or two ago; She bought a wheel and rode it to her. The "calf" it grew you know. —Longmont Call.

Well that is a new one on us. We have often heard of Mary's little lamb and have often seen Mary with a little pug dog, but we have never seen Mary's "calf." What business has Mr. — got to watch Mary's "calf," and how much did it grow? Kindly explain.—Glenwood Springs Advance.

Aw, g'wan away, you fellows. Mary belongs to Mr. —. She's his wife, don't you know? Consequently her "calf" is his own property and he has a right to keep tabs on it. If he wants to, —Cherokee Democrat. Well, that does not necessarily make the case with Mr. Wayne, "Mar. 7, 1914."

Pay When You Get Ready.

Did you ever stop to think that when you bought clothing and told the merchant to charge it until you got some money, that you was paying from 10 to 25 per cent more than you ought to? Now you may be one that pays his store accounts in a short time, but if you buy clothing where they sell them on the principle of pay when you get ready, you will be charged up for the fellow that only pays once a year and the fellow that never pays. If you stop to think you will realize that a merchant who will sell you a suit and let you pay when you get ready must charge more than we do. Why should you pay as much for a suit when you pay cash as another does who don't pay for a year? That is not all. Merchants that sell clothing on time sell a cheaper quality than we do. That is like burning a candle at both ends. It takes lots of money to buy your clothing if you do business where they let you pay when you get ready. Don't do it. See us before you buy your clothing and you will understand why it pays to trade here. Our stock is the largest in Wayne and equal to any stock in a much larger town. Our clothing is all guaranteed to give satisfaction and is in style. We buy direct from the factory in large quantities and for cash, saving you at least 25 per cent on your purchase. We pay no rent and do business with less expense than any house selling clothing in Wayne. We have had longer experience in the clothing business and there is no reason why you can't save money by trading here. Try it and be convinced that you can save money on clothing by trading with us.

We saw the young calf riding a wheel the other day and it appeared to be growing real "fast"—the calf. By fall time it is expected to be large enough to travel with "Doc" Burson's crab-apples.

Lincoln House Paints are the best. TERWILLIGER BROS.

COUNT IT UP. If you stop to figure out where the true economy in paint buying comes, you'll soon see that the best paint is cheapest. Two-thirds the cost of painting is the labor. It costs just as much to put on poor paint as it does good paint—more in fact because the poor paint doesn't work so easily. But the poor paint won't last as long; it makes you repaint sooner. Even the apparent saving in cost per gallon is eaten up by the fact that it takes more gallons of the low priced paint. The truest economy is good prepared paint. The truest prepared paint is THE SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINT. SOLD BY

At the town election last Tuesday, R. G. Rhorke, Geo. Weatherholt, O. H. Kuhl, John Foster and F. S. Benser were elected town council and the Methodist majority on the board is a thing of the past, so those good christians have probably lost forever their chance to stand by their professed colors.

A brother of Press Ransdell was here Wednesday looking him up. The brother lives near Lincoln but had not seen Press for 20 years and was disappointed on his arrival to learn the family had moved to Colorado.

It wasn't a bad recommend for R. G. Rhorke that he received the entire town vote with the exception of two at the recent election, while some of the candidates were elected and that's all, not enough majority to swell their heads much.

The latest song isn't "one who was there" but "where's the sacred place?" in answer to query by the editor of the Tribune. Herald down along the railroads, near the maid and the brake of my story used to roam. And they flirted so persistent, flashing signals all about; while folks wondered if the mother knew her little girl was out. Now the moral of my story is good advice to take. Do not monkey with the fellows who manipulate the brake.

COLLEGE NOTES.

Miss Daniel of Stanton returned to college Monday after spending a week with her folks.

Miss Reed of Knox county enrolled Monday for the remainder of the year. She has spent several terms at the college.

Several students have enrolled this week and others have written they will be here Saturday and Monday.

Miss Mary Hayes of Hubbard had a short vacation of three weeks visiting at her home. She returned to her classes Monday.

Miss Bunch of Knox county, Misses Marsh and Davidson of Antelope county, Miss Larson of Clay county, S. D., have enrolled recently.

Mrs. Kent of Elgin came down Saturday and visited with her daughter until Monday afternoon. She spent a day in the various classes.

The men around the college have been busy this week planting trees, cleaning the lawns and making garden. In another week the grounds will be well cleaned.

The music at the Columbus association furnished by the college folks was well received. The singing by Miss Ludwig and Mr. McCorkle was highly praised by all who heard them.

Prof. Pile returned home Monday morning. He went from Columbus to Creston where he lectured to a large audience. He met several teachers who will spend the summer at the college.

The regular work of the Scientific class for the term is geology, organic chemistry, Cicero and trigonometry. Several of the class have taken the latter subject and have time for reviews of different subjects.

Prof. and Mrs. Pile will be relieved of some classes as Prof. Gregg takes up his regular work. During his absence, most of his work has been done by these two; this has made their work extra hard during the winter.

The classes in botany, latin and geometry are large. These are regular classes of the teachers' class but many who are not members of the graduating class are taking these subjects with the class.

The vocal music classes are doing splendid work under the direction of Miss Ludwig. She is proving the strongest teacher we have had along the lines of vocal music and elocution. She is an excellent singer as well as teacher.

Wayne took a prominent part in the Columbus meeting. Mrs. Bright was secretary; Supt. Bright, Supt. Snodgrass and Prof. Pile were on the program for papers or discussions. The teachers from this part of the district wanted the next meeting at Wayne but the Platte valley outvoted us and the meeting goes to Columbus. Prof. Snodgrass is president.

Hans Hanson left this morning for a visit to his old home in Iowa, on business matters. Asher Hariburt starts out next Monday to do 100 acres of breakin' in the west part of the county and sow the same to flax. The breaking will be done by John Morris, John Saas, Mike Coleman, and others.
