

DEDICATION SERVICE TONIGHT

All Wayne is invited and expected to visit our new city building this evening and inspect it thoroughly, participate in the festivities and enjoy the program planned for your entertainment and feel rich in the fact that Wayne citizens have a building that will be of great convenience to them for years to come.

On Friday evening the first Firemen's ball will be held, and as the proceeds are to be used to properly furnish the firemen's room on the first floor a most unanimous support is assured. In fact the sale of tickets has been large, but if any reader feels that he should help the cause he is at liberty to purchase as many tickets as he desires. Both this and Friday evenings will long be remembered as events in Wayne history.

"Platform" Kelley is the way he is known, and he is known as "Platform" Kelly because of his insistent demand that his party keep its platform pledges. That's a pretty good kind of a man to tie to. As secretary of state he will see to it that the people get what is coming to them.

The Last Meeting

A regular session of the Wilson-Marshall club was held in Jones' hall Tuesday evening, and those present say in point of interest it was the best meeting of the season. The program consisted of a reading by Albert R. H. Miller, an address by Tracy Kohl, a discussion by Superintendent Kemp relative to the proposed constitutional amendments and an explanation of the ballot by County Clerk Reynolds.

Tracy Kohl chose for his subject "Reasons Why the Young Man Should be Interested in Politics." He emphasized the thought that upon the young man must soon rest the responsibility of directing the affairs of government and that he should be prepared to meet this responsibility. Instances were given from history to show what has been accomplished by the young man in the fields of science and literature as well as in the affairs of state. The names of Alexander the Great, William Jennings Bryan, Theodore Roosevelt, Byron and Shelley, were among those mentioned by the speaker. Although but eighteen years of age Mr. Kohl gives promise of a strong, public speaker. He has an excellent voice, a good vocabulary, and is clear and logical in his reasoning. His talk was very much appreciated by the club members, as was the reading by Mr. Miller.

The meeting was then conducted as sort of an open forum in which the initiative and referendum and other questions of the day were considered. Those participating in the discussion were F. A. Berry, C. J. Rundell, Dr. J. T. House, C. A. Berry and Senator Phil H. Kohl.

The session of Tuesday evening will perhaps be the last meeting of the year, although several have expressed themselves as being in favor of continuing the club or a similar organization, to meet monthly for the discussion of questions of current interest and importance. While this club was organized to promote the interest of Woodrow Wilson for president of the United States, the aim has been to make the meetings educational and not partisan. Those supporting other candidates for the presidency have been attending the meetings and they have felt free to take a part on the program or join in the discussions.

At the close of the meeting a vote of thanks was extended to D. A. Jones for the courtesy in furnishing the use of the hall free of charge during the campaign. Treasurer Toombs reported that there was enough money in the treasury to meet all bills and the meeting then adjourned.

DEATH OF OUR VICE PRESIDENT

The Nation Today Mourns the Death of Vice President James S. Sherman Who Passed to the Great Beyond Last Night.

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 30.—After a long illness Vice President James Schoolcraft Sherman died in his home in this city tonight at 9:42 o'clock of uraemic poison, caused by Bright's disease. He had been sinking since early morning and it was realized that death was only a question of hours.

Vice-president Sherman was born in Utica, N. Y., October 24, 1855. He received an academic and collegiate education, graduating from Hamilton college in the class of 1878. He was admitted to the bar in 1880. He also served in these public positions: Mayor of Utica, 1884; Delegate to the republican national convention in 1892; chairman of New York state republican convention in 1895 and again in 1900; was chairman of the national republican congressional committee in 1906, Fifty-third, Fifty-fourth, Fifty-sixth, Fifty-seventh, Fifty-eighth, Fifty-ninth and Sixtieth congresses.

The Norris Meeting

When the Democrat made mention last week of the coming speech by Congressman Norris and was afraid to try to tell his politics, we had only thought as to which brand of republican he was; but after he had spoken, several who heard him said that it was a good democratic speech. It certainly was non-partisan so far as the editor heard, and we thought at one time near the close he was going to say, "now let us pray." But he turned the words another way. According to his talk he is a follower of some of the Bryan ideas in regard to not clinging to a party when you know it is wrong—only he is following so far behind that we fear he will not catch up. The "insurgent" republicans, as the speaker called his faction of the party are starting well, but they did not start soon enough. The progressive democrats have been in the thorny path he has started in for 16 years, and before them the Populists trod the way alone. Come on, brother, we cannot wait for you, but hope that you catch up. When the progressives come over to a tariff reduction, the destruction of the trusts instead of regulation of the evil, and will add the income tax to their inheritance tax plank; come out on a one term proposition for president—and that not a life term, and the enactment and enforcement against the great food monopolies of a law giving the purchaser and consumer adequate protection against poison, they will be coming nobly to the help of the pioneer parties in these reforms. We are glad that one of their leaders can make a speech that sounds like a democratic speech, and invite them to come all the way into the fold.

The meeting here as well attended for a political meeting this year and the audience listened closely to the talk. Candidate Cook was not present.

Baker-Ross

At the Catholic parsonage Wednesday morning occurred the marriage of Miss Gertrude A. Baker and Mr. Elza Ross, both of this city. Rev. Wm. Kearns performed the ceremony at 6:30 o'clock in the presence of only the immediate families.

Following the ceremony an elaborate wedding breakfast was served after which the happy couple took a car to Wakefield and there boarded the train for Winnebago where they will live on the farm.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wendel Baker and is a lady of many graces and accomplishments. She was formerly employed as chief operator at the local telephone exchange which position she filled most creditably. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Ross and is a man of sterling worth. For the past two years he has been farming for his brother at Winnebago.

The congratulations and best wishes of a host of friends accompany them to their new home.

A Beautiful Home Wedding

One of the brilliant weddings of the season took place Wednesday, October 30th at high noon when Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mellor gave in marriage their daughter, Zoe, to Mr. Stanley McCook Huffman of Elgin, Neb. Promptly at the appointed hour the beautiful strains of Lohengrin's wedding march was played by Miss Marie Swanson, harpist, of Omaha, and the bride leaning on the arm of her father descended the stairs, the bridal couple taking their places under a canopy of ferns and white roses in the east room. Rev. Alexander Corkey then pronounced the impressive words which joined these two hearts, using the ring ceremony.

The bride wore a blue traveling suit with hat, gloves and shoes to match and a blue chiffon waist over green and gold cloth, with a collar of hand-made lace. She carried a shower bouquet of Taft roses and swansonia. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Mary Mellor whose gown was of heavy black and white corded silk over white messaline trimmed with shadow lace, cut crystal and frosted lavender buds. A black and lavender hat and a shower bouquet of violets completed a striking costume.

Mr. R. C. Huffman, brother of the groom, was best man.

The groom's gift to his bride was a string of gold beads and the bride's gift to her maid was a pair of gold bracelets.

After the ceremony an informal reception was held followed by an elegant two course breakfast.

Mr. and Mrs. Huffman left immediately amid a shower of rice and old shoes for a short trip and will be at home after December 1st at Elgin, Neb.

The out-of-town guests were Mrs. M. B. Huffman and Miss Kathryn Huffman of Neligh, Neb., Mr. and Mrs. George Seymour and son, Leonard, and Mr. R. C. Huffman of Elgin, Neb., Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Evans of O'Neill, Neb., Mr. and Mrs. George Mellor of Malvern, Iowa, Miss Dora McGurk of David City, Neb., Misses Eva Mellor, Genevieve Brooks of Brownell, Omaha, Miss Margurite Stowitts of Omaha, Messrs. Adrian Barstow, Ed Galagher and Hugh Birmingham of the university, Lincoln and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilson of Winside.

The bride is a lady of culture and a graduate of Brownell Hall, Oamha and has been prominent in church and social circles in this city for a number of years. The Democrat extends felicitations.

Death of Clara Rewinkel

Monday, October 28, 1912, the death messenger called at the home of Fred H. Rewinkel for the wife and mother.

Mrs. Clara Rewinkel was born in Cumming county, October 16, 1887, being 25 years and 12 days of age. She suffered for two weeks from kidney trouble before the end came.

The funeral is being held today at the German church northeast of Wayne conducted by Rev. Gerke, her pastor. A husband and one little child about one year of age besides numerous relatives and friends mourn her death.

Wilber Precinct Farmers Lose Hogs

An epidemic is cutting a deep swath in the hog crop of numerous farmers. H. C. Lyons has buried 63 head, and has but a few left. A. A. Smith has lost 80 pigs, and Mr. Cross has a number sick. Mr. Lyons says that he was unable to do anything for his except to bury them, and it was not a pleasant job to go out and plant $100 worth of hogs every day as he did for a time. He does not think that it is cholera, but some lung trouble that was making havoc with his herd. The sick ones refuse to eat and just pine away like a sick kitten.

GAY HALLOWE'EN FESTIVITIES

A Week of Many Social Events. O. E. S. Entertained by Masonic Brothers, Sunday School and Schools Indulge in Celebrating.

Last Friday evening the young people's Sunday school class of the Baptist church met at the church for a Halloween frolic—a progressive hunt. From the church about sixty started to find the sign of the night—a jack-o' lantern, which was to indicate that there were refreshments within. The first smiling face of fire called them in at the home of Wm. McVay and wife, where a diligent search of the basement revealed a treat of fruit. From here the trail led east, and terminated at the Sprague home in the northeast part of the city. Here the refreshments were doughnuts and milk. The cakes were filled with many different things, indicating the fortune of the one who received it. Some contained cotton, others money, and various emblems of wealth, health, happiness or misery. With only the moonshine to make things look spooky, ghost stories were told until time for departure. The Hughes home in the northwest part of town was the next place discovered with the proper sign without, where pumpkin pie, sandwiches and pickles were most heartily enjoyed while Miss Ina Hughes and Miss Hazel Norton told each one's fortune. After a social hour here all returned to the church parlors where a taffy pull and games closed this happy event. All voted it a most enjoyable affair.

At the opera house on Tuesday evening, October 29, the Masonic lodge entertained the Order of Eastern Star. The first part of the program consisted of short talks on "Funny Things As We See Them." Professor Hahn spoke on "Funny Things as I see Them in the Schoolroom." Professor Brittel mentioned "Funny Things as I See Them on the Streets." Professor Bright, "Funny Things as I Saw Them on the Ocean." A. R. Davis, "Funny Things as I See Them in Law and Court." J. G. Mines, "Funny Things as I Saw Them in Europe." This part of the program closed with the Passion Play given in moving picture. Following this those present enjoyed a social hour during which ice cream and wafers were served. Those on the reception committee were F. E. Gamble, W. H. Morris, Frank S. Morgan, C. M. Craven, J. M. Cherry and H. S. Crangle.

The ladies of the Minerva club and their husbands enjoyed a Halloween party at the cozy home of Mrs. E. J. Hunter last evening. The ladies and gentlemen came in ghost attire and remained thus during the entire evening. The rooms presented a typical spook appearance in pumpkins, jack-o' lanterns, corn stalks and autumn foliage. The lights were all covered with tiny pumpkins and the light from the fireplace brought forth many shadows. Fortunes and ghost stories were told and various contests enjoyed and at a late hour a hallowe'en luncheon was partaken of, such as pumpkin pie, doughnuts, grapes and nuts, apples and sweet cider. A very enjoyable evening was spent by those in attendance.

Miss Zoe Mellor was the honored guest at a beautifully appointed dinner last Saturday evening, given by five of her lady friends at the home of Mrs. E. S. Blair. The rooms were artistically decorated in autumn foliage. The color scheme being green and white, the place cards and favors were also in these colors. The table had a centerpiece of cysanthemums and tulle. Around this lay a wreath of smilax from which tiny green and white ribbons extended to the plate of each guest, which, when drawn, brought forth a handsome little favor. Green and white candles were used instead of lights and a rose adorned each plate. A profusion of ferns and smilax were also in evidence.

The Sophomores of the local high school entertained the Sophomores of Wakefield in the gymnasium last Friday evening. The rooms were very pretty in class colors, and cut flowers. The high school teachers were also present and those in attendance numbered about seventy-five. Various games and class velli made the evening interesting. Delicious refreshments were served. The boys and girls dispersed at a late hour, the Wakefield class feeling that they had been indeed royally entertained.

The Bible Study Circle met with Mrs. Ellis in their pleasant rooms over the restaurant. The meeting was well attended and ably led by Mrs. J. G. W. Lewis of the Normal school. Some new songs and choruses were sung. At the close of the helpful study all adjourned to meet with Mrs. Chas. Sellers in one week. You should not fail to attend this enthusiastic union Bible class.

Mrs. Horace Theobald was hostess at the meeting of the Tuesday club this week. Current Events furnished the chief topic of interest after which the remainder of the afternoon was spent socially. Mrs. Theobald then served a four course dinner at six o'clock. They meet next at the home of Mrs. L. A. Fanska.

Mrs. J. J. Williams entertained the ladies of the Acme club at a Kensington Monday afternoon at which each member was invited to bring a guest. The pleasant hours were passed in needle craft and sociability at the close of which the hostess served a dainty two course luncheon.

At the home of Mrs. T. B. Heckert, the Monday club carried out the following program this week: "Prominent Writers of the Day" by Mrs. Marsteller; "Books and Book Makers" by Mrs. Hess; and a lesson in Grammatical Errors by Mrs. Main. Mrs. Hess will entertain the ladies next week.

Mrs. Harry Fisher was hostess at the meeting of the U. D. club this week. The ladies responded to roll call by reciting their favorite poem, a general discussion following. The club meets in two weeks with Mrs. Wm. Morris, the meeting for next week being omitted.

The Junior Bridge Whist club held special meeting for the election of officers at the home of Miss Edna Neely last week at which the following were elected: President, Miss Reba Nangle; vice-president, Mrs. Wm. Mellor; secretary, Miss Mary Mellor and treasurer, Miss Alice Kate.

Mrs. Lambert Roe charmingly presided at a Kensington last Thursday afternoon at which about fifty ladies were present. The rooms were artistic in white cysanthemums. At the close of the pleasant afternoon ice cream and cake were served.

The Pioneer Bridge club was delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. Henry Ley last Friday. They meet with Mrs. Ellis tomorrow evening.

The Westminster Guild met with Miss Helen McNeal Monday evening where they studied another chapter on China.

The Minerva club will meet next week at the home of Mrs. Bert Brown for their regular meeting.

The Bridge Whist club will meet with Miss Edna Neely next Tuesday evening.

A number of Halloween parties are planned for this evening.

Why Food Prices Soar

A year ago the majority of a senate committee to investigate the cause of increased cost of living made a report whitewashing the protective tariff and putting the blame on a number of other causes. These other causes named were mostly of a frivolous nature, but in one case the committee came near to telling the truth. It mentioned increase in land values. The federal census presents figures that seem to confirm this. Of course increase in land values arising from conditions that make land more productive can not increase the price of commodities because under those circumstances the use of the land is not discouraged. But it is different with inflation of values that keeps land from being used.

The census shows that between 1900 and 1910:

Population increased, 21.0 per cent.

Number of farms increased, 10.5 per cent.

Acres of improved lands increased, 15.2 per cent.

Price per acre of farm land increased, 108.7 per cent.

The percentage of population in the rural districts in 1900 was 59.5 per cent. This had fallen by 1910 to 53.7 per cent.

It thus appears beyond question that it was twice as hard for a man to become owner of a farm in 1910 than it was in 1900. That the increase in price was mainly speculative is evident enough on noting the small increase in improved acreage. But the census shows some other things which have tended to discourage production of food and to increase the cost. With an increase of only 15.2 per cent of improved acreage the cost of fertilizer used increased 113.9 per cent, the cost of buildings 77 per cent, and the cost of implements and machinery 68.3 per cent. Tariffs and monopoly of natural resources from which raw material for these necessities must be taken have done their share in making farming unprofitable and raising the cost of living.

And as the years pass and their ranks thin, we notice that the survivors of the "late unpleasantness" appear to think more of each other than ever before.

A Letter From Henry Miller

(Winside, Tribune.)

At the shack in the Cascade Mountains, October 6, 1912.

Editor Winside Tribune,

My Dear Sir:

Here we are, the good wife and I, all alone and having no Sunday school class to talk to, with your permission I want to have a little talk with my old-time neighbors. There was a time in the history of my life that I had egotism enough in my make up to think I had some friends in that vicinity who would take an indefinite amount of stock in almost anything I would say unless it was on the subject of politics, and now that everybody, almost, are talking my kind of lingo I would like to have a short, social chat with them.

Two years ago when I was on my trip around the world I visited a family in Stanton; there are eight or nine voters in the family and they have all been voting what they thought was the republican ticket, and I know they are just as honest and conscientious as ever I was, believing they were doing the right thing for themselves and their country. When I left there one of them, walked down to the train with me; he said to me, "Uncle Henry, I used to think that you were very radical in your political views, but we are almost where you were twenty years ago." I have lived long enough to know that all reform movements have to endure about so much persecution and now I rejoice to know that so many are beginning to see the light, and it does indeed seem to me that now is as good a time to change band wagons as they will ever have.

If we can believe ex-Senator Aldrich, Wm. Taft, Teddy or Bob LaFollett we sure need a change; fifty years is too long for one class of men to run any government. Aldrich tells us that he can run this government for $300,000,000 annually less than it is being done. Wm. Taft said to the young men's republican club in New York: "I still have hopes for the redemption of the party," virtually acknowledging that it has gone to the bad. LaFollette and many others think Teddy is not a success as a trust buster. Teddy says to his friend, A. P. Moore, "I must ask not only you but every friend I have to see to it that no movement whatever is made to bring me forward for nomination in 1912. I feel that I have a right to ask all my friends, if necessary, actively to work to prevent any such movement; I should esteem it a genuine calamity if such a movement were undertaken." Ex-Senator Billy Mason recently said to a Sunday school class in Chicago: "There is not a law so good that its enactment cannot be prevented by the use of money and no law so bad that money cannot secure its passage by our legislators. Modern politicians have found out that they can make money by governing the people; the result is the jack pot system in vogue in Illinois." And he said more: "After the campaign of 1896 I asked W. J. Bryan this question, 'What of the political future of this country?' His answer was 'Truth must prevail.'" President Schurman of Cornell University, once said that "one man with God's truth behind him was a majority," and since the Baltimore convention I am fully convinced that he was right. How many times have they buried W. J. Bryan and he never fails to come to the front a bigger man than ever. They must use a different material if they expect to have him stay put; they don't use truth enough in their material. W. J. keeps a never ending supply of truth in stock, even his 16 to 1 theory was truth. What did it mean? It meant exact justice between man and man, it meant if you had contracted a debt that you should have the right to pay that debt in the same kind of a dollar that you borrowed, that it should be no bigger or no less. SEE? Oh my friends, if you could only know the interests behind the papers that howled 50 cent dollars you would know they were not talking in your interest. In the fall of 1896 I went to see four brothers in Stanton county to try to convince them they were on the wrong trail, but they knocked me out of the box with the picture where they were scooping 50 cent dollars into a hopper and they were coming out 100 cent dollars. These fellows who howl 50 cent dollars are the fellows who furnish the balance of power for the G. O. P. party, —dollars—and many of them.

It is alright to be a republican, but I want to say to you, my dear friends, you cannot play republicanism and run with the machine. Teddy claims to be a progressive; he is about forty-five years behind the times. He is preaching doctrine that Peter Cooper and J. B. Weaver were talking when he was a boy. They meant it, he don't, there is where the joke comes in.

Absolutely Perfect Flue Construction

VOGET'S HARDWARE

In speaking of my egotism I neglected to say that it has been charged that Teddy is slightly egotistical at times.

When the history of the National bank act comes to be ancient history, if the historian keeps truth on his side, he will say that very much of republicanism went out of the old party and left it to the mercy of the money changers. There were 169 bankers in congress at that time, and there is where you find your balance of power today, in the American Bankers Association; they can create a panic at will or whenever it is to their benefit, and the United States treasury is ever ready to tide the big concerns over while the small concern must go to the wall. Let Henry Clews of New York tell it; he knows how it is. In speaking of the panic of '93 he called it a depression. He said, "of course the late depression has weakened some concerns while it has strengthened others and it always helps a situation to have the weaker elements weeded out." He is one of those Wall street philanthropists.

Now my friends, I think it will be a safe proposition to try something new for four years. I have yet to hear an ugly word said about Mr. Wilson. I think he is truly an American and if he is he is a safe man. He will have a safe man to go to for advice, one W. J. Bryan, who knows the true inwardness of more politicians than any man in America and he knows the bogus from the genuine for he has tried many of them; and the man who can do what he did at Baltimore is surely a power. It had to be done; there was no one to do it but him, however sad the task, and he did it and did it well.

Now my friends, young and old, I ask you, if you love your country, to study politics, if you would be a true American study politics, in short if you love your wife and babies, study politics, the money question, (the mother of all trusts) especially.

As ever, the old crank,
Hank Miller.

My brother, in the cause of civic righteousness, excuse me for the multiplicity of words, the tale is not half told. I have lived to be almost 84 years old and don't think of much good I ever done but if I can get one good brother to see the light, as I see it, I will feel that I have done some good on earth. To me, individually, I am not interested but those who come after me are, and after trying to learn what was going on in the political world for over fifty years I feel that I can tell younger people of some things that they have not learned yet in a political way.

Dances Taxed at Carroll

The city dads at Carroll have passed an ordinance putting a tax on public dances, $10 per day—so that those who dance will not only have to pay the fiddler, but the tariff as well. The ordinance defines as a public dance any dance at which a price is charged for the privilege of dancing. Under this ordinance there can be no dancing after midnight, but they may begin as early as 7 o'clock in the morning. Is this a law, in restraint of trade?

The Boy on the Farm

"Don't drive the boy off the farm. Arrange the farm work so that he will like it."

The above statement in the Blue Valley Bulletin attracted our attention and then we fell to thinking: (1) How much of it is true? (2) How much of it is not true, or rather how much will not fit the case of a large proportion of boys who leave the farm? Then we thought we would say something about it. The above advice starts out with the presumption that the farmer is to blame if his boy leaves the farm; that he "drives him off." How much of that is true? But little of it, so far as we have observed. Some boys leave the farm because they make up, their talents, and their aptitudes call on them strongly for another kind of life. They don't expect to find their chosen line any easier, any less exacting, for if they have good brains they can see that success everywhere is only gained by hard work and much sacrifice of bodily ease. Such boys should leave the farm. The call of human fitness for any particular kind of labor is just as compelling as any of the propelling assertions of Nature. We will never get beyond these governing impulses till we die. Men are born to their line of life just as much on the farm as elsewhere. But this class is comparatively small.

The main portion of boys who leave the farm are impelled by other motives. In a few cases, only a few, the fathers may be harsh, narrow minded, lacking in natural affection, looking upon their boys as just so many machines to get the greatest possible amount of hard work out of them. In the old days when farm boys were brought up very ignorant of the outside world, they could be kept on the farm, made to endure ill treatment because of the fear through their ignorance of any other kind of work. But those days are past and gone. The transition from the farm to the factory is easy now.

What is it that impells boys to leave the farm? Well, in many cases, it is a dislike of physical work. They think they can get along easier somewhere else. A good many of them are naturally lazy. Watch them in after life, and you will find them drifting about from one thing to another, trying to find some place where they can get good pay for little work. Of course, the farm is no place for a lazy boy. Do you know of any other place that wants him? He thinks the world is not half as smart as he is and he can beat it in his hunt for a soft snap. The natural final tendency of such boys is to a course of crime. They are not honest with themselves or others. Our prisons are full of young men who started out to get a living without hard work, and there they are. We interviewed many such young men in prison, while we were in official relation to this state, and found some who were from the farm.

Other boys leave the farm because they think they can earn more money elsewhere. They have a boy's vision of great things. They want to rise in the world and they think that the outside opportunities are much the greatest. They are impatient with life. The farm is too slow and so they leave it. But how many of them achieve fortune or fame? But very few, compared with the number who leave the farm in such pursuit.

The chances to achieve a fortune today, say of $25,000 to $50,000, are much more certain on the farm than off it.

A young man of pluck, intelligence and honesty, can find plenty of chances to buy farms worth $10,000 to $20,000 on the payment of a small portion down and the balance secured by mortgage at low interest. Close and intelligent attention to his business for a few years will land him in possession of the property and he has had a good living all the while.

There are a hundred such good certain chances for moderate fortunes on the farm where there is one in town. Look over the tradesmen and men of business in towns and you will find that the farmers about them are actually worth the most in clean assets. A very large proportion of the merchants and tradesmen in towns never get to be worth more than $3,000 to $5,000. The Probate Court records will show this to be true.

The whirl and rush of business life in the last few years has led man to think that there was a good deal more money to be made away from the farm. But for one man who has made it, there are hundreds, formerly farm bred boys, who are today living from hand to mouth.

A great and delusive glamour has spread over the country in this respect. Today, taking into consideration what he knows, his life of training on the farm, there is no place where the farm boy can invest his energy, knowledge and ability, with so great a degree of certainty in fair results as on the farm. And he is badly fooled in a big proportion of cases if he takes up another kind of life.

But he must face the facts as they exist. He must get rid of the notion that father, or the farm and its work, is to blame for his state of mind. He is responsible, young as he is, for his own ideas. If they are sound, and just, and true, well and good. But if not, he must take his punishment just as thousands of other farm boys have taken it who would tell him, if they could, to stay on the farm. —Hoard's Dairyman.

The Hornet's Funeral Program

(By Request of Chief Mourner)

Its now about time to stand and sing "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow," as the life of the once G. O. P., is passing out here below. The G. O. P., will be laid to rest in the cemetery of memory along by the side of the "Greenbackers," the "Know-Nothings" and all other nothings of the political past.

In 1852 the Whigs did not realize that their party was dead until they received an invitation to the funeral in November of that year. History is about to repeat itself, and the order of ceremonies of burying the dead G. O. P., which by the coming 6th of November will have undergone quite a spell of putrefaction, might be summed up as follows:

Victim: The Republican party.
Funeral Orators: W. H. Taft and T. Roosevelt.

Coroners: Joe Cannon and Chauncey Depew.
Undertaker: Elihu Root.
Pallbearers: Ex-Senator Aldrich, Murray Crane, Boise Penrose, Reed Smoot, Big 'Steeve, Theodore Burton and Bill Barnes.

Next in order will be the Relatives and Dear Friends, of whom there are quite a few, of course. The following song will be sung to the tune of Old Hundred:

Oh, why were our death slumbers
Enumbered with sighs
Of poor starving women
All through the dark nights?
I hear them with wailings
Of misery and pain,
Crying out to the world,
That the G. O. P., is to blame.
Me thinks I can see
As God calls out to you,
While crying for mountains
To hide us from view
"Take your seat on the left,
Midst the cursed and vile,
You never shall the portals
Of Heaven beguile.
Will God such hypocrisy
Ever to us forgive,
And take us republicans above
Where Democrats live?

George or Hall

The trouble over the county treasurer's office out in Custer county re-inforces the argument that it is high time for some clean sweeping in the state house. For that trouble involved W. A. George, state treasurer, and candidate for re-election, who was formerly county treasurer in Custer county.

The county board, having had a thorough examination made by an expert, has instructed the county attorney to bring suit to recover $3,691.82 of interest money which should have been turned in to the county, and was not, during Mr. George's incumbency of the county treasurer's office. Mr. George's democratic predecessor in county treasurer's office collected all the legal rate of interest on county funds and paid it over to the county, and $1,523.56 in addition. His democratic successor also turned in to the county more than the full legal rate of interest, and three times as much in two years as Mr. George did in four years. Mr. George, sandwiched in between them, paid in much less than the legal rate on county funds, and so legal steps have to be taken to protect the county's rights.

Mr. George, for aught we know, may have done the best he could, but he did not do nearly so well as the law requires, nor nearly so well as the treasurers who preceded and succeeded him. If he made so poor a showing as county treasurer, there is at least ground for an intelligent suspicion that he is not doing all that could be done, and should be done, as state treasurer.

Mr. George's democratic opponent for the office of state treasurer, Mr. Hall, is a conservative, careful and successful banker. He is one of the Nebraska bankers who worked hard, from the beginning for a bank guarantee law. There is no flaw or blot in his record. If elected, he can be depended on to give the state a business rather than a political administration of the office. Under the circumstances the well informed voter should not hesitate long between these two candidates.—World Herald.

You've bought mattresses before. You'll buy 'em again; unless, this time, you choose the Dixie NoTUFT—the lifetime mattress.

You'd hardly expect a package tied with light cord to hold for years, when subjected to continual wear. The tufts of the tufted mattress are only light cords. No wonder they weaken and break. The Dixie NoTUFT has no tufts. It is made of compartments whose partitions are as strong as the mattress itself. No wonder the Dixie NoTUFT wears well.

Every good housewife likes handsome, well-draped beds. You can have them if you'll use the Dixie NoTUFT. It makes an even-edged bed—a bed that enhances the appearance of your bed-fittings—a bed that stays right because it has no tufts to weaken and break and allow it to spread like the tufted mattress you now use.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET ITS GREAT RECORD

Men Who Will Give Nebraska a Business Administration

Standing Upon a Record of Reform Legislation Not Only Promised But Actually Performed by Democracy.

The Lincoln State Journal, following its usual bushwacking tactics, is attempting to deceive the people as to John H. Morehead's attitude towards the initiative and referendum. The truth may not be learned from the Lincoln Journal, for it is willing to juggle the record in order to make its point. The facts, briefly stated, are these: There were two elements in the 1909 legislature that sought to defeat the initiative and referendum. One element pretended such friendship that it sought to have the percentages fixed ridiculously low. Their intent was to secure the enactment of a law that would be, in its effects, a farce; thus giving this element an opportunity to assert that the democratic majority was not competent to frame a workable law. The other element, greatly in the minority, sought to nullify whatever law might be passed by making the percentages too high. The Lincoln Journal and its crowd belonged to the element that sought to discredit the ability of the democratic majority by securing the passage of a law that would make it easy to submit all kinds of ridiculous propositions. The democratic majority, however, penetrated these schemes. Senator Morehead stood for a workable law that could not be brought into disrepute. He helped to raise the percentages in some instances and stood steadfastly against propositions to make the percentages too high. When the bill was whipped into the shape in which it finally passed, Senator Morehead voted for it. The result is the best initiative and referendum law on the statute books of any state, a fact admitted by the men who wrote that law into the Oklahoma constitution and the men who gave that law to Oregon. And this best of all initiative and referendum laws was enacted by a democratic legislature of which John H. Morehead was a member, and for which he worked and voted. Neither subterfuge nor distortion of facts by a bushwacking partisan press can change the record.

The attempt of a deputy oil inspector, drawing pay from the state while devoting his time to publishing a paper in support of his chief, Aldrich, to discredit Governor Shallenberger's administration of the pure food law, is really ridiculous. Anybody with good sense knows that a state law that conflicts with national law is not enforceable, in respect to the conflicting paragraphs. Governor Shallenberger knew this, and proceeded to secure an agreement whereby the main provisions of the law were to be complied with pending a decision of the courts as to certain disputed paragraphs claimed to be in conflict with the national law. The result of this was what afterward proved to be the most thorough enforcement of the pure food law since its enactment to date. Deputy Pure Food Commissioner Mains, acting under the instructions of his chief, Governor Shallenberger, brought order out of the chaos that reigned in the department under a former administration, enforced the law to the limit and left the department in splendid shape for those who came after. No partisan newspaper whose editor is paid for his services under the disguise of inspecting oil and gasoline which the people use, can blind the thinking people of Nebraska to the real facts.

Whether Henry Richmond, the well-known newspaper man, or W. B. Howard, the well-known lobbyist, is to be state auditor after January 1 depends simply upon the number of people who are made familiar with the facts in this contest. It must be remembered that Mr. Howard is the vice-president of an old line insurance company. It must further be remembered that he has haunted the lobbies in the state house for years, and it cannot be denied that he has been lined up with the insurance interests against the people at every legislative session. Henry Richmond has made a clean and gentlemanly campaign. He is not a man of wealth, and cannot buy this important office. He would not if he could. He is, however, well experienced in matters pertaining to that office, and has made the auditing department a special study. It should also be remembered that Henry Richmond has always been a strong fraternal man, and that he has written and spoken against the Mobile bill at all times.—David City Banner (republican).

The state railway commission as at present constituted is a failure and a useless public expense. Its members are bickering and quarreling among themselves, and have accomplished nothing except to endorse their salary warrants. If Clarence E. Harman, the fusion nominee, is elected, something will be doing immediately. Mr. Harman has the capacity, the ability and the experience to fill this office with great credit to the people and himself.

Herman Diers, democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, is a man of mature years and wide business and legislative experience. He is not a youth consumed with ego, nor does he seek the office as an advertising adjunct to his private business. He has lived in Nebraska more years than his opponent is old, and is yet a comparatively young man.

From the very first, the home and fraternal insurance companies have warmed to the candidacy of Henry Richmond for state auditor. The reason is that he has declared his position in favor of them and the "rebels" and others interested in the cheaper insurance are boosting for Richmond in all parts of the state.

Democrats and Populists Have Given Nebraska All Recent Reforms

A Glance at the Record Shows That Democracy's Opponents Have Done Nothing But Make the Most Absurd Claims.

The legislative reforms which Nebraska has secured during the past quarter of a century have come as the result of agitation by democrats and populists. Not one of them found their origin in republican ranks. Beginning with the Australian ballot law enacted in 1891 by a fusion legislature, down to the initiative and referendum in 1909, every legislative reform has resulted from the earnest efforts of democrats and their allies, the populists, and against the opposition of republicans. The freight and express rate reduction law, for which Aldrich claims chief credit, originated with the fusion forces. The first rate reduction law was passed by a fusion legislature in 1891. The so-called "Aldrich law" enacted in 1907 is identical with a bill introduced in the 1905 session by Senator Ollis of Valley, a populist. It was defeated by a republican legislature. Such a storm of disapproval was created by the defeat of this bill that two years later the republican legislature succumbed and enacted a bill ostensibly drawn by Aldrich, but which originated with Ollis. It is thus all along the line. Democrats and populists first endorsed the 2-cent fare law, and it required a host of democratic and populist votes to force it through a republican legislature. The first attempt at reform in taxation in a quarter of a century was successfully made by a democratic legislature. The first forward step in liquor legislation in thirty years was taken by a democratic legislature. The Oregon plan of electing United States senators was given to Nebraska by a democratic legislature. In short, Nebraska owes every one of her reform laws to democrats and populists, and absolutely nothing to the republican party as an organization.

As governor John H. Morehead would not be guilty of the monumental littleness of vetoing a bill because it happened to be of republican origin. He would not call his party associates around him and declare his intention of preventing "those republican" from getting any credit. He would not ask the legislature to violate the constitution by appropriating money for his use and benefit, nor would he use such money if appropriated. He would not use railroad transportation in furthering his own private business, nor devote the time for which the state pays him in earning money by individual enterprise. He would give the state a level-headed business administration instead of devoting his time to building up a political machine and absenting himself from his duties an average of sixteen days every month. He will attend to the state's business as he should, and not seek to become an attraction on the chautauqua and lyceum courses. Nebraska needs a business man for governor, just as she needs business management for her many institutions.

Keep this great truth in mind: Every dollar of floating debt ever contracted by the state of Nebraska was contracted by republican administrations, never a dollar of it by democratic or populist administrations. And this floating debt contracted by republican administrations was in greater part paid off by democratic and populist administrations. Twice under Governor Shallenberger's administration it was necessary to call the board together to devise ways and means for employing the state's surplus funds, and never was it necessary to register a state warrant for future payment. Not once under Governor Aldrich's administration has it been necessary to devise ways and means of employing the state's surplus funds, and twice has it been necessary to register state warrants for future payment through lack of funds. The election of the democratic state ticket means a return to business methods in the conduct of the state's affairs.

The democratic and people's independent nominee for lieutenant governor is Herman Diers, a successful business man of Gresham. He has served in the state legislature as senator and representative, and is familiar with the manner in which public business is transacted at Lincoln. If he is called upon for any reason to administer the affairs of the governor's office he will be found level-headed, progressive and watchful. Senator Diers has an enviable record as a public servant.

The men who work for wages should bear in mind that it was a democratic legislature that enacted the safety appliance law and made possible the regular inspection of factories. They should remember that a democratic legislature enacted the law requiring safety methods on buildings in course of construction, and that it was a democratic legislature that first took cognizance of the demand for a workman's compensation law. In all these reform activities John H. Morehead, democratic candidate for governor, took an active part in the interests of the workers.

Gov. Wilson is not only holding his strength as a candidate before the people, but is gaining on his opponents. As the people meet and hear him, they gain confidence in him and his cause. Naturally republicans are becoming disgusted with their double-headed ticket and the clashing of the warring factions. It takes courage to fight a great battle and with divided forces the g-o-p. warriors are beginning to drift away as the fight warms up. They never before entered a battle with a divided army—and their nerve has deserted them.

Out of Hospital

The democratic nominee for county commissioner from the second district, Mr. E. H. Carroll, is laboring under a very severe handicap in this campaign in not being able to get out in the county and meet the voters. He has been at Rochester, Minnesota, and has been compelled to submit to an operation for appendicitis. He writes that he is recovering rapidly and has not felt so well for a long time as he feels now. But he is weak and unable to undergo the fatigue of campaigning, though he expects to be able to get in the county the last few days before election. He has not retired from the campaign at all on account of being temporarily laid up. Prominent men in his part of the county from both parties urged him to file for the place, knowing of his qualifications and experience and of the excellent work he did as a member of the Wayne county board, where he served two terms just before coming across the line into Cedar. And after he consented to make the race and was chosen as the nominee by the party he does not propose to go back on the men who nominated him. He will make a first class commissioner and there is every reason now to believe that he will be elected by a large majority.—Cedar County News.

Hafner's Sale

The editor attended the Public Sale held at the Henry Hafner farm last Monday and at least got a square meal for his trouble. Mr. Hafner's sale was probably the biggest sale ever pulled off in Knox county and the enormous crowd of people in attendance attested the value of good advertising. It was estimated by many that not less than 1,000 people were in attendance at this sale and the crowd remained practically intact until the close of the sale. The sale occupied six hours of time, two hours before dinner and four hours after noon and a little more than $14,000 worth of goods and chattels were disposed of.

In this sale were 100 head of cattle which brought an average price of $62.78 per head, 19 head of horses and colts brought $157.80 each while his best big team was bought by his brother John for $555.00. 300 tons of hay in the stack brought $9.00 per ton. Col. H. W. Phillips of this city cried the sale alone and considers it one of his greatest achievements in the auctioneering field. Mr. Hafner used 1100 big sale bills and carried a two page ad in the Monitor one week and considered it a most judicious investment.—Bloomfield Monitor.

It pays to advertise and we know it.

Remember, Mr. Voter

That the way the ballot is made up that you may need to follow down and mark each square if you wish to vote against certain candidates. Suppose you want to vote for the Roosevelt electors and do not wish to vote for the nominees on the state ticket. A mark in the circle for Progressive electors is also a vote for all of the republican nominees for state office. In other words they are Roosevelt men or Taft men just according to how you vote, for a mark on the circle for Taft electors just as surely counts for the same set of nominees for state office. The law prohibits more than one appearance of a name on the ballot; and these candidates have the ballot so arranged that they get the benefit of all who mark in either of two circles, which is very unfair.

A Treasure.

When Lincoln was practicing law a client came to him and wanted to know if something couldn't be done to protect him from his wife. He said she locked him out nights and threw dishes at him and battered him up with a club. She scolded him day and night and consistently and continuously made life miserable for him.

"Have you thought of getting a divorce?" inquired Lincoln.

"No, no, I don't want a divorce. Why, I wouldn't leave my old woman for anything."

"You wouldn't? After all that abuse? And why not?"

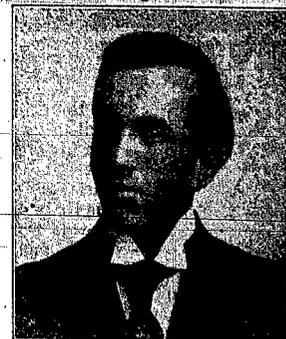

"Because, squire, that old woman of mine can make the best flapjacks in Sangamon county."—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

A Dilatory Painter.

One of the characteristics of Sir Thomas Lawrence, the portrait painter, was dilatoriness. "Lord Normanton," says a writer "must have had the patience of a Gaius Julius, for, although in 1818 Lady Normanton had already been sitting off and on for three years, I find him still in 1824 discussing in the most patient manner what the background of her ladyship's picture shall be and only venturing in the mildest way to remind Sir Thomas that he had also himself been sitting to him ever since the year 1815!" The portrait was delivered in 1827.

Why not vote for ALL of 'em?

Senator Phil H. Kohl has the distinction of being a nominee for office without competitor. There are but few cases in the state of the kind for so important an office as state senator.

Do not neglect to vote next Tuesday, and do not be afraid to vote your honest convictions. There are now people who have spent four years regretting that they did not have the courage of their convictions four years ago.

President Taft said a few days ago that the people should not be allowed to play football with business—but how about allowing big business to play football with the people and their belongings? To us it appears that the people should now have an inning.

President Taft has vetoed every measure intended by congress to reduce the high cost of living, and Tuesday is the day when the people have opportunity to VETO Taft, and we believe that they will do so. Roosevelt foisted Taft upon the people as President, and for that reason he should be vetoed.

James S. Sherman, vice-president of the United States, and candidate for re-election, is most seriously ill at his home in Utica, New York, and the attending physicians offer but little hope of his recovery. He has not been well for a year past, having kidney trouble, hardening of the arteries and softening of the muscles of the heart; but the physicians think that he is not likely to die suddenly or perhaps very soon.

Henry Kloppling is making a canvass for votes for commissioner in these closing days of the campaign that is demonstrating his fitness for the office. As a representative of the second district he will make an impartial commissioner, having interests in two sections of the district he can realize that all parts of the county should have consideration in the upkeep of roads and the expending of county funds.

Henry Bartels has proved faithful to the interests of this county in his first term in the legislature at Lincoln, and now that he is asked to make the race again there is little doubt of his election, for he is better qualified by acquaintance and experience to do good work than he was during his first term. He has signed statements No. 1, so that he is pledged to support the nominee of the people for United States senate, and that is practically all of party politics there now is in the legislative place.

According to the statements made as required by democratic law, all may know that "big business" gave for the nomination of Roosevelt $358,458 and those who know much about that crowd know that they do not always give from purely patriotic motives. The same interests in 1904 gave $640,000 to place Teddy in the chair, and subsequent history shows that it was a mighty good investment for them. No doubt but that the gift to place him in nomination will be paid by the people an hundred fold if they can but return the Colonel to the Whitehouse.

L. A. Kiplinger, the democratic nominee for county attorney has been campaigning against odds this fall. A stranger in the county, he has endeavored to get out and meet the people as much as possible, so that the voter might judge something of the manner of man he is, but owing to the continued and serious illness of his father, who came here an invalid, he has not been able to give as much time to the canvass as he wished. He has made a favorable impression with those he has been able to meet, and will if elected make a competent official, we believe.

If it is patriotism which prompts a man to offer his life for the good of his country in time of war; is it any less patriotism to vote your sentiments in a time like this? Or is it any the less cowardice to fail to do our duty at the polls than on the field of battle? Some people believe (but mistakenly we think) that the election of a democrat would mean disaster in financial affairs, yet they think it their duty to vote to take the control of the people from the special interests. Will those voters dare to do their duty? Surely they will for they are American citizens, and to be a true American citizen is greater than to be a king.

Woodrow Wilson to Republicans

Monday evening Woodrow Wilson addressed a great meeting of progressives, republicans at Philadelphia, and that those of that faith in Nebraska may know his sentiments, we quote a little from his talk:

"One question before the country," said the governor, "is, 'do you trust the men who are now leading the democratic party?' If you believe they are the enemies of legitimate business don't vote for them. If you believe they are wild-eyed reformers who don't know the courses of change in this country, don't vote for them; if you believe they are inexperienced tyros who don't know right from wrong, don't vote for them. But vote as you believe, and as you trust. And if you see anyone promise the things which you think can be done, vote that way. I am not here as a partisan.

"We have entered the lists," he said, "to free the average man of enterprise in America and make ourselves masters of our own fortunes again. The trusts lie like a great incubus on the productive part of American brains."

The New Party

Mr. Roosevelt appeals to progressives to join his party. Roosevelt's whole record demonstrates that he is progressive only in words; that he is ever ready to compromise in order to win, regardless of platform promises or progressive principles. He will not last. In the end the people of this country will get his true measure. No party has ever successfully organized about a man. Principles and issues must constitute the basis of any great movement. La-Follette Magazine.

R. V. Clark, democratic candidate for superintendent of public instruction, knows the needs of the public schools. He knows what they lack in methods of fitting Nebraska boys and girls for the stern duties of life, and knows what is needed to make the schools of real service. He is an experienced educator, an enthusiast in his profession and desirous of being of real service to the state.

We believe that the election of a democratic president will not cause any drouth, famine or pestilence—some appear to think it will.

We do not think the election of Woodrow Wilson will cause any falling off in the output of gold—others talk as though they thought mining the precious metal would cease in such an event.

It hardly seems possible to us that the fertile acres of Nebraska will cease to give forth a bounteous harvest in case of a democratic victory but there are those who try to make the farmers think just such a thing. They have another think coming. Well informed people do not think that a democratic victory next Tuesday means "free-trade," but they do think it will mean a reduction of the tariff on many trust made articles and a reduction in price to the consumer on many things on which they are now being charged too much. It might enable us to buy sugar at home almost as cheap as American sugar is sold for in London.

Wouldn't a 24-pound sack of sugar for a dollar look good once more? The sugar trust is now keeping extra eight pounds, according to the price sugar sells for over the sea.

But why continue, when we will soon know what is going to happen in case of a democratic victory. Tuesday tells the story.

It is hard to find a better argument in favor of a change in the national government management than is contained in the advertising matter signed by Chairman Hillis of the republican committee. He says we had a panic in 1907, under the republican rule, and the republicans have been ruling ever since, and that we are now about to have another panic—unless the republicans continue to rule. One would suppose that if they were competent to manage things in this country that we should outgrow the panic habit. We are not properly governed or we would do so. Five years of republican rule since the last panic, and they have another one ready to explode just as soon as it is needed. It is time for the people to take a hand in affairs. Our government's finances are built up like a boy's cob house, ready to tumble down about our ears at the least disturbance. If five years was not time enough for the republicans to do this, what have they been doing along that line in the last 50 years. They have been aiding and abetting the great money trust to get a strangle-hold on the American people, until now they tell us we cannot change our allegiance to the G. O. P., without a panic. What stronger reason can we ask than that for a change—a change that will put the party of the people in power, that they may destroy monopoly so that no such calamity can come upon the people to almost compel them to do the bidding of monopoly. There are voters in Wayne today who fear to vote their sentiments—for what they believe to be right and just—least this monopoly call down disaster upon them. It is time for a change, and never was there a better time. For 16 years democracy has been fighting this foe both within and without its party, and at the Baltimore convention we won a complete victory over the foe within its own party, and it now appeals to the people for the authority to throw entrenched monopoly from its strong hold in the Whitehouse. We have named, an unsullied leader and his arm will be held up by a united party—and back of all an aroused people jealous of their rights, and awakened as never before to maintain and defend them. Next Tuesday is the day. Be true.

Fraternal Turn to Richmond

One of the most marked developments of the past week in state politics is the wholesale flocking of the members of fraternal societies, regardless of party, to Henry C. Richmond, the Democratic candidate for State Auditor.

Mr. Richmond went on record long before this campaign against the Mobile law, and he has for years written and spoken for the fraternal interest. He declares that, if elected Auditor, the Mobile law will never be written into the Nebraska statutes if he can prevent it.

Mr. Howard, the republican candidate, has not gone on record with regard to the Mobile bill. He has so far declined to committ himself. Members of the fraternal and beneficiary societies want to know. It is important to them. The fact that Mr. Howard has represented the old line insurance interests so long in the legislature and is an officer of an Omaha insurance company naturally makes the fraternal suspicious. Rev. Richardson Addresses High School

On Wednesday morning the high school students and teachers enjoyed a rare treat in the form of a story by Rev. B. P. Richardson of the Baptist church. Mr. Richardson's story was "The Hall of Heroes." The story represented the speaker as visiting the Hall of Heroes and he found them divided into four classes, as follows: 1. Heroes of Battle, with the inscription "It is Sweet and Beautiful to Die For One's Country" on the steps to their apartment. 2. Heroes of the Lonely Way, with the inscription "There Is a Path That the Eye of the Vulture Has Not Seen". 3. Heroes of Truth, with the inscription "The Strongest Man On Earth Is the Man Who Can Stand Alone". 4. Heroes of Love, with the inscription "Greater Love Has No Man Than That He Lay Down His Life for His Friends." Mr. Richardson impressed his audience with the fact that every person has the opportunity to become a hero and urged them to strive to be worthy of being enrolled in the Hall of Heroes. Mr. Richardson presented his story in a very impressive way and all enjoyed it and can not help but be better citizens for having heard it.

The New Post Office

The new fixtures for the Wayne post office are about all in place and if they are passed upon favorably by the inspector who is soon expected here to examine the outfit the patrons of the office will have the pleasure of transacting their business with the representatives of Uncle Sam in much more commodious quarters. The employees of the office will also have plenty of room for their work, and need not be so literally elbow to elbow, and bumping all of the time. The new outfit contains nearly 500 lock boxes and drawers, conveniently arranged as to height—none too high and none too near the floor. The stamp, money order and delivery window are all near the door, and back of them the sections of lock boxes extend back well toward the rear of the building. Within are tables and desks and racks for the convenience of all. Each rural route man has his case and table, a rack for mail sack is provided, cabinets, cases and drawers are plentiful for the supplies. A large safe will keep records safe from fire. The wood work is of oak and appears to be most excellent in design and finish. As the needs of the office increase with the growth of the place additional sections may be added of uniform style, thus keeping up with the times—something that could not be done in the old place.

Odd Marriage Belief. An unmarried man or woman of marriageable age is something that is rarely seen in the Fiji islands. The reason of this is not far to seek. At the end of each moon they are allowed to look into heaven, but are never permitted to enter.

These up-to-date days, taking medicine is not the terrifying thing it used to be. Even castor oil has been made tasteless and many children cry for it. John A. Wilbur of Ponca was here first of the week visiting friends and relatives. He is the democratic nominee for representative from Dixon county, and though he is pulling against a normal republican majority of about 300 he has hopes that the voters of that county will recognize in him a man qualified to fairly represent them in the coming legislature. Here's hoping.

ARMAGEDDON OF THE SCRIPTURES

Starring Presentation of Coming Events.
PASTOR RUSSELL'S VIEWS.

Churches of All Denominations and the Civil Powers of Earth Are About to Unite in Common Cause—Powerful Influence Preparing For the Battle of Armageddon—A Reign of Anarchy Will Be the Result of the Warfare Until The Messiah Takes Control.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 3.—The Brooklyn Academy of Music was crowded to the limit today to hear Pastor Russell's discourse on the "Battle of Armageddon." His text was: "He gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon." (Revelation xvi, 16.) The speaker said: Armageddon in the Hebrew signifies the "Hill of Megiddo," or Mount of Destruction. It was famous as a battlefield in Old Testament times.

The Lord has seen fit to associate the name Armageddon, with the great controversy between Truth and Error, right and wrong, God and Mammon, with which this age will close, perish, and the New Age of Messiah's glory be ushered in. He has purposely used highly symbolical figures of speech in the last book of the Bible, especially with a view to hiding certain important truths until the due time for their revelation. But even in the due time, the Bible assures us, "None of the wicked shall understand" (Daniel xii, 9, 10)—none who are out of heart harmony with God—but only the wise of His people—the "wise virgin" class of the Master's parable.

I have long avoided presentation of my understanding of our text and its context. I take it up now by request and because I believe it is due time to be understood. I disclaim any special inspiration. In some particulars my views agree with those of other Bible students, and in other respects they disagree. Each hearer must use his own judgment, do his own Bible study, and reach his own conclusions.

Kindly remember that I am not responsible for the figures of speech used by the Lord. My interpretations do indeed constitute a terrible arraignment of institutions which we have all revered and which embrace good people, of good words and good works. God's saintly people in these various institutions, being comparatively few, are ignored when systems as a whole are dealt with in prophecy.

The Dragon, Beast, False Prophet.
Our context tells us that three inure spirits (teachings) will go forth from the mouth of the Dragon, the Beast and the False Prophet, and these three will be in accord, and symbolically the doctrines are represented by "frogs." These three doctrines are to have a mighty influence throughout the civilized earth. They are to gather the kings and their armies to the great Battle of Armageddon.

The ecclesiastical kings and princes, and their retainers of clergy and faithful adherents, will be gathered in solid phalanx—Protestant and Catholic. The kings and captains of industry, and as many as can be influenced by them, will be gathered to the same side. The political kings and princes, with all their henchmen and retainers, will follow in line on the same side. The financial kings and merchant princes, and all whom they can influence by the most gigantic power ever yet exercised in the world, will join the same side, according to this prophecy.

These "doctrines of demons," represented by the "frogs," will lead many noble people in this great army to assume an attitude quite contrary to their preference. For a time the wheels of liberty and progress will be turned backward and medieval restraints will be considered necessary for self-preservation—for the maintenance of the present order of things.

In giving this interpretation, it is necessary for us to indicate what is symbolized by the Dragon, the Beast, and the False Prophet. Bible students of nearly all denominations agree with us that the "Dragon" of Revelation represents the purely Civil Power. Protestant interpreters generally agree that the "Beast like a leopard" (Revelation xiii, 2) represents the Papacy. But fewer still, we fear, will be ready to support our view that Protestantism is the "Image of the Beast" (Revelation xiii, 15) in our context given another name, "the False Prophet." We urge no one to accept our interpretation, nor shall we think hard of any who refuse it. We will neither slander nor otherwise injure them now, nor threaten them with eternal torture. They have the same right to their views that I have, and the same right to make them known to others. And I, for one, will be very glad to consider anything which opponents may set forth as their interpretations of our text.

"Unclean Spirits Like Frogs."
The symbolism of Scripture, rightly understood, are always "forceful" when the Holy Spirit used a "frog" to symbolically represent certain doctrines or teachings, we may be sure the true application will fit well. A frog has a sage look, a wise look. It swells itself up in an apparent endeavor to impress the beholder. Its great mouth well represents its chief power, used to croak.

Applying these symbols, we learn that an evil spirit, influence, teaching, will come from the Protestant churches, federated, from the Church of Rome, and from the Civil authorities, all in full agreement. The spirit of all will be boastful; an air of superiority and knowledge will be proudly assumed—all will croak in harmony. All will tell of dire results that would follow, involving the interests of both the present and the future life. If their counsel be not followed, however conflicting the creeds, the differences will be ignored in the general proposition that nothing ancient must be disturbed, or looked into, or repudiated.

The Divine authority of the Church, and the Divine right of kings, aside from conflict. Any persons or teachings in conflict with these boastful and unscriptural claims will be branded as everything vile, at the mouths of these "frogs" speaking from pulpits and platforms and through the religious and secular press. The nobler sentiments of some will be strangled by the philosophy of the same evil spirit which spoke through Calaphas, the high priest, respecting Jesus. As Calaphas declared it expedient to commit a crime in violation of justice, human and Divine, to be rid of Jesus and His teachings, so this "frog" spirit will approve of every violation of principle necessary to their self-protection.

The croaking of these "frog" spirits or doctrines will gather the kings and princes, financial, political, religious and industrial into one great army. The spirit of fear, inspired by the croakings of these "frogs," will scourge the passions of otherwise good and reasonable men to fury, desperation. In their blind following of these evil spirits, evil doctrines, they will be ready to sacrifice life and everything on the altar of what they mistakenly suppose is justice, truth and righteousness, under a Divine arrangement.

For a brief time, as we understand the Scriptures, these combined forces, of Armageddon will triumph. Free speech, free mails, and other liberties which have come to be the very breath of the masses in our day, will be ruthlessly shut off under the plea of necessity, the glory of God, the commands of the Church, etc. All will seem to be serene, until the great social explosion in our context described as the "great Earthquake." An "earthquake," in symbolic language, signifies social revolution, and the declaration of the context is that none like unto it ever before occurred. (Revelation xvi, 18, 19.) Jesus described it as a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation.—Matthew xxiv, 21.

The Lord Will Gather Them.
The false, frog-like teachings will gather together into one host the great, the rich, the wise, the learned and the kings of the earth, to battle. At this juncture Divine Power will step forward, and our text tells us that HE shall gather the marshaled hosts to Armageddon—to the Mountain of Destruction. The very thing which they sought to avert by their union, federation, etc., will be the very thing they will hasten. Other Scriptures tell us that God will be represented by the Great Messiah, and that He will be on the side of the masses. Thus we read in Daniel xii, 1: "At that time shall Michael [the Godlike One—Messiah] stand up"—assume authority. He will take possession of His Kingdom in a manner little looked for by many of those who erroneously have been claiming that they were His Kingdom, and authorized by Him to reign in His name and in His stead.

Jesus declared, "His servants ye are unto whom ye render service." Some may be rendering service to Satan and to error, who claim to be rendering service to God and to righteousness; and some of these may be serving ignorantly, as did Saul of Tarsus, who "verily thought that he did God a service" in persecuting the Church. The same principle holds true reversely. As an earthly king does not hold himself responsible for the moral character of each soldier who fights in his battles, so the Lord does not vouch for the moral character of all who will enlist and fight on His side of any question. "His servants they are to whom they render service," whatever the motive or object prompting them.

The same principles will apply in the coming Battle of Armageddon. God's side of that battle will be the people's side, and the very nondescript host, the people, will be pitted at the beginning of the battle. Anarchists, Socialists, and hot-headed radicals of every school of reason and unreason, will be in the forefront of that battle. The majority of the poor and the middle class prefer peace at almost any price. A comparatively small number, God's consecrated people, will at heart be longing for Messiah's Kingdom. These will bide the Lord's time and wait patiently for it; they will be of good courage, knowing the outcome outlined in the "more sure word of prophecy," to which they have done well to take heed, "as unto a light shining in a dark place until the Day dawn."—1 Peter i, 19.

The masses will be restless of their restraints, but will be conscious of their own weakness as compared to the kings and princes, financial, religious and political, which will then hold sway. Besides, the masses have no sympathy with anarchy. They realize truly that the worst form of government is better than none. The masses will seek relief through the ballot and peaceful re-adjustment of earth's affairs for the elimination of evil, for the placing of monopolies and utilities and the supplies of nature in the hands of the people for the public good. The crisis will be reached when the hitherto upholders of law shall become violators of the law and resistors of the will of the majority as expressed by the ballot. Fear for the future will lead the well-meaning masses to desperation; and anarchy will result when Socialism fails.

The Cloud's Silver Lining.
Horrible would be this outlook for the future did we not have the infallible Word of God assuring us of a glorious outcome! Divine Wisdom has withheld until our day the great knowledge and skill which is at the same time breeding millionaires and discontents. Had God lifted the veil a thousand years sooner, the world would have lined up for its Armageddon a thousand years sooner. But that would have been far soon for the Divine purpose, because Messiah's Kingdom is to be the great Thousand-Year-Sabbath of the world's history. God in kindness veiled our eyes until the time when the gathering to Armageddon would immediately precede Messiah's taking to Himself His great power, and beginning His reign.—Revelation xi, 17, 18.

"Send Them Strong Delusions."
St. Paul wrote prophetically of our time, that it would be one of serious trial and testing to many professing to be Christians. The reason for this he states—they received not the Truth in the love of it. (II Thessalonians ii, 10, 11.) They preferred their own erroneous theories, the Apostle explains, and therefore God will give them over to a "strong delusion," and let them believe the lie which they preferred, and let them suffer for missing the Truth which they did not love. Thus they will be in the condemned host, "fighting against God," because of their lack of love for the Truth.

It is sad to say that we all as Christians have been laboring under a thorough delusion respecting God's Plan. We have claimed that Christ set up His Church in Kingdom power, and that the Church has been reigning on the earth as His representative. On the strength of this delusion, Jews and heretics have been persecuted to death as opponents to Christ's Kingdom. All the while we thoughtlessly repeated the Lord's prayer: "Thy Kingdom come: Thy will be done on earth, as in Heaven." We knew that the Redeemer said that He would come again to make us His Bride and joint-heirs; but we ignored the Scriptures. We were drunk, as the Scriptures symbolically say, "all nations were drunk" with the false doctrine. It is this false doctrine that will constitute the "frog" spirit which soon will begin to croak and to prepare for Armageddon.

The Bible presentation is that the world is a section of the universe in rebellion against Divine authority, under the captaincy of Satan and his associated fallen angels. By Divine grace Jesus has already "tried death" for every man, and the merit of that sacrifice must, eventually, grant Adam and his posterity a full, fair opportunity for the attainment of everlasting life. All who thus seek the Divine program and are walking in the light may know something at least respecting the "times and seasons." These brethren "are not in darkness, that that day [and that battle of Armageddon] should overtake them "as a thief"—un-awares.

Armageddon Not Yet but Soon.
For forty years the Armageddon forces have been mustering for both sides of the conflict. Strikes, lockouts and riots, great and small, have been merely incidental skirmishes as the belligerent parties crossed each other's paths. Court and Army scandals in Europe, Insurance, Trust and Court scandals in America, have shaken public confidence. Dynamite plots, charged by turns on employees and on employers, have further shaken confidence and tended to make each distrustful of the other. Bitter and angry feelings on both sides are more and more manifest. The lines of battle are daily becoming more distinctly marked. Nevertheless Armageddon cannot yet be fought. Other matters intervene, according to prophecy.

Gentle times have still two years to run. The "Image of the Beast" of our context must yet receive life—power. The Image must be transformed from a mere mechanism to a living force. Protestant Federation realizes that its organization will still be futile unless it receive vitalization—unless its clergy directly or indirectly shall be recognized as possessed of apostolic ordination and authority to teach. This the prophecy indicates will come from the two horned beast, which, we believe, symbolically represents the Church of England. High-handed activities of Protestantism and Catholicism, operating in conjunction for the suppression of human liberties, await this vivifying of the Image. This may come soon, but Armageddon cannot precede it, but must follow—perhaps a year after it, according to our view of the Prophecy.

Still another thing intervenes: Although the Jews are gradually flowing into Palestine, gradually obtaining control of the land of Canaan, and although reports say that already nineteen millionaires are there, nevertheless prophecy requires an evidently larger number of wealthy Hebrews to be there before the Armageddon crisis be reached. Indeed we understand that "Jacob's trouble" in the Holy Land will come at the very close of Armageddon. Then Messiah's Kingdom will begin to be manifested. Thenceforth Israel in the land of promise will gradually rise from the ashes of the past to the grandeur of prophecy. Through its Divinely appointed princes—Messiah's Kingdom, all powerful but invisible, will begin to roll away the curse and to lift up mankind.

Nebraska Orchard Pays Thirty-Five Thousand This Year.

STATE PRODUCES BEST FRUIT

Humphrey Asserts Nebraska Apples Now Are Regarded as Best in the World, Surpassing Hood River Valley, Oregon, Products.

Editor C. G. Humphrey of Vedron was a caller at the office of the clerk of the supreme court. Mr. Humphrey is one of the many Nebraska men who are boosting Nebraska as the best apple state in the country...

"I have just been talking with some apple buyers from Chicago and St. Louis," said Humphrey, "and they told me that the apples grown in Nebraska and especially southeastern Nebraska command better prices and there is a greater demand for them than any apple grown. The apples raised in the celebrated Hood River valley in Oregon, which for years enjoyed the distinction of being the best apple grown, do not compare in flavor with the apples grown in southeastern Nebraska."

"In Richardson county alone," continued Mr. Humphrey, "there has already been shipped out nearly 600 cars, and the shipping season is not over yet. One of our heaviest apple growers, A. J. Weaver, who has about 200 acres in apple trees, will realize over $35,000 from his orchards. E. L. Bowen, another man who has an eighty-acre orchard, will receive from his crop over $10,000."

"Somehow our Jonathan apples," said Mr. Humphrey, "have a flavor which no other apple-growing section seems to have. Our soil and climate and our manner of looking after the orchards has a tendency to give these apples just the right kind of flavor that makes them so much desired. An other apple that we raise down there is the Grimes Golden. I could show you samples of these apples which are so clear that you can hold them up to the light and they seem to be nearly transparent. They have a pleasing flavor which, somehow, no other section gives them and they almost seem to dissolve in the mouth."

Hearing on Phone Rates.

A hearing was held by the state railway commission on a protest from the people of York county against a raise in rates, the result of the recent telephone merger. The Lincoln company, which now owns the lines under the consolidation, contemplates a raise in the price of phones, giving the users there a one phone service. It was agreed that the railway commission should make an investigation of the conditions, and in the meantime a raise will be made of 50 cents on resident phones and $1 on business phones. Prior to the merger a free service was given to all towns in the county by the York company. This will be continued until such time as a hearing can be had, after the commission has made the investigation.

FOUR CASES OF TRICHINOSIS

One Dead and Three Others Critically Ill in Johnson County.

It was presumed that there were four cases of infantile paralysis in the family of Philip Schoene, near Cook in Johnson county. One child, a daughter aged eleven years, died after a short illness, and three other daughters are critically ill. A Talmage doctor had the case and the Johnson county board of health sent D. C. H. Davies of Tecumseh over to look into the matter. As a precautionary measure the doctors put the family under strict quarantine, there being symptoms of the dreaded disease. However, Davies learned that the family had been eating a great deal of pork of late, having recently butchered, and he was advised that the meat had not been especially well prepared. A sample of the pork was sent to Lincoln and upon examination it was found to be full of trichina.

Ansley Dam Washed Away.

The concrete water dam that furnishes electric power for Ansley was washed away, the power house and dynamo dropping into the creek bed. The accident is undoubtedly due to muskrats undermining a portion of the concrete wall and giving the water a chance to work through. The structure was a new one and had just been completed. About twenty feet of the dam was washed away. The loss will probably amount to $30,000.

Assignments for Cornhusker.

Preparations for beginning the work on the Cornhusker, the year book published by the students, has been completed and active work will be begun next week. R. M. Sweezy has been selected as editor-in-chief and Miss Louise Curtis as associate editor. Miss Mary Robbins and Harry Burtle will have charge of the literary department.

Coursing Meet Postponed.

On account of the failure to get enough rabbits, the coursing meet that was to have been held at Friend this week has been postponed until Nov. 6 to 9. Two stakes will be run, an all age and a futurity.

MINNESOTA LAND

IN South Central Minnesota I have listed some fine, well improved farms for sale. These lands are only from 50 to 80 miles north of the Iowa line. Good R. R. service. Old settlers are selling these well improved places at from $65.00 per acre and up and the farmers being well fixed financially are leaving nearly all of their money in their places from 5 to 10 years at from 5 to 6 per cent optional. The land is gently rolling, well drained and rich black loam with clay subsoil. Fine corn, small grain and excellent tame grasses. I can get a number of good places for Wayne county renters on very good terms. It will pay you to inspect this section of Minnesota for a home or profitable investment.

RURAL CONGRESS TO OMAHA

Second Annual Meeting Will Be Held There Dec. 16 to 19.

The country life congress is to convene in Omaha Dec. 16 to 19 inclusive. Frank G. Odell, secretary of the rural life, was in Omaha looking up arrangements at the hotels for the meeting.

This general organization takes in the following: The Nebraska Farmers' congress, State Co-operative Grain and Live Stock associations, State Association of Co-operative Creameries, State Grange, Nebraska Improvers association, State Association of Farmers' Mutual Insurance companies, Nebraska Rural Life commission, State Farmers' union and the department of agriculture of the University of Nebraska.

According to Mr. Odell this meeting will represent 1,200 local farmers of the state, all of whom are members of the various state organizations that meet together in what has been designated the Country Life congress. Mr. Odell says the rural life commission will be ready to make its report to the governor during the latter part of December on its investigation of the last two years regarding conditions of country life. "Our findings along the lines of rural education," said Mr. Odell, "will, I believe, constitute one of the most valuable documents ever given to the public."

GIRL KILLED IN AUTO UPSET

Mary Walters of Tekamah Crushed to Death Under Machine.

Mary Walters was killed by being crushed beneath an automobile on the road three miles south of Tekamah. She had been to Decatur and was brought home by George Parker of that place in a car. After getting to Tekamah they went to Herman. On returning from Herman they passed over a small culvert at high speed. Parker lost control of his machine and it swerved to the side of the road, struck a small embankment and upset. Parker was thrown clear of his machine, but Miss Walters was found pinned beneath it, her chest and head crushed.

Escapes From County Jail.

Harry C. Lindsay, clerk of the supreme court, received a letter from the sheriff of Scottsbluff county stating that George Thrasher, the man whom the supreme court denied a new trial recently, had escaped from the county jail. Thrasher was convicted of being responsible for the death of Edith Perry, a seventeen-year-old girl, who died from the effects of a criminal operation, and was sentenced to the penitentiary. His attorney took an appeal to the supreme court, but the court denied him another trial.

The letter says that Thrasher was visited by some friends the day he escaped.

Randall Returns From Schuyler.

Mr. Randall is endeavoring to impress upon school boards throughout the state the importance of the fire drill as well as precautions against fire.

THE WAYNE-STANTON GAME

The Wayne high school football team motored to Stanton last Saturday afternoon and for the second time this fall administered defeat to the high school team of that place. It was a good game throughout, the final score being 34 to 7 in Wayne's favor. In the absence of Captain Stodden, Leahy was appointed captain. Stanton won the toss and Wayne kicked off. In the first quarter the long auto ride kept the Wayne team from playing their usual game and they permitted Stanton to score a touchdown and goal. This quarter was Stanton's without question, but the second quarter the Wayne boys got down to business to the extent that Marsteller scored two touchdowns. Score 12 to 7 in Wayne's favor. In the third quarter the score was raised to 21 by a place kick by Marsteller and a touchdown by Leahy. The last quarter added two more touchdowns, one by Leahy and one by Marsteller and made the final score 34 to 7. Stanton was clearly outclassed, though they outweighed Wayne. Jones, Marsteller and Leahy hit the opponent's line for great gains. Duerig and Sears completed several forward passes for good gains. Captain Baer, the big, good natured, princely fellow, made Stanton's touchdown. The boys on the Wayne team all played first class football. Wayne's team has won five games and lost one this season—a good record.

SHALLENBERGER A TRUE PROGRESSIVE

A real progressive in politics is one who, by his past conduct has proven that he is in sympathy with, and a supporter of, the men who aim to make this government better. An advocate of those principles of government which aim to make laws responsive to the will of the people. Measured by this standard, Governor Shallenberger is a genuine progressive.

Progressiveness with him is a matter of conviction; a part of his life work; a record of the things he has done. His claim to that title is not based on mere promises or sudden changes in his political views. He was fighting for progressive principles long before his opponent knew what the word "progressive" meant. His progressiveness is not based alone upon what he is advocating and supporting at the present time. It is backed up by years of political work in behalf of measures that are really progressive.

His administration as governor is the brightest and cleanest page in the political history of Nebraska. The record of that administration is now history. No scandals or grafting in any part of the administration marred his record. Taxes were reduced, and the state gotten entirely out of debt for the first time in a quarter of a century.

Among the many progressive laws that were passed during his administration and under his leadership are the following:

- The guarantee of deposits law, which absolutely insures the people's money in the banks.
- The corporation tax law.
- The Oregon plan of electing United States senators.
- Non-partisan judiciary law.
- A law requiring publicity of campaign contributions before election.
- A law providing for the physical valuations of railroads.
- A law regulating the issuance of stocks and bonds by public service corporations.
- Anti-trust discrimination law, to regulate trusts and prevent monopoly.
- A law preventing corporations from intimidating employees at elections.
- Daylight saloon law, the best liquor law yet enacted.
- The law controlling rates of surety companies.
- A law providing for the election of local assessors, restoring to the people local self-government in taxes.
- A law preventing the state board of equalization from assessing property under the guise of equalization.
- In the matter of legislation regarding railroads, Governor Shallenberger led the fight for a physical valuation law; also for a law requiring railroads to provide for transfer facilities at crossings; for a law requiring railroads to furnish cars in good condition for the transportation of freight; for a law preventing railroads from operating trains without a full crew; for another law requiring railroads to furnish adequate telephone service in railroad stations. All of the foregoing laws were aimed at abuses, and the passage of these laws were of benefit and use to the general public.
- Governor Shallenberger, by advocating these laws, and by signing them, has proven that he is a progressive on the railroad question.
- No action was taken in Nebraska to stop the issuing of watered stock by public service corporations until Governor Shallenberger, in a special message to the legislature, asked that body to pass a bill forbidding public service corporations from issuing stocks not backed up by actual values. This simple law has stopped and absolutely prevented the further watering of stock of public service corporations in Nebraska. This law is a fit companion to the law providing for the physical valuation of railroads.
- Taxation Law. Governor Shallenberger took advanced ground on taxation legislation. He not only advocated, and signed laws taking away from the county assessor the right to appoint deputy assessors, and providing for the election of precinct assessors by the people, but he forced into the law a provision preventing the state board of equalization from assessing the property of the state under the guise of making an equalization. Not only did he advocate this law, but as a member of the state board of equalization and assessments, he, at all times, opposed any arbitrary raise of any assessment of any county. He saw to it that the board of equalization was in fact an equalizing body and not a board of assessors.

Corporation Taxes. In order to relieve a part of the burdens from the taxpayers of the state the corporation tax law was passed. An effort had been made in a prior legislature to pass this law, but the corporations of the state were powerful enough to defeat it. Governor Shallenberger placed the power of his administration behind this law, and it was enacted and thereby placed upon the statute books of the state, a law that has brought more than $255,300 in taxes into the general fund of the state.

Progressive Laws. Governor Shallenberger advocated and supported and signed the law providing for the Oregon plan for electing United States senators, thereby placing the election of United States senators directly in the hands of the people of the state.

He advocated and signed the law requiring the publication of campaign contributions before election. Nebraska is one of the first states that placed this law on its statute books.

He also advocated and signed a law that prevents the intimidation of voters by their employers.

General Statement. Time and space forbid a complete recital and discussion of the various laws that were supported, advocated and signed by Governor Shallenberger during the time he occupied the governor's office. Suffice it to say that he took advanced ground and an intelligent position on all public questions.

He advocated and supported what was best for the people, irrespective of what effect it might have on the few individuals that were being benefited by laws favoring them. Governor Shallenberger has always stood upon the side of the people, and he has always had a remedy that would correct the evils complained of.

As a Senator. If he is elected to the United States senate, he will propose and advocate real remedies for existing evils in that body as he did when governor.

He went into office upon a platform promising the people a great program of reform legislation. He was only allowed two years in which to redeem his pledge to the people, yet when he left the office the state was out of debt, its credit was at the highest point, and every measure he had promised the people was a living law upon the statute books. He now asks a trial as senator, and if given a chance will make good for the people there, as he did when governor.

If elected United States senator, he will introduce and support in the senate a law limiting the jurisdiction of the inferior federal courts in such a way that they will not have power to declare state statutes invalid. When this law is passed, those who desire to destroy state statutes must go into the courts of the state and have the question first passed on by the state courts, and take an appeal from the highest court in the state to the supreme court of the United States. This is a progressive law. It is not only progressive, but it is sensible and effective. Recall of judges will only apply to the judges elected by the people and will not reach the inferior federal judges who are appointed for life and cannot be reached by a recall. The Shallenberger plan will deprive these inferior federal judges of a power that has been abused by them. It will restore the administration of law to the state courts and place that power nearer the people, where it ought to be.

Governor Shallenberger has never been an employe or the servant of a corporation. He has never been under obligation or in the control of any selfish or favor-seeking interest. He has been in act and deed a real progressive. He has supported progressive men and progressive principles ever since he took an active part in public life.

It can truly be said of him, "His fame does not rest alone upon things written or said, but rather by the arduous greatness of things done and achieved."

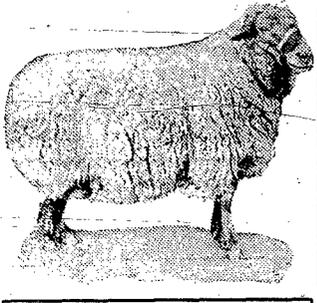

TWELVE REASONS WHY I Should Vote for WOODROW WILSON

- 1. Because he stands for equal rights for all and special privileges for none.
- 2. Because he stands for tariff revision downward.
- 3. Because he stands for trust legislation, which will prevent monopoly and the control of prices.
- 4. Because he stands for the income tax and believes that wealth should share the burdens as well as the blessings of government.
- 5. Because he stands for the rights of labor and the protection of the wage-earner, as shown in his record as Governor of New Jersey.
- 6. Because he stands for the revision of our merchant marine, government promotion of agriculture and industrial and vocational education.
- 7. Because he trusts the people and believes that the governed should govern; and that senators should be chosen by the people.
- 8. Because he performs in office the promises made out of office.
- 9. Because he would "clean house" at Washington as he has "cleaned house" in New Jersey.
- 10. Because he preaches and practices clean politics and opposes machine politics.
- 11. Because he is a real progressive.
- 12. Because his election will restore the Government to the people.

THE SHEEP AS A SOIL CONSERVER

Sheep have maintained a constant, steady importance in the agricultural welfare of Michigan, writes Roscoe Wood in Country Gentleman. Of all the agricultural states Ohio alone has exceeded Michigan in the number of sheep maintained and produced within her borders. The man who has had an average sized farm has considered a flock of sheep just as important to the successful conduct of that farm as a team of horses or a cow. He has depended upon his wool clip for revenue just as he has upon his wheat crop. He has calculated upon his lambs just as he has upon his pigs. That this method has proved profitable is attested by the financial condition of such farmers and by the fertility of the soil.

If there are two things more than any others that have induced the Michigan farmer to keep sheep they are the farm labor problem and the value of sheep manure in maintaining the fertility of his farm. Many are the farmers with 100 to 160 acre farms who do their own work with a little day help in the busiest times. Ten or fifteen years ago they kept one and sometimes two men the greater part of the year. To such farmers the flock brings much revenue with little labor. From the time the sheep go on pasture in the spring until they go into the barn in winter they are manufacturing fertilizer, and they are putting it right where the farmer needs and wants it.

Writing of his success with Tunis sheep, J. N. McPherson, a New York farmer, said in Rural New Yorker: Their hardiness to me seems wonderful, as during the first five years' experience with Tunis, both pure and cross bred, we had never lost one through disease or sickness—in fact, not even had one sick—while our Shropshire grades were constantly dropping away without warning or apparent reason. We have the past two years lost a few, but nearly all by accident. They are a very quiet sheep, long lived and excellent mothers, fairly good shearers, and we get the highest market price for the wool. They are quite easy keepers and, while not so large as many of the mutton breeds, will easily lead them in quality of mutton and profit to the owner where early maturity and quick returns are desired. The Tunis ram shown is Gay Lad, owned by the Arizona State Agricultural college.

Here is what one man told me when I asked him, "Have sheep helped your farm?" "Well, I guess so. They've just about made it. When I came here I could hardly raise anything, and now I can raise just as good crops as any man, and it isn't much more than half as hard."

The methods followed by these farmers with their flocks are at once simple, economical and profitable. Few of the younger men conduct their farms without sheep. There are two seasons of the year when they buy their ewes—in the early spring, just before lambing and shearing, and again in the fall, before breeding, when come the culling and reducing of the flock to its usual number, made necessary by the retention of the best young ewes of the last year's lamb crop. Buying in the spring brings quicker returns. Buying in the fall requires less initial capital and permits opportunity for better selection and direction of the breeding. Fall is generally considered the beginning of the year for the flock. The breeding season begins some time in October and ends in November. During this time the flock is on good timothy or blue grass pasture, and if feed is short a little grain—a half pound a head each day of oats and corn mixed—is fed, so as to keep the ewes in good thriving condition during breeding. Many farmers, however, feed no grain at this time. Practically all the labor required is to feed this grain and keep the flock out of long cold rains.

Most of these farmers practice a five year rotation of corn, oats, wheat, hay and pasture. Many farms have a few acres of land that are good only for pasture, while wood lots furnish considerable feed for the sheep. After the hay is cut the second growth of the meadow supplies feed for the lambs after weaning, while the stubble fields furnish good picking for the ewes. At other times the sheep go with the other stock in the regular pasture. The flock is thus made to utilize what to a great extent would otherwise be waste.

All life is a "whiz"—and every third whiz on the road is a Ford. It's the car of the millions and the millionaire—lightest, rightest, most economical. Many thousand of the seventy-five thousand we're building this year are being sold to owners of more expensive cars.

All Fords are Model T's—all alike except the bodies. The two passenger runabout costs $590—the five passenger touring car $690—the delivery car $700—the town car $900—f. o. b. Detroit, completely equipped. Get latest catalogue from Von Seggern Auto Co.—or direct from Detroit factory.

Ducks have already located the lake that is now filling and the hunters of that place appreciate the fact.

COME!

Important legislation supported by Congressman Dan Stephens:

He favored a decided reduction in the tariff along the lines outlined in the bills passed by the democratic house of Representatives at the extraordinary session last summer, and which were vetoed by President Taft.

He supported the Free Sugar Bill passed by the house, which, if it becomes a law, will save the American people, approximately, one hundred and fifty-two million dollars annually.

He voted for the Excise Tax Bill that provides for a tax on the income of the rich for the purpose of making up for the revenues lost on account of sugar being placed on the free list.

He voted for the bill which was passed by the House requiring the President to show by publication who recommends the judges he appoints to the bench.

He voted for the bill compelling publicity of campaign expenses both before and after the nomination, and before and after the election of candidates for President of the United States.

He voted for the bill providing for an amendment to the Constitution making it possible to elect United States Senators by direct votes of the people.

He voted for the provision in the Postoffice Appropriation Bill providing for a rural parcel post, and for the Shackleford Good Roads Bill, which, if it becomes a law, will give to Nebraska Federal aid to the amount of, approximately, three hundred thousand dollars for the benefit of the post roads. This, he says, "in my judgment, is the entering wedge to the most beneficial legislation the farmers of this country have ever had."

Carrying On Both Shoulders

J. J. Elliott, of the republican national committee, in writing to the Searchlight in reply to a letter made up and without signature—a straw man to take a knock at—states that we are in the midst of prosperity, and as a reason for the prosperity claims that the Payne tariff law is averaging more than 10 per cent lower than was the Dingley law. If this be true how can he object a still lower tariff and greater prosperity?

He then proceeds to set up the claim that a democratic revision of the tariff would spell disaster to the manufacturers of this country—the dear trusts, he means. In answer to the question of American goods sold in foreign markets, he maintains that they are sold there in great quantity and in direct competition because of their superior quality. Good, but wont that same superior quality sell them at home, if true?

Speaking in reply to the question about the situation in Lawrence, Mass., he says that we should be glad to see so many foreigners there; for it indicates that labor conditions are better here than where they came from. But where does the protection to American labor come if it is used to entice the "pauper" laborer from Europe and Asia here?

The panic of 1907 was the result of a distrust of men, not the republican party or the laws. Glad to learn it. The panic of 1892 was, according to this authority, simply a scare—a sort of nightmare because they thought a democrat had been elected president. When they learned that he was not a real democrat they were so frightened that the panic went on. It even became world-wide. Therefore, "Are we not justified in suggesting that the world will sneeze again if the American people take a pinch of democratic snuff?" Such is his line of reasoning(?)

Consider this, first. In the early '90's the gold production was but five million ounces annually, and silver was demonitized. Now the world gold production is five times as great—twenty-five million ounces, and under these changed conditions we doubt if a democratic victory can reverse the laws of nature and create a panic with an increasing money supply.

State Normal Notes

A Hallowe'en party is being planned by the Senior class for Thursday evening.

The next meeting of the Crescent literary society will be on Friday, November 8.

Miss Myrtle Weigand of Bloomfield has registered for work in music and domestic science.

The department of elocution was represented in the chapel exercises of last Friday morning. A. H. Miller read "Toussaint's Overture" and Charles Meeker gave "Cushing's Reply to Hayne."

Miss Lura Stonebraker of Sioux City, Iowa, enrolled Monday morning. Miss Stonebraker spent three years in Morningside College and will complete her course leading to the elementary state certificate.

During the Omaha meeting an inter-Normal conference has been arranged, at which time members of the faculties in the normal schools will meet for the discussion of topics which are of common interest. The Wayne school will be represented by Dr. House, Dean Hahn and Miss Killen.

The Philo literary society will give a public program in the chapel on Friday evening, November 1. Four young men will debate the question, "Resolved, That the State Normal School at Wayne Should Maintain a Football Team and Engage in Contests With Other Educational Institutions." The affirmative side of the question will be defended by Mr. Wilcox and Mr. Penn and the negative will be represented by Mr. Sucha and Mr. Markitan.

The Nebraska state teachers' association will convene at Omaha November 6-8. The work of the Normal will continue during the week, but arrangements will be made so that members of the faculty who wish to do so may attend the meeting. The official program which has just been issued gives the names of the following members of the Wayne Normal faculty a part in the meeting: On Thursday afternoon Dean Hahn will read a paper on "The Elementary Graded Schools" and Professor Lackey will present the subject "Geography in the Grades." On Friday morning before the Literature section Professor House will speak on "Training and Dramatic Instinct," and at the same hour Professor Hahn will talk to the Child study section on "The Distribution of Repetitions in Learning."

The sale of a half interest in Carlson's Breeder Review, a magazine published in Norfolk netted the owner $20,000. The amount involved demonstrates the value of the magazine as a Norfolk institution and Norfolk people will hope that it may continue to have its headquarters in this city. The magazine now goes to most every country in the civilized world and is regarded as authority on farm topics by government officials in many nations.—Norfolk News.

C. G. Bastian and wife returned last week from a visit of six weeks with their sons, Adam and Leonard, who went to Perkins county, South Dakota, last spring to take up a homestead. They report that the boys are running a cattle ranch there under the firm name of Bastian Brothers, and are well pleased with the country and the prospects. Of the country Mr. Bastian says it is part good and part not so good. It is spotted. They have a fair corn crop there this year for a new country that did not get ground in shape to plant before June, and potatoes do well. Mr. Bastian measured off a piece of potato ground and dug it out and figured the acre yield from that at 280 bushels. Alfalfa does well so far as tried. He saw alfalfa sown this season that stood waist high.

In a book that the editor of the Press read one night lately, when he ought to have been in bed, reading until 1 o'clock in the morning to finish it, he encountered this, which points to a moral: "Beauty pays dividends to towns, as to women and gardeners. Since Kansas City put in its park and boulevard system for ten million dollars, adjoining real estate has advanced twelve, or according to the inhabitants, fifteen millions." The moral is that, for a town like David City, a building and loan association, making more home owners, would pay beauty dividends as well as other dividends, for homes owned by their occupants are, as a rule kept in good condition and the residence grounds in tidy shape, while this is not always true of residence property that is rented. David City has a good proportion of home owners and is a real tidy town, but there is room for more home owners and there is also some margin for improvement in appearance.—David City Press.

Among The Churches of Wayne

Presbyterian Church
(Rev. Alexander Corkey, Pastor)
"How to Vote on Election Day," will be the subject of the sermon by the pastor at the Presbyterian church next Sunday morning. In the evening he will speak on "The True Cause of Individual and Social Evil."

The Ladies Aid society met this week on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henry Ley.

The following delegates were chosen by the Sunday school to the County convention in Carroll: Mrs. H. Theobald, Miss Edna Neely, Miss Irma James and Miss Moler.

Next week the Wednesday evening meeting will be devoted to a consideration of plans for the coming Union meeting under the leadership of Evangelist Lindgren.

Dr. Guy W. Wadsworth, formerly president of Bellevue college and now western secretary of the Temperance committee of the Presbyterian church, will visit Wayne early in November in the interests of the committee which he represents. He is at present campaigning in Colorado, as this state votes on a Prohibition Amendment at the coming election.

A large audience filled to overflowing the McEachen schoolhouse last Sabbath afternoon when services were held by Rev. Alexander Corkey, who was assisted by Messrs. A. R. Davis and C. Clasen, and also by Mrs. A. R. Davis and Ensign Young. Services will be held Sunday afternoon, November 10th.

Baptist Church

(Rev. B. P. Richardson, Pastor)
Sunday morning will be our communion service. This service, in many ways is the most helpful of all the meetings of the month. It pleases the pastor to see a large number of the members present on this occasion. The subject of our communion address will be: "The Upward Look."

We desire to call attention to the men's class in Sunday school, taught by Prof. Lewis. Every man of the church ought to feel it a duty to attend this class.

The young people's meeting will be led by Misses Ethel Kopp and Ella McVay. The subject to be studied is "Zeal." Following this meeting the pastor will preach.

Our prayer meetings are splendid both in spirit and in attendance. But we desire to make them more helpful by having you present.

Only two weeks from Sunday, November 17th that our Union Revival Meetings will begin, conducted by Mr. Lindgren of Chicago. On Sunday at 3 p. m. a gathering of the men from each church who are interested in the meeting, will be held at the Baptist church to make final arrangements for Mr. Lindgren's coming. Watch the papers for more details as to the Revival.

Methodist Church

(Rev. Wm. Gorst, Pastor)
Next Sunday the Sunday school will hold two sessions, one in the day time at the usual hour, 11:45 a. m. and the other at 7:30 p. m. The day session is for the usual study of the lesson when it is expected that every member of the Sunday school will be present to be counted on Rally Day and to take a renewed interest in the work of the school. The evening session is for the purpose of rendering the program "Loyalty" prepared by the board of Sunday school of the Methodist Episcopal church. This program doubtless is one of the best ever put out by the denomination and we hope to give it before all the members and patrons of the school. Let all parents as far as possible attend in the evening with their children.

Evangelist Lindgren will begin his work here on the 17th of November.

Next Sunday morning the pastor will present principles for the consideration of voters.

The men of the churches entering into the Union meeting with Mr. Lindgren will be called to meet at three o'clock Sunday afternoon in the Baptist church to organize the work. It is the purpose to make this a short, sharp and decisive campaign and therefore a popular and enthusiastic response to this call is very desirable.

Henry Hansen and wife returned Tuesday from Gregory, South Dakota, where they were called a month ago by the sudden death of their daughter, Mrs. H. F. Slaughter. After the funeral they remained and kept house for the bereaved husband until such time as he could arrange for help.

G. W. Hyatt was a visitor from Randolph Friday, visiting his brother near town and Wayne relatives.

What Wayne Schools Cost

Below is a financial statement of the school year of 1911-12, which shows conclusively that our "free schools" cost a pretty penny—but for all that it is the best invested money that the nation spends. No necessary expense should be spared to improve our schools, and we believe it can be improved by adding to the course more of practical training. Manual training, domestic science and agriculture should have more attention.

The Amendments

Any straight party vote, no matter which party, will be counted in Nebraska as a vote for all the constitutional amendments which are to be voted upon in the regular election. Secretary of State Wait has sent out the following notice to election boards:

The election boards in each voting precinct in your county should be instructed to count all straight votes of each political party for the five constitutional amendments. You will note on my certificate of nomination that all parties voting at the primary held April 19, endorsed the same by a majority vote, and that the progressive party endorsed them at their state convention held Sept. 5, 1912. The courts have held that where an amendment is thus endorsed it becomes a party measure and in effect is the same as nomination or endorsement of a candidate. Where a cross is not made in the party circle at the party circle at the top of the ballot, voting must indicate their vote for or against an amendment by placing a cross in the square at the right of each of the amendments. It is important that election boards be so informed that the votes on the amendments may be properly canvassed. Newspapers will aid in giving this information publicity.

Nebraska and her Neighbors

1910 was not a banner year for Nebraska farmers, yet they added five hundred thirty-seven millions of dollars to the wealth of the world as the product of their labors applied to the matchless soil of this great state.

They did this by raising 390,000,000 more bushels of oats and 152,000,000 more bushels of corn than South Dakota.

They raised 28,000,000 more bushels of oats than the state of Iowa.

They raised 48,000,000 more bushels of oats and 41,000,000 more bushels of corn than the state of Missouri.

They raised 62,000,000 more bushels of corn than Ohio and 45,000,000 more than Indiana.

They raised 37,000,000 more bushels of corn than Kansas on a smaller acreage and 25,000,000 bushels more than Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota combined.

They raised more wheat than the great states of Iowa and Missouri combined and 3,000,000 bushels more than the great wheat-growing state of North Dakota.

In 1911, Nebraska raised potatoes to the value of $1,047,000 more than the combined potato crop of Kansas and Missouri, with an average yield per acre greater than the combined yield of both those states.

In 1911, Nebraska raised oats to the value of $1,442,000 more than the oat crop of Kansas and $7,000,000 more than that of Missouri.

On January 1, 1912, Nebraska had six million dollars' worth more than that of Missouri. On January 1, 1912, Nebraska had six million dollars' worth more swine than Missouri and 1,459,000 more head of swine than Kansas, with a surplus value of over fifteen million dollars more than the value of all the swine in the Sunflower state.

A state that can do these things is a good state to live in. Invest your money in Nebraska land.

Mrs. L. Elsinger was here Wednesday from Pender closing the deal by which their residence in this city is transferred.

You can save money every day you run this, the newest, most beautiful, most up-to-date of all hard coal burners.

It is but another example of Round Oak materials, construction and skilled workmanship. It is perfectly proportioned, richly yet tastefully ornamented. The Round Oak Base Burner will give efficient service for a lifetime. Burns stove or chestnut coal successfully.

Just remember, 42% more heat—nearly one-half.

"The Work That's Different"

A MISTAKE

But It Made No Difference In the End

By LESTER ROWLAND

"Good night, darling!" I had got into my berth in a sleeping car. It was late, and I was one of the last to retire. The lamps were turned low. Suddenly the curtains were divided. I could see the outline of a woman's head and bust leaning over me. A pair of lips were pressed against mine.

"Oh, heavens!" In the same voice as the "good night, darling."

Evidently the lady had expected to find the waxen lips of a child and had met instead the mustached lips of a man. Of course she had simply mistaken the berth. There are many such mistakes on sleeping cars, and it is a wonder there are not more. The moment one leaves his section at night when the curtains are all hung every curtain looks the same, and if he goes to the end of the car and returns he is lost in a wilderness of drapery. Perhaps the lady felt her mistake in the dark she couldn't see it—before her lips touched mine, but a slight curve in the track threw her in my direction, and they were pressed down upon mine in an unintentional long drawn kiss—a kiss that neither of us could help, but to me a delicious kiss, so delicious that I lay awake half the night thinking about it.

The car was occupied by through passengers, and I believed I should in the morning find the lady who had said "good night, darling," and had given me that delicious kiss. I did not think she would likely know whom she had kissed, but fancied that I should be able to single her out from among the other women on the car. I could hear a child's voice in the next section, and doubtless the lady had intended to kiss the child good night.

Hardly had the berths near me been made up in the morning when I began my observations. In the section where I had heard the child's voice sat a little girl of ten, a young lady of twenty and a nursemaid. In the section next mine on the other side sat an elderly couple. There was but the one young woman near me, and though it had been too dark for me to see her the night before, I could not, at least I would not, believe that she was old. I listened for the sound of the voice of the lady who sat with the little girl, and the moment I heard it I knew it belonged to her who had said, "Good night, darling."

There were two of us in my section, I, who had occupied the lower berth, and a man who had slept in the upper berth. There was no reason to suppose that the young lady knew which slept below. Whether she knew that she had kissed one of us I had no means of knowing. It was quite possible that she had located the section after the mishap. I determined that she should not suspect from any betrayal of mine that I was the fortunate possessor of the lost kiss.

She was sitting with her back to me, and I could only see her side face when she turned to speak to the child who sat beside her. I was pleased to notice that the profile was attractive. I arose and went into a forward car for no reason in the world than to have a look at her full face when I returned. When I did return from the moment I opened the car door till I had passed her she was looking out through the window.

In this she made a mistake. In such matters between the sexes we find clues in very small things, just as the detectives do. By refusing me a single glance the lady caused me to suspect that she had made some progress in learning whom she had kissed. Women are far more adept at finding out such things than men, and there was no more reason why I should have located her as the one who made the blunder than that she should have located me as the one who had profited by it.

I was very glad to notice that the trio—the lady, the little girl and the nurse—had settled themselves for a long journey. They had a hamper containing food dairies sufficient for several days' journey. My lady settled herself down in a graceful and easy position. The little girl arranged her toilet for comfort, and there was every indication that they were there to stay. I had high hopes that I should be able to occupy the same car with them all the way to San Francisco, whither I was bound. But how should I get acquainted, for if I must refrain from a word with my lady what would it profit me?

It was not long before I saw the tickets of the party in whom I was interested and that they were the same as mine. I therefore had no occasion to hurry an acquaintance, but I formed my plans for one. As a good general will attack the weakest point, so did I. The little girl could not remain all the while in her section and soon began to race through the car, jostling another child about the same age. I began on the other child, offering her fruits and sweetmeats, finally extending my gifts to the object through whom I desired to act. I offered her a large juicy pear. She put her little hand on it covetously, looking at me as though wondering if she might accept it. Then ran away to her guardian, and I knew she was retreating of the offer and asking if she might take the gift. The lady did not look around, but the child came back to me and took the pear. I had gained nothing, the lady having, perhaps purposely, avoided any knowledge of the person to whom the child was indebted.

During the journey I laid every conceivable plan for making the lady's acquaintance and carried out many of them. She blocked every advance I made, not pointedly, but so adroitly that I had no reason to think she was doing so intentionally. When we reached San Francisco I was obliged to part with her without having had a word with her. She went off into the great world, leaving me entirely ignorant of where I might find her and with the probability that I would never meet her again.

I tried to forget the words and the kiss, but in spite of my efforts to drive both out of my head they remained there to tantalize me. It had never occurred to me how delicious it would be if some lovely woman should bend down over me and bid me "good night, darling," sealing the words with a kiss. I had been unconscious of what I had failed to enjoy. I had supposed bachelor life to be the cut-throat state for a man to live in—no cares, no curtain lectures, no obligation to take a woman out to theaters, operas, social functions. And now, without being even engaged, I had been introduced to a momentary bliss such as is a married man's continuous possession.

Several years passed during which influenced by this incident, I tried to settle my mind upon some young woman that she might repeat my experience in the sleeping car. But if there is one thing beyond our control it is love. I met excellent young women, many of whom would have honored me by marrying me, but I did not want any of them.

One summer I was at a hotel in the country, crowded with guests. It was evening, and I stood at the foot of a stairway, about to part with a little niece of mine who was going upstairs to bed.

"Good night, darling," I said as I bent down and kissed her. A lady standing with her back to me turned and faced me. Her eyes and mine met. She flushed scarlet. She was the lady who had kissed me.

The blush gave me information that I was very glad to receive. It told me that the lady had known while on the journey that I was the man she had kissed. It told me that she had remembered me. While we stood gazing at each other I was not troubling myself what to do in the matter. I simply smiled. Something like a smile came to her lips.

"Your face is familiar to me," I said. "I think we have met before."

"You must be mistaken. I have no recollection."

Evidently the lie was too much for her. She stopped short. "My memory is better than yours," I said. "We were on the same train travelling to San Francisco. A little girl was with you about the same age as the child I have just bidden good-night. I succeeded in scraping an acquaintance with her, but failed in attempting to do the same with you. I esteem myself fortunate in meeting you again and trust you may not take flight before I find some mutual friend to introduce me."

"It isn't necessary. I know a gentleman when I see one."

"This was very nice of her, but would seem to be not consistent with efforts to avoid me while on the train with her. However I had no mind to find fault with my good fortune and with the remark that I should do myself the honor and the pleasure to see her again, not wishing to risk anything by haste, I bowed politely and passed on."

But my heart was light. I had found her who had been in my thoughts for several years. I was in the same hotel with her, and I vowed that she should not again escape me. But I did not propose to risk anything by putting off getting a better hold of the situation. I found her sitting on the veranda the next morning chatting with a friend of mine. I joined them.

"Will you kindly present me?" I asked of the mutual acquaintance in a formal tone. A smile dawned on the lips that had kissed mine and broadened perceptibly. Perhaps there was something in the formality of the matter that seemed ludicrous to her in contrast with the unconventional incident that had occurred at our first meeting.

But that bit of unconventionality I retained not only from mentioning, but gave her no hint whatever by which she could identify me as the man who had taken part in it. My object was to create an uncertainty in her mind as to my being the person she had kissed, thinking that sooner or later she would throw out feelers on the subject.

It was not long before she did so. She began by remarking upon the inconvenience of sleeping cars. I said that I had usually found them very comfortable. She tried me again far more directly by asking me if I had ever had any singular experience in a sleeping car. I couldn't remember any such.

I had gone to the hotel in question to spend a week, but I stayed a month—a most delightful period, during which the sun must have shone very bright, for I certainly made a luxurious crop of hay. That was some years ago, and I have since had many good nights sealed with kisses. While I admit they are still enjoyable, none have ever had the flavor of that first one to which I had no right. Stolen fruit may be sweetest, but I found mistaken fruit still more to my taste.

But not till I had taken my first kiss did I admit that she had taken her first already.

Showing Off the Author.
One day the Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, in a tramp through Cornwall, came to a little village in which a tea meeting was going on. Mr. Pearse entered the little chapel and joined in the tea. He was in the most unclerical of costumes, which was an act of sense on his part, but during the progress of tea one or two of the "leaders" managed to recognize him, whereupon one of them approached him and said in an anxious whisper:
"Be you the Rev. Mark Guy Pearse?"
"Yes—I be," he answered.
"I thought as how you was. Now, do you see, we want to raise a little money, and a thought have struck us. Do 'ee just come out quiet like and say nothing to nobody, and then we will put 'ee in the vestry, and we will go into the chapel and say, 'The Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, author of 'Daniel Quorum,' is in the vestry and can be seen at threepence each, the proceeds to go for the good of the cause.'—London Answers.

The Top Hat in Sculpture.
The statue of Alfred de Musset, placed some years ago at Neuilly, just outside the Porte Maillot (Paris), represents the poet in the outdoor costume of his epoch, holding a silk hat in one hand. Personally I infinitely prefer this "dandy Musset" to the huge and cumbersome group outside the Comedie Francaise or the enormous composition in relief on the Cours-la-Reine. Musset is perhaps the only individual—certainly the only poet—who has three statues in Paris. The most remarkable effort in this line which I have noticed is the large equestrian statue of Mr. Sawbridge in front of the principal entrance to Olanthigh towers, near Wye, Kent. I fancy he was a lord mayor, and, seated on a prancing steed, he is holding an early Victorian top hat about eighteen inches in front of his brow. A tight frock coat completes the top ensemble.—London Notes and Queries.

One Didn't Count.
A local official, at a dinner in Philadelphia, praised the Quaker City ardently.
"I must even praise," he said with a smile, "our exclusiveness—we carry it so far, you know. Birth is not enough with us; residence is equally important, and they who live above Market street are doomed. Here, surely, is exclusiveness with a vengeance."
"They tell a story about a dinner in Rittenhouse square. At this dinner, as the fish course began, one woman whispered to another:
"Dear me, there are thirteen at table!"
"But the other woman smiled and answered calmly:
"Compose yourself, my dear Mrs. Cabbidgler Waddle. Mrs. North-Broad is not really one of us. She lives uptown, you know."—Exchange.

A Hostess and an Emergency.
Lady K. had sent Parnell an invitation to dinner, but Charles, who was very absentminded with respect to social functions and unconventional to the extreme, had forgotten the right date of the party. He therefore turned up a couple of evenings afterward an hour before the time. Lady K., glad to have him on any terms, did not undecide him as to his error, but hastily sent off several notes explaining the situation and asking some of her most intimate friends to help her in her emergency. She also ordered a hastily improvised dinner from a near caterer's.—"Life of Parnell."

A Natural Query.
The late General F. D. Grant, when discussing military neatness, used of ten to tell a story about his father.
"My father was talking to General Sherman in his tent one day," he would begin, "when a third general entered, a brigadier notorious for his slovenliness. After the brigadier left my father blew forth a cloud of smoke and said:
"Sherman, I wonder whom that man gets to wear his shirts the first week?"

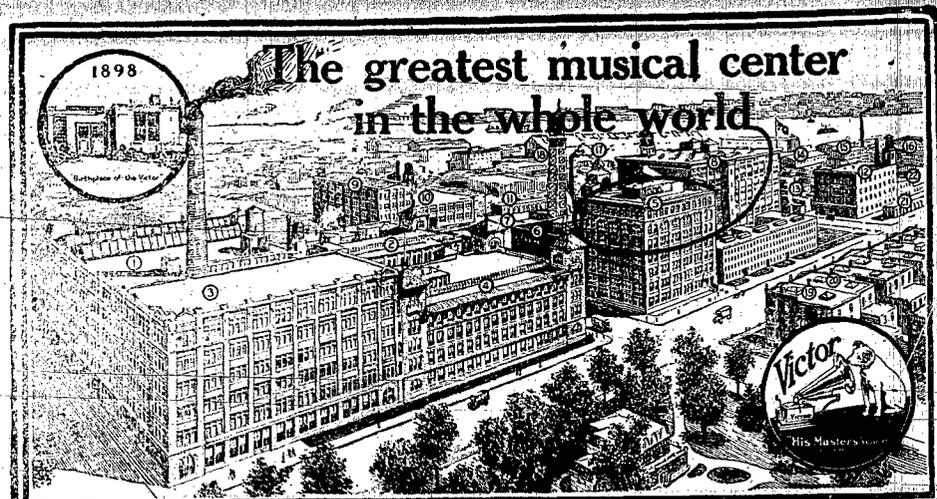

Naming a Book.
It is not generally known how Kipling chose the title "The Light That Failed" for the book that helped to make him famous. He had almost decided to call the novel "The Failure," although he was somewhat dissatisfied with this rather prosaic title. One evening as he was sitting in his study reading by lamplight the light went down suddenly, when Kipling exclaimed:
"By Jove, I've got it! 'The Light That Failed!'"

Gilded Pets.
"Riches," said the ready made philosopher, "have wings, disturb our rest and require constant care."
"I suppose so," replied Mr. Dustin Stax, "but human nature is human nature, and we will keep on wanting dollars the same as women want dogs and canary birds."—Washington Star.

A Man of His Word.
"Well, old man, did Binks keep his word and share his last dollar with you?" asked Hodetkins.
"Yes," sighed Downout. "He did, but he'd made the same promise to twenty others, and all I got was a nickel."—Harper's.

Culinary Ignorance.
Mrs. Kaller—Cooks are such ignorant things nowadays. Mrs. Justwed—Aren't they? They can't do the simplest things. I asked mine to make some sweetbreads the other day, and she said she couldn't.—McCall's Magazine.

Sensitive.
Dentist—We must kill the nerve of that tooth. Patient—Then I will go out of the room. I'm too tender-hearted to witness it.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

GREATER than the Metropolitan Opera House; greater than Covent Garden, where the royalty of England is entertained; greater than La Scala at Milan, the Grand Opera House of Paris, and the Royal Opera of Berlin; greater in fact than all the opera houses and places of entertainment in the world is the seventh floor of Building No. 5—the centre of a city in itself formed by the modern structures of steel and concrete that house the giant industry of the Victor and Victor-Victrola.

To this building in the city of Camden, just across the historic Delaware River from the city of Philadelphia, comes a never-ending procession of the very greatest artists in the whole world. Today it may be Caruso or Amato, and tomorrow it may be Melba, or Tetrassini, or Schumann-Heink, or Farrar; or it may be several of them assembling to unite in making a masterpiece like the "Sextette from Lucia." Or it may be Paderewski, or Kubelik, or Elman, or Harry Lauder, or Blanche Ring; and then again it might be Sousa and his band, or Victor Herbert and his orchestra.

But whoever it is or whatever the organization, rest assured that within the four walls of this building is heard, day-in and day out, year in and year out, music in all its forms such as no other place on earth has ever heard.

And unlike music that is heard in any other place, which is only a momentary pleasure ending with its rendition, Victor music lives forever. From its beginning in Building No. 5, it goes through the various processes necessary to its perpetuation and eventually leaves the shipping department (Buildings Nos. 9 and 10) to be heard again and again in hundreds of thousands of homes, just as it is heard in the sacred precincts of the recording room on the seventh floor of Building No. 5.

You can hear some of this exquisite music today. Come in and we'll gladly play your favorite selections. Victors $10 to $100. Victor-Victrolas $15 to $200. Terms to suit your convenience.

Fear Conjurer's Presents.
"Just once at every performance I regret my skill as a magician," said the conjurer. "That is when the little folk I call up on the stage to assist me in a certain turn are afraid to accept the bona fide presents I offer them for fear they will go off. At a certain point in the performance I request a girl and a boy of ten or thereabout to step up. After an interchange of confidences, in which they tell me their first names, and I tell them mine, we get along swimmingly together until they leave the stage, when I present each with an appropriate present. Their gingerly way of handling it tweaks my heart-strings painfully. It would please me to possess those youngsters' trust and confidence, but my success as a magician precludes that. With books and candy held at arm's length they tiptoe down the aisle, and, no doubt, every chocolate is nibbled and every paper turned in constant terror lest some new trick be sprung on them."—New York Times.

The Making of Paper.
The fineness to which the rags are ground has no direct influence on the durability of the paper, for even broken cells of linen and hemp remain unchanged for thousands of years in favorable conditions. The employment of strong alkalies and of starch size appears to be the cause of rag paper becoming yellow and brittle, while neutral or mildly alkaline treatment and animal size favor durability. Air drying favors the durability of paper. Even the best rag papers are injured if not destroyed by soaking or excessive dampness. It is impossible to speak with certainty of the durability of modern papers containing few or no rags, as the ultimate effect of the new process of making, sizing, loading and calendaring cannot be foreseen. Many new papers have already proved their lack of permanence.—Exchange.

Gunpowder.
The explosive nature of gunpowder, which is made of charcoal, sulphur and saltpeter, is due to the fact that when fired the charcoal and sulphur are burned at the expense of the oxygen in the saltpeter, much heat is developed and large quantities of gas are produced. This gas exerts great pressure on the sides of the gun; hence its disruptive or propulsive effects. When gunpowder is fired in a gun the explosive force of the gases produced acts on the shot all the time it is moving along the barrel and gradually increases its velocity. If the explosion were so sudden as to be practically instantaneous the greater part of the forces would be exerted mainly on the sides of the chamber containing the powder and not, as is actually the case, on the shot.

A Prisoner of St. Kilda.
A romance of St. Kilda is the story of Lady Grange, wife of an eighteenth century Scottish lord of session. She was for some mysterious reason seized and carried off in the dark, she knew not by whom, and conveyed by night journeys to the highland coast, and thence by sea to St. Kilda. There among the few inhabitants she remained for several years a prisoner, provided, however, with a constant supply of food and a woman to wait upon her. No inquiry was made for her, but at last she conveyed a letter to a friend by the daughter of a catechist, who hid it in a clew of yarn. A ship was sent to rescue her, but her jailers got wind of it and transferred her to the island of Herries, where she died.

Does Your Farm Pay Six Per Cent on $300 an Acre?

IF NOT--WHY NOT

The Twentieth Century Farmer, the great exponent of new methods of scientific farming and soil culture, tells how it is done.

You can do it on your farm.

The Twentieth Century Farmer tells you how.
