BY DAD

No six you can't prove it to be so. The world is coming to an end, in Wayne, next Tuesday morning, by hearing his last winter patrons kick about having so much hard coal in their bins.

The Record-Herald says: "Oh for a March that would last until June." You'd had it brother, if you'd keep a March on."

What's become of David B. Hill? That fellow that looks like my brother, who performed at the Crystal forepart of the week, couldn't crawl out of a tight place a bit better than can I, but we must admit that he slipped into them easily.

An exchange says that even the wooden hams used in the meat markets for advertising purposes look mighty good these days. Yes, and they no doubt would taste pretty good, for balance too.

The snickers are not all born in the United States. Commander Perry has secured a year's absence to go to Europe and tell the people there what a wonderful man he is in his mind as a sailor per title.

Abel Lincoln isn't going dry at all just going to have the day handle the stuff instead of the sabons. Say, there is a fresh new whisky theory put into print.

Let's own drive in a third tier herd of hogs to market Tuesday morning. Why not the Wayne winnowed huckle. Let's build a city library instead of mortgaging with old hick.

A Presbyterian preacher in California undertakes to write paper for the day, and says is his last estimate.

"My time is now almost up as I pen this last line, my hand is almost paralyzed, my brain is befuddled, and I am free to confess that I am mighty glad to vacate the holy spot. Such rashes and riot and dismay. Such rashes and riot. It strikes me as the duty of fort to bring order out of chaos, and to do it lightning quick. I am reminded of the memorable words. The earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep, and the spirit moved upon the face of the waters. Never shall I criticize news-papers more. A small prayer for them. They will leave my heart's forbearance hounded and forever, the hardest worked, shortest lived, poorest paid brain workers on this weary old world of ours.

The preachers, by dad, and better stay with the widows, children, and such things.

The boys and women are mixing foreign grown and home-grown hair on their heads. It's mighty hard to tell which is which—Exchange.

Guess you had to try it for yourself. Comet parties are the latest. They are an early morning affair, and sometimes there may be only one or two in the party. If you happen to be out had been out looking for the tail of that durned comet several months ago. The wind brought out the daisyliars, but it takes rain to get dandelions.

Enumerator Cherry ought to delay taking the census until after the June weddings, as it might help some.

There is a story going the rounds about a Nebraska girl breaking her jaw while calling the hired man to dinner. Anybody that wants her can have her.—Cherokee Democrat.

She ought to be "just the girl for me," if her jaw will stay "broke."

It is said that pain makes a woman patient and a man peevish. If you have had any experience take your choice.

Keep your nightshirt on when you go out to see the comet with your naked eye.

In-omnia is generally the result of being awake to listen to the alarm clock. It's a bright item in one of the exchanges. It's a d-d lie. In-omnia is caused by trouble, and this world is filled with people who are looking for it.

I'm dreaming now of Halley!

Here's hoping some of the scratches that word "BAR" off the middle saloon window before next sight of it will be enough to satisfy you.—Carroll.

C. A. Chace tells of a himself that is choke for the public. Cheney goes past it old office several times a day for several months since Editor Woodruff took the paper. Recently he dropped in to pay for his paper, and after taking a good long look at him Editor Woodruff asked: "Which rural route do you get your mail on?"

The Coleridge Blade says the reason these suffragets are opposed to raising large families is because they won't stay at home long enough to have anything.

The democratic papers are already talking D. Rees of Norfolk for state senator. Rees is the same man who a couple of years ago changed from a license advocate to prohibitionist between Wayne and Wakefield, and changed back again on the return trip, a sort of "on-again, off-again, gone-again, Finnegan."

Even when they hit the nail on the head some people can't drive it in the right place. Their "blows" are always wrong.

Hard to tell which tale will be "Teddy's or the comet's."

An Omaha preacher, according to the Chicago Record-Herald, has been advising "engaged couples" to hurry up and get married for fear Halley's comet may soon knock us all off the earth. That may be one reason for not waiting until June, by dad, but have definite information that "engaged couples" sometimes have better reason for hurrying than any old comet's tail could give them.

Well, Mr. Bryan has arrived home and stated that he is not going to publish a prohibition paper, but fails to state that he will not run for the United States senate.

The way elections are going in the east is quite a frost on the crop of republican would-be-candidates of the west.

The Democrat has always been a booster for circulation, and an increase of democrats.

Society Items, Etc.

One of the happiest little affairs of the season was the party given by the P. E. O. at the home of Woodward Jones on Friday evening in honor of one of the charter members, Mrs. E. B. Philles, who is soon to journey west. Each member had the privilege of bringing a friend and every one present helped in the entertainment which took the form of a series of impromptu parodies. The first was "Selecting the Easter Hat" in which Mrs. Dan Harrington took the part of the up-to-date milliner, Mrs. Ed. Johnson the prospective bride with her friend, Miss Theobald. The whole performance was true to life even to the husband, Mrs. Chas. Culler, being called in to give approval and incidentally pay over a large roll of bills leaving with an immense hat box on one arm and his happy wife on the other. The last was a mock wedding in which Mrs. A. A. Welch distinguished herself as the parson; Mrs. Jacobs as the ring bearer, Kate Bressler, the groom and Mrs. Epler, the bride; Mrs. Huffard, the father, gave the bride away while Mrs. Ellis posed as the mother of the bride and Reba Nangle played the wedding march. The audience was convulsed with laughter as the sight of the costumes but the whole ceremony went off without a hitch, a rousing encore being given for a second performance. A wedding feast was then served to all the guests after which an original ode was sung to the time of "Baby Mine" in which a toast was drunk and a P. E. O. spoon presented to the guest of honor.

The Open Day program of the Monday Club which was postponed from last week until this, on account of the weather, was attended by a large number of ladies from all over the city. Mrs. J. Miller opened the program with an organ selection which was beautifully rendered. Mrs. E. B. Philles gave an exhaustive paper on the subject of Municipal Government. This was such a good insight into what the live progressive cities are doing in the way of government that it ought to be published in full so that the real law makers of Wayne might be enthused. Mrs. Haskell of Wakefield, in an interesting talk told what the Wakefield ladies were doing towards making their city beautiful. A great many prizes, donated by the citizens, had been given last year to people of all ages, the plan working admirably. She spoke of window boxes being one of the easiest and most satisfactory ways of beautifying the homes. Wayne being a little behind in this method of decoration, Mrs. Duerig advocated the construction of children's play grounds, advancing the idea that they were much cheaper than Juvenile Courts, Reform Schools, etc. She described the plans of some of the more simpler ones, boxes of sand with swinging covers to work on being the simplest and best idea for young children. Mrs. Wightman gave a splendid paper on Sanitation, telling what is being done in other cities with a view to preventing being divided into many classes and put to many uses. Even the hairpins sold for old wire sum. A fact not to be wondered at while the present method of hairdressing is in vogue. From the latest and highest authorities was given a dissertation on the terrible danger engendered by the common household fly. It being now considered a greater menace to health than the risk of impure water. Tuberculosis, typhoid, fever, summer complaints and other diseases are traced already to the work of this little pest. Their best breeding grounds being the excrement of man and beast. Great caution should be taken in the disposal of this refuse. This work is being taken up by the National Civic Reform Club, moving pictures will show the fly the size of alcohol when walking over the dining room table along with other methods of educating the people to a realization of the danger. An annihilation of the animals may be cheaper than buying screen doors and windows.

Mrs. Blair being out of town, in place of the quartet an organ solo was given by Mrs. Miller. The ladies then spent pleasant social time in the church parlors, refreshing punch being served and a discussion of the work entered into. The visiting ladies from Wakefield were Mesdames Haskell, Long, Kemp and Mathewson who gave some excellent ideas as to how to beautify the city.

The card social given by St. Mary's Guild at the Massie home on Friday evening was a great success and much enjoyed by a large number of guests. The Misses Graves and Buschman and Lewis Moran carried off the honors in the game and were tendered the different prizes.

Mrs. Ley's game of Royalty seems to be a general favorite wherever played and many exchanges have interesting little write-ups of the functions where it is introduced. The flower idea is carried out in the refreshments, the ices are served in the shape of American Beauty roses, cauliflower in rose-shaped patties Marguerites, Royal punch, green blives are on the menu. The prizes are pointed plants and cut flowers. The music boxes play "When Knighthood was in Flower" and as the editor puts it they have such a "blooming" good time and sit up so late that they feel the next day as though the "Jack Frost" had nipped them.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodward Jones have issued invitations to the young people for a dancing party on Friday evening complimentary to Miss Lela Tucker and the other members of the bridal party.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Harrington entertain at a seven o'clock dinner this evening complimentary to Miss Lela Tucker. Mr. Craig Coffin and the other members of the bridal party.

A party of young girls had a jolly good time at the home of Miss Mary Meister Tuesday evening in honor of her birthday. The girls had a delightful time and departed from their homes at a late hour wishing her many happy returns of the day. A dainty lunch was served.

EDUCATION BOARD FILES ANSWER IN CASE AT CHADRON

Petition of Alliance People Calls Forth Statement About New Normal.

Lincoln, Neb., April 25.—The state board of education filed yesterday in district court an answer to the petition of I. A. E. Tash, of Alliance, praying for an injunction to prevent the board locating the new normal school provided for by the last legislature at Chadron. The answer is signed by Attorney General Thompson, Deputy Attorney General Martin, A. W. Crites and F. M. Hall. After reciting the history of the normal board of education which the legislature attempted to create, and which was vetoed by the supreme court, the defendants assert that during the pendency of the litigation they held their powers to be in abeyance, and that neither board attempted to act in locating the new school as required by the terms of the statute establishing the institution. Chadron, as well as the other towns, which were affected by the school, acting in good faith, filed their answer to the new board in manner prescribed in the law. After November 15, the date when the old board resumed its functions, the Chadron people were not bid and bond for deed to be transmitted to such board, and thereafter the members visited the various schools in Chadron as the law required. It is denied that the Chadron people will be unable to convey a clear title to the school tract, which it is proposed to donate to the state, and the statement is made that the money has been paid for the property and a deed, running to the state, ordered by the board of trustees of Chadron academy. Such deed has been duly executed and delivered to the state.

AMERICANS RITE AT ART SWINDLE

Paris, April 25.—The revelations made in the case of Count DeGatigny with the countess, is being amplified at Tours on a charge of having misrepresented the origin of paintings and the antiquity of furniture purchased by Mrs. Charles H. Paine, of this city, but formerly of Boston, have caused a great deal of indignation in the world of art, and served to open up the whole question of the many-sided traffic in sham paintings, other works of art and antique furniture. Although the declaration of Henri Rochefort, editor of the Partis, regarding the Rembrandts may constitute a satirical exaggeration, it is the general opinion that there is some truth in his charges. The countess's collections in hundreds of homes in America and elsewhere contain spurious Rembrandts as well as copies of other masters. "The effort is Sarcastic," says M. Rochefort has said that 80 per cent of the "Rembrandts" owned in America were forgeries. "I have seen so many 'Turners' and 'Van Dycks' that I have almost decided that Turner never existed. He could not have turned out the works attributed to him if he had lived 200 years. It is the same with Rembrandts. I never could convince my American friend that his collection of the school of 1830 containing 'Milllets' and 'Corpuses' were not genuine, but I did convince him of the falsity of his works of one great living artist, he the artist himself, upon seeing the pictures exclaimed: 'I will send my second to the man who says I did that.'"

MURDERED MAN'S BODY RECOVERED AFTER TWO YEARS

Broken Bow, Neb., April 20.—Two years after the mysterious disappearance of O. F. Hamilton from Mullen, county seat of Hooker county, his body was found near the stock yard at that place. The finding of the body was brought about by a confession made by Frank Cleavinger, who filed an affidavit stating that C. W. Rector and himself had been unwilling witnesses to the murder, and charges H. G. McIntyre, who was the government official who over the head with a revolver, rendering him unconscious. The prostrate form was then rolled down the cellarway where, the affidavit says, the murderous work was done.

WOLTER IS STOLID AS CRIME IS UNFOLDED

Phillip O'Hanlon, a coroner's physician, testified that Ruth Wheeler had been attacked before she was murdered and that there was still life in her body when she was thrown into the furnace, jammed up the chimney of Wolter's flat, and set afire. He had found human hair not her own, adhering to the floor of the furnace. He knew she had fought for her honor, and she was not in the lungs. A corpse does not breathe. Therefore he knew a living and sentient body had inhaled smoke and fire, and died.

You Mothers Who Have a Real Boy

Here are real clothes. Not the fussy, fancy, impractical kind; but good, staunch, substantial garments with style and durability.

These are EXTRAGOOD clothes. The real boy, with all his pranks, can't harm them.

The trousers are lined throughout. A rip or a tear is a thing unheard of. Then there is a fullness that makes it impossible for the boy to stretch them out of shape.

Style comes natural in clothes made like EXTRAGOOD. The proportion and shape given the clothes by the tailors who make them remain a part of the garments to the end.

Only one store in town sells EXTRAGOOD. That's this store. The new Spring styles are here now. Prices will attract you as much as the clothes. Both are right.

Sam Davies had a birthday yesterday, six years older than Roosevelt, but has led a more strenuous life. Everybody doesn't know that Sam knows more about what is going on in the world, and has a wider acquaintance, than any other individual in Wayne county. Sam, like Squire Feather, Judge Britton, John Bressler and Charley Martin, is a very essential part of our city. They are all optimists, jokers, good-fellers and good livers no matter what happens to the rest of us.

Taking the word of republicans for it, neither Carroll or Garst is fit to be governor of Iowa. The logical thing to do is to elect a democrat.

This time the report that Mark Twain is dead is not "greatly exaggerated."

Since he has been in office the governor of Tennessee has pardoned 198 men convicted of murder. Some people don't care what it is, just so they break a record of some sort.

In a recount of the ballots, wet or dry, at Kearney, it was found that the wets won out by two votes instead of sixteen as counted by the election boards. One majority would have been sufficient, as one drink always calls for seven.

Don't you ever believe Billy Bryan won't run for U. S. senator, and don't think for a minute that the old man has lived all these years in the limelight and will run on the prohibition ticket. Bryan is no fool. It is the people who didn't vote for him are foolish.

If there is no objection, remonstrance or protest filed within two weeks from the date of first publication of this notice, the said license will be granted. WALTER GAEBLER, Village Clerk.

A Few Hints.

The teacher should never be guilty of conducting a recitation in history, geography, physiology or grammar with a text book in her hand. She should know these subjects so well that she will know without consulting the text whether the pupils answer the questions correctly or not. She should stand before her class so full of her theme that a flow of questions will be rapid and direct. Her questions should be simple and clear and of such a nature as to stimulate thought. They should be the outgrowth of the teacher's knowledge, and not those taken from the text book. Questions that can be answered by "yes" or "no," should be avoided. The teacher should be a ready thinker, but if, however, she cannot think readily of the questions she wishes to ask her pupils in class, she may have them written on a small slip of paper, which she should have on her desk so that she can refer to it if necessary. Use maps in teaching history. Have the pupils draw maps and on them indicate the early settlements, the early explorations, the battles, etc.

Consult the Nebraska Course of Study daily and follow it closely. It will give many suggestions. It tells you what to teach and how to teach the different subjects in the various grades. In geography the same as in history the teacher should make her own questions and not use the questions given in the text. Teach your pupils to observe, to read the map, to draw maps and to recite in their own language what they learned. Have pupils compare the country studied with our home states, with regard to size, climate, how much farther north or south than our state. Compare its population per square mile with the population of our state per square mile.

The teacher should have patience with her pupils. The recitation should not be hurried through. Do not omit important explanations, questions, and comparisons. The teacher should not assign more than can be gone over in one recitation.—(Extracts from the Nebraska School Review.)

Reading Circle Books. At the meeting of the Nebraska State Reading Circle Board held in Lincoln, March 21, 1910, the following books were selected for the teachers' reading circle course for the year 1910-1911. Professional book (required) Barrett's Pedagogy, published by Ginn & Co.; culture books, Allen's Civics and health, published by D. C. Heath & Co. and Smith's Evolution of Dood, published by Rand, McNally & Co.

Some Extracts From the Reading Circle Book on Pedagogy. Would you employ a person for your physician who had never attended a medical school, read a medical journal or spent any time as an apprentice, under a competent physician? Would you employ as the teacher of your children, one who had never had any normal training, studied the art of teaching or served an apprentice in the school room?

Teachers who can find no time to read professional literature or attend teachers' institutes should be relieved of the burden of teaching. No school can be an entire success unless the parents take an active interest in all that concerns it. It is idle to demand or expect the teacher to display great zeal in school work when the parents are indifferent in regard to the school.

To repeat the answers given to pupils is encouraging inattention. Every member of the class should be held strictly to account for each answer given. Strict attention in the recitation should become a habit.

Letter Writing. Few pupils know how to write letters in creditable style. This fault is due to a lack of proper instruction in school. Instruction in letter writing is not complete until by application, in writing letters, the pupil is able to demonstrate that he can apply the principles of written expression in business and social correspondence.

Teachers of different schools could be mutually helpful if they would have their pupils correspond. Pupils from our city or state should write letters discussing familiar subjects to pupils of corresponding grades in other cities or states. By this means much interest may be created in the manners, customs and occupations of people in various localities. Besides this real practice in letter writing is always a valuable drill in written expression. These letters should of course be criticised by the teacher before they are sent through the mail, but the superior wisdom of the teacher should not be allowed to discourage the pupil.

Barrett's Pedagogy. The Smith System Heating Company agree to furnish plans free to any district contemplating the building of a new school house and which will install one of their no-basement furnaces. There are three plans offered, one for $2,000, one for $1,600 and one for $1,000. Special attention is given to the three essential problems to be considered in the construction of school buildings—light, heat and ventilation. They show that it is almost as cheap (in dollars and cents) to build a beautiful and healthful school house as to build an ugly one—if you know how.

School Notes

We have been visiting schools for the last two weeks and for the most part find them in good condition: In one, however, we could not refrain from "saying things" under our breath. The floor had been swept but there was a three weeks' layer of dust upon the unused desks. We resorted to the old time antic of writing our name on one when the teacher was not looking. There were sash curtains at the windows, presumably white at one time, from which the windows being open, a cloud of dust was wafted through the air. The decorations evidently had been put up, once for all, and were gathering their share of dirt, unmolested by dust-cloth or broom. To cap the climax an eighth grade class in physiology were reciting about the necessity of cleanliness. It would seem that a thoroughly clean teacher could not stand such conditions on her own account even if she did not consider the pupils.

School Notes

Orders, filled out ready for signature for the High school tuition due the various High school districts in this vicinity, have been sent to all directors of districts liable for such tuition. If these have not been signed and returned they should be at once, as the High schools are anxious to have each semester settled for as it is due.

The following birds have been seen in Wayne county during April: The robin, flicker or yellow namer, blue bird, northern shrike or butcher bird, horned lark, red-winged blackbird, bronze grackle or crow blackbird, cow bird, ki-deer, field sparrow, blue jay and meadow lark.

Teachers will never succeed in making good penmen of their pupils who follow the plan of "lay away the books and take your pens and paper" three periods of ten minutes each a week and during the remaining 29 hours and thirty minutes allow the pupils to scribble and scratch to their hearts content. Why should a pupil who can recite glibly "every sentence should begin with a capital letter, fail to use ONE on the whole sheet of written work? He must be like the boy who prided himself on his knowledge of conjugations and declensions in grammar, and who said with evident astonishment when his attention was called to the relation between grammar and his speech: "Grammar don't have nothing to do with my talking; I talk just as I'm a mind to."

It ought not to be necessary for a teacher to keep her eye on those at the desks while hearing a recitation, but she ought to be in a position to glance over the room without making a "right-about-face" movement to do so. The habit of standing with your back to the school during a recitation is not only wrong from a standpoint of politeness, but it is wrong for other reasons, which most teachers would recognize if they could "observe what goes on while they are so stationed. Place your recitation seats in a different position; it is necessary to remove the temptation for the children to take advantage of you.

A Georgia professor wrote an arithmetic that contained such tough problems that nobody could solve them. One teacher wrote, asking for the key. The professor replied on a postal card: "Dear Sir:—It has no key. It's a stem winder."

If people only said what they thought, there wouldn't be so much talking.—Farm Journal.

Tilton Weber is Killed

There was a fatal auto smash-up near Randolph Tuesday morning in which Driver Tilton Weber met instant death. There was a large party of land men, in three machines, among the party being three land buyers from Harlan, Iowa, all of whom had purchased farms, and were being turned back to Randolph from near Osmond. The lead car was run by Wm. Stageman, the second by Weber, containing the Iowa men, and the third driven by Lou Klopping. According to the Iowa men, Lou Christensen, Hans Hansen, Tobe Tobiasson and Hans Lorenzen, who were passengers home yesterday with the exception of the latter who was too badly bruised up, Mr. Weber was going about forty miles an hour, talking a good deal and somewhat careless in going over the rough roads. One wheel went in a rut or an obstruction and the car was tossed in the air, coming down and crushing the driver to instant death. The other occupants were pitched skyward except Hansen, who is a heavy man and who had hold of the car to keep his seat. He was able to return to Iowa on a later train, however.

Marion Harland and Dame Curtsey

For more than half a century Marion Harland has been writing on housewifely themes and answering the questions of women in a clear and kindly way that has made her name beloved from one end of the land to the other. Many who read her cheery and helpful page every week in the Sunday Chicago Record-Herald have no idea that she is 77 years old, for she still writes with all the vigor and discernment of a woman of half her years. Huge as the task may seem, she gives her personal attention to the vast correspondence that her position of expert adviser on household topics involves, and every question is answered directly by her. No other department of The Sunday Record-Herald is more universally popular than hers.

Another department that pushes it closely, however, is Dame Curtsey's "Novelties in Entertainment," which has been hailed with joy by thousands of hostesses who feel the need of new ideas. Dame Curtsey, whose real name is Ellye Howell Glover, seems to have a genius for inventing fresh schemes for decorations, menus and games and all the details that tend to fest to dinners and entertainments. She also answers questions pertaining to etiquette and good taste, and otherwise furnishes just the information so often sought vainly by women.

When it is added that the Sunday Magazine of The Record-Herald is full of good stories and articles as interesting to women as to men, it is easy to see why that paper is the favorite among women.

School Notes.

Some teachers wonder why they are not able to "get things" from the school board when other teachers are supplied with every convenience. The difference lies in the fact that the former class of teachers go about it in a business-like way and show the need of the supplies they want, while others do not explain—simply make the demand and go off "huffy" if it is not granted at the first suggestion of the board. Because a school board does not at once get what you ask for, is no sign that they do not intend to do so at all. They are busy men. Be patient.—Wayne County Teacher, Sept., '08.

The following teachers have taken the places of those who for various reasons, resigned at the end of the winter term:

Bessie Marsteller District No. 54	32
Frances Grogan	5
Elizabeth Olds	70
Mary Young	68
Lily Foster

One who is not a resident of a school district is not eligible to any district office therein. All the qualification necessary for a school district officer is that he be a legal voter in the school district.

Have you notified this office of any change in the school board this spring? Quite often the way we hear of such change is when a notice of undelivered mail reaches us, saying that "so and so" has moved away and left no address.

"What is geography?" asked the father, who was testing his son's progress in study.

"Geography," replied little Jimmy, "is what you put inside your trousers when you think you're going to get a licking."

ANGEL'SQUIRE

BY EDGAR WALLACE

"Let him talk in his own way," he said.

"This admirable person," the old man went on, happily striking the subject dead, "is really a very characterful man. I am not disposed to give, Mr. Connor, remembering your many kindnesses, particularly in respect to one Mr. Vinnis."

"Yes, go on," urged Connor, and the face of Vinnis was tense.

"I fear there are times when my usually active mind takes on a sluggishness which is really a very characteristic of my normal character," old George was again the pedant—"when the unobtrusive stranger might be deceived into regarding me as a highly intelligent man. The admirable young man so far treated me as such as to remark to his companion that there was a rope—yes, distinctly a rope—for the said Mr. Vinnis."

"The face of Vinnis was livid.

"And," asked Connor, "what happened next? There were two of them, were there?"

"The old man nodded gravely. He had a number of times, as though the exercise pleased him.

"The other young man—not the noble one, but another—upon finding that I could not be so easily deceived as I could not, Mr. Connor, without your permission—engaged me in conversation—very loudly he spoke, I say, on the relative merits of cabbage and Brussels sprouts. Where the amiable gentleman was at that moment, I cannot say."

"I can guess," thought Connor.

"I can remember the occasion well," old George continued, "because that night I was alarmed and started by strange noises from the empty rooms upstairs, which I very naturally and properly considered to be caused by the wind."

He stopped, and glancing fearfully about the room, went on in a lower tone.

"By certain sniffs," he whispered mysteriously, and pointed and leered first at one and then another of the occupants of the room.

"There was something very queer in the appearance of the strange old man with the queerly working face, and more than one burdened criminal present shivered a little."

"Connor broke the silence that fell on the room.

"So that's how it was done, eh? One held you in conversation while the other got upstairs and hid himself? Well, boys, you've heard the old man."

Vinnis shifted in his seat and turned his great unemotional face to where the old man stood, still fumbling with his hat and looking at the strange old man with a blank stare. The death whither his poor wandering mind had taken him he was holding a conversation with an imaginary person.

Connor could not resist the temptation, and he turned to the old man, and he said to him, "I have never met him before," the stranger said, turning to Connor.

"Oh, old George always thinks he has met people," said Connor with a grin.

"A gentleman," old George muttered, "very much a gentleman, and a much-looked-upon. He bought a copy of my book—you have read it. It is called 'The Mystery of the Old Man'—and sent to consult me in his abode."

"What?" The stranger's face was ashen, and he gripped Connor by the arm.

"I'll explain," the other whispered excitedly.

Old George threw up his head again and started blindly at the stranger, with a look of intense interest. "Invariably," he said, "I have had to explain to you the mystery of the old man."

"The book," he said, "is called 'The Mystery of the Old Man'—and sent to consult me in his abode."

handed them to Connor, and the hungry eyes of the "Borough Lot" focused upon the crinkling paper.

"What I shall ask you to do," the stranger proceeded, "I shall tell you later."

"Wait a bit," interrupted Bat. "Who else is in this?"

"No one," replied the man, "but I am in it."

"Is Angel in it?"

"No" (impatiently).

"The money is in a safe that can only be opened by a word. That word you know—so far. The key to the safe was stolen a few nights ago from the man in charge of the case by Jimmy."

He paused to note the effect of his words.

"Jimmy has passed the key on to Scotland Yard, and we cannot hope to get it."

"Well," demanded Bat, "what can we do, if the other went in to open the safe and something more powerful than a word?"

"But the guard!" said Bat. "There's an armed guard kept by the lawyer."

"I can arrange about the guard," said the other.

"Why not get the lawyer?"

"I have tried," said the man, "but he is a very clever fellow. He has a number of men in his employ, and he is very well protected."

"There was no need to ask," Connor said, "for the man who had the key was the man who had the money."

found him examining a map of London, and he saw that the map was of E.B. 93," he said, and in five minutes the messenger came back with a thick folder bulging with papers.

"These were newspaper cuttings and plans and drawings of the sort which the like of which the outside world do not see, and there was a little key ticketed with an inscription. Angel looked through the folder carefully, then read the woman's letter again.

Vinnis, the man with the dead-white face, finishing his late breakfast and with the assurance of a man who has banknotes in his trouser pocket, strolled forth into Commercial Road E. An acquaintance leaning against a public-house gave him a curt nod of recognition, and he hurriedly turned his head toward with her man's breakfast in her apron shrank on one side, knowing Vinnis to be sorrow, a stray curiosity to note the man who stood for a moment at the edge of the road, and was kicked for his pains.

Vinnis was entirely without sentiment, and he had thought that the money in his pocket compensated for most things, the memory of old George and his babbling talk worried him.

Somebody on the other side of the road was looking at him. It was a woman and he knew her very well, therefore he ignored her beckoning hand. Two days ago he had occasion to reproach and he had seized the opportunity to summarily dissolve the informal union that had kept them together for five years. So he made no signs when the woman with the beautiful face called him, but turned abruptly and walked towards Aldgate.

He did not look round, but by and by he heard the patter of her feet behind him, and he turned his head to look at her. She was walking in a side street with a raging devil inside him, then when they reached the unrequited part of the road he turned on her.

"She saw the demon in his eyes, and she said, 'What is it, Vinnis?' and he said, 'I have a woman at that moment, and hysterically she confessed, but the savage menace of the man froze her lips.'"

"I have a woman at that moment, and hysterically she confessed, but the savage menace of the man froze her lips." "So after what I've said, what I've done you follow me, do you. Showing me up in the street, eh?"

He edged closer to her, his fist doubled, and she, poor dear, fascinated by his stare, stood rooted to the spot. Then with a snarl he struck her—once, twice—and she fell a huddled, moaning heap on the pavement at his feet.

You may do things in Commercial Road E, after "lighting-up time" that are not permissible in the broad light of the day, unless it be Saturday, and the few people who have been attracted to the place by the noise and the excitement of the night are not so dignified nor so passive, after the manner of all London crowds. Not so one quiet, middle-aged man, who confronted Vinnis as he began to walk away.

"That was a remarkably brutal thing to do," said the quiet man.

Vinnis measured him with his eyes, and decided that this was not a man to be trifled with.

"I've got nothing to say to you," he said roughly, and tried to push past him.

"Wait a moment, my friend," said the other steadily, "not so fast; you cannot commit a brutal assault in the open street like that without punishment. I must ask you to walk with me to the station."

"Suppose I won't go?" demanded Vinnis.

"I shall take you," said the other. "I am Detective-Sergeant Jarvis from Scotland Yard."

Vinnis ought rapidly. There wasn't much chance of escape. The street was full of men in a cul-de-sac, and at the open end two policemen had made their appearance. After all, a "wife" was a wife, and she was a woman, and the woman—well, she would have to be an accident. He resolved to go quietly; at the worst it would be a month's work with a shirking of his shoulder.

SIR ERNEST AND LADY SHACKLETON.

was provisioned along the lines he had found best. He introduced a few vaudeville stunts in polar work, too, for he carried a small stock of goods which he published the "Antarctic News" in his permanent camp, and a spike-wheeled automobile to drag sledges loaded with grub over the smooth ice. In addition he had a bunch of Manchurian ponies which he used instead of dogs, as pack animals and delicatessen. It is evident, enough that his scheme worked, for he got 35 miles nearer the south pole than any other explorer had ever done, and within 11 miles of the desired goal. Then all he had to do was to get back to his camp, which he did by going without anything to eat for several days, except an underdoser of two, and

Some of the romps and glories of this little story, which I may be they were a rich Ernest Henry Shackleton, explorer, for an example. He put in 15 months trying to get a touchstone on the south pole. Learned to eat Manchurian pony on the hoof and milked it. He got a dog named Ernest, which he kept for the razor when he first tried to shave. Became so richly voracious that when he ordered tea in the Hotel Cecil on his return to London he ate a whole pig. He was a very rich man. You can always tell 'em by their hair of 'brilliant' color, said the functionary. Established a place for himself among scientists, although he is comparatively a new man. And what he got for it was a high honor, being made his regular annual birthday, not being able to see the sick lack because folks were looking, Shackleton, became a knight. HOW IT FEELS TO BE CHARGED BY A LION

Ex-President Roosevelt Relates Thrilling Adventure in the African Jungle

From Scribner's.

The lion stopped and lay down behind a bush; jumping off I took a shot at him at 200 yards, but only wounded him slightly in one paw; and after a moment's hesitation he went lashing his tail. We mounted our horses and went after him; Tarleton lost sight of him, but I marked him lying down behind a large tree. Again we dismounted at a distance of 200 yards. Tarleton telling me that now he was sure to charge. In all East Africa there is no man, not even Cunningham himself, who has done more than I have done in the African jungle. On this occasion, however, I am glad to say that his hunting was very sighted, and shot altogether too low.

OUR LACK OF PATRIOTISM.

Remain in Place Long Enough to Be Attached to It

From the New York Evening Sun.

With moving day coming in its spite of the chill weather, it invariably comes from one of these few patriotic words are in the American's mind. They have in almost the same breath been excused, explained and adroitly covered up. It is not that the Americans are not patriotic because a majority of them possess parents who had early associations in this country. There is no sense of having roots, of the soil, of the land, of the spot where one's forefathers stood. One cannot love an entire huge country. When one says the name of one's native land it must mean to each person a certain limited territory. Loyalty, with a house, where one was born, reared and heard of the births of one's people. All this is impossible in America, because every one moves every year, and prevents any feeling but that of feverish participation in an ever changing kaleidoscope. The thought may be our enthusiasm, but it is not our patriotism. It is our voices in speaking of it, and this is because we could not make ourselves heard in any other way; but we do not feel that we are not patriotic. It is the call of our nation. Respond to it, no matter what the suffering.

POSTUM FOR MOTHERS.

Nourishes and Supports Mother and Child.

"My husband has been unable to drink coffee for several years, so we were very glad to give Postum a trial and when we understood that long boiling would bring out the delicious flavor, we have been highly pleased with it."

"It is one of the finest things for nursing mothers that I have ever seen. It keeps up the mother's strength and increases the supply of nourishment for the child if mother is bled or taken of freely. I drank it between meals instead of water, and found it most beneficial."

"Our five-year-old boy has been very delicate since birth and has developed slowly. He was white and bloodless. I began to give him Postum freely and you would be surprised at the change. When any person remarks about the great improvement, we never fail to tell them that we attribute his gain in strength and general health, to the free use of Postum and this has led many friends to use it for themselves and children."

Please kindly bear in mind that there are many grand old trees now passing into a state of decrepitude that would have survived for a good many years had the proper attention been given them at the right time. Dead wood is a load that no tree can carry without injury, and should be promptly removed.

Stop Women And Consider

This Fact—that in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience with women's diseases covers twenty-five years.

The present Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, was for years under her direction, and has ever since her decease continued to advise women.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty causes them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probable examinations of even their family physician. Such questioning and examination is unnecessary. Without cost you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

MRS. PINKHAM'S STANDING INVITATION:

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established this confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Never has she published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which Mrs. Pinkham has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge needed in your case. She asks nothing in return except your good will and her advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Mrs. Pinkham, care of Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

That saves a lot of work, trouble and money. People do not like kalsomine, as all kalsomine is mixed with glue to make it stick. The glue rots and the kalsomine comes off—on your clothes and on the floor. Alabastine adheres to the wall of its own cementing qualities. It requires no dirty glue, nor paste, as with kalsomine or wall paper. These always attract insects and disease germs.

Real Live Washington Gossip (By Tavenner)

Washington, April 25th.—Senator Aldrich's announcement that he will not be a candidate for re-election is being regarded with increasing suspicion here in Washington as a manifest political trick.

It is doubtful if a single one of the genuine progressive republicans really believes that the Rhode Island boss intends to relinquish his control of legislation a moment sooner than he has to. Even a few "regulars" have privately expressed the belief that Aldrich might consent to re-election, basing this conclusion upon what they characterized as the "enormous pressure" which will no doubt be brought to bear upon Aldrich to cause him to change his mind.

Because of his record of underhandness and trickery in dealing with the Senate and the public, everything Senator Aldrich does or says should be carefully analyzed before accepted on its face value.

Aldrich does not say anywhere that he will not accept a re-election. He says that he will not be a "candidate." It would be no surprise to Senators who know Aldrich if the words "I am not a candidate for re-election" should turn out after the fall congressional elections to have been but another of his famous "jokers," with which the Payne-Aldrich tariff law is overloaded.

The corporation interests served by Aldrich can best maintain the excessive tariff rates, which give them monopolies on American markets and make it possible for them to collect enormous profits from consumers, through a Republican administration. Therefore it is but natural that Aldrich's primary object at this time is to keep the Republicans in power.

What move on Aldrich's part could relieve the republicans of so heavy a responsibility in the approaching Congressional elections as the announcement of his retirement? Realizing that his long representation of Big Business has earned for him the enmity of the American people, and that his name is to be one of the main issues in the fall campaign, it is but giving due credit to Aldrich's resourcefulness to assume that he figured it out he could not serve the special interests better at this time than to announce his retirement, if such announcement would help the Republican party over dangerous shoals.

Aldrich is taking no chances in announcing that he will not again be a candidate. He can change his mind easily, or he can have re-election "forced" upon him should the next House be Democratic, however, Aldrich might not care to come back to the Senate, for it would then be obvious that he could put through none of his own peculiar style of legislation.

The ship subsidy bill is beaten so far as this session of Congress is concerned. It goes to destruction on the rocks of scandal. The Merchant Marine League, the organization which is backing the bill providing for the annual payment of $5,000,000 of public funds to a few private shipowners, is being exposed before a special investigating committee of Congress as being backed by men who would profit directly or indirectly through the passage of the proposed legislation. These men, most of whom are millionaires, have contributed to the funds of the league, and the funds have been used in turn to attack and terrify members of Congress opposed to the subsidy grab. Although officers of the league testified contributors to league treasury were interested in the passage of a ship subsidy bill merely as American patriots anxious to see the merchant marine built up, a cross examination of the very witnesses who made such assertions brought out the fact that two of the vice-presidents of the league were directors of the steel trust, and that another vice-president was the general manager of a Newport News, Va. shipbuilding company, concerns which might easily profit through the opening of the pork barrel by the passage of a ship subsidy measure.

"The Democrats are nearer to selecting a President of the United States than they have been since 1892," says Governor Claude A. Swanson of Virginia, who recently completed a tour that extended to the Pacific coast. "Not in years have the Democrats shown so much activity, so much desire to shake off lethargy, to hold harmony banquets, and to get together as is manifested in all sections of the country at this time. With such a spirit pervading the leaders and the rank and file of Democracy, taken together with the dissensions among Republicans, I can see no other result than that a Democratic house and Democratic president in 1913!"

President Taft still refuses to relent in his opposition to a Congressional investigation of either the sugar under-delivering frauds or the sale by the government of valuable sugar lands to the sugar trust. The first resolution introduced by Rep. John A. Martin of Colorado, providing for an investigation by Congress was smothered to death. Mr. Martin has now introduced a second resolution. He alleges that the sugar trust has been allowed to acquire 55,000 acres of the richest sugar lands in the Philippines, and that the validity of this transaction is open to most serious question, in view of the fact that the 2,500 acres of land shall be sold to any single corporation.

Sanction was given to the transaction in question by Attorney General Wick-ersham, who was a former member of the New York sugar trust law firm of Strong & Cadwalader, which firm Mr.

Marti declares was directly concerned with the alleged illegal sale. President Taft's brother is still a member of this firm. Whether the President can much longer prevent a sweeping investigation of the entire scandal is extremely doubtful.
