You Want the Best Base Burner

Here's the one you are looking for. It's the FAVORITE. The FAVORITE requires but 2 1-2 tons of coal to heat a home perfectly all winter. Any other base burner requires from 4 to 6. How much coal did you burn last winter? If you used more than 2 1-2 tons you are wasting money. Get a FAVORITE base burner and cut your coal bill in two.

Let me tell you some things about a base burner.

Base Burners are made to get all the heat they can out of a certain amount of coal, and send it into a room or home. The Base Burner that sends the greatest amount of heat into the home from that amount of coal is the best.

The coal must be thoroughly burned in order to get the utmost heat from it. To do this, the base burner must be air tight, so that all the air can pass only through the coal, thus insuring complete combustion.

This heat, extracted from the coal by the air tight Base Burner must now be gotten into the room. To do this all base burners have hollow flues through which the heat from the fire passes before it can go out the chimney.

You see if the heat passed directly into the chimney it would be lost. The flues radiate it into the room before it can reach the chimney.

The best flues are those which have the greatest surface from which the heat can radiate into the room.

Now, you see, that the best Base Burner must be absolutely airtight, and it's flues must have a larger radiating surface than any other Base Burner.

Is there such an ideal base burner that combines these two essential qualities? Just one—the FAVORITE.

Every Favorite is fitted air tight. The Doors, registers and frames are milled and planed by special machinery, just as wood is planed, until each part fits into its proper place just as closely and tightly as a watch case fits.

There is no guess work about this fitting. It HAS to be right. Every Base Burner is carefully inspected before it leaves the factory, and a base burner that isn't air tight does not go out.

The flues of the FAVORITE Base Burner have over double the radiating surface of any other base burner.

These three flues are built separate from the back of the stove and from each other, a construction that no other base burner can have, because it is patented.

That means the same amount of coal in a FAVORITE will give twice the amount of heat that another base burner will.

W. E. Miller's Defense.

County Superintendent W. E. Miller of Cedar county makes the following sworn statement as to his family troubles, which statement is corroborated by other members of his family and C. V. Noren:

On Saturday, September 10th, 1910, my father, W. B. Miller, invited me to come out to his place on the following Sunday. I did so.

When I arrived there my father and myself were sitting in the kitchen talking about school matters. In the course of the conversation something was said that did not suit my sister, Alta, who had come into the room during the conversation, and she "batted in" as she was in the habit of doing, always trying to run the affairs of my office, telling me whom I should certificate and who not. One word brought on another till she began calling me all the vile names she could think of. I did not care for that but when she began on my wife I told her she must not speak disrespectfully about my wife, that I would not stand for it. She proceeded then to throw a handful of knives and forks at my head. Then I caught her and shoved her out into a washroom just out from the kitchen. She went on out doors picked up a broom and smashed in a screen door. My father said, "Will, don't let her spoil the door." I stepped out on the walk when she struck me over the head with the broom. I then took the broom away from her and in taking it away she stepped down on the south side of the walk and I stepped down on the north side. The ground on the south side of the walk was wet and slippery and when she stepped off the walk her feet flew out from under her and she sat down on the ground. At this point C. V. Noren, who was sitting in a swing south of the house came up and caught her and took her away. I went on into the house and eat down. She came in at this time and picked up the coffee pot and tried to pour it on my head. Noren took that away from her. I swear that at no time did "I strike or kick her. At the time she was sitting on the ground I was five feet from her and there was a walk at least ten inches high between us.

I also swear that at this time nor at any other time did I ever mistreat, abuse, or call my wife names. That is a falsehood, made out of whole cloth.

ROGER AND I.

By EB COLLINS

It is a very simple story. My name is Marian Ray, and I was twenty years old when I first met Roger Dermott at Poole, in Dorsetshire, where I was passing the summer.

My mother and I, who composed our entire family, had strayed to this quiet place because we knew that her lease on life was not very long, and I grasped at any suggestion of possible relief to her even as the drawing catch all straws, forgetting how frail they are. And it was terrible to me to think that I must be left alone in the great, wide world—alone and poor.

We were always together—my mother and I—for she was more like an elder sister than a parent, and we clung the closer now, for we felt that the time she spent with us was her last.

But I, feeling very brave and confident, as the young are prone to be, smiled back courageously into her face, and at last, when my future began to be discussed, changed the subject of conversation.

And so we lived on at the seaside, and our two lives were very gray and uneventful until the first of August, when a sunny day, bright and hot, and when the sunbeams gazed again, I noticed it is always darker than before it came.

We were strolling along the beach, one divine June morning, my arm round my mother, in a tender, protective way, when she suddenly started from my side, and with a flush upon her pale face held out her hand in a cordial greeting.

Glancing up in surprise, I met the laughing, brown eyes of Roger Dermott. He saluted me with a courteous bow, inhaled upon my hand, and then, beside my mother, and together we returned our morning walk.

That was the beginning of many pleasant days. Days no longer lonely, and my mother was never so happy as now was my heart filled with gloomy forebodings for the future. For Roger and I were betrothed.

It is wonderful that great strides hearts will make toward each other when isolated from society and surrounded by the wealth which dear Mother Nature loves to lavish upon her children.

Looking back upon the past, after the lapse of years,

"I think my eyes grow wet, as somewhere within my breast

Stabbed a faint and stolid pang never wholly laid to rest."

Somewhat, this secluded spot has ever been to me as the graveyard in which I ever loved lies sleeping, and yet, there is no dust there to which I have a claim. There are graveyards in the memory sometimes, and it is curious to me we always lay our bravest and best.

Roger was a sailor, and it was strange how soon I learned to take an interest in all that pertained to the ocean. We rowed about the harbor, and saw waves, while he unfolded to me the mysteries that lay hidden in its shining, deceitful depths.

I loved the sea then, oh, how I loved it! But now, when I walk along the beach, it talks to me of meetings and of dreary things, and the sound of its tumultuous roaring comes to my ears like the cries of a soul in despair.

One gloomy afternoon in September, with the sky threatening and dreary, and the sun red and sinking in a crimson ball behind the mass of clouds lowering in the west, I walked upon the rocks beside the sea. Roger came to meet me there, for he was to sail on the morrow for the Indies, leaving me with a heart like a tumbled lead, to await his return.

I could not endure the thought of his parting. But he would be captain of the vessel when he came back, he said, and he must not lose this chance in the world.

He would have taken me with him as his wife, but there was mother, and so I would stay behind, and he would how much is to be gained by the voyage, there never was a woman yet that could feel, at such times, the value of a good man, and I suppose I was like the rest.

And so I paced up and down the rocks in the sunset, with my heart all choked-like, and my eyes full of tears, and my ears ringing with the words, "Roger must not go, he must never go." When he was gone there would be days and nights to cry in, and then my tears need not be restrained, and I would be waiting for his coming. I watched the offing, where the ships rocked lazily to and fro, with the rising wind. The surf lines came booming up at the shore, frothing and foaming against the rocks, and above my head, splashing and dipping into the white-capped waves. And then, watching the sun go down, I began to wonder at Roger's delay, and my eyes were fixed upon the beach, as if I waited his coming at this spot. And I thought how pleased he would be to find me so much nearer than he anticipated.

I smiled to myself as I marked at last his familiar form moving along the beach. But where was he going? He directed his steps to a little nook on the shore, where he had never visited, for he had warned me of its danger when the tide was in.

As he entered the sheltered nook, I perceived that the place was deserted, for there was a gleam of a gray dress, and then I saw a slender form.

It was Miss Dean, the daughter of a fisherman, living near, and my heart gave a great throb, for as I saw that Roger evidently expected her.

I saw her run to meet him, and flinging back her long, dark hair from her pretty face, she seized his hands with a passionate ardor, and drew him down from the rock, and turned toward home. Then I composed myself, and walking slowly, I sought my own apartments. My mother, again, attributing my agitation to Roger, tried to soothe me, and I was to heart's content to explain.

In a short time I heard his voice, asking the servant if he were engaged, and regardless of consequences, I went down to see him, and he, looking at me, said, "I wrote you to Mr. Roger Dermott, and I am sure you will be glad to hear from him."

As I entered the room, I saw that Roger was sitting at a table, and he looked up at me with a smile, and said, "I am glad to see you, and I am sure you will be glad to hear from me."

My mother's engagement was at an end. And, with quiet scorn, I warned him not to write to me, for if he did, I would burn his letters unopened. And Roger Dermott knew that I never broke my word. I slipped his ring into the envelope, and so it was all over.

After that, we returned to our home in London, and there the fever seized me. I went down to the gates of death, but my feet were stayed at the portals; so I came back to life, with its usual joys and sorrows.

One blow followed another in quick succession. Hardly had I regained my strength, when my mother set forth upon that last, long journey that we had planned to take. With her dear hand upon my forehead, I watched her as she fell in sleep. She died unconscious of what had come between Roger and me, and our names were the last upon her lips. And we, who had always been together, were parted forever now.

I stood alone in the world now. God help the poor woman who has that to say for herself, and with a woman's precocious chances of earning an honest livelihood.

I was fortunate in finding a friend, and just at the blackest hour of my night. The hour before the day dawned, and when my heart had tailed me, and desolate and alone, I felt "hedgehog" by all the pitiless world a kind hand was stretched out to save me from despair.

An old-time friend of my father offered me the charge of a circulating library, and too thankful for words, I wrung his hand in gratitude, and turned my face in the direction of my work.

It was the beginning of winter, and I was of the employment which would secure me from want during that inclement season, and I was very lonely, but what my heart mustirk some talk. Mr. Lee, my employer, was a genial and gentle, a perfect "bookworm," and I soon found my labors engrossing. Among books I could not very fondly, and so the days wore away, and at last I grew quietly happy.

ing into an unused room, I stumbled over a small wooden box.

"Bless me!" exclaimed Mr. Lee, "if there isn't that box of second-hand books I bought for you last night. They comprise some valuable works, and are worth something!"

So saying, he removed the lid from the box. I assisted him in assorting the contents, and as I did so, I noticed I touched with a copy of Longfellow's poems, with Roger Dermott's name on the fly-leaf. Well did I remember the book, for it was the only one which he had called for the Indies.

As I opened it, a folded paper fluttered from between the leaves to the floor. It was a letter addressed to me in London, and I saw that it was Trembling like a leaf, I read these words:

"Dear Marian—Forgive me if I do not come up as early as I had planned. Little Miss Dean has begged me to do her a favor. The poor girl has a lover, an honest, steady fellow, but her father, who is a hard-hearted old man, is opposing the match. I have, however, some influence with him, I have consented to try to induce him to consent, I send this note together with the copy of Longfellow's poems, and I beg you to please await patiently the coming of your lover."

The spring sunlight stole into the little room where I sat, stirring my own feelings, and I felt that I was upon my clasped hands, I was full of bitter grief. So, we were separated forever, and I, in my blindness, had done it all.

Two weeks later, I came back to the old home by the sea. Almost the first person I met was Roger Dermott, who had just returned from his voyage. He met me swiftly up to him, and sturdily turned upon his heel and walked out. When the door had closed upon his retreating form the young woman sank nervously into a chair.

"He ought to have more sense than to take me at my word!"

Suddenly she stooped to the floor, picked up a small ivory tablet that had dropped from Algernon's pocket, pressed it passionately to her lips, bowed her head upon her hands, and sobbed aloud.

The afternoon passed. The afternoon sun, gliding the pretentious spires and cupolas of a small town when a middle-aged man with a bag in his hand opened the gate in front of a row of neat, well-kept houses, and knocked briskly upon the steps, and knocked at the door.

A lady answered the knock—a lady well preserved, but no longer young. The stranger bowed his head, and his hair was beginning to turn gray, but time had evidently dealt with him leniently, and care had led to deep traces on his brow. He spoke:

"The gentleman of the house—am I dreaming? Isn't that Miss Elsie Angus? Or rather," and he smiled, "isn't this the lady that was once Miss Elsie Angus?"

"I am Miss Angus," she answered, "and you are Algernon Penton. I recognized you as soon as I saw you. Won't you come in?"

"Well, well," said the middle-aged traveler, as he sat in an easy chair in the front parlor a few minutes later, and looked with interest at the face of the lady, "who would have thought of meeting you here? And you tell me you are still Miss Angus? Is this your home?"

"It is my brother's. He is a widower. I keep house for him."

"And you have never been married?"

"No."

Tobacco and Baldness.

London Globe: A medical man is responsible for the theory that the smoking of tobacco tends to develop baldness. For the reason that a certain mysterious disease is attributed, sooner or later, to tobacco. But there were brave men before Agamemnon, and there was disease before the days of Sir Walter Raleigh. Let us see what a lighted torch, which is the hair, was wont to burn his thinning locks forward over his brow in order to cloak his baldness, and Elshah certainly could have preserved his hair at the period when he was assailed by rival boys. From earth's earliest ages there have surely been men walking under the exasperating, flaming white and smooth, and we altogether protest, therefore, against the addition of baldness to the cumulative charges brought against tobacco.

SHATTERED ROMANCE

"It does, Mr. Penton."

The Man from New York—There are 10 more of 'em.

The Driver—Up in Nevada they ladie it out in bushes.

The Lady from Maine—Well, maybe they drink it, but you don't see it in Maine, like in California.

The Man from New York—Tastes better taken in secret?

No reply.

The Driver (to everybody)—How any of you been to Barstow? When I was a lady? Why, Barstow's the garding spot of California. Say, but it's the hot hole. Why they hev to feed the hens packed ice there to keep 'em from layin' hard-boiled eggs.

The Lady from California—Huh!

The Driver—And that ain't all. A while ago one of them Southern Californians drove a car over the edge of a crater, an' turned on the gas. Three days after they hev him in see how he was gittin' on. He reached out and said, "Git me my overcoat, I'm chilly."

The Lady from California—I don't believe you ever was in California.

The Driver—Yes I was. Lots of holes! Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, Sandagay, an' Monterey. I drove that car all the way to swim at Monterey. You can't say anything against Los Angeles.

The Driver—Looks like 30 cents to me with the gas.

The Lady from California—You don't seem to like any place.

The Driver—Yes, I do.

The Lady from California—Where, I'd like to know.

The Driver—Right hyar. This is the garding spot. Why, nobody ever dies here. Say, it's that healthy, all right! Why, we ain't got no cemetery!

The Lady from California—Do you mean to say it's healthier than California?

The Driver—Why, lady, an 1800-year-old man frisks around here like a year-old boy in a uniform.

Roosevelt declares he'll "sorap with trouble-seekers and reach for the point of their jaws." Some people's jaws go so fast they are hard to catch, but it is well to remember that a barking dog always meets some other dog just a little bit better.

The Sultan of Sulu, who appears to be a lulu, draws $125 per month from Uncle Sam, or from the Philippine government, as a subsidy for peace. Although there is a high tariff in Sulu the cost of living is evidently much less than here—clothing at least being more abbreviated, still it will be interesting to know how his royal ribs can support fourteen wives on that income.

The hay fever season is about over and the hay fever jokers can be laid away for future use.

Mayor Gynor seems to be determined to have something to say about what he is going to run for anyway.

Christus returns from South Dakota show that more than half of the population are members of some church. Well, more than half of the population went from Nebraska, and they are all good people.

"So far none of our aviators has been successful enough to break into vaudeville," says the Detroit Free Press. No, they generally break their necks before they get a chance to bore the public in that way.

"My, what will happen if Roosevelt with his big stick and the sultan of Sulu with his war club should join forces?" says the Waterloo Reporter. My, what about the fourteen wives?

There is a counterfeit $10,000 bill in circulation. We have looked all through ours and it isn't there.

Plymouth church property in Chicago has been sold and the congregation will seek a more desirable location in which to erect a new place of worship. The old place was too close to busy, sinful interests—too noisy for the rich christians. Ordinarily the business of the church is to get right next to the devil's headquarters and stamp out sin, meanness, degradation, poverty, but the rich christians—well, guess they have 'ell enough to keep them guessing.

The Sultan of the Sulu brought over a small bag containing $500,000 worth of pearls which he is going to sell to get a little spending money. The sultan evidently heard that this was a great country for suckers, but he would better look out for the sharks. Talk about your whiskey drinking, cigarette smoking and opium eating, is there anything going these days in the foot-killing line that beats auto racing.

A York county farm that was sold last March at $15 per acre was a few days since sold for $140 per acre. Nebraska land seems to be selling at whatever price the owner sees fit to ask.—Auburn Granger.

Yes, but we can beat that record here in Wayne county.

Down in Brenna precinct the farmers have a new plan of making work for the thrashers. They plant one stack in a setting but when the thrashers get to it they compelled the farmer to haul all the stacks to one point, making lots of work for Billy Assenheimer's hands.

The fool-killer got in his job at Crystal lake last Sunday. The man who rocked the boat was the only one drowned.

A Madison boy doesn't care whether he goes to heaven or not, according to the Post. His mother told him he'd not get there unless he was good, and the imp replied: "Well, mother, I can't expect to go every where. I have been to two picture shows this week."

I'll bet Don Cunningham's ears are red, if he has an inkling of what the Wayne girls are saying about him. "The very idea of Don Cunningham advertising for 'dates,' and that in the Democrat where everybody would know about it," we have been unable to make any engagements for you as yet, Don, and the girls have sent the Democrat word that "there is simply nothing doing."

Dave Surber suggests that to keep things going—for the Democrat—we offer a Duroc male pig or a Jersey calf with the Democrat, then the farmers would be interested. Tain't a bad idea, only pigs and calves just at present come high as an airship. We might easier give you as a premium a real live "by dad," and the supply would just about fill the demand for such purposes. Then, too, it would be a prize the up-to-date, rat-crowned girl isn't likely to acquire in any other way.

The citizen living in Northeast Nebraska who doesn't vote for P. H. Kohl for state senator simply doesn't know which side his bread is buttered. The election of Mr. Kohl neither gives us saloons nor takes any away, but it does mean a good, long pull in getting for this section of the state what we ought to have had a good many years ago, but never will get until we send some live men down to Lincoln.

Madison Post: There is trouble ahead for the women. The hobble skirt is there and the new style fall hats are worn down over the eyes. So she can't see and she can't run—now what is the poor girl going to do when she is chased by a bull?

Don't be unduly alarmed, brother. An ordinary, well-bred bull would simply take such an object as you have pictured as an abnormal mushroom.

The safest and healthiest way to travel after all is walking. "Back to the walk" should soon be the slogan, and let the autos and flying machines be used to kill off the criminally rich.

It looks a bit peculiar but decidedly appropriate that the only pictures seen on Main street of Senator Burkett hang in the Adams morgue. This is on the road by dad.

Say, if a fellow was awfully thirsty, and waiting for that saloon to open at Carroll, wouldn't he be in a Texas state of mind?

Of course Burkett didn't have time to debate with our next United States senator from Nebraska. Burkett wouldn't be on safe ground to hold a joint debate with himself, and that in the dark.

Pingrey C. Hughes is "paying the freight" these days and knows how it feels to have the telephone company break it off in charges. Being boss of the local lines it cost Pingrey nothing to send a message to a young lady at Laurel, but the girl was a mile out of town and the unfeeling operator at the other end of the line stuck on two dollars for messenger fees. P. C. will carry his phone messages—next his heart hereafter.

It is certainly galling to the public that gail stones only get the honest men in public life. "Spouse these cheap, slippery, Cannon skates spit 'em out?"

Mrs. Rachel Richardson.

Death came to the aged mother of L. O. Richardson last Tuesday morning, the infirmities of old age being the cause of death, she being 86 years and 7 months old. The funeral is being held this Thursday afternoon from the Methodist church, Rev. Horst officiating.

Buetow—Hanson.

A large and happy crowd attended the marriage of Miss Esther Buetow, Mr. Dean Hanson, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Buetow, Tuesday, Oct. 4th, at high noon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Corkey of the Presbyterian church. After a sumptuous wedding dinner the newly wedded couple, accompanied by many friends, came to Wayne in autos and Mr. and Mrs. Hanson took the 2:00 o'clock train for Omaha, where they will enjoy the Ak-Sar-Ben festivities.

The bride is a most charming and accomplished young lady, and her husband one of the very best and most prosperous young farmers of Wayne county.

Bargholz—Bleeke.

The marriage of Miss Ella Bargholz and Wm. Bleeke occurred at high noon Wednesday, at the German Lutheran church, Rev. Karpenstein officiating. After the ceremony the wedding party took autos for the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Bargholz, near Laporte, where the wedding festivities were kept up until an early hour today, a great number of invited guests being present. Misses Emma Harder and Ella Bargholz of Winside were maids to the bride, and Merman Meyer and Julius Hinrichs best men. The groom is one of the best known and most popular young farmers of the county and his bride a most charming young woman. Here's hoping happiness and health will greet them at every mile-stone through life.

Jury List November Term Court.

District court convenes Nov. 21st and the following jury is called to report on Nov. 28th: Geo. Dreyson, Geo. Hornby, J. B. McDonald, Morris Ahern, Wm. Fisher, John Prince, Neils Herman, Aug. Ziemer, L. C. Gildersleeve, D. W. Noaks, Wm. Petersen, W. W. Fletcher, Otto Fredericksen, Jas. Grier, Ernest Strate, C. M. Madden, L. M. Owen, Rudolph Lange, John Francis, R. A. McEachen, Lyman Miller, Wm. Roberts, Louis Johnson, J. W. Ziegler.

Shake Up the Old Depot.

The evident intention of the railroad company to make no improvements at the depot for the next one hundred years has filled many people here with resentment—they have been full of disgust for the last one hundred. No use to dwell on conditions; it is the unsightly old frame shack that just filled the bill thirty years ago; an 8-foot platform that is invariably full of trucks, loaded ten or twelve feet high, with cream cans, chickens, trunks, etc., and dodging around this conglomeration there may be from fifty to two hundred people off and on the train. A few feet away, in front of the ladies' waiting room, stands two objects that any live town would have ordered removed twenty years ago.

Just at present the company is replacing the narrow plank platform with brick, an assurance that there will be no terminal improvements made here during the present century—unless it has to. The Democrat understands that conditions at Holdrege were similar and that the railway commissioners were called in, the evidence submitted and the railroad company ordered to erect suitable buildings. The trouble with Wayne is the "knockers." Some fellows are afraid and others that "it will cost something." An effort was made a few years ago to open the street east of Main across the railroad tracks, Main street being the only thoroughfare, and it could have been done, but certain parties soon took up the company's side of the case, and a proposition worth ten thousand dollars that could have been successfully prosecuted by the expenditure of a few hundred was lost. The present depot facilities at Wayne will be found amply sufficient until some of the $1.24 citizens become a more valuable asset to the town at large.

The managers of Wayne, West Point, Madison, Wisner, Norfolk and Stanton have entered into an agreement towards forming a league next summer. They agree that a two month's season beginning about June 15th, will be alright with two games a week, possibly Tuesdays and Thursday. If the league season closes about the middle of August it will give the different towns a chance to play at the fairs and tournaments that are held in the fall. Limiting the hired players to about three men will make it possible for the financial arrangements to be made and the cost so reasonable that no town will feel the keeping of a team that in the field will be a burden. T. ROOSEVELT—A HABIT.

"Boston, it has been asserted, is a state of mind; T. Roosevelt, a habit. Good habits may be acquired, but like health they are not catching. On the other hand, the T. Roosevelt habit is not only contagious but liable to become epidemic.

The diagnosticians of the old school assured us that it was a kind of eczema which had broken out on the body politic; extremely irritating and only skin deep, but like its old friend and near relation, the seven-year itch, would disappear at the end of that period. "Just grin and bear it," they told us, and "for God's sake don't scratch."

So, we voted her straight, and now see what we've got! There is no doubt about the symptoms; that we are inoculated is certain, and while Elba has been mentioned, the germ is a long way from being isolated and no St. Helena is in sight.

The Teddy phantasia is what we've got, view it as we may. We can name it but can we characterize it? It is difficult to describe a symptom which makes us see double when sober and crooked when straight; whose virtues show as through a microscope and whose faults are revealed as through a telescope—reversed. As some one has said of Christian science: "We are here confronted with the greatest cook, or the greatest bunk of the age. Which is it? Of what are the American people obsessed? A piggy atop the shoulder of the blind goddess, or a colossus 'that doth bestride the world'?" What is it, microbe or mastodon?

Will some unborn Carlyle, when time has given perspective to the view, bowing the knee of hero-worship, find here prophet, priest and king (Mahomet, Luther and Napoleon) wrapt in one? or will some future analyst strip off the mask of cant and hypocrisy and find beneath the bacteria of bully, brag and bluster?

How do your glasses track? Do you see a liliption or a gargantuan, from the laud of the broddingaug? Will the children of the future be taught as we are now to compare the big stick with the hammer of Thor, wielded by a Hercules, or to an inflated bladder in the hands of a harlequin? Will the future historian compare San Juan Hill with Lodi and Arcola, or will the truth be known that the greatest contest at that rabbit warren was that between the Colonel and the Coops, as to whom should be assigned the doubtful honors? Will the Brownsville incident depict another Lincoln, merciful and just, or a hero of the spot light clad in the "mantle of a brief authority?"

When the Autobiographical Chapter "How I named my Successor" is written, will the shade of Warwick hand his title "Kingmaker" over with alacrity and say "Teddy you're it?" or will he mournfully murmur, "I've made many Kings in my time and queens too for that matter, and both ways from this ace but never from the jack, Nevil!"

When the treaty of Portsmouth is mentioned will the wraith of Tallyrand be summoned from the shadows long enough to repeat the words of another diplomatist "farewell, a long farewell to all my greatness" and then be ordered back—back to the farm, or will the fact be established that two nations at war, one physically the other financially busted simply decide to call it off. Will the painter of the future depict an humble suppliant soliciting a recommendation for a job? or will he be posed as a pompous Pickens ordering from his stately prisoner his one time loyal friend and benefactor? Will the future pantheon disclose Raleigh passing his cloaks, emblem of Knightly Chivalry, to this Modern Bayard, "sans peur et sans reproche" or will he be seen assigning a truthful plucky woman to the Ananias Club with the curt dictum, "the incident is closed."

Lord Melbourne said of Macaulay "I wish I was as cocksure of just one thing as he is of everything" What will that shrinking, modest, violet Macaulay do when he bumps into our flora—fauna—iknowwhatist? I'll tell you what he'll do. He'll hire a taxiplane and he'll hike him to the north pole and go into cold storage with Doc Cook, who has resided there since denied admittance to the "Ananias Club."

Daily there emerges from this self-winding Strossburg clock the solemn procession of musty platitudes, possessing all the novelty of the decalogue, abetted by the brassy timbre of the phonograph.

While deprecating the chicanery, craft and deception the land, we see him with calm self-complacency, like another "Jackdaw of Rehms," appropriating to himself every glittering generality from Sir Thomas Moore's Utopian dream to Bryan's "Prince of Peace."

Fresh—nothing if not fresh—from the jungle, we find our Modern Nimrod—Caesar—Cromwell, glibly and jauntily telling poor Old England how to run her colonies. Holy Hastings wouldn't that make you laugh! But it didn't, you took it too seriously. That's the joke of it. With two hoops and a hip the Pope's prerogatives, are defined, then off to France that the Parisians may see the real "man on horseback."

After showing the Emperor William how an army is maneuvered, he needs must go to Holland and tell the dutch housewives, who are situated much as the old woman who lived in a shoe, how to raise babies, when what they want to be shown is how to not. On hurry call, he hikes to merry England and with all the nonchalance of a Deadwood poker player, shows the English how to "bury the King." Takes the bird consens before breakfast and finds we beat them by a bird, the bird of freedom of course, which he assures George with a nudge, "your former namesake counted before it was hatched."

Must have his little joke don't cher know, but (George failed to see it. Told George he'd had a bully time, especially at his pa's funeral. George could see that, so they shook. Invited George over to see him "and don't forget the queen, we're a little bit cramped for room right now but that'll be fixed."

"Plenty of nobility in my country not the Duke of Darham who's in trade, besides there's a little 'mixture' in his line which might not be to your liking. We'll give you a good time, George, you'll be welcome."

Consulted together as the social amenities among sovereigns and mutually agreed that as rulers they were bounden to refuse to eat at the same table with their host, if there chanced to be a shortage of political purity.

"Good by, George, don't forget to write and let us know when you come. The present lease expires March 1st 1913."

Now do you know who struck Billy Patterson? He also killed cock robin. And knows how old Ann is.

WAYNE COUNTY Corn Show

The Second Annual Corn Show and Domestic Science Exhibition Will be Held at Wayne

Nov. 9-10-11

The Wayne Commercial Club are going to great expense and undertaking a great deal of hard work to pull off these corn shows each year, but we feel that the benefit derived is worth the effort and expense.

Good ideas for improvement in all agricultural work are sure to come from observation and comparison of the exhibits, and from the exchange of information which can be made so conveniently at such a time.

Lectures by men and women who are trained in this line of work at our State University, will add very much to the educational value of the show.

Pamphlets are issued from the State Agricultural School, with all the necessary information on how to select your exhibit. These pamphlets can be had by applying to your district school teacher, or address a card to the County Superintendent and the book will be sent to you.

The committees are busy at work now getting out the premium list which will be ready for distribution in about ten days.

The success of such a worthy undertaking is worth a good effort by every one of us. You can help make this show this year a greater success by bringing in an exhibit in some of the classes, and we will do the rest of the work necessary to make this year's corn show a great success.

ing, when plans will be set forth for the work. Bring any of Browning's poems that you may have in your library. We shall be glad to have you present whether you have made up your mind to join the class or not. Professor House will read and comment on a few of the poems at this first meeting. It is believed that the class will be interesting from the start.

The visit of Dr. L. Ludden, Secretary of the Board of Education, made Monday a red-letter day to the students and faculty of the Normal. His speech during chapel hour was filled with helpful thoughts expressed with an earnestness, a wit, and a fluency that occasionally rose into a noble eloquence, such as won the attention and the hearts of all. He spent considerable time with President Conn and Registrar Redmond going over the details of administration and expressed pleasure at the care with which these matters are being handled by the executive office of the institution. He was also well satisfied with the attendance, the quality of the instruction and was enthusiastic as to the outlook.

On Thursday morning, September 29th, the students listened to the first convocation address by President Conn. The subject was that of "Habit." The speaker showed that habit is not merely negative, as has been frequently indicated, but rather an active, vital force in every life. A bad habit is as a living enemy, tearing the character to pieces, good character a beneficent friend, cooperating with every good choice. A person may make, a refuge in times of disaster and struggle.

U. S. CONN, PRESIDENT work, and the indications are that Professor Wiley will be able to start with a fine class when he organizes his work about October 15th.

Mr. Charles R. Chinn is a new member of the senior class. Mr. Chinn is a graduate of the scientific course of the Nebraska Normal College and will complete this year the course in the Normal School that leads to a professional life certificate.

The Normal foot-ball team was defeated by the Wayne high school last Friday evening by a score of 5 to 0. The only score of the game came when Strahan of the high school, on the Normal 5-yard line, made a brilliant 40-yard run around end, and advanced the ball over the goal line.

The union social held by the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. on Saturday evening of last week was a great success. It is the purpose of the officers of these associations to have regular meetings for a social good time every month, and we are sure these events will be looked forward to with pleasure by the student body.

The students were somewhat surprised and perhaps a little startled when President Conn told them at the chapel service on Tuesday morning that all the written work of the students in any subject whatever would be graded with reference to spelling. While it is not possible for the Normal to spend much time in teaching the three R's, yet it is possible and will be the practice of the institution to insist that the students be proficient in the fundamentals. Such a policy will commend itself to thoughtful people who are interested in matters of education.

The first meeting of the Browning Class will be held at the high school building at 7:30 Thursday evening of this week. All interested are earnestly invited to be present at the first meet-

There are those who have the bad habit of fault-finding. "The Kicker" is a destructive force, or at the best, merely negative. He does not help to make things better.

Again, there are those who lean on others until the habit of dependence is fixed and can scarcely be broken. Some are too easily satisfied with their own achievements. This state of mind produces sloth and failure. Hold a reasonable estimate of yourself and a fair estimate of your surroundings. Then you will form the right habits and will be a constructive, not a destructive, person; a helper, not a hindrance.

The students were much interested in this earnest and practical address. It reflected the helpful and sensible attitude that has characterized all the actions of President Conn since taking hold of this institution and given assurance of a bright future for the State Normal School at Wayne.

While attendance at chapel is required of the Normal, it is the purpose of President Conn to so conduct the general exercises of the school that unless in a case of necessity a student cannot afford to miss a single chapel period. This the students found to be true during the past week, as there was some special feature every day. On Wednesday Professor House, who was called on for an address, worked out a pleasant little surprise for the students and members of the faculty. After speaking briefly on the subject of Literature, he made special mention of the poem by Bryant, "To a Water-Fowl," giving the facts which suggested to the author the writing of this beautiful selection. As Professor House concluded his part he called upon Miss Ethelwen Hall, a member of his class in advanced writing and speaking, who appeared upon the platform and recited in a very pleasing manner this poem.

No Hope for B. P. Petersen.

Wayne county friends of B. P. Petersen will be sorry to learn that the doctors at Rochester, Minn., where B. P. went two or three weeks ago, gave him no hope for recovery, although he is still at Rochester and going to stay there for a time. Tuberculosis of the bone is eating B. P.'s life away; the disease now being from his foot to his hip.

Mrs. Petersen and his brother arrived home from Rochester yesterday, B. P. looking worse than when he left home.

S. H. Alexander and W. W. Theobald came in from Denver last week on a short business trip and at the same time visited many of their friends.

While there they conferred with the local directors of the King Solomon Tunnel and Development Company in which many of our citizens are interested. They report that everything is going along nicely at the mine and that the machinery is now being run by electric power. It is expected that this will be more economical than steam and much more satisfactory in many ways.

At a meeting of the directors at the home of Treasurer O. A. King it was decided to advance the price of the stock to par $1.00 per share on October 20th, and withdraw it from sale on October 31st. When this company was introduced to this community the stock was selling at 20 cents per share but the properties have so increased in value by the additions of other claims and the development work done that the stock is said to be cheaper today at $1.00 per share than it was at one-fifth of the price at that time. Much credit is due Treasurer King, Theo. Duerig and S. R. Theobald, the local directors and all of the loyal stockholders and supporters of Wayne County. The many friends of Messrs. Alexander and Theobald hope that business will frequently call them to our thriving city.

Soon All Housewives Will Know the superiority of Splendid, the flour made, first, only from nice, smooth, plump, No. 1 hard wheat of a rich brownish color which is thoroughly washed and steam dried, then begins the grinding which converts the golden grain into flour.

A boy five years of age can turn a grindstone just about as well as his grandfather who, perhaps, turned one all his life. Grindstones turn just the same as they did 50 years ago--anybody can turn a grindstone.

Not so with making flour. To be a proficient miller requires years of constant experience--knowing what to do and what not to do, at the proper time. Every sack of Splendid is a product of 36 years actual experience combined with the very latest machinery and up-to-date milling methods.

There is a reason why Splendid renders superior and satisfactory results. It is made right, made upon honor and made to please the housewife.

Just how soon you will be a constant user of Splendid no one can determine, but the time is not far distant. Every day this flour demonstrates its merits in three hundred homes. The demand is phenomenal. The one factor of QUALITY is responsible for this condition. Join the army of Splendid users, connect with a flour made in the sanitary way and, remember, if it does not "make good", I will.

Splendid users kindly send me a loaf of bread next baking day. I will send the money back with little Johnnie or Mary

6,000 Gal. Tank Car NATIONAL LIGHT OIL to Arrive about October 20

'Tis few people who do not fully realize the superiority of National Light Oil. The introduction of this high grade product into over 300 country homes has brought about an active demand for an oil which will produce a brilliant light, free from smoke and offensive odor. National Light merits all of these qualifications and every gallon is positively guaranteed to please.

My canvass, supplying farmers in 50 gallon quantities, has indeed been a glowing success. Every patron sold last year had a good word for National Light and placed an order to be filled from tank car soon to arrive. Your purchase of 50 gallons of high-grade oil and a serviceable tank affords a saving of over $3.00 besides eliminating the disagreeable custom of transporting old cans filled with oil which often wastes. And it's not uncommon to spoil several dollars worth of groceries during the year.

GET THE PROGRESSIVE IDEA--Phone your order for 50 gallons National Light Oil while I can offer you the special $3.00 saving. Use 5 gallons, if you are not thoroughly satisfied it's the BEST oil you ever used the full purchase price will be refunded. This is no experiment--300 farmers around Wayne have profited by this manner of buying and every one is a friend to the proposition. When testing the qualities of National Light Oil be sure and change your lamp wick--they are free at my store. Ask for them

PAPER DYNAMITED AND MANY PERISH IN A FIERCE BLAZE

Manager Declares That Union Foes of the Publication Are Responsible for the Outrage.

- Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 4.—Following is a list of the dead so far as known:
- HARVEY C. ELDER, assistant city editor, leaped from third story window and died in hospital.
- CHARLES E. LOVELAKE, copy editor, leaped from third story window and died in hospital.

- R. L. SAWYER, telegraph operator, aged 37, married, two children, body believed in ruins.

Los Angeles, Oct. 3.—The building and plant of the Los Angeles Times, one of the best known newspapers of the southwest, which General Harrison Gray Otis is editor and principal owner, was completely destroyed by an explosion and fire shortly after 1 a. m. today, resulting in the death of upwards of 20 of its employes and a financial loss of nearly half a million dollars.

The management lays the blame of the explosion to the labor unions, with which the paper has long been engaged in bitter warfare. It is charged that unidentified parties set off a charge of dynamite in a blind alley which ran into the center of the building, completely wrecking the interior and setting it on fire from roof to basement.

Explosion Heard for Miles.

The force of the explosion was felt for miles, and all the windows in the vicinity of the Times building at First street and Broadway were shattered. Between 30 and 75 employes of the building were killed and many others were injured. It is not known how many lives were lost. The heads of the paper, including Assistant General Manager Harry Chandler and narrow escapes from death, many of them having left the building a short time before the explosion.

The building was equipped with gas fittings and the force of the explosion was so great that the gas which was ignited in every part of the building. No other cause but that of dynamite explosion was known at the time and until the whole case of a Western Union telegraph operator, William F. Egan, who stated he detected the odor of gas throughout the building earlier in the night and threatened to report it to the police. A few minutes after the explosion the police arrested a man named Harry Plake, making his way through the debris by means of a ladder. He was locked up on suspicion. Another man, William Lewis, was arrested. The police left without charges.

Wesley Reeves, secretary of Mr. Chandler has not been found since the fire. Mr. Chandler believes he lost his life in the building. Chandler's office was wrecked by the explosion.

Charges Second Attempt.

Spreading of the explosion Mr. Chandler said:

"You can say for me that there is no doubt that this terrible outrage can be traced to the use of dynamite. The building was destroyed and many lives were killed. I do not know how many lives were lost, but they cannot kill the Times."

The cause of the explosion was caused by a charge of dynamite placed in the blind alley. No other agency could have caused it. There was no boiler to explode. There was no gas in the place excepting a small can of gas in the composing room. The building was equipped with gas, but no gas explosion could have caused it. For years we have been receiving threatening letters from people who ought to be in jail.

Orders New Equipment.

Two hours after the fire Mr. Chandler was busy writing telegrams ordering printing presses, typesets and stereotyping outfits for a new plant in New York. Mr. Chandler was gotten out today from the composing and press rooms of the Los Angeles Herald and from an auxiliary of the Times in another part of the city.

Has Had Long Labor War.

The Times was established in 1881 and General Otis purchased the paper six months ago. He started for years the paper and the Times have been engaged in a war with the labor unions, starting with a strike by the members of the Typographical union. He is on his way back to Los Angeles from the City of Mexico, whither he went to accept the representative of the government by appointment of President Taft to attend the Mexican centennial celebration. General Otis is expected to arrive in Los Angeles today.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Stalmsmith and daughter Clara left last Saturday on a few weeks visit to Nacoma, Kan., to bask among the sunflowers and old friends.

H. H. Tangeman and family are back from South Dakota where the crops all dried out this season. Mr. Tangeman says they got big crops last year but nothing doing this. They are in the same neighborhood as the Lloyds. Mr. Tangeman says they will stay about Wayne for a few months.

Here's a little article from the pen of Will Maupin, one of Bryan's common editors, that will do you fellows who measure about five-sixteenths of an inch between the eyes some good:

Mr. Bryan's announcement of his attitude in the present campaign ought to be sufficient answer to those fanatical and prejudiced people who are attempting to besmirch the personal character of James C. Dahlgren. We may wisely and fairly differ from Mr. Dahlgren on some of the things which he espouses, but we cannot honestly and fairly attack his private record as a citizen. As the matter now stands Dahlgren now stands more than a fair show of election. If his opponents undertake to make their campaign on abuse of the man instead of argument against the things he stands for as a candidate, they will elect him by an overwhelming majority.

In the language of an old-time politician, "Party lines are shot all to hell in this campaign." Reduced to its last analysis this is a campaign for or against prohibition. That it is attempted to disguise it beneath the cloak of county option will not deceive anybody, and the attempt to thus deceive is not to the credit of those who make such pretense of virtue.

We may not wholly agree with Mr. Dahlgren on some things which he advocates, but we may at least, like Mr. Bryan, give him credit for having the manhood and the courage to stand out in the open instead of trying to masquerade.

This is not a campaign of men, but of measures. As for this humble little newspaper, it prefers to support a square and honest man on a poor platform rather than a trimmer and a dodger on a platform. Bad men will not carry out a good platform, but honest men will minimize the evils of a bad platform.

Do not be deceived by any efforts that may be put forth to make this a campaign of personalities. The issues are clearly joined, and upon those issues the campaign should be fought.
