COMMENCEMENT WEEK NEWS

Class of Eighteen Members Graduate From Wayne Schools Next Week - Class Play Given Tuesday Evening

The commencement exercises of the local high school will take place next week.

The Baccalaureate services will be held on Sunday evening at the Baptist church. Rev. C. L. Meyers of the M. E. church will preach the sermon. The churches unite in a union service. Special music will be furnished by the choir of the Baptist church.

The class play will be given at the opera house on Tuesday evening, May 19. "The Touchdown" is a play especially adapted to high school players and there is no question that it will be well given by the class of 1914. Tickets will be on sale at Shulteis pharmacy Monday.

Commencement occurs on Friday evening, May 22 at the M. E. church. Chancellor Fulmer of Nebraska Wesleyan University will give the address.

Special music will be furnished for both the class play and commencement. The following will be graduated:

Ralph Bohnert	Hattie Crockett
Blodwin Davis	Olive Griffith
Nelle Gustafson	Clara Liedtke
John Lower	Hays Main
Wm. McEachen	Henrietta Moler
Ferne Oman	Gene Payne
Frank Roe	Irven Sala
Earl Schroer	Irwin Sears
Glady Wood	Ensign Young

More Trouble at Hoskins

The fact that Hoskins is enjoying (?) a short dry spell while they settle their differences of opinion on the question of saloon, does not seem to entirely end trouble there. Last Saturday Ex-Marshall E. E. Dana was at the depot and as the train was pulling out the express agent called him to take a package which had evidently just been found to belong at Hoskins. Turning from the train after receiving the package from the train, Robert Blair handed him another in the form of a stunning blow between the eyes which nearly floored Dana. When he recovered a bit he saw that there were several of Blair's friends present, and he armed himself with the depot stove pcker and dispersed them.

Sheriff Porter went to Hoskins and brought Blair before the county judge who assessed a fine of $5 and costs for the assault, and made him give bond for appearance to answer to the charge of carrying concealed weapons May 19th.

Mr. Dana certainly appeared as though nothing had in manner checked the force of the blow but his head.

Some Late News Notes

The Mexican situation continues much the same. The constitutionalists are pressing the Federal forces hard. Tampico is trying hard to resist an attack. Huerta is said to be concentrating forces at the city of Mexico for a final stand. Zapata from the south is threatening the hold of the Federal chief, but says he will not enter the city until after Villa comes in from the north.

The mediators are coming from Mexico to meet in Canada with the representatives of other countries and the United States to try to solve the Mexican problem. The President is more confident of a peaceful solution as the days pass.

A Factory Prospect

There is prospect that Wayne may have another incubator factory. L. N. Porter was here this week investigating the opportunity and showing a machine which he has perfected. Mr. Porter will be remembered by many here as being interested in the X-Ray incubator when it was in its swaddling clothes. For the hen he now has, he claims numerous advantages, and shows them to be real points of merit for an artificial hen.

Drs. Green and Heckert are planning to go to Lincoln next week and attend the annual meeting of the Nebraska dentists. Mrs. Heckert is planning to accompany her husband, and go on to Hastings for a visit with relatives there.

How about your subscription.

Grant S. Mears, Republican

Grant S. Mears, for several terms sheriff of this county has filed as a republican for the nomination as representative. Grant is widely known in the county and has many friends and was reported successful in the conduct of the office he held.

Elsewhere in this issue is an open letter to candidates for representative, written before any filing for the office was known, and as the first to file Mr. Mears may perhaps be the first to answer the question asked, and when candidates on the bullmoose and democratic tickets get their hats in the ring the people will want to know where they may be found. Then there are other questions on which the people will want to know the views of the candidates before naming one, and another letter is promised from the same source. It is but right for the people to know the views of a candidate who is asking to represent them before they name one, and the Democrat stands ready to help make this a campaign of education.

Nothing Looks as Good as Wayne

That is the verdict of Gus Bohnert, who with his wife returned today from a six weeks trip through the west, where they visited relatives and viewed the sights—and being out of business here, kept an eye open for a good location. Mr. Bohnert says that he has no money to pay for blue sky—and as for hotel business there the rents are too high and the crop of tourists too uncertain—and that is what much of the country appears to depend upon, and they never miss a chance to pluck them. Their journey took them through Texas, and on into California, then north to the Canadian border and east home. They visited in California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana, besides passing through several other states, and it is our opinion that this part of Nebraska will see them again settle for a home—and why not Wayne, the banner town of them all?

Tennis Racket

Great interest is being shown in tennis this year, not only in Wayne but throughout the state and inquiries are already coming in, with regard to the state tournament here.

The local committee has practically decided on August 3rd or 4th as the opening date. The courts are in elegant shape and each pleasant evening finds them pretty well occupied. The membership is growing every week and it looks as if Wayne would have sixty tennis players this season.

School Exhibit

The schools will hold an exhibit in the school building next week on Tuesday and Wednesday. Work done in all the departments in the past year will be on exhibition and every one is invited and urged to come and see the exhibit. Manual Training, Domestic Science, Art, Drawing, Craft Composition, Penmanship, Weaving, etc., will all be shown and ought to interest every patron. The exhibit will be placed in the southwest room of the basement and teachers will be in charge. The primary children will entertain the visitors with music.

Miller-Collins

At Omaha, Monday, May 11, 1914, Mr. Walter Miller of this place and Miss Jessie Collins of Panama, Iowa, were united in marriage, and arrived here Tuesday where they will make their home. Mr. Miller is known here as a dependable, industrious young man, and he holds the responsible position of street commissioner. The bride will find a hearty welcome to Wayne, and will share with her husband the hearty good wishes of his many friends.

"The Best For Wayne"

This appears to be the sentiment of Mr. Dean, proprietor of the Central meat market, for it is noted that he is putting on the block a fine bunch of cornfed steers he purchased from the Andrew Stamm feed lot. They are a bunch of beauties—averaging in weight over 1100 each. In fact Mr. Dean says that he wants the best of meat for his patrons.—1

Right-of-Way Dispute Up

Because of the little tilt here between the railroad and Ted Perry over the right of possession the dispute now on in Congress will be of interest. Senator Norris has introduced a bill to settle some of the land in dispute. The supreme court has recently decided in favor of the settlers retaining land in controversy where they own adjoining land from which this land was set apart for right-of-way but not actually used for railroad purposes. The rights were granted from 100 to 200 and in some instances 400 feet wide and for years abandoned by the railroads because they had no use for it as a right-of-way, but since it has become valuable they have tried to reclaim it, and the court has held against the company. The bill is introduced to really confirm the court's action in some of the other cases that are on a little different footing. A Washington dispatch says of the act:

Should the land be forfeited as provided no further action would be necessary to give the claimants along the line possession of the tracts in dispute. They received their patents from the United States, but the railroad has since contested that part of the patented land lying within the right-of-way. The restoration of the right-of-way to the public domain would automatically give it to the claimants who now have patent to it, which the railroad has refused to recognize. The forfeiture involves land worth millions of dollars in the four states. Large buildings and many streets in Nebraska towns are now located upon land in dispute.

That Souvenir Edition

In reply to numerous questions as to the progress being made by the Wayne papers with the work of compiling matter for a special edition showing as best can be done on paper the resources of Wayne county, we are glad to say that the work is well under way and the first forms will probably go to press this week, and the work of printing will be pushed as fast as possible until completed, which will require several weeks. We have not been able to canvas the farm territory as thoroughly as we would have liked to have done, and as we do not wish any to feel slighted, if they feel that their farm or business should have a place to make the work complete they should at once write to the Democrat or Herald, or call by telephone.

The matter at present gathered will form a magazine of about 72 pages, and will require about two and a half tons of paper to complete the edition. We publish this notice so that all who have not been seen may make a noise in time to have a place in this historical and pictorial review of the county.

We confidently believe that those who are represented in its pages will be far better pleased than those who have neglected the opportunity.

The Railroad Meeting

Railroad men from all along the main line of the "Omaha" and branches and the yard and shop force at Sioux City, nine coach loads in all, were at Omaha Sunday in attendance at a general meeting of the employees of the company to discuss many questions of interest to the company and to the employees. Safety, efficiency and economy were the main themes discussed. There were reports of interest to the various departments of the work in this line for the past year.

In the matter of safety and heeding the safety signals this road was better than its best competitor by odds. The percentage short of perfect here was less than three tenths of one per cent while the next best road in this line—a Pennsylvania line was a full one per cent short of perfect. T. W. Moran and a number of others from Wayne went in on the special which came down the branch at 7:30.

Rebel Troops Take Tampico

The latest news from Mexico is that the Federal troops evacuated Tampico Wednesday after a stubborn resistance. The Constitutionalists are much encouraged and are hoping to find little fighting until they reach the capital. Nearly all the foreigners left the city at the opening fight or before.

Social Notes

On last Saturday evening in the Library and Science hall the juniors tendered a delightful reception to the class of 1914. The invitations included the faculty and their wives in addition to members of the senior class. At 6:30 the guests assembled and were ushered into the east alcove of the library, which had been converted into a beautiful banquet hall. The decorations were simple but effective, purple and gold, the senior class colors, being in evidence. The favors were carnations and roses. The place cards were hand painted by members of the advanced class in drawing. Music was furnished by the Normal orchestra, and during the evening delightful vocal selections were rendered by Miss Marjorie Kohl and Miss Ina Hughes. The serving was in charge of the Freshman class, and the service was prompt and efficient.

Mr. Ray Hickman, president of the Junior class, made a capital toastmaster, and was most happy in his introduction of the numerous speakers that appeared upon the program. At the end of the first course on the menu card the intellectual feast was appropriately opened when the toastmaster introduced Miss Louise McGraw, a junior, who made good use of the subject, "Who's Who". She was followed by Martha J. Woosley, responding wittily and in neat verse to the toast "Go in Some". After prefacing his remarks with some witticisms, Dean Hahn had a message suggested by "The Inside of the Cup." The subject "Juniors vs. Seniors" furnished for R. B. Berrie an opportunity to make some good-natured comparisons between the two rival classes, and being a junior, at the close of his talk the advantage seemed to be with the first named class.

"A Weaver of Dreams" by John Rockwell, a senior, and "Cat Tails and Other Tales" by Eugenia Madson, a junior, were each ably presented and the goodnatured thrusts of the former and the happy rejoinder of the latter were greatly enjoyed by the listeners. Wm. J. Van Camp, senior class president, made a very witty response to the toast "The Crisis", and Miss Sara J. Killen, junior adviser, spoke feelingly of the work and loyalty of the juniors during the past year. "The Spectator" was the subject assigned to W. D. Redmond, and President Conn was called upon to close the program with "A Last Word", a program unusually bright with thought and sparkling with wit.

It was a jolly social crowd of young folks who visited the home of Semon Goemann Saturday evening to attend the party given to the Juniors of the Evangelical Lutheran Sunday school by Miss Goeman, who is one of the Juniors. Refreshments were served and all present report one of the best of times.

The Monday club met with Mrs. T. W. Moran. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Hahn; vice president, Mrs. Hess; secretary, Mrs. Kiplinger; treasurer, Mrs. Moran; Program committee, Mesdames Beebe, Chace and Heckert.

There is to be a special meeting of the Eastern Star Monday evening the 18th, at which time the delegates from the state meeting will make report of the session of the grand lodge at Lincoln this week. Also installation of officers.

Mrs. Chas. Craven will be hostess at a dinner party given by the U. D. club May 23. This will be the last meeting as the club has finished its work and will adjourn for the summer. The evening will be spent socially.

The Eastern Star will have installation of officers Monday evening. Mrs. A. A. Welch is to be the installing officer, and the gentlemen of the order will serve refreshments.

The Bridge W.ist club met with Miss Helen McNeal Wednesday evening at the F. L. Neely home. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

The Ladies Aid society of the Presbyterian church met with Mrs. F. H. Jones Wednesday afternoon. The afternoon was spent in sewing.

The Ladies Missionary society of the Presbyterian church meets with Mrs. Kiplinger.

The P. E. O. will meet with Miss Reba Nangle next Monday evening at 7:30.

W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. Wm. House Friday at 2:30 p. m.

The last number of the Normal lecture and entertainment course for the second semester closed on Thursday evening with a concert given by the Normal Male Quartet, assisted by Ensign Young, pianist, and an illustrated lecture by Professor Keckley.

In addition to the student body, a large number from town were present, and the opinion has been very generally expressed that it was the best number of the year. The quartet, always popular with a Wayne audience, appeared at its best, and the black faced specialties introduced in the second part of the program made a great hit with the audience.

Professor Keckley gave a most interesting and instructive lecture on Yellowstone Park, the pictures thrown upon the screen being from photographs he had secured in his trip through the park several years ago.

Those present found it an evening of much pleasure and profit and the entertainers on this occasion have been requested to repeat the program during the summer session.

The "Grand Leader", a new business house at Wayne opened on schedule time Tuesday, and the stock makes a most favorable impression. Attention is called to their advertisement.

State Normal Notes

Architect J. H. Craddock of Omaha and Contractor J. P. Riddle of Creighton were in Wayne Friday in the interest of the new administration building.

Lois Patrick, at present teaching in the Pender schools, attended the senior-junior banquet Saturday evening. Miss Patrick will attend the summer session at the normal and take work leading to the life certificate.

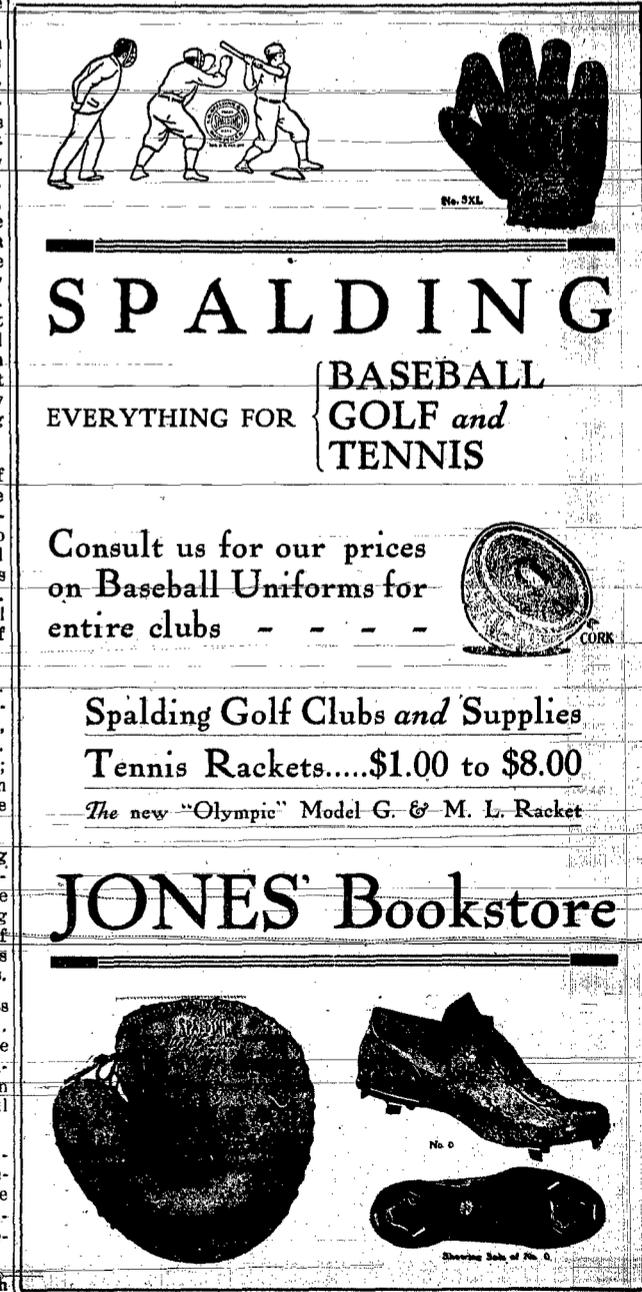

The kindergarten and primary department of the training school will be transferred to the ward school building during the summer. Miss Ryan, a teacher in the Omaha public schools, will have charge of the primary work during the absence of Miss Stocking.

Dr. J. A. Beattie of Lincoln, who will deliver the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating classes of the normal school this year, is being considered for the presidency of the Kearney state normal school.

The following members of the graduating classes have recently received notice of election to positions in school work: Ruth L. Pearson, grammar department, Souix City, Iowa; Alwine H. Meyer, German and Latin, Wayne high school; Minnie V. Bergman, fifth and sixth grades, Plainview; Harry D. Gildersleeve, science and mathematics, Atkinson; Margaret C. Schemel, principal of high school, Osmond.

At a meeting held in Lincoln last Monday the normal board of education decided to meet at Wayne on Tuesday, June 3, and set this date for the laying of the corner stone of the new administration building. All members of the board expect to be present at this meeting and the exercises will be in charge of the officers of the Grand Lodge, A. F. & A. M. It is the intention of President Conn to make this a notable occasion in the history of the school. It will be given the widest publicity to the end that every section of northeast Nebraska may be represented in the attendance.

Why Should We Carry Accident and Health Insurance?

Because no one is immune from accident or sickness. They are no respectors of person. Accidents of the most serious character oftentimes arise from the most trivial causes, causes that cannot be averted. They lurk in every foot-step. Our 20th century improvements have made accidents more numerous and naturally accident and health insurance is becoming popular and a necessity. Sometimes it is inevitable and the only time to provide against sickness is when we are in good health.

If you wish to see the best in accident and health insurance, something to prevent you from stopping your income when most in need see

War Department Says All Militiamen Must Take Treatment.

SACKETT FILES FOR GOVERNOR

Illian Will Be Candidate in Ninth Senatorial District—Reports of Water Power Expenditures Filed—Railroad Values to Be Left Same.

Lincoln, May 12.—While the stir around national guard headquarters which prevailed during the first war scare has subsided, still preparations have been going on during the time, and should orders come for mobilization of the guard General Hall will have things in such shape that the troops can be brought together in a very short time.

Orders came to headquarters from the war department that all members of the guard who had not been vaccinated for typhoid must take the treatment, or they could not be received when the final examination takes place. Orders will be sent out by General Hall to all companies immediately to have all members take the typhoid treatment.

Anti-Suffragists Object.

Omaha woman anti-suffragists are protesting the form in which the suffrage amendment will go upon the ballot and have written Secretary of State Wait asking him to do something to relieve the situation, and asking for a hearing on May 12. The letter of protest is signed by Mrs. E. P. Peck, state chairman; Mrs. John L. Webster, Mrs. J. T. Cowen, Mrs. F. N. Connor and others. While the time has passed in which a hearing can be had, the secretary of state will accommodate the women and will listen to them. They object to the wording on the ballot and say it is misleading.

Illian for Senate.

William H. Illian of Albion has filed with the secretary of state as a candidate for the Republican nomination for the state senate in the Ninth senatorial district, composed of the counties of Boone, Antelope and Nance. This is the district represented by Senator J. H. Kemp in the last session, who will probably file for the Republican nomination for governor.

Harry E. Sackett of Beatrice filed as a candidate for the Progressive nomination for governor and J. C. Harpham of Lincoln for railway commissioner.

Water Power Expenditures.

Reports of expenses incurred by the different water power companies filed with the secretary of the irrigation board show that Charles P. Ross expended during the past month $356 on the Elkhorn-Platte proposition. The Nebraska Power company spent $331 on the Loup; the Kirk filing of the Baker company on the Niobrara shows an expenditure of $917, while the Buhrman filing by the same company shows $107. John Hoag reports an expenditure of $60.

Eberly Elected Colonel.

At the election held for the selection of a commander of the Fourth and Fifth regiments and a lieutenant colonel for the Fourth, opening of the ballots disclosed that Colonel G. A. Eberly of Stanton was re-elected colonel of the Fourth regiment and W. E. Baehr, of Omaha lieutenant colonel of the same regiment. Colonel A. H. Hollingsworth was re-elected commander of the Fifth regiment.

Lincoln's New Company.

Lincoln's new company for the new Sixth regiment was mustered in by Lieutenant H. F. Kraemer at the national guard armory. The company will be known as company M. The officers are: W. O. Foreman, captain; C. K. Paine, first lieutenant, and T. M. Shepherd, second lieutenant. About half of the men were university students who had enlisted during the war scare.

Sanitary Food Displays.

Food Commissioner Harman is arranging for a manufacturers' and provision display at Agricultural hall during the state fair, which will tend to assist greatly in the education of the people along sanitary lines. An ideal dining hall will be run in connection, in which the best methods in conducting such places will be shown.

Railroad Values to Be Left Same.

Valuation of Nebraska railroads this year will remain the same as found by the state board of assessment in 1913. The only difference will be an additional mileage made to the Union Pacific, made by taking over the Hastings and Northwestern line and some other additions.

New Serum Company.

The Corn States Serum company, with a capital of $12,000, has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state, with headquarters in South Omaha. The incorporators are James Allen, Elmer S. Redick and Guy R. Tinkham.

Howard Completes Filing for Congress.

Following his action in forwarding to County Treasurer Ure of Douglas county the regular filing fee, State Auditor made his filing with the secretary of state for the Republican nomination for congress in the Second district.

State Bank of Sunol.

The Farmers' State bank of Sunol has been granted a charter by the state banking board. The capital stock is $10,500. J. W. Rogers, president; W. G. Melton, vice president, and C. W. Smith, cashier, are the officers.

ALLEGED FRAUD IN LAND DEAL

Johnsons Start Suit to Regain Title to Land Lost.

Omaha, May 12.—The first lawsuit growing out of the operations of the Lutheran Colonization company, an Omaha organization, which had for its aim the establishment of a "back to the land" colony composed of churchgoers, in Tehama county, California, has been filed in the district court. It was to join this company that Rev. John E. Hummon resigned the pastorate of Kountze Memorial church, only to leave later when many colonists became dissatisfied.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Johnson of Benson allege that their experience with the Lutheran Colonization company cost them their title to $32,500 worth of land in Nebraska and $7,000 expenses.

The Trowbridge-Bolster company, which, they allege, is identical with the Lutheran Colonization company, is made defendant in the suit. The court is asked to set aside deeds of the property which the plaintiffs executed to the Lutheran Colonization company and to award them damages.

False representations were made to induce Mr. and Mrs. Johnson to trade their property for 200 acres of California land, they allege.

CROP REPORT OPTIMISTIC

Burlington Review of Week Sums Up Conditions as Favorable.

Omaha, May 12.—In its soil and crop report the Burlington is even more optimistic than one week ago. Relative to winter wheat, in summing up, the report says:

"Conditions in Nebraska during all of last week were favorable. The low temperature and the abundance of moisture kept the wheat stooling and thickening on the ground. The ground is now well covered and the danger from winds blowing the dirt away from the roots of the growing grain has passed. The possible lack of moisture later in the season is all that can prevent an enormous crop."

Notwithstanding the low temperature of last week, corn planting progressed rapidly, according to the Burlington's report.

The weekly report of the Northwestern indicates 100 per cent conditions on wheat all over its territory and plenty of moisture. Corn planting is being hurried along and the alfalfa fields are about ready to be cut for the first time.

Woodmen to Have Special to Toledo.

Omaha, May 12.—Nebraska Modern Woodmen of America have designated the Northwestern as the official route over which they will travel when they go to the head camp meeting to be held at Toledo, June 16. As the rate question is expected to be brought up at the head camp meeting of the Woodmen, Nebraska will send a large delegation. From Chicago the delegates will go over the Lake Shore. There will be enough of them so that they will have a special train.

Man Fatally Hurt in Auto Upset.

Seward, Neb., May 12.—Clyde Scott of Ulisses had his back broken in an automobile upset near Ulisses. Mr. Scott, in company with John Smith and son, was giving a new car a workout, when the driver lost control of it and ran into an embankment, causing the car to upset. Mr. Smith had two ribs broken and was badly bruised. Young Smith was unconscious from the shock for a few minutes, but was not seriously hurt. Mr. Scott cannot recover.

Rural Betterment Workers to Meet.

A rural betterment institute, intended to meet a want long felt by country ministers and other men and women workers interested in rural problems, will be held on the state university farm campus at Lincoln, June 11 to 17. Arrangements have been made for it by a committee of the university faculty, in co-operation with the university pastors and the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian association secretaries of the school.

Kozial Is Convicted.

Columbus, Neb., May 11.—After being deadlocked for almost eight hours, the jury in the Peter Kozial case returned a verdict of manslaughter. For a time a disagreement was probable, as the jury stood 6 to 6, and the verdict contained a recommendation for leniency. Last Christmas Peter Mostek was killed at Tarnov, being struck with a blunt instrument, and Kozial was charged with the crime.

Injured When Motor Car Upsets.

Beatrice, Neb., May 12.—Louis Stine and his son, Isadore, of Lincoln were severely injured near Cortland when their automobile upset. Mr. Stine was taken back to Lincoln and placed in a hospital and his son was brought to Beatrice. Mr. Stine, his four children and their chauffeur were en route to Beatrice. As the driver turned out to pass a buggy the car struck a root, turning completely over.

Wheat Goes to Market.

Stella, Neb., May 11.—John Lampe, a German farmer, living west of Howe, marketed 4,000 bushels of wheat here. Most of the old wheat holdings have been cleaned out, preparatory to housing. Wheat farmers believe this will be one of the largest crops harvested in this part of the country.

Suit Against Road.

Omaha, May 12.—Suit has been filed by the United States against the Rock Island railroad, alleging that the railroad has violated the safety appliance law, in requiring two operators to work for a period of thirteen, fourteen and eighteen hours in twenty-four.

Give this machine the acid test of comparison at these three vital points:

Price — Equipment — Reputation

The Two-Sixty Standard Indian (illustrated) represents a motorcycle value decidedly in advance of the field today. A close examination will conclusively prove the 1914 Indian with 38 Betterments to be—price for price—quality for quality—an achievement in worth which successfully carries it beyond competition.

1914 Indian Motorcycle

equipment has been a true sensation. The Indian has nailed its flag of leadership higher up on the pole than ever before by evolving Motorcycle Electricity and putting it into efficient operation. All standard models are equipped with electric head light, electric tail light, two sets high amperage storage batteries, electric signal and Corbin-Brown rear-drive speedometer.

The Indian reputation behind every Indian machine is the greatest guarantee of reliability and sound construction that any motorcycle purchaser could have. The Indian has developed more genuine mechanical devices for the advancement of the motorcycle—including the famous, incomparable comfort feature, the Cradle Spring Frame—than all other makes combined.

Eddie, son of C. W. Reynolds and wife received a severe fall Monday at the court house. Just how it happened is not known. He was at the court house with his little cousin, Mary Ley, and asked his father for permission to go to the Ley home for an hour before time to go home. This was given and the children went into the lobby of the building and in trying to get a drink from the fountain he fell and struck his forehead on the tile floor. His father heard the fall, but hearing no cry did not think anyone hurt and soon saw the little folks crossing to the Ley home, and dismissed the matter from his thought. At the Ley house he said he did not want to play, and it was noticed by the girl that he did not look or act well. Soon he asked if it was time to go home as he said he could not see the clock, and soon started for home and arrived there quite ill, vomiting and in much pain. He said he had fallen and struck his head, and by that time his forehead was badly swollen and discolored. He was put to bed and the next day was much better, but confined to the bed with a pair of black eyes. He is now recovering nicely.

Council Proceedings

When the council met Tuesday evening and the roll was called all were in their places. The clerk read the story of the last session and it was o. k'd.

The report of the annual meeting of the fire department was read and approved. It told that there are 41 members in good standing, and the list of officers elected was as given last week in this paper.

Licenses were granted to the following for plumbing and repair work and electric wiring, each taking out two permits: H. B. Craven, Carhart Hardware Co., W. A. Hiscox; and A. G. Grunemeyer for plumbing and repair work only.

The report of the city engineer as to the estimated cost of the improvements to the water system was accepted by unanimous vote, but no record of what the report was came to the printer.

Ordinance N. 223, published elsewhere, treating of salaries, was pushed to its final passage by suspending the rules and giving it the required readings.

The following claims were examined and allowed and warrants ordered drawn of the General fund: H. W. Barnett, Park fire, $2.00. Bert McClary, meter, $17.00. Frank Elming, labor, $3.25. Wayne Herald, printing, $13.00. Nebraska Telephone Co., phone, $6.90.

A. B. Carhart was at Sioux City last Thursday participating in the festivities of the Schriners. Senator Phil Kohl was also a visitor at the city at that time and for like purposes.

There was a family reunion of the Theobald brothers Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. The three brothers from Lincoln came Saturday evening as a sort of a surprise party to S. R. and Horace at this place. There were J. T. and wife, Clem, wife and daughter and Rev. W. W. of the visitors, making five with the two here—all together for the first time in 16 years. The three days were all too short, but the visitors could not tarry longer, so closed the visit Wednesday morning.

An Open Letter

To Prospective Legislative Candidates:—Now that you are no longer burdened with the herculean task of choosing a United States senator and not beholden to any railway company for transportation, the ten dollars per day you are paid by the people should inspire you in their interest. In view of the destructive industrial civil wars at Homestead, in West Virginia, Illinois, Michigan and Colorado would it not be wise to make it a felony for a corporation to arm men to guard their property, with orders to shoot to kill anyone interfering therewith?

The constitution of the United States or of any state grants no such right. All corporations operate under a charter in which their rights, privileges and duties are enumerated. No charter ever granted by any state contained the right to bear arms or to arm guards in defense of their property. The right of the individual to bear arms is in the "Bill of Rights" and no one questions his right to defend his life, family or property with a gun; but it does not say that a corporation may employ thugs and murderers to shoot to kill anybody, much less innocent women and children. Make the act of arming guards personal, with a heavy prison penalty, and provide further that the offending corporation shall have no redress upon the county for loss of their property.

With such a statute in Nebraska, the corporations having friction with its employees, instead of arming guards with orders to shoot would notify the sheriff that its property was in danger of destruction. If the sheriff and his deputies were unable to maintain the peace the militia can be called.

In all of these industrial wars the corporations were the first to resort to arms. If the community must stand the loss of property destroyed by a mob—let the community furnish the guards.

Admiral Fletcher appointed civilians to govern Vera-Cruze. General Funston said if I am to be responsible for the civil government of this city, I prefer to choose my own assistants, and appointed military men. Where do you stand on this proposition?

Gleaned From Democrat's Exchanges

Randolph is planning to support a strong ball team this season.

Hartington will celebrate the fourth this year. So does Wayne.

At Hartington the citizens and old soldiers are planning to observe memorial day.

Wynot is soon to have an electric light plant making red juice for the city and citizens.

Rev. Roy A. Richmond of Norfolk has accepted the pastorate of the Methodist church at Brunswick.

One of the public improvements for which Hartington is raising money is a bandstand on the campus.

At Niobrara the Tribune gave a dance and supper to its paid-up subscribers—a very select party beyond a doubt—for there would be no bad people on such a list. But it looks rather extravagant.

Fred D. Hunker of West Point, who has been traveling Europe seeing how they live across the pond, is evidently planning to be comfortable here, and has started to erect a $12,000 residence at home.

The commercial club wants a moving picture attachment to the Nebraska exhibit at the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco next year. Do you think it can be done? Things move too swift in this state for the movies camera to catch it all, but it might be well to try.

Over at Dixon James O'Nally attempted suicide last week, and the cause assigned was that he was to be sent to Ponca to live. We have heard some bad stories about the county capital of Dixon county, but never dreamed it quite so bad. Failing in his attempt he was taken to Ponca just the same, and is even threatened with a sojourn at Lincoln.

In Cedar County this fall they will vote on the question of township organizations if the petitions being circulated shall have signers enough to put the question before the people. There is an opinion among many that better results in road work will be accomplished by organizing by townships. Sure it is that every county should so organize as to secure the best that is to be had for their money for the roads.

A series of Good Roads-Good Fellowship runs will be made by Omaha and South Omaha men this summer, beginning next month. The purpose of the runs is to stimulate interest in good roads throughout the state and to create a friendly feeling among all people of the state in that they will work for the development of the state. The first run will be given the first week in June, probably in the southern part of the state.

One of the good things connected with our state school for the farmers is a course of instruction in the proper manner of running of all engines and motors. In these days when so much farm work is done with the aid of machinery propelled by engine or motor it is well to know how to properly run the machines. This knowledge adds to the efficiency of the machine from one-fourth to nothing. If a person is going to run a machine that costs $2,000 he is foolish not to learn to know the machine and how to properly run it before he spoils it through ignorance.

At Blair the base ball craze has broken out in school to such an extent that parents who are paying tuition for a son's schooling make complaint that they do not want their time taken from school to learn to play ball. That is the right view for the parent to take, but we will bet that the lad did not have to be coaxed much to get into the game. Facts are, our schools do not have enough of interest in them for some boys, and we believe that a thorough course of manual training would add to the interest of the pupils and give them opportunity to work off some of the pent up physical energy with which every healthy lad is endowed.

Wayne to Entertain Lutheran Synod

Beginning today, the Northern Conference of the German Nebraska district of the Evangelical Lutheran general meeting will hold a four day annual meeting at this place. A little of South Dakota is embraced in the district, and it is expected that there will be an attendance of about twenty ministers besides numerous lay members. Rev. Rudolph Moehring, the local pastor has furnished us with a list of the ministers who are members and an outline of the services of especial interest to the people with a devotional service each morning beginning at 8:30 which will be followed by a business session lasting about two hours. The following is a list of the officers and members who are expected here: Rev. Rabe, Boomfield, Nebraska, president; Rev. Bessler, Spencer, S. D., secretary; Rev. Schult, Fremont, Nebraska, treasurer; Revs. Welhausen D. D., Norfolk; New macker D. D., Columbus; G. F. F. Mueller, D. D., Columbus; Sprigel, Platte Center; Fricke, Madison; Frank, Ponca; Bieger, Yutan; Traubel, Emerson; Nitschke, Pender; Grauenhorst, Fontanelle; Gerathewohl, Scribner; Klatt, Schuyler; Koen, Leigh; Alendorf, Hooper; Matthiesen, Hooper; Halzberger, Pierce; Ludergerat, Winer; Waldschmidt, Snyder; Ponto, Surprise; Moehring, Wayne; and Schultz, Tea, S. D. Rev. Waltver of Lincoln, superintendent of the Tabitha house and hospital will be expected, and also Rev. Fr. Wupper, D. D., of Lincoln, president of the German Nebraska district synod.

The opening services will be held Thursday evening at 7:30, Rev. Rabe of Bloomfield delivering the opening sermon. Friday evening at the same time, Rev. Matthiesen of Hooper is expected to preach.

Sunday morning services will begin at 11:30 when Rev. Trauber of Emerson will occupy the pulpit. Rev. Wellhausen D. D. of Norfolk will address the ministers and the congregation preparatory to the Holy Communion.

The annual missions festival of the congregation will be celebrated in the afternoon beginning at 3 o'clock. Rev. Schutz of Tea, S. D. and Rev. Koolen of Leigh will preach missionary sermons. As Rev. Walter, the superintendent of the Tabitha home, will be among the guests he also is expected to address the congregation.

Collections will be taken in Sunday services for the several mission purposes of our synod.

Dinner for all the people being present at the services, will be served by the Ladies Aid Society.

Speaking of the proposed township organization in Cedar county, as some of the citizens are suggesting, the Herald of Hartington makes the following explanation of what the township organization means:

Under a township form of government, the county is divided into seven districts under the oversight of seven supervisors and each district votes on the amount to be expended for public improvements in that district up to a certain amount. On large bridges or other important public improvement, the county votes as a whole. The idea brought out at the meeting was that a township form of government is a more popular one than a county form—that the people have a more direct interest and voice in the expenditure of public moneys.

It is urged by the advocates of township organization that public improvements are more evenly distributed and that the people in general derive more benefit under the township organization with its seven supervisors than is possible under the commissioner system. It is said that the system results in better roads and many other better conditions than where the county is under control of commissioners.

More Stock Shipments

Live stock has been moving out this week to the South Omaha and Sioux City markets. First Ted Perry sent five cars of fat cattle to South Omaha. The bunch averaged over 1300 each, for 102 head, and though the market sagged a little that day they netted him more than $11,129. They had been on feed since the last of December and made exceptionally good gain. He sent a car of hogs to Sioux City Monday night.

Monday evening W. G. Gildersleeve sent six cars of fat ones from one of his ranches to South Omaha, and Messers Roggenbach and Broscheit combined and made up a car for the same train.

L. C. Gildersleeve and W. L. Chichester each shipped a car of hogs to Sioux City Monday night.

Wednesday several cars of young stuff went west to cheaper pasture land.

Why Not At Wayne?

The Nebraska State Association of Commercial clubs has adopted resolutions favoring extension of membership to farming communities. This will greatly aid in the better farming movement.

The above, clipped from a daily paper, appeals to us as being the most sensible thing ever done by the state organization. It is logical. Why should not the farmers and business men of the community work together, hand in hand to mutual profit? One of the chief aims of the ordinary commercial club appears to be to secure some new enterprise to locate in a place whether there is anything besides the "bonus" raised by the club from generous and enterprising(?) citizens to induce them to come or to make a permanent business for them when they do come. And once an enterprise is landed to make a home market for the products of the home community, what does the community do to profit thereby? Do they establish a small packing house and cure meats at home for their consumption? No, the farmer continues to send his fat hogs and cattle to the meat trusts and lets the consumer pay to that combine and the railroads two freight hauls and at least three profits. Would it not be better for the producer and consumer to divide the two freights and dealers and commission men's profits among themselves either in dividends or by simply never letting it get out of their pocket? We ship wheat out and pay freight on flour back again. We do not raise broom corn or make brooms, but buy from some factory that is shipping the straw in and the brooms out, yet a small broom factory might easily compete with a large one in the cost per broom of making a finished article ready to make a clean sweep.

Last spring we imported thousands of dollars worth of nursery stock, all of which might have been grown as well here, not only for our own use but for export.

We have a creamery at Wayne which is a money maker and a money saver, yet it would do better as both, and should with the hearty co-operation of all of our people. We buy imported celery when as good celery can be grown here as most any place—but it takes work and does not look like as great an enterprise as farming a half section, but might be more profitable. There are many things that could be done with profit.

The Cow With a Crumpled Horn

The cow is coming to be better known now than in other years, and it is also becoming known that there is as much or more difference in cows as in men or horses. Now a cow must produce more than she consumes or she will soon find her way to the slaughter house. But through lack of care and lack of proper selection the cows of the state of Nebraska are not returning to their owners what the number of cows in the state should produce. The department of agriculture at Lincoln has given the matter careful study to find out the possibilities of the cow in Nebraska for the benefit of the owners of cows and they are willing to send the story to all who ask for bulletin 139, recently issued. This shows that fed only on foods which can be produced in this state cows properly selected for efficiency can and do produce more than three times as much as the average cow. The cows on the state farm have maintained an average of more than 7,000 pounds of milk each for 14 years last past, and the average production of butter fat for the same time has been 341 pounds per cow per year. These averages are fully three times the average of the cows of the state and it is too much of a difference and the difference is due to a great extent to indifference of those who own cows. A cow should be bred and fed to produce her full capacity, to do less is to waste good feed.

Commissioners' Proceedings

Wayne, Nebr., May 8, 1914. Board met as per adjournment. All members present.

This being the day for the opening of all bids on bridge work, both for the erection and repair work, the Standard Bridge Company of Omaha, was the lowest bidder.

Contract is hereby entered into, between the County of Wayne of the first part and the Standard Bridge Company of the second part for the erection of such bridges, bridge work and bridge materials as the party of the first part may require during the year beginning May 8th, 1914. Provided, however, that the prices as submitted by the Standard Bridge Company are approved by the State Engineer, otherwise to be of no force and effect.

Whereupon Board adjourned to May 12th, 1914. CHAS. W. REYNOLDS, Clerk.

A Mishap at Crystal

Miss Gertrude, daughter of M. T. McInerney and wife was a victim of an accident at the Crystal Saturday evening when the blade of one of the electric fan struck her in the back of the head and inflicted quite a gash, some two inches in length. Whether the fan caught in the frame and was jerked from the wall or whether the young lady who was seated just beneath it arose and struck her head against the fan is not clear. The wound was but a flesh cut, and with the prompt attention given it is getting along nicely, and the fans have all been carefully inspected so that there is no further danger from them.

Imaginary Heart-Trouble

Do you have pains in the region of the heart? Its terrible pounding alarms you? What is wrong? Do you believe these symptoms mean heart trouble? Organic diseases of the heart very seldom occasion much pain. Nearly all of these pains are caused by some derangement of the stomach. Meritol Tonic Digestive is especially recommended for indigestion and dyspepsia, and for restoring the stomach to its normal functions and—no more "heart disease." The Speckled Sussex is a new favorite in the line of egg producing birds. One hen of that English stock now holds the world record of 282 eggs in a single year, but she had to become Americanized to produce that result. These birds were first taken up and developed by fanciers about ten years ago, and they are now recognized as a standard breed and have a standard of perfection to score to. They are large, weighing nine pounds; and up for males and females seven and up. They are great winter layers.

Notice to Dog Owners

The annual dog tax is now due, and should be promptly paid to the city clerk, who will issue a tag for the animal. This applies to all dogs large or small, and it becomes my official duty to kill all dogs for which no tax has been paid.

INTERNATIONAL Harvester manure spreaders have a score of good features in their construction. Each one is the result of careful-field experiment. An IHC spreader is low enough for easy loading, yet it has plenty of clearance underneath. The rear axle is well under the load, rear wheels have wide rims and Z-shaped fugs, insuring good traction under all conditions. Frame, wheels, and all driving parts are of steel. Apron tension is adjusted by a simple device. Winding of the beater is prevented by large diameter, and beater teeth are strong, square and chisel-pointed.

International manure spreaders are built in several styles and sizes, low or high, endless or return apron, for small farms or large. Examination will show sturdiness of construction in every detail. Repairs, if ever needed, may always be had of the local dealer. Examine International spreaders at the dealer's. We will tell you who sells them, and we will send you interesting catalogues.

June 18th is the opening date of the Nebraska editorial annual session. Lincoln is the place, and there is to be a big time to which every editor should give due heed.

Last week the Democrat published an article on need of more mitch cows in Nebraska, taken from Hoard's Dairyman, and written by D. W. Hoyer, and now word comes to us that the article is criticised as being the product of the centralized creamery crowd. We are glad to hear of this criticism, and will be glad to publish the same if the critics will reply to the article. The Democrat only wishes that the farmers would be more free to criticize and discuss these vital questions. The editor may not be right—may make mistakes—and those who know he is in the wrong will do a favor to him and a service to the community by making a correction.

We notice that one of the long suits of the county demonstrator for farms is publicity, and those around here are working the newspapers faithfully, and it is really more valuable matter for the readers of the paper than much of the filling in the average country town papers—but perhaps not so entertaining. It should be a good thing for the newspapers, too, but in all justice the newspaper should have a part of the salary, or at least some compensation, for without the papers as vehicles on which to send his message to the homes of the county the efficiency of the farm demonstrator would not be one-half what it is. And then there is another feature, if the farmers would aid the papers to tell what is on the farm and get farmers in touch with each other much more would be gained than now without the aid of a demonstrator.

We are glad to note that Wm. H. Smith of Seward has decided to make the race for the democratic nomination for state auditor, and hope that he wins both at the primary and the election. Mr. Smith is, we believe, already assured of the opposition of certain corporation forces—not that he is unfair to them, but because he is fair to the people. He believes in a business administration of state affairs, and that a state's business should be conducted in the interest of the people. In the senate last session he made a good record, and introduced and succeeded in having passed the law which makes a state engineer supervise the bridge building of the state—and he must furnish uniform specification to the counties for bids, and he may also be called upon to determine whether or not the specifications have been complied with in the erection of bridges. He has been a resident of the state for the past 17 years and has been a successful newspaper man, which certainly qualifies a man to hold a position of trust. For two terms he was clerk of the senate, and last term a member of that legislative body. According to our light, the Democrat is for Smith.

Turn it which way you will the railroads think they have a good argument for a higher freight rate. Just now they are pointing to the great number of idle cars, for there is now no great crop movement on, and not much coal to haul—therefore they should have compensation in the form of a higher rate because they must keep the idle cars. In five months if the present crop prospects materialize, there will be a shortage of cars, and the railroads will say give us higher rates that we may build more cars with which to carry the crops to market. The facts appear to be that the railroad companies are not big enough for the job they have on hand, and should turn it over to Uncle Sam. If they would cut the watered stock out and trim some of the high-priced officials and eliminate some of the ornaments that are created simply to draw salary, you could have a lower freight rate and make good returns on the investment. To be sure this editor never run a railroad, but in as much as a lot of fellows can tell us how to run a newspaper we feel confident to give a little good advice to the railroad fellows. To return to the first proposition, if they would make a lower rate people could afford to keep the roads busy in a dull time so that they could well afford to equip for the rush season.

The Alberts law has been upheld and held up by our wise supreme court judges. They find that the law is valid—except the penalty clause. You may convict the owner of property for renting it for immoral purposes, but you cannot make him pay a penalty. Don't that sound just like some of the fine hair splitting of the greatest tribunal in our state? A jury may three times convict a man of murder and the great jurists, without questioning the man's guilt may set aside the verdict on the statement that to their mind there was a bit of irregularity in the trial, and therefore the expense of another trial must be met by the people—and again and again or else allow the convicted man to go free in the community he is convicted of despoiling.

Clean-up days have been observed in many of our neighboring towns, and a good work is reported to have been done. While Wayne did not have any days set apart by proclamation for this work, it has been very generally looked after. In some places the "Boy Scouts" or some kindred organization assumed the task of cleaning up vacant lots—made the place look a heap better—and was commendable—but if the writer had the right of regulation of such matters the owners of vacant lots would clean them up, and keep them clean—or the city would clean them and the lot owner would pay for it. The fellow who is holding a vacant lot for the increase would be compelled to keep it clean enough so that the property would at least look as though it was worth more. If vacant lots were taxed more and improvements less there would be more improved and less unimproved property.

Presbyterian Church
Rev. Alexander Corkey, Pastor.
"The Church and Education" will be the subject of the sermon at the Presbyterian church next Sunday morning. The Presbyterian church has always stood for education and for an educated ministry and an educated citizenship. The public schools and all educational institutions supported by the state have always had the co-operation of Christian people in America, as an ignorant citizenship makes democracy liable to utter failure. The end of education is the acquisition of truth, the cultivation of the mind, and the ennobling of the character. An ignorant Christian is better than a highly educated pagan or scoundrel, but an educated Christian is the ideal man.

In the impressive service of installation as prescribed by the constitution of the church, Mr. A. J. Ferguson was installed as a ruling elder in the church on last Sunday morning, having been chosen for this office by the vote of the membership of the church at the annual church meeting. After his installation Mr. Ferguson made a brief address, thanking the church for the honor conferred upon him and promising to discharge the duties of the office as efficiently as he could. The present session of the church is composed of Mr. David Cunningham, Mr. W. H. Gilderleeve, Mr. W. A. K. Neely, Mr. F. G. Philleo, Mr. F. H. Jones, and Mr. A. J. Ferguson.

There will be no evening services at the church next Sunday as the congregation will unite with the other churches in a union baccalaureate service at the Baptist church.

The morning service meets at 10:30, and the Sunday school begins at 12:00 o'clock. The C. E. prayer meeting is held at 7:00 p. m.

Where the Hudson Flows.
Not so very long ago, in a geologic sense, the Hudson river flowed through a deep canyon or gorge at New York city. Soundings show that this gorge extends through the harbor and far out to sea. It is evident that the land surface has been lowered in this region, allowing the ocean to creep in on the land, fill the old river channel and in places wholly submerge it. The submergence of the land was greater at one time than it is now. In excavations for some of the New York skyscrapers remains of oysters and other salt water animals have been found. As a rule, the only available knowledge in regard to the former submergence of an area is derived from the marine shells and other animals found in deposits laid down by the sea.

No Space to Spare.
Mrs. Ellis had been house hunting for several days and at last found a small suit which was somewhere near her modest ideal.
"The paper in the ball is just awful," said Mrs. Ellis, as she was telling her husband about the place that evening, "but the landlord said he wouldn't change it."
"Never mind," said Mr. Ellis cheerfully, "we'll get an inexpensive new one and put it on right over the other."
"Oh, Ben," cried the wife, "we can hardly get our furniture through the entry now, it's so narrow!"—New York Post.

Punishment by Pillory.
In the year 1857 the British parliament passed an act that put an end to punishment by pillory. Previous to the coming of this particular instrument of correction was in use in England and was by the name of the "stretch neck." It consisted of a wooden frame erected on a stool in which were three holes for the head and arms. For days together offenders against the common law were thus exposed to public view. In 1855 Titus Oates was sentenced to be pilloried for five days in every year during the rest of his life. Another famous sufferer was Daniel Defoe, the author of "Robinson Crusoe," who stood for three days in the pillory in Cheapside. It happened on occasions that the offender died while undergoing his sentence. During the time of exposure the condemned man was not allowed to receive food of any sort or description. The last occasion on which a pillory sentence was passed was in 1814.—London Globe.

How Oil Calms the Waves.
An impression prevails that great quantities of oil are required to calm the sea, but Professor Ray Lankester of England suggests that a pint of oil an hour will secure a zone of calm water around a ship sufficient for the safe launching of small boats. According to this authority, nine pints of oil are sufficient to calm a square mile of water, and, incredible as it may appear, one drop will calm seven square feet! The oil spreads out over the surface of the sea in a film which has the almost unimaginable thickness of two millionths of a millimeter. Yet it holds in leash the mighty power of the ocean. When this film of oil spreads over the surface the heaving up action of the water, which results in the formation of ripples and then of waves, can not take place. The thinner the film the greater is its effect in putting down the crests of the waves and making a lower wave line, free from break.—Harold Waters in Leslie's.

What the Tweed Divides.
The difference between English and Scotch inheritance law is very wide. For instance, supposing a man dies intestate and his only living relatives are his wife and mother. In England each would take equal shares of his personal estate, but in Scotland the wife gets one-half of the movable estate, the mother one-sixth, and two-sixths go to the crown.
But supposing the mother alone is living. In England she would get the whole, but in Scotland she would only get one-third, while the other two-thirds would go to the crown.
Then, again, if a man dies intestate and his father and several brothers and sisters are living, in England the father gets the lot, but in Scotland he only gets one-half, while the other half is divided equally among the brothers and sisters of the deceased.—Pearson's Weekly.

Wagner's Search For a Pawnshop.
Wagner's worst experience of poverty was during his sojourn in Paris in 1840, when he had to pawn all that he and his wife possessed of any value. "I looked up the French equivalent for a pawnshop," he relates in his autobiography, "as I was too shy to make inquiries. The only word I could find in my little dictionary was 'Lombard.' On the map of Paris I found a very small thoroughfare called 'Rue des Lombards,' and thither I went only to find the expedition fruitless. Often on reading the inscription 'Mont de Piété' I felt curious to know its meaning. Eventually, to my great delight, I learned that this 'Berg der Froemigkeit' was where I should find salvation, and there we now carried all we possessed in the way of silver."—London Chronicle.

Admit They Are Great.
In an address to the Canadian club in Montreal James Bryce said: "I do not think it would be advisable for me to say much, for I have the good fortune to be a Scotchman myself. I won't pursue the theme of what contributions Scotchmen should be able to make to Canada's literature and science for the very simple reason which was given by a friend of mine, who said, 'I never argue with Scotchmen that they are a great nation—they admit it!'"

His Weakness.
"Have you ever invested in mining stocks that were to pay 100 per cent in less than a year?"
"Why do you wish to know?"
"I overheard a man say the other day that he didn't believe you had ever done a foolish thing in your life."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Still Waiting.
Tom, who had lent John $5, one day asked, "John, ain't it time you paid me that $5?"
"Ain't due yet," said John.
"But you promised to pay me when you got back from New York."
"Well, I ain't been there yet."—St. Louis Republic.

Chained Books.
The finest known collection of chained books is that in Hereford (England) cathedral. It includes about 2,000 volumes arranged in five bookcases, of which not less than 1,500 are secured by chains three or four feet long, each with a swivel in the center.

The Wiles of Women.
There are two possible things that a woman can do if a man proposes to her, but there are more than 2,000,000 she can do if he doesn't.—London Tit-Bits.
Truth and honesty set a limit to our efforts which impudence and hypocrisy easily overleap.—Hazlitt.

TOWN OF ROEBLING WORKERS' MODEL

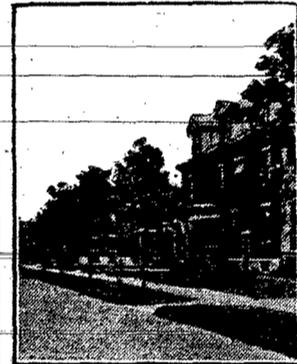

Workers Have Been Accomplished In Nine Years.

COMPANY MANAGES ALL

This Jersey Community of Working People Appears to Have Solved Many Problems in Short Existence. A Pioneer in City Manager Plan.

Ten years ago practically the whole body of the Roebbling workers lived in the cities as they had been living for decades before in the decayed tenements that clustered about the great shops. With its fellow industries the Roebbling plant fought its way through strikes, lockouts, changes of working force, poorly done work, all the tribulations that harass capital. "We've got to make the best of these things," explained the other manufacturers. "No," objected the Roebblings. "We've got to make these things better."

Such was the origin of Roebbling, N. J. Established for nine years, this town of Roebbling has passed safely the precarious stage of immaturity that has proved fatal to so many similar projects. It has grown and flourished, has provided its founders with labor that is competent to produce the highest grade of work and has secured for these workers the highest comfort, health and happiness at the least expense. On the paper of theory the project was fantastic; on the books of fact it has proved highly practicable and profitable. From its inception the policy that has dominated and controlled Roebbling has been autocratic, patriarchal. The Roebbling company owns all land, houses, industries, stores, even the police and fire departments. The company supplies work and shelters the worker, and should that worker prove unworthy he is summarily discharged and deprived not only of his wages, but of his habitation as well. Out he must go, bag and baggage, beyond the village limits. Whether this policy of paternalism is responsible for the success of Roebbling or whether the town has succeeded in spite of such benevolent despotism is a mooted question. Certain it is, however, that Roebbling has been wonderfully prosperous, while many similar projects have fallen into decay.

The man who stands between the Roebbling company and the Roebbling worker is the manager, Raymond H. Thompson. To him are intrusted the prosperity of the company and at the same time the welfare of the worker. Sanitation, health—its maintenance effectively assisted by a well equipped hospital—education, police and fire regulation, housing, water supply, all phases of commercial and social life, are under the manager's supervision, who administers these functions under the policy directly authorized by the officers of the company. The result is a town of over 3,000 people living a sane and comfortable life in the open country; a town of broad, scrupulously clean streets, green grass and trees; a town where disease seldom cripples the worker, so injuring his work; a town where every man may be sure of just and sympathetic judgment upon all his demands, and, finally, with all this apparent vigor of supervision, a town where every individual has the utmost liberty.

The only rules that are applied with Draconian severity are the rules governing industry, decency and cleanliness. Not more than five adults are allowed to live in one house, and if the children multiply too fast the parents are obliged to move into roomier quarters. Cleanliness is preserved by such constant watchfulness as is necessary to regulate so cosmopolitan a community—a community composed of Hungarians, Swedes, Roumanians, Poles, Irish, Germans and Russians. The tenants have come to realize the sincerity of the authorities in their determination to preserve cleanliness and order, and in consequence both exteriors and interiors of the houses are rebukes to supposedly more enlightened communities.

Commission rule, the active discharge of municipal functions by the few, was ten years ago considered a radical and dangerous innovation; now it is adopted by over one-third of the largest cities. The city manager plan, till recently unheard of, is now in effect in at least four considerable communities, and it is almost exactly this form of government that is and has been for ten years in force at Roebbling.—Town Development.

France and the Frenchman.
The French are probably the most patriotic people in the world. The average half educated Frenchman is firmly persuaded that his country is an oasis of civilization surrounded with limitless stretches of barbarism. This is what he believes, but his courtesy prevents him from being offensive about it. In his estimation the rest of the world simply does not count. He knows that there are other parts of the world, but they are not worth his while to visit or to inquire about. That is why the Frenchman rarely travels and never emigrates. He will ask you with surprise why he should travel seeing that he is already in France and that he has no taste for savages or wild beasts. And as for its government, it is notoriously the best in the world, with a future so glorious as to defy the imagination. He will say all this with a disarming charm. He pities you for being a foreigner, but he does not hate you on that account, for, of course, you cannot help it.—Argonaut.

Human Hair Traffic.
The trade in human hair is a big industry. Italians easily take the lead in this traffic, the main source of their supply being obtained from the peasant women of Italy, Dalmatia and Switzerland. Several times a year these human hair merchants send their agents around to collect supplies, which are usually immense, for hair growing is cultivated on a very large scale by these women and yields a good remuneration to the producer. Two crops of hair a year and looking none the worse for the loss is not extraordinary among the peasant women. Half the hair at the back of the head is shorn off, the remaining half being drawn over the exposed part and dressed in such a manner as only to be detected on very close scrutiny and by those experienced in the trade.

Conscience.
Ever present and operant is that which never becomes a party in one's guilt, conceives never an evil thought, consents never to an unrighteous deed, never sins, but holds itself impeccable, immutable, personally holy—the conscience—counselor, comforter, judge and executor of the spirit's decrees. None can flee from the spirit's presence nor hide from himself. The reserved powers are the mighty ones. Side by side sleep the whispering sisters and the Eumenides. with maritime people in general. That blue was ever selected for the king's naval service was a fortuitous happening. When in 1747 the question of uniform was being considered the color selected had very like to have been French gray laced with silver. While the king was still not quite decided he saw the Duchess of Bedford in a riding habit of blue faced with white and enlivened with gold lace. It was a revelation. Here, the king declared, was the uniform for his sea service officers, and no more was heard of French gray. The navy took to blue, and every other navy has taken to it since.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Crooked Street

A Story of Constantinople

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Cynthia Fulham's graceful form was poised for an instant on the steps of the Hotel Constantia. The terraced gardens of the hotel ran down to a lime shaded avenue, beyond which she could glimpse the waters of the Golden Horn and the distant haziness of Constantinople.

In the foreground the white buildings and the gracefully planned mosques of Constantinople glistened beneath the rays of the midday sun. Here and there were gay awnings fluttering in the breeze that ruffled the date palms and the acacias. Above all were the glitter and color of the oriental and the vague murmur characteristic of far eastern cities.

As Cynthia stood there waiting for her father to join her for a stroll through the bazaars Joseph Fulham suddenly appeared at her elbow.

"Cynthia, I'm sorry, but our stroll will have to be postponed for an hour or so. Mr. Evans has called to see me. Suppose you sit in the garden until I am at liberty."

"Very well, father. Come as soon as you can. It's such a glorious morning I would not lose a moment of it indoors."

"I'll cut the business as short as possible, dear," was Mr. Fulham's reply as he returned to the hotel.

Cynthia walked down the marble steps to the little pavilion that overlooked the sparkling sea, but presently the thought of the glittering bazaars lured her away from the garden.

"I can come back after dad by and by," she thought guiltily, for she was aware that her father would have forbidden her wandering through the city alone.

The appearance of the beautiful American girl, quite unattended, in the seething street of the Goldbeaters created unpleasant notice.

Cynthia found dark faces thrust toward her with insolent curiosity, while the veiled women looked at her with contemptuous eyes.

Ahead of her a little party of tourists were chatting, and Cynthia wished fervently that she was one of them. There was a big, broad shouldered young man who glanced at her in a startled manner when she hurried past them.

Her cheeks flamed with embarrassment because of his evident surprise at her solitary appearance.

"I wish I had not come alone. If ever I can find my way back I will!" A deep voice was speaking at her elbow.

"Pardon me, but I am afraid that you do not know how imprudent it is for you to wander here all alone."

Cynthia turned and saw the tall young man of the tourist party. Knowing that she had been unwise to the point of folly, Cynthia was unreasonably indignant with her well meaning countryman.

"Thank you," she returned haughtily, "but this—this incident is the first annoyance I have experienced."

He reddened to his smoothly brushed fair hair and bowed stiffly.

"I am sorry, but I felt sure that you could not know that you were inviting danger." He replaced his hat and went away.

Angry with herself at her own discourtesy, Cynthia went on her way, unmindful that she had unwittingly turned into a small street that ran at right angles to the Street of the Goldbeaters.

Her heart beat faster as she paused before a rug shop to gather her wits about her.

Before her were displayed perfumes of the orient in queer bottles and many odd bits of Byzantine jewelry.

The shopkeeper, a snowily bearded Turk, with a large turban surmounting his dark face, was sitting cross legged on a pile of rugs.

He leaned forward and lifted a silver filigree bracelet from the heap of trinkets.

"Buy?" he coaxed in the only English word at his command.

Cynthia shook her head.

"Buy?" wheedled the old man.

"No," said Cynthia decidedly.

"Buy!" Now it was a command that issued from his skinny throat.

Cynthia glanced around quickly. The street appeared to be deserted. From the gloomy interiors of the little shops there was the glitter of inquisitive dark eyes.

The street turned sharply here, so that she could not see either end of it.

To all purposes she was alone with the villainous looking Turk on the pile of rugs.

"Buy!" he threatened again.

"No!" cried Cynthia. "I will come back later with my father."

This subterfuge was not understood by the Turk. He muttered some strange words, and, lo, apparently out of the rugs hanging about the dim doorway, there appeared several veiled women. One of them clapped a brown hand over Cynthia's mouth, and two others took her arms and hustled her into the darkness of the inner shop.

Without giving the American girl an opportunity to cry out the first woman tied a silken scarf over Cynthia's mouth, knotting it behind her head.

Then they stood back, laughing, and watched her while she beat her hands against the door of the room in a vain endeavor to escape.

Through another door, entered the white bearded Turk of the shop, and when Cynthia saw him she shrank away in terror. How she longed for the protection of the young man she had flouted! If she had only taken his advice!

But the old man had snatched away her golden purse and was greedily counting over the money contained in it. It was a goodly sum, for Joseph Fulham was a rich man.

The three women crowded around and were made glad with a cold apiece. Then they gathered around Cynthia and plucked off her rings and the little brooch she wore. They quarreled over the division of the spoils.

Presently they fell to talking shrilly with the old man. Cynthia rightly guessed that they were discussing what to do with her. She did not understand that the women wanted her murdered and tossed into the Bosphorus. It was the easiest way, they argued. But the man was experienced, and he was afraid of the foreigners. There had been many witnesses to his dastardly deed, and he trembled for his own safety. His plan was to hide the money and the jewels and when it was night to take the girl, blindfolded, out into the streets and let her go. She would never find her way back to his shop, and if she did the shop would be empty, for there was money enough to take him to America.

While they argued the shop remained unattended.

The tall young American, who was Hugh Markham of New York, came down the street, his blue eyes alert for a glimpse of the foolhardy girl who had spurned his protection and advice. He passed the empty shop of the rug merchant with a careless glance, but something in the curious glances that pierced him on every side made him suspicious.

Hugh Markham paused before the counter of another perfume shop, and he had chosen well, for the yellow old man was a strong competitor and deadly rival of the Turk, who had captured Cynthia Fulham.

"What became of the young American lady?" asked Hugh sternly. "She came to buy perfumes, and she has disappeared." He hazarded this guess.

The man threw out his hands, palms upward, in a negative gesture. "She is hidden in your shop," accused Hugh, seeking for a clew. "I will notify the police and have your place searched."

A red light came into the shifty black eyes. Here was a chance to prove his own innocence and at the same time get even with his enemy, Biji Shoosh, the rug merchant.

But it would never do to let his neighbors see that he had betrayed Biji Shoosh. So, with a hardly noticeable movement of his thumb, he pointed across the street to the empty shop, just as a woman's scream rung out and was instantly stilled.

Hugh Markham whirled about and dashed across the narrow street. Biji Shoosh's rival smiled into his black beard and returned to his pipe. The street was empty once more—only the peering eyes from gloomy back-grounds.

Biji Shoosh had been a fool to touch the girl in broad daylight, when the streets were full of tourists, but the old man was greedy and had overstepped the bounds of prudence. These Americans would make trouble. So they wagged their heads and gossiped while they watched the door of Biji Shoosh's shop.

Cynthia had screamed when the old Turk laid his hand on her shoulder. Little by little she had worked the bandage from her lips, and after her loud cry for help Biji Shoosh had savagely knotted the scarf so tightly that it made her dizzy.

There came the sound of an approaching whirlwind through the shop. Furniture was overturned and the muttering growls of an angry man sent the Turks cowering to the four corners of the room. Biji Shoosh turned like a wolf and flashed a glittering knife when Hugh's broad shoulder brought the flimsy door crashing into the stuffy room. The women had dragged Cynthia with them to a divan, and they were pinching her cruelly when the storm broke.

When it was over Cynthia found herself, like the heroine in a melodrama, occupying the center of the stage, Markham's arm about her in strong protection, while the old Turk lay unconscious with a blow from the American's fist. The women had been hustled into a corner, and Hugh had tied their hands with their own scarfs, but their tongues were unbridled and the Americans could not guess at the torrent of abuse that was poured forth at them.

Cynthia recovered her empty gold bag and one of her rings, but the others she would not search for.

"All I want is to get away from here," she whispered. Presently they were out in the crooked street and later in the Street of the Goldbeaters.

Hugh took Cynthia to the Hotel Constantia and turned her over to her father's care. Mr. Fulham had just dismissed his caller and was searching for his daughter when the young couple appeared and related Cynthia's startling adventure.

"How can you forgive me for my rudeness?" asked Cynthia as she said goodbye to Hugh, after her father had expressed his gratitude to their young compatriot. "I owe my life to you, Mr. Markham."

Hugh's heart said, "I shall collect that debt some day!" But his tongue merely disclaimed any credit for heroism.

Before they left Constantinople there was every reason to believe that some day Hugh Markham would keep his promise

Henry Klopping returned Friday from a trip to the western part of the state, where he purchased four car loads of cattle for feeders this fall--showing conclusively that he is not much afraid but that the people will continue to eat meat under a degenerate administration, and that the free meat from the other side of the world is not scaring him very badly.

Miss Lorena Hahn, who is employed by the Chi-Namel Co., was demonstrating for that company at the Carhart hardware store Wednesday and Thursday of last week. The Carhart Hardware Co., on Wednesday evening, in the way of advertising, gave a theatre party at the Crystal to about twenty boys who wore paper hats with Chi-Namel printed across the front and back.

W. F. Ramsey, who has been spending the winter at the soldiers sanitarium at Hot Springs, South Dakota, returned to Wayne last week and spent a few days here, after which he went to Ponca for a short time, and a little later he plans to go to Lincoln and other points in the southern part of the state. He has been greatly improved in his health by his stay at the springs, and says that he feels as well as when twenty year younger.

C. W. Post the health food man who claimed to do so much good for the health of the people committed suicide at Santa Barbara, California, last week because of poor health. He gave up the fight when worth millions because he became convinced that he could not heal himself. The writer has not been much of an advocate of "grape-nuts" since convinced several years ago that musty and unmarketable beans were bought at low price and shipped to his factory to be fumigated and scorched and sweetened for health food.

There are several advertisements which should be read this week--in fact it will pay to read them all each week, but what is in mind just now is the system of delivering which W. E. Beaman called attention to last week. All should co-operate with dealers in an endeavor to make delivery of goods less a burden to the dealer and more dependable for the one ordering same. With lack of a system there was no assurance of getting goods when wanted. If an order for quick delivery comes in three minutes after the wagon has gone to the next door to the person ordering, it makes double work.

Beggars have been unusually numerous at Wayne this spring--the real professional kind--they appear to be. As a rule when they apply at this shop and are told that it has been recommended that no one give to strange mendicants unless they first go before a representative of the commercial club and show that they have good and valid excuse for not being at work instead of begging, or among home folks so that the proper authorities can care for them, they have nothing more to say, and some of them start at once for the depot. We would not wish to turn a worthy one in need away, but nine out of ten of them are making more money begging than those who donate to them--are at hard work.

Mrs. S. S. Book from Honey Grove, Pennsylvania, has been visiting at the home of her brother, Geo. W. Beal at Carroll for the past two weeks, except part of the time spent near Wayne at the home of her old playmate of school days, W. A. K. Neely and wife, and at the Oscar Melliken home, who were also friends of other days. Mrs. Book likes the west on this, her first visit, and thinks we have many advantages in this country over the forest covered lands which her parents had to clear for farm land in early days. Before coming to Wayne she spent several weeks at Shenandoah, Iowa, where she has a son and daughter living and a brother. She also has a brother at Persho, South Dakota, John Beal who formerly lived in this county, but she will not go to visit him this time. She starts on her home journey today, planning to stop again at Shenandoah for a few days. She and Mr. Neely have had an enjoyable time visiting of their school days, and talking of the friends of other days among the hills of the Keystone state.

Our Boys

[By Ben F. Robinson]

Not all boys can become famous nor rich. Once in a while one out of the millions gets to be president but the odds are very much against him. However, all can be good, clean, honest and industrious citizens. We need this material more than we need the famous and the rich. There is the spark of manhood in every boy and if he is given the right chance it will demonstrate itself. Let us give the boy the truth. Let us show him the way. If conditions in a town don't contribute to the uplift of boys and young men, it is good to change the conditions.

Home influences are a strong factor in the formation of character. Lincoln, Garfield and Hugo each said in substance, "I am what my mother made me". It is quite a responsibility on the mother but if she wishes to influence her boy rightly she must study him and study the world from his standpoint. Nor is the matter all up to the mother. Some of us men need to spruce up and take more interest in our boys. They pattern after us as a rule and "I'll swan," I have not the courage to get after a lad for doing what a father or I do.

Have we stopped to think that the character of the youth is usually in harmony with that of the town or community?

Have you considered too that the public school cannot overcome all the evil conditions? It is a matter for the home, the community and the school.

Boys must be kept at work or at healthful play. Good reading will do a great deal towards making a boy satisfied at home in the evenings.

If your lad does not have good, interesting and instructive reading, get it for him

It is a good plan also to send the boy to church or Sunday school and to encourage him to affiliate himself with the young people's associations, for irrespective of sect or creed, he is sure to absorb some good that will remain with him throughout life.

Teach him to value time, money, and good health. The world has too many useless men now and can't well appreciate any more.

Fathers, mothers, patrons, teachers when the boy comes to manhood, severs home ties, and goes out into the world to meet the problems of life, will it not be a fine thing for us to feel that by our united efforts we have guided him safely through that plastic period from childhood to maturity and assisted him to be clean, straight and true.

Remember that the successful man is not reckoned by dollars, nor by newspaper headlines, but that he is the law abiding citizen who paves the way for himself and his family through the world.

SLEEP DISTURBING BLADDER WEAKNESS BACKACHE-RHEUMATISM, QUICKLY VANISH

Even Most Chronic Sufferers Find Relief After A Few Doses Are Taken

Backache, urinary disorders, and rheumatism, are caused from weak, inactive kidneys, which fail to filter out the impurities and keep the blood pure, and the only way on earth to permanently and positively cure such troubles, is to remove the cause. The new discovery, Croxone, cures such conditions because it reaches the very roots of the disease. It soaks right into the stopped up, inactive kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the little filtering cells and glands; neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid substances that lodge in the joints and muscles to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism; it neutralizes the uric so it no longer irritates the tender membranes of the bladder, and cleans out and strengthens the stopped up, lifeless kidneys so they filter and sift all the poisons from the blood, and drive it out of the system.

So sure, so positive, so quick and lasting, are the results obtained from the use of Croxone, that three doses a day for a few days are often all that is required to cure the worst case of backache, regulate the most annoying bladder disorders, and overcome the numerous other similar conditions.

It is the most wonderful preparation ever made for the purpose. It is entirely different from all other remedies. There is nothing else on earth to compare with it. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results.

You can obtain an original package of Croxone at trifling cost from any first-class drug store. All druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if Croxone fails to give desired results, regardless of how old you are, how long you have suffered, or what else has failed to cure you.

St. Paul's Lutheran Church (Rev. Blessing, Pastor)

Sunday school every Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. We would be glad to have more of the parents attend Sunday school, we need your assistance. It may be an effort to get up early enough to get the children ready for Sunday school, but it pays.

Morning service at 11 o'clock. The subject of the sermon will be "The Victorious Life," 1 John 5:4-5. We are accustomed to call men who have won the favor and honor of their fellowmen, as Napoleon, or men who have amassed a great fortune as Alexander Stewart, men who have lived victorious lives. True, they have gained victories over the many obstacles which have hindered their progress. But after removing the obstacles and gaining the victories, what have they, only that which passes away. But John in referring to the victorious life, refers to that which does not pass away. He says, "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world."

There will be union meeting in the evening.

Choir rehearsal every Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, in the church.

The Ladies Aid Society will meet at the home of Mrs. Rogers on Thursday next.

The Ladies are planning for a dinner and supper to be given Decoration day in the basement of the Baptist church.

A cordial invitation is extended to all who wish to worship with us.

Methodist Church

Rev. C. L. Myers, Pastor

Sunday morning class meeting was a great success. A large number were present and a goodly number took part in the exercises.

A larger number than usual were present at public worship in the morning. The sermons of the day were in keeping with the Mothers Day idea.

The Primary department is growing. Parents should visit occasionally and see their children at work in the Sunday school. Visitors always welcome.

Junior church services at 4 o'clock each Sunday afternoon. The piano solo by Miss Bessie Crockett was well received. Every service is a special number. Crayon work was the Door of Opportunity.

Miss Fisher led the league and an interesting study was made of some of the vital problems which confront the church of today. Forrest Hughes leads next time.

You will find our Wednesday evening study of the bible very helpful. "More things are wrought by prayer than this old world ere dreamed of."

Over a hundred people attended the social by the children's missionary society last Friday evening. Not only was the program good but the time in the basement as great.

Monday the 18th the Sunday school board will meet. Very important. Let each member be present.

The Sunday school District convention May 28-29, will be directed by Rev. H. C. Wilson of Chicago, Efficiency Expert. Rev. E. A. Miller, Cleveland, Ohio, Director of Religious Education. Rev. O. G. Orcutt, Des Moines, Iowa, State Supt. of Sunday Schools.

Baptist Church

Rev. B. P. Richardson, Pastor

We had a splendid service on last Sunday. "Mothers Day" was well observed. Every part of the service paid tribute to motherhood. The young people's class of the Sunday school provided carnations for all the mothers present. Towards the close of the service two young ladies and two young men, came forward, bearing carnations and presented one to each mother present. Some of the "shut in" mothers of the church were also remembered with flowers.

A nation whose sons and daughters reverence parenthood will be rich in the highest qualities of manhood and womanhood. Our age is not known as a reverent age. In our homes, our schools and our churches we need to cultivate a higher spirit of reverence for old people, old institutions, and divine things.

"The Death of Christ" will be the subject of the sermon Sunday morning. "Christ Died for Our Sins" is the text, and states the gospel truth in a nutshell. The sermon will be a sort of continuation of our Sunday evening's theme.

In the evening the high school baccalaureate service will be held in our church. Rev. Meyer will be the preacher. This is an occasion of deep interest to all the parents of Wayne.

A committee is planning for a sort of indoor picnic of the Sunday school folks. This will be the windup of our contest that has now been running for over two months.

Our prayer meetings are especially interesting this month, as we are following the life of Jesus in some particular aspect. Next week the subject will be, "Jesus and His Worship."

Young people's meeting at 7 o'clock Sunday evening.

Death of Mrs. Wm. Leu

Mrs. Alwine Leu died at her home in this place Tuesday evening, May 12, 1914, at the age of 68 years, 11 months and 7 days, of heart failure, following an illness of several weeks of lung trouble which bordered on pneumonia.

Alwine Holz was born June 5, 1845, at Wismar near Neugard, province of Pommern, Germany, where she grew to womanhood, and in 1868 was united in marriage to Wm. Leu, who survives her, as do five of her sisters, all living near Norfolk. Soon after marriage she came with her husband to America, and after living in Wisconsin for a number of years came to Nebraska and settled near Norfolk, living on a farm there and in the city of Norfolk for 28 years. They moved to Wayne in 1903 and resided here until her death. The children to this couple all preceded her to the home beyond.

The funeral services will be held first from the home at 8:20 Friday morning, then at the German Lutheran church across the street from the home at 8:30, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Moehring. At 10:10 the body will be taken by train to Norfolk and laid away in a cemetery near that city beside that of her children. An excellent woman has gone to her reward.

Wayne Boy Wins Medal

After having won first place in the contest at the high school and then again at the district meet at Norfolk as a humorous orator, under the training of Prof. Keckley, Russell Meyers, son of Rev. C. L. Meyers of this place was awarded the silver medal at the state meet which was held at Crawford last Friday, the points being 386 and 385, Miss Anna Smith of Crawford receiving the gold medal. We think that Russell did well to even get a "look in" at all, being that the contest was held in the extreme western part of the state and people out there did not know that there was such a place as Wayne, but you can just guess that they know it now as our boy Russell did not only do credit to himself but also to the town from which he had won its representation. Now just taking everything into consideration, we are sure that if Anna's name had happened to have been John that Russell would have walked away with the gold medal. As a girl of course she had the preference and then again the contest was held in her home town which gave her much the best of it.

There were eight contestants who were from different parts of the state and we are glad that Russell came home with the silver medal as we could hardly expect him to bring home the gold one under the circumstances.

While out in that part of the country he visited his cousins, Frank and Ernest Phinney who own ranches near Harrison and Vantassel and he also took a sight seeing trip up the canons. He was also the guest of J. E. Marsteller, who owns a ranch near Harrison.

Russell returned home Tuesday after having been absent since Thursday and said all in all he had a very fine trip but he sure did dislike to come away and leave that gold medal at Crawford.

Should Be Compelled to Hitch

Saturday morning the team on the delivery wagon of the Gasoline Supply Co., took a little excursion, starting while the driver was emptying a pail of the liquid into the tank of a customer. They turned the corner of Main and 2d streets, going east at a rapid rate, upsetting and breaking the carriage of Frank Weber and upsetting a milk wagon and the driver. The tongue of the oil wagon was broken. Fortunately no one was hurt, but think what might have happened. There might have been a wreck of the wagon and a fire following—but it did not happen that way, and if there is no ordinance compelling drivers with delivery wagons to hitch with a weight or otherwise, there should be one passed, and if there is such an ordinance, it should be enforced.

Wayne Gets Good Bridge Contract

There was something going at the county headquarters last Friday when the commissioners met to pass on the bids for bridges for this county for the next year—same to be made in accordance with the plans of the state engineer, which gave all an equal chance to bid—a feature of the law introduced and passage secured at the last legislature by Wm. H. Smith of Seward, who by the way is candidate for the democratic nomination for state auditor. There were six bids entered, but as three of them did not comply with the requirements, and were also higher than some others they were not considered.

The contract was finally awarded to the Standard bridge company at the lowest figure perhaps ever given on a bridge contract in the state in recent years. Under the new law the bridges must be much heavier than before, and are required to carry a 20 ton load. The commissioners of this county think the law should be amended to permit bridges of 15 and 10 ton capacity on some of the roads but little used, in the interest of economy.

Contractor Riddel of Creighton, who has the college contract here, was a close second, and it required much figuring on the different size bridges to determine who was the lowest of the two. Other bidders were the Omaha Structural Works, Massillon Bridge Co., Kansas City, and Utley of O'Neill.

The county commissioners are rather proud of the fact that they secured a better contract than did Seward county, the home of the author of the bill, where a Colorado firm got the contract on a bid much lower than in other years.

Dixon county has been having a heap of bridge trouble and agitation this spring and the Wayne figures will average fully 20 per cent lower than those of the neighboring county. And the commissioners here tell us that the present bid means a saving of $1000 on an 80 foot bridge over what such a bridge would have cost under contracts some other years—but that owing to the heavier material to be used the new bridges will total a trifle more than those of last season.

Ordinance No. 223

An ordinance fixing the salaries of the officers of the City of Wayne, Nebraska, repealing ordinance No. 207, and all other ordinances, or parts of ordinances in conflict herewith.

Be it ordained by the Mayor and Council of the city of Wayne, Nebraska:

Section 1. That the salaries of the several officers of the city of Wayne, Nebraska, is hereby fixed, and shall be at the following amounts, respectively: Mayor, $200.00 per year; each member of the Council, $100.00 per year; City Clerk, $300.00 per year; City Attorney, $300.00 per year; Chief of Police, $75.00 per month; Water Commissioner, $660.00 per year; Street Commissioner, $70.00 per month from May 1st to November 1st, and $2.50 per day for each day employed from November 1st to May 1st; City Engineer, $4.00 per day for time actually employed.

Section 2. Ordinance No. 207, and all other ordinances, or parts of ordinances in conflict herewith are hereby expressly repealed.

Section 3. This ordinance shall take effect, and be in force from, and after its passage and publication as required by law.

Passed and approved this 12th day of May, 1914.

Attest:

C. A. CHACE, Mayor.

J. M. CHERRY,

(Seal) City Clerk.

Greek Meets Greek

As we hoped and expected the members of the Farmers Union of Nebraska have called a meeting at Fremont May 28th to establish a state co-operative creamery. This sounds like business.

Of course the farmers are inexperienced and may suffer some loss by that experience, but their adversaries the centralizers have pumped barrels of water into their stock and competition is the last thing they want.

Every merchant who has had his hammer out for the union on general principles will lend a word of encouragement to this venture.

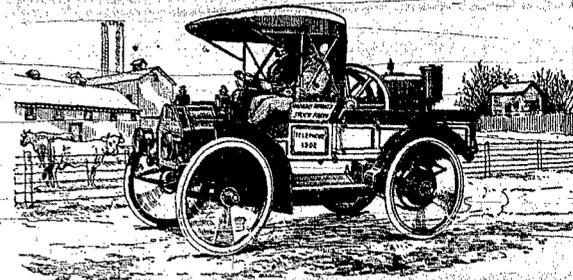

And of course this had to come. The arrogance of those top heavy highwaymen who have stolen from the farmers nearly half of what they possess could only lead to some such result.

As the first paper in Nebraska to openly and courageously advocate and defend the organization of the Farmers Union we feel a warranted pride in this achievement.

It is in the jobbing or distributing of products or merchandise where the extortionate profits are exacted.

The Liberal will watch this creamery movement with interest and will not hesitate to sound warn-

Prince Henry, third son of the king and queen of England, who is fourteen years of age, is regarded as the humorist of the royal family.

On one occasion his elder brothers were discussing their future careers. The Prince of Wales boasted that he intended to be a great general. Prince Albert said he intended to win undying fame as an admiral. When the two boys had exhausted the glories of their own careers they turned to their younger brother, who had been listening quietly and patiently to the intended exploits of his elders.

"What are you going to do, Henry?" he was asked.

Prince Henry thought hard for a minute. Then he said quietly, "I think I'll just stay at home and point out to people all the great things you are doing—in case they don't notice them!"

A Surprise

By AMBROSE NEFF

"You can't go on this coach," said the agent.

"I've got to go on this coach. There's no other till tomorrow noon, and I've got to be in D. in twelve hours."

"Nevertheless, you can't go."

He turned away from me resolutely and stalked into the office. The coach was standing at the door, with six horses attached. I asked a lounge when it would start, and he said it would probably not get off for an hour.

I determined to go on that coach. I struck out on the road in the direction the stage would pursue, intending to do a few miles, then wait till it came along, trusting to a five dollar bill for the driver to take me on. I carried out this resolution, and when the coach reached me asked the driver to pull up. Passengers within put their heads out of the windows, as though they thought the stop was a holdup. I asked the driver to take me on. To my surprise he said I might get on if I liked, but he would advise me not to since it was very probable the coach would be attacked by road agents.

I was somewhat set back by this information, but I was bound to be in D. the next morning and had no other way of getting there. Pulling open the door, I climbed into the coach, the passengers looking at me as if they thought I was going through them for their valuables. There were two men and two women, one of the men wearing the white cravat of a clergyman, the other being a quiet, meek looking little chap, with a high keyed voice. This was in contrast with the women, who were the queerest looking persons I ever saw, both of them having voices rough enough for the driver of an ox team.

"Ain't y' armed, stranger?" asked one of the women.

"No," I replied. "I am not."

"I've got two guns. Y' kin have one on 'em if y' like."

"No, no," said the clergyman. "Don't give him a gun. If we have a fight he'd start in before we're ready."

"I don't want a gun," I said. "I've lived in these parts five years and never have been in a holdup yet. I don't believe there's going to be any hold-up. When road agents come down on a coach they don't tell people beforehand."

"Like enough," grunted one of the women.

I had been traveling nights and was tired out; so, resting my head against the cushion, I fell asleep. I was awakened by the stopping of the coach and the flinging open of both doors. A man stood at each door with a short rifle, and one of them told us to stay where we were, not make any fuss and no one would be hurt. They didn't want our valuables, but they did want the treasure box. Notwithstanding this assurance the passengers seemed to be beside themselves with terror. The clergyman begged them not to kill him, the squeaky voiced man asked them to consider his wife and children, and both the women shrieked hoarsely. The treasure box was taken off the boot and laid beside the road. Two men attended to that, and one of them was trying to get the cover off to make sure they were getting what they wanted. The door guard on that side turned to see what they were doing when the man with the squeaky voice cried:

"Shoot!"

Quick as a flash one of the women raised a cocked revolver she had concealed under a fold of her dress and shot the door guard on her side dead. There was a simultaneous crack, and the other guard fell at the hands of the other woman. Before the men who were trying to open the treasure box could get their guns to bear both fell—one shot by the clergyman, the other by the squeaky voiced man. Then both the men jumped out of the coach and finished those who were only wounded.

While they were doing this the women were tearing off their dresses and flinging their ribbon bedecked hats on the floor, both appearing as stalwart men. Having divested themselves of their tawdry finery, they, too, left the coach and stood looking down upon their victims. I asked the clergyman what it all meant.

"It means," he said, "that this is Bill Owens' gang. That's Bill over there. They have been terrorizing this yere country for months. The sheriff—that's him over there"—pointing to the squeaky voiced man—"he organized this party to get rid of 'em. The express company arranged to send a big lot o' gold over the road and let it leak out that it would go by this coach. But that box ain't got no gold in it. It's full o' sand. In order to trap 'em we traveled as ordinary folks, two of our men making themselves fine ladies."

I saw it all except the fine ladies, who did not play the parts of women overwell. I failed to get to D. on that coach because it was not intended to go any farther than the meeting with the robbers and was now needed to take their bodies back to the starting point. So I said goodbye to all and, when I saw them lumbering out of sight, started off to continue my journey on foot.

About sunset I found a house by the road, where I got some supper, and succeeded in hiring the owner to drive me into D. the next morning. The news of the trapping of the robbers had preceded me, and my coming was looked upon with surprise. I told the story to gaping audiences.

Frederick William Lehmann of St. Louis, solicitor general during the latter part of the Taft administration, probably will be the representative of the United States in the mediation of the Mexican dispute. President Wilson, it is understood, has not settled absolutely on the appointment of delegates, but it is known that Mr. Lehmann is under consideration.

The greater part of the session of the International Council of Women at Rome was taken up with the meetings of standing committees. The American delegation, headed by Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett of Washington, adopted a resolution endorsing the statement of President Wilson at Mobile last October that "The United States never again will seek to obtain one additional foot of territory by conquest."

HOG VALUES TAKE UPTURN
Lamb Market Steady to Strong—Best Grades Active, but Medium Kinds Slow, Steady—Not Many Aged Sheep There.

Union Stock Yards, South Omaha, May 12.—Cattle receipts totaled 3,400 head. Although conditions surrounding the fat cattle market were pretty much the same as on Monday, the grade was in much more satisfactory shape from the sellers' standpoint and desirable offerings at least sold to better advantage. It was the same old story over again in the cow and heifer trade. Both local packers and outside butchers were eager buyers of the desirable heifer stock and lightweight cows brought good, strong figures, while the medium and common cows were rather slow and uneven sellers. Veal calves were in active request and quotably firm, and the same held true as to bulls, stags and rough stock generally. Trade in stockers and feeders was active and prices strong for desirable grades. Inquiry for stock cows and heifers keeps up well and prices are firmly held.

Cattle quotations: Fair to prime yearlings, $8.00@9.00; choice to prime heaves, $8.60@9.00; good to choice heaves, $8.30@8.60; fair to good heaves, $8.00@8.25; common to fair heaves, $7.40@8.00; good to choice cows, $6.90@7.40; fair to good cows, $6.50@6.85; canners and cutters, $4.50@6.25; veal calves, $8.00@11.00; bulls, stags, etc., $5.50@7.50; good to choice feeders, $7.80@8.25; fair to good feeders, $7.50@7.80; common to fair feeders, $7.00@7.50; stock cows and heifers, $6.00@7.75; stock calves, $6.50@8.25.

About 10,500 hogs arrived today. The market opened out fully steady today, but closed a big five higher. Bulk of the sales was made at $8.15@8.20, and tops reached $8.25.

Sheep and lamb receipts amounted to 10,000 head. The market was active for the best grades of lambs at strong prices, while medium kinds were slow, but fully steady. Woolled lambs ranged chiefly at $8.45@8.75, the latter price being a fresh top for the season. The clipped grades had a spread mostly at $7.30@7.65. There were no aged sheep to amount to anything, though some clipped ewes brought $5.60, and a bunch of clipped wethers went at $6.00.

Quotations on sheep and lambs: Woolled stock—Lambs, Mexican, $8.25@8.75; lambs, good to choice western, $8.00@8.35; lambs, fair to good western, $7.75@8.00. Shorn stock—Lambs, good to choice, $7.25@7.65; lambs, fair to good, $6.75@7.25; yearlings, good to choice, $6.50@6.75; yearlings, fair to good, $5.75@6.25; wethers, good to choice, $5.75@6.00; wethers, fair to good, $5.50@5.75; ewes, good to choice, $5.25@5.60; ewes, fair to good, $5.00@5.25.

THE SAVING OF BOBBIE

It Led to a Disclosure

By KATHLEEN O'BRIEN

The Roberts' house party had been voted a success. It began on Friday night, and now that Sunday dinner was over the fortunate guests were bewailing the fact that the morning sun would see them all back in town again.

Robert Livingston, however, was not so sure that his visit had been altogether a successful one. He was desperately in love with pretty Hulda Roberts.

"This was no secret, for Robert had been guilty of relating his infatuation to every one who would listen to the harrowing tale for the past four years. The story was interesting to Robert, so why not to others?"

The one cloud on his horizon, and this a cloud which the brightest sunshine could not blot out, was Carlton Carruthers. There he was even now, when the precious moments were so few, dangling over the side of the piano, at which Hulda was playing softly.

Carlton Carruthers was likewise in love with Hulda, but he had never mentioned the fact to any one as yet, not even to Hulda herself.

Livingston leaned against the mantelpiece and surveyed the scene. Evidently a plan had occurred to him, for he suddenly walked over to the piano.

"Hulda, don't you think it would be a fine stunt to go for a short walk after that heavy dinner?" he suggested, absolutely ignoring the presence of Carruthers.

"Hardly in this toggerly," Hulda laughed in reply.

"What have you against Miss Roberts, old man?" interrupted Carruthers, "that you should invite her for a stroll in the snow clad in a décollete gown and paper soled slippers?"

"Well, to be frank," admitted Livingston, "I was thinking only of you."

"Of me?" echoed Carruthers.

"Yes. You see, I wanted to speak to Hulda for a moment, and I knew you detested the cold, so I suggested going out of doors to get rid of you."

He was irresistible, and all three of them laughed.

"Livingston," said Carruthers, "I'll make a bargain with you. I'll go up in the library and smoke just one hour, then I'll come back and claim Miss Roberts, and you to go to the library for an hour. What say you?"

"Gentlemen! Gentlemen!" cried Hulda. "How do you know that I could stand either of you for one whole hour?"

But Carruthers was gone, and there was nothing for her to do but stay with Livingston. Together they went into the great hall and curled up on an old settle before the open fire. The other members of the party had settled down into peaceful groups.

Most of the men had congregated in Mr. Roberts' study and were in a heated debate over politics, while the women were seated cozily about the drawing room talking over the same things that women always do discuss when the men are not about—clothes and servants.

Hulda felt something brush by her skirts and, leaning over, saw her favorite Angora cat purring at her side. Tenderly she picked the animal up in her arms.

"Bobby, dear," she cooed to it. "Did I understand you aright?" exclaimed Livingston.

"I was speaking to the cat," approved Hulda. "His name is Robinson Crusoe, but we call him Bobbie for short."

"You will forgive me, Hulda, won't you?" apologized Livingston as he nervously pulled at his perfectly fitted collar. "But you must remember that my name is Bobbie. And, Hulda," he continued as he leaned a little closer to her, "do you think you could ever come to think of me as Bobbie dear?"

"Why, Mr. Livingston," began Hulda. "Could you ever care as much for me as for?"

"You have no right to drag Mr. Carruthers into this," interrupted Hulda. "He is nothing to me."

"I was not thinking of Carruthers. I meant could you ever care as much for me as for Robinson Crusoe? Do you think?"

"I think we are sitting too near the fire and that it is high time that Bobbie was in bed like all other decent cats," answered Hulda as she gathered the Angora into her arms and rose from the settle.

deserted you before the hour was up. Pretty hard. My, my, but you must have made it disagreeable for him! May I sit upon the vacant throne?" he asked as he seated himself at the other end of the bench.

For an hour or more Carruthers and Hulda talked in a low tone and were utterly oblivious that other inhabitants lived on the globe. The whole world seemed theirs, and the thought of others even existing would have marred the picture.

Suddenly the door leading to the back of the house was thrust open, and the maidservants came dashing through in wild disorder, one after the other, yelling, "Fire! Save me! Murder!" etc. The butler appeared on the scene immediately after them and made straight for Mr. Roberts.

In a moment all was confusion. Mrs. Roberts tried to calm the women guests, while most of the men made a dash for the kitchen. Carruthers hesitated as he felt Hulda grasp his arm tightly.

He looked down into the blue eyes and the rosy lips which had just made him so happy when suddenly from out of the heavens he seemed to fall to earth with a sickening thud.

"Oh, my Bobbie! My dear, dear Bobbie! Save him, some one!" cried Hulda. Carruthers looked at the girl once more to make quite sure the cry came from her. There was no mistake. She wanted Livingston.

"Where is he?" demanded Carruthers huskily.

"Oh, he's in the kitchen! Save him, please do, for my sake!"

Carruthers waited for no more. His heart was too full, his brain whirling. Past the frightened women, down the long corridor that led to the kitchen, brushing maids aside, he strode to save his rival, Bobbie Livingston.

As he reached the kitchen he found the men had put out the slight conflagration and that it amounted to nothing. But Livingston was not in sight. Turning to Mr. Roberts, he asked for him.

"Oh, Livingston was here just a moment ago," said Mr. Roberts, "but I think he said he was going for a walk."

The men all returned to the main part of the house, assuring the ladies that it was nothing. Carruthers went over to Hulda.

"Where's Bobbie?" she asked, with great concern.

"He's gone," began Carruthers. "Oh, my dear, dear Bobbie!" wailed Hulda, not allowing him to finish his sentence. Then something brushed her skirt again, and with a scream of delight, she picked up the cat.

"You told me he was gone," she said reproachfully to Carruthers as she hugged the fluffy ball to her breast.

"Is that the Bobbie you sent me for?" gasped Carruthers.

"Of course it is," Hulda answered rather sharply. "Whom did you think I sent you for?"

"Why, Bobbie Livingston," weakly replied Carruthers as he mopped the perspiration from his brow.

Hulda hugged the cat for just a minute as she smiled. Then suddenly she turned serious and put him on the floor. She quietly sat down by Carruthers, and quite low in his ear she whispered:

"And you went in there to save Bobbie Livingston because I asked you to, and you believed all the time that—that?"

"What else could I believe when you were screaming to have some one save your dear, dear Bobbie?" asked Carlton.

"Well, dear, dear Carl, I love you better than I did before the fire, if that could possibly be," whispered Hulda. And once more the earth was inhabited by two persons only.

A Plea For the Hen.

I should like to see the hen on a plane, at least, with the turkey and the goose.

She is their superior in every way except that of size, and yet they have long held the place of honor on the Christmas and the Thanksgiving dinner table, and they have had reams and reams of poetry written about them.

But the hen, that most important of all feathered creatures—who writes poetry about her? Who even takes the trouble to know anything about her early history in America? Who owned the first hen? When and where did she land upon our shores?

Why not make amends for our long years of neglect by making her the center of the feast on the Fourth of July? Hereafter let it be our Thanksgiving turkey, our Christmas goose and our Fourth of July hen—Atlantic Monthly.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Medical Value of Rest.

The value of rest in the medical management of acute inflammatory and infectious diseases is not fully appreciated. Its effect on the circulation is significant. The average daily output of energy by the heart is 400,000 foot pounds. By simple rest in bed it is possible to save the heart a daily expenditure of 50,000 foot pounds of energy. The faster the heart beats the less time it has for rest, so that decreasing the pulse rate saves the heart. Again, in the recumbent position this organ is saved the labor of elevating that part of the blood which goes to parts above its own level. Rest of the voluntary muscles is still more important. An immense amount of energy evolved in muscle movement is conserved by rest in bed.

OUR DULL SENSES

Wonders All Around Us They Are Unable to Discern.

WE LIVE IN A HIDDEN WORLD.

There Are Colors Our Eyes Cannot See and Music and Other Sounds to Which Our Ears Are Deaf, While Our Sense of Feeling is Very Crude.

If only we had keener senses what wonders of nature would be revealed to us—wonders that we touch and know not every day of our lives! They are all around us, these hidden marvels, but imperceptible to us because of our human limitations.

Of course every one knows by now that everything we hear or see comes in a wave motion. But it is not so well known that there are a great many waves that we cannot detect at all by means of any of our senses and presumably a great many more that we have never been able to detect even artificially.

Take ether waves, for instance. We know that those of a certain length are heat waves. They can be felt, but not seen. Shorter ones are light waves, from the long red to the short violet. Even shorter ones are what are known as the ultraviolet, and these have to be detected artificially, by the taking of a picture in the dark. Even shorter ones are the X rays, which are invisible. Much longer ones than the longest heat wave are the electric waves of wireless telegraphy. Now, remember that all the waves specified differ in only one particular—that of length.

We cannot conceive of there being only waves of these wave-lengths taking place in the ether. There must be waves of nearly all lengths, from the trillionth of an inch to many miles. We know that other media may have waves of various lengths going through them at the same time. The question is how to detect these other waves and what effect they have in nature.

If our bodies had better sense organs or more in number it is astonishing to think of what new sensations we should have. If the eye, for instance, could perceive a shorter wave length than the color violet and a longer one than the color red we should have numerous and beautiful colors added to the list. If we could detect still longer ones than the infra-red each one of us would be a receiving wireless station and could get all the messages sent out without other apparatus than our eyes.

It would simply be a flash of light of a hitherto unknown color appearing and disappearing in the sky. We could see it, however, even if it appeared behind us, as the electric wave goes through bodies. So convenient added vision would be ours. If we could actually see the X rays we should need no platinum-barium-cyanide screen to look through to see the bones in our hands under the ray, as we do at present.

If the ear was more delicate and our brains more sensitive we could perceive the thousand and one wave lengths made in the air around us, of which we now are unconscious. The rapid vibration of an insect's wing would probably furnish us with even more every music than the mosquito's song. The wind as it blows across a wide meadow would give us a basso unheard at present. The soft falling of snow would make the softest and most beautiful music to our senses. It would be like a whisper in its lowness, but would be rather high pitched, like a Japanese thistle a mile away. The falling of the rain would be louder and even more high pitched.

Our very electric lights, run by an alternating current and consequently getting dimmer and brighter a hundred times a second, would cause sound waves of low pitch and low amplitude in the air, but would give a known musical note.

If our sense of touch was more delicate we could feel the roughnesses along the surface of the smoothest mirror. For it has them. We should be able to detect small particles in the air that now brush us by unconsciously. The breeze on our cheek would feel like so many tiny balls of paper rushing and rattling by. The body would feel every thread of the texture of the garments covering it. Some of these things, of course, would not be pleasant until we got used to them.

It is the idea of some philosophers that an actual heaven would be an increase in our perceptions and senses to an enormous power, for then we should certainly live in a different world, one far surpassing in knowledge and pleasure and power the one we live in—and yet it would be actually the same world, the difference being simply in our power to cognize it.—A. L. Hodges in Chicago Record-Herald.

An Easy Job.

Visitor—I understand that your boy is studying to be an electrical engineer? Farmer—Well, I advised him to take it up. I heard some fellows say that nobody really knew much about electricity, so I thought maybe Joe would have some chance of passin' examinations!—London Express.

Fragile.

"She has a complexion like Dresden china."
"Yes, and it is like Dresden china in another way."
"What is that?"
"If she's not careful with it it will crack."—Baltimore American.

John A. Anderson and sister, Mrs. Larson of Wausa, left Friday for a visit in Chicago. They will also visit at other points in Illinois.

Superintendent E. D. Ludak has been elected for the principal of the normal school at O'Neil. He leaves June 8th to take up his duties.

Dr. Tomlinson went to Omaha Monday where he was joined by Mrs. Tomlinson, both going on to Lincoln to attend the State Medical Convention.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Aistrop, Mrs. W. O. Harmon, Mrs. Jacob Heikes and C. W. Long went to Wayne Thursday to attend the funeral of Mrs. Luther Milliken.

Miss Hannah Hoogner is spending several days at Wahoo visiting her sister, Miss Esther and attending the commencement exercises of Luther College.

Miss Vida Learner was elected delegate from the local lodge and left Saturday for Lincoln to attend Grand Chapter of the U. E. S. She expects to visit friends in Iowa before returning home.

A May Day program was given by the pupils of the Walter school northwest of town Friday evening. After the program boxes were sold, the receipts being $13.00. Miss Naomi Hoogner is the teacher.

The following officers were elected by the W. E. F. D. at their meeting Monday evening: President, W. F. Westrand; vice-president, Victor E. Larson; chief, J. H. W. Johnson; assistant chief, H. W. Meyer; secretary, G. W. Anderson; treasurer, C. B. Hoogner; custodian, L. W. Schwedhelm.

The members of the Mission church pleasantly surprised Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wessman, who were married in New York two weeks ago, Tuesday evening. The guests carried with them tempting refreshments which were served after an evening of visiting. Rev. Wallin and August Helgren gave talks fitting the occasion. The bride and groom were presented with a purse of silver. About two hundred guests were in attendance.

Mrs. Robert Hanson entertained eight mothers and babies at her home Saturday afternoon in honor of Mother's Day. A Miss Nettie Samuelson, dressed as a nurse, entertained the babies while the guests participated in the various games planned by the hostess. The feature of the afternoon was the baby's contest in which Thomas Schwedhelm carried off the honors. Dainty refreshments were served at the close of a very pleasant afternoon.

Once a corporation wanted to see for itself the value of newspaper advertising. So it selected 18 towns at random. It picked one dealer who advertised in each town, then selected three or four in all the names were written down 18 advertisers were shown and 56 non-advertisers. Then the amount of business was compared. The 18 dealers did nearly twice as much business as did the 56. Get that? Twice as much business among one-third as many dealers! Moral; advertise. Do it consistently, not spasmodically. It pays.—Stock Yards Daily Journal.

Minuteness of Electrons.

Crookes, in his vacuum tubes around 1880, first made by means of very high potential electrical disruptive discharges into particles so inconceivably minute that he called them matter in the ultra-gaseous, or fourth state. In 1890 the modern master among minds proved these particles to be themselves electricity. Rutherford, Ramsay, Becquerel, Soddy, the Curies, Larmor and others confirmed the mighty millikyan. Then came Robert Andrews Millikyan, University of Chicago, in 1911, and astonished every scientific man in the world by actually isolating and weighing one of these excessively minute entities.

This was at once conceded to be the greatest work of man since Newton discovered how to use infinitesimals. Of these particles, if they could be forced to the side by side in contact—impossible by man—a row one inch long would contain 12,700,000,000,000. They are known to be pure electricity. They are called electrons, and nothing exists but electrons.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

A Revelation to Cricketers.

The technique of baseball is profoundly interesting to the student of the dynamics of games. Some years ago the bowling, or rather "pitching," was revolutionized. It was then made legal to throw the ball. Hence the wonderful armor which the catcher wears. But mere pace soon gave way to graduated pace and swerving. Never in the history of sport has the human hand shown such control over an implement as the hand of a pitcher over the flight of the ball. Much superstition has gathered round this and many fabulous performances, cork-screw swerves, swerves reversed, jumping balls, and so forth, are on the lips of crowds. Being allowed no run, as the bowler is at cricket, the pitcher has brought to a fine art the mechanism of position and delivery. The same is true of the batter, who has to deal with full pitches only, very different from bouncing balls. The attitudes of these men are a revelation to cricketers.—London Spectator.

Theater Prices—Long Ago.

In Shakespeare's day the ordinary prices for seats in theaters were: Boxes 1 shilling, pit sixpence, gallery twopenny, which, making allowance for the difference in money values, means that boxes were cheaper, but that for other parts of the house the charges were about the same as they are today. Sunday afternoons, when new plays were usually presented, all prices were doubled.—London Chronicle.

NOTABLES IN THE LIMELIGHT

Colonel G. W. Goethals, Who Will Govern Canal Zone.

© by American Press Association.

Plans for the organization of a permanent government on the Panama canal zone have been submitted to President Wilson by Colonel George W. Goethals, who made the trip to Washington for that purpose. The new government will come into existence on April 1 next, when Colonel Goethals takes the title of governor. The isthmian canal commission goes out of existence on that date by executive order and Colonel Goethals becomes the civil and administrative head of the zone. The term of office is four years and the salary $10,000. As chairman of the commission and chief engineer Colonel Goethals has been receiving a salary of $15,000.

The new governor is a plain, straightforward, clean living man, without any pretensions and no ambitions aside from a desire to do his full duty. He is a six footer, ruddy, with snow white hair. His tastes are simple and money means little to him. He is a hard worker and a poor man. His name, by the way, isn't George Washington Goethals. He was christened George Williams, but the late "Sunset" Cox, who appointed him to West Point, only had his initials, and he put the name down as George Washington. After the appointment was made the red tape of the army made it impossible to have the error corrected, so the George Washington has clung to Goethals. Colonel Goethals was born in Brooklyn, fifty-six years ago, and is of Dutch descent. He entered West Point in 1876, was graduated four years later and assigned to the corps of engineers. In 1907 he was appointed chairman and chief engineer of the isthmian canal commission.

Coal Strike Investigation.

That the congressional subcommittee investigating the Colorado coal miners' strike is determined to get at the bottom facts is apparent. At the beginning of the hearing at Trinidad the subcommittee indicated that one of its chief purposes is to learn whether the constitution and laws of Colo-do are fairly enforced and observed in the coal fields. The congressional subcommittee is composed of Representatives Martin D. Foster of Illinois, chairman; Howard Sutherland of West Virginia, R. W. Austin of Tennessee, J. M. Evans of Montana and J. P. Byrnes of South Carolina. Congressman Evans, who has been very active in the investigation, is a native of Missouri, fifty-one years old, and is a graduate of West Point Military academy and of the University of Missouri. Since 1888 he has practiced law at Missoula, Mont. For several years he was police judge of that city and was largely instrumental in establishing commission government there. He was the first commission mayor elected in Montana.

MOUNTAINS OF IGNORANCE.

Present School Methods, Says a Scientist, Will Never Level Them.

There is not money enough in the entire world to make impression against the astonishing mountains of ignorance. In this great United States of America one in 10,000 perhaps have never heard that the universe is run by laws and does not know that there are laws of nature. Entire millions are born, pass through a lifetime in this otherwise beautiful world and die without really having seen anything. Their eyes see objects, motions and natural operations, but their minds are completely blank, so far as knowing of what they are viewing.

"Education"—it is painful to mar pure white paper with this word. The present appalling system of forcing children to study branches against which nature has decreed, thus permanently injuring their minds, natures and personalities, ought to be punished by some newly enacted law. They put a number of totally unlike children in the same class and expect unlike beings to learn like subjects and all in the same time to be able to withstand the present brain curdling methods of "examination."

If all nations on earth should suddenly stop war and the manufacture of alcohol and use every dollar in the attempt to educate each child separately some faint impression could be made against the enormous ranges of mountains of ignorance. Each child hereafter born could perhaps have at least one law of nature repeated within hearing. And each child born to mathematics could have instruction in mathematics by teachers knowing something of the mentality of the student.

A fine watch would not be taken to a blacksmith; a costly dynamo would not be for an instant placed in charge of one not knowing the laws ruling the machine. Yet far more delicate mechanisms, the minds of children, are placed under domination of teachers not knowing child nature.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

A PLACE NOT ON THE MAP.

Yet Girville is a Pleasant Place, With Some Drawbacks.

Girville—a pleasant little hamlet on the road to the tablelands of Matrimony, with a branch line that connects with the Old Maid range of foothills.

At one time this place depended almost entirely upon nature for its appearance. Bucolic colors were predominant, and there was a simplicity about it very pleasing and restful to the eye. Of late years, however, the city painters and decorators have come in and with their colors have given it an artificial appearance, which for many old fashioned people has largely curtailed its charm. Girville, indeed, now has a reputation for cheap display which no other place can hope to rival.

Girville at one time was governed almost entirely by an eminently respectable body called elders, but it has long since scornfully discarded their help and governs itself, or, at least, claims the right to do so.

Its principal industries are ragtime, fiction, silk-stocking, velvet-slippers and red paint. There is also a large spoon factory on the edge of the town. An appeal to the legislature to have the name Girville changed to Chatterville was refused on the ground that Chatterville and Girville are already synonyms.

The inhabitants of Girville are extremely restless and fickle. Not satisfied with the place, they are constantly attempting to leave it and, after leaving, to get back again.—Thomas L. Masson in Life.

Macaroni as a Food.

The rank which macaroni holds as a food is shown by the following comparison: As an energy producer it outranks lean steak, for it contains 1,650 calories of energy to the pound, while the steak has but 950. While macaroni costs from 10 to 15 cents a pound and contains only 7 to 10 per cent of moisture which is wasted, the lean steak contains 70 to 75 per cent of waste moisture. Comparing macaroni, further, with the ordinary vegetables, in point of view of energy, it is found that white potatoes contain but 365 calories, spinach 95, turnips 160, cabbage 115, onions 190, lettuce 65.

She Was Deliberate.

It is said Dinah Marla Mulock Craik, the famous author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," made a habit of leaving at her bank the manuscript of each of her stories as soon as it was completed. It would remain there perhaps six months, and then she would call for it and see how the story affected her after that lapse of time. If it pleased her the manuscript was sent to the publisher. Otherwise it was rewritten or thrown away.

From the Heart.

Musical comedy writer's wife on the first night, bitterly: "Willie, do you know you've provided your heroine with eight different costumes in this piece already though it's only the second act and you don't give me half that many in a whole year?"—New York Post.

Dressing Leather.

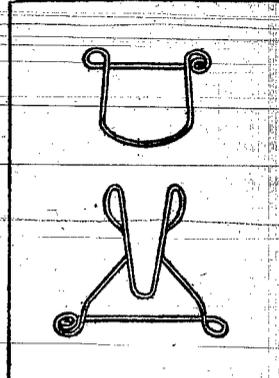

One of the earliest occupations of mankind was the dressing of leather, and it is remarkable that Canadian Indians, Laplanders and Africans dress skins remarkably well, although their processes and means are necessarily of the rudest kind.—Detroit Free Press.

Another golf record has been broken. A man has fozzled thirteen times in succession without saying one naughty word. He is a dumb man.—Charleston News and Courier.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Hook and Eye That Fasten Without Sewing.

A new kind of hook and eye that has some distinct points of difference from the other types has been designed by a Pennsylvania woman. The chief feature of the new article is that except in places where there is great strain it is not necessary to sew either part fast to the clothing. Both hook and eye are equipped with safety pin devices by which they are attached to waist or skirt, and it requires a very short time to affix them. Furthermore, if the positions are not exactly right they can be easily and speedily adjusted without the bother of ripping thread and sewing it over again. If there is too much strain on the pins a few turns of thread will make the parts secure. The throat of the hook is unusually deep and protects it from being easily disengaged, while a hump, after the style of many modern hooks and eyes, retains the eye in its adjusted position on the hook.

Flank Steak Stuffed.

A flank steak may be made particularly appetizing when stuffed and roasted. Remove the skin from a four pound piece of flank. Place on one-half of the meat a stuffing made from softened breadcrumbs, well seasoned with sage, minced onion, salt and pepper. Roll the other half over the first and tie or sew the edges firmly together. Coat the outside of the meat with a paste made by rubbing together one tablespoonful of flour, two of butter and one of boiling water. Place the roast in a well oiled baking dish and bake in a moderate oven until tender. Serve with stuffed onions and a rich brown sauce made from the stock in the pan.

Chocolate and Rice Meringue.

Two cupfuls of milk, one-fourth cupful of rice, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of butter, one-third cupful of sugar, one square of melted chocolate, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla, one-half cupful of seeded raisins, two eggs. Scald the milk, add the rice and salt and cook until the rice is soft. Add the butter, sugar, melted chocolate, vanilla, raisins and the beaten yolks of the eggs. Bake in a moderate oven until firm. Cover with a meringue made of the whites of two eggs, beaten stiff and sweetened with three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Serve with whipped cream.

Scalloped Codfish.

One cupful of cooked rice, one cupful of grated cheese, one cupful of flaked and cooked codfish, one cupful of buttered crumbs. Soak the flaked codfish in hot water for two hours, place in cold water to simmer for ten minutes and drain. Arrange the rice, cheese and codfish in alternate layers in a baking dish and moisten each layer with milk or cream. Cover with buttered crumbs and place in a hot oven to heat and to brown the crumbs.

Kitchen Kinks.

A little table salt added to the starch is said to be a help in ironing. When preparing fish for a meal they will scale much more easily if they are first dipped in boiling water. A little flour sprinkled over the top of a cake will help in preventing the icing from running off. It is said that a little vinegar added to the water in which a cracked egg is to be boiled will prevent the white from boiling out.

Cornmeal Muffins.

Stir into a pint of buttermilk or clabber a pint of cornmeal, a teaspoonful of soda, one tablespoonful of lard or butter and one egg, well beaten. Put the soda in the milk, mix the butter or lard with the cornmeal, add the salt, then add the egg and the buttermilk with the soda. Bake in greased muffin pans in a hot oven.

Water Stains on Furniture.

To remove water stains from varnished furniture pour olive oil into a dish and scrape a little white wax into it. This mixture should be heated until the wax melts, then rubbed sparingly on the stains. Finally rub the surface with a soft linen rag until it is restored to brilliancy.

Removing Paint from Glass.

Take acetic acid and dilute it one-half in hot water, then apply to the paint spots on the glass while it is warm. Repeat if it gets too chilled. The hot acid will not hurt the hands, fabrics or the glass, but it must be kept from children.
