WAYNE STATE NORMAL OPENS

Began Monday With an Increased Attendance of 25 Percent Above 1912. Prospects for the School Very Bright

Registration at the State Normal School began Monday morning and the enrollment at the close of the second day indicates a large increase in attendance over that of any previous year. On Monday evening 200 students had enrolled, which was increased to 240 during the following day. This is an increase of 25 percent over the enrollment one year ago. According to the records of the office last year's attendance was more than 400 at the close of the first term, which indicates a school of 450 when the registration for the present semester is complete.

It is pleasing to note that the increase over other years comes very largely in the advanced classes. The school starts with a senior class of 35 members as compared with 23 in the last year's class at the opening of the term. The junior class is also large, there being more than 50 who have had the equivalent of a four-year high school course and who rank in the first year of the college curriculum.

The figures given on enrollment do not include the training school in which 62 grade pupils have been registered, 21 in the primary department, 19 in the intermediate department and 22 in the grammar department.

The first chapel meeting was held on Tuesday morning and all class work began following the chapel period. Professor Clyde U. Keckley and Miss Franc B. Hancock, the two newly elected members of the faculty reached Wayne last Saturday and were ready for work at the opening of the term. Professor Keckley has a class in reading, physical culture, two classes in elocution and he will also direct the work in athletics. Miss Hancock has organized a class in sewing and two classes in cooking. The work in cooking begins at 1:30 and continues until 4:30 each day.

Normal Notes

Rev. B. P. Richardson was a pleasant caller Wednesday morning.

Among the students registered this semester are Adlai and Elwin Johnson from Anselmo, Nebraska, the home town of Secretary J. J. Tooley of the normal board.

August E. Nordgren, class of 1911, was a visitor Tuesday. Mr. Nordgren will return to the university of Nebraska this year and complete the work for his A. B. degree.

It relieves all irritation of the intestines, is slightly astringent, cleanses the bowels before they are checked, and is thoroughly antiseptic.

It is without doubt the best remedy of its kind we know of and is equally good for children and adults.

work in domestic science this semester. Miss Hancock can accommodate thirty-two students in cooking and there are not many vacant places left in her laboratory.

Miss Mary Pettit, who resigned her position as teacher of domestic science at the normal, has accepted a position in the state agricultural school at Ames, Iowa. Miss Pettit's friends at Wayne are pleased to learn that she has been elected to a position in one of the best schools in the west.

In response to a request by telephone from the Superintendent of schools at Algona, Iowa, Miss Fannie Britell accepted a position as teacher of fifth and sixth grades in the schools of that place and will take charge of the work on Monday.

The Postoffice Question

At the committee and candidate meeting at the court house last Saturday afternoon the members of the committee who are not candidates and the candidates who are not members of the committee had an interesting time. After some preliminary talks and a careful reading of the plan of Congressman Stephens the committee fixed the time for filing to close at noon, Saturday, September 20, 1913, and named the sum of $25 as the fee for filing, and such part of the filing fees as are not required to pay the election expenses shall be pro-rated back to the candidates. The committee will meet at the court house at 3 o'clock the same afternoon to pass upon the candidates as to their democracy, after which the candidates and committee will go into a joint session to determine whether it shall be an open or closed primary, and the date for holding, the rules to govern, naming of judges and clerks and the election, etc.

Thorwald Thompson Dies

Death came to the bed of Thorwald Thompson at a Sioux City hospital Wednesday forenoon, September 17, 1913, and the body was brought to Wayne that evening. The young man was taken to the hospital for treatment and operation if necessary for injury received by a kick from a horse, but medical and surgical skill could not save him and he passed away as stated above, surrounded by most of the members of his family. He is the youngest son of Chris Thompson and wife, who with three brothers and five sisters mourn his early death. He was an industrious young man of almost 17 years of age and had farmed the home farm southeast of Wayne two seasons. Last winter he attended the normal at this place.

The funeral hour is set for Friday afternoon at the Evangelical Lutheran church and Rev. Ringer of Omaha is expected to be here to conduct the service, the family being members of that church, and warm friends of the former pastor.

The family and friends of the young man have the sympathy of the entire community in this their bereavement.

Wayne Cattle at Fair

M. T. Munsinger sent fifteen head of fat white faces from his feed lot north of town to help make the stock show at Sioux City worth seeing. They certainly were a fine bunch whether they get a place among the prize winners or not. They were the best finished cattle we have noted going to the stock yards here, and that is going some, for Wayne starts some choice animals to market every month in the year.

Gun Club Annual Shoot

The Wayne Gun club is preparing for its third annual shoot at this place Friday, October 3rd. There will be $60 hung up in purses and while there will be competition from all over this corner of the state there is but little doubt that some of the prize money will remain at home.

Sioux City Passengers

The railroad business between this place and Sioux City has been pretty good this week in the passenger department. In all, including this morning, 305 round trip tickets were sold at this station for the fair as follows: Monday 34, Tuesday 75, Wednesday 137 and Thursday 59.

Foster Family in Auto Wreck

Sunday morning J. H. Foster, wife, daughter and two sons left here to go to Dakota City to spend the day at the home of Prof. Leavens and wife, and when a short distance east of Nacora they were bowling along at about a 20 mile rate on nice level road when they came to a steep decline at the foot of which was a swerve in the track from the grade. The brake was applied as soon as the condition of the road was noted and as the car followed the curve of the road and it looked bad the emergency brake was applied, sliding the wheels. This and the swing of the car caused the hind axle to break and the occupants of the rear seat, Mr. and Mrs. Foster and the daughter were thrown from the car a distance of fifteen or twenty feet before striking, when they were stopped by the fence by the roadside. Mrs. Foster was the one who received the worst injuries, being badly bruised about the shoulders, neck and head but no bones broken nor does there appear to be any internal injury, but the tendons and muscles of the shoulder and neck are very sore. Mr. Foster had one arm and shoulder considerably bruised, and one thumb that works like a baseball thumb, but the rest escaped injury. The daughter escaped uninjured and the boys remained in the car, which fortunately remained right side up, though Mr. Foster said he expected that to follow and top out the heap when he landed. They secured conveyance to get them back to Emerson where they spent the day under the care of a physician and came home by train that evening. Mrs. Foster is suffering considerable from the force of her compact with the fence, but improving from day to day.

The wheel which was released from the car by the broken axle went through the wire fence, breaking two wires and carrying some distance into the field. Otherwise than the broken axle the car was not seriously damaged. It was a narrow escape from death for the party.

A Paying Proposition

Wayne offers a great opportunity for some one to build a ten, twenty or thirty room building near the College for lodging and boarding students. Students left the city last year, being unable to get lodging. The attendance promises to grow continually. There is no doubt that such a building would pay handsomely. Its worth your while to consider this closely.

The auction sale of lots Saturday September 20th, right at the college, offers an excellent opportunity to buy some lots.—adv 1.

Auto Driver Killed at Norfolk

Louis Meneghetti, the fast Italian auto driver met his death at Norfolk yesterday while driving his car in one of the races at that place. He was driving in a "pursuit" race when the car turned turtle on a curve throwing him from the machine toward the outer edge of the speedway and breaking his neck. He was one of the most noted fast drivers of the day and has been in many races in this and other lands. He leaves a wife at Richmond, Virginia.

Social Notes

The Helping Hand society were entertained at the home of Mrs. Wm. Beutow last Thursday. The forenoon was spent in tiling comforts after which a sumptuous dinner was served by the hostess, assisted by her daughter. The afternoon was then passed in music, games and general sociability. Mrs. Brown Palmer and Mrs. Alex Jeffery won prizes. Before departing for their homes the guests gathered on the lawn and several pictures were taken. Mrs. Brown Palmer and Miss Louisa Nilsson were invited guests. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. B. Beutow, October 2nd.

The ladies of the Rural Society entertained last Friday evening at the farm home of James McIntosh and wife in honor of the husbands of the ladies and a few invited guests, making a party of about sixty. The evening was spent in games and other amusements and listening to a short literary program. Light refreshments were served at the appointed time and all present departed with regret that such an enjoyable evening could not be longer.

The Misses Pearl and Ruby Hughes entertained a number of their young lady friends last Friday evening at their home in honor of Miss Grace Adams of Delta, Colorado, who is here making her home for the winter with her sister, Mrs. B. P. Richardson. The evening was spent in music and games. Dainty refreshments were served. All report a most pleasant evening.

Mrs. Wm. Gamble, who formerly lived on the hill east of the school house, but who now resides about four miles from town, entertained her old neighbors and friends to the number of 70 at her home in the country last Saturday. The ladies went out in a hay rack and it is needless to add that they had a jolly good time with plenty of good things to eat.

The Junior Bible circle paid Mrs. E. B. Young an agreeable visit Tuesday evening in honor of her birthday and much to her surprise, and as a token of esteem and regard presented her with a set of silver teaspoons. After a social hour they departed wishing the lady many happy returns of the day.

The union bible circle will begin again Tuesday, September 23, after a months vacation. The first meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. C. M. Christensen. The Sunday school lesson will be the subject as usual. The subject for Tuesday will be "The Golden Calf."

Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Theobald had as their dinner guests Thursday evening Judge Norris and wife and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Philleo.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Bressler entertained at dinner Friday evening in honor of Judge Norris and wife of Washington.

The P. E. O. will meet with Mrs. Dr. Blair next Monday evening at 7:30. All are requested to be present.

Quite Spooky

If you were comfortably seated in a lighted room and heard foot steps approaching your door, what would be the most frightening thing you could discover when you went to that door and opened it? That there was no one there? Perhaps. But Poe, in one of the most dreadful of his stories claims that nothing could be more horrible than meeting a man who was exactly like yourself in every possible detail.

The two leading parts were played by the same actor and as both characters frequently appear in the same scene, the result is, to say the least, most startling. The manager of the Crystal theatre has assured us that Saturday, September 30, he has a photoplay which will show Augustus Phillips talking to himself, reproving himself, watching himself woo a girl, snatching a picture away from himself and finally shaking hands with himself in the Edison drama "Twin Brothers."

This feat in photography has been accomplished by the well known inventor, Thomas A. Edison, and is a marvelous invention to say the least.

One of the Pioneers Here

Ben McClary was here from Martinsberg Sunday and Monday, coming over by car to visit his brother here and bring a couple of auto loads of Normal students. In conversation with the Democrat man he said that Martinsberg people were so pleased at the truth we told about the old settler picnic at that place recently that they had made up a $10 purse for the editor which he had forgotten to bring. But we had not told the truth quite strong enough, for there were no less than 14 fights there that day—thirteen is an unlucky number you know—but no fatalities.

Speaking of the early days here he said that he was hurried to Wayne when it was but an infant. A preliminary survey had been made for the railroad the year before, and there was fear that the Union Pacific railroad was going to preempt this rich territory. He was sent with others, who had been working on the Elkhorn branch and on the grade which had been built as far as LaPorte to get in here on that survey just as soon as possible and break dirt for the new road, so that the rival line could not hold their preliminary line. They came and pitched camp within a short distance of Main street, possibly where the new depot is being built. There were but two houses here then, he says, and the natives came out and struggled through the tall grass to see who had squatted here.

That night the first white child was born at Wayne, and the cook of the camp and his wife were the proud parents of the junior cook. The boss of the gang was sent to LaPorte for a doctor for the occasion. Thus, out in the prairie grass in a tent was the first native Wayneite welcomed to this prosperous land—his name and future history are not told, for the family belonged to that class of citizens who seldom remain long in one place.

Mr. McClary said that when he first came here this good land could have been bought at $2.00 per acre and a few months later the price had increased ten fold.

A Prize Winning Baby

Eugene Morarity of Hitchcock, S. D., who won the first prize as the best baby in South Dakota at the state fair at Huron last week is son of B. E. Morarity and wife, and the mother will be remembered by many here as Miss Olive McGinty, who formerly resided here. The mother is a niece of Mrs. J. H. Massie. The Democrat joins their many friends in extending congratulations.

D. C. Hogue, who was proprietor of the Boyd barbershop here last winter, is here from Shelby, where he spent the summer.

Wayne is Booming

It is not often that one has an opportunity to purchase lots at auction in a place like Wayne where there is real value already established on the lots—where they are surrounded by a lot of well built homes, every one of which is occupied and people are looking for more, yet this is the proposition which Messrs. Scholl & Thomas offer here next Saturday. The lots which they offer are enclosed on all sides by homes. They lay between a good town and a growing state educational institution. Here is the natural place for the next homes erected at Wayne to be built, here is an ideal location for rooming houses, and for homes for those who wish to make a home here while educating their children. Another feature of this sale that will interest is the fact that the lots while narrow (25 feet) the purchaser of a lot has an option at the time of purchase of taking one or more adjoining lots at same price per lot, so no one need think they need be crowded. To the Democrat it looks like opportunity to buy some real values at your own price. Strangers who come to the sale will do well to look the city over, for everything here will bear critical inspection whether it be the lots offered, the city in which they are located, or the surrounding country.

Boom Editions

The Democrat has received the first of the famous booster edition papers which some 200 Nebraska papers are pledged to issue this month, and the "Booster" part of this paper consists of six columns of plate matter pertaining to the resources of the state, gotten out by the Nebraska Press Association, which was run in the place of what is usually good home news. If this is a fair specimen of the booster work, the Democrat gets out 52 Booster editions a year, each and every one of them worth more to Wayne than this edition would be.

The citizens of O'Neill are building for the future, and no doubt leaving a legacy of bonded indebtedness for the citizens of the future to wrestle with, but it is in a good cause, so why complain? They are building a school house that is to cost $65,000 and will accommodate 1,200 pupils. For a place with but 2,089 population that is making some preparation for future increase.

Mrs. S. A. Lutgen returned Monday from a visit of two weeks spent in the southern part of this state and at Phillipsberg and Colby in western Kansas. She says that in the vicinity of the latter place the sand and dust has drifted like snow this summer, and that some houses are nearly half buried in this drifting sand. They had rain and quite cool disagreeable weather there last week. In Nebraska she visited at Sterling and Auburn.

The cooler weather which came last week was an agreeable change, but as is frequently the case in Nebraska, these changes appear to overdo the matters from 100 in the shade to near the frost line is rather sudden and much. There are some who claim there was a trifle of frost in the low places Friday morning—others say they did not see it. Thermometers hanging on buildings here in Wayne marked around 38 to 40 degrees above.

Elsewhere in this issue the Democrat publishes a letter from Wm. Boll, editor of the Red Oak, Iowa, Sun telling of a trip in Germany which himself and wife took. Mr. Boll has that happy faculty of seeing things when he travels and the ability to tell of them in an interesting manner without frills. His excellent paper contained a series of his letters and it is possible that the Democrat will copy other of the letters. There are many people here who are from Montgomery county, Iowa, and who are acquainted with Mr. Boll and to them the letter will have a double interest.

The little town of Nodaway, in Iowa, has set a good example for some other places to follow. The mayor and marshal decided to go after the automobile men for speeding and not giving signal when turning a corner. When the game got started business was good—a number of citizens came in and plead guilty to save costs. The mayor was among the number and he fined himself the same as he had his neighbors. It was the swells of the town who were caught. One doctor was hauled up for riding on the walks. It was the proper thing to do, and they all got their names in the paper.

Forestation Commission Reports to the Governor.

WANTS INDUSTRY FOSTERED.

Commend Federal Activity in Cultivating Trees—Railroad Commission Plans Attack on Telephone Company, Suffrage Convention Called.

Lincoln, Sept. 17.—Recommendation that the state establish a forestry department and that this line be given attention at the next legislative session is made in the report of the for-estration commission filed with Governor Morehead by Chairman Carl Rohde of the body. The commission approves the trading of state school land for forest reserve land and sets out its interest in buying United States Senator Hitchcock present this matter to the federal land authorities at Washington.

Groves cultivated in sections of the cattle country of north Nebraska, according to the report, have proven beneficial to the stockmen. In that they offer shelter from blizzards and have been known to save animals when such storms have raged. The action of the federal foresters in cultivating a million young trees and providing for presentation of 400,000 of these to the Kinkaiders is commended.

Hot Lincoln Fight.

With the municipal ownership league split over the provisions of the charter to be submitted to the people of this city and with local organizations preparing for a fight of major proportions over that document, local politics is assuming magnitude that will hardly allow general interest to wane this fall in the capital city. The charter was framed, so the league claim, by an adroit corporation clique, which edged itself into the charter convention while the people were attending to other phases of municipal politics. Two sections are being hit at with much ferocity on the part of the public ownership leaders, one allowing corporations to secure franchises without much difficulty and the other making hard the way of those who would extend municipal ownership to the public utilities of the city.

Heavy Rains Wet State.

Omaha, Sept. 17.—Telegrams sent out by the railroad agents at the Nebraska towns and received at headquarters indicate that all through the western part of the state precipitation was from one to two inches. Railroad men who have to do with the crop situation are delighted with the changed outlook brought about by the rain. They are of the opinion that all through the western and central portion of the state, rain of Monday night and that has since fallen will put the ground in perfect condition for fall plowing and the sowing of winter wheat. At the same time they believe that it will freshen up the pastures, start the grass to growing, and that, as a result, fall feed will be as good, if not better, than during former years.

Will Be Much Corn.

Farmers of several sections of the state are going to wake up some of these days and find that they have more corn than they thought they had, in the opinion of Labor Commissioner Pool and Railway Commissioner Taylor. Both officials have just been put in touch with surprise situations of this nature and they are ready to voice that belief to anybody that wants to know. Mr. Pool received several big ears from Chase county, with attached cards bearing the message, "We will have lots of this out here." Mr. Taylor rode down the Platte river valley and saw several fields which farmers along the way told him would turn out from twenty to forty bushels, instead of the failures, which they had forecasted a few weeks ago.

Commission Plans Attack.

Members of the railway commission are likely to recommend to the state's legal department that immediate prosecution of the Nebraska Telephone company be put under headway for its refusal to enter into physical connection arrangements with the Hooper Telephone company under the provisions of the act passed by the last legislature. If that step is not taken, an order directing the company to comply with the law will be issued forthwith. In either case the big telephone company has given notice that it will take the case to court and that the constitutionality of the new law will be attacked.

Attorney General Fights.

The attorney general on behalf of the state submitted a motion to the state supreme court asking for an advancement of the case brought against Election Commissioner Moorhead in Douglas county to determine the right of that official to require foreign-born citizens to present naturalization papers when making application for registration. The motion will be ruled on within a few days.

Many Must Pay.

Scores of corporation taxes now being sent in by concerns doing business in the state have been returned because of failure to add the 15 per cent penalty collectible after Sept. 1. Under the now effective Peats corporation tax law the penalty amounts to a considerable sum in some instances. Payment of all such outstanding obligations will enrich the state treasury in the sum of about $1,000,000.

NEW CONFERENCE OPENS

Endowment of Wesleyan College Early on the Program.

Lincoln, Sept. 17.—Because the funds given to Omaha Methodists and Methodist churches following the Easter day tornado did not pass through the hands of the home missionary board, with offices at Philadelphia, Secretary Kynett told members of the Nebraska conference, that no credit could be given for the donations. The statement grated harshly on the ears of Bishop Frank Bristol, who was presiding. He made mention of the "red tape" which characterized such offerings and insisted that the people who made the donations should not be robbed of credit on account of failure to adhere to hard and fast rules.

The greater Nebraska conference began activities today. Endowment of Wesleyan university and placing of the aged ministers' fund on a systematic, business-like basis will feature the early business sessions of the new conference.

NEW POINT IS RAISED

Recall Provision of Banning Law Assailed in Supreme Court.

Lincoln, Sept. 17.—The constitutionality of the recall provisions of the Banning commission form of government law were assailed in the state supreme court today when the Nebraska City case was argued and submitted. City Attorney Moran, on behalf of Mayor Houghton, whose recall from the mayorship was sought by a number of citizens, declared that voters have not the right under the Banning law to set out the reasons for the recall of their commissioners, a power which he averred belongs to nobody other than the legislature. Delegation of this power, he argued, could not be made by the state's lawmakers. In the case at bar, he declared, so slight a reason as "incompatibility of temperament" was given by the signers of the recall petitions for the removal of their head municipal official.

ROSE ARGUES FOR AUDITOR

Test of Insurance Code Law May Be Advanced.

Lincoln, Sept. 17.—Attorneys for the state and for Auditor Howard made brief argument before the state supreme court on the attempt of the former insurance official to reopen the mandamus proceedings by which the new insurance commission obtained control of the department late in July. The motion was not ruled on at once, but was taken under consideration by the bench. Halleck F. Rose, attorney for Auditor Howard, announced afterwards that he would file a motion for the advancement of the quo warranto proceedings brought by the auditor to determine the right of the new commission to the occupancy of the office which the members thereof are holding.

MAY DIE AS RESULT OF A JOKE

Messenger Clerk Enrages Porter, Who Stabs Him With Knife.

Omaha, Sept. 16.—Herbert Pierson, clerk of the Reliable Messenger and Express company, may lose his life because he teased "Pearly" Bugg, a negro porter, by putting red pepper under his nose as he was sleeping. Pierson is in St. Joseph's hospital with a number of knife wounds about his face and body, which may cause death. They were inflicted by Bugg when he awakened in strangulation and became so enraged that he drew a knife and attacked Pierson, who is alleged to have been the perpetrator of the trick.

Raise Net Weights.

Barrels of flour in the future must contain 49 pounds net and sacks of the product must weigh out forty-eight pounds net, according to the new weights and measures enactment which the state food commission is just beginning to enforce. Anything under those amounts will be put off sale by food inspectors. Cornmeal, too, must weigh out at 48, 24 and 12 pounds respectively for the bushel, half bushel and fourth bushel sacks. These provisions will be applicable to all merchants of the state without regard to any contracts or agreements that might have been made by millers and wholesalers. The name and address of the manufacturers of the products must be indicated on all containers and if flour is made from more than one kind of wheat, that, too, must be indicated on the bags or barrels.

Body of Farmer Found.

Beatrice, Neb., Sept. 17.—The search for A. W. McCurry, the farmer who disappeared Sunday from his home six miles east of the city, ended when a posse of farmers with a pair of bloodhounds found his body hanging from a limb of a tree half a mile north of his home on Cedar creek. He had hanged himself with a strap. Worry over his business affairs is assigned as the cause for the deed. McCurry was fifty-one years of age and leaves a widow and three children.

Beatrice Citizens Appeal.

Beatrice telephone subscribers, who are not favorable to allowing the Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph company to raise rentals there without a fight, have filed a motion with the state railway commission asking a rehearing of the battle in which they were worsted.

Beef Rules Steady—Feeders Are Strong.

HOGS STRONG TO 5c HIGHER.

Feeder Lambs Sell at Strong Figures. Supply Large—Fat Lambs Steady to 10@15c Lower—Muttons Steady.

Union Stock Yards, South Omaha, Sept. 16.—A very good run of cattle were received today, about 8,000 head. This makes approximately 18,000 head for the two days. Trade in corn fed beefs was somewhat slow, but prices were about steady with Monday. All the dressed beef men had good orders for western rangers to fill and with vigorous competition from the feeder buyers the trade was fairly active from the start. Beef prices were generally fully steady with Monday, while stockers and feeders brought a shade better figures. Cows and heifers found a freer outlet at fully steady figures and there was a good, healthy undertone to the trade.

Only about 5,500 hogs arrived today. The market opened out slow, but in very fair shape, first sales being made on a 5c higher basis, but later on prices slipped a little, or strong to 5c better than Monday. The bulk of the receipts went at $7.90@7.95, while shippers bought hogs up to $8.65.

Sheep and lamb receipts totaled 40,000 head today. This makes, about 85,000 head for the two days. The attraction was feeders, both lambs and aged offerings, the supply and number of buyers being large, and trade was very active and prices strong. The supply of fat stuff was also fairly large for a Tuesday and, as for some little time back, the bulk of the offerings consisted of lambs. The market was fairly active, at prices steady to 10@15c lower than Monday. There was no material change in muttons.

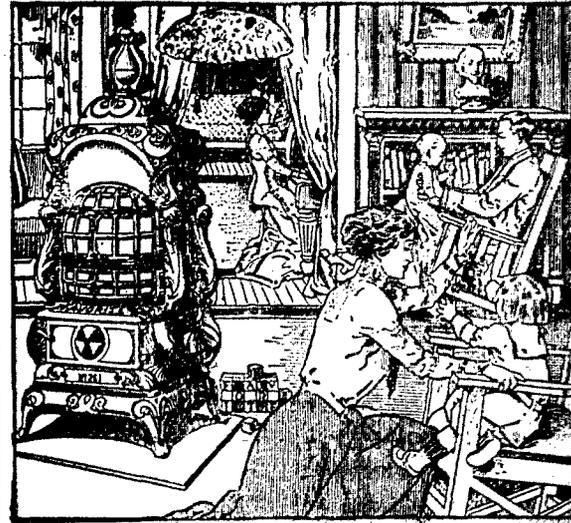

Quotations on sheep and lambs: Lambs, good to choice, $7.15@7.35; lambs, fair to good, $6.65@7.15; lambs, culls, $5.00@6.00; lambs, feeders, $5.25@6.50; yearlings, good to choice, $5.50@5.75; yearlings, fair to good, $5.25@5.50; yearlings, feeders, $4.75@5.25; wethers, good to choice, $4.25@4.50; wethers, fair to good, $4.00@4.25; ewes, good to choice, $4.00@4.15 ewes, fair to good, feeders, $3.75@4.00; ewes, feeders, $3.00@3.50; cull sheep, $2.00@3.00.

Baptist Church

Rev. B. P. Richardson, Pastor

"Does the Church Pay?" was the subject discussed last Sunday morning. In comparison with the results and the cost, the church, as an organization, certainly pays large dividends to any man, especially a father.

"Is the Church Making Good?" will be the subject for next Sunday morning. Have you ever considered the results wrought in the world through the agency of the church? Are you proud of your church membership? Hear the discussion Sunday morning.

Last week the church and Sunday school officers were elected for the coming year. The church owes a deep debt of gratitude to all the officers whose term of service is about to expire. It is an honor to be selected to fill an office in the church but it also means service and an expenditure of time and energy and the bearing of a burden and responsibilities as leaders. Church officers expect to find and should have support and cooperation of the whole body of church members. Let us not find fault but help with all our might. Shall we not pledge, anew, our hearty co-operation to all the newly elected officers?

It was good to meet together again for our evening service. A splendid interest was seen last Sunday evening. Especially we all enjoyed the music, under Professor Davies' direction. He has some good voices and an enlarged choir, and with his untiring efforts we can always expect something worth hearing. After the song service the pastor will preach a brief sermon, especially adapted to the young people.

Tomorrow (Friday) evening the young people of the church and Sunday school will hold a reception for the students and faculty members of the Normal. We welcome, with a glad hand, the return of the students and open our church for their service and help.

By vote of the church, suitable resolutions were prepared concerning our appreciation of Brother Kimball, who as taken from us so suddenly. May the spirit of this good man come upon many of us.

September 24th is the date set for our annual fellowship gathering. We want all of you to come. It will take the place of our regular prayer meeting. The hosts expect to have you present. Come!

Methodist Church

Rev. P. R. Glocfelty, Pastor

Sunday September 21st is conference Sunday and the pastor will be away. Sunday school at 12 o'clock and Epworth League at 7 o'clock.

Last Sunday the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Beckenhauer and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Erickson were baptised at the morning service.

Glad to note the many new Epworth Leaguers at these meetings and the many new members. Let all our young people join in this very pleasant and profitable work.

The League will hold an acquaintance social for our new normal students Friday evening, September 19. All are invited. A good time is assured.

The Ladies Aid society holds their annual election of officers Thursday afternoon, September 18th. Let all be present.

WAYS WITH FLANK STEAK.

DINNER MENU.

Lettuce Soup.
Smothered Flank Steak.
Parisian Potatoes.
String Beans.
Fruit Surprise.
Coffee.

FLANK steak is comparatively cheap, and, if it were substituted now and then for choicer cuts of beef, would help to bring down the cost of living.

A great deal depends on the way it is prepared. In the hands of the capable cook it is not only tender and nutritious, but also palatable.

Smothered in Onions.

Smothered Flank Steak.—Chop one onion with a tablespoonful of parsley. Mix together a tablespoonful of salt and a saltspoonful of pepper. Sprinkle the bottom of a baking pan with a little onion, place the steak in the pan. Brush it with an egg beaten with a tablespoonful of warm water and then spread with the rest of the onion and parsley. Add a half cupful of stock to which has been added the salt and pepper. Place in a hot oven and cook for thirty minutes. Then lift the steak, and thicken the stock. Season and pour over the steak. Garnish with cooked vegetables.

Steak En Casserole.

Flank Steak En Casserole.—Run enough flank steak through the meat chopper to make two cupfuls and then put into the center of a well buttered casserole dish. Flavor with celery, salt, pepper, mace and a little mushroom catsup or Worcestershire sauce. Surround the steak with one cupful of pearl barley; pour two cupfuls of boiling water over it, and bake in a moderate oven. Keep closely covered while cooking. Just before serving cover with a brown gravy or tomato sauce. Serve hot in the dish in which it has been cooked.

Stuffed Flank.

Flank Steak With Bread Stuffing.—To make the stuffing take two cupfuls of soft bread crumbs, one-half cupful butter melted in one-third cupful hot water or milk, one-fourth teaspoonful powdered sweet herbs, a beaten egg. Mix the ingredients together thoroughly. The bread should be twenty-four hours old and taken from the center of the loaf.

The seasoning is a matter of individual taste. The egg may be omitted if the beef is to be eaten hot, but it will slice better when cold if egg is used.

Now take the steak and spread it with the above dressing and roll tightly. Fry out some suet and then brown the flank to hold the juices. Put in a casserole dish, add a little water and when half done season with salt and pepper, chopped onions and plenty of fine minced vegetables or rice. The flank is quite juicy, so you will need but little water. It lacks flavor, so the spices and vegetables impart what the flank lacks.

SIMPLE FRUIT SANDWICHES.

WITH the return of schooldays the conscientious mother whose children live too far from home to return for the midday meal has again to face the hard problem of providing them with attractive yet nutritious lunches.

In these sandwiches play an important part, and to be able to supply a variety of these that will appeal to the childish palate and yet are good for small stomachs is to achieve a culinary triumph.

Sweet Sandwiches.

Date Sandwiches.—Cut entire wheat bread in rounds, cover each with half cupful dates and half cupful English walnut meats chopped fine and mixed with half cupful cream. Butter the bread before filling.

Banana Sandwiches.—Take two bananas sliced and marinated in lemon juice. Spread white bread with thick cream sweetened with honey and then lay on slices of bananas and cover with another thin slice of bread.

Dainty Fruit Combination.

Fig Sandwiches.—Chop the figs very fine, add water to make a thin, smooth paste and cook gently until they spread. Add nut meat chopped fine, with orange juice or extract to flavor, or, if preferred, use grated candied lemon or orange peel, with fresh fruit juice to taste. Spread between thin slices of buttered brown bread cut in fanciful shapes or between thin slices of angel food or sponge cake.

Orange Sandwiches.—Put one cupful sugar in a granite saucepan, add one-fourth cup each water and orange juice. Bring to the boiling point and let boil until sirup will spin a thread when dropped from the tip of a spoon. Add one-half cupful of very finely chopped candied orange peel and one-half teaspoonful vanilla. Spread between two kinds of bread (brown and white), cut in rounds, the upper one cut doughnut shape to show the fillings.

Is the World Getting Better or Worse?

The interesting question as to whether the world is improving morally or degenerating was the subject of Rev. Alexander Corkey's sermon at the Presbyterian church last Sunday evening. There was a large attendance, this being the first Sabbath evening service since vacation time. The music was furnished by a choir of the young people under the leadership of Miss Edna Neely. In beginning his sermon Dr. Corkey referred to the unquestionable progress of the world in material things, its rapidly growing wealth, and its amazing increase of knowledge. He then took up the question as to the moral state of the world today compared with the past. Building his philosophy on the plain teachings of Christianity and supporting his argument with undeniable facts he then declared that the world was getting both better and worse, the good people in the world being better than ever, with higher standards than ever known before, but the bad people are worse than ever. The worst men who ever lived live today. He made his point very clear by referring to the drink habit, an acknowledged moral blight. In the past forty years the amount of intoxicating liquor drunk in America has increased 300 per cent per capita in spite of the fact that millions are now total abstainers who formerly drank in moderation. This means that those who drink today are more sodden and drunk than they were forty years ago, but the temperate people are still more temperate. "There are two crowds in this world", said the preacher. "Jesus always taught this fact regarding society. He described two ways along which men walked, one broad and crooked and the other narrow and straight. He divided men into wheat and tares. The plain, self-evident fact is that the wheat is getting better and the tares worse. Fifty years from now the worst man in the world then will be a worse man than the worst today, and so also the best man in the world half a century hence will be a better man than the best man today."

In conclusion the speaker showed that the immoral and crooked people were rapidly losing out, and a moral young man has every chance in the present day while the moral pervert has only failure before him.

Miss Irma James left Monday morning to begin school work as teacher at Tremonton, Utah, where she has been engaged for the school year.

Richard Forbes left Tuesday for Cambridge, Mass., where he will enter Harvard university to complete his law course. Mr. Forbes received his Bachelor of Arts degree at the Lincoln university last year.

T. E. Aden and Will Crossland of Lincoln spent Sunday here at the home of Geo. Crossland and wife. They are both in chautauqua work this season and classmates at Lincoln and so enjoyed the day together here.

Phil H. Kohl is home from Isle Royale, Michigan, where he went two weeks ago with his son, Tracy. He says that climatic conditions there knocked hay fever out at once, and that the young man, who is there yet is feeling fine.

Dean Hanson came in the first of the week with 83 head of choice whiteface feeders which he bought in Wyoming, and it is reported that he returns this week for several cars more of the same kind of cattle and a car or two of shoats.

The Nebraska Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows, the annual convention of the Rebekahs, the Grand Encampment and the Patriarchs Militant, all convene in Lincoln October 14, 15 and 16. It is estimated that upwards of 1,500 delegates and visitors will attend these meetings.

Chas. Junkin and wife of Craig were here over Sunday, guests at the homes of E. Q. Sala and Thos. Hughes, brothers-in-law to him, and his sister, Mrs. Rickabaugh. They were returning from Oakdale, where they have land interests, and stopped here to visit relatives and old friends, for this place was once their home.

And yet Norfolk is not in it with Wayne, for this birth gives the only Samuel Temple the title of "Great-Grandpa Temple," and he is indeed a proud man, and expects all who enter his den to smoke.

Herman Schultz and wife were here from Martinsberg Monday, coming over with two of their daughters to see that they were nicely located for the school year here. More and more people in this part of the state are coming to know the benefits of a good normal school so near that if need be they can come home by automobile in time for school in the morning.

Last week Thursday Andrew Stamm had a bunch of well finished cattle on the South Omaha market which sold as top notchers, bringing nine cents flat for 34 head, which had an average weight of 1,536. Monday he was there with two more cars of just as good stuff. He has had these cattle on feed nearly eight months, and part of them are the white faces he bought in Colorado last season. He says their gain while on feed was nearly two and a half pounds per day each. James Grier shipped two loads on the same train Sunday evening.

Friday, Weldon Crossland is planning to start for England to enter the great school at Oxford, where he won a scholarship, known as the Rhodes scholarship, in competition with all who cared to enter the race, and the competition was keen for the prize is an allowance of $1,500 per year for three years in that school which is considered one of the greatest in the world. Wayne and his parents may well be proud of the ability and perseverance of this young man who has won this prize on the merit of his school work. The best wishes of his many friends go with him.

Three Nice Lots For Sale

The store box and roller top desk farmers have been recently working overtime telling about the crop failure. They are assisted by the grain gamblers who have axes of their own to grind. This being the silly season several newspapers fall for the calamity howl and publish that the corn crop is a total failure. Of course the corn is badly damaged in places by the extended drouth, but the final returns will show plenty of corn to feed and a lot to sell. One half of Nebraska has a fair average crop of corn.—Burt County Herald.

Wayne, the county seat of Wayne county, has been specially favored by nature. It is surrounded by the best and surest agricultural territory in the state. The city was originally settled by the highest type of citizens, and through successive years has attracted the same high class. Its business men are wide awake and progressive, and on the alert for improvements along all lines. The city has public waterworks, electric lighting plant and sewerage system. Paving and electroliers will come next. The Nebraska Normal school, located here, is growing rapidly, and the state is appropriating thousands of dollars for new buildings and new equipment to meet increasing demands. Following completion of the new Science Hall last year, the state has lately appropriated $100,000 for a new central building. This growing institution, sustained and managed by the state, insures alone a bright future for Wayne. The city schools, in a palatial new fireproof building, are equal to the best in the state. Six churches, with substantial, modern edifices, encourage right living. They are: Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist, English Lutheran, German Lutheran and Catholic. New city hall and library building erected last year. New depot in course of construction now. Many modern dwellings going up. Wayne now has 3,000 people, and is certain to grow and expand more rapidly in the future than it has in the past. That is the opinion of the most conservative business heads. Where could you find a more desirable city in which to live?

City water, electric lights and modern improvements are here; you don't have to wait for them.

Publicity is the most powerful weapon with which to fight wrong doing. If a cause is not just it cannot long stand in view of the public. Publicity has been the greatest weapon with which President Wilson has won his victories over the corrupt politicians and corrupt interests.

"I see where a distinguished member of the House of Lords in a speech in parliament the other day referred to Mr. Bryan as 'the modern Gladstone of the world,'" says Harry Boydston, the well known insurance man. "And yet," Boydston added, "there are a lot of little squirts right here in Nebraska who have the gall to assail Mr. Bryan every time he turns around. Any Nebraska man with a mind over an inch wide ought to be proud of Bryan and glad to acknowledge it on all occasions." Omaha Nebraskan.

The Winside Tribune has come out with an all at home paper, discarding the patent insides with its bundle of advertising about which the proprietors have nothing to say. Editor McCoy says that he is done with the patent sheet. This leaves but one paper in the county that is not all home print. When all of the local papers of Nebraska stand on their own merits and control their foreign advertising they will make more money and the readers will get better service. Perhaps not so much reading matter, but they will get the home news which is all that should be expected of a local paper. The news service of the average patent sheet is about a week old when it comes to the reader.

Obituary—Levi Kimball

(By the Pastor)

Levi Kimball was born in Rockland, N. Y., Aug. 19, 1838, and died at Grand Island, Nebr., September 9, 1913. He belonged to a family, all of whom, lived to a good age. Two sisters still survive him, both living near the old home in New York. Mr. Kimball attended a business college for a time and had engaged in the lumber business when, in May, 1861, he responded to President Lincoln's call and enlisted in the 28th New York Infantry Volunteers. After receiving his honorable discharge from the service, he came west, settling at McGregor, Iowa, engaging in the grain business. Here in 1866, he married Miss Abigail Hill Merrill. Three sons were born into the home, Fred M., now of Hartington, Nebr., Herbert Lee, of Spokane, Wash., and Thomas E., who died seven years ago. The two surviving sons and a daughter, Mabel A. Mudge of Wilmington, Del., together with six grandchildren, were present with the mother at the time of the burial.

In 1887, Mr. Kimball with his family made their home in Wakefield, Nebr., where he continued to live till the time of his death. Before locating here he had purchased an interest in what was then called the Wakefield Bank, but now the First National Bank of Wakefield and also deeply interested in the Hartington National Bank, with which he became connected in 1885. At the time of his death Mr. Kimball was president of the bank at Hartington and cashier of the bank at Wakefield.

Mr. Kimball was also a member of the First Baptist church of Wayne; a member and officer of the Masonic Lodge at Wakefield and an active member of the Grand Army Post, always a leader and deeply interested in the Memorial Day Services.

Because of his character and active interest in all enterprises for the betterment of the world, Mr. Kimball exerted a very wide influence. The power of his strong personality was felt by all who came in contact with him. Although at the time of his death he was 77 years old, yet his activity on behalf of moral, religious or educational needs was not lessened.

On Monday, September 8, full of life and in good spirits he left his home to attend a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Grand Island College. After reaching Grand Island he ate dinner at the hotel and then retired to his room for his usual mid-day rest. Here, sometime in the afternoon he was stricken with apoplexy and sinking to the floor, was not found till the next morning. Having been so active, up till the very end, his death was a great shock to all who knew and loved him.

A large circle of people feel keenly his death. His departure is a sad blow to every righteous cause. He filled a large place, not merely as a citizen, but especially as a Christian man, interested in all aspects of religious work. Mr. Kimball was a man of affairs, but always putting the affairs of God foremost. He was a successful business man without being absorbed by his business as a slave to it. His religion permeated his business dealings and his business was dedicated to religious ends.

The Baptist denomination especially feels his loss. He not only contributed largely towards the work, but was actively engaged in the work. Having filled many places of honor and responsibility in the denomination in the state. A wise, conservative, true Christian leader, he always exerted a helpful influence.

As a husband and as a father he was no less great. Those of his household, who survive him, rise up to call him blessed. During his life of Christian activity he made many rich and his investments in God's Kingdom will never cease bearing dividends.

A large representation of friends from adjoining towns as well as from Wakefield paid tribute to his memory by their presence at the funeral services. The service was conducted by the pastor from Wayne, assisted by Dr. Caldwell of Wakefield, Dr. Mills and Mr. I. W. Carpenter of Omaha and Rev. Fred Berry from Lincoln. With one accord all the speakers paid noble tribute to one whose life and work had like his Master, been spent in doing good. Interment was made at Wakefield.

BAFFLES SCIENCE.

Why Hot Steel Is Tempered by a Sudden Cooling.

SLOW COOLING KEEPS IT SOFT

Yet the Busy Brain of Man Cannot Succeed in Reasoning Out Why This Is So—The Mysterious Properties Exhibited by Water, Tin and Glass.

Here is a fact, known to everybody, which is as mysterious as would be the actual appearance of a ghost, by which I mean that the fundamental explanation of the phenomenon is about as far beyond our reach in the one case as in the other.

The fact to which I refer is the production of tempered steel by quenching in cold water. If hot steel is cooled very slowly it becomes soft and cannot take a cutting edge, but if it is cooled suddenly it becomes very hard and can be ground into keen swords, knives and cutting tools.

Now, why the difference? Have you ever thought about that question? If you have not, many a man of science has, and has been puzzled over it.

Here is another related mystery. If you heat an old Japanese sword, which for centuries has retained its capacity to slice off a head at a blow, or to open a swift passage for the soul of the victim of the harakiri mania, to the temperature of boiling water it gradually softens and loses the keenness that once made it so formidable.

It is the same steel, but it, too, seems to have lost its soul. At a temperature of 150 degrees centigrade the hardened steel commits harakiri in a few minutes. Surely there is something strange in that.

Then consider this: At zero temperature water changes from a liquid and suddenly becomes solid. But if you put the water in a vase and carefully protect it from dust you may cool it as much as 20 degrees below zero and yet it will not freeze! But now shake the vase or drop in a bit of ice, and the water immediately solidifies!

I owe the collection of these facts to a paper by Professor James H. Walton, Jr., of Wisconsin university. The explanation which he gives is that substances like the hardened steel and the unfreezing water are in a state of "suspended change." That accounts for the phenomena, but in a certain sense they remain mysterious, just as life is mysterious.

Many substances possess the same curious characteristics. Professor Walton says that if a flask containing sodium acetate, which has been cooled below its natural freezing point without solidifying, is opened in a room containing dust of the solid acetate the fine particles of the latter dropping into the flask will cause the whole contents to solidify.

Tin is a very strange metal with regard to this state of suspended change or "metastability." A severe winter cold will sometimes cause it to lose its hardness and crumble.

Objects made of tin sometimes undergo such change and are then said to be suffering from "the tin disease." The contact of "diseased" tin with bright, hard tin is capable of setting up the transformation.

Glass, Professor Walton informs us, is "an undercooled substance"—that is, it is in a metastable condition. If old glass tubes through which water has frequently passed are heated the glass crystallizes and loses its transparency.

All substances in this state are liable to change, and the change, under proper conditions, may be sudden. Hardened steel is in a similar category. If it were as perishable as tin it could not be safely used for many purposes for which it is habitually employed. Fortunately steel exhibits great resistance to change of state after it has been tempered. Transformation is retarded or arrested.

"Does steel slowly return to the stable form and thus grow softer?" asks Professor Walton, and then answers: "That we do not know; we can only say that if such a change does take place, hundreds of years are necessary to bring it about."

The same ancient Japanese swords, which, when heated, as before described, become soft, retain all their hardness if carefully preserved.

It is evidently of the highest importance to the practical world that science is investigating these things and discovering the way and the circumstances in which the changes come about, even if it has not unveiled the underlying mystery of their cause.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Journal.

Correct Interpretation Essential.

Many of the most beautiful pieces of poetry in literature would seem uninteresting and flat if read by a bad reciter. In the same way a good reciter will make attractive a poem whose beauties are not so apparent. A fine painter will light up each little beauty in his pictures until the smallest detail is attractive and strikes the eye. It is only the mediocrity whose work is characterized by sameness and lack of interest.—Strand Magazine.

Making Good.

"Darling," he cried, "I cannot live without you."
"But," she replied, "my father is bankrupt."
"In that case," he despondently replied, "I guess I'll go and shoot myself."—Chicago News.

It is indeed a desirable thing to be well descended, but the glory belongs to our ancestors.—Plutarch.

Wagner Versus?

"There is no such worship of national genius in America as prevails abroad," said a recently returned tourist. "In Germany, for instance, at the opera the scale of prices varies according to the composer. Wagner, of course, commanding the top notch admission. But the most peculiar feature of this musical adoration is that it affects the toilets as well. With the elaborate gowning of a New York audience in mind, I approached our landlady as to the propriety of appearing at the opera in such a makeshift costume as my tourist wardrobe afforded. 'It depends entirely upon the composer you intend to hear, fraufräulein,' was her astonishing reply. 'For some your present attire would be perfectly proper, but if it is the great Wagner you are to hear'— She broke off, but an expressive shrug of the shoulders told plainer than words that it would be an affront to his ashes to appear in anything but the most stunning and up to date evening gown."—New York Tribune.

When Thanks Were Given.

Many years ago a noted chief of the tribe of Chippewa Indians while hunting wounded a deer and followed it for miles. The chase was long and very severe, and the Indian was in the last stages of exhaustion from fatigue and lack of food and water when he found himself on the top of a wonderful mountain, at the foot of which nestled a beautiful lake crystal clear. From the surface of the lake trout leaped, and upon the shore lay the deer he had hunted. Here were food, water, fish and fuel for cooking.

Raising his hand and facing the setting sun, the exhausted chief exclaimed, "Ish-pem-ing," which in the Chippewa tongue means "heaven" or "the place on high."

The story was remembered, and the name given by the Indian was adopted by the white settlers when the present city of Ishpeming, Mich., was formed.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Inexperienced.

In a boarding house for bachelors Amanda, a typical "mammy," looked after the guests' comfort in true southern style, so well that one of the men thought he would take her away with him in the summer in the capacity of housekeeper. Toward spring he waylaid her in the hall one day and said:

"Mandy, do you like the country?" Mandy reckoned she did.

"Would you like to go away with me this summer and keep house for me?"

Mandy was sure she would. "Suppose I get a bungalow. Do you think you could take care of it nicely by yourself?"

Mandy gasped and rolled her eyes. "Deed, no, massa! Reckon you all better get somebody else; I don't know nothin' about takin' care of any animals."—Harper's Magazine.

Antiquity of Nagging.

No, if you are nagged you are not alone in your experience. Nor are the nagged persons of this age the only nagged persons of any age. Nagging is an old custom. They tell us that Adam, Job, Socrates, Aesop, Leonidas, Machiavelli and many more distinguished historical personages were victims of nagging. This proves the antiquity but not the wisdom or the respectability of nagging. And if it is as old as it is claimed to be let it crawl away somewhere to die. For come to think of it, nagging is just as hurtful to the nagger as it is to the nagged. So why injure ourselves for the purpose of injuring some one else? Samson did that, you know, when he pulled down the temple of Gaza and broke his own back. Rather a poor example to follow, eh?—Detroit Free Press.

Wrote in Bed.

Mark Twain wrote nearly all his later books in bed. So persistent a "sluggard" was he that he had a specially contrived bed desk fitted up so that he could write without trouble or exertion while propped luxuriously among his pillows. He used to aver that most of his best thoughts came to him in bed and that the trouble and worry of getting up, shaving and dressing dispersed them all and left him in no mood for commencing his literary labors. He was of opinion that bed was the very best place for the author, and he acted upon his belief.

Careless.

"Have you made a special study of the subject on which you are going to lecture?"
"No," replied the gifted speaker. "I tried that once, and I got so interested in the subject that I didn't have time to write the lecture."—Washington Star.

Man's Love For Woman.

"If a man loves a woman for her looks he will love her for five years. If he loves her mind he will love her for ten years. If he loves her ways he will love her forever." And every woman believes when she marries that her lover loves her ways.—Exchange.

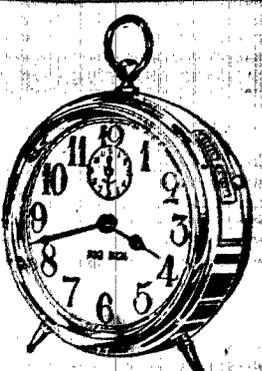

Consolation.

"Would you marry a man who has the reputation of being not more than half witted?"
"No, but I'll be a sister to you."—Houston Post.

Cynical.

"My wife is an angel," said the boob. "How long has she been dead?" asked the grouch.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

James Steele is taking his place at the postoffice temporarily, pending the result of the examinations taken a short time ago.

At Pierce the milling company who also have contract to furnish the city with light and power have installed a new 100 h. p. oil engine of the Hornby-Ackroyd type and one of the latest outputs of the DeLaverne company who were figuring on placing their engines here last winter. This is the same type of engine which the Weber Bros., here use in the mill, only of later pattern.

Chas. Ash and wife returned last week from Calgary in the Alberta country and while there took the preliminary steps towards securing farm land in that country. Mr. Ash says it is a fine country, growing fine crops and fat cattle. Where they chose a location is in sight of the mountains, where the warm winds temper the winter climate greatly and where he thinks is a far better country and climate than further east.

S. E. Auken returned Tuesday from the western part of the state where he went for supplies for his vegetable store, which he is to open here. The sample potatoes, onions and beans which he brought home with him show a good quality. He also bought a consignment of cabbage and the first car load of his purchase is expected to arrive here the first of the week. See what he has to offer, both at wholesale and retail. —adv.

Dr. J. J. Williams and wife returned from Iowa City Wednesday morning, where he has been for the past six weeks and the wife some weeks longer. Mrs. Williams was called there to attend her mother during her last sickness and the doctor went later and remained with his wife while they settled up the business affairs of Mr. Pickering, Mrs. William's aged father, who came to Wayne with them and will make his home here from now on.

From Sioux City comes the report that Robert Pritchard of Carroll, who has an exhibit of Duroc Jersey hogs at the Inter-State fair there, is getting some first places if not sweepstakes. Burris Bros., and Billiters have some of their good horses on exhibition there, and they will no doubt make a winning, but we have not yet heard. Roy Fisher was at Des Moines and Lincoln with a bunch of Hampshire hogs and came away with ribbons plenty. It is reported that he is at Topeka this week. When the returns are all in we predict that Wayne county will be heard from in the list of winners.

T. A. Craig returned home Wednesday from a visit of two or three weeks with his daughters near Maple Creek in Saskatchewan Canada. He reports that it is very dry there this year, that their grain crops are but fair in yield. Wheat is going from 12 to 18 bushels, flax about 10 bushels per acre and oats 30 to 35 and corn is unknown to them. Maple Creek is in the Moose Jaw election district and well to the southwest part of the province. It is 215 miles from Regina, the capital of the province. He says that the country in that vicinity is rough and much broken, and very spotted with sand. They had frost there on the 7th but most of the wheat and oats have been harvested. Garden truck and all sorts of vegetables he says look fine.

Bear Fighting.

In the seventeenth century on feast days the life of the czar of Russia was enlivened with such amusements as a battle to the death between a bear and a spearman, in which, it is said, frequently the man lost his life. In the event of a successful issue the spearman was rewarded by being taken to the royal cellars, where he was allowed to drink as much as he liked.—Cri de Paris.

Not Enough Practice.

"Oh, Johnnie, Johnnie," said the aunt reproachfully, "why is it you never remember to say 'Thank you?'" "I expect it's 'cause I don't get things given to me often enough for practice," answered the young diplomat, hopefully eyeing a box of chocolates.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Mrs. Dave Walton and children left here Wednesday morning to join Mr. Walton at Marcus, Iowa, where he has much work to do. They moved to Wayne from Hoskins last spring.

The auction sale of the Naffziger residence property was not consummated last week, the persons to whom such a fine property would appeal not being numerous enough to make the demand equal to the supply. The sum of $4,750 was the highest bid and the owner placed a bid of $1,900 on the property which no one raised. It is a fine property and would have been cheap at the reserve bid price.

It seems as though the old saying that there is nothing new under the sun is scarcely true. There are many inventions of recent years which it seems as though it would be hard to prove that they were not new. It is not necessary to enumerate the wonderful inventions. Some one said of a large packing plant that the only part of the hog which entered there that got away, was the squeal, and now they have a machine which will catch that and pass it on for other ears to hear. The moving pictures are wonderful, but have almost become common but none the less popular. So now another invention is coupled to the camera that takes the pictures, and lo, we have the actions and the spoken words of the actors brought back to us. At the opera house next week there will be given not only moving, but moving and talking pictures. One may not only see, but hear. A great drama may be reproduced, tragedy portrayed and comedy enacted. This is the result of the combination of two of the great new things of the past few years. It will be a series of entertainments not to be missed.—adv.

Mr. and Mrs. Boll in Visit to Ancient Castle, Examined Implements of Barbaric Torture Years Ago

By Wm. Hall in Kent Our Cleveland Sun

Freiburg, Germany, July 9.—This idle town in the state of my birth is one of the most noted in Southern Germany. It has a university found in the 15th century which is next in importance to the noted university at Heidelberg, which is also in Baden. On the day of our arrival in Freiburg there was general rejoicing over and preparation for the celebration of the birthday anniversary of the grand duke, who is the nominal if not actual ruler of the state, for here as in all European states all the men above 25 years of age have the right of suffrage. In Freiburg is located also one of the largest and most interesting cathedrals in Southern Germany.

Freiburg is located a few miles from the Rhine, and prior to 1871 was so near the French border that people half the time didn't know whether they were Germans or French. When Napoleon Bonaparte held sway and was doing all he could both day and night to keep things in Europe boiling, the people of Freiburg were feeding French soldiers one week and German soldiers the next, it being the custom in those days to quarter the soldiers in the homes of the people who happened to be in the zone where the army was located. But Freiburg never was entirely impoverished, for it is here that clocks and toys are made. First they made wooden clocks and then they made them of metal, and people of all modern ages use clocks, while the children of both ancient and modern times have played with toys.

A few days ago I wrote a letter from a place in Austria, a country we were anxious to depart from, not alone for the reason that the subsidiary coins there are called "hellers," but because we wished to see something of Germany. The route we took led to Munich, a city which is more famous than Milwaukee for a beverage which in the past decade or two has become unpopular in Iowa and other states. But the beer in Munich is so mild that it is a wonder how a man's abdominal capacity could be sufficient to cause intoxication. The beer glasses in Munich hold half a gallon and the time consumed in imbibing a glass of it may range from 15 minutes to two hours, it generally being gipped a spoonful at a time.

Munich is the capital of Bavaria, a kingdom ruled by a prince-regent, since the old king himself is a mental derelict. This is not peculiar, but there are other things about Bavaria that are. For instance, if you want to mail a postal card or a letter in Bavaria a German stamp don't go. You have to buy a Bavarian stamp. When Bavaria became a part of the German empire in 1871 certain rights, rights and benefits were reserved by the crazy old monarch who is now unfit to rule, but there is no way to change things now. As a consequence Bavaria coins its own money, carries on its own postal system, etc., and does everything it can to make outsiders think it does not belong to the German empire.

After leaving Salzburg I knew we would soon cross the frontier into Germany, so when the conductor came around to look at our tickets I asked him if we were now in Germany. The official hesitated a moment or two, for it is a piece of presumption to address people of his class with idle inquiries. But he finally replied in gruff tone and with impatient manner with the one word, "Bavaria." Knowing that Bavaria was one of the states of Germany I assumed that we had entered the empire and was correspondingly happy. Outside of Bavaria the people of Germany lack none of the politeness which has made the French people famous. I think they over-do it. The Alfonso-Gaston business gets disgusting after a while, but it is preferable to Bavarian boorishness.

Nuremberg is one of the most interesting of cities in Germany, and by the way it is also located in Bavaria. The first watch ever made was made in Nuremberg and is still to be seen in the museum, and the ancient wall which encircles the old town is still intact with its 365 watch towers and its four very large prison towers. The wide moat which is outside the wall exists just as it always did, except there is no water in it and it has been transformed into a drive and promenade with trees, shrubs and flowers. The rooms in the wall are preserved just as they were over 200 years ago, now being for museum purposes, but are opened only to the schools at stated periods.

The castle at Nuremberg was begun by Kaiser Barbarossa, about the 9th century and is in perfect state of preservation. In it is a well sunk 240 feet into the solid rock, the work having been done by prisoners and 30 years having been required to complete it. Water poured from a cup into the well requires six seconds to reach the bottom. There are two subterranean passages leading from the surface of the water which has a depth of 10 feet, one of them leading to an ancient prison more than half a mile distant. The object of this passage was that the prisoners might obtain water without seeing the light of day, they being confined in dungeons into which the sunlight could not penetrate. This passage is still intact and may be traversed, but the other passage which led to a cemetery has fallen in. We did not learn the object of the cemetery passage, but it must have been for some sinister purpose.

In this castle may be seen the most complete torture chamber in Europe. It occupies one corner of the huge structure and consists of several rooms below ground and others going on to the top of a very high tower. These rooms are filled with instruments of such fiendish character that the visitor is haunted by them for days. There are hundreds of them and it would seem that the ingenuity of man in those days were directed solely to the invention of devices intended to make human life miserable. The hellish instruments occupy their places in the rooms just as they did in the middle ages, and it requires no great stretch of the imagination to see a luckless victim led from one to another to have his fingers crushed and broken, then to be placed naked into a huge cradle filled with sharp prongs and rocked violently to and fro, and being released from this to be laid on a rack with hands and feet attached to windlasses which are turned until the members part from the body.

There were in those days several hundred crimes punishable by death and death was of the most cruel nature. Tearing limb from limb was only one of the methods. In one room of the tower stands a huge arm chair, made of iron and hollow. Under the seat is the fire box. The chains which bound the victim to the chair while it grew red hot is still in place. In the same room is a very heavy metal wheel with a sharp rim. This was used to break the arms and legs of the victim as he lay on a rack having thick cross pieces. Near it stands an iron cage large enough to hold the body of a man in sitting posture. While not specially cruel or deadly it would hardly be used today. Its purpose was to duck people in the river. It hung from a crane over the river and could be raised and lowered as many times as the sentence required.

In another apartment is an iron cage large enough for a man to sit in, but he could not stand upright nor lie down at full length. It contained an iron chair made of sharp slats. To this the prisoner was chained. Near by is a two-inch plank about two feet wide and standing some four feet high. The upper edge is sharp. The victim is placed astride the edge of the plank with a heavy iron weight clasped to each ankle. These are only a few of the things which can be seen in the Nuremberg chamber of horrors. Only one more will be mentioned. It is called the iron maiden and consists of an iron figure with the outlines and face of a woman. The front of the image consists of two doors. The inside of the image is large enough to admit the body of a man standing upright and the inside of the doors, which are six inches thick, contain spikes four inches long. There are two which enter the eyes and a dozen other which enter various parts of the victim's anatomy.

When a condemned person was placed within the image the doors were suddenly closed on him, and while his shrieks were still resounding through the tower the doors were reopened and a trap door on which the victim was standing opened downward and he was precipitated into a pit of 50 or more feet in depth leading to the river, the walls of the pit being studded with numerous sharp knives, so that as the body fell it was cut into strips and landed in the swift current below.

During the period when these fiendish instruments were used it was considered important that all persons charged with crimes should confess the deed. In order to force the confessions the wilder forms of torture such as the thumbscrew were first tried. If the accused was obstinate something stronger was used. Naturally confessions were often made by innocent persons in the hope of escaping further torture. But then came the sentence, which always was death by a most cruel method. Nuremberg is interesting because it has so much of medievalism in its architecture. Whenever an old building is torn down to make room for a modern one the medieval style is retained as far as possible, and while the style of architecture may be old the appointments of the new structure are modern in every way. One of the modern things in the city is the arrangement for showing the town to strangers. For a moderate sum tourists may ride in special sight-seeing wagons, the tickets for the ride including admission to all the buildings, churches, museums, etc., where an admission fee is exacted, a guide speaking several languages accompanying each party.

Miss Calliope's Cure

The Good Result of a Shock

By EUNICE DRAKE

"Poor Calliope!" murmured Hester Seton as she glanced up at the windows of the Delmore house on the hill. "Lazy Calliope Delmore!" sniffed her mother, panting as her too abundant flesh trudged up the gravelled path to the front door. "Did you ever see such a neglected dooryard in all your life?"

"You're her second cousin, ma. Why don't you try to give her a mite of a piece of your mind—kind of a second cousin's slice?" asked Hester sarcastically.

"And have my head bit off!" retorted her mother. "I spoke to Calliope fifteen years ago when Carrol Fenton went off and married that city girl. Says I, 'Cal, for the land's sake don't take to your bed' (she was acting all broken up about the matter); 'Just turn your face to the world and act like you don't care.'"

"What did she say?" asked Hester curiously.

"Say? Says she: 'Emmeline Seton, I'd thank you to mind your own business! When the rheumatiz goes out of my legs I reckon I'll get up and walk with the best of 'em. I ain't a-grieving over Carrol Fenton. I'm suffering with rheumatiz! My advice to you is that if you've got any business of your own to tend to it and let mine alone.' So I don't never interfere with Calliope Delmore. She can lay abed till the judgment day."

"Well, she don't lay abed much, and you must admit that she's busy as a bee with her fingers from morning till night. She cuts and sells carpet rags enough to make a living for 'em."

"Humph! A woman forty years old ain't no right to be chair rid as I can see. Knock again, Hester, and if Isabel don't come I shall walk right in."

Hester rapped loudly and once more pulled the knob of the rusty bell wire.

A window snsh screamed up, and a woman's voice called musically: "Come in, whoever you be. Isabel ain't no home."

Mrs. Seton and Hester tried the door, finding it locked, walked around the path to the side entrance. They pushed open the screen door and walked into Calliope Delmore's sitting room.

"That you, Emmeline and Hester? How do you do?" Calliope looked up from her sewing and motioned them to comfortable cushioned chairs. "Give your mother that fan, Hester, and take off her bonnet. Lay aside your own hat, child, and if you'll go to the cellar you'll find some root beer. Isabel made it three days ago, and it's just right now."

"How be you, Calliope?" asked Mrs. Seton reluctantly, for she made it a point not to acknowledge that anything was seriously amiss with her second cousin. She always spoke impatiently to Calliope, just as if she would like to pick her out of the big Boston rocker and send her hurrying around the house in a healthy, normal manner.

"Well," said Calliope cheerfully, "it's dreadful hot, ain't it, Em?"

"Awful. You must appreciate this call. It's tucked me out to climb the hill," said Mrs. Seton, fanning herself vigorously. "Who is the carpet for now, Calliope?"

"Lida Soper. She's been saving rags for years for this sitting room carpet."

"It's going to be real bright and pretty," nodded Mrs. Seton over the glass of root beer that Hester had brought to her. "Where's Isabel, Calliope?"

"Gone riding with Newton Deane," said Calliope hardly.

"Newton Deane?" exclaimed Hester jealously.

Mrs. Seton blinked rapidly. "Newton's half nephew to Carrol Fenton, ain't he?"

"You ought to know, Em," retorted Calliope dryly, "seeing that you almost married Newton's father."

Mrs. Seton bridled as she threw up her large pink hands.

"Don't get to talking to Hester about my beaux, Calliope. The child won't have any respect for her ma if you tell her what a madcap I was in them days."

Hester giggled. "You can't cut up much now, ma," she said wickedly.

"I have no desire to," said Mrs. Seton primly, suddenly remembering her great bulk. "We was speaking of Carrol Fenton, Calliope. I was over to Millerton last week, and I saw him. He's grown considerable old looking."

"Apt to. Don't get any younger with the years," rapped out Calliope in the crisp phrases she adopted when remarks became personal.

"Some say his wife's death broke him up, and others say it was a blessed relief and that he looks better than he ever did since he married her. She kept his nose to the grindstone always, so they say; extravagant and flighty—too flighty for a minister's wife."

"Minister's wives are only human. Churches don't pay salaries big enough to give 'em much of a good time. I guess Lena Fenton took what fun she could as she went along."

Mrs. Seton gasped. "I didn't expect you'd be standing up for Carrol Fenton's wife," she said acidly.

Calliope turned a white and resolute face to the other. "Why not? I don't owe her any grudge because she married Carrol. Most every girl in Little river was setting a cap for him!"

Emmeline whined, and her double chin quivered.

"There ain't many of 'em gone to bed sick ever it," she said latefully, and without waiting for a reply she trembled to her feet and walked to the door. "Come, Hester; we got to be going."

"I wondered what brought Emmeline here," murmured Calliope, taking up her work again. "Of course after she'd visited in Millerton she had to come around and see how I took news of Carrol Fenton. What blends women can be!" She bit off her thread with her strong white teeth and looked dreamily out of the window and sniffed the spicy fragrance of the cinnamon roses.

"Happened right here by the cinnamon roses," she whispered to herself. "I was so happy, and he said he was afraid he had made a mistake, and I gave him back the ring. Seems like all the strength went out of my legs that very minute. I s'pose, coming so soon after mother's long sickness and death, it upset me. If they all knew how I wanted to stand and walk around and be like other folks, only somehow there's no spring back of it all. Dr. Brown says he can't do a thing, and he talks about will power. I'm a useless mortal. But, there, Isabel says I ain't and if it wasn't for me she wouldn't have a home!" Calliope smiled through sudden tears. "Looks like she'd soon have a handsome home if she marries Newton. He's a fine fellow; but, Lord forgive me, it does rankle to think my girl should marry Carrol's nephew!"

She leaned back in the chair and closed her eyes. Her helpless feet rested on a hassock, and across her lap there rippled streams of bright colored carpet rags. From the rosebushes came the deep hum of bees, and the tall tops of the locust trees rustled a pleasant monotone.

Suddenly there broke into the sweet harmony of the summer afternoon other sounds—the sharp raps of a horse's hoofs on the hard oyster shell road, a man's voice shouting, then just the pounding hoofs and the rattle of carriage wheels.

Calliope leaned forward and looked out of the window. A sorrel horse with four white feet was plunging madly past the house. Behind him swung a low phaeton containing a man. Just beyond Calliope's front gate the phaeton swayed and caught upon a large rock. The horse tore himself loose from the shafts and disappeared beyond the turn of the road. The phaeton toppled and overturned and plumed the man underneath.

It was very silent after that. It was a lonely road, and from her window on the hill Calliope Delmore could see beyond the turn of the road, and she noticed that the runaway horse had stopped and turned into an open field to graze.

She felt very strange. Her heart was beating tumultuously, and her blood seemed to flow through her veins in a sustaining flood that gave strength to her weak body.

White lipped, she stared down at the wrecked phaeton and the still form beneath it. That was Carrol Fenton. She knew the minister's little carriage, but the horse was a strange one to her. Perhaps Carrol was dying down there alone in the road! Who would go for help? Only Isabel was there! The horse might return and trample him. Calliope was afraid of horses.

She closed her eyes and prayed for help. When she opened them she smiled oddly and placed her hands on the arms of her chair. She kicked aside the hassock and stood upon her feet.

She put out one foot, and it supported her weight. She stood upon the other. Then with sudden energy she plucked up the untouched glass of root beer that Hester had poured for her, staggered across the room to the dog and stumbled to the porch and down the steps.

Then Calliope Delmore, who had sat in a chair for fifteen years with helpless limbs, ran down the inclined path to the front gate and galloped the road.

With the action came renewed life and a sense of buoyancy and youth.

Newton Deane and Isabel Delmore, driving slowly home through the golden afternoon, saw Calliope run down the path, and Isabel was so frightened that she hid her face on Newton's shoulder. It was easier to do it because his arm was already around her.

The horse stopped stock still, and they watched Calliope as they might have witnessed the ghost scene in a play.

She darted out of the gate and down the sloping path to the shattered phaeton. Carrol Fenton's eyes were wide open, and his face was white and drawn. The body of the vehicle rested on one of his legs.

"Calliope!" he gasped when she knelt beside him and held the root beer to his lips. "I was just coming to see you, dear," he whispered—"coming to ask your forgiveness, and you know the rest," he murmured.

"Of course I know it," said Calliope, practically not knowing that her eyes were full of tears. "Your coming this way has worked a miracle. I've run every step of the way, and I guess I can keep on my feet now. I s'pose I ought to be mad at you, Fenton, but how can I be when we all make such mistakes?" They were holding hands and smiling at each other with the deeper understanding of matured love, the woman who had just recovered her power to walk and the middle aged minister, suffering agonies from a broken leg.

Newton Deane and Isabel, watching them from the buggy, suddenly understood. They, too, smiled at each other. "I guess we'll have a double wedding," whispered Newton, and Isabel nodded and murmured in reply: "Isn't it beautiful?"

The Latest From Paris

Grace Margaret Gould, fashion editor of the Woman's Home Companion, writes an interesting article entitled "Ins and Outs of the Figure," in her department in the October issue of that periodical. Following is an extract:

"Paris at this particular period is protesting against things artificial, and this specially refers to the female form divine. The cry is, the craze is, for the au naturel.

Off with corsets and pads! Boned linings, heavy fabrics, and cumbersome trimmings belong only on the back-yard shelf.

"To-day Paris has a new figure for us to imitate. Now in the days of our great-grandmothers there was such a thing as a spine in their figures, which helped to give them their graceful, erect carriage. Our grandmothers, too, were noted not only for their walk but for the charming curves of their figures, and when it comes to our own dear mother each and every one of them tried to possess a small and tapering waist. Then I, myself have had my own worries about the fit of my gowns, and have actually lost my temper and fussed over a wrinkle, a bit of bagginess or too much looseness. Yet all these belong to the past. The new figure knows them not.

"Paris says it is the absolutely natural figure—the uncorseted figure. It is the figure without a spine, without a curve, without a suggestion of a tapering waist line. It is loose and limp, it bags and sags, it wrinkles and crinkles. Not to make a big effort to acquire the figure, from the Parisian view point at least, means that we are out of style."

That Farmer's Jury

It turns out that the American commission that went to Europe this summer to study rural banking and credit systems was a decided frost. This commission—which must be distinguished from the smaller commission appointed by the president—had no official status. It was organized under the auspices of the Southern Commercial Congress, and was supposed to consist of farmers—two from each participating state. As finally made up, however, this "farmers' (?) jury of inquiry" of seventy-seven persons contained less than ten actual farmers. More than twenty of the number were bankers, and the others were college professors, editors, social

In Europe instead of getting out into the country to see what farmers were doing, the members of the commission were wined and dined in the cities and hardly saw the country. What the report will be we do not know. There is a strong suspicion that some of the men most instrumental in organizing the commission would like to see a government land mortgage system established in this country, not so much to help the poor farmers as to give some more bonds as a basis of capitalistic investment. But whatever the report, the agitation has been beneficial. We have learned that European farmers have organized their own banking and credit facilities. What farmers in this country want is not benevolence, either from the government or from individuals, but only a chance to help themselves as European farmers have done.—Nebraska Farmer.

Paul Thiel, the tailor and gents furnisher who recently moved to Wayne announces that he will have his opening next Saturday in the Vall building which has been fitted up for him and he hopes that he has offered inducement enough in his advertisement to induce all of the men, young and old, to come and see him on that day.

Walter Savidge and wife were here Tuesday, autoing over from Scribner where the carnival is showing this week. They have put in the season this year in the west, and report a good season. They note a vast difference here from the rocks and sand of which a lot of the mountain country is made up. They are billed for a number of their old Nebraska towns yet this fall. Wakefield is the nearest to Wayne as we have noticed and they are to be there early in October.

No one who takes a local newspaper can afford to neglect to read the advertisements before going out to make purchases. This week the Democrat tells where to go to get bargains in various lines. Some are farms, some are city lots, some are in dry goods, clothing or foot wear. The thing to do is to read the advertising and then buy where there is the best offered, and don't forget to tell the man that you saw the advertisement in the Democrat. That is the one important thing, for then the man you are

Last week Sunday, Thorwald Thompson, son of Chris Thompson, was kicked in the side by a horse and at first it was thought that nothing serious would result, but the effect appeared to grow worse with each succeeding day and Saturday he was taken to Sioux City, accompanied by his brothers and there placed in a hospital and at this writing his condition is gradually improving. His father and mother have been there with him most of the time and Tuesday two of his sisters, Mrs. John Kay and Miss Nina went down to spend the day with him.

Last May Theo, Mildner and wife went to Germany thinking that they would remain in their native land if it seemed as good to them there as it looked when gazing back through the mists that the years spent in America had enveloped their memory with. They were accompanied by their little niece, Johannah Bodenstedt, whom they planned to have make their home there with them. But after the visit was over, opportunity looked better to them on this side of the pond and they returned two weeks ago, and have settled at Milwaukee where Mr. Mildner remained and Mrs. Mildner came on to Wayne with the child and left her with her parents. After a visit here she returned to Milwaukee Saturday.

At Rest
 On Wednesday afternoon, August 27, 1913, occurred the death of Mrs. C. M. Sundahl at her home in Sholes.
 Celecia Louisa Denhardt was born in Denmark, March 7, 1848, and died August 27, 1913, age 65 years, 5 months and 20 days.
 Deceased was brought up by christian parents and baptised in the Evangelical Lutheran church. On September 19, 1868, she was married to Christian Sundahl and later came with him to America. To this union eleven children were born, ten of whom survive her as follows: Mrs. Asher Hurlbert of Sholes, Nebr., Mrs. Gelliland of Wyoming, Mrs. Hansen of Colorado, Mrs. Thompson of Wayne, Mr. Jargensen of Hay Springs, Nebr., Thomas R. of Winner, S. D., Everett G. of Minnesota and Hans, Wm. and Louis of Carroll. She also leaves thirty-six grand children and two great grand children besides a host of friends.
 Although an invalid for many years she never murmured, but was patient to the end. After having lived in various parts of the state the deceased, with her late husband, moved to a quiet little home in Sholes in the spring of 1912 and had since resided there. She failed rapidly since her husband's death, about two and a half weeks previous and for several days it was known that death was near. A short service was held at the house at 11 o'clock Friday and the remains taken to Carroll where funeral services were held at the Baptist church at 1 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Franzen of Randolph, after which the remains were laid to rest in the Carroll cemetery beside those of her husband.—Contributed

Good Roads Meeting
 The governors of not less than three great states will be in attendance upon the convention of the "Coast to Coast Highway Association" which meets in Lincoln on September 23. It is possible that Governor Dunne of Illinois will be present to meet Governor Ammons of Colorado, Governor Clark of Iowa and Governor Morehead of Nebraska. The purpose of this meeting is to consolidate the efforts of different associations and thus secure a continuous improved highway reaching from coast to coast. The Lincoln Road project is already assured, reaching from the Atlantic coast to Chicago, in addition to which are several other projects converging at Chicago from different directions towards the eastern coast. The Lincoln meeting will be attended by several hundred delegates representing the Chicago-Davenport Association, the River-to-River association across Iowa, the Omaha-Lincoln-Denver association, and the Midland association from Denver to Salt Lake. The purpose of the convention is to arrange, if possible to join these routes "end on" so as to provide a continuous improved highway completely across the country.

The Reasons Why
 We Invite You to See our Southern Minnesota Lands

- 1st—BECAUSE the price is one half less than is asked for no better lands just across the state line in Iowa.
- 2nd—BECAUSE they are convenient to the best of markets, and a lower freight rate means from 5 to 7 cents more per bushel on the grain you market.
- 3rd—BECAUSE it is a good corn country, a good grain country, a good grass country, a good stock country and a good dairy country.
- 4th—BECAUSE the black loam soil over a clay subsoil insures that the present fertility can be maintained. It is a well watered land with the best of water for man and beast.
- 5th—BECAUSE it is well drained, but not too rolling. It is the kind of land that needs little if any tiling and does not wash to excess.

For these and other reasons we believe that those who buy from us in southern Minnesota are buying in a country that today is selling below its real value as compared with any land situated as well, as productive and desirable—hence we are selling bargains, and on easy terms—5 to 5½ per cent on deferred payments and long time.

We also have listed some choice Wayne county farms which may be had at bargain prices and on easy terms.

Asking you to come and see us, take a 5-hour ride to the garden spot of Minnesota and see the offering, we are yours for business.

FREMONT MEETING A SUCCESS

Tractor Demonstration Closed After an Entire Week. A Triumph for Farm Efficiency.

On Saturday, Sept. 13, closed what in the annals of modern scientific farming, could be classed as the greatest demonstrative farm lesson that the world has ever seen since the ancient Romans first wrote that well known statement, "Quad est demonstrandum."

From Monday until Saturday within easy walking distance of Fremont, Nebraska, sixteen of the largest "big business" companies in this country vied with each other in explaining in actual operation, not so much how superior their particular machine is, but how useful such machines are in general. Unlike the old time meets in the days of the early farm machine battles the present event was not a contest. Modern business is beginning to learn that in order to succeed it must render service. At Fremont was shown a co-operative attempt of the commercial world to unite with the state, the granges, the country press, and the universities in showing how farming could be done cheaper and easier and thus in a direct way get at the problem of the high cost of living.

Over forty engines of every design and power, accompanied by nearly twice as many different varieties of plows were on the field from morning until night, showing conclusively that when the internal combustion engine was utilized for pleasure vehicles it brought with it the wider and more important application to the problem of producing cheaper food stuffs. Approximately five hundred acres of ground were turned over under the eyes of thousands of the best farmers from all of the states bordering on Nebraska. Representatives from Wyoming hob-nobbed with corn growers from Iowa. Winter wheat growers from Kansas talked matters over with disciples of the spring wheat countries of the Dakotas. Everywhere the rich Missouri Valley Nebraskans met them all more than half way in hospitality and entertainment. Each succeeding day was full-over with some entertaining form of diversing, so that many who came thinking that they could see all that was to be seen in one day remained throughout the week.

On Wednesday the local people surprised the visitor with a watermelon feast free to all. On Thursday the rallying point after the field event was a joyous barbecue. One evening an old fashioned Calithumpian parade was pulled off, and on another a banquet was featured at which representatives were in attendance from over thirty states.

It is estimated by those who have followed the tractor development throughout the country that over two thousand persons, men and women, were following the various machines at one time. In commenting on this Professor L. W. Chase, president of the society of Agricultural Engineers, said to a representative from this paper: "Never in all the big International contests at Winnipeg have they had such crowds as they are having here at this American demonstration. I prophesy that this will be of tremendous value to the farmers who are having a chance to study the possibilities of farm power at first hand. In many parts of this country there is a periodic hay famine, or else a scarcity of fodder, but so far we have never had a fuel oil famine. A meet like this teaches the people that there are tractors of all sizes for all farms and that with the good market value which such conditions bring about for hay and oats it will oftentimes be a paying proposition to have a gas or kerosene driven power plant do the work and sell the feed which otherwise would be required to maintain a greater number of horses."

It was quite apparent to all that many of the engines were stock engine shipped directly from neighboring warehouses to field. They varied in size from a heavy 30 to 60 horse power type, capable of pulling from twelve to twenty plows to the little torpedo body Mogul weighing only 8,000 pounds which drew only four bottoms. Most of the interest of the average farmer centered around the smaller machines because of their economy in doing work other than plowing. Kerosene and gasoline farming has come to stay and the prospective buyers of tractor outfits figure plowing only a part of the possible dividend from their engine. It has been shown by many farmer in this state that there is no step in grain growing from breaking the soil to hauling the grain to the elevator that the tractor cannot do cheaper and quicker than the horse. On hundreds of farms already the same engines which draw the plow, double on their tracks with cultivators and the drill. It is then commissioned to pull the binders for harvesting, in many cases handling five eight feet binders with the same ease that it hauls twice that number of plows. After that it does the threshing and in one trip to the elevator it accomplishes as much as a dozen teams. It was shown by many of the outfits at Fremont that the average speed on the road was four miles per hour while the best speed for plowing was two miles per hour. A well known representative for the State College in talking with a foreign delegate to the demonstration made the statement that they could do with a tractor every step in raising corn but the cultivating.

Cornstalks and Cattle

In Nebraska there are acres and acres of cornstalks this year bearing little corn, but which would make good feed for cattle if cut for fodder or placed in a silo and fed with some alfalfa hay. But where are the cattle? The farmer who goes to the stockyards to buy feeders to eat his cornstalks must pay, according to close quotations at South Omaha last week, from $6.50 to $7 a hundredweight for good ones. Such prices are enough to make farmers pause, and in many cases conclude to allow the cornstalks to bleach in the field and be plowed under next spring. It is not alone this year that we need cattle on our farms to utilize rough feed. Every year tons and tons of cornstalks go to waste.

But that is only one side of the matter. Cattle can hardly live on cornstalks alone. There must be alfalfa and some grain. That means less land devoted to grain, and, as some farmers believe, less grain to sell. Furthermore, cattle must be fed in summer as well as in winter. Pastures are being eliminated on high priced lands, because of the conviction of farmers that they do not pay. The summer silo might be used in beef production, but that means work and lots of it.

Then on rented farms there is small opportunity for livestock production, because of the lack of suitable buildings in many cases, and the short term lease. Finally many farmers feel that markets are not as stable as they should be to encourage cattle production on farms; they have a lurking suspicion that a small group of men control prices.

All of these things have their effect on the decline of the cattle industry. They give us the present situation—thousands of tons of cornstalks with few cattle to eat them. Will we reach such an adjustment on cornbelt farms that enough cattle will be kept to utilize all the by products without diminishing the supply of grain the world demands?—Nebraska Farmer.

Battle Royal With Horse Shoes

Last Friday Wayne was the scene of a noted struggle for supremacy between the quoit pitchers of Carroll and this place. The visitors won the first round and the most games as a result of that bit of diplomacy by which they induced the Wayne men to shorten the distance between pegs six feet. Wayne men had been pitching 45 feet, and the Carroll team but 39 feet, and so out of courtesy to the visitors the distance was reduced.

The Carroll bunch were the best they had, and they threw a good game, and while they won 16 games and the Wayne men but 8 games the games were none of them won except by narrow margin. The visitors were B. L. Hiller, G. W. Yaryan, M. S. Linn, Geo. A. Linn, A. J. Honey, Bert Atkinson. Against these Wayne pitted such stalwarts as Ed Sellers, L. A. Kiplinger, C. H. Hendrickson, S. Fox, John Morgan and Robert Perrin. The Wayne bunch are planning for a return game, when there will be something doing.

With high school loyalty running high a fair sized crowd witnessed the football game between Wayne and Lyons high school on the local field last Saturday. The teams were evenly matched in weight and training and it was a hard close game from start to finish. Lyons won the toss and therefore had the advantage of position from the start, but Captain Sears' bunch proved themselves equal to the emergency and neither team was able to score the first quarter. In the second quarter on a fumble after a punt the Lyons team carried the ball over the Wayne goal line for a touchdown and followed it with a goal. Score 7 to 0 in favor of Lyons. The third quarter the Wayne team came back strong and scored a touch-down and made a field goal. Score, Wayne 12, Lyons 7.

Each scored a touch-down. Each score was missed in each quarter. Score, Wayne 12, Lyons 7. Neither team scored in the fourth quarter. It was a clean game throughout and the better team won.

TREATMENT FOR SCOURS IN HORSES

Sometimes scouring seems to be the result in young horses of too severe use at either plow or draft work, says David Buffum in Farm and Fireside. At other times it appears to be a constitutional weakness, always exhibited when the horse is called upon for anything out of the ordinary. "Cut feed"—that is, hay or straw run through a cutting machine, wet up a little and mixed with meal—will sometimes cause it. The horse should have a reasonable amount of good, sweet hay, fed entirely dry, and his proportion of grain. Last year I cured a yearling colt by simply giving the horse three months' run in good pasture, then feeding as above and using rather liberally for a couple of months. This is what I would advise.

If his feed, however, is what it ought to be it might be well to try the following treatment: First give fifteen or twenty drops of tincture of acetone root in water. The following day give

A powder compounded as follows: Prepared chalk, five drams; pulverized catechu, one dram; pulverized opium, ten grains; mix, thoroughly. Give three of these powders a day, then skip one and give three more. Be sure during the treatment that the horse has plenty of water. I cannot promise that this treatment (which is the treatment for acute diarrhea) will effect a cure, but it is worth trying. The best road to a cure, I think, lies in giving the colt a good run at grass and afterward being very careful about his diet, feeding nothing that might irritate the stomach or bowels and using moderately until he seems better.

BREEDING RATIONS.
Animals should be Fed For Bone and Muscle Rather Than Fat.
Rations which are intended for breeding purposes, both sows and boars, should be so planned as to be beneficial for the development of the bones, joints and constitution rather than for the production of fat. The American Agriculturist. They should have the period of growth protracted until they are fully developed in body frame. Muscle and bone are those which contain a relatively high content of protein, either of mineral matter. They include meat, bran, shorts or middlings, skim milk, linseed oil meal, the leguminous forage crops, such as cowpeas, soy beans, alfalfa, the clovers, velvet beans, the vetches and the packing house byproducts, such as tankage, meat meal and blood meal.

Of these high protein feeds skim milk is one of the best and cheapest. Skim milk, if available, should be fed to young hogs intended for breeding purposes, especially boars. The best results are secured when skim milk is mixed with bran, shorts, cornmeal or some other feed which will thicken it. This slop should be fed sweet and be thin enough to pour readily.

In case skim milk is not available linseed oil and packing house byproducts may be utilized, but should be fed sparingly to young breeding stock owing to the high content of protein. Linseed oil meal may supply from a fifth to a sixth of the ration, provided no other protein feeds are fed. Packing house byproducts may supply from a tenth to a twelfth of such a ration. Leguminous forage crops furnish a cheap source of protein. Besides the economy of forage crops they afford exercise for the boar while he is harvesting his own feed, and this increases his thrift and stamina.

Bone Troubles in Horses.
One cause of spavin, ringbone and other bone troubles in horses is the lack of proper nourishment. An unbalanced ration containing a large amount of corn and deficient in ash makes a porous bone with a rather spongy texture. Fed a proper ration, the same animal would develop a much stronger bone with a firm, solid texture. The bone diseases are usually simply an effort of nature to add extra growth to re-enforce a bone that is not strong enough for its load. A great many of these troubles would be avoided if all horses, particularly when they are growing, were supplied an abundance of such feeds as oats, with some of the legume hays for roughage.

THE SWINEHERD.

Hogs that have become too fat by overfeeding and lack of exercise should not be chosen for breeders.

Sows kept for breeders should be given lots of exercise.

When the hogs come up to the trough to eat look them over for graybacks. If you find them, thin some kerosene with water and rub it along their backs.

There's money in hogs, but it requires industry and judgment to get it out. But, then, this is true of all business.

The returns from swine are big if the management is good.

Hogs use much feed that would otherwise go to waste. Think that over.

The bacon types of hogs furnish the largest litters and make pork that brings the highest prices.

CONCRETE FLOORS.

More Economical and Efficient Than Wood or Earth.

One of the most successful farmers in Illinois says of his concrete feeding floor, "It pays for itself, every two weeks." An Ohio state experiment station bulletin shows by chemical analysis that manure produced by steers fed on concrete floors is worth more per ton than that taken from earthen floors. Besides, under ordinary conditions a four inch concrete floor will cost less than an oak floor, writes M. N. Goodnow in Farm and Fireside.

Concrete floors for feeding pens, stables, hog houses, poultry houses, milk houses and dairies can be laid upon as if they were sidewalks. An important feature is proper drainage, obtained both by having a dry base upon which to place the concrete and by sloping the floor toward a suitable point one-fourth inch to the foot.

A wise precaution is to excavate to a depth of a foot for the drainage foundation and around the outside edges of the floor dig a trench about one foot wide and eighteen inches deep. By filling up this trench with concrete rats cannot burrow underneath and nest. Fill the excavation inside the trench with well tamped coarse gravel, crushed rock or broken tiles.

In stables, cow barns or where animals of considerable weight are to stand the concrete floor should be at least six inches thick. Feedway floors may be four inches. Stalls and driveways should be six inches.

As a general proposition, a mix of one sack of cement to two and one-half cubic feet of screened gravel or crushed stone will answer the purpose. The mixture should be wet enough to show moisture on its surface and should never be allowed to stand longer than half an hour.

A gutter form should be constructed so that it can be placed in position while the floor is being poured. Four by six inches is a good size for the gutter, which should connect with the main drain by means of a trough or sewer.

Finish the surface of the floor three-fourths inch thick with a mixture of sand and cement. Use a wooden trowel and mark spaces with a straight edge not over six feet for either dimension, as in a sidewalk. Four or five days should be devoted to curing the concrete, and it should be covered with a tarpaulin or sand or earth. Occasional dressings will also benefit it.

WEANING THE FOAL.

Youngster Should Have a Supply of Feed Constantly Before Him.

It is generally recommended that the young foal be weaned at the age of five to six months. Before this time the foal should have learned to eat grain with the dam, nibbling from the mother's supply.

One of the best authorities, in Henry's "Feeds and Feeding," states as follows: "Leave the colts in their boxes, two or three together, several days and have the boxes open upon a nice grass paddock. Let them run out and in, give them oats mixed with bran and sorghum cut fine, and in a few days more turn them out in the fields away from their dams, where there are plenty of grass and water and a large trough with feed in it constantly. They have been in the habit of taking their milk a great many times a day, and they need feed just as often. The best way is to keep plenty of mixed food for them, using cracked corn and oats; also uncrushed oats run through a cutter box, then mixed with bran and water enough to moisten it and make the bran adhere to the oats."

A fair allowance of grain under one year is from two to three pounds per day. Nothing is superior to blue grass pasture and oats.

Starting a Sheep Flock.

For starting a small farm flock I believe that it will pay a good deal better to get pure bred ewes and a pure bred ram, says a correspondent of the American Agriculturist. There is a great deal of satisfaction in having well bred animals on the place, and they will be of more value every year. It is not necessary to pay fancy prices for animals such as are seen in the show ring, but good, registered animals are worth while. However, if I were going to buy grades I would say the very cheapest ewes I could get, but would still get a pure bred ram. A ram will very quickly build up the flock, and the quality of the ewes at first will not make very much difference after the first year or two. The cheaper ones will net a larger return on the investment.
