Obituary—John William Newman

(Contributed)
John William Newman was born in Mora, Jon Rupringslan, Smoland, Sweden, October 17, 1851, and died at his home in Wayne county February 1, 1914, being 62 years, 3 months and 15 days old. He came to America at the age of 19, settling at Andover, Illinois, for three years. After this he spent two years in California and then two years in Essex, Iowa, engaged in farming.

In 1885, on April 18, he was married to Miss Emily Nueman, of Belinda, Iowa, at Omaha, Nebraska. The same year he located at Dixon, Nebraska, where he remained till March 1, 1902, when he moved to the present home in Wayne county.

He is survived by his wife and one son, Arthur William, and one daughter, Amelia Caroline, two sons having passed away, one but five months ago, the other in infancy. Two brothers also remain, Gustaf, of Sweden and August of Essex; two sisters, Mrs. August West of Aledo, Illinois, and Mrs. Ida Hilgerson, Essex, Iowa.

Mr. Newman passed away from among us suddenly. He was enjoying better health than usual this winter, but on last Thursday accidentally had his limb broken. From this no serious results were expected and all seemed to be doing well until last Saturday at 6:30 p. m., he was stricken with paralysis from which he never rallied, passing away at a little past nine Sunday morning.

Mr. Newman belonged to that class of immigrants from Europe which has helped develop our own country. Sturdy, rugged, hard working, not afraid of difficulties. This was the class of men a new country needed. He and many others from his native land fully met these requirements. To the toils and work of such men, in early days, battling against great difficulties, we today owe much. Our land has been brought under control and subjugated for our use by the pioneers of early days, many of whom are now passing from us. We are richer and better equipped for our tasks because of these hardy pathfinders of early days. We honor the name and memory of all such heroes of the open country.

As a neighbor, he was highly respected. One who had known him for some time in intimate association paid him the following tribute: "A good neighbor; a friend has been taken away. He was agreeable to deal with and accommodating as a neighbor. He stood for the moral welfare of the community. His place in his neighborhood will be missed. Yet he still lives in his home and among those who knew him."

The funeral was at Wayne Wednesday afternoon, Rev. B. P. Richardson and Rev. Blessing officiating and burial at the Wayne cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS—We desire to thank our neighbors and friends for their kindness and sympathy extended to us in our sorrow in the sickness and death of our husband and father, and for the beautiful floral offerings.

Mrs. John Newman.
Arthur Newman.
Amelia Newman.

Have Your Mail Delivered

Under a new ruling of the postal authorities people residing in Wayne on route of rural carrier may put up a mail box of the regulation kind and have mail delivered free, the same as Mr. Farmer. The slogan of this administration appears to be cut out the red tape and serve the people. If you are not on a route you may put a box on the route and receive your mail. Up till this ruling people living within a town or city were not permitted to have their mail delivered.

Wireless Station at Wayne

At the State Normal yesterday they successfully completed their wireless receiving station, and last evening received the time call from a distance. Prof. Britell and others have been spending much time perfecting the instrument, of which we will tell more next week.

Miss Belle Templeton, state librarian, was at Wayne Wednesday on business connected with the library.

Commercial Club Problems

At recent meetings of the executive committee of the commercial club the first steps toward paving a section of Main street have been under discussion, and it is now quite probable that something tangible will follow very soon. The president of the club has the appointing of a committee to take a proper petition to the property holders for signatures to be presented to the city council. We know right now that there will be some knockers—but just who or how many cannot tell—for that is the history of paving everywhere, and we assume that Wayne is no exception to the universal rule. But it is also true that when the victory is won and the paving once installed, an adjoining district wants to follow suit, and no where that ever we have heard of would the property owners take their money back and permit the pavement to be removed. That shows that it is considered a good thing after the first agony is over. So don't knock, for you will be sorry when it is over.

The securing of an opera house here that is more modern than the one we now have is another live question to which the influence of the club is to be given and perhaps some support more substantial. A proposition was received from Mr. Nance at the Tuesday evening meeting and is under consideration. Wayne is missing some excellent theatrical attractions by not having a better opera house—of that there is no doubt.

The question of presenting the desirability of Wayne as a home for the new state reformatory was also considered, and the matter is in the hands of the committee. One of the requirements is available land—not less than a section—the location also will have a bearing upon the commission in selecting the site. A good clay for brick making would also be considered a desirable feature.

There is plenty of need for activity on the part of the officers and members of the commercial club, and they should have the membership of every business concern in and tributary to Wayne—and by the term business concern we mean farmer, manufacturer, merchant and professional man—and we do not believe that the women should be barred—but invited in so that all may work together for the benefit of this community.

"Freckles"

This most popular play is to be given at the opera house next Wednesday evening for the first time, and Wayne is indeed fortunate in having a chance to witness this production by a strong company of artists. The play is founded on Gene Stratton Porter's wonderful novel, and under the management of Daniel L. Martin the original New York company will present something worth going many miles to hear. We expect on that occasion that there will be many from outside towns to enjoy this production. Carroll, Winside, Wakefield and the surrounding country will be well represented and be well pleased. The play is full of real life scenes woven about a happy plot that ends well.

To Organize for Study

There was a gathering at the home of L. A. Kiplinger last evening at which ten men were present with a view of organizing to study current events and scientific questions of interest. Dr. T. T. Jones was the temporary presiding officer and Prof. Keckley acted as secretary. A committee was named to draft laws to govern and perhaps name the club. The membership is to be limited, and if the objects of the organization can be accomplished it will be of much benefit to the members.

CARD OF THANKS—We wish to extend to the people of Wayne in general an expression of gratitude and appreciation of the many acts of kindness extended to husband and father, Jabez Rippon, since he came here in poor health two years ago. He was shown many kindnesses during the time, for which we can thank you in no other way. Also for aid and sympathy during his final illness and death. Mrs. L. Rippon.

State Normal Notes

William Rosicky, a member of the junior class, has accepted a position in a rural school in Wayne county, beginning work last Monday.

Miss Miriam Hancock of Chicago, a sister of Miss Franc B. Hancock of the domestic science department, arrived in Wayne Monday and will enroll for special work in the Normal.

Harold J. Plymness has registered as a junior and will complete the advanced course in this institution. Mr. Plymness is a graduate of Pierce high school and has just completed one semester's work in Wesleyan University.

C. W. Duerig writes from Chico, California, that he expects to return to Wayne and complete the advanced course of the Normal. Wynn has been a student in the Chico State Normal School since September 1st and he will present credits from the California school for the completion of his work here.

At a recent meeting of the board of education at Winside entered a two-year contract with G. E. Cress at a salary of $1200 a year. Superintendent Cress is a graduate of the Wayne Normal in the class of 1912, and this school is justly proud to learn of his successful work as a city superintendent.

Miss Irma James sends a fine group picture of her school at Taremont, Utah. Miss James' success in the public schools of that place is evidenced by a notation made on the back of the picture: "My pupils range in ages from seven to fifteen years and I find them the dearest youngsters in the world to teach."

On Thursday and Friday afternoons of last week Miss Sara J. Killen entertained the members of her drawing classes and their friends with an illustrated lecture on her recent European trip. Among the pictures thrown upon the screen were some copies of famous pictures which she visited, and pictures of European churches and buildings, showing various kinds of architecture.

Miss Frances E. Kelley of Hartington, a student in the summer session of 1913, showed unusual ability in the writing of stories, and Dr. House encouraged her to greater effort along that line. Recently a letter has been received from Miss Kelley in which she says she wrote an account of a trip and sent it to a magazine. The publishers offered her six dollars for the story, and it appeared in the January number of the "Outer's Book."

Automobiles Collide

Wednesday afternoon V. A. Senter in his Ford and a son of Chas. Miller driving a heavy car collided at the corner of Main and 6th street. Senter was coming onto Main street from the east with side curtains on, and young Miller headed north on Main street was speeding up for the grade just ahead of him. Senter saw what was about to happen and though entitled to the right of way was no stickler for his rights and threw the emergency brake but not quite soon enough to be in the clear, and the Miller car took a front wheel off and bent a few rods. No one was injured, and the heavier car was but slightly damaged.

Mrs. M. J. Johnson and son Elvin and daughter, Miss Ellen left today for their new home in Cheyenne county. They take two cars of goods and stock with them. Mrs. Johnson is in poor health and feels much better in the altitude of Cheyenne county. They are most excellent citizens, and their departure from Wayne will be deeply regretted. They leave a good farm here which is leased to Anderson brothers of Concord.

How about your subscription.

The Woman and The Baby

The Saturday afternoon train from Bloomfield brought to Wayne a woman and a baby boy about seven months of age, and Chief of Police Miner soon saw that all was not right and took the woman in charge and later gave her over to the keeping of Sheriff Porter where she is yet. It was impossible to obtain any information from the woman at first, she refusing to talk to an extent that gave the impression that she was demented. The baby was poor, cold and hungry, and appeared to have been poorly nurtured. The woman was given kind treatment, rest and food, and in a few days began to talk some. From the train men it was learned that she got on the train at Magnet.

From her story which is in part at least confirmed by communication with authorities of Knox county, from whence she came, her father is Joseph Hava of Saunders county, and she has been for several years at least housekeeper for Billie Jeffries on a farm between Plainview and Wausa. It was always supposed that she was his wife. She has three children from a marriage earlier in life, the husband dying and she says she left her four children at the Jeffries home ranging in age from about 10 years down to the baby. She also claims that Jeffries went away and told her he was going to bring a wife home with him and would not need her longer. Stricken with grief she took the baby and started on foot to some place—she knew not where. Walked most of the night, and finally secured a ride to Magnet from where she came to Wayne.

She appears to think much of the baby, and cries when she talks of the other little ones she left at the farm in charge of the hired man. One of the little ones has a hand and foot off, lost in a mowing machine, and the children of the first husband are said to be mutes.

It is a sad case, and according to the woman's story she has been cruelly wronged. She has no education, but appears to be a person of average intellect. Knox county authorities have been notified to take charge of her, and it is expected that an official will come from there today.

Snowden-Thomas

A happy wedding party of about thirty friends and relatives gathered at the home of Richard Thomas and wife, near Carroll Tuesday forenoon, February 3, 1914, when Rev. Davis asked of their daughter, Miss Nellie J., and Mr. Paul C. Snowden the pledges which made them husband and wife for life.

Following the ceremony and congratulations an elegant wedding dinner was served, after which the bridal party accompanied by two or three automobile loads of friends drove to Wayne to make connections with the afternoon train for the east, on which the bride and groom departed to spend their honeymoon with relatives at Red Oak, Iowa. The friends who came to the station with them were most lavish with their shower of rice, and good wishes.

The newly married folks will soon be at home on a farm in this county, and will doubtless prosper for both are most excellent industrious young people, well known and highly respected by all who know them. We join their many friends in extending the best of wishes.

Starting in a Good Town

Roy C. Knopp and Miss Nellie Johnson came all the way from Glenwood, Iowa, to be married by our popular county judge, James Britton, and start on the voyage over the matrimonial sea from this good dry town. The judge issued them license to wed and tied the knot in most approved style at the court house, Wednesday, February 4, 1914, and they went on their way rejoicing. May they live long and happily.

Almost The Top

Andrew Stamm had two cars of good fat cattle on the Chicago market Monday which brought him $9.20 which was within five cents of the top for the day. Doc Jones was in with six loads the same day, but not as well finished cattle having been fed but a short time. John Morgan also went in with the train.

Flege Admitted to Bail

The supreme court, following its usual custom of turning people under conviction by a jury of their equals out until the court finds time to review their case, has admitted Wm. Flege, the three times convicted murderer, out on $15,000 bail. Of course there is no reason why the court should treat Mr. Flege in other than their usual manner of treating convicted people, but many people are of the opinion that they are entirely wrong in admitting to bail when under indictment for such crime—where law forbids lower court to grant such liberty even before they had had chance to make a defense. But with three attempts to and three failures to establish that he is not guilty, it does not look right to admit such people to bail. We do not yet have the recall of judges in this state except at election time—and then will be the opportunity for the people to express opinion of such acts.

George D. Perkins, Editor, Dead

Sioux City, Ia., Feb. 3.—George D. Perkins, aged 74, for forty-five years editor and publisher of the Sioux City Journal, died at 6 o'clock this morning in a hospital here after several weeks illness, of a complication of diseases.

Until his fatal illness Mr. Perkins was at his desk in The Journal office daily and took an active part in the management of the newspaper. He recently made plans for a new $175,000 home for The Journal, work on which has already begun.

Mr. Perkins was prominent in the council of the republican party and had served four terms in congress from the Eleventh Iowa district from 1891 to 1899.

In 1860 he came to Iowa and located at Cedar Falls. In 1869 he came to Sioux City and bought the weekly Journal and in 1870 made it a daily newspaper.

George Perkins was one of the true newspaper men of the land. He built a clean paper—and won recognition by merit—and was recognized alike by political friend or foe as one who stood for what he saw to be right, and he neither gave nor asked quarter. His friends are many and they most truly mourn his death whether the news comes to them at their home or in far off states or foreign lands. A good and able man has been called to his reward.

Marriage License

County Judge James Britton has issued the following permits to wed:
Paul C. Snowden, Nellie J. Thomas
Fred Otto, Katie Franzen

Paul Mildner was home over Sunday from Sioux City where he is staying.

Yes, he saw his shadow if he came out in Nebraska—now we will see if the runty little fellow can change the weather.

Miss Stella Peterson, who has been visiting here at the Henry Jans home, returned to her home at Beldon Friday evening.

Nebraska, according to the 1910 census had 63,350 more men than women. What an opportunity for importing more of the fair sex.

Well drillers have struck a flow of gas near Humboldt, confirming the belief that southeastern Nebraska is underlaid with oil and perhaps coal.

Christ Kohlhof returned to his home near Norfolk, but in Stanton county, the first of the week, following a visit at the home of Wm. Neu and wife.

The next thing on the program for the fellows who are trying to be birds is to try to fly round the earth. The one who does the feat in 90 days is to win a purse of $300,000.

Roy Owen sent a pen of Pekin ducks to Kansas City, Kansas, last week, the last of the kind he has for the season. He has been growing birds, both ducks and chickens, and has found ready sale for his increase.

With the price of meat going higher every week our fraternal orders should put an extra lock on the room in which they keep the goat, for goat meat is said to be as good as deer meat and it would make a good substitute for the deer meat one gets these days.

Mrs. Mary Wallace came from Nebraska City Friday to visit at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. O. Gardner.

Martin Bastian, who has just returned from Colome, South Dakota, reports a very good year there for him last season, as his winter wheat went over 24 bushels per acre.

If Wayne people would use their own money in developing home enterprise instead of allowing it to go east to be loaned back there or elsewhere to build up some one else business with the aid of our patronage also, we would thrive far better.

Mrs. C. L. Culler, formerly of this place has been elected as the first librarian of the new library at Hartington. The library will be kept open but part of two days a week at first, for they have no reading room yet, but are making a start for a permanent library.

The Governor is going from this time on to require a monthly statement of the expenses of a number of his traveling appointees, in which they must give detailed report of the mileage used and when and where while out on their official duties. That is right and proper.

The Coleridge commercial club had an enthusiastic meeting one evening last week and after a good time and a good feed brought themselves back to earth and serious matters by discussing road improvement and country farm demonstrator. They all feel richer who were there.

Mrs. Carrie Bruner left Monday morning to visit her former homes at Corning, Iowa, and at Monmouth, Illinois. It is twenty years since she visited her relatives in Iowa, and she is anticipating a happy visit. E. C. Perkins, her son-in-law, had business in Omaha and accompanied her that far.

At the sale of Mouse Bros. at Cambridge Tuesday, January 28, fifty-seven head of Herefords averaged $344 per head. Buyers from eight states were present at the sale. The stock was all Nebraska bred, and the majority were under two years of age. All the stock was less than 4 years old. Can't beat Nebraska.

H. P. Wilson, of Geneva, president of the association of county fairs is taking a keen interest in the matter of improving the county fairs. Demonstrations, milking contests, prizes, for tenants, and exhibits by the state experiment station are being considered to stimulate interest next fall. Wayne county has no fair—why?

Last week a stranger spotted the editor as a newspaper man, and asked the name of some live real estate firm. We sadly handed him a copy of the last issue of the Democrat, and after looking all of the advertisements over carefully, turned the pages to the obituaries, and after carefully reading them through, asked—"How long have they been dead?" Not long before that a stranger who had been reading the paper carefully, closed it with the remark that he supposed a place the size of Wayne would have at least one lumber yard.

C. H. Hendrickson went to Lincoln Tuesday to represent the city before the supreme court in the Maggie Warner case. In this case the plaintiff sued the city for $15,000 for alleged injury on defective walk, and the jury awarded a judgment for $500, and from this decision the city appeals to the higher court and the case is to be heard this week.

Robert Skiles went to Randolph Friday to visit at the home of his daughter at that place. He doubtless received a warm welcome as they were just released from quarantine, having been shut in by smallpox since Christmas. No severe sickness however—just a suspicion of the disease. The daughter, Mrs. Fox, returned with him for a visit here.

Head Consul Talbot of the Modern Woodmen is making the fight of his life for re-election. He promises fair—but under his leadership it was that woodcraft and fraternal insurance received the worst blow ever given it. The fact that the head of a great order would say that the old line rates are required after for years working on the statement that they were too high placed things in queer shape.

Forrest L. Hughes of this place was called to Montgomery county, Iowa, last week to attend the funeral of his grandmother, Mrs. Mary Hughes, who departed this life quite suddenly last Thursday at the home near Wales in which she has lived most of the time for the past 40 years. A son, L. J. Hughes and two daughters, Mrs. Frank Francis and Mrs. A. J. Allenworth and a grandson, Frank Hughes, all of Carroll went to attend the funeral, and also John Morris and wife. Mrs. Hughes had frequently visited her children at and near Carroll, and made numerous acquaintances here who will mourn her death.

Our Congressman, Dan V. Stephens may have trouble over the distribution of postoffices in this district, and there may be a lot of fellows sore—especially among the newspaper men, but he is evidently going to stand solid with the rural route men, for he has introduced a bill to pay them on the basis of $1400 per year for the average 26 mile route. It is a sinch that the rural man has not been getting very rich from his labor of late for the price of food is well up the line, and his horses and wagons will wear out. Then the amended parcel post law is going to give the rural man a heap more to do. When Wayne merchants go after business right they will have a fine delivery system in all directions from Wayne. The newspaper, the telephone and the rural mail deliveries all at his command—he will surely use them all—for he can get no better or cheaper service.

SIoux CITY GIRL THE WIFE OF BULGARIAN ARMY SURGEON

MRS. CONSTANTINE BRAUN

Mrs. Constantine Braun will be remembered by a number of Sioux Cityans as Miss Ethel Wheeler. She was the daughter of Mrs. Margaret Wheeler, and the special friend of Mrs. Ted Prescott, Helen Michael, Mrs. Ralph Gaynor and others of that clique. Mrs. Wheeler was Miss Goldie, a family that has been in Sioux City for 40 years or more, and is still represented by the Goldie brothers. Mrs. Wheeler sold her home about six years ago to G. Y. Skeels and has been in Europe since that time. Miss Wheeler and her brother Frank attended school in Paris, and the latter was a student at Lusanne at the same time that Howard and Jules Martin were there. The family is spending the winter in Davos Platz, Switzerland. Miss Wheeler married Constantine Braun, a Bulgarian army surgeon, and has been in Bulgaria during much of the recent trouble there. Dr. Braun was kept in the Bulgarian country, drilling raw troops.

Postmaster Fry
Clint Fry received word Friday from Washington, that he had been appointed postmaster for Winside and will qualify and enter upon his duties the first day of February. The Government has made known to the people time and again—that it moves very slow but sure, and when news of such nature is wanted it seems the cogs of the government machinery refuse to move, and so has it been with Mr. Fry. Thus when the news reached him, one would be safe in saying that no man was more tickled or more at ease than he. Mr. Fry has been engaged in farming a much different task than the one he will enter, but with a little study and practice will probably come up to the expectations of the patrons of the office.

The retiring postmaster and assistant, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Tracy, have not expressed their future plans, but will probably go west to Hay Springs and improve on their land and enjoy the adventure of ranch life for a while. Their parting will be very hard since so many claim them as their friends.

Freight Revision Matter is Set for Feb. 23.

MANEUVERS AT FORT RILEY.

War Department Makes Inquiry as to Feasibility of National Guard Regiments of Four States Acting Together—State Saves on Printing.

Lincoln, Feb. 3.—Hearings on the revision of freight rates will be resumed before the railway commission Feb. 23, according to information given out by the commission.

The matter has been very warmly contested in hearings heretofore had and all parties will be given a chance to appear again.

The application of the Sarpy County Mutual Telephone company, with headquarters at Gretna, for authority to raise its rates on farm lines from $1 to $1.50 a month has been granted by the state railway commission.

Maneuvers for Fort Riley.

In an effort to line up the different departments of the national guard in the assignment which they would have in case of war, the department of war has written Adjutant General Hall regarding the holding of maneuvers at Fort Riley the coming summer by the guard regiments of Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado and Wyoming.

General Hall called on the governor to talk the matter over. The understanding is that in case of war the national guard of these four states would compose one division, and it is best to get the four states together for the purpose of better acquaintance and a better understanding.

Campbell Drops Agency.

Complaint was received by Secretary Royle of the state banking board a few days ago that Frank Campbell of Broken Bow was soliciting business for the Standard Home Investment company of Birmingham, Ala., the company which was refused admission to the state by the banking board about four months ago, after considerable publicity being given the matter. Secretary Royle took up the matter of the complaint with Campbell and received a letter that he would cease his efforts in behalf of the company.

State Saves on Printing.

The state will save about $300 in the printing of the university reports and other printing on account of a suit brought by a local firm denying the right of university authorities to let contracts without going through the agency of the state printing board, the courts deciding that printing of that kind must go through the board. In consequence, new bids were ordered and the contract, which was formerly let for over $3,000, was let for $2,732.53.

Counties Pay Big Sums to State.

On account of a higher state levy made last year the state is richer this year by considerable than in former years. Last year the counties of the state paid to the state treasurer something over $750,000. This year counties which have made the annual statements have sent in $887,258, with nine counties yet to report. The claim of Representative Reische of Chadron, a banker of that city, for expenses of a trip to Seattle, made some time ago, to catch a man who had defrauded the bank, which was honored by the governor, has been held up by State Auditor Howard and the matter turned over to the attorney general for an opinion. The claim was for $187.72 and Reische was deputized to go after the man.

Ridgeway, vice president of the Rock Island railroad, was brought to Lincoln on a special train over the Burlington from Aurora, suffering from a severe attack of appendicitis, and taken to the Lincoln hospital. Board Buying Cows.

Commissioners Kennedy and Gerdes of the board of control went to Omaha, partly to visit the school for the deaf in that city and partly to attend a sale of Holstein cows, which was advertised to take place in South Omaha. Farmers Make Use of Them to Advertise Produce.

Lincoln, Feb. 3.—Several Nebraska farmers are availing themselves of the farm bulletin board for advertising purposes. According to the provisions of the state statute, each farm owner has the privilege of choosing a name for his farm. The bulletin board is made of cheap lumber, neatly painted and placed at the side of the road near the letter box. At the top of the board is the name of the farm; next is the name of the owner.

On the blackboard below these names is written a list of the stuff which the farmer has for sale. On another space is the articles which he wishes to buy.

One farmer declares that he has found the bulletin board a most effective means of advertising articles which he cannot advertise in the farm and daily papers. This is especially true of produce, which appeals to the passing automobilists. Chickens, eggs and other eatables are disposed of without loss of time.

CEMENT USERS IN SESSION

Say Jobbers of Sand and Stone Give Better Prices to Dealers.

Omaha, Feb. 3.—Charges that Nebraska jobbers of sand and stone are discriminating against cement users and in favor of building material dealers, stirred the opening session of the ninth annual convention of the Nebraska Cement Users' association at the Hotel Rome. The complaint was that users of cement block and concrete materials were forced to pay higher prices than dealers who often buy smaller quantities.

The charge was made by C. E. Lowe, a concrete contractor of St. Edward, Neb., who asserted that he had positive proof to substantiate his assertion. He urged that a committee be appointed to investigate the matter and try to secure satisfactory adjustment. After a discussion, during which the small users were sharply divided from the large consumers of concrete material, a committee of three was authorized, with Lowe as chairman.

Gardiner Forfeits His Bond.

York, Neb., Feb. 3.—Frank Gardiner's bond for $800 has been forfeited in the district court. Gardiner was manager of York's ball team last summer, when he assaulted Harry Hall. He beat him over the head and body with a ball bat, which was the cause of his having to go to the hospital for a month or more. Gardiner was arrested and put under bond for $800 for his appearance at the November term of court, which has just closed.

City Physician of York Resigns.

York, Neb., Feb. 3.—There has been some trouble between City Physician G. W. Shidler and the city council in regard to his taking steps to close some public institutions and make more rigid efforts to quarantine small-pox cases. Dr. Shidler resigned, giving his reasons that he was not getting support from the city authorities to carry out his plans.

No Big Tourney on Omaha Courts.

Omaha, Feb. 3.—There will be no big tennis tournament in Omaha this year. The tennis contingent of the Field club decided it would be a disappointment to hold the mid-west tourney here, because the brand of tennis would necessarily be a bit slower than that evidenced at the National Clay Court tournament. An effort will be made, however, to secure the 1915 clay court tournament.

Mrs. Johnson Wants Divorce.

Beatrice, Neb., Feb. 3.—Mrs. Dora B. Johnson of Wymore has applied to the district court for a divorce from her husband, Major H. Johnson. The couple were married in this city in 1908, and since that time the plaintiff alleges that Johnson has failed to support her and she has been compelled to seek employment in hotels and restaurants in order to provide for herself and family.

Deputy Stops Jail Delivery in Cass.

Plattsmouth, Neb., Feb. 3.—Deputy Sheriff Manspecker was awakened about 2 a. m. and upon investigation saw that three prisoners, each of whom Judge Bealey had sentenced to serve a term in the state penitentiary, had pried up a portion of the floor, and were digging a trench to liberty. In a few hours they would have escaped from the Cass county jail.

Good Prices for Hogs.

Cedar Bluffs, Neb., Feb. 3.—Colonel Jake Wernsman held his Duroc Jersey hog sale here and there was a large crowd of hog dealers present. It was the largest attended sale held here for a great number of years and was a success in every way. He sold fifty-one head of hogs at an average of $48.80. The high bid was $65.

Hazlett Found Insane.

A powder magazine of fortifications near Genoa exploded, killing five soldiers and one civilian. The Merchants' Exchange building, the most important retail block in Manchester, N. H., burned. The loss will exceed $500,000. President Wilson sent the nomination of Colonel George W. Goethals to be governor of the Panama canal zone after April 1 to the senate. The French National Socialist congress at Amiens unanimously rejected the proposal that the party unite with the Radicals, thus reviving the famous "Bloc." There was no loss of life in the $300,000 fire which destroyed the New Bedford apartment building in Chicago, so far as search of the ruins disclosed. Sixteen persons were hurt at a wedding at Hammond, Ind., when Walter Voch tried to kiss Mrs. John Lojesky, the bride. The bridegroom's skull was fractured. With the estimates of the interior department reduced by $2,165,127, the annual Indian appropriation bill was reported to the house, carrying an appropriation of $9,619,737. The Bank of England was enabled in consequence of further world-wide ease in the money situation to lower its minimum discount rate by 1 per cent, making it 3 per cent. John D. Young, former deputy building commissioner of East St. Louis, was found "not guilty" of the charge of embezzling municipal funds by a jury, which had deliberated thirty-two hours. Speaker Champ Clark declared that nothing in his Baltimore speech could be considered as indicating that he had figured on being a presidential candidate in 1916 or any time in the future. Arbitration of all questions, including those involving national honor, is proposed in a treaty, the terms of which were agreed upon by Secretary Bryan and Constantin Brun, the Danish minister.

The supreme court of appeals refused writs of error in the cases of the members of the West Virginia legislature convicted last summer of bribery in connection with the United States senatorial election earlier in the year. A bill prescribing the worship of heaven and of Confucius by the president of the Chinese republic was passed by the administrative council, which took the place of the Chinese parliament recently dissolved by President Yuan Shi Kai. Wholesale grocers testified for the defense in the government's suit to dissolve the American Sugar Refining company under the Sherman anti-trust law at New York. They told of prices paid various refineries for sugar and said competition is keen. Appointment of an examiner to take testimony and the limiting of time in which to submit evidence in the suit of the government to dissolve the "coal trust" were incorporated in a decree filed by Judge Gray in the United States appellate court at Philadelphia. Hereafter there will be a censorship according to the standards of the Roman Catholic church of every play on the New York stage, and after Feb. 2, when the Catholic theater movement will be launched, no practical Catholic may see any play not on the "white list." LIVE STOCK PRICES AT SOUTH OMAHA

Slow Trade in Beef--Market Steady to Lower. HOG VALUES A DIME LOWER. Lamb's Slow and 15 Cents Lower. Aged Sheep About Steady--Ewes and Yearlings Change Hands in Good Season. Union Stock Yards, South Omaha, Feb. 3.—Cattle receipts were again moderate today, about 3,800 head arriving. A total lack of snap characterized the market for beef cattle today and the general trend of values were slow to 10c lower than Monday. It was much the same with cows and heifers as with beef steers, the best grades selling at pretty close to steady figures and values shading away on the medium and common grades. Demand was not at all urgent from any source. Veal calves were in active request and steady, and there was a fair outlet for bulls, stags, etc., at about steady figures. Desirable grades of all weights of stockers and feeders were in active demand at steady to stronger figures, and even the medium and common kinds moved tolerably freely at full recent quotations. Cattle quotations: Choice to prime beefs, $8.50@8.75; good to choice beefs, $8.25@8.50; fair to good beefs, $7.80@8.20; common to fair beefs, $6.75@7.75; good to choice fed heifers, $6.75@7.50; good to choice cows, $6.50@7.25; fair to good cows, $5.40@6.25; canners and cutters, $1.25@6.25; veal calves, $5.00@10.00; bulls, stags, etc., $5.50@7.25; good to choice feeders, $7.00@8.15; fair to good feeders, $7.25@7.50; common to fair feeders, $6.75@7.15; stock cows and heifers, $5.50@6.75; stock calves, $6.50@8.25. About 14,900 hogs were received today. The movement was very drabgy today and prices were fully a dime lower than Monday and in some cases as much as 10@15c lower. Bulk of the sales landed at $8.00@8.25, and tops reached $8.25. Sheep and lamb receipts amounted to about 8,000 head. The market was just about as slow as it was on Monday. There were no strictly good lambs available, so the packers took such lambs as were here on a basis of generally 13c lower than Monday, and paid steady prices for ewes and yearlings. Quotations on sheep and lambs: Lambs, good to choice, $7.25@7.55; lambs, fair to good, $7.00@7.25; lambs, culls, $5.50@6.50; yearlings, light, $6.50@6.75; yearlings, heavy, $6.25@6.50; wethers, good to choice, $5.50@5.80; wethers, fair to good, $5.25@5.50; ewes, good to choice, $5.15@5.40; ewes, fair to good, $4.50@5.15. GOT HER THREE WISHES. But They Sank Her Beneath the Waves of the Social Sea. The late King Edward of England, while a very gracious and genial man, could be very severe with those who overstepped the rules of etiquette, and Frederick Townsend Martin in "Things I Remember" recalls what happened to an American girl who offended him when he was Prince of Wales. "What is your first wish?" asked H. R. H. "Oh, sir, it is to have your photograph." "The prince looked at her and said, 'Granted' he said. "And the next?" "I would like you to bring me the photograph in person." H. R. H. hesitated, frowned and, recovering from his surprise, answered: "That shall be done. Now, what is the last?" "Never was the truth of the saying so apparent that 'roots run in where angels fear to tread.'" The young lady disregarded the warning looks from those around her. "The third wish, sir, is that you will present me to the Princess of Wales." "The prince looked at her coldly. 'Granted,' he said and walked away without a word." The silly girl realized that she had sinned against society, which never forgives fools. She made a hasty exit, and the waves of the social sea closed over her forever. Feeding Frozen Roots. There is danger of injuring cows by feeding them root crops or other foods that have been frozen. If the roots are carefully fed, given in only small amounts and are not decayed there is little danger, and they may be safely fed in this manner. The Profitable Mule. Nine-tenths of the objection to the mule is prejudice. For generations he has been regarded as obstinate and vicious when the contrary is true. Cast aside prejudice and raise a few mules and watch the money coming in.

Last Thursday the deal was completed whereby the hardware business so long and ably carried on by Messrs. Barrett & Dally was transferred to the Carhart Lumber Company, and the place will be known as the Carhart Hardware Store from this time. The proprietors who are moving to Wayne are A. B. Carhart and C. E. Carhart of Mapleton, Iowa. The hardware store here will be under the same control as the Carhart lumber yards in this part of Nebraska, of which there are several. One reason for the purchase of the business at Wayne was that they might be profitably located close to their lumber interests. They are experienced in the hardware as well as the lumber business. The families are planning to come to Wayne about the first of next month.

H. Gardner was over from Emerson Monday looking after his property here. He reports that Mrs. Gardner, who is in a hospital at Sioux City, where she underwent an operation for the removal of gallstones, is not gaining in strength very rapidly. It was a serious operation and conditions were not the best, and then she is well along in years, all of which make it a serious case.

Harry Larson, who worked at the Wayne bakery for a time last spring, and later for the Hyle Oil Co., and went away from here in the fall sick from lung trouble died the first of last week. With his wife he was returning from Florida, where they had been in hope of prolonging his life, and where her parents live, when the death messenger came. The body was taken to his old home at Marquette, in this state for burial. Harry was a genial young man and won many friends during his short stay at Wayne.

Dick Auker, who has been farming near Hoskins has moved to his farm south of Wayne, and will once more become a citizen of this part of the county. His friends here and neighbors where he is moving from did a neighborly act when they loaded ten or eleven wagons at that end of the line with his live stock—150 hogs and shoats and met a like number of teams and men from here about half way, where the loads were transferred from the one set of wagons to another. Another day four teams from each end of the line did the same stunt. This gave all hands a chance to help with the moving and yet all could be at home at night—when otherwise teams making the entire trip would have to be away over night. Dick is quoted as saying that their neighbors will be remembered and repaid. There were four of the Auker boys in the line.

A. B. Carter was over from Winside Tuesday. He says his neck is somewhat better since a $20 specialist felt of it and made a month office rent from Carter in 15 minutes. Carter was so grateful that he gave the fellow another $20 worth of advertising. We once heard a physician tell of treating a man's ears for dull hearing. He first looked into the ears, as far as possible, then gave the fellow a little soda and water to drop in his ears daily for three days, when he was to return. He then gave him instructions to wash them thoroughly, as the soda water had softened the wax by that time—charged him two saw-bucks and remarked to a friend that the fellow could have gotten his ears washed much cheaper if he had done it without the aid and advice of a physician. We are glad that brother Carter is feeling better—otherwise he might have to call on a chiropracticioner.

Great Interest In Panama Essays

Boys and Girls Much Pleased with Chance to Try For Cash Prizes—School Authorities Co-operate—Jury Announced.

The First National Bank of Wayne, has announced the following as the Jury of Award for the Panama canal essay contest for $18 in cash prizes: W. D. Redmond, J. W. Ziegler, A. R. Davis.

The school children have evinced a deep interest in the announcement made last week that a prize of $10 would be paid for the best 200-word essay written by a schoolboy or schoolgirl under sixteen years of age; a second prize of $5, and a third prize of $3.

The Osborne Art Calendar, which shows the reproduction of Richard W. Rummell's painting in full color of the entire canal zone, has been the center of attraction in every schoolroom since it was placed on the walls and announcement made through these columns that prize contest was on.

Thus early, some of the essays have been mailed to the First National Bank.

Most of the boys and girls, however, are not sending along their first efforts, but are giving the Panama canal careful study, carefully scrutinizing the picture on the calendar, and the descriptive matter that appears on the sheet which is attached to it. There is a demand all over town for books on the Canal, and the "children of larger growth" are becoming as much interested as the smaller folks.

The Panama Canal picture and the prize contest have become the talk of the town, and, as we predicted a week ago, every one of us knows a lot more about the Canal, and the hundreds of millions of dollars and the thousands of lives that have been poured out in its building, than we knew a few weeks ago.

A Story Showing How a Fortune Hung in the Balance

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

"John," said Mary MacKnight to her husband when he came home from business, "what do you suppose?"

"What do I suppose? Why, I suppose I'm to have a good dinner. I'm certainly hungry."

"Aunt Cynthia is coming to live with us. You know she was at our house till father died. Then she went to live with Ellen Stone."

"What's the matter with Ellen Stone?"

"Aunt Cynthia thinks she doesn't care for her except for what she can get out of her. Miss Stone is very extravagant—runs up bills and has them sent to Aunt Cynthia. You know Aunt Cynthia is very well off."

"I didn't till you told me. How do you know which is at fault, your aunt or her niece?"

"I don't. I have never seen Ellen Stone."

"What are you going to do about taking your aunt in?"

"That depends upon you."

"No, it doesn't; decide it for yourself."

Mrs. MacKnight was one of those women with whom any one could get on. She was kind hearted and would like very much to give her aunt a home. Mrs. Cynthia Withers, a widow, would pay a good round sum for her board, and that would be a benefit to Mrs. MacKnight, who, on her husband's salary, found it difficult to make ends meet. John MacKnight would rather have had Old Nick come to reside in his house, but he knew that pecuniarily it would relieve the strain on his wife, and he consented for her sake.

Mrs. Withers came and seemed much relieved to get out of Miss Stone's clutches. The old lady was a good deal broken down, and Mary MacKnight devoted herself to building her up. In this she succeeded, so far as any one could succeed, having a soothing effect upon her and taking great pains to minister to her comfort. The aunt had been much attached to Mary while the latter was a child, and it seemed now that she could not get on with any one else.

Mrs. Withers had a son who was of a roving disposition. He was not fitted to take care of his mother nor would she have been able to live with him, owing to her nervous condition. A year after she came to the MacKnights, she received news that her son had died abroad. After his death she said to Mary:

"I'm going to make a new will. While I was living with Ellen Stone I think she must have hypnotized me, for one day when I was ill she asked me to sign a paper, and I did as she bid me. She had provided two witnesses, and this makes me think that the paper I signed was a will. If so I have no doubt that it cut off my own son, to whom I had left all my property except a legacy to you. When I got better I asked Ellen to let me see the paper I had signed, and she said that, since my recovery, it was of no consequence; fearing that I was going to die, she had simply had me sign instructions with regard to my funeral and giving her authority to draw the necessary funds. When I insisted on seeing what I had signed she said she had burned it."

"The new will executed by Mrs. Withers left Mary MacKnight all her property. The aunt showed the document to her heir and told her that in case of her death she would find it in an antique writing desk in her room in which she kept all her papers."

Not long after the execution of this will Mrs. Withers was advised by her physician to go to a sanitarium, where she would escape the noises of a city and have such trained attendance as she required. She did not wish to go, though she was a great care, Mary had become accustomed to minister to her wants, and since she was Mary's only living near blood relative Mary had grown every year more attached to her. Mary went with her to the sanitarium and regretfully left her there.

It was hoped that the invalid would after a rest be so restored as to warrant her return, but she gradually became more dependent on doctors and nurses and remained in the sanitarium as long as she lived.

One day in February John MacKnight put his wife on a steamer and sent her to the Bermuda Islands. The winter had been long and Mary had not stood up under it very well. While she was away John slept at home, fixing his meals outside.

It happened that the day Mary returned, her husband was unable to meet her at the dock, being detained at his place of business by a matter of importance. Mary arrived at home about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and having a duplicate key with her, let herself into the house. Going at once upstairs she was about to enter her room when she heard something that sounded like the rustle of skirts in another chamber formerly occupied by her aunt and which had been kept just as the old lady had left it in expectation that she would return to it. Mary entered the room and there, endeavoring to conceal herself behind the window curtains, was a woman. Seeing that she was discovered the intruder came forth and stood the picture of misery.

"What are you doing in my house?" asked Mrs. MacKnight, with severity. "Let me go; please let me go! I have stolen nothing!"

"The woman was about thirty years old, comely and handsomely dressed."

"What are you doing here, I say?" repeated Mary. "You are not a thief; you are a lady."

There were quick flashings in the eyes of the stranger indicating that she was looking for some method of extricating herself. Finally rising from her cowering attitude she said defiantly:

"I will not attempt to deceive you. I am no thief. I did not come here to steal. I came to meet the man I love, who is mine by right, yours by law."

"My husband! You come here to—Oh, heavens!"

"I know not who you are, but I do know that I am the only woman he loves."

Striding past Mrs. MacKnight defiantly, she left the room and hurried down the staircase. Mary, on the verge of collapse, fell on the bed. She heard the front door open, then the voice of her husband.

"Beg your pardon, madam; but I should like to know what you have been doing in my house."

"Let me go," came the voice of the woman who had just gone downstairs.

"Not until I have received a satisfactory explanation as to the cause of your presence here."

Mary sprang from the bed. The woman must be a thief after all and had made her believe that she had come to meet John in order to get away with the valuables she had taken and escape a west. The thought was mingled by a delightful feeling of relief that her husband was innocent. Rushing to the landing, she cried:

"Don't let her go, John; she's a thief."

John closed the front door, shutting the intruder in. Mary ran down and confronted the woman with her husband. Both were too intent on the matter of preventing the thief from getting away with whatever she had stolen to think of saluting each other after their long separation.

"Turn over the plunder," said John. "You may as well give it up to me as to the police."

"I have no plunder," said the woman drawing quick breaths in her excitement.

"Very well, you have been caught in my house, and that is trespass. Mary, go to the phone and call for the police."

"Hold!" said the woman.

"Well?"

She darted her eyes about her. One thing alone might have saved her—a fire, but there was no fire in the house, except in the furnace in the basement. In her desperation the woman took from under her outer coat a paper and tried to tear it, but it was folded, and she was not successful. John snatched it from her and, looking at an indorsement on the outside, read, "Last Will and Testament of Cynthia Withers."

"Who are you and what do you want with this?" asked John.

"The woman made no reply for a few minutes; then she said:

"Since I have not succeeded there is no harm done and you can well afford to let me go away quietly. I am Ellen Stone."

"Ellen Stone!" gasped Mary.

"Go on," said John.

"Mrs. Withers died this morning in the sanitarium. If I could have got out with that paper I would have inherited all her property, for I have a will dated long before that one, drawn in my favor."

"But how did you know where this will was kept?" asked Mary.

"When Mrs. Withers lived with me she kept all her papers in her antique desk. I knew she must have made a second will, and there was a chance that it was in the desk. Learning that there was no one in the house during the day, I came here and, bringing a tool to raise a sash, got in. I found the desk and the will, as I hoped, and had you, Mrs. MacKnight, been a minute later I would have made good my escape. I made pretense of having come here to meet your husband, hoping that it would prevent your detaining me for a thief. Had you, Mr. MacKnight, been a minute later I would have succeeded in passing the second danger."

She paused a few moments, then continued:

"You have nothing to gain by prosecuting me for this attempt to get possession of Mrs. Withers' will, and I see no reason why you should not suffer me to depart."

"I can forgive you," said Mary, "for endeavoring to deprive me of a fortune even by a criminal ruse, but it is not so easy to forgive you for pretending that you had won him from me. Suppose, as you have said, he had not arrived till you had gone. You would not only have stolen the fortune my aunt intended for me, but it is quite possible that you might have made an irreparable breach between him and me. No; I cannot permit you to go free."

The woman cowered at this. She had committed an offense that if pressed would send her to prison for many years. John MacKnight interposed:

"Mary," he said, "you must remember that where one is cornered and must decide quickly, the consequences of an act are not carefully considered. I recommend mercy."

"The wife, who had so nearly been separated from her husband as well as losing a fortune, considered a moment, then said:

"Do as you like, John."

MacKnight opened the door and said to the woman one word—

"Go!"

True Dairy Farming
As an illustration of wisdom of that sort of dairy farming which includes the breeding and raising of well bred cows and heifers from registered sires, we will cite one sale which took place in this county last week. Mr. Jos. Winterling sold fourteen head of grade Holstein cattle, nine two-year-old heifers, four cows and one bull to go to New Orleans, for $1,300. For many years to come, there will be a strong demand for well bred dairy cattle. Behind this production stands the creamery and plenty of skim milk. Don't forget the lesson these facts teach. When Hoard's Dairyman first began to urge upon our farmers to consider the profit that would come to them from the use of registered sires, they were very skeptical and loth to listen. They could not see then the annual sale from this source alone in this one county (Jefferson) of nearly a million dollars a year for cattle bred for dairy purposes. Where would the Jefferson county farmers be today had they stuck by their old stock of scrub-bred cattle?—Hoard's Dairyman.

Roger Sullivan is named to lead the standpat faction of the Illinois democracy in the coming senatorial campaign. No matter what Roger professes no one who is progressive need be deceived. The same crowd will be back of him as the gang that bought the senatorship for Lorimer. Let the people rule.

The statement by Secretary Bryan at a dinner speech in Washington last week that it had always been his ambition to be a United States senator started a lot of Nebraska candidates to guessing. Some would prefer to be senator themselves—others would prefer to see Mr. Bryan in the president's chair, and others would rather that he be retired to private life.

Secretary of Navy Daniels has figured out for him by experts that Uncle Sam can put in a plant of his own and make armor-plate for the warships at a saving of $140 per ton, which would amount to more than $1,000,000 annual saving. That is not to be sneezed at. It would not be full of blow-holes either. It is up to the steel trust to come down or lose their job.

The embargo is raised on the selling and delivering of arms and ammunition to Mexico. This will be to the advantage of the revolutionary forces, as they were prohibited from benefits to be derived by free access to arms from the United States, and the Huerta forces have been better able to secure arms elsewhere. Now all are on a par. It will cut short a long drawnout fight.

According to the Coleridge Blade the banks of that place and Laurel carry almost a million dollars of deposits, nearly equally divided between the two places—and then the editor shakes his fist at Wall street and says we can get along without those fellows' aid. This dollars to doughnuts, if the Blade man can locate that million dollar deposit he will find that considerable more than half of it is now doing duty in the banks of the east, furnishing the shappers down there with the "sinews of war" with which to manipulate prices on nearly everything we produce for their own benefit. If the home people who chuck their money into the banks would put it into some good home enterprise—use it to start something at home, this great state of Nebraska would soon rank with the most wealthy of the states.

Saturday the patrons of the Norfolk postoffice are to say who they wish for postmaster for the next four years. There are seven candidates who were said by the committee to be eligible to the place. They are Mrs. Marie O'Donnell Weekes, editor of the Press, Arthur S. Phillips, Andrew G. Nelson, Herman Winter, Herman Grechke and Carl Wilde. Our sympathy is with the lady candidate, the only one with whom we are personally acquainted—and because we believe that the press of the district should be represented by at least one editor in the next convention of postmasters of Nebraska. But more because we believe that Mrs. Weekes is as competent as any of the bunch—and she is willing to let the race be won by the one passing the best examination at a civil service examination. If the other candidates dare accept her challenge. To us it looks as though the patrons of Norfolk of-ice will be most faithfully served by Mrs. Weekes if elected, and her election will place the Press in position to do more for the party in the district and for the city of Norfolk than it will be possible for it to do otherwise. The Press has ever been loyal to the party when it was near right, and will continue to be, and for that reason it should be recognized. Mrs. Weekes has made a clean campaign, and rests her case with the people who know her.

County Judge Frank Flynn has incurred a rebuke from the "Barn-Stormer" of the Pender Republic by his alleged misconduct during the Flege trial, and Bro. Hughes hands him the following: "Our esteemed County Judge, Frank Flynn, added very materially during the Flege trial to his already unenviable reputation as a friend of the roughneck and criminal element. If reports are true he was very busy for several days previous to the trial and all during the trial endeavoring to bring about Flege's acquittal. It is said that his work became so bold and flagrant that he had to be warned by the officials in charge of the trial to cut it out. We do not know what object Flynn had except on the principal that birds of a feather flock together. It is common knowledge that he associates with what is known as the "bum element," so we take it he was simply trying to help one of his bunch, because there is an old saying that there is honor even among thieves. If there is honor among them we suppose the same thing holds true among other offenders of the law. The Republic editor does not presume to say whether Flege is guilty or not. But it is none of Flynn's business whether he is or isn't. Our laws provide for a way of finding out his guilt or innocence and men like Flynn who have no official responsibility in the case should keep hands off and not make themselves obnoxious by butting in where they have no business."

C. H. Hendrickson, who is at Lincoln this week says that he will take the time to report these charges to the Governor and ask that he investigate and if found to have foundation in fact cause the guilty official to be removed from office. If the claims made by the Republic are true the man has no business to be recognized as an official for the enforcement of law.

Rev. Ed. Mills, an evangelist doing missionary work for the Baptist people wants to move to Wayne if he can secure a residence in which to live. This but once emphasizes the fact that Wayne needs more homes—and that by the organization of a building and loan some of us poor devils might be able to be paying for a home instead of paying rent.

Among The Churches of Wayne

German Evangelical Lutheran Church. (Rev. E. Moehring, Pastor.)

There will be services next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Sunday school at 10 o'clock.

St. Mary's Catholic Church.

(Rev. William Kearns, Pastor.) There will be no services in Wayne next Sunday. The pastor will hold mass at Carroll at 10:30 and catechetical instruction at 11:30.

First Baptist Church.

(Rev. B. P. Richardson, Pastor.) A very enjoyable day last Sunday. An especially large number was present at the communion service.

So far as we know all our sick members are recovering in very satisfactory way. We would all honor our professions and render a grateful service, if we visited the sick and the "shut-ins," more regularly. The ministry of human sympathy is always in order.

The pastor will preach two expository sermons Sunday. "The winning of a Man," is the subject of the morning sermon. In the evening the subject will be: "The Mediating Christ." Tomorrow (Friday) evening the young people are going to hold a peculiar sort of social in the church parlors. Ask some one to tell you about it.

Sunday evening at 6:30 the young people's meeting will be led by Mildred Page.

Our prayer meetings are full of help to the growing christian. The experience of the older christian will encourage the younger one, and the enthusiasm of the younger christian will be a tonic to the weary follower of Christ. No christian is too young to join the prayer meeting and none too old to be graduated from its course.

Posted in the church you will find a "Standard of Efficiency," for the Sunday school, and one for the young people's society. Read these and see whether you are helping raise the "standard," or lowering it.

If you have no church home, you will find it congenial to meet and worship with us.

St. Paul's Lutheran Church.

(Rev. F. E. Blessing, Pastor.) Sunday school every Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. We are glad to note the increasing interest in the Sunday school work. But still we realize that there are many who are not interested, who should be. A large Sunday school makes a large church.

Regular preaching service every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The subject of the sermon for next Sunday morning will be "Thirst for God," Psalm 42:1, 2. Amid the trackless mountains and rugged valleys beyond the Jordan, where the roaring torrents seemed to answer one another from valley to valley, a wandering exile lifted up his voice: No doubt his natural hunger and thirst had been supplied, but still there remained in his soul passionate yearning for one whom the forces of nature could not give, and thus does his voice ring out, and speak words which have revealed the deep secret hidden in every human breast, though it may be suppressed. As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God."

Evening services every Sunday evening at half past seven. Next Sunday evening the pastor will begin a series of sermons on the offices of the Christ, which are Prophet, Priest and King. Sunday evening the subject will be "Christ, as a Prophet" John 7:40.

We were pleased to have such a splendid attendance last Sunday morning and evening. May we keep up the good attendance; it will be more profitable to you and all who attend.

The Ladies' Aid society will meet at the home of Mrs. Silas Meltek on next Thursday afternoon. Catechetical class next Saturday afternoon at half past two in the pastor's study.

The choir will hold its rehearsal on next Friday evening at seven o'clock at the parsonage.

Methodist Church.

(Rev. C. L. Myers, Pastor.) Have you signed one of those petitions yet? Don't fail.

The King's Heralds and the Light Bearers meet at 4 o'clock on the first Sunday of each month.

The W. C. T. U. will meet Friday at the usual time with Mrs. Dayton.

The class meeting once was the great gathering of the church. Every Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

Missionary offering in the Sunday school Sunday was $8.03. If we do this well until conference we will have nearly $100.

"Emigrant Force" is the study book for the tongue and the work will begin soon. It promises to be of great interest.

Attendance at the Sunday school is on the increase. Advertise your class. Thursday evening the Aid society will entertain the members of the church and congregation at the parsonage. The pastor and family will be pleased to have you all with us.

We trust no one will forget the "13" social given by the Epworth League on Friday, February 13. Admission, 13 cents. Every body come. Laugh and have a good time. Easter will fall on April 26, this year. There will be special services for at least a week at that time. Make your arrangements accordingly.

Choir Efficiency.

My efficiency as a choir member depends upon:

1. Keeping my mind centered upon the service.
2. Joining heartily in the responses.
3. Watching the leader, to secure the right tempos.
4. Avoiding anything likely to draw attention to myself, such as unnecessarily clearing my throat, shrugging my shoulders, adjusting my collar.
5. Keeping my anthem or book open until the organist finishes playing the end of the anthem.
6. Rising with the choir as a body and sitting with them at one time.
7. Realizing that my individual mistakes lower the efficiency of the whole choir.
8. Appreciating the fact that the department of the whole choir is judged by the department of each member.
9. Giving all that I have to give, musically, personally and spiritually at every service.
10. Attending rehearsals as regularly as I would my business engagements.

Presbyterian Church.

(Rev. Alexander Corkey, Pastor.) "Abraham Lincoln's Religion" will be the subject of the sermon at the Presbyterian church next Sunday morning. In the evening the second sermon in the series on "The Women and Girls of the Bible" will be given. The subject will be "Hannah, a Redeemed Eve, and Her Triumphs." The morning service begins at 10:30, followed by the Sunday school at 12 o'clock noon. In the evening the church service is held at 7:30, being preceded by the young people's prayer meeting at 6:30.

The Men's banquet on Thursday evening of last week was a great success. Nearly 100 tickets were sold for the banquet, and a company of eighty seven men sat down to the banquet which was served in neat style by the ladies of the Baptist church. After doing justice to the repast, L. A. Klipinger took the chair as toastmaster, and after a very happy speech introduced the speakers of the evening. There were a number of short "toasts," intermingled with a few "roasts," and the spirit of good cheer and Christian fellowship was in the very atmosphere. The toasts of J. H. Kemp and James McIntosh were especially appreciated, the latter proving himself an after-dinner speaker of more than ordinary ability.

The addresses of the evening were closed by an Irish talk by Dr. Samuel McComb, of Sioux City, Iowa, a lifelong friend of Rev. Alexander Corkey, and Dr. McComb's Irish wit, his stories, and his sound common sense, and practical evangelical religious views won the approval of the men, who showed their appreciation by most hearty applause. One immediate, practical result of the banquet was seen in the Sunday school last Sunday when Clarence Corbit faced a class of twenty-five husky men, all interested in the Bible study and awakened to new zeal in their religious life.

A conference of the Sunday school leaders and workers in the Presbyterian Sunday schools of Wayne, Wakefield, Emerson and Pender was held at Wakefield last Monday, and was attended by a delegation of nine from Wayne. The delegation made the trip to Wakefield by automobile, and included E. G. Philco, C. K. Corbit, Rev. Alexander Corkey, Mrs. H. S. Ringland, Mrs. H. Theobald, Mrs. J. G. Mines, Mrs. C. Clasen, Miss Clara Stallsmith, and Miss Esther McEachen. The conference was in charge of Rev. Ralph Houseman, of Omaha, the educational director of the synod, assisted by Rev. S. Light of Randolph. There was a full number of delegates present, and the conference was full of inspiration and instruction. Especial attention is being given to bring the effectiveness of the Sunday school, as an educational factor, into harmony with the other branches of the church's work.

The men of the church were much pleased to greet P. M. Corbit at the banquet as he returned from his long eastern trip just in time to be present on that occasion, arriving on the evening train on Thursday. During the evening he gave an impromptu talk on his experiences in the east, and he proclaimed himself decidedly as being a convert to woman suffrage. He will give a fuller report of his observations at the picnic dinner of the congregation which will be held at the church within a few weeks under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary society.

At the evening service last Sunday the pastor spoke on "Mother Eve," and set forth the symbolical meaning of Genesis, the third chapter. He said this chapter showed the moral leadership of woman in the world, and this leadership is proved by all history. The glaring immoralities of pagan lands are due to an ignorant womanhood who know not how to impress the child life, and the evils of Christian civilization also come from woman's wrong ideas. The uplift of the race is due to woman-

Oliver Graves and wife were called to Omaha Sunday to attend the funeral of Mrs. C. S. Scranton, who died suddenly at that place. Mr. Scranton is a brother of Mrs. Graves, and has numerous friends here who will sympathize with him in his affliction.

Last week Will and Zeph Morgan were called to Red Oak, Iowa, to the bedside of their dying father, who passed away Tuesday or Wednesday. The funeral of Mr. Morgan was held Friday. Mr. Morgan had many friends here who had moved here from the neighborhood in which he lived, and acquaintances formed while visiting his sons and other relatives in this county.

A. J. Ferguson, who with his wife is spending the winter at their winter home at Pasadena, California, enjoying the novelty of seeing real rain in that country, kindly remembers the Democrat with a copy of the special Mid-Winter number of the Los Angeles Times. This is a mammoth booster edition of about 60 pages. We do not understand that the Colonel endorses all of the stories therein contained relative to that wonderful land, but they seem to have his approval.

We are glad to be able to report that Mrs. Watson who was operated on for appendicitis two weeks ago, continues to improve.

Harry Welch was over from Norfolk Sunday. He has sold the variety store which he recently purchased there. He keeps coming a little nearer to Wayne with each move and perhaps he will gravitate back to this good town.

Rev. B. P. Richardson, pastor of the Baptist church at this place has been tendered the position of field secretary of the Baptist college at Grand Island, and today is at that place talking the matter over with the members of the executive board of the trustees of that school. He has a host of friends at Wayne, both in and out of his church who would regret his resignation should he decide to tender it.

Last Friday Alfred Anderson had a narrow escape from injury or death. He was driving a spirited team, which became unmanageable, and ran with him, throwing him out finally with his feet so entangled in the lines that he was dragged considerable distance, but escaped with no serious injury. The buggy, a new one, was demolished to such an extent that it will require another one to take its place.

A TRIP TO THE MOON.

One Scientist at Least Thinks It Will Be Made Some Day.

Jules Verne was a scientific man, and many regard his fiction stories of submarine and aerial flight—which at the time they were published seemed wild dreams—as a serious prediction of what he believed would be accomplished. As a matter of fact he did live to see the submarine an accepted arm of two navies, and the Wrights were well advanced toward success before he died. There remains his "Trip to the Moon," which seems absolutely impossible of accomplishment. Nevertheless, there are scientific men who dare to reach out into space and chart a pathway to other worlds.

One of these, M. Ernest Archdeacon, who ranks among the foremost authorities in France on aviation, predicts our present aviation machines, which at best could not encircle the earth in less than eight days, will be abandoned for air craft which will girdle the globe in sixty-six minutes. "All the peoples of the earth will then form a sole and single nation."

Man, insatiable in his ambition, is contemplating interplanetary flight, and M. Esbault Pelletier believes the vehicle will be a self propelled rocket (Verne again) with a speed of seven miles a second, which is estimated to be sufficient velocity to carry the projectile beyond the zone of terrestrial attraction. At this rate the moon would be reached in less than ten hours—assuming of course the vehicle was not melted long before by the heat generated in its terrific flight. Radium is suggested as a possible motive power.

The idea of interplanetary flight from our present viewpoint seems of course impossible. However, the submarine was 400 years in developing. M. Archdeacon says "I am convinced that in a certain number of centuries the inhabitants of all the planets will have made acquaintance with one another, and I foresee the day when a world's interplanetary congress will be held."—H. H. Wheeler in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

MISSED THE MULE.

But Willie Landed Hard and the Blow Almost Killed Father.

"Jonas Whipple?" repeated the village grocer. "Why, yes, I reckon I can tell you where to find him, but if I was you, young man, I wouldn't put in much time lookin' for him just at present."

The young fellow in front of the counter looked puzzled. Mr. Green finished wrapping up some butter and then obligingly explained:

"You see, it's like this. Jonas bought a mule the other day and had it fetched over to his place and turned loose in the barn lot. When feedin' time came that evening he and that fool boy Willie of his went out to put the mule in the barn. Somehow or other, though, the mule took a notion that he wouldn't go. He'd run up to the door, stick his head inside as if he meant to go in; then he'd seem to change his mind and go charging back to the other end of the lot. He did that about ten times, and finally Jonas lost his temper and made up his mind to teach the mule a lesson. He called Willie to him and handed him a piece of fence rail that he'd picked up. Then he told him to go into the barn, climb up over the door and sit there till the mule stuck his head inside and then crack him a good one.

"Jonas started out after the mule again, but the beast seemed to have scented trouble, for he wouldn't go near the barn. Jonas chased him round till he was about worn out and as mad as a hornet, and then he gave up and started to go in the barn to tell Willie to climb down. He stuck his head inside the door, and—well, he doesn't know what happened after that till the next morning when he woke up in bed. And from what the doctor says it's a wonder he's able to know anything. What did you want to see him about?"

The young man gave a feeble grin. "I'm selling a book on the treatment of unruly animals," he replied. "A gentleman outside directed me to Mr. Whipple's, but I'm very glad I forgot his directions. Thank you, sir, and good evening."—Youth's Companion.

Too much idleness, I have observed, fills up a man's time much more completely and leaves him less his own master than any sort of employment whatsoever.—Burke.

BUTT AND HIS BANKNOTES.

Isaac Was a Great Orator, but Was Careless With Money.

Some amusing anecdotes are told of Isaac Butt, the famous Irish orator, in "The Life of Old Dublin," by Mr. James Collins. The author recalls the fact that Butt was very careless in regard to money and repeats a reminiscence which he heard from the late Judge Adams:

"Poor Isaac Butt was a man of splendid genius, but, as all the world knew, careless to the last degree in money matters. I was in Youghal when the election petition was tried there, and Butt was counsel for Mr. Weguelin. At the close of the trial Mr. Butt was handed his check, running to several hundred pounds. The moment he got it he went over to one of the banks and cashed it.

"Butt was staying at the house of a Youghal gentleman, and in the morning he put his hand in his pocket and found the money was gone. I shall never forget the hullabaloo that followed. Consternation, suspicion, bedlam swept through the house. And in the middle of it all, just as the police were being summoned, the young son of the house turned up with the missing banknotes.

"It had been a windy night, the window shook in the loose frame, and Butt, annoyed by the noise, got up, stuffed the first wad of paper he could find between the frame and the casement, went to bed again and forgot all about it."

"Very Remarkable Adder."

"Duncan McLaren, a Radical member of parliament for Edinburgh, brother-in-law of John Bright, a man mighty in figures, said the Scotsman newspaper for libel," says J. Stephen in the New Witness. "He won his case and on the same day in the house of commons made a speech in which by some serious slip two and two became five or more probably seven. Next morning the Scotsman came out with a leader. 'The highest court in our land,' it was written, 'has declared that we must not call Duncan McLaren "a snake in the grass." We bow to its decision. But in the face of his speech last night in the house of commons we do not think that there is any tribunal that will punish us if we, as we now do, call Mr. McLaren a very "remarkable adder."'"

Hostile Passions Obliterated by Temporizing

By ALFRED H. FRIED, Distinguished German Pacifist

THE manner in which the United States government delayed rushing into precipitate action in the California-Japanese controversy, the quarrel with Great Britain over the Panama canal tolls and the strife with Huerta is CHARACTERISTIC OF THE PEACE POLICY which America deliberately pursues.

It has been properly recognized there that it is not the main thing to settle every conflict on the strict basis of rights, but to give conflicts such a character that they can be settled by the sensible means of either arbitration or compromise. The best means to attain that end is to EXCLUDE THE PASSIONS WHICH NATURALLY ARISE FROM INTERNATIONAL DIFFERENCES—passions which are the chief menace to an amicable settlement.

Hostile passions are most effectually obliterated by a policy of temporizing. The European powers traditionally cherish the fear that prestige is shattered unless the saber is rattled at every possible opportunity and an "energetic tone" is employed.

THE IDEA IS PROPAGATED THAT IT IS BENEATH THE DIGNITY OF A GREAT POWER TO YIELD. WITHOUT A HISTORY AMERICA HAS MORE MODERN AND SENSIBLE CONCEPTIONS. THEY ARE PLAINLY EXPRESSED IN THE NEW PEACE TREATIES OF SECRETARY BRYAN.

Wealthy Women of London Very Charitable

By Mrs. MARY E. IDE of Chicago, Well Known as a Prison Reformer

I WAS impressed with the amount of charity work done by the women of London. I was given to understand that the wealthier ones give HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS TO THE POOR EVERY YEAR. The Duchess of Marlborough and other American duchesses are leaders in this work. The general result of this method of charity, however, seems to be unsatisfactory.

IT APPEARS TO TEACH THE CHILDREN OF THE POOR TO BECOME PROFESSIONAL BEGGARS, THE CITY HAVING BECOME INFESTED WITH THEM. IT IS CERTAIN THAT MANY FAMILIES LIVE ON CHARITY THROUGH SHEER INDOLENCE. I BELIEVE IT WOULD BE BETTER IF THE MONEY WERE DEVOTED TO STARTING COMMUNITY FARMS AND CREATING OTHER FORMS OF LEGITIMATE EMPLOYMENT.

AN ALPINE THRILL

Wild Slide Down the Snow Slope of a Mountain Peak.

SWEPT INTO AN ICE FUNNEL.

Perilous Experience of an Explorer Who Was Imprisoned a Whole Night in a Treacherous Crevasse in a Glacier on the Brink of a Gaping Chasm.

Some thrilling experiences once befell Frederick Chamberlin while he was exploring the Alps. In the Wide World Magazine he writes of an adventure that befell him on the afternoon of a September day when he was descending the snow slope of a mountain:

"Suddenly I found myself in front of a particularly nasty serac, or ice ridge, that gave very little foothold. The surface was not broken and crumbly, but just smooth, treacherous ice. However, I was not going to be daunted, so I wormed my way up and was about to descend the other side when without warning my feet shot from under me, and I started careering down the slope at break neck speed.

"Down I slid, straight through a funnel shaped hole into a partly formed crevasse. I brought up sharply against a small bar of ice that only just prevented me from continuing my headlong career into a gaping chasm below.

"For a few seconds I lay half stunned; then I carefully got on my feet, felt my body all over to see that no bones had been broken and looked round for my ice ax, but that had disappeared.

"I saw a slight crack in the surface of one of the sides, and I tried to draw myself up, but my fingers could not get a firm hold in the slippery ice, and I was soon forced to give that up. Then I tried lying flat on my back in the funnel through which I had entered my prison and, firmly planting my knees against its sloping roof, endeavored to work myself back. Here, too, I failed.

"Being by this time quite desperate, I took out my little pocket knife to try to cut steps in the slope. My still torn fingers let the knife slip at the first attempt, and, although I groped about for a long time, I failed to recover it.

"My last chance had gone with the knife. The darkness creeping on and enveloping everything, the dead silence, the bitter cold, were all beginning to take effect, and I groaned at the prospect of the long night in front of me. I dared not lean too far back, for that slender bar of ice might give way. I called out loudly at intervals, but the sound was stifled by the overhanging walls.

"Soon it was pitch dark, and to while away the time and keep my spirits up I loudly sang a popular American song. But soon my thoughts became gloomy again. There was no sound but an eerie drip, drip, down below, and sometimes the grinding, tearing, booming collapse of a whole serac would set my nerves quivering. I shivered incessantly, for I was wet through from constant contact with the ice, and the night seemed interminable.

"When I was on the point of utter collapse the first gray daylight mercifully began to filter into my prison. Now I must make by last desperate attempt to escape.

"As a forlorn hope I looked about again for my knife. My eyes caught a glint on a fan shaped piece of ice, and there, just over the dark chasm, where providentially it had fallen the night before, I spied it. Determined not to lose it again, I attached it to my wrist by a piece of string and started digging at the steep ice slope.

"Three and a half hours I slaved in the ice cavern, and then was able to crawl up, digging my toes in at every step, till I could draw myself up into comparative safety on the ledge above. I lay there, gasping, for a few seconds; then, taking the greatest precautions all the while, I passed between the remaining crevasses and at last descended safely to the firm rocks."

Reading Advertisements. It is not alone the people who are interested in trade who read advertisements. Few people nowadays buy either newspapers or magazines who do not read these cleverly worded and well illustrated bids for business. If you should ask the average person just why he or she is in the habit of looking over the advertisements, the chances are that you would get no direct and satisfactory answer, but the real fact is that subconsciously the public has come to regard what appears in the advertising columns as interesting reading matter.—Portland (Ore.) Telegram.

One Advantage. "My papa is a mounted policeman," said small Eric to a visitor. "Is that better than being a walking policeman?" asked the visitor. "Course it is," replied Eric. "If there is trouble he can get away quicker."—Chicago News.

Men are not put into this world to be everlastingly daddled on by the fingers of joy.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Returns to Wayne With Wife

Martin Bastian came last week from Colome, South Dakota, and will again become a resident of Wayne. He was in the Dakota country for four years, and before coming back to Wayne led the lady of his choice to the altar, on Sunday, January 25. Miss Jennie Campbell of Colome became Mrs. Bastian. Mr. and Mrs. Bastian will be welcome to Wayne county by his many friends and relatives here. He is moving to the home farm and will conduct it in proper shape, for he is counted a good farmer.

Omaha May Be Named

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 1.—Developments in the hearings held by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Secretary of Agriculture Houston indicate that Omaha may be given one of the regional banks. Omaha has asked for the states of Nebraska, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, western Iowa, Southwestern South Dakota, Southern Montana, and two tiers of counties in northern Kansas, as it is shown that business in these states converged there.

Has Wayne Such a Merchant?

A story has been going the rounds of the press since last spring of an enterprising groceryman who made an offer of a pound of coffee to every farmer who came in town on a King drag, and to the one who came the farthest he would give a barrel of flour. Fifty-two drags came to his store, each farmer got his coffee and one a barrel of flour, and all departed dragging the road back home again. While it cost the merchant something, it was a splendid advertising stunt, and for months his name was heralded all over the country. In addition to his personal gain, he had the honor of being the means of getting some good roads into town. This incident is supposed to have happened in Illinois, but could have taken place almost anywhere in Nebraska just as well.

Here's some sense of an editorial from the Sidney (Neb.) Telegraph: "Events of the past week have led to the frequent remark that this town is going a reckless pace and will soon and at the bottom of the heap. This is unjust to the town, for the facts do not bear out the statement. Suppose you do see three or four boys constantly loafing and given over to other vicious practices; you can name ten times as many who are worthy and manly. True, you do learn of a case of marital infidelity now and then; but to every one such you can count a hundred married couples who are faithful and happy. You may hear of a girl going wrong but you can see a hundred sweet and serious girls, interested in home and school. You may know that an occasional social event is below the pale of respectability; but you can recall a dozen that were wholesome and proper and withal more enjoyable than the other. The fact that you have acquired an idea that the world is growing worse is because evil is never quiet or modest. It proclaims itself in a thousand unwatched ways; it shrieks for attention and insistently puts itself before the footlights. The deep-voiced rooter at the game does not make the majority of the crowd; but after the game you will recall his face when all the rest are forgotten. So it is with the sins of the town; their very arrogance makes them remembered and repeated when good lying all around to be seen and recognized were the blatant sins but hushed for a little space."

Daddy's Bedtime

Story — What Spoiled That Lovely Cranberry Pie.

THERE were times when Jack and Evelyn took daddy's stories as jokes, and when he told them he meant to tell them about Red Flush, the cranberry pie elf, they laughed hard.

"I see you don't believe in elves—in pie elves, at any rate—but I am just going to tell you that Red Flush was as handsome and sprightly a little elf as ever hopped about in a cranberry skin," said daddy.

"Though Red Flush looked like a cranberry, he wasn't really one of them. He was so fond of cranberries and had eaten so many of them that the fairy queen one day said he ought to look like one, and so after she waved her wand he did.

"Red Flush traveled around a good deal. One day he crept in for a nap among some cranberries in a bin at the corner grocer's.

"Before he wakened a little girl came in to buy a quart of the berries, and Red Flush was dumped in with the others.

"When the little girl got home she handed the bag to her mother, and it was put in the pantry until the next day. Red Flush then crawled out of the bag and prowled over the house.

"The elf hopped out into the kitchen and up on to the kitchen table where the little girl's mother was busily stirring something in a bowl.

"Something good to eat!" sniffed Red Flush, for he was very fond of good things.

"She was cutting up the cranberries and mixing them with minced walnuts. Then she added water and sugar and lemon juice and poured this sauce into a deep dish lined with a white crust. Over this she spread another white crust, cutting slits in the top that Red Flush took for windows and doors.

"What a jolly little house, with something inside to eat!" Red Flush exclaimed, and he wriggled through one of the slits and snuggled inside.

"In a minute the pie was put into the stove, and Red Flush wondered why his little house began to get warm.

"The perspiration was steaming down his face as he jumped out of the pie. He would have been in a bad way, I am afraid, if just then the little girl's mother had not opened the oven door to peep in. Red Flush hopped out.

"How queer the pie looks!" the lady exclaimed, for it was bulged up in spots all over the top, and one of the cut places was torn and had a stream of cranberry juice trickling out.

"I'm afraid it's spoiled," she said, and she took it out and threw it away. But she never found out about Red Flush, and Red Flush was so disgusted with cranberries that from that day he gave them up and took to eating plain elf fare, so that now he looks just like any other little elf."

The Lyndhurst Affair

The Story of a Son's Sacrifice

By CLARISSA MACKIE

It was on a crisp February morning that the dreadful news ran from lip to lip until the whole village of Lyndhurst was aroused from its drowsy existence.

On the outskirts of the village was the Blatcher place. It had been the show place of the town. The house stood well back from the street, with handsome maples and elms surrounding it. It had now long been vacant and was falling to decay. No one ever entered the grounds except boys, who are proverbially fond of deserted places.

A murder had been committed. Boys seeking to detach an enormous icicle that hung from the roof of the dilapidated house had been horrified to see the body of an old man sitting in an upper room.

"And there ain't nobody lived in the house for twenty years!" cried Simon Dale, the postmaster, as he led a curious crowd up the street toward the house. "There ain't been a soul there since old Philo Blatcher died and his son, young Philo, went to Asia or Africa or some other outlandish place. I expect young Philo's dead long ago, but there ain't nobody to take interest enough to find out, not being another relative. If he is dead I expect the property 'll revert to the state."

"But what about the old man that Billy Breen saw through the window?" insisted Asa Fitch. "How'd he come inside?"

"Mebbe some tramp that's been housing there. Twon't be no mystery when the constable gets around. Here he comes now."

The constable was the postmaster's brother, and so these two by right of high office in the village took temporary charge of the case.

Constable Ben Dale smashed a windowpane and gained entrance to the big house that had stood in the midst of large grounds, untenanted, unvisited, for twenty years. The trees and shrubs had been untrimmed and grew rankly, almost hiding the house from the street.

When the constable unfastened the front door it was to admit a chosen few. How Miss Alvina Petty managed to slip inside no one ever knew. But there she was, the only woman among half a dozen men, who tramped up the carpeted stairs, stirring the dust of years into a choking cloud.

"Tain't no sight for a woman," protested Constable Ben as he paused, with a hand on the knob of the front chamber door.

"Awful tender with wimmen all of a sudden," sneered Alvina. "Everybody knows it sickens you to kill a chicken, and you let your wife do it, but she never eats chicken because she has to kill 'em. I guess I can stand anything you can, Ben Dale."

Somebody tittered, and Ben Dale opened the door and entered the room. Billy Breen had reported truly.

In one corner of the dusty room was a handsome four post bedstead whose silken covers had been tossed back as if the bed had been recently slept in.

Beside the empty fireplace was a large chintz covered chair, and in this chair was the dead body of a white haired man. His head drooped to one side as if he slept, but there was a rigidity about his attitude that hinted at something else.

One hand hung over the arm of the chair, and the outside of the hand was streaked with blood. On the floor was a little wet spot.

Constable Dale touched his finger to the spot.

"Blood," he whispered hoarsely. "wet blood! It was done last night!"

A shudder ran through the crowd. Then the postmaster nudged somebody, and they all turned and looked at Alvina Petty, who was trembling like a leaf and staring at the face of the dead man.

"I said it wa'n't no place for wimmen!" ejaculated Ben Dale as he straightened himself.

"Who is it?" whispered Alvina weirdly. "Who do you say it is, Ben Dale?"

For the first time the constable looked closely at the man in the chair. Then the color forsook his fresh face, and he almost reeled.

"Good heavens, boys—it's—it's old Philo Blatcher himself!"

"So 'tis!" breathed the postmaster. "But we buried him twenty years ago!"

Then Alvina's voice, curiously repressed to a whisper, caused them all to turn and stare at the little spinner who once had been known as the prettiest girl in Lyndhurst, but now, with her white hair and her pale, wrinkled face, looked older than her forty-five years.

"This isn't old Philo Blatcher," whispered Alvina, still staring at the man. "It is young Philo, his son."

"Young Philo? You're crazy!" cried Ben Dale, pushing forward. "Why, young Philo had black hair and—"

"It is young Philo grown old," broke in Alvina. "I ought to know!"

Silence followed her outburst. One man whispered to another that Alvina had once been engaged to young Philo Blatcher and ever since his disappearance twenty years before she had acted queerly. Young Philo could not be more than fifty now, and this man looked much older.

"Alvina was speaking again."

"He had come back home again after years of wandering, and on the very first night she, the bed had not been slept in for many years, but he was going to use it on the very first night he was killed—killed by an enemy. Some Chinese tracked him home and killed him!"

"You're crazy as a loon, Alvina!" cried Ben loudly, as he grasped her shoulder.

"I'm not. I've got eyes and common sense and a heart!" cried Alvina passionately. "See the blood on his hand. There is a wound in his shoulder here. In the side of the chair is a knife. See the curved ivory handle? It's a foreign knife! Where has he been lately—China? Maybe it's a Chinese knife! Look out in the snow for the tracks of Chinese shoes. Find out if anybody has seen a Chinese around. Hurry, Ben Dale, or he will get away!"

So great was Alvina's energy that all within the room were imbued with her enthusiasm. In a moment they had scattered and left Alvina alone with the man in the chair.

When she was alone Alvina went and knelt there and said little hushed words that no one could hear, that no one ought to hear—save the man for whom they were intended, and she thought his ears were closed to her voice forever.

But suddenly he sighed deeply.

Alvina screamed, but no one heard her.

Again he sighed, and this time Alvina did not scream. She bent close to him and saw his eyelids flutter. Then she drew for restoratives. It is doubtful if any one save Alvina knew where old Philo Blatcher had kept his Scotch whisky and Holland gin and Jamaica rum in the little corner cupboard in the west parlor.

Alvina knew, and she brought a bottle and a crystal glass and gave the man in the chair to drink of the fiery liquid, holding his gray head against her breast as she coaxed him.

Presently he opened his eyes and smiled at her.

"I almost knew you'd be waiting for me, Alvina," he said weakly, for it was indeed young Philo come home after his long exile.

They talked for a long time, and Philo sat up in his chair and Alvina dressed the deep wound in his left arm.

When Ben Dale and the others came trooping back, they paused outside the closed door. Within the room they could hear Alvina's voice talking. They heard her address some one as "Philo," and Ben Dale shook his round head.

"Crazy as a loon," he told them, "although she was bright enough about guessing it was a Chinaman who done the job. Wonder what she'll say when I tell her we found him asleep in the old mill and how, when we tried to get him, he jumped into the river and was drowned. She'll go plumb crazy!"

But they were the ones who acted demented when they opened the door, for there sat Alvina Petty, pink with excitement, talking animatedly to the erstwhile corpse, who was sipping a glass of hot toddy as calm as you please.

Alvina had kindled a fire from the contents of the wood box beside the hearth, and she had heated a panukin of water. There they were as sociable as anything and looking rather annoyed at the intrusion of Ben Dale and his companions.

"I thought you was dead," said Ben Dale when, after a hurried retreat, he ventured to put his head into the room.

"Not quite," said young Philo grimly, "although that Chinaman almost made a job of it—robbed me of $700 in Shanghai and then when I prosecuted him followed me here to get his revenge—has any one seen him?"

"We saw him, and then he went under the ice in the river. With the channel flowing swift, he must be down to Rivermouth by this time," said Ben Dale grimly. "Guess he won't commit no more murders."

If the report of the murder aroused the good people of Lyndhurst it is certain that the discovery that it was not a murder at all, but that Philo Blatcher had returned home to marry Alvina Petty and open the old house that had been closed so many years, caused greater excitement.

Philo soon recovered from his wound, but he was very grateful to Billy Breen, whose adventurous spirit had been the cause of Philo's discovery. He might have died from loss of blood and his body have lain undiscovered for months had not Billy's hunt for fables resulted in the finding of the man in the front room. So Philo Blatcher rewarded Billy Breen in a most substantial manner.

No one ever knew why Philo Blatcher had remained abroad for twenty years after his father's death; no one knew save Alvina, and she never told the story of the son who had made a great fortune to save the father's honor and that it had taken Philo twenty years to make restitution for his father's shortcomings in Lyndhurst. Now Philo had come home to receive his own need of happiness.

So now Alvina reigned in the old Blatcher homestead. Instead of being the village seamstress she is the first lady in the village, and to the romance of the affair is added the mystery of the revengeful Chinaman, who had crossed the ocean and a continent to take a life and who in the end lost his own.

But to Philo Blatcher the best part of the story is that of Alvina's unwavering faith in him and the certainty that some day he would return to claim her.

Obituary—Jabez Rippon

Jabez Rippon was born in Ford, near Sheffield, England, April 8, 1842, and departed this life on January 31, 1914, aged 71 years, 9 months and 23 days. He spent his youth in England, and was married there on August 17, 1864, to Lois Alton at Salter Gate Wesleyan Chapel.

From this union there were born six children, Jane Rippon, who died in infancy, Edith Hanssen, of Wayne; John J. Rippon, who died two months ago in Luverne, Minn.; Frederick Rippon, living now in Oklahoma; Arthur Charles Rippon of Montana, and Ernest Rippon, of Wayne. Besides the four children who remain to mourn a father's loss he leaves his wife, a nephew, Arnold Bolsover, from Minnesota, and Mrs. Alice Rippon, a daughter-in-law, and a number of grandchildren.

After his marriage Mr. Rippon lived in England for 18 years, when he emigrated to America in 1862. The next year his family joined him in the New World, and they settled in Slayton, Minn., where he engaged in the meat business for over twenty years. At this time his former robust health began to fail, and he removed to Wayne county in the winter of 1906, making his home with his daughter, Mrs. W. O. Hanssen. After this for a few years he had charge of a meat market at Beldon, but about two years ago his health failed altogether, following a stroke of paralysis and since that time he has resided in Wayne at the home of his daughter. He gradually failed until about a month ago when another stroke laid him on his bed from which he was not to rise. Lapsing into unconsciousness he passed away quietly in sleep and his earthly race was run, his fight was over, his wanderings had ceased, his weariness had passed, and he exchanged the life which now is for that which is to come.

During his long life both in England and in America Mr. Rippon was a man of industry, honesty and genial spirit. As a young man he and his wife united with the English Wesleyan Methodist church, and he was also a member of the Modern Woodmen lodge of America.

Farm Names

County Clerk Reynolds informs us that the plan of naming farms is becoming popular now that a way is made for recording the same and giving a place official recognition. Last month two more farms were officially christened and the names filed. W. A. K. Neely in Hunter precinct, just north of Wayne has adopted the name of "Prairie Home Farm" as the name by which his place will be known in the future. Mrs. Susan May Tidrick, whose place lies both sides of the precinct line between Hancock and Brenna precincts, has the place registered as "Sunny Slope Stock Farm." The Democrat hopes to see many more farms named before the next year comes round. The time is coming when a farm name will have a value—created by the quality of the farm product sold under the label bearing the name of the farm. Butter, milk, cheese, honey, eggs, poultry or what ever the product of the farm, can then be made of a high standard and marketed to better advantage because of the guarantee of quality which the label of the farm will imply.

LIVE WIRE VICTIMS.

Quickness in Rescuing Them From Contact is Essential.

For his own benefit and that of his comrades the scout should know how to avoid accidents from electricity. The third rail is always dangerous, so do not touch it. Swinging wires of any kind may somewhere in their course be in contact with live wires, so they should not be touched.

A person in contact with a wire or rail carrying an electric current will transfer the current to the rescuer. Therefore he must not touch the unfortunate victim unless his own body is thoroughly insulated. The rescuer must act very promptly for the danger to the person in contact is much increased the longer the electric current is allowed to pass through his body. If possible the rescuer should insulate himself by covering his hands with a mackintosh, rubber sheeting, several thicknesses of silk or even dry cloth. In addition, he should if possible complete his insulation by standing on a dry board, a thick piece of paper or even a dry coat. Rubber gloves and rubber shoes or boots are still safer, but they cannot usually be procured quickly.

If a live wire is under a person and the ground is dry it will be perfectly safe to stand on the ground and pull him off the wire with the bare hands, care being taken to touch only his clothing, and this must not be wet.

A live wire lying on a patient may be flipped off with safety with a dry board or stick. In removing the live wire from the person or the person from the wire do this with one motion, as rocking him to and fro on the wire will increase shock and burn.

A live wire may be safely cut with an ax or hatchet with dry wooden handle. The electric current may be short-circuited by dropping a crowbar or poker on the wire. This must be dropped on the side from which the current is coming and not on the farther side, as the latter will not short circuit the current before it has passed through the body of the person in contact. Drop the metal bar; do not place it on the wire or you will then be made a part of the short circuit and receive the current of electricity through your body.—From "Boy Scouts of America."

LINCOLN AND THE DRAMA.

Lincoln liked the drama. Perhaps if he had not liked it so much he would have lived many years longer, since otherwise he would hardly have put himself in Wilkes Booth's way on that fatal night in April, 1865. But he never pretended to any knowledge or connoisseurship whatever. Most of his life had been passed in a country town—and at a time when few great actors ever appeared in such small places as Springfield, Ill.

In a sale of the autographs, prints and playbills which belonged to the late Douglas Taylor there is a copy of a letter from Lincoln to James H. Hackett, dated Washington, Aug. 17, 1863, afterward printed in this form for private circulation, which contains the following:

I have seen very little of the drama. Some of Shakespeare's plays I have never read, while others I have gone over perhaps as frequently as any unprofessional reader. Among the latter are "Lea," "Richard III.," "Henry VIII.," "Hamlet," and especially "Macbeth." I think the soliloquy in "Hamlet" commencing, "Oh, my offense is rank," surpasses "To be or not to be."

No one but the modest Lincoln would have gone out of his way to tell a Shakespearean scholar that he had never read some of Shakespeare's plays. It is interesting to see that Lincoln's preference fixed itself upon the tragedies and the most serious of the histories. His choice of "Oh, my offense is rank" over "To be or not to be" seems rather strange. The soliloquy is the king's desperate bemoaning of his perfidy and cruelty in murdering his brother.—New York Mail.

Believed Himself Invisible.

The first Lord Lytton was certainly daft. One morning while he was entertaining a large company at his country seat the guests were assembled at breakfast in the great hall when their host came in in an old dressing gown, poured out a cup of tea and disappeared without uttering a word to any one. Arthur Russell expressed his surprise to his next neighbor, who said: "He believes himself to be invisible." And, sure enough, in a little time he appeared in his usual dress and saluted his friends as if he had not seen them since the previous night.

We've Got the Men.

In the event of such an improbable thing as an invasion of this country by a foreign nation or combination of nations the United States could, within a very short time, put into the field an army of 10,000,000 men and take care of it out of its own resources.—New York American.

Temperament.

"Why did the great pianist refuse to play?" "Temperament. He got mad because his name was printed in smaller type on the program than the name of the piano on which he was to perform."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Exasperating.

"The very sound of some people's voices is exasperating." "Quite true, especially when they say 'Move on' or 'Pay up!'"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Assume in adversity a countenance of prosperity and in prosperity moderate thy temper.—Livy.

PRIMITIVE CURRENCY.

Nails, Eggs, Tobacco and Codfish as Mediums of Exchange.

A curious medium of exchange in Scotland not many years ago was handmade nails. This is equaled by Switzerland, where eggs are still current coin. Eggs would be rather risky coin to deposit in the bank for several reasons, but not so wheat and oats, which have been used for all purposes of sale and purchase in Norway and have even been banked. The national corn crop of Mexico is maize and not very long ago formed the chief money of that republic. In the time of our ancestors tobacco was used—almost exclusively in Virginia instead of gold and silver. In Newfoundland dried codfish was at one time a great medium of exchange. It had the advantage of keeping indefinitely, and it is said that the Newfoundland miser got as much pleasure from the odor of his possession as though it were from Ataby.

In savage lands they used more curious things as money. Salt circulated in Abyssinia; cubes of beeswax were the medium in Sumatra; cubes of tea were used in Tartary; in some of the Portuguese possessions the coin consists of straw mats. In the islands of the Pacific they depend upon feathers, while in Madagascar the natives count their wealth in iron shovels. China has had varied forms of currency, not the least curious being the coins made of clay, while Japan used the slightly more expensive substance resin.—New York Sun.

VELOCITY OF LIGHT.

Roemer's Early Calculations Have Stood the Test of Time.

The first astronomer to demonstrate satisfactorily the speed of light was Ole Roemer, a Scandinavian scientist, who read his immortal paper on this subject before the Academy at Paris July 22, 1673. Roemer's calculations and conclusions have stood the test of time and subsequent investigations on all important points.

Knowledge as to the velocity of light was of tremendous importance to astronomical science, since it enabled astronomers to estimate accurately the enormous distances with which their science deals. Roemer found that light traveled at the rate of 186,000 miles in a second. The sun, being distant from the earth 92,000,000 miles, flashes light to us in eight minutes and fourteen seconds.

Yet the sun is a near neighbor compared with the so-called fixed stars, which in reality move with inconceivable velocity, although the most powerful telescopes will not show that velocity as anything but rest. Beyond the outskirts of our insignificant solar system are other systems, and beyond them still others, so far as the sight of man, aided by instruments, may bridge the ghastly chasm of the infinite.

Distances beside which the immense line stretching from earth to sun is an invisible point are now measured by means of Roemer's special discovery as to the velocity of light.—Exchange.

The Stone of Infamy.

In many Italian cities there formerly existed what was called "pietra d'infamia," or a stone of infamy for the punishment of bankrupts. In Venice one stands near the Church of St. Mark, and in Verona and Florence they are near the old markets. On a day in carnival week the old time custom was to have all traders who had become bankrupt in the preceding twelve months led to the stone, and one by one each stood on its center to hear the reading of a report of his business failure and to endure the reproaches heaped on him by his creditors. At the end of a certain time each bankrupt was partly undressed, and three officers took hold of his shoulders and three others of his knees and, raising him as high as they could, bumped him on the stone deliberately twelve times "in honor of the twelve apostles," the creditors crowding like cocks while the bumping proceeded.

Full Information.

In the smoking room of an east-bound Pullman, the other evening, there were two men—one of them grumpy, the other one receptive. After smoking two indifferent cigars the latter said to the former:

"How far are you going?"

"Buffalo," acknowledged the other one, taken off his guard.

"Is that so? Well, Buffalo is a great town. I have a cousin living there, and I've been there myself several times. The last time was twelve years ago and over. What are you going to do in Buffalo?"

"Change cars"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Willing.

Outside one of the recruiting depots in an English town a sergeant saw a smart young milkman and, thinking to get a fresh recruit, said, "Young man, would you like to serve the king?"

ORIGIN OF A NOTED PHRASE.

"I'd Never Allow the Constitution to Come Between Friends."

In one session of the legislature the New York city Democratic representatives were split into two camps, and there were two rivals for leadership. One of these was a thoroughly good hearted, happy-go-lucky person who was afterward for several years in congress. He had been a local magistrate and was called Judge. He was always willing to vote for any other member's bill himself, and he regarded it as narrow minded for any one to oppose one of his bills, especially if the opposition was upon the ground that it was unconstitutional.

On one occasion he had a bill to appropriate money with obvious impropriety for the relief of some miscreant whom he styled "one of the honest yeomanry of the state." When I explained to him that it was clearly unconstitutional he answered, "My friend, the constitution don't touch little things like that," and then added, with an ingratiating smile, "Anyhow, I'd never allow the constitution to come between friends."

At the time I was looking over the proofs of Mr. Bryce's "American Commonwealth," and I told him the incident. He put it into the first edition of the "Commonwealth." Whether it is in the last edition or not I cannot say.—From "Theodore Roosevelt—An Autobiography."

FATHER OF PSYCHOLOGY.

Theory of Dr. David Hartley, the Famous English Philosopher.

The first attempt to explain psychological phenomena on physiological principles was made by Dr. David Hartley, the English philosopher, who was born in the year 1705. In his great work, "Observations on Man—His Frame, His Duty and His Expectations," published in 1749 after patient investigation covering sixteen years, he elaborated his epochal theory.

By the development of his law of association and chiefly by the law of transference he accounted for all the phenomena of the mental constitution. According to him, the white medullary substance of the brain, spinal marrow and the nerves proceeding from them, is the immediate instrument of sensation and motion. When a sensation has been frequently experienced it acquires a tendency to repeat itself spontaneously.

Ideas are but these repetitions or relics of sensation and in their turn recall other ideas. Thus the sight of an apple recalls an idea of its taste, and this recalls other associated ideas. In this way Hartley accounts for all human emotions.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Goldsmith's Actor.

Lord Nugent was one evening very eloquent to Goldsmith in praise of M. in bad actors. "But, my lord," said Goldsmith, "you must allow he treads the stage very ill—he waddles." "Waddles?" said Lord Nugent. "Yes, he waddles like a goose. Why, you know we call him Goose M. Well, and then you know, when he endeavors to express strong passion he bellows."

"Bellows?" said Lord Nugent. "To be sure he does—bellows like a bull. Why, we call him Bull M. Well, then," continued Goldsmith, pursuing his triumph, "his voice breaks, and he croaks."

"Croaks?" said Lord Nugent.

"Why, the fellow croaks like a frog. We call him Frog M."

"But M. is a good actor."

"Why, yes," said Goldsmith, "barring the goose and the bull and the frog and a few other things I could mention, and not wishing to speak ill of my neighbors, I will allow M. is a good actor."—"Memoirs of the Earl of Nugent."

Sundials.

A sundial consists of two parts, the style or gnomon, usually the edge of a plate of metal, made parallel to the earth's axis, and pointing toward the pole, and the dial plane, which may be of any hard substance and on which are marked the directions of the shadow for the several hours of the day, their halves, quarters, etc.

Dials are given different names according to the positions which they are constructed to occupy. The dial is called a horizontal dial when the dial plane is on the plane of the horizon; a vertical dial when perpendicular to that plane. A dial whose plane is parallel to the equator is called an equinoctial dial. There are also north dials, south dials, east dials, west dials, polar dials, declining dials, etc.—Chicago Tribune.

Bright Boy.

Holding up a globe before a bright little boy in school the teacher asked what country is opposite to us on the globe. "I don't know, ma'am," was the reply. "Well, now," pursued the teacher, "if I were to bore a hole through the earth and you were to go in at this end where would you come out?" "Out of the hole," replied the pupil, with an air of triumph.—New York Globe.

LOST IN A BIG CITY

In New York Thousands of Persons Vanish Every Year.

MYSTERY OF THE MISSING.

What May Be the Fate of the Many
the Police Fail to Find and Whose Dead Bodies Do Not Arrive at the Morgue is an Unsolvable Enigma.

More than 4,500 persons are reported to be missing in New York every year and about 3,500 are reported as deceased in the city, while the remainder are visitors.

The New Yorkers who vanish from their homes are reported to the police stations in the local precincts, and those cases are handled by the precinct authorities. But the reports of missing visitors, regardless of where made originally, ultimately go to the bureau of missing persons at police headquarters.

Information from official sources
shows that minors constitute approximately two-thirds of the New York residents stated to be missing annually. The remaining one-third is composed chiefly of men.

It is estimated that more than one half of the 3,500 are located by the police, dead or alive, or return to their homes soon after disappearance, notification of the return being sent to the officials. Of the remainder it is estimated that at least one-half ultimately arrive back home in safety, but no notification of the fact is sent to the police.

This leaves about 850 persons per year who utterly vanish. What becomes of them is one of the mysteries of the metropolis. They disappear as though they were so many bubbles.
Some of them doubtless kill themselves or are killed, their bodies never being discovered. Some of them, it may be set down for certain, run away from their matrimonial mates. But what the fate is of the great mass of them no man can say.

Of the large number of minors who figure each year as missing, police officials state that the big majority are youths and girls between the ages of fifteen and twenty. They are often wage earners, disgruntled with conditions at home, either because they have to give what they consider too large a proportion of their wages to the family exchequer or because they think their parents too strict with them in the matter of pleasure seeking.

Of the 1,000 residents of other places
for whom the police are annually asked to look, a considerable percentage are men who have come to New York to find relaxation from the workaday grind in the gayeties of Broadway.
They get into the whirl of things rather more than they intended and are lost to their friends' view for a few days. Ultimately most of these wanderers in the fields of frivolity turn up all right, with a bit of headache, perhaps, and a determination not to seek relaxation quite so persistently on the next New York visit.

Other strangers to the city get separated from their friends in the subway or on the elevated or get lost in the streets, and then the police are asked to find the missing ones. Inmi-grants in transit from European countries to inland points in the United States frequently wander off from the parties to which they are attached
and have to be found through the medium of the police.

In the course of a year the police receive scores of letters from foreign countries inquiring about friends or relatives of the writers who were last heard from in New York. From Zau-zibar and from India, from Australia and from Egypt, from Europe, from South America, come letters of inquiry.

The proportion of these nonresidents of New York never to be heard of again as estimated by the police is about the same as in the case of New York citizens. That is, something more than one-half of the 1,000 are located by the police or return to their friends, the police being so notified. About one-half of the remainder finally reach their friends all right; it is estimated, the police not being notified. This leaves approximately 250 visitors to New York who vanish yearly without anything whatever being known of their fate. With the 850 New Yorkers who absolutely disappear, there is thus a total in round figures of 1,100 persons who every twelve months are lost to sight as utterly as though they had stopped behind a magic curtain.

The bureau of unidentified dead has made a collection of the marks put on clothing by all laundries in New York.
When a body is found which has no means of identification except through laundry marks, the marks are compared with those on file in the bureau.
If the victim's clothes prove to have been laundered in New York the laundry is visited, and from examination of its books it is usually possible to trace the identity of the dead person.

Names of tailors and of clothing
manufacturers also lead to many identifications. Tattoo marks have in several instances meant identification. A majority of the unidentified dead are found in the water. Most of them are doubtless suicides. Others of the unidentified cases are due to street car accidents, such as the case of sudden death in the street from natural causes.
Photographs are taken of all bodies
and prove of much aid in making identification. In occasional instances identification from photographs has resulted even after burial in potter's field.

STAND UP STRAIGHT.

Keep the Chest Wide Open and Avoid the Great White Plague.

The best way to avoid consumption is to stand up straight, according to the Bulletin of the American Medical association. The writer says:

"The first essential in the avoidance of tuberculosis of the lungs, or consumption, is to keep the lungs strong,
so that if the germs are breathed they can do no harm. One of the most important things in keeping the lungs strong is to keep the chest wide open
so that the lungs can be properly used.
If the body is drooped or stoops or if the shoulders are allowed to drag forward (round shoulders) or if the head is carried forward instead of well back over the shoulders the chest must be flattened, the breathing must be shallow, and the lungs, not being freely used, become weak.

"It is in this type of chest that tuberculosis usually begins. The consumptive is usually narrow chested, with drooped shoulders and with the head craned forward.

"While the development of a strong,
well formed chest is one of the most important factors in preventing tuberculosis, the same thing is to be desired, if the disease has once started. Not only should we live in the open, but we should stand up straight and learn to 'throw a big chest,' so that the lungs can grow strong and the fresh air be taken in.

"The runner, the singer or any one who is obliged to make sustained effort is taught to stand and sit with the chest high, so that the lungs can be used to the best advantage, and if every one would do the same thing there would be less tuberculosis because there would be fewer weak lungs."

ELECTRIFIED CELLULOID.

Pulling a Couple of Strips Between the Fingers Changes Them.

If you will take two thin lengths of celluloid, put them in contact and then suddenly and rapidly pull them between your fingers you will observe they both have become electrified—not only on their outside surfaces, where the friction of your fingers caused a negative electrification, but also on the inner surface of the celluloid.

The strange part about this is that one of the inner surfaces of the piece is positively charged and the other one is negatively charged. If one of them is slightly curved during the friction
the convex one will be positively charged and the concave sided one will be negatively charged.

It seems, therefore, to depend upon whether the surface is concave or exposed to produce negative or positive electricity. Even the most minute, imperceptible curvature is sufficient to give the expected result. It also is impossible to pull the strips of celluloid through the fingers without producing such strong electrification that one piece will support the other.

Even the vapor pressure of liquids is stronger at the convex surface than at the concave. If electrons are considered as particles of gas dissolved in solids—as they once were—or as negative electricity, there will be a greater tendency for the electrons to escape from the convex side, which therefore will be left positively charged. This also is in perfect accord with the latest researches upon electrons.

Interesting experiments can be made by following the above directions. Celluloid has peculiar properties for tests

Railway Trains in England.

I can prove in a moment by any traveler that our trains are infinitely more luxurious than the trains in England.
But still, and notwithstanding, I say
the English railway service is better.
Why? Because it's more human; it's more considerate. You aren't driven and argued to step lively and called at in loud, harsh voices and made to feel that you are being tolerated aboard something that was never made for you at all, but for the employees of the company. In England the trains are run for the people, not the people for the trains.—From Theodore Dreiser's
"A Traveler at Forty."

Worse Yet.

"He's a frightful bore, your baron.
Here he's been buzzing the whole evening long about Kant and Schopen-hauer."

"You have my sympathy. For my part I detest philosophical discussions."

"Philosophical discussions, indeed!
Kant and Schopenhauer are the names of the baron's two horses."—New York Post.

Breaking Him In.

"Do you want me to misrepresent
the goods and say they are fine when they are not?" asked the new salesman.

"Yes," sternly, answered the unscrupulous dealer. "Always remember that our assets are your liabilities."

A Complicated Case.

"Growth" always looks worried.
Why doesn't he think of something pleasant?"

"Well, he has himself kind of whipsawed. The only thing he thinks of with pleasure is money. And he can't think of money without worrying."

OLD FOLKS FIND NEW REMEDY RELIEVES ALL KIDNEY AND BLADDER MISERIES

Drives Rheumatic Pains Away,
Relieves Backache and Bladder Disorders After A Few Doses Are Taken

Sleep disturbing bladder weaknesses, backache, rheumatism, and the many other kindred ailments which so commonly come with declining years, need no longer be a source of dread and misery to those who are past the middle age of life.

The new discovery, Croxone, overcomes all such disorders because it removes the very cause of the trouble. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the little filtering glands and cells, and gives the kidneys new strength to do their work properly. It neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid substances that lodge in the joints
and muscles, causing rheumatism;
and makes the kidneys filter and sift
out all the poisonous waste matter

from the blood and drive it out of the system.

It matters not how old you are or how long you have suffered, Croxone is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. You will find it different from all other remedies.
There is nothing else on earth like
it. It starts to work immediately and more than a few doses are seldom required to relieve even the most chronic, obstinate cases.

It is the most wonderful remedy ever made for restoring the lifeless organs to health and strength and ridding the system of every particle of uric acid, and you can take it with the utmost confidence that nothing on earth will so quickly cure such conditions.

You can obtain an original package of Croxone at trifling cost from any first-class druggist. All druggists are authorized to personally return
the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case.
