A MANUFACTURING INDUSTRY

That is Growing at Wayne. The X-Ray Incubator and Brooder Plant Getting Ready for Renewed Activities

President Kate of the X-Ray Incubator Co., was a caller Monday morning and we noted a few things from the words he let drop that might be interesting, for many people fail to comprehend the scope of business turned out in a season by this company. Just now they are getting ready for the finishing rush that will be on from the near future until the first of next June. They are now busy unloading cars, having several on track, some with lumber, others with paper and other material. With the cars now here and those due this week they will have eleven car loads of material in stock before the first of December, besides the cars of iron and other material which came earlier.

Last year they wrapped and tied all incubators and brooders shipped, but owing to some railroad regulations regarding freight the output for the coming season will be crated, and four car loads of elm crating is ready to be used for that purpose. The best of California redwood lumber is used in the machines, and several cars of that are here or on the way.

Some of it was ordered nearly six months ago, and is just showing up.

Advertising is the largest single item of expense, we presume, for the X-Ray ads are seen in many of the leading publications of the land, especially in poultry papers and ladies' magazines of standing—where space runs quickly into money, and $40,000 is the figure quoted as the cost of advertising.

Their catalogues this year will be the most elaborate they have ever had. With embossed covers and highclass engravings it will be a work of art. The Democrat job presses are now busy printing 40,000 envelopes to enclose them and 50,000 order blanks to accompany them when they start on a journey in reply to inquiries which the advertising will bring. If the material now coming is all made up and sold during the coming season, as the management plan it to be, it will require nearly 40 cars to contain it, so for an inland town Wayne has a manufacturing industry which is of some importance.

The X-Ray has no agents, no middlemen, but goes direct from factory to the one who buys it, the extra cost of selling by agents and dealers being put into the machine and printers' ink.

The Cradle.

RISBAN—Sunday, November 3, 1912, to Geo. Risban and wife, a daughter.

Wedding Bells

The merry peal of the wedding bell rang forth Wednesday morning at 8:30 o'clock, when Miss Frances Geary and William Ahern were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was performed by Father Kearns at St. Mary's Catholic church and celebrated with a nuptial high Mass in the presence of the immediate relatives and a number of friends.

The bride was gowned in a handsome dress of white veil trimmed with lace and hand embroidery and carried white carnations. She also wore a tulle veil caught up with white carnations. Miss Margie Geary attended the bride while John Ahern assisted as best man. Following the interesting ceremony an elaborate wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride.

The bride is a daughter of W. J. Geary of this city and is a lady of many womanly graces and accomplishments. The groom is a son of Mrs. John Ahern of Carroll. As a man of moral and industrious habits he is altogether worthy of the lady whose heart he has won. They will reside on a farm about four miles north of Carroll where the groom will engage in farming. We join in wishing them life's choicest blessings.

Grand Ball at City Hall

It has been arranged to give a grand ball at the new city building on Wednesday evening next, the 26th inst. This dance is for a benefit for the base ball boys, and tickets are being subscribed for in numbers to indicate that this ball be equal to the one given for the firemen. Those who love dancing will want to attend for it was the unanimous verdict that the new city building has the best of rooms for this amusement. The management say that good music will be provided. The ball team gave Wayne the cleanest and best ball that has ever been played here, the season through, and as expenses were a little more than the income this ball will probably help to even matters somewhat. Will you be there?

Commission Plan Fails at Norfolk

Tuesday the citizens of Norfolk voted upon the adoption of the commission form of government, and lacked but two votes of having a majority. The News says that fear of "ring rule" was at least in part instrumental in defeating the proposed change. The saloons were against it, fearing that the anti-saloon element would be able to reduce the number of saloons. The vote was 284 for the plan, 286 against it. Under state law the question cannot again be voted upon before the expiration of two years.

Judge Welch went to Pierce this morning where court will be held next.

DISTRICT COURT ADJOURNES

Bar Docket Cleaned of Number of Cases. Jury Kept Ten Days. Many Extra Jurors Summoned

Judge A. A. Welch adjourned the November term of District Court for this county Wednesday evening after two busy weeks.

When the Democrat closed the forms last week the jury was still out in the case of the State vs. Chris. Maas, a very complicated assault case, a bloody fight between two men and conflicting evidence as to particulars. After being out two days without agreement the jury was discharged without a verdict.

In the case of the State vs. Geo. Martin, of whose conviction for illegal sale of liquor we told last week, the judge imposed a fine of $200.

In the case of Wm. C. Wightman vs. Patrick Coleman, in which plaintiff sued for $270, for professional services, and Coleman put in a counterclaim for damages, the counter claim was not allowed by jury, and Wightman was allowed $100 and interest, amounting in all to $121.29.

In the case of Daniel Martin vs. H. L. Hamer for damages for alleged breach of contract regarding a field of stalks and care of cattle the jury found for defendant without delay.

The State vs. Roy and Howard Neary in which Henry Wessel-schmidt was the complaining witness, on charge of assault, which assault consisted of plaintiff being victim of a snowballing last winter, appealed from the county court will have to be tried again, as the jury could not agree. It is a case of little importance, it seems to many.

In the case 1936 of the docket the claim of Anna and August Michels against the estate of Henry Massow, deceased, for care of said Massow, was allowed to the amount of $992.16; the allowance of a greater amount not being legal because of the fact that statute imitations would exempt allowance of claim prior to about four years back.

The Citizens National Bank was given judgment in the sum of $634.30 against Timothy Ryan and P. G. Burress on a note.

State vs. Paul and William Brueckner charged with resisting and mistreating an officer, the city-marshal of Hoskins, came in for a share of attention, the case having been up at the February term without settlement, the jury disagreeing. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty after deliberating about seven hours.

The last case was the State vs. Simon Goemann in which the jury returned a verdict of guilty of the illegal sale of intoxicating liquor. The judge has not given sentence in this and the Brueckner Brothers.

This term of court will no doubt prove an expensive luxury as the jury fees alone were $922.30.

There were nine jury cases tried—two juries disagreeing, and four cases were settled before coming to trial.

Fanske Moves to Larger Quarters

L. A. Fanske, having leased the Phil. H. Kohl store room just south of Ahern's store is sparing no pains and going to no small amount of expense to make his new quarters all that a model jewelry store should be—a light, cheerful room in which he can increase his stock to meet the demands of a business that has been constantly growing since he located at Wayne, and properly display his wares. With more room he has been buying liberally, so that when his new stock is brought out for public inspection as is being done as rapidly as possible, it will be with commendable pride that he asks the public to come and see for themselves.

During the three years Mr. Fanske has been at Wayne he has established his reputation as a workman at his trade, as a business man, as a citizen, and many are the friends who are glad to note this evidence of a constantly growing business.—adv.

Thanksgiving Proclamation

Correspondents and advertisers will please take notice that The Democrat will issue early next week so that we may have time to be thankful, and send in copy accordingly. Don't forget!

School Notes

Attendance is very good. Examinations today and tomorrow.

Mrs. Theobald and Miss Babcock were recent visitors.

The Hoskins teachers visited the Wayne schools on last Friday afternoon.

Mr. Henkel has hung the storm windows on the west and north sides of the building and now all is ready for the cold winter days. Miss Beechel and Everett Raymond made a beautiful drawing on the board in the high school room appropriate for the Thanksgiving season.

On Tuesday Miss Beechel showed the high school folks an exhibit of drawing and art work from the public schools of Turtle Creek, Pennsylvania. All enjoyed the exhibit very much.

The Juniors gave the following program last Friday morning with Ferne Oman presiding: Biography of Woodrow Wilson by Irwin Sears; Biography of Theodore Roosevelt by Hattie Crockett; Violin Solo by Esther Johnson; Current events by Nellie Gustafson.

Mr. Lingren Speaks to High School

On Wednesday morning the high school students and teachers enjoyed an address by Mr. Lingren, the evangelist. Mr. Lingren took for his theme "Neglect Not the Gift Within You," saying that every person is endowed with the possibility of doing something worth while. He told his audience that today each person is what he wants or wills to be. He divided all people into three classes—the Wills, the Won'ts and the Can'ts, and asked everyone to quickly put himself into the proper class. The speaker said that the reason people fail is that they really have no ambition or desire to success. Success he said is 10 per cent inspiration and 90 per cent perspiration and genius is at least 90 per cent hard work. Too many people want maximum pay and minimum work. Mr. Lingren gave concrete examples showing that great achievements are the result of long and hard work.

Lastly the speaker made a plea for a higher standard of manhood among the young men of our land. He told the girls that the standard of manhood is determined by what they demand it to be and urged the young women to help the men raise the standard by demanding a higher, nobler, cleaner and more manly manhood.

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"

Conservative, yet intelligently conceived and effectively portrayed, is the dual character of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, as handled by Elwin Strong of the Elwin Strong company, playing at the Lyric theatre. Last night he gave the third consecutive performance—a trying ordeal—of the strange man of Robert Louis Stevenson's thrilling novel, to a fair sized audience. The burden of the performance rested upon Mr. Strong, but he was equal to the requirement. In the part of Jekyll he illustrated well the haunted soul of a man who realizes he has lost his power of self control and that the demon which he has invited for experiment, by the use of a dangerous drug, has gained the mastery. In the cringing, horrid role of Hyde the acting was excellent, and the hideousness of the situation gripped the audience. The quick changes, some in plain view of the audience, from one character to the other, were mystifying and appropriately climacteric. Several curtain calls testified to the appreciation of Mr. Strong's convincing effort.—K. C. Star.

Elwin Strong will again appear before a Wayne audience at the opera house, Thursday evening, November 28th. A nice place to spend Thanksgiving evening.—adv.

Sam, our veteran newspaper man, now sells turnips and carrots—a side line he is supposed to have taken up this week. He got quite an order for these vegetables too, from Ed Ellis' cook, Monday evening. See Sam about it and get your orders in early.

J. A. Wayland, owner and founder of the Appeal to Reason, published at Girard, Kansas, shot and killed himself at his home at that place November 14th. He founded the Ruskin colony in Tennessee and had started several papers advocating the cause of Socialism. His rash act is attributed to despondency caused by the death of his wife, which occurred in an auto accident a year ago, and to a probable indictment by the Federal grand jury soon to meet at Fort Scott. Wayland was 58 years old.

The assayer's scales used by the assayers at the United States mints, says the Scientific American, are so finely adjusted as to be sensitive to a change so slight as one two hundredths milligramme. In order to make this little weight appreciable by us common folks the papers state that these scales will weigh a pencil mark; they take a piece of paper an inch square, weigh it, then draw a lead pencil mark across the paper and weigh again. The scales will show an increase in weight of from one to three one hundredths of a milligramme, according to the softness of the pencil and the width of the mark. These scales are used to determine the fineness of the samples assayed.

One of the latest leap year stunts that has come to our knowledge was performed at Ponca where a widow of 45 summers captured and married a young man of but half that age. She must have been a spry "old girl" to catch such brisk young man. While there is life there is hope, our maidens fair should step lively, for but six weeks remain of the year.

On last Saturday afternoon Mrs. W. Alberts of Ainsworth was taken to a Sioux City hospital for an examination, being in critical condition, the result of a recent accident. Several weeks ago Mrs. Alberts went to Sioux City to visit her mother at the hospital and while attempting to alight from a street car, in some manner she fell. She returned home without noticing any serious results and after a few days grew from bad to worse and it is thought she sustained internal injuries. Her uncle, Mr. Wolstein and Dr. Peters of Bloomfield accompanied her.

The Adams county (Iowa) Free Press tells of the difference in counties, and cites Montgomery where the republicans with a majority of 1200 strong take the whole dose given them by the bosses, and Appanoose county where part of the republican official were re-elected and part of the democrats with a range of majorities of from 11 to 1600. The Montgomery county republican always takes it straight. But once in 25 years has a democrat been elected in that county, and then a rank progressive nomination to secure the republican nomination and was opposed by a conservative democrat.

"Graustark," which comes to the Wayne Opera House, Monday eve, Dec. 2nd is an adaptation from George Barr McCutcheon's vigorous novel of the same title. Containing every complement for a strong and intensely interesting play, every worthy incident has been thoroughly and eagerly grasped by Grace Hayward, who constructed the same for stage purposes.

The theme of the play is delightful. The plot is laid in Edleweiss, Graustark, a mythical principality, where two young Americans are discovered following the beautiful unknown girl, who is in reality Princess Yotive, the ruling sovereign. Lorry, one of the Americans, proves to be of great assistance to her, both in America, where he first meets her, and then in her own country. That she would finally cast aside her royal rights if need be, to marry him, is nearly a foregone conclusion. The play is one that strikes a happy chord in almost everybody. It is one where love and honor and bravery are rampant, here the atmosphere is pregnant with heroism, and here dishonor and trickery meet with defeat and disaster. Mgr. Smith of the opera house gives this attraction his personal guarantee.

Departments Request $1,500,000 Over 1911 Appropriations.

WATER POWER COMPLAINT UP

State Board of Irrigation Hears Arguments in Niobrara Case—No Brief Filed in Stehr Case—Wesleyan Presidents to Meet in Lincoln.

That the legislature will be asked to increase appropriations next year $1,500,000 over the appropriations of 1911 was indicated in the estimates of expenses received by the state auditor from the several departments and bureaus.

If economy is to be the program of the legislature this year it will be necessary to pare down the appropriations far below the estimated lowest cost of operating the state government machinery for the coming biennium.

In the case of nearly every department an increased allowance over two years ago is being demanded. In some instances the heads of departments ask two and three times as much as they did two years ago.

Out of the twenty-two departments and institutions heard from by the auditor, only four are content with the appropriation sum of 1911. These departments are the attorney general's office, the railway commission, the state veterinarian and the geological survey.

With these should be counted the Grand Island soldiers' home, for which is asked $1,600 less than it received in 1911, and the Nebraska City school for the blind, whose requisition is $8,000 below its 1911 appropriation.

The remaining sixteen reporting estimates so far ask appropriations which will total an increase in sight at this time of about $1,500,000. The total appropriation of 1911 has been exceeded $164,900 in the last two years by estimates so far.

Board of Agriculture.

The state board of agriculture is asking for an appropriation of $183,000, although this is not included in the above report. This is to be used for new buildings and maintenance. Secretary McElroy has appended a note to his estimate stating that while the fair took in $200,000 in the last two years, this was practically used up in current expense.

The state board of station registration, which turned into the state treasury in fees $39,000 in the last two years, asks an appropriation of $63,000 for carrying on the work during the next two years.

Wesleyan Presidents to Meet.

More than 100 presidents of Wesleyan schools and colleges in the United States will gather in Lincoln early next year, making an epoch in the Nebraska history of Methodism. Chancellor Fulmer of the Nebraska Wesleyan university announced that the senate of the Wesleyan presidents had decided to hold their next meeting in Nebraska, this being the first time that the body will ever have gathered west of the Mississippi river.

No Brief in Stehr Case.

Because no briefs were filed in the Henry Stehr case, in which the defendant is charged with having caused the death of his young stepchild by compelling it to spend a night in a woodshed in cold weather, the supreme court will probably refuse to entertain a motion for a new trial. The case was appealed from Madison county. Stehr asked that the briefs be printed at state expense, but the court refused to do so.

Diphtheria at Ponca.

As the result of the visit of State Health Inspector Wilson to Ponca, five families in that town are under quarantine for diphtheria and orders have issued that every school child be vaccinated at once. The inspector advised that no public meetings, including church services, be held until the situation improves. One hundred persons in the town are said to be affected by the disease.

Water Power Complaint.

Gordon was charging down the field with the ball when Fitzgerald tackled him. His head was thrown back suddenly and he fell to the ground unconscious. Gordon was also laid out by the impact. Medical attention was given Fitzgerald and it was found that the second vertebra in his neck was broken. He was taken to St. Joseph's hospital, never regaining consciousness. He was the son of John Fitzgerald, proprietor of the Reid hotel at Valley.

The body was taken to Valley for burial.

TALBOT OBJECTS TO DUNGAN

Secures Delay in Injunction Brought by Insurgent Woodmen.

Hastings, Neb., Nov. 19.—That Judge Harry S. Dungan is a member of the insurgent Woodmen camp is the plea filed with the clerk of the district court by which A. R. Talbot, head of the order, secures delay in the hearing of the injunction suit that was scheduled for today. The suit may not now be tried before Dec. 1.

Local Woodmen insurgents take this as the first series of dilatory moves by the head-camp in an effort to stave off the injunction suit until after the rates actually go into effect Jan. 1.

Will Send Representative to Legislature to Work for Legislation.

Omaha, Nov. 19.—John Light, representative of the Barbers' union at the Nebraska State Federation of Labor, is preparing to call a meeting of the barbers of the state in Omaha just before the legislature opens in Lincoln. The meeting will be for the purpose of forming a state organization of barbers with the intention of sending a representative to the legislature to work for needed legislation.

Forbes Would Reopen Case.

An echo of Nebraska's fatal prison mutiny last spring was heard at the state house when a notice was given Attorney General Martin that the supreme court would be asked to reinstate the case of the state against Harry Forbes, John Evans and Charles Taylor ("Shorty" Gray), the latter having been killed in the prison break. New attorneys having been secured in the case, they will ask that the three Gilmer bank robbers, sentenced to twenty-eight years' imprisonment, be given another trial. Although one of the trio is dead the notice was given in the original name of the case.

Candidates File Expenses.

Nebraska Alumni Lay School Plans.

About 200 graduates attended the first annual homecoming banquet held at the Lincoln hotel, and placed themselves on record as favoring larger appropriations for the university, a campus extension of about four blocks and a college union. The alumni also favored the building of a home to

"Papa, show me how."
"Well, when I learn the trick myself; to the right to 3, back to the left to 7, that's right—but the thing went open—oh, yes, I forgot to push the catch, now will have it all to do over again." Say, postmaster, show me this again."

Obituary

The sudden death of Peter Pryor of this city which occurred at St. Joseph's hospital in Omaha Tuesday, November 12, 1912, was a great shock to his many friends at this place. The immediate cause of his death was due to the results of an operation he underwent for obstruction of the digestional tract. He had been ailing since early in the summer and finally decided to undergo an examination and left for Omaha the first of last week for that purpose.

The body arrived in Wayne last Thursday and the funeral services were held at St. Mary's Catholic church of which the deceased was a faithful member. A solemn requiem high mass was celebrated with Father Kearns as celebrant, assisted by Rev. T. Walsh of Battle Creek and Rev. J. McNamara of Bloomfield. The church was well filled with friends from far and near who came to pay their last respects to one they had long known and revered.

Mr. Pryor was sixty-four years of age at the time of his demise. He came here from Waterloo, Iowa, about twenty-five years ago, and engaged in farming up to a few years ago when he retired. He leaves a wife and the following children to mourn his death: Mrs. Brigger and Frank Pryor of Creighton; Mrs. Jordan and Thomas Pryor of Winside; Leo Pryor of Omaha and Miss Margaret of this city. He also leaves a brother and two sisters at Waterloo, Iowa, Thomas Pryor, Mrs. Kelley and Mrs. Dolan and one sister in Chicago, Mrs. Elwood.

Mr. Pryor was loved and respected by all who knew him. As a man of the highest standards, he was ever a good citizen. He will leave behind him a living monument. We join with many others in extending condolences to the sorrowing wife and bereaved children.

Those from out of town who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Owen Wade, Mrs. McGahn, Mrs. Carbine, Mr. and Mrs. McKerrigan all of Norfolk; Thomas Jordan of Creighton, Ed Carroll of Randolph, John Jordan of Emerson, Mr. and Mrs. Stanton, Mr. and Mrs. Collins, James Finn, Mrs. Lohberg, Philip McCann, Mrs. Kesterson all of Carroll; E. W. Cullen and wife, John Zaskowski and wife of Winside; J. T. Muldoon and M. Kelly of Waterloo, Iowa, Mrs. Elwood of Chicago.

We desire to express our heartfelt thanks to our numerous friends who so kindly and sympathetically assisted us in the bereavement of a loving husband and father.

Mrs. Peter Pryor and family.

A Portable Elevator

One day last week the Democrat man saw something that was new him, and naturally made a little investigation, for Solomon or some wise man said that is nothing new. This thing was loading oats into a car on the siding at the rate of about 10 bushels per minute.

We learned upon investigation that it was a portable grain elevator, the work and invention of George Lamberson and Geo. Stringer. It consisted of a hopper shaped wagon bed with a capacity of 100 cubic bushels; at the bottom was attached a screw feed similar to these used on threshing machines with an elevator at the end. The motive power was a small horse and half gasoline engine. Through a slide in the bottom of the box is an opening through which the grain is fed to the elevator, gravity doing that part of the work. From the top of the elevator a flexible tube carries the grain to the car if as in this case a car was being loaded, or to bin if one were using such a thing to transfer grain from a thrasher to a granary.

This is the first machine of its kind of which we have any knowledge, and the first machine did splendid work. The inventors say that they can and intend to make some improvements, but it has demonstrated that it is practical. Mr. Lamberson used it to load a car of oats, and it proved equal to four men with scoop shovels, and the principle could be applied on a larger scale with larger results.

Oscar Wamburg went to South Omaha Tuesday with a car of cattle which he had bought for the market, and Hanssen & Goemann also sent a car of fat cattle on the same train. The day before Hanssen & Goemann had seven cars of cattle on the Sioux City market. Part of the cattle were finished and part stockers. Two cars were shipped from Wayne and the others from Hoskins. They also sold a car of hogs that day, and while in Sioux City purchased three cars of feeders which they shipped here.

Among The Churches of Wayne

Presbyterian Church
(Rev. Alexander Corkey, Pastor)

The morning service will be held as usual in the Presbyterian church, as in all the other Wayne churches, next Sabbath. The Sunday school begins at 10 a. m., and the preaching service at 11. There will be a Thanksgiving program at the morning service, and some exercises by the members of the primary department under the leadership of Mrs. H. S. Ringland.

There will be no Junior meetings on Sunday afternoon during the Lindgren Evangelistic meetings. The Juniors will join in the great union Young People's Rally at the M. E. church at 3 o'clock, when Evangelist Lindgren will conduct a meeting in the interests of the young people of Wayne. It is planned to have the Normal students attend in a body, with their pennants and college colors, and a like attendance of the High School students is also expected.

In the evening next Sabbath there will be a union meeting of the M. E. church to which all are cordially welcome.

Dr. Guy W. Wadsworth, representing the Permanent Temperance Committee of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church in America, was in Wayne last Sabbath and addressed the church in the morning service. His address was a modern arraignment of the liquor habit and an appeal for a Christian attitude towards liquor traffic, such an attitude being similar to the attitude which Christians take toward highwaymen, and slavery, and like scourges of humanity. In the afternoon he addressed the students of the Wayne Normal School. His visit was greatly appreciated by both church members and students.

Baptist Church
(Rev. B. P. Richardson, Pastor)

Our regular worship will be held next Sunday morning at the usual hour. Evangelist Lindgren will hold no service at the hour of the morning worship but the pastors will occupy their own pulpits. The subject of the sermon will be "The Summons of Christ."

In the afternoon a young people's rally will be held. A notice of which occurs in another column.

At 6:30 p. m., the regular meeting of the Young People's society will be held. The subject is one of abiding interest to all, lead by the pastor.

At 7:30 all will join in the union services at the Methodist church. We hope our people will throw themselves into these special meetings with all their heart and purpose. We always get out of any religious effort just what we put into it. Let each one of our members make a prayer list, and use it faithfully.

Methodist Church
(Rev. Wm. Gorst, Pastor)

Next Sunday morning the topic of the sermon will be Truth a Crown of Glory and a Diadem of Beauty—the effect of a Godly life on physical beauty.

Let every one notice the program for the union services and earnestly cooperate. Every Christian in Wayne and for miles around should get much benefit out of these meetings. The song services alone under the very able direction of Mr. Lindgren are worth going many miles to hear and to have part in, while the discourses on the teaching of the Word and their keen, but very kindly analysis of the life of modern society both in the church and out of it are of great value to all. Everybody in Wayne would do well to hear Evangelist Lingren.

Special Union Services

The special meetings, led by Mr. Lingren at the Methodist church, each evening, are now in full headway. Last Sunday evening a full, enthusiastic, responsive crowd greeted the evangelist. All felt the force of his sermon, and the inspiration of his personal power.

Mr. Lingren is a plain man, and knows how to make truth plain to men. In his preaching there are no attempts at oratorical flights or display of fireworks, but all who hear him feel the inspiring appeal of his direct, presentation of truth and the power of his winning personality. Every sentence has a purpose and that purpose is to reach the heart of another with truth. His experience in business dealings with men enables him to speak with people heart to heart about the weightier matters of life. There is a keen, clear application of truth in his striking statements.

Here are a few of his pulpit pegs, full of penetrating power:

You are a Christian all the time or you are a Christian none of the time, you are Christian everywhere or you are a Christian nowhere.

What we enjoy tells what we are. We are no better than the Man comes into the world without his consent, and leaves it against his will. During his stay on earth his time is spent in one continuous round of contraries and misunderstandings by the balance of the species. In his infancy he is an angel; in his boyhood he is a devil, in his manhood he is everything from a lizard up; in his duties he is a fool; if he raises a family he is a chump; if he raises a small check he is a thief, and then the law raises the devil with him, if he is a poor man he is a poor manager and has no sense if he is rich he is dishonest but considered smart; if he is in politics you can't place him, as he is an undesirable citizen; if he goes to church, he is a hypocrite; if he stays away from church he is a sinner, if he donates to foreign missions he does it for show; if he doesn't he is stingy and a tightwad. When he first comes into the world, everybody wants to kiss him, before he goes out they want to kick him. If he dies young there was a great future before him; if he lives to a ripe old age he is simply in the way and living to save funeral expenses. This life is a funny road, but we all like to travel it just the same.

Just Pop Corn

Our Sholes correspondent last week told of the growth of popcorn near that place, and that it was a successful crop was the inference. Friday morning Mr. R. L. Holmes, traveling freight agent for the O. M. St. P. & M. Ry. was in Wayne, having just come from Bloomfield where he was looking up matters in the interest of the railroad, and told the Democrat man that four years ago a car load of popcorn was grown and shipped from that station. The next year more was grown, and last year the growing of this kind of corn had increased until there were 30 car load shipped. This year he finds that the shipment will probably reach fully fifty cars. A year ago this paper advocated the growing of popcorn here, telling of the successful growing of it in part of Iowa. From the above report one might feel safe in starting the industry here. They raise two varieties mostly in the Bloomfield territory, the rice and 8-row corn.

Obituary

Vallie Woods, daughter of West D. and Alice Woods Welker, was born in Path Valley, Penn., January 29, 1883. When she was but three years of age her parents moved to Lafayette, Indiana, later to Chicago and finally to Nebraska, in the spring of 1894. It was in the public schools of Chicago and Wayne, Nebr., that she secured the larger part of her common school education. After this was finished she went to Omaha where she took a commercial course and began work as a stenographer and book-keeper.

In the summer of 1908 she was injured as she was stepping off a street car in Omaha. This injury resulted in sarcoma, the disease which caused her death over four years later. She died at the home of her parents in Lyons, Saturday morning, Nov. 9, 1912, being twenty-nine years, nine months and eleven days old.

Besides her father, mother and sister, Gladys, who live in Lyons, she is survived by a married sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. McClung of Indianola, Neb., and two brothers, H. Clare Welker of Gordon, and R. Lino Welker of Omaha. These join in thanking neighbors and friends for their many acts of kindness during her last illness and the days of sadness which followed.--Lyons Mirror.

Presbyterians Honored

The Presbyterians of the country are taking some pride in the fact that so many of the high offices of our government have been given to Presbyterian candidates in the recent elections. William Jennings Bryan, the most powerful private citizen in the dominant party is a Presbyterian elder, as is President-elect Wilson. Vice-president-elect Marshall is also a member of the Presbyterian church. Governor-elect Morehead of Nebraska is an attendant at the Presbyterian church in Falls City and his regular attendance at church service was one of the campaign arguments of his friends. Governor-elect Sulzer of the great Empire State of New York is also a member of the Presbyterian church in New York City. Governor-elect Ralston of Indiana is a Presbyterian elder. The list might be extended considerably, but this is enough to show that the Presbyterians are right in concluding that membership in their church is certainly no bar to political preferment in free America. As a church organization no one ever charged them with any pernicious political activity, which doubtless accounts in part for the number of Presbyterians who have been honored at the polls.--EX.

The Cedar County News voices a sentiment that we have entertained, and mentioned in a brief manner several times. The News says, "Write us a Letter".

This newspaper would like to have all of its readers for contributors to its reading columns. The editor reads much and studies hard and aims to be right, but he is too conscious of his own lack of knowledge and of the fallibility of his own judgment to think that he knows it all or that he may not be mistaken. He has read and believes that "in the multitude of counsellors there is safety." And so this newspaper always welcomes letters from its readers--letters either personal to the editor or for publication, and particularly for publication. We like to get letters giving experiences on the farms, success with hogs, sheep, cattle or horses, or any kind of crops. This newspaper treats of other things, too, besides matters of farm and local interest. And we will be glad to receive letters from our readers on those other subjects, politics, city, county, state and national, educational matters, science, sociology, taxation, in fact anything that can interest a human being is welcome to a place in this newspaper. Tell us your theories and ideas, the results of your investigations. And don't be afraid to write for publication because you may be unfamiliar with the English language or its grammar. The editor will put it in as good shape as he knows how to put it without changing the sense. And do not hesitate to write for fear of your neighbors criticism of it. The chance is that the think the same as you do and your article will bring you closer together. And if you prefer not to have your name appear just say so and we will mark your letter "contributed" but will omit the name so that we will know whom the letter came from, but we will not publish it or divulge it if you say for us not to. Let us hear from you anyway.

Why worry about what you are going to give for Christmas presents. Let Craven make you a dozen or two nice photos. Nothing will please your friends more. Lots of nice new style to choose from.--adv. 47tf.

Wall's Stuck On It, All Right

(From W. S. Goldie's Wilmington, Cal. Journal.)

"All we know about California climate is from hearsay, but we wouldn't take a chance on trading our last week here for six months of California's best--Cherokee, (Iowa) Democrat.

But the odds are much greater than that, brother. If you come out here to spend your "last week" you are more likely to live sixteen years than "six months." And after you have enjoyed this salubrious climate--twelve months of every year a continuous joy; sanitary air from the ocean, filtered by the rays of a sun that has never yet bred sun-dogs nor shown that blood freezing circle where Teddy threw his sombrero--sixteen years you will only have one regret--that you lost the better part of your life back there in Iowa "whistling to keep up your courage." Why keep on praying for the "Promised Land," "Paradise, when $40, a little horse-sense and the railroads will carry you to it?"

Robbery

This is the best name the Telegram can give to the boosting of the price of hard coal to $13 per ton in Columbus.

Hard coal can be mined in Pennsylvania and loaded on the cars at a cost below $2 per ton. The wholesale dealer in hard coal is supposed to make a profit of $1 per ton, and the retailer the same amount. The mine owners are claiming that they make only a dollar a ton. This would leave $8 to the railroad companies for hauling the coal from Pennsylvania to Nebraska.

It is such bare-faced robbery as this that breeds resentment in the hearts of the American people, and that resentment will very soon lead to an agitation which will compel the government to confiscate the mines and operate them for the benefit of the people, together with at least enough lines of railroad to distribute the coal to the people at fair price. Here in Columbus the Telegram has heard people swearing justly at the retail dealers because of the high price of coal. We admit that we did a little of the swearing ourselves before we investigated the situation, but now that we are in possession of positive information that the $13 coal which Columbus dealers are selling costs them not less than $12.05 per ton, we believe no manner of censure is due the local dealers in coal.

Of course the Telegram is aware that some of our friends will say at the suggestion of government ownership of coal mines and railroads, but we don't want to hear from such people any complaint about $13 coal. Columbus Telegram.

Of the entertainer at the lecture course next Tuesday, the 26th, Prof. Pearson says:

"I think I may describe Beauchamp in a phrase which Joel Chandler Harris uses for one of his characters: 'Goin' round doin' good.' I have had the pleasure of meeting him repeatedly, and I have never heard him speak a word of ill-will concerning anybody. There is hardly a man on the platform who is not indebted to Beauchamp for a kind word spoken in season, or a friendly hand extended when it was greatly needed. He is the same on the platform and off it, 'goin' round doin' good.'"

Minnesota Land!

In South Central Minnesota I have listed some fine, well-improved farms for sale. These lands are only from 50 to 80 miles north of the Iowa line. Good R. R. service. Old settlers are selling these well improved places at from $65.00 per acre and up and the farmers being well fixed financially are leaving nearly all of their money in their places from 5 to 10 years at from 5 to 6 per cent optional. The land is gently rolling, well drained and rich black loam with clay subsoil. Fine corn, small grain and excellent tame grasses. I can get a number of good places for Wayne county renters on very good terms. It will pay you to inspect this section of Minnesota for a home or profitable investment.

Speaking of President-Elect Wilson the Public says: "His words have been assuring, his deeds reassuring."

Counting the popular vote shows that the socialist and prohibition votes were the only one that increased.

Over in Turkey the truth of Sherman's definition of war is believed, and he evidently knew what he was talking about when he said "warishel."

The single tax measures were defeated in Oregon and Missouri, but the educational work of the campaign will help in the next attempt to make it a law.

Taft killed the judicial recall in the Arizona constitution, but he did not do it as effectively as the voters of that new state killed Taft at election time, when they also restored the recall of judges.

With a majority of two and the presiding officer the democrats have the power to control the senate unless this situation show that there are traitors in that honorable body masking as democrats, a possibility we may well fear.

Wilson's majority was the greatest ever given a presidential candidate, and we hope that he will so conduct the affairs of state that the next democratic nominee will be the unanimous choice of the people, and that he will be as worthy as we believe Wilson to be.

Congressman Kinkaid's health is better than it was earlier in the fall when he was troubled with cold feet. After he had been braced up, he withdrew his resignation and buckeled on his fighting armor and went to it and won by a plurality of 6,000. That is pretty good for a republican in an off year.

With official figures complete except in three counties Roosevelt is thought to have carried California by 48 votes. So long as this states result will in no manner change the result, but little interest is manifest. There was a time when New York wobbled first to one and then to the other candidate, and upon it depended the election. When the count was all in Cleveland was the winner, but the margin was much larger than in California.

Governor-elect Morehead is giving promise of being worthy of the trust imposed upon him by the people of this state. He does not appear to be quoted as talking much, but he has said that he is a one-term man, and that may be taken to mean that he will be Governor and not a candidate for reelection. He proposes to arrange to employ prison labor in improving the public highways, and that will be a good thing. Let us all help in bringing about these needed reforms.

A Pennsylvania paper of the protection stripe says that we must have farmers and factories near each other for the farmer to prosper. Workers near the farm to sell the food to. That sounds good, but when will the farmers of Nebraska have that condition under a protective tariff? We have endured protection many years under promise of this happy condition, but no where can you find a factory town in the west that comes anywhere near making a home market for the products of the county in which it is located. Nor can you find a western state that has factory employees enough to consume the agricultural output of the state, making it very evident that the farmer depends upon the foreign market to set the price of its produce.

George Coupland, one of the regents of the State University, whose home is at Elgin where he has a splendid farm, was a Wayne visitor Monday. Mr. Coupland was formerly court reporter in this part of the state, and a candidate for admission to practice law at one time. He took his examination at this place for the degree which entitled him to enter that profession. A friend of his informs us that his farm life is one of study and research, and that from his experiments he can and does demonstrate that this good Nebraska land properly farmed will make returns to pay for an investment of $350 per acre for it, and we call it high at $100. On his place he grows several varieties of winter wheat, a winter barley and winter oats. This same friend says that he cannot understand why the farmers or the Wayne Commercial Club do not invite this gentleman to come to Wayne and give a talk to the farmers. He vouches that they will get more good talk than any of the so-called big guns can give, and something that applies particularly to Nebraska conditions. Why not ask the gentleman to favor us?

The David City Press, a democratic paper published at the home of Governor Aldrich comments as follows upon the result of the governor's method of parcelling out the publication of the amendments: "Probably it would have been better for Gov. Aldrich, and certainly better in point of broadened service at no extra expense, if he had approved the bill passed by the last legislature providing for publication of proposed constitutional amendments in one paper of each of the two principal political parties in each county of the state. He vetoed the bill, thus retaining to himself the placing of the amendments, which amounted to about $500 in each county. In many counties he divided the orders, placing some of the amendments in one paper and some in another. In this county he apportioned three of them to the Banner, David City, one to the Reveiw, Ulysses, and one to the Press, David City. In perhaps a half a dozen other instances he gave one or more of the amendments to Democratic papers."

The Democrat applied for recognition as one of the papers from this county, but was refused because of our politics, and told so; yet the amendments were placed in papers for which the tax payers paid as much as would have been paid the Democrat, whose circulation only cover a precinct or two as this paper covers the county. From the tone of the letter sent in reply to our application for the publication for this paper, it almost said if you will boost Aldrich you may be considered. We did not boost that way, and would not.

His One Meal a Day.

The eccentric Dr. Fordey, a well known professor of chemistry of the eighteenth century, believed that man required only one meal a day, and for twenty years he practiced what he preached. At 4 he would present himself at Dolly's chophouse in Paternoster row, and immediately upon his arrival the cook would place a pound and a half of rump steak upon the gridiron. While it was cooking the doctor would amuse himself with some such trifle as half a broiled capon or a plate of fish and a glass or two of brandy. Then came the steak, with a full complement of bread and potatoes, and a quart tankard of strong ale. This was followed by a bottle of old port, after which he would stroll to his rooms in Essex street, where he met his class and gave lectures on chemistry.—London Chronicle.

How Careless!

A circus man tells a story illustrating how soft hearted and sympathetic some of the ringmasters are when the acrobats get hurt. The heroine of the story was a girl who did the four horse act, the six horse act, the trapeze and the flying bar, for all of which she received the princely remuneration of $10 a week.

One day she fell forty feet from the trapeze and, landing precipitately and ill advised on her left wrist, broke the bone near the elbow. The ringmaster ran up and sympathized as follows, with certain profane remarks which are here excluded:

"What in thunder do you mean by falling out of that trapeze? I'm a son of a gun—if some of you ginks don't try to put a crimp into this show every time we lift the tent!"—Popular Magazine.

Slightly Mixed.

General Adam Badeau told a good story of a visit he once made in London with two friends. They had been invited to a swell reception in the west end, and when they arrived they were met by a dunkey or gigantic stature, with nose high in the air.

"Names, please," he said. And the apothecary replied modestly, "General Badeau, Colonel Grant and Colonel Cook."

With imposing stride the dunkey advanced to the doors, threw them wide open and announced, "General Banjo, Colonel Drunk and the colonel's cook!"

That Was All.

"We had a difference of opinion as to the value of my services for another year."

"Was that all?"

State Normal Notes

Hon. George M. Coupland, regent of the University of Nebraska, was a visitor one day last week.

Rev. Wm. Gorst attended the chapel services Thursday morning and gave an interesting talk to the school, choosing for his subject "Obedience."

Coach F. E. Marrin went to Omaha Tuesday to be present at a meeting of his college class.

Volume 1, Number 2, of the Goldenrod is just off the press. It is in every way a credit to the school and to the editorial staff.

Professor E. J. Huntmer, who holds the office of county surveyor, was called to Cedar county last Friday on business pertaining to his office.

Dr. Alexander Corkey, accompanied by Evangelist Lingren, attended the chapel services Tuesday morning. Mr. Lingren's talk to the students was very much appreciated.

Miss Mabel I. Clark has registered in the Normal and will carry work in the department of domestic science.

Friends at the Normal have received an announcement of the marriage of Miss Rose Head of Randolph to Professor Daniel G. Sauntry of Kalispell, Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Sauntry are both graduates of the Nebraska Normal College.

Members of Professor Lewis' class in civics were given a practical view of one phase of their work last Friday afternoon, when they adjourned from the class room to the courtroom and listened to a suit that was being tried in the district court.

C. C. Hurley, a graduate of the Nebraska Normal College in the class of 1894 and now living at Glen Dive, Montana, was at the last election, elected to the office of district judge. Mr. Hurley has many friends in Wayne who are pleased to hear of his success.

Members of the state normal faculty are frequently invited to address educational meetings and they are glad to respond to calls of this kind whenever the acceptance thereof does not conflict with school duties. On December 6th, Dean Hahn will lecture before a teachers and patrons' meeting at Atkinson, and on Friday evening of the following week he is to appear on the program of a city institute held at Schuyler.

Much favorable comment is heard concerning the excellent work being done by the literary societies. At the opening of the year the executive committee of each society made out and posted the program for the entire semester, and no one is permitted to have a part in a public meeting without first a hearing before a rehearsal committee. The success of the new plan was shown in the excellent program given by the Philomathean society on last Friday evening, and we are sure that the same will be true of the entertainment to be given by the Crescent society on Saturday evening, November 23.

Miss McBeth's class in reading entertained the school at the Wednesday morning chapel period. Mr. Boyce read a paper contrasting conditions in the country in 1860 with those of 1912; Miss Stearns gave an interesting sketch of Abraham Lincoln's famous Gettysburg address; and she was followed by Miss Knudsen, who read the address of Mr. Lincoln on this occasion. The parts were all well performed and it is hoped that there will be other public appearances of the reading class before the close of the semester.

The citizens of the town are most cordially invited to be present at the musical to be given by the Nebraska Wesleyan Male Quartette on Friday evening, November 22. This is the first number on the regular lecture course for this year and there will be no extra charge for those holding semester tickets. Single admission for adults will be thirty-five cents, children, twenty-five.

After an exchange of letters and telegrams between the two schools, final arrangements have been made for a game of foot ball between the Chadron and Wayne Normals. Chadron agrees to pay $200 of the expense of the game and the remainder will be met by the Wayne team. Accompanied by Coach Marrin our boys will leave Wayne at 6:45 Thursday evening and the game will take place on the Chadron field on Friday afternoon, November 22. Chadron possesses a fast team and has made a good record so far this year. A great deal of interest is shown in the result of the game and a full report will appear in these columns next week.

Dr. W. B. Vail was a visitor at Sioux City and Rock Rapids, Iowa, Wednesday.

Why worry about what you are going to give for Christmas presents. Let Craven make you a dozen or two nice photos. Nothing will please your friends more. Lots of nice new style to choose from.—adv 47-ft

Mrs. C. J. Rundell, accompanied by her son, Ralph, went to Sioux City this morning to have an examination made of her arm, which was so unfortunate as to have broken some time ago, and then a later accident rebroke the bone before it was fairly healed, and it is to ascertain whether or not the arm is as it should be that the examination is to be made.

At the meeting of the firemen Tuesday evening no final action was taken in the matter of adopting a set of bylaws, but the committee continued after getting the views of some of the other members as to what was desired in the laws. A committee was also appointed to confer with the council for a better understanding as to the furnishings for their room.

Horse Disease and Hog Cholera

Harry Bailey of Coleridge, one of the Junior class of a veterinary school at St. Joseph, Missouri, writes an interesting letter to the Blade, of which the following is a part:

We are having a very busy term at College this fall. Our studies include the following: Anatomy, physiology, metemeric medicine, surgery, pathology, chemistry, bacteriology, parasitology, theory and practice medicine, and comparative anatomy. We have seen 89 cases of that fatal disease which caused the death of so many horses in Kansas. Our pathologist found this disease to be caused from a mold on the grass, which contained a form of bacteria known as one of the Diplococci variety; this gave the animal the same symptoms as in cerebro-spinal meningitis. Very few cases recovered. Treatment, wholly preventative. Post-mortem examinations nearly always found a softened and congested brain and cord. This fatal disease is not a new one; and has been traced back a half century in Russia. The suddenness and severity of the attack, for a time caused confusion in diagnosis, as it has never been a common disease in this country. It is a non-contagious disease and the first heavy frost will destroy the grass and mold, which is the culture media of the bacteria. The mold is really one of the fungi class.

One other disease, I might speak of, which is probably giving some trouble in your vicinity. Hog cholera is a highly infectious and contagious disease, causing the loss of millions of dollars annually in the United States. A bacteria is the specific cause. It is one of the bacteria which is known to exist, but which has never been isolated under the microscope. Smallpox in man is also caused by a germ which like the germ of hog cholera, has never been isolated. Cholera attacks hogs of all ages. Symptoms and development—usually two forms, acute and chronic: Time necessary for development of symptom 4 to 14 days. Exposed animal average 8 days. Hog is dull, sometimes shivers, loss of appetite, keeps back from herd, later, temperature rises 1 to 2 degrees; disinclination to move about; weakness, and staggering gait, ears may swell at base; nose may dry—or discharge; eyes may have a discharge; dark colored diarrhoea may be followed by constipation; red spots on belly; death occurs in two days. The chronic type: symptoms about the same, but develops less rapidly. Cholera is easy to be confused with other diseases and post-mortem examination is always the most satisfactory. The finding of red spots on thighs, abdomen, breast, congested lymph glands, enlarged spleen, fine black spots on surface of kidney, congestion of the anterior portion of the lungs, remainder clear, or slightly spotted with dark areas, are a few of the most important lesions. How to differentiate from other diseases: Pneumonia—lesions will be confined to lungs alone and the lung will appear like liver tissue. Swine plague—lesions confined to lungs and there is a so-called "pumping" respiration. Treatment—Preventive: There are no drugs known to medical science that will effect a cure. The Dorset Nile serum treatment has given famous results. The serum is the fluid part of the blood of a hog which has been made highly resistant to the cholera. It is made in special laboratories, standardized and thoroughly tested, before sent out for use. It is injected generally in the inside of the thighs. Now to describe the various minutiae of the details concerned in making this serum and its action in the body, would make chapters instead of a few pages. And would not interest any one outside of the profession. I am simply trying to explain a few facts, trusting they may prove of some value to the uninformed. To be an entire success the serum must be injected before the disease has given symptoms in the animal. If a healthy hog is injected with the serum, and then placed in a pen with sick hogs, he will not contract the disease. He will remain resistant to it from six weeks to perhaps six months. It is no use to inject into a hog which already has decided symptoms. This treatment is wholly preventative and not curative. Only a qualified veterinarian should handle the serum, etc.

One other treatment which is being used on account of its great success is the simultaneous method. This method can be only used on healthy hog. It consists in brief of injecting proper dose of serum and fresh virulent blood. This brings about an active immunity immediately. This will produce immunity for life. And a few years hog cholera will not be so dreaded as at present. Veterinarians and the Government are arriving at the point where the disease will be subdued. Of course, this will take time; but a few years will show improvement.

On the subject of this treatment, one could write chapters, but I don't see where technic and medical terms will interest the readers, and so will leave that, hoping these few facts will do some good. Remember—vaccinate your hogs, before they are sick. If you are a breeder of fine stock, give them the simultaneous treatment before the disease is in the herd; and your loss will not reach 1 per cent. The only mistake, but a great one, is to try to get results when the animal is fairly reeking with disease.

We had several cases of hydrophobia or rabies in dogs, which were interesting. On microscopical examination the negri bodies were found. Pasteur treatment was given to a person who was bitten by one of these dogs, and made a fine recovery.

Country Life

The raising of prize pumpkins and fat hogs is not the ideal of the modern farmer, according to speakers at the country life conference held at DeKalb, Illinois. The advantage of city life, without its evils, was declared to be the object of these workers for social betterment.

"You couldn't drive my son to town with a club," said one of the farmers, Mills by name. He showed pictures of the church and the exchange hall in the community where he lives, which, he declared, had been so transformed that the boys seeking a higher education outnumbered the girls.

"In our high school there are sixty-three pupils, two-thirds of whom are boys," he said. "Our building is a brick structure costing $17,000 and consists of four school rooms. The campus is composed of twenty-four acres valued at $250 an acre, and was donated by John Swaney, 86 years old. The building has two laboratories, a principal's office and an auditorium, which in some buildings would have remained an attic.

"We have also a grange hall which contains a museum, filled with historic and other relics where the farmers meet every two weeks the year round and enjoy literary programs and public discussions. A janitor lives in a cottage near and gives all his time to keeping the property. The abandoned schoolhouse was transformed into a pretty cottage. In this cottage our five teachers live with a housekeeper. We have prize contests but we allow no fake games and no horse racing. We give prizes for speed in hitching and unhitching and for other contests connected with farm work and a team of horses. We allow all kind of clean athletic contest. There is no place in America equal in community spirit to Clear Creek."

Miss Lynette Thompson, a resident of DuPage community, near Plainfield, was another speaker. She showed lantern slide pictures describing the work. No fake shows are allowed. She upheld the value of friendly contests, horse shows, and agricultural exhibits as a means of bringing neighborhoods together.

"If fakers arrive, as they have tried to do," she said, "we drive them away. In September of every year the farmers come together in wheat land for a plowing match. Prizes are given for straight and even furrows and speed in covering a given amount of ground. The women have a tent, where they exhibit prize cooking, needle work, and basket work. There is a machinery exhibit and other features. It is a modified county fair, but is free from commercial exploitation.

"The DuPage Presbyterian church has become a community church. All denominations support it. The building cost $10,000, contains fourteen rooms, and has every facility of a city church. "We have a piano, give courses of lectures, debates and other entertainments. Sectarianism has given way to community interests and Catholics, as well as Protestants of the various denominations join in with us."—Yoeman's Shield.

The total vote of Cedar county was the largest in the history of the county, totaling 3484. The democrats safely carried the county. There were 16 prohibition votes and 6 socialist votes. This may not mean that there are 16 prohibitionists in the county, but it is possible that there are that many republicans who could not approve the action of their party, yet who had so long and bitterly opposed the democrats that they could not quite come into the fold this year. That's all right, we can wait and take them in to full membership next year.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR WINTER TAILOR MADE.

A charming winter suit is to one of the newest heavy whip cords of a greenish yellow shade. The anticipated unbecomingness of such a color is redeemed by a waistcoat of white cloth, with a collar and revers of tulleless ermine. The arrangement of the striped fabric—both vertical and crosswise—produces excellent results in "line." The sides and back of both skirt and coat are cut lengthways, while the belt across the front of the coat and the center panel of the skirt show the horizontal stripes. The sleeves are treated in the same way, while the stripes which pass round the arm are continued till they meet the bell cuff, where the stripe is reversed. The buttons used are of a light shade of tortoise shell. With this costume is worn a hat in a tone of yellow green beaver, trimmed with a fanciful white mount.

There is no doubt that the tendency pursued by real tailor coats is to keep the high waist, although a slightly longer waist-line is suggested in the more elaborate outway coats of velvet and silk.

But such fabrics are not to be commended for country pursuits, and one gladly welcomes cozy ratines and pilot cloths in addition to many new varieties of striped tweeds and suitings. A coarse blue serge trimmed with black braid makes an admirable "standby" for all occasions. A magenta colored velvet waistcoat with a relieving note of wend embroidery gives a novel tone to this world beloved fabric.

EXPERIENCE MEETING.

How to Play an Amusing Game on Thanksgiving Day.

For a group of people of forty years or over a reminiscence party is frequently made very enjoyable. To get the fun into swing it is only necessary to pass around the room a basket containing folded slips of paper on which such questions as those given below are written:

What was the occasion of the jolliest time you ever had?

What was the most thrilling adventure you ever had?

Who is or was the most interesting person you ever met?

What is the best true story you ever heard?

What is the least explicable occurrence you ever heard of or experienced?

What was the happiest hour of your life?

What was the greatest pleasure of your childhood?

Each guest draws one of the folded slips. Ten minutes is allowed for reflection, during which all players think up the answer to their questions. The person drawing the slips marked 1 then gives his experience. When this has been laughed over or otherwise enjoyed the person holding the slip marked 2 then relates, and so on. It makes a most enjoyable little pastime and will lead to many exchanges of pleasant reminiscences. The hostess will, of course, avoid any question which could evoke unpleasant or sorrowful memories.

How to Kill Mice.

The usual necessary but barbarous mousetrap may be favorably supplanted with the following mercifully quick, sure death device:

Fill a big stone crock with water and cover it—preserve fur fashion—with parchment in which, when tightly stretched, you make a cross cut. Set this crock near shelf, curtain or other jars which may afford the small marauders a foothold opportunity and sprinkle the parchment near the cut with bits of cheese or bacon. The mouse will scent the delicacies, will climb the crock for them and will slip through the slit in the cover and drown in the crock. The stiff parchment points of the cut will spring back in place immediately into position for the next victim.

How to Cure Indigestion.

A safe and quick remedy for indigestion, heartburn and similar ills is to mix half a teaspoonful of baking soda with the same amount of powdered magnesia and dissolve it in half a cupful of water. This may be cold, but acts more quickly when hot.

An equally speedy headache cure is made by squeezing the juice of half a lemon and half a teaspoonful of soda into half a glassful of water, either hot or cold.

How to Brown Gravy.

Instead of standing over a hot stove to brown flour for gravies, put it in a tin pan and set the pan in a moderately hot oven. It will require very little watching. When cold put in glass jars. In this way you can brown sufficient to last for a long time.

How to Make a Night Light.

A clean, steady all night light can be obtained by taking an ordinary candle and packing finely powdered salt around the wick as far up as the blackened part.

Refrigerator Hint.

By placing a rubber ring directly under the dish you set upon ice you will find the annoying sliding of the dish entirely obliterated.

EDWIN RUTHSVAN CHACE DEAD

Passes Away at his Home in Stanton a
Age of Eighty Years. Resident of Nebraska since 1883

Edwin Ruthsvan Chace was born at East Claridon, Ohio, June 2, 1832, and died at Stanton, Nebraska, November 5, 1912. He was united in marriage to Polly Brady on November 30, 1851. In the year 1857 they went west as pioneers, and settled near Independence, Iowa, where they bought a farm from the government at the price of $1.25 per acre. In the year 1869 they moved to Missouri, locating near Golden City, again engaging in farming and stock raising. From there, in 1883, they moved to Wayne, Nebraska, where for a time Mr. Chace was thanks that he was spared to us a half score years longer than the accepted allotted time of man. A spirit is returned to its giver. He no longer suffers but rests in peace, that sweet peace that has no ending.

As a kind and patient father, a faithful and good husband, we will ever revere his memory.

Following this, Rev. Klopp announced his text, "We all do fade as a leaf." The speaker won the hearts of his hearers by the able and pleasing manner in which he handled his subject. He pictured the analogy between nature and revelation and between human life and the faded leaf, and said in part:

"The faded leaf suggests the brevity of life. How short the life of the leaf. For a few short months it lifts its beauty to the children, or citizen, rich or poor, young or old, great or small, servant or master. Thus our brother fulfilled the mission of his life. Whatever his intellectual opinion may have been, his heart was the heart of a brother toward every other man. Of him it may truthfully be said that by the highway of the heart he journeyed through this world and the benedictions he has left behind are the contributions of a kind and noble and generous spirit. His interest was in everything that stands for righteousness among men. Honor and truth and fairness and sincerity were virtues that he admired. His children and his children's children rise up to call him blessed. He gave himself unsparingly to those whom he loved most and who by the ties of home had claims upon him. The charmed circle which made the annual recurrence of Thanksgiving Day a sacred homecoming time for so many years, was the unseen bond of a heart's sincerest love that bound with unbreakable cords the sons and daughters to the hearthstone of the old home of their childhood. Thus he has nobly fulfilled life's mission and his journey on earth is ended.

"Old age serene and bright,
As lovely as a Lapland night
Has led him to his grave."

The out-of-town relatives and friends who attended the funeral were:

William Brady, of Sioux City; Joe Chace, Clearwater, Nebr.; Mr. Ed. Chace, Ewing, Nebr.; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ley, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Neely, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Moran, Mr. and Mrs. Eph. Cunningham and Miss Jane Arnold, all of Wayne; Mr. R. R. Wohlford of Fremont, Nebr.; and Mr. J. T. Wachof of Omaha.

The early settlers of Wayne and Wayne county will be saddened at the news of the death of Mr. E. R. Chace, or "Grandpa Chace" as he was familiarly known. They will recall that he was the first mayor of Wayne. He took pride in the building up and beautifying of the city. It was during his administration and by his recommendation that trees were planted outside the walks, and blue grass sown on the side streets. All who knew him will recall his affability. Many it was that he entertained by reminiscing his hunting and fishing trips, and relating experiences in southern Missouri just after the close of the war, and it was always with eagerness that his listeners gave attention. His many friends here will mourn his departure.

Graustark

The engagement of the dramatization of the well known novel by George Barr McCutcheon, "Graustark," will be looked forward to with interest by theatre goers of Wayne, when the play comes here Monday Eve., Dec. 2.

The tremendous popularity which this play has attained is not due to any advertising medium or scheme, but to its genuine worthiness as an entertaining and interesting story, carefully worked out for stage purposes and surrounded with the best to be had in the way of actors and stage settings.

Most readers of fiction are familiar with the theme of "Graustark," the heroic figure of Grenfall Lorry, the manly Harry Angulsh, the doughty old warrior Baron Dargloss; the villainous Prince Gabriel; the ingenious Countess Dagmar the frivolous old grand dame Yvonne and last but not least, the sweet, sympathetic Princess Yevive, ruler of Graustark; all are characters which the public conjure. The minor parts are mostly all retained in the play, tho' they have been slightly curtailed to strengthen the more important ones.

The scenic investment and electrical effects are as grand and beautiful as ever, the best artists of New York having worked on this feature of the production, and the management guarantees all the scenery etc., will be used here.

EDWIN RUTHSVAN CHACE

engaged in the hardware business, but at the early age of 53 retired from business. In the year 1905 he, with his wife, moved to Stanton, Nebraska, where they made their home until the time of his death.

He is survived by his wife and seven children: Cheney A. Chace of Wayne, Nebraska; Charles H., James R., Anna McLeod, Mrs. Amanda Person and Nathan, all of Stanton, and Mrs. May Miller of Sioux Falls, S. D.

The funeral was held at the family residence Sunday afternoon, November 17. The rooms were filled with friends gathered to pay their last respects. In the den off the front parlor the body lay in easy manner upon a couch. The beautiful floral decorations contributed by friends paid a marked tribute to his memory. Rev. J. J. Klopp of the Congregational church conducted the service, assisted by Rev. John Poucher of the M. E. church. The music was furnished by a quartet composed of Prof. J. H. Welch, Mrs. Geo. Eberly, Mrs. Freiday and Byron Baer. The familiar hymns, "Nearer My God to Thee," "Some Day the Silver Cord will Break" and "Abide With Me" were rendered in a very touching manner.

Rev. Poucher in characteristic style offered a choicely worded prayer in which he paid a fitting testimonial to the departed. A "Tribute of Love" from the family was read by Rev. Klopp, as follows:

"Father is gone gone to that place from whence no traveler ever returns. But his life yet lives. His influence will remain with us and be imparted by us to future generations. We will miss his happy, pleasing way and his kind voice that has been stilled by that grim reaper, death, to whom all life is prone. In every walk of life he will be missed. Between poverty and plenty he drew no lines. His standards were based upon the highest perfection of manhood. In point of manhood he had no peers. For more than eighty years he builded a manhood that now stands as a monument in defiance of the elements, and leaves it to us as a legacy, a pride in which we share alike. It may fittingly be said that he was cautious, charitable and brave; generous, gracious and wise, possessed of a nature tempered as of the finest steel, which was controlled by a heart of kindness and a mind almost unerring in its sense of justice. He valued honor as the choicest of virtues, in this, his name was as its synonym. Yes, we will miss him much, but as our protestations are of naught, and the wisdom of his taking we can not question; we can but return light, it throws its protecting shadow over the weary pilgrim and offers its cool retreat to the happy birds that warble their heavenly inspired songs among the waving tree tops. But then the leaf fades, it loses its grip upon the branch and drops to the earth to die. Thus with life, how short our time. It is as a hand's breadth. It is as the grass or the flower of the field. It is as the cloud that passes over us and is gone."

In speaking the frailty and uncertainty of the leaf being fraught with danger from the elements, he compared it with life in the following manner: "So with life; it is exposed to many a danger; it lives in a world of uncertainties. We cannot say what a day may bring forth. Perhaps before yonder sun shall bathe its light in the shadows of the western hills, some of us shall stand encircled by the dark clouds of some gathering storm or fall in death to rise no more."

The speaker then drew the comparison of the mission of life and the mission of the leaf. He referred to the mission of life in these words: "So life has a mission. It is not for ornamentation or for decoration. It is for useful service. It is this fact illustrated in the character of our departed brother that now yields him the crown of glory with which he is wreathed in the thought and affection of those who knew him best. Early in life he evidently realized that the greatest thing in the world is usefulness and service. As a husband, as a father, as a citizen, as a patriot, as a philanthropist, he gave himself in unstinted service to his age and environment. He sought not honor, nor praise, nor fame, nor even wealth. These were secondary in his thought. To be a man, a manly man, who in every act of his life should reflect a true humanity—this was the primary, the actuating thought of his life. Of him the words of the poet may truthfully be said:

"Let me live in my house by the side of the road,
Where the race of men go by,
They are good, they are bad, they are weak, they are strong,
Wise, foolish; so am I.
Then why should I sit in the scorners' seat,
Or hurl the cynics' ban?
Let me live in my house by the side of the road,
And be a friend to man."

It was this spirit that characterized the life of our brother. He was a friend to man. He had built his house by the side of the road where the race of men go by. He performed the duty of a manly man toward the one who was next to him—whether it was wife or

An Athletic Girl

And What She Achieved

By HELEN JENNINGS

Johnny Perkins and I were born in adjacent houses, only Johnny was born a year before me. Johnny had no boys to play with, and there were no girls living near me. The consequence was that we began to play together as soon as we were old enough to be playmates and kept it up till we were past ten years old. Johnny's mother was content to have him in my company. She said that when he played with boys they abused him, tore his clothes, robbed him of his playthings—in short, treated him with all uncharitableness. They induced him to climb trees, get into the mud and say bad words. I, being a girl, and rather a delicately organized girl at that, didn't tyrannize over him or otherwise injure him. I certainly didn't induce him to climb trees.

When Johnny was eleven years old his father got rich and the family went to live in a big house, and I didn't see anything of him after that until he was twenty years old.

Meanwhile I had been growing more and more delicate, and the doctor, when I was sixteen, recommended little or no school and athletics. The consequence of this was that I grew robust and from a "little angel," as I was called, had become a sportswoman. I played tennis, golf and other out of door games and had become quite a horsewoman. Johnny, on the contrary, had been going downhill in this respect, just as I had been going uphill. When his father made money and Johnny was taken away from me his mother hired a nurse for him. It seemed the only way for her to keep him from tearing and soiling the beautiful clothes he was obliged to wear. His nurse watched him like a cat. If he got into a swing she would order him out. If he rolled in the grass she would pick him up, set him on his feet and ask him what he meant by getting the green on his white knickerbockers. The result of all this was that when Johnny reached the age of twenty he didn't know how to swim, he couldn't pull an oar, he had never ridden on a sled or glided on a pair of skates.

I overheard a lady who had known him since he was a baby say to my mother: "Johnny played too much with your daughter, Kate, when he was a little fellow, and when he was parted from her he fell into the hands of a nurse. That's what's the matter with Johnny, poor boy; he couldn't help it. He's been educated so and will remain so."

I had been very fond of my little playmate, and now that I had been changed from a fragile girl to a sportswoman I felt awfully sorry for the boy. Johnny had been handicapped. What I didn't like especially was the influence I had had on him in the beginning. I blamed myself for his condition, for, I argued, if he hadn't played with me when he was a little chap his mother couldn't afterward have tied him down to a nurse.

When I was nineteen I went to visit at the Perkinses. When I saw Johnny I wanted to cry. A more helpless man I never saw. He had never mingled with any except swells and none but the most effeminate swells would have him around. I couldn't believe that he was the dear, honest, sympathetic, self-sacrificing boy I had been so fond of and had remembered as my dear little playmate.

"Well," I said to myself, "I'll get some of that out of him if I have to kill him." I had been invited to spend a week at the Perkins country home, and I determined to make the most of that week. Pocketing my repugnance to Johnny's effeminacy, I ran up to him with outstretched hands, taking both his in mine, and said:

"Oh, John, I'm jolly glad to see you again, old fellow. I've been eager for it ever since I received your mother's invitation. We'll have a hot time while I'm here. We'll just make things hum."

He looked at me in a half frightened way and said he was "vevy much pleased to meet me again." He "remembered our childhood days vevy well." He seemed to be a bit taken back by my exuberance and especially my slang, which, by the bye, I adopted for the occasion.

"Have we time for a ride before dinner?" I asked. "We can talk over old times together in a canter."

"Oh, yes, I'll tell James to bring round the auto, or would you prefer to go in the box wagon? James usually drives me in the wagon."

"Neither. I'll go on horseback."

"Horseback! I don't know how to ride a horse."

"You'll have to learn if you ride with me. Come, order a horse for yourself and one for me."

A pained expression passed over his face. From force of habit he looked at his mother, who said that John had not learned to ride. She had intended to have him take riding lessons, but had never been in a position to do so. I must excuse him.

"I'll be his riding master," I said. "Come, Johnny, let's have a canter."

I had purposely brought matters to a crisis. If John was a natural milk-sop he would obey his mother, who attempted to command him by a frown. If he was a man he would stand by me whether he knew how to ride or not. There was a brief struggle within him, and I won. He went out to the stable to select the horses and give his instructions. I ran upstairs, donned my riding clothes, and when I came down John appeared in an immaculate riding suit—he had never worn it before—and going out to the porte-cochere, we mounted and rode away.

John had provided himself with a horse that could not be driven out of a walk, and even then the poor fellow had a hard time to keep his balance. But I had made a beginning and made up my mind that before I had got through with him he should be jumping logs and ditches. I was tempted to prick the animal he rode with a pin and get my pupil dumped on the turf, but I didn't wish to try too much at once, so I refrained. I gave him a short lesson of an hour, then permitted him to return to the house, take a bath and put on his evening clothes before dinner. He was quite exhausted, but seemed to be very proud of having ridden a horse.

It required only this much to convince me that John was a man, like other men. He had been deprived of the elements of development. How can a plant thrive without sunlight? My old playmate had grown to manhood in obedience to a natural law. He was like a boy who had been taught to swim by reading swimming instructions from a book. In other words, he had not learned at all.

The next morning I came down to breakfast in a tennis suit, John in immaculate morning costume.

"Go straight upstairs," I said to him, "and come back in your shirt and trousers. Do you suppose you're going to entertain me sitting on the piazza? Not on your life! You'll play tennis."

He gave a sickly smile, marched upstairs, came back in sporting costume, and after breakfast we went out to the court. He played the game, though he had begun too late to make much of a hand at it. When we had played one set he was tired, but I kept him at it till an hour before luncheon, and he went in to the tub reeking with perspiration.

At the end of the week a great change had come over John. He had got some of the "soft" out of him and had entered upon a new career. I had been a hint for him between his mother and freedom. Before the week expired he had declared his independence and developed a natural taste for athletic sports. He was like a plant brought from a cellar and placed in the shower and sunshine of an April day. He wouldn't hear of my leaving. I must stay on indefinitely, as long as I would.

His mother needed some one to take him from her influence as much as he. She had followed a habit and was not sorry when she saw that I was trying to undo what she had done, for there is no mother who does not wish to see her son manly, even though she be the cause of his effeminacy.

I remained at the Perkinses for a month and even then found it hard to get away. I had nearly killed Johnny, but he said "he liked it." His mother didn't approve of that part of it and asked me if a taste for athletics necessarily involved breaking persons' necks. I replied that an occasional neck was necessarily broken in athletics, as well as in other less strenuous pursuits.

A year passed, during which I was constantly spending short or long terms at the Perkinses. Athletics were to Johnny like a new toy to a child. In the winter he learned to skate and in the summer to swim. He was greatly handicapped on account of learning those accomplishments late in life and had not had a strong natural taste for them, would not have learned them at all. As it was, he became fairly proficient in them.

I was repaid for all my trouble—if it can be called such—by John himself. Among other sports, I was fond of canoeing. It seems to me the most dangerous of all outdoor sports, even for those who can swim—that is, if they go too far from land. One day Johnny and I were paddling in a canoe on a bay of the Atlantic ocean. We ventured too far out and were caught in a squall. We saw it coming and death in it. In John the nature of a strong man triumphed over the disadvantages he had so long endured. He became the anchor, I the clinger. He ordered me to lie down in the bottom of the boat in order to preserve its equilibrium, while he crouched as low as possible and still worked a paddle. Watching the wind coming over the water, he kept the canoe in a position to be struck on the stern instead of on the side.

We plunged on the crests of the waves for awhile, but no strength or skill could keep us straight before them. The canoe turned, and the next wave that struck us keeled it over. Both swam for the boat, which floated bottom up, and caught it.

There is a good deal in this story about what I did for John and very little about what John did for me, and yet what he did for me, though concentrated within half an hour, was worth many times my efforts in his behalf.

The wind howled; the rain poured down on and about us, obscuring the land. The waves dashed themselves against us as if determined to drive us from our frail support. And during this time John was holding me in my perilous position; both of us clinging to the canoe. Then when it was all over and boats came to our assistance they took me aboard unconscious.

I had saved John from a life of effeminacy, and he had saved me from death. I found him as necessary to me as I had been to him, and we have never parted.

SHOCKED CORN FOR BEEF CATTLE.

In any kind of stock feeding the amount of capital required to begin operations, the amount of time and feed required, the resulting fertility and the final profit from the transaction are four vital considerations. There are other things to be considered, some in special cases and some in certain special lines of work, but these four are always present. When considered from this basis the shock corn method of feeding cattle will compare favorably with any, says C. A. Waugh in Country Gentleman.

A pound of corn fed as shocked corn will not produce so much gain under some circumstances as a pound fed in some other form, but a dollar invested in shocked corn will produce as much beef as a dollar invested in some other feed capable of making greater gains per pound. This does not imply that cattle can be fitted for show on this feed. Even though it does appear wasteful to some and though it does not conform to the standards of a balanced ration, it is for practical purposes an excellent feed.

Hereford cattle are unexcelled in beef type. They have plenty of scale, good bone, a blocky conformation, short faces, are wide between the eyes, have roomy middles, good ribs, heavy quarters, wide backs, thick loins and, in fact, are ideal beef animals. Hereford cattle have the best natural protection because they have the heaviest hides and most coats. A heavy hide protects an animal against both heat and cold. In winter feeding more of the feed goes to make beef and less goes to keep up bodily heat. The Hereford bull shown was grand champion at the Kansas City Royal show.

Some feeders may say that such methods are impractical and wasteful, yet the fact remains that over 5,000 cattle are fed in a single county in Ohio every winter, and that this method is followed in nearly every instance. Moreover, out of their profits these farmers are paying for land worth $150 an acre which, on account of the great amount of manure that is returned to it is becoming even more valuable.

In every case hogs follow the cattle. When the latter are put on feed a pig weighing from 100 to 150 pounds is put behind each steer. Smaller pigs do not do so well as those of this weight. When the cattle are weighed out the hogs are usually ready for market. Often one is able to fatten two droves of hogs with a single bunch of steers. Few kernels are missed, and in almost every case every pound of gain made by the hogs represents so much clear profit to the feeder.

We have always been partial to short feeds of from ninety to a hundred days, and for such feeding we usually aim to get cattle which weigh a thousand pounds or more and which can be warmed up to an advantage. Two pounds a day is an average gain, though there are many instances where three pounds have been made. Two pounds daily will put cattle of this sort in fair condition within the hundred day limit.

It takes time to get a bunch of cattle on full feed. If any grass is at hand they are put on it and given a light ration each day, the amount being increased until they are on full feed. A month is often taken up before they reach this stage, but after we are feeding them to the limit we do not cut down on the ration simply because they do not happen to clean up all that is given them on some particular day. The hogs are there to pick up what is left, and it seldom pays to feed in a stingy manner. Straw is always relished at the noon hour and we aim to give them such a feed at least three times a week. Outside of this it is seldom that anything other than shocked corn is fed. With meat at the prevailing prices of the past few years, it has always paid us to feed clover hay when it can be secured for $10 or less a ton. Cottonseed meal helps to make gains.

Feeding Young Stock.—The amount of gain the young stock will make during winter depends largely upon the feed and care they get. It is true that the scrub will get ten make very little gain even with good care, but in those days of high priced feed it does not pay to keep scrubs at all, so we cannot take them into consideration. A calf of good blood, however, will always answer to good tending, but even it cannot do well without it.

Providing warm quarters for the young stock during winter is also an important factor. Not only is this to protect them from severe weather, but it will save feed as well. Young stock that is unsheltered during cold weather cannot be expected to do well. It will take a good bit of feed and time to make up for the loss obtained during a single night if the stock has been out in severe weather.

THE DAIRYMAN.

In selecting a dairy sire we must bear in mind that good qualities may be bred out more rapidly by the use of an inferior breeding bull than they can be improved by the use of a well bred sire.

Incomplete milking not only robs the dairyman of the strip-pings, but it damages the cow, tending to lessen her daily production and to shorten the period of lactation.

Of course we have all learned before this that long legs are an indication of a poor cow, but perhaps we do not always lay enough stress on the fact.

Half bred cows give half pails of milk.

Give the cows a chance to get under the shed every night now. It too cold keep them in the stable.

Keeping the cows comfortable is a neglected point in the management of the herd during the fall months.

FEEDING YOUNG SOWS.

An Abundance of Nutritious Food Needed For Development.

It is held by most farmers that the brood sow must be kept in thin flesh. Following this rule, which is good in a way, many farmers allow the sows an insufficient amount of feed, and hence both sow and pigs suffer, writes W. H. Underwood in the Iowa Homestead. Also the young sow farrows before she is mature in size, and through light feeding she never attains the size and breeding capacity that she would had she been given larger amounts of feed during all her growing period.

The sow for several well understood reasons should not be kept too fat, especially at farrowing time. She has, however, large demands placed upon her and hence requires large amounts of feed to sustain normal vitality. She needs much feed during pregnancy for the development of the unborn pigs and for her own vital needs.

After the pigs are born, during the suckling period, the sow requires an extra large amount of nutritious feed in order to furnish a full flow of milk for the little pigs and maintain her own flesh.

Too often the sow at the close of the suckling period becomes poor and depleted in strength. Frequently she is absolutely exhausted and requires many weeks to regain flesh and strength, if it is possible to regain all the loss. There is no doubt but that this frequent flesh and vitality weakening impairs the health and value of the animal. Were she kept in good round flesh at all times there is no question but that she would live longer and be more productive in advanced years.

Chester White swine have long been a favorite breed throughout a large part of the United States. It is one of the oldest breeds, and its good qualities are well known. The hogs are easily fattened and have large hams and shoulders. Combination, the large Chester White boar shown, is an excellent specimen of the breed and has won many prizes. He is owned by C. C. Evans of Iowa.

The young sow often grows until after her second or third litter of pigs. Then is the period when maturity tells on an animal the most. If to the physical drain of giving birth to pigs and suckling them is added the stunting effect of too light feeding the young sow cannot possibly attain her highest development. This will not only affect her earning power, but will also affect the profits in her pigs. They will to some extent inherit her undersize and weakness, and the future stock will be small and poor.

If the young sow is kept in good, round flesh until after full maturity she will have a chance to develop into a large mother animal and be able to transmit her size and strong vitality to her offspring. If she carries an abundance of flesh and some fat nearly equal to that of the prime finished hog for market she will have a surplus for the draining weeks of maternity and not become so poor at any time that her system is materially weakened.

It is much easier to maintain a sow in good flesh than to restore it after it has been lost, and it is better in every way for the animal. A good sow may be fully half the herd in giving quality to the pigs if she is given sufficient feed and care to make manifest her full powers.

Fall Born Lambs.

There is ample evidence to support the contention that the best sheep develop from fall born lambs that are dropped during the early part of October, writes D. H. Dacy in the Iowa Homestead. At this time the weather conditions are quite ideal for the rapid and promising development of the lambs. In addition, at this season of the year, destructive parasites are prominent by their absence. By the following spring the lambs are nearly half grown and are in tiptop shape to go on to luxuriant pasturage. On the other hand, if they are sold as baby lambs during the winter they usually bring top prices.

Books in Ancient Rome.

It has been pointed out that in old Rome books were actually produced and sold more easily and quickly than they are in modern times. With his trained staff of readers and transcribers, it is contended, an ancient Roman publisher could turn out an edition any work at very cheap rates and a most a moment's notice. There was of course, no initial expense of type setting before a single copy could be produced, no costly extras in the form of printer's corrections. The manuscript came from the author; the publisher handed it to his slaves, and if the book were of ordinary dimensions the complete edition could, it is said, be ready if necessary within twenty-four hours. The old Roman libraries were immense as well as splendid. Plutarch says that the library of Lucullus, who expended much of his money on books, "had walks, galleries and cabinets open to all visitors." It was proposed by Julius Caesar to open this library to the public.—Harper's.

Eating in the Fifth Act of Life.

The advice which Sydney Smith gave to Lord Murray on the subject of diet was probably sound. "If you wish for anything like happiness in the fifth act of life," he wrote, "eat and drink one-half of what you could eat and drink. Did I ever tell you my calculations about eating and drinking? Having ascertained the weight of what I could live upon so as to preserve health and strength, and what I did live upon, I found that between ten and seventy years of age I had eaten and drunk forty-four horse wagon loads of meat and drink more than would have preserved me in life and health. The value of this mass of nourishment I considered to be worth £7,000. It occurred to me that I must, by my voracity, have starved to death fully 100 persons. This is a frightful calculation, but irresistibly true."

How a Woman Saved Nice.

It happened in August, 1543, and is recalled by Mrs. Walter Tibbits in "Cities Seen in East and West." Nice (then under the dukes of Savoy) was being besieged by Francis I and Barbarossa.

Catherine Segurine was a washerwoman whose creed was laborare est orare. She carried food to the defenders on the ramparts still left. The Turks had put up a scaling ladder. The captain led his party, and they were actually on the parapet. She rushed at the Turkish officer, wrenched the flag he was carrying from him, beat him back with the butt end and threw down the ladder on top of all. Then, rallying the soldiers, they threw open a postern, made a sortie and drove the Turks to the shore.

HOW TO MAKE FLOWERS BLOOM FOR CHRISTMAS.

If you would have bulbs in bloom for Christmas start some Roman hyacinths and some Chinese lilies now. The latter do well in water, while the former will be more satisfactory in earth.

If the room in which you keep your house plants is not well heated, the best plants to have are geraniums, sweet alyssum, begonias and some of the cactuses, especially the variety known as the Christmas cactus and the asparagus sprengeri and asparagus plumosus.

The winter blooming oxalis is a great favorite because of its profuse flowering habit. The yellow or buttercup oxalis must not be overcrowded. Not more than three bulbs should be planted in a five-inch pot, as they grow very fast and soon become too crowded, sending up more leaves than blossoms. Each large bulb, in time, forms many small bulbs at the bottom of the pot. The oxalis needs bright sunshine, and a row of different colored varieties as a window sill decoration is very satisfactory.

One of the best winter blooming begonias is Gloire de Lorraine. Its color is a deep rose with yellow centers, the flowers growing in clusters. The foliage is neat in appearance and graceful. Small plants obtained from the florist now will make fine blooming plants by Christmas, and will make a good showing at that time when we want our windows to be brightest.

HOW TO DRESS WELL.

Ten Commandments of the Smartly Gowned Woman.

To the woman who would be well dressed a famous French dressmaker writes ten commandments:

First.—Choose whatever is most becoming to your beauty—tightly fitting garments or loose, flowing ones, the strictly tailor made or the more elaborate.

Second.—Choose the colors which go well with your complexion, your hair, your eyes.

Third.—Observe decorum always and wear appropriate dresses in appropriate places. It is because of her ability to understand the eternal fitness of things that the Parisienne is so often the queen of large social functions.

Fourth.—This year, for instance, I am bringing out more dresses built on straight lines.

Fifth.—If fringes such as I border gowns with do not fit in with your personality dare to wear any other kind of trimming that does.

Sixth.—I am keeping the light chiffon prescript which harmonizes or contrasts with the silk foundation. But if that is not suitable to you dare to wear heavy brocades and satins.

Seventh.—Personally I like strong colors, colors of life and poetry, but if pastel shades are becoming to you, no matter what the fashion.

Eighth.—If the high waist line such as I still advocate does not revert the good points of your figure do not adopt it.

Ninth.—Have the waist line wherever it is becoming to you.

Tenth.—I like the tight skirt and am making it this year. But if you look better in a wide one do not sacrifice your beauty in a vain attempt at being fashionable.

How to Eat a Boiled Egg.

A great many people think the only delicious way to eat a boiled egg is in its shell, and so that the top may be carefully and easily cracked off there have been devised egg scissors, which are fascinating trifles for the table service as well as for actual use. Each pair of scissors is in the form of a gay little chicken. Each has a ruby eye, and the steel is gilded. The finger loops of the scissors are left the natural steel color for contrast, and the size is about five inches long. They are delightful for an invalid's breakfast tray and very handy as well as cute for a child, though their use is becoming general whenever the boiled egg appears.

How to Cure Headache.

A steady throb at the back of the eyes is usually due to eye strain, which can be relieved by a cloth wet in water in which boric acid has been dissolved in the proportions of a half teaspoonful to a cup. This headache will be entirely cured by proper glasses.

When the headache is in the top of the head it is frequently due to some passing disturbance of the female organism. If these headaches are constant or very severe the sufferer should consult a specialist.

How to Glaze Puddings.

Housewives who use a gas stove for cooking can give their custard-like baked puddings an attractive crust by sprinkling the top with melted butter and sugar and then glazing it beneath the flame of the gas broiler. Watch the flame carefully, however, to see that it does not burn the pudding.

How to Save Time.

If you are a busy person and have to hurry away in the morning, try laying all your things together in one place the night before—gloves, purse, umbrella, fresh handkerchief, veil, pins and any package you may wish to take with you.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Where a farmer is starting on a new farm where there are only a few acres broken nothing pays better than cows and hogs.

Pumpkins may not be very rich in food value, but steers seem to eat them with the same sort of relish that darkies have for watermelons.

The number of sheep in the world, according to the latest figures, is 616,223,372.

Corn fodder that is bright and sweet and not too coarse is relished greatly by cows on brisk cold mornings. It is not eaten so well at any other time of day nor on a warm damp day.

Good whole corn, a thin slop of ground rye and skim milk and green pasture is a combination hard to beat for pork production.

THE SMALL SHEEP FLOCK.

Easily Handled and Profitable Side Line For the Farm.

Those small flocks of sheep which farmers who are running a mixed farming business are keeping are often neglected during the winter and consequently they do not always do as well as they are expected to do, writes G. H. Glitske in the Iowa Homestead. This often makes the farmer feel disappointed, and he thinks sheep raising is not a paying business, as I heard one farmer say.

It is, however, a nice side line for the farmer where mixed farming is carried on and certainly can be made to yield a nice little income where even only a few are kept if they are given a little special attention.

A small flock of sheep like this kept on the farm do not add greatly to the work thereof. During the winter they need a little extra care and attention to protect them from cold, damp weather. They can stand dry weather, even though it is somewhat cold, but wet and sleety weather will soon cause them to get sick, and they die very quickly when subjected to such weather. Very frequently the inexperienced sheep raiser neglects to protect them against exposures of this kind, and then if a loss occurs and not knowing exactly what caused the trouble the farmer often becomes discouraged and thinks there is no money in raising sheep. However, for the little amount of extra time and trouble sheep bring big returns, and after the simple method of handling them is once learned a farmer can make good money from even a small flock.

In the winter is when the sheep require most care. They need a warm stable and a dry bed for the night. They cannot stand dampness underfoot any more than they can stand dampness from above. Therefore the shed in which they are kept should not be leaky and should always be well bedded. During days of sleet and cold rains they should not be left out of doors at all. When there is much snow on the ground it is well to clear a place on the sunny side of a building so they can be turned out there on bright days to take a sun bath. They enjoy this, and it is good for them.

By studying the needs and wants of his flock a little the beginner will soon learn to give his sheep the required attention and will find the work pleasant as well as profitable.

Winter Care of Foals.

After weaning, several foals may run together in a sheltered pasture in which there are a shed and small yard in which they can be fed and shut at night and in bad weather. The shed should, if possible, face south and be fitted with a low manger and hayrack. Each foal should be allowed daily crushed oats, two quarts; bran, one pint, and plenty of sweet, unheated hay; pure water and rock salt should also be provided. When the pastures become too wet or exposed for wintering foals on they are best kept in roomy yards with good shelter sheds under which they should be fed on the above diet and a few pulped roots in place of the grass. The yards and sheds require cleaning out once or twice during the winter to prevent the manure injuring the foals' feet. Delicate and sick animals should be kept in airy, loose boxes.

Winter Care of Ewes.

The farm ewes, if any are kept, should be maintained in good shape during the fall so that they will enter the winter season in a good state of health, vigor and thrift. They should browse over the rape and grass pastures as long as it lasts and then should be furnished adequate amounts of grain in addition to plenty of roots, silage and alfalfa hay. Managed in this way the ewes develop into prolific breeders that not uncommonly drop twins and triplets. Experienced sheep men maintain that a peck of grain fed to the ewes in the fall is worth more than a bushel of grain that is stuffed into the animals during the late winter in a futile attempt to fatten them up before the lambing season opens.

Feeding the Horse.

Theoretically give the horse water first, then hay, then grain, says Farm Journal. Most of the hay should be fed at night, and when there is much hard work to be done best give but one to two pounds of hay for the horse to masticate while cooling off at noon, then give the drinking water and then the oats. Some cold water may be allowed when the horse comes in and before he takes the small amount of ### Steel Globes In Space.

If two solid balls of tempered steel, each the size of the earth and hard as the harveyized face of armor plate, were taken in two Jovian bands, placed gently together in space and released what would happen? They would behave exactly as if they were liquid; they would coalesce like two great drops of water, and the highest prominence or mountain on the new globe could not have a height of fifty miles, because anything so high as that would flatten out under its own weight.—Hudson Maxim in Youth's Companion.

Broke the Spell.

Judge E. Rockwood Hoar, remarking on President Lincoln's dry humor, said that on one occasion a delegation of negroes had visited on Mr. Lincoln and were evidently at a loss to know just what to say. The president waited awhile and then remarked:

"Well, all who are here seem to be present."

This self-evident proposition broke the ice and removed the spell from the African jaw.

Would Be a Joke.

"When I die," remarked Cholly, "I think I'll leave my brain to some prominent surgeon."

"Don't do it," advised Algy. "These practical jokes are bad form—very bad form, old top."—Louisville Courier-Journal.
