"The Drug Store of Quality"

A Pioneer's Tribute to the Late J. M. Strahan.

"Speak only good of the dead," would not apply to this article, since it was written during Mr. Strahan's life-time and intended for publication in the DEMOCRAT a year or more ago. It is simply a sketch of the life and character of a man not well enough known to the people of Wayne and Wayne County, to whose early development he was a great contributor. It is not an eulogy. It is absolutely devoid of flattery. It is the simple recital of a few facts concerning a big, honest, rugged man to whom flattery or eulogy would be abhorrent.

About four times a year, on an average, there steps off the evening train at Wayne a man of such striking appearance that a student looking for character in externals would turn more than once to gaze at the tall, lithe, sinewy figure, surmounted by as shape of a silver-crowned head as ever adorned a Roman coin; instinctively you look for the toga and the laurel wreath, and you recall the remark of the Liverpool stevedore at the sight of Daniel Webster, "Pat, there goes a king!"

James M. Strahan is an Irishman, the descendant of an Irish king. He hasn't told me so and he may not know it, but I do, not alone from his name, famous in Irish annals, but from the attributes which we, rightfully or no, associate with distinguished lineage.

When we see six feet of upright brown, a magnificent frame bound together with whip-cord sinews, a mobile face on every feature of which character is indelibly stamped, we say, "Here, at least, appearances have not given the lie to nature; here is a man perhaps not a man of God, but surely a god of men." Now mind you, I wouldn't dare to flatter J. M. Strahan over the long-distance telephone; he would resent it. Neither would adulation become him.

Henry B. Miller, now of the state of Washington, (a big masterful man himself, but not half appreciated in Wayne county because of his too honest aggressiveness) is alone equipped to write the life story of his friend James M. Strahan, who himself is always reluctant to talk of anything which might be looked upon as a personal achievement. Raised together in Henderson county, Illinois, their lines of life ran parallel for more than sixty years. Twice they crossed the continent, each time driving cattle from Illinois to California. Beset by Indians right here in Nebraska, overcoming obstacles which the irresolute would not dare to approach, they crossed the waterless wastes, great streams, mountain torrents and the mountains themselves, belittling the great achievement of the Mormons, who preceded them by only three years. Equipped with little but dauntless energy, unflinching resolution and splendid courage, they accomplished the impossible and displayed that true spirit of American "do and dare" which will eventually reach the pole. There is a high order of romance in a venture where men stake both their dollars and their lives on its outcome, and it would be the height of folly for but the undaunted to attempt it. Hard labor in the mines, contact with the heterogeneous life in the mining camps, association with every form of license in communities governed without laws, must have had a wonderfully broadening influence upon a character whose strength of purpose was governed by a high sense of justice and right.

A leader among the vigilantes, he has ever since been vigilant among the leaders and a pioneer constantly pointing the way for his friends. Settling in Iowa in 1856, he began shipping or rather, driving cattle to Chicago, before the Union Stock Yards were established, and when commission men were unknown. Helping to secure right of way for the Wabash Railroad, he shipped the first train of cattle over same. Standing on the rear platform of the caboose, he saw the engine and cars plunging through the bridge of the St. Charles river, and saved his own life by leaping to a projecting piling, where he stood till rescued.

With eyes and ears open to nature, that is, Nature's advantages, he learned from surveyors of the wonderful riches of the Logan valley which he visited in 1880, and purchased 4000 acres in the precinct which happily bears his name. Again the pioneer! For hundreds of his neighbors and friends, relying on his unerring judgment, followed his example, and Mills county, Iowa, could hold a fairly representative Old Settlers Reunion in Wayne county, Nebraska, and feel perfectly at home.

J. M. Strahan has been throughout his life a very successful man, and it is unquestionably true he would have been equally successful in any walk of life he might have chosen. I grant that he is endowed with greater strength of mind and body than Fortune favors most of us with, but added to that is his unbounded energy and simple directness. He moves in as straight a line as a surveyor could indicate, and nothing can deviate him one iota from that line of right.

He is a very rich man. Now what do you think I mean by that? I mean that his real riches are the riches of the heart. I do not know how many hundred dollars he is worth, or how many thousand acres of land he owns, and I do not care. I don't believe he knows or cares. I don't suppose he has taken an inventory in forty years. Here's the idea I wish to inculcate: A man may be rich and still possess the beatitudes. It is not the question as to the quantity but the quality of one's possessions. This man can count every one of his dishonest dollars on the fingers of his right hand, and every one of his bad acres on the fingers of his left, with both arms cut off at the elbow; and the size of his wealth will not determine the size of his monument, which will be in the hearts of dozens of young men whom he has equipped and started on the way of life. I wrote a dozen letters to find out how many thousand dollars he had given toward founding an academy, and how many thousand he had advanced voluntarily (without a moral or legal obligation) to repay some poorer peoples' losses in an enterprise which they had gone into simply because he had. His own son didn't know or wouldn't tell. Who was it said, "Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth?" O, yes, of course. I should have known. I shall remember.

I chanced to be picked up on the road one day by a young man driving toward town, and he told me the team he drove, the wagon in which he rode, and all the machinery on his farm and the farm which he was working were furnished him by J. M. Strahan, and he had given nothing but his note without security; and it occurred to me that I had better try to find out what strength there was in this young man, or what weakness, if any, in the other, that he should be so favored. The young man told me this, "I knew that I would be given a chance to make a success; that a failure of crop or two or a dozen would not affect my credit one whit, so long as I did my duty. So I worked. I never received a dun or notice or any intimation that I was in debt, and when I went to the bank and paid the last of my legal obligation, it was with a kind of regret lest he might lose his interest in me, for I want to be and always will be in debt to that man."

The thing that I found out was this: the strength of the older man has detected unerringly the strength in the younger, and the strength of the younger showed itself not only in accomplishment, but in appreciation. The greatest man who ever lived has done nothing greater than to lend of his own resources, be it of hand, mind, muscle or money. J. M. Strahan is a Christian and a Baptist, but realizing his limitations, he lets the dead rest and raises the living. He is not a philanthropist (although he has given many times what you and I would call a fortune in philanthropy); he is a benefactor. In the way that counts he has distributed his gifts. He excites energy and wants energy to repay its loan—if not, his power would cease from exhaustion, but his wise discrimination has enabled him to aid others without detracting from his own great powers of helpfulness, the helpfulness which does not inculcate slothfulness, the aid which does not eradicate ambition. His idea is: give a young man (the right kind of a young man) a plow, the power to pull it and the ground to scour it, and all will be bright—the man, the power and the plow; and the prospects brighter yet.

If Carnegie or Rockefeller think the field of philanthropic usefulness is confined to the cities (as it seems they do) I could tell them that they have started at the wrong end of the dilemma. The city is the tail of the dog and the end where the fleas congregate. Permanent good comes from the country, and the good predominates to such an extent as to save the cities from preponderance of imported evil. Cecil Rhodes has given scholarships to educate young men of our country abroad. J. M. Strahan has given scholarship to make young men useful citizens at home. Perhaps he hasn't lost any money by it, or, perhaps, on the other hand, he has a great big bunch of worthless notes. In any event, he has started dozens of young men with a chance they would never have had otherwise, and dozens of them are living today to testify to the opportunity he has afforded them.

Like all men whose accomplishments are worth while, Mr. Strahan has had his ups and downs, but ill luck or misfortune has never succeeded in embittering or causing him to lose faith in either Man or God.

Building a packing house in Malvern, Iowa, and through the unjust discrimination of a railroad losing a fortune, he can yet laugh at the futility of a man fighting a corporation and compare it to the bull butting the engine off the track. When more than 300 of his steers following a blizzard, were drowned while trying to dam the Logan, he displayed no more emotion or concern, or at least not half as much as he would have shown had they belonged to his neighbor. He gave Doc Rickabaugh the hides if he would burn the carcasses, and Doc, who skinned them by horse power, says the only regret expressed was at the waste, and that it would have been all right if the poor had profited by it.

Mr. Strahan has always been a warm and ardent friend of Wayne county, while his home is in Malvern, Iowa, where he is president of the First National bank and a very large land owner; still his interests in Wayne county are hardly secondary, for here all of his daughters and one of his two sons live. Mr. Strahan is also president of the First National bank of Wayne, and while in his unostentatious way he has earned the friendship and respect of all our business men and citizens, it is among the young and old farmers of Strahan precinct that he is best appreciated for his disinterested readiness and his ability to thoroughly understand their work, their ambitions and their aspirations; and best of all he appreciates their friendship as much as they do his; it is a bargain of friendship to which they all unconsciously ascribe.

Nearly two thousand years ago a pagan Roman emperor wrote of a man loved of the gods: This man, when he had done another's kindness, was not conscious of any special quality in the action at all. He, like the vine when it had borne its proper fruit, or the bee when it had stored its honey, did not call others to see what he had done, but pressed on to other deeds, as the vine bears other grapes the next season.

Ought a man then to resemble such things, which act rightly but never know it? Yes. But it may be answered that it is necessary for a man to know what he is doing, for the very mark of a lever of this kind is to know that he labors for their welfare, and his fellow men should know it, too. If you choose to understand, do not fear but you will fulfill your duty to your fellows. All this is our friend, and besides this he is a Christian gentleman.

The passing of James M. Strahan is the splendid consummation of a splendid life. This world is better for his having lived, and the next better for his having died.

It is difficult to imagine an ending more in consonance with the man himself. Still vigorous of mind and body the reaper met him in the field and found the ripened grain ready for the sickle. What more could you wish? A long life of accomplishment, rounded out, "heaped up, pressed down and running over." He might have lived longer, he could not have lived better. The very best of the much he has left behind is the example of his life which is a heritage all may share. The frost of age might whiten his hair, but it could not assail his warm heart.

We are not distressed when the sun goes down in the evening; when the flowers fade in the fall. We expect the stream of life to be frozen over when touched by the chilling frost of age. It is the decree of Nature and of Nature's God. Wherefore rejoice!

To the Democratic Voters of Wayne County, Nebraska:

As you are probably aware, on account of the primary law no convention will be called this fall.

Only one Democrat, Charles W. Reynolds, for County Clerk, will appear on the Primary Ballot voted by you so far as the county officers are concerned and there will not appear the names of any persons on the ticket for the balance of the offices of the county. On the ballot you will find blank lines and according to the holding of the Secretary of State, each voter has a right to write in names for the different offices on the blank lines and place thereafter an "X" and according to his ruling it will be the duty of the election boards to count all such votes cast.

You are at liberty of course to write in the name for the office of any democrat you desire for a candidate for that office and by this means I think we will have a nominee for each office at the coming fall election.

The names should be plainly written and the letter "X" placed after it in order to secure a count.

I understand we have several capable persons who will accept the different offices if nominated at the Primary election who did not care to file and thus have their name printed on the ticket.

Omaha Bee:—John G. Neihart of Bancroft, Neb., has a book fresh from the press, which is well spoken of by the eastern book reviews. It is "The Lonesome Trail," a collection of short stories of the frontier, dealing with rough nature and the primitive in man. Several years ago Mr. Neihart was a reporter on an Omaha daily, but after a short experience he decided his mind was better adapted to verse and story writing than to news gathering. It required several years to break into print, but a year or more ago he got a start and many of the popular magazines are now taking his verse and stories.

The intermittent ticking of the telegraph receiving instrument in sign box No. 23 afforded a sleepy sort of accompaniment to Will Varge's thoughts as he looked at his watch at twenty minutes to ten.

School Days Are Near

Is the Boy Ready?

School is to start soon—not too soon for the mothers, but too soon for the boy, as he had a high old time during vacation. He has been fishing and swimming and playing ball and, while these boyish sports and outdoor exercises have given their cheeks a brighter glow of health, their clothes in nearly every case are the worse for the fun and they must have a new suit. Where to get the best for the least money is what is puzzling some parents. We don't say that our clothes for school boys will always resist their efforts—we were boys ourselves once, and we have boys of our own now, and we know what they do to their clothes. But we do say that if stout clothing, close stitches and stout thread won't prove satisfactory, we don't know what will. A great many parents know from experience that our stock of boys' clothing is larger than all the others in town put together, and that we sell better clothes for boys, at a less price than any other store in Wayne. For this season we have a full line of boys' and children's clothes from the famous boys' clothing maker, WIDOW JONES, OF BOSTON. She knows every need of the boy, she knows what must go into a boy's suit to make it good, dependable and strong. She knows, too, that boys will get holes in their trousers, and she puts a large mending patch with every boy's suit. She also puts in extra buttons, and in the pocket of each knee pant suit she puts an envelope containing a small gift from WIDOW JONES and a post card for the boy to mail to her, telling her when his birthday is, and on his next birthday he will receive a small remembrance from WIDOW JONES.

Come to our store and let us show you clothes for your boys. We are confident we can please you and we guarantee to save you 10 per cent. on your purchase.

Widow Jones

Children's suits, come in double breasted Russian, single breasted blouse, and single and double breasted Norfolk styles, in Scotch chevots, fancy worsted and serges, ages 2 1/2 to 8 from $1.50 to $6.00

Widow Jones

Widow Jones

BY JAD

Did you ever before see so many handsome birch welders?

I would commend to the commercial club that every member take a gripful to Wausau.

Wendel Baker and John Morgan are of the opinion that if Judge Wittler is a candidate for county assessor they will not vote for him, as the judge does not begin to know the value of a ouchre game in a campaign.

Of all the funny things that happened at Carroll, visitors say the most laughable was to see Hans Schuster stumble and fall on his face, then jump up and pull off his coat and say he could "lick the _____ who knocked him down."

Another farmer, who got soaked for $700 on a "traveling doctor," was in town Monday and subscribed for the DEMOCRAT. When we begin to size up the "big doings" by these itinerant peddlers of cheap pills it looks as though we ought to have gotten "two hundred dollars" for every thirty cents paid us on advertising.

Al Sherbahn came near being the victim of "lynch law" at Carroll last Friday. Al is credited with starting a report that the Boyd hotel at Wayne had burned to the ground. The news spread like "wildfire" and several parties hurried to telephone and telegraph offices to confirm the report. A party of men headed by Bob Mellor and Hans Hanson were talking of tying Al to a freight car and shipping him out of the country, and they certainly should have carried out the threat for disappointing so many people.

A disciple of anti-saloonism got into a hot argument at the depot last Saturday, the fellow only escaping with his life after John Kate got through paralyzing him. John has a new argument. While in his old home town of Audubon, Ia, a couple months ago he looked up the police records and found that during the past year of prohibition in that little burg that 180 men had been arrested for drunkenness, and 18 boys had been sent to the reform school. This is more drunken men than Wayne has pulled in probably a dozen years, and we have never had to send but two boys to a reform school, that the DEMOCRAT recollects of. While in Spencer, Iowa, another prohibition town, last week, we dropped into a printing office and in complaining about the drouth had all the slack taken out of us by the remark that six drug stores were all doing good business. "Here kid, take this moon-ey and go get us a bottle of Old Taylor whiskey," said the bully-good old democratic stage-horse. "A which place will I go to get it?" queried the "devil." "Don't make any difference," said the boss, and two minutes later we had no cause to complain of the dry times in Iowa.

It doesn't matter much about Higgins. The effect of a lynching upon society, or giving a murderer freedom and a bouquet to boot, is the profession to consider.

Prof. Durrin and the president of the cemetery association, John T. Bressler, furnished all sorts of amusement for a bunch of bystanders the other day. After the "lie" had been bandied back and forth one admonished the other not to make a jackass of himself on the street, and the other replied with deep regret that he was sorry for it, but glad that the Almighty had not made him one when he was created. Men as old as they are and as long on wisdom, should trace their lineage within the confines of four ear-less walls, by dad.

Dan Nellor, the strenuous anti-Lund-burg editor of Hosking, was in Wayne yesterday. Dan called on the DEMOCRAT to get us to write a few lines about our little tin-soldier competitor, but we satisfied him that he didn't need any assistance in such light work.

Last night's paper stated that little Blanche Cople, the victim of Higgins, was now under care of physicians and in bad shape, the evil effects of the assault only appearing in the past few weeks. Should Higgins, the worse than foul brute, been lynched or, by the maudlin sympathy of Omaha women, preachers and papers, who never lift a hand to prevent such crimes in their own city, be made a martyr of, a christian gentleman; gone to an asylum for a few weeks and then been turned loose, a fine example for other degenerates to follow! "Whisky did it," said Higgins before he died, but the "evidence" supports the theory that he was a criminal and brute; that for the fiendish purpose of criminally assaulting this child he purposely filled his cowardly hide with whisky to give him courage to murder her parents, and that immediately after accomplishing his awful, hellish devilry he was sober enough to run to cover of the law, that "outraged law" that as applied by many of our lawyers and statesmen has become a menace to society and civilization.

Steven Scace is the bravest man in Wayne county. While coming home from Carroll last Friday he called our attention to the fact that a certain lady, a stranger, would lose her skirt if she got up from her seat. "Will you tell her or will I?" asked S. B. I presume it was kindness and perfectly proper, but say, I'd see a woman lose all her clothes before whispering to her that she had better pin 'em on tighter.

"I bleed my patients just as I did sixty years ago," says a Massachusetts doctor. By dad, it's the way the doctors "bleed 'em" now that—buys automobiles.

Cherokee Democrat—The following answers to examination questions given by applicants for teachers' certificates in Iowa show why some failed. Miss Inez Spencer, who acted as read-or of examination papers at Des Moines, found these answers in papers read by her:

A volcano is a mountain that has a creator. It is a mass of corruption which splits out ashes and saliva. Daniel Webster was noted for his revision of Shakespeare's dictionary. Patrick Henry drove all the snakes out of Ireland. A cyclone is a wind sweeping over the earth and rising by jerks. An earthquake is a hole in ground from which comes rumbling and lime. The tropics are Cancer, Capricorn and Unicorn. Champlain sailed down the lake which bears his name. Patrick Henry was with him at that time wrote the Declaration of Independence.

A New York man who tried to cure his daughter of intestinal trouble by prayer alone has been charged with manslaughter. He ought to be charged with dynamite and struck with a two-by-four.

Britt Tribune—Nothing is as it was in those "good old days." Then a boy was a boy, he wore overalls and was always dressed for work. He had half a day's work to do before going to school and another after his return and you could kick him ten feet and he would bound back. Now a boy is a "kid." When he gets ready to go to school he can't bring in a pall of water for fear of spoiling his clothes. If he gets home before the evening meal is done something is wrong, and if you keep him at home after 8 o'clock p. m., you will require a gat-ling gun.

Then clothing was made at home and the only way you could tell which was front or rear was to watch the forepiece of the cap. The clothing was so loose that he could turn around in it after they were on and thus fool his best friends. Our sisters worked then and helped to cook, wash, mend, and all other work. Now they have good luck if they get their duds on in time to eat breakfast and go to school. When the "preacher came" the boys and girls were expected to sit up straight as a cob and speak when they were spoken to. Now they are brought to the front and put through paces. The girl must knock a few stars out of the organ or piano and the boy must "speak his piece," and look like a sick monkey begging for raisins. Everything is progressive. They used to get married for two dollars and begin keeping house for $50. The bride made her own clothes and the groom's mother made his. One suit lasted a year for "good" and two more for every day. They rocked the baby to sleep in a "saptrough" and had a chunk of salt pork for dessert. The whole community could work sixteen hours and then go to a "shindig" and old and young dance till daylight. They had no "brain-storms," "heart failures" nor appendicitis. Brain-storms were cured with a water elm club, heart failure was called "fits," and appendicitis was called bellyache. They rolled the patient on a barrel or rubbed him with a hot brick, and no one knew he had a verminiferous defolicker that was liable to get full of cherry-stones or groundcherry seeds. We used to eat soup and have "sass" of all kinds. Now we eat fruit salad and consomme and have biscuit made with baking powder that look as though some one had "sat" on 'em; we had bread made with "rising" that smelled like a glue factory when it was rising, but tasted better than anything made from XXX roller process flour ground into nothing but dust. And if the girls chewed gum they had to climb a tamarack tree and dig it out with a screw driver. Progress don't always mean betterment, those old pioneers were as happy as any people on the earth, they needed less than a quarter of the luxuries of today and had six times the necessities. They neither froze in the blizzard nor roasted in the heat, they were too tough to be afflicted seriously by either heat or cold.

Open Letter.
Hosking, Neb., R. F. D. 2, Aug 19 '07.
My Dear Sir:—I hereby notify you to quit kindly the weekly news paper to Lincoln, as I have returned home from the wonderful cure of dipsomania, as I have served my time there I am in shape to lay prompt before the public of Wayne county, and the truth only as I have experienced and tested it advise carefully during my stay, would advise the county commissioners and the board of insanity to be very careful in sending a patient to the insane asylum with a good sound mind and well qualified to transact his own business. As to the best of my judgment as far as medical cure concerns there is none there to be gotten. I consider it from the board of insanity to act so quickly without any sound judgment of their own to transfer a patient to the insane asylum before considering the results. As this already has proven a good many hardships in family affairs. Moreover I believe that money squandered for this purpose could be better used to the advantage such as bridge and road work as we have many places in Wayne county that are needed very badly. I also herewith notify the board of insanity that they are authorized fully if they have sent patients there to release in due time which they have objected to. I wonder whether they strictly look for nomination and re-election again for the sake of receiving a few extra almighty dollars out of the deal, if so, I do consider them very small in principles. Hoping you will put this under print in open letter in order that the public of Wayne county may get acquainted with it, as that place is an entirely wrong one to cure one from liquor habit. Remain, Yours truly,
ROBT. FENKLE.

A Republican's Suggestion.

Editor of Wayne Democrat,
Wayne, Neb.

Dear Sir:—In as much as the Hoskins Headlight is pushing the candidacy of Mr. Ziemer for the nomination for county commissioner, I wish through the columns of the Democrat to call the attention of the voters of Garfield and Chapin precincts of the necessity of turning out at primaries and supporting our home candidate, George S. Farran of Chapin precinct.

Chapin precinct is entitled to recognition at the hands of the party, as this is the first time that it has asked for representation on the County Board and our candidate in the person of Mr. Farran, is a man all have confidence in and one all can support. Mr. Farran is located in the center of the district and undoubtedly can and will if nominated, give better service to the district than a man from the extreme south-west corner of the county. Hoskins precinct had commissioner for five or six years, and to say the least, without giving the best of satisfaction. While Chapin and Garfield precinct are practically unanimous for Mr. Farran, yet too much confidence with a tendency to stay at home on September 3d might be the means of Mr. Farran losing the nomination. Let us spend a half day September 3d looking after our own interest and see that Mr. Farran is nominated. Very truly yours,

WM. PRINCE.

Higgins is Hung

There was something doing at Bancroft last Monday morning, a band of masked men taking Loris Higgins off the train and hanging him to the beam of a bridge. For particulars look up a daily paper. The recent disclosure that Higgins made a criminal assault on 18-year-old Blanche Cople, after he had murdered her parents, is ample provocation for the neighbors of the Coplees to lynch the brute, notwithstanding a few preachers and women of Omaha were going to get him out of the scrape.

Sholes Chips.

E. W. Closson's brother from Oklahoma has been visiting him the past week. He may conclude to locate here. Miss Annie Anderson of Omaha, who has been attending college at Wayne the past year, is visiting with Maggie Carroll the past week.

Grandmother Burnham, mother of Hank and Dot Burnham, who has been confined to her bed for sometime, is expected to die at any time, due perhaps to the infirmities of old age.

You Can Easily Operate This Typewriter Yourself

Don't typewrite your correspondence. Don't write him anything by hand that it takes him time to make out—that may leave him in doubt—that he can't easily read. And don't fill out legal papers or card menus—or make out accounts or hotel menus in your own hand writing.

It looks bad, reflects on your standing, makes people think you can't afford a stenographer, and is sometimes ambiguous. You can write out your letters—make out an abstract—fill in an insurance policy—enter your card menus—make out your accounts or a hotel menu—or do any kind of writing you need, on any kind, size or thickness of paper, space any way you want on

The OLIVER Typewriter

The Standard Visible Writer

You can write any of these things yourself if you do not happen to have a stenographer. For you can easily learn, with a little practice, to write just as rapidly, and as perfectly, as an expert on the OLIVER. Because the OLIVER is the simplified typewriter. And you can see every word you write. About 80 per cent. more durable than any other typewriter, because it has about 80 per cent. less wearing points than most other typewriters.

So per cent. easier to write with than these other complicated, intricate machines that "require 'humoring'"—technical knowledge—long practice and special skill to operate.

Than machines which cannot be adjusted to any special space—with which it is impossible to write abstracts, insurance policies or odd-size documents, except you buy expensive special attachments requiring experts to operate.

You can adjust the OLIVER to any reasonable space—you can write on any reasonable size and thickness of paper, right out to the very edge, without the aid of any expensive attachment or special skill, and your work will be neat appearing, legible and clear.

For the OLIVER is the typewriter for the doctor, the lawyer, the insurance agent, the merchant, the hotel proprietor—or any man who does his own writing.

Among the candidates for county offices, whom democrats will vote for at the primaries are Miss Rayburn for county treasurer, Henry Klipping for county assessor, and J. M. Cherry for county judge. Gov. Sheldon's intervention in behalf of the murderers of Nels Lauston, the Omaha saloonkeeper, is another wedge in behalf of lynch law. By D. E. Nellor.

The Herald editor, under shelter of defending (his town), comes back with a wall of we, claiming that Goldie wrote our reply to his roast of three weeks ago. Like his usual cowardly fashion, our mighty moulder of public sentiment evades a direct reply, and attempts to belittle his competitor.

If there be anything dirty and contemptible it is to do as Lundberg's borrowed editorials do. He has always hunted over his exchanges and whenever he finds anything rich and racy about Walt he gets busy with the shears, and reproduces it. With Wilbur's assistance he wisely remarks, "we will not copy it, but will leave it for the literary scavenger down the street, as Goldie probably wrote it anyhow." Simply because you have to borrow the grey matter, Elmer, used to edit the Herald, if such it could be called, don't labor under the delusion that all editors do likewise. Goldie may be a literary scavenger, but Walt far better be than that a cowardly sneak, who never says aught about a competitor himself, but continually uses the shears to say his villers. An editor who says it himself, and says it so you can understand should wear wings as compared with the sneak who hides under cover of another. Elmer, you have another snuff coming at the Redlight.

An editor with an imaginative mind a sour stomach, a swelled noodle and a deceptive purpose spews forth an awful mess. Elmer, a good dose of rough-on-rats might give you relief.

The German emperor has $5,000 worth of clothing, and changes his costume an average of twelve times a day. He takes an enthusiastic interest in the railway and the automobile. A foreigner who remarked upon this to one of the younger German princes, the latter replied: "The emperor of Germany is a wonderful character, for whenever he attends a christening he thinks he is the baby; whenever he attends a wedding with his presence he thinks he is the bride, and whenever he attends a funeral somehow or other he invariably manages to get hold of the idea that he is the corpse."

A Paris paper says that on every Sunday Mrs. Mackay receives her friends in a secluded corner of the Latin quarter, the most famous park in Paris. The refreshments at these entertainments are supplied by passing vendors, such as the old woman who sells tempting fish cake and other like dainties. The paper adds to this account, which, whether or not authentic, is certainly very interesting, that novel little affairs have been most successful and are a great relief after more formal entertainments.

Ergh, which has come into quite extensive use in the manufacture of hydro-carbon obtained from coal tar by a secret process, and is claimed to be an ideal fuel for internal combustion engines, is slightly less than that of gasoline. It can be highly compressed without great expense, and is not so inflammable as alcohol motors, and ignition is always effected with certainty. At Berlin the cost per horsepower per hour is about one cent.

Among the varied uses of peat, that for the production of gas is perhaps the least known. It has been used for the purpose of lighting the streets in the city of Stockholm, in Sweden. From 13,000 to 16,000 cubic yards of peat are thus used yearly. It is a cheap and clean fuel, but has the advantage of containing scarcely any sulphur or phosphorus. It is used for heating and in glass melting furnaces.

Natural soap baths are not an unmitigated blessing. The curious soap spring that forms a wonder of a village in the Pyrenees, which consists of a small elevated mud cone, from which bubbles up water heavily charged with alkali and radium, the water is so hot that it has been called a miniature volcano. A disadvantage of such a washing place is that vegetation is ruined for miles around.

The preservation of wood with sulphuric acid is a process which has been in use for many years in Germany. The material completely fills the cell spaces of the wood, and the sulphuric acid is little affected by the water. It is alkaline solutions, though it oxidizes readily at high temperatures. Poplar is the best wood for this purpose, and suits with oak and pine being less satisfactory.

Sir William Crookes, as a result of his own researches and the experiments of Professors Krowinski and Moskietz, at Freiburg university, has discovered a process of extracting nitric acid from the atmosphere. The process is available for commercial industrial and agricultural purposes, and is expected to revolutionize the nitrate industry and the world's food problem.

The Circassians, who live in the northwestern part of the Caucasus, and who are equally well with his native plunder than by industry, make it a custom to bring their daughters up to the age of 15, and then to marry them to the Circassian beauties, therefore, shine not in their native land, but in the harems of the orient.

The affogate in a lady's bonnet is the crowning beauty of an egret mother. The egret mother sets the bird on its back, and the young just hatched, and tears off her plumes and feathers, and the young bird, being little ones, who deprived of her protecting care, also die, victims of woman's vanity.

The Carroll Index makes strenuous objections to the refusal of the county commissioners to allow bills presented for the expense of holding farmers' institutes at Wayne and Carroll The DEMOCRAT commends the board in this particular instance. It is not only an easy matter for the attendants at an institute to pay the few dollars expense, but it is more than probable, from what we have noted of the manner in which the Wayne affair was conducted that institutes could be held just for the sake of working a petty graft on the county at large.

Chautauqua Criticism.

It has come and gone. The management of it was superb, the music good, the lectures interesting and instructive, the moral tone beyond criticism, and perfect order prevailed.

The patrons of it, for intelligence, morality, and cultivation were the best the county affords, the contrast between the people it gathered here, and the people gathered at a street carnival or a horse race, was remarkable. Its good influence is not for a day, but its effect will be felt in this community for years, by its stimulating men and women, to nobler work, higher aims and more moral character. It pointed out to the boys and girls those objects in life, which their ambition should cause them to try to obtain, and the energy and industry absolutely necessary to success.

And yet I am disposed to make some slight criticisms on it, hoping that if it should be repeated in years to come, some improvements may be made. It seems to me, that some of the Band music could be dispensed with. The old harsh music of a Band, if too long continued, becomes grating, and tiresome to the average ear.

Besides, the time occupied extended the most useful part of the exercises to a late hour of the night. And again, cheers and hand clapping should be absolutely stopped. They are too frequently indulged in, by boys and ignorant men and women, who have no appreciation of the fitness of things or to correctly estimate the quality of a performance, and many times interrupts the speaker, and calls back a singer or the Band, when their time is up. The Chautauqua Salute is the only thing suitable in a gathering of cultivated people, and cheers and clapping of hands, should be relegated to the out of door political meetings and street carnivals. Another thing, the entertainments should be run strictly on schedule time.

Again all through the session, with two noticeable exceptions, there was thrown to the soldiers in gray and in blue, a perfect deluge of compliments; those soldiers present, were so profusely fed sweet meats, that they became surfeited, and some of their faces became suffused with blushes. And yet not a plum was thrown to the soldiers of the Revolutionary War, whose services were paid in a currency so depreciated, that it was hardly worth pocket room to carry it home—received no generous bounties on enlistment—was poorly fed, and clothed in rags, and made to march on frozen roads shoeless. Had it not been for them, there would have been no country for the soldiers in blue to save, and no opportunity for the soldiers in gray, to show their convictions. It seems to me that with such a remarkable profusion of encomiums those old revolution soldiers were entitled to a few of the praise speeches. Not a plum was thrown to the soldiers of the war of 1812, and yet had it not been for them this country might have been swallowed into the maw of the British Lion. Was it not possible to spare even one little bouquet for them?

Neither were the soldiers of the Mexican war even referred to. And yet by them more territory was added to this country, than all the territory in the seceded states. Would it not have been well, to have thrown to them one little bouquet? It would have shown that their services and loyalty, were known to the present generation. But the speakers, and not the management, was responsible for this folsomeness. If military must be tugged into a gathering for intellectual and moral advancement, let the honors be justly and fairly distributed.
