Social Notes

Members of the Eastern Star had one of the happy social events of the week Monday evening when they installed new officers, listened to reports of the delegates from the Grand Chapter, where J. G. Mines covered himself with glory and won a name over the state last week. After the installation ceremony the men who belong to the order served refreshments to about 75 members and all enjoyed a social hour over strawberries, cream and cake. The new officers are Mrs. J. E. Marsteler, worthy matron; I. H. Britell, worthy patron; Nettie Craven, associate matron; Miss Klingen, conductress; Mrs. H. S. Ringland, associate conductress; Mrs. J. G. Mines, secretary; Mrs. D. C. Main, treasurer.

The Minerva club had their last meeting for the year with Mrs. Lou Owen in their new home. Mrs. Berry was leader. The members answered to roll call by giving the most interesting event which they had experienced on some vacation trip. Mesdames Britton and Lutgen each sang a solo accompanied by Mrs. Beeman. Mrs. Huse played a selection from the "Flying Dutchman". Mrs. Berry summarized the chapter in International Relations and Mrs. Bright told of the government in the Philippine Island. Mrs. Owen served a delicious two-course luncheon and the club adjourned for the year.

The State Journal of Lincoln contains the following social note of interest to Wayne people, the bride to be being sister to Miss Piper of the Normal:

"Mr. and Mrs. Joel Alfred Piper have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Helen M., to Dr. Clark H. Hagenbuch of Cleveland, O. The wedding will take place at 8 o'clock on the evening of June 3 at 1731 D. street.

Mesdames Strahan, Chace and Ellis entertained about fifty ladies at Kensington at the home of Mrs. Strahan Wednesday afternoon. An elaborate two-course luncheon was served by Misses Freda Ellis, Marguarite Chace Dorothy Ellis and Helen Main. The ladies drew cards to find their partners for lunch. There was music and an enjoyable afternoon was spent.

Members of the Crucible club held an interesting meeting Monday evening. H. S. Ringland had an interesting paper telling of the new bank reserve law. An informal discussion of the law resulted in a better understanding of the new law. Attorney Berry is to have a paper at the next meeting which will tell a lawyer's views on some knotty legal questions.

Mrs. Chas. Shulteis entertained at a 1 o'clock dinner Sunday. Their guests were Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Williams of this place and Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Raymond of Des Moines.

The Junior Bible Circle held an interesting session Saturday evening at the home of E. Y. Miles and wife just west of the city. Those present enjoyed it much.

Cattle and hogs still continue to go from this station and the money comes back of course. Morris Thompson and Simon Goeman went to Chicago Saturday with four cars of cattle which they had bought of John Grier, Emil Splittgerber and Kirwin Bros.

The first of the week Wm. Damme and Wm. Peters each went in with two cars of cattle and Geo. McEachen a car of hogs to Omaha, and Wednesday Eph Beckenhauer shipped two cars of fat cattle, and today E. A. Chichester is shipping a car of stock. Carl Fervet also sent his son Ernest to Omaha with a car each of hogs and cattle.

SENIOR CLASS PLAY A SUCCESS

The Class of 1914 Finish High School Course This Week. Commencement Exercises Friday Evening

On Friday evening at the M. E. church the commencement exercises of the high school will be held. The program will consist of music, the class address by Chancellor Fulmer of the Nebraska Wesleyan University and the presentation of diplomas by Prof. I. H. Britell, president of the board of education. The subject of Mr. Fulmer's address is "The Vision". The public is invited.

Following is the class roll: Ralph Bohner, Hattie Crockett, Blodwin Davis, Olive Griffith, Nelle Gustafson, Clara Liedtke, John Lower, Hays Main, Wm. McEachen, Henrietta Moler, Ferne Oman, Gene Payne, Frank Roe, Irven Sala, Earl Schroer, Irwin Sears, Gladys Wood, Ensign Young

Class Play a Great Success

"The Touchdown" the play given on Tuesday evening by the graduating class of the high school was enjoyed by a large house and in every way it was universally pronounced a great success. A play strictly clean in every sense and teaching the noble lesson of self-sacrifice and the ultimate triumph of right and the reward of duty.

Each individual player performed his part excellently and all merit being called stars.

For the success of the play too much credit cannot be given Mrs. Phillips and Miss Braunger who trained the students and directed the play. They were most fortunate in the assignment of characters, each and every one seeming to appear in the part most naturally fitted for. It would be at the risk of criticism—and perhaps just criticism to attempt to mention the names of those who did best, so well was every part taken that where two or three are talking of respective merits they do not agree except in the verdict given above.

The class will give the play at Carroll Monday evening next, and the Democrat advises its readers to attend, predicting that they will enjoy it greatly.

Ministers Pleased With Wayne

Last week there was a session of the northern conference of the German Nebraska district of the Evangelical-Lutheran Synod at Wayne which was attended by ministers of the denomination from many places there being more than two score of the brethren present. They were welcomed to the city by Mayor Chace, who did the honors for the city in proper manner but not in German. Wm. Piepenstock welcomed them to Wayne in behalf of the congregation of the local church, and on Friday afternoon was instrumental in securing the services of enough automobiles to give the guests a ride over the city. They were much pleased with the beauty of the place, and beyond a doubt they will be glad to visit Wayne again.

Their sessions were largely devoted to church matters and their recommendation will be presented in due form to the Synod this fall. The meetings of interest to the public were well attended by the church membership here, especially the mission festival on Sunday afternoon, when it was proved to the visiting ministers that the members of the Wayne congregation join their servants in their efforts to evangelize the world. Temporal as well as spiritual needs were looked after.

Interesting papers were read on "Baptism," "Music in our Services," "Our Answers to the Questions of Doubters and Infidels" and "Is Jesus a Historical Person?" The discussions on matters pertaining to the expansion of God's kingdom showed "that these ministers march onward in the battle against the enemies of our souls and gladly make any possible sacrifice to win souls to Christ."

The officers elected were Rev. Fr. Rabe, Bloomfield, president; Rev. Schult, Fremont, treasurer; and Rev. M. Kaalen, Leigh, secretary.

When leaving the ministers praised the hospitality of the people of Wayne.

There will be Swedish services at the Cid Swanon home at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, the minister from Wakefield coming to preach.

Local News

Monday Mrs. A. M. Price came from Holdrege to visit at the home of her brother, L. P. Walker and family. With her came Kenneth, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Walker who has been cared for at the Price home since last November, when he was taken there convalescing from an attack of typhoid fever which afflicted every member of the Walker family, and for the time broke up their home. Mrs. Walker and the other children spent the convalescing period at the home of her parents near Masketel, and returned to Wayne early in the spring. They all escaped death, but were seriously ill, and several members of the family were at the brink of the dark river.

Little Leon Woodrow Green, one year and seven months old, youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Green, passed away Saturday evening after an illness of some months. The little one was taken sick last winter with pneumonia and since that time has not been in the best of health, and a short time ago he was taken down with the measles which went to his heart and caused his death. G. W. Green and daughter, Mrs. Wilson Bittner, father and sister to the bereaved father arrived Sunday, and Monday Mrs. Beckhamer and Louis McCanna, sister and brother of the deceased mother arrived to attend the funeral.

At Creighton Tuesday night they had one of the biggest rains they have had in five years. There were five and one-half inches of water fell between 12 o'clock Tuesday night and 4 o'clock Wednesday morning, causing a wash-out of three bridges on the Northwestern between Verdigris and Creighton and at Creighton the depot was completely surrounded by water. It is reported that the Northwestern bridge crews are working both day and night and expect to have all trains over that line running on schedule time within a few days.

Local News

R. N. Donahey has added to his optical equipment here a bench and power for cutting, grinding and drilling lens for glasses, which will enable him to produce the finished glasses without the usual wait necessitated by having to send the prescription away for the work. It frequently happens that one can now be fitted and the work finished the same day that the order is given—then he will have the satisfaction of knowing that the work is done right as well as on time, and another feature is that the necessary charge for this work will remain here. The Democrat man was in watching the process of finishing a pair of glasses which demonstrated the advantages of having the work finished by the one who tested the eyes. We are glad to note this evidence of prosperity for the young man as well as symptoms of other achievements in the near future.

Hoskins was represented here by a small delegation Tuesday when one of their citizens was to have been tried on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, but the trial was put off until some date in June. J. M. Huglin, who was among the number of witnesses, was a caller, and informed the Democrat that the wet and dry contest at that place is going gaily on. The saloon men appear to be losing ground, some who signed their petition having been induced to have their names stricken. A remonstrance containing 82 names has been filed, and the chances appear to be about even that Hoskins will join Emerson in the ranks of prohibition towns.

James Oliver came the first of the week from his home in south western Oklahoma to visit at the home of his cousin, S. E. Auker and family. He expected to find his uncle, Mr. Auker's father, whom he thought lived here, and on Wednesday left for Rushville to visit him for a time. He and Mr. A. had not met prior to this time for more than forty years.

Quite a delegation of Sholes people were at Wayne Monday, when a suit for collecting a note was on trial between the Bank of Sholes and A. L. Hurlbut. The judgment was for plaintiff. Defendant gives notice of appeal.

Those from here seemed especially happy, and he was entertained by them or as their guests. He hob-nobbed with the commander of the place, who is anxious to come to Wayne to the annual reunion and says that he is coming. Comparing war records with the commander he discovered that they had frequently been near neighbors while in service. Mr. Stalmsmith thinks that it pays big in satisfaction to attend the state and national meetings.

Cleaned From Democrat's Exchanges

There are 17 in the class which is to graduate at West Point next week.

The Times at Pender says that the city needs a new sewer system in the interest of cleanliness and public health.

At Coleridge they now have $3,000 assured toward a fund for a new modern opera house. Most of it is made up by subscriptions of $50 and $100 each.

The postmaster question at Pender is soon to be settled by the Stephens plan. There appears to be about five candidates in the race. We did not see any mention of the date of the election.

The first of the series of Good Roads-Good Fellowship runs, held under the auspices of the various clubs of Omaha, will be held on June 5 and 6, the schedule taking in thirty cities in Southern Nebraska.

Nine cities of the United States will be represented by 201 athletes at least, in the national tournament of the Tel Jed Sokol which will be held in Omaha July 21 and 26. The July tournament will be the first ever held in this section.

Farmers in neighboring counties are beginning to get busy on silos for fall and silo-cutting machines. Wonder if Wayne county farmers are going to neglect a silo another year. There are a few here, and the owners are pleased with the returns from them. They save the feed—in fact almost double the feeding value of a corn crop.

Reports coming to the agricultural college at Lincoln indicate that there is a shortage of the colt crop this spring, not only in Nebraska, but quite generally over the whole country. This naturally means that there will be an extra price paid for horses and that it will be wise to give the best of care to all colts—in fact that is a good thing to do at any time. Good care of the mother means good care of the foal, and not to much work for her while the colt is suckling.

The "Omaha" has replied to the complaint from the people up along the Wynot branch, claiming that the service given is not adequate and that the company furnishes ample opportunity for stock shipment and that the passenger service is ample and frequent enough. The Wynot Tribune claims that the stock from that line is too late in for the best market, and frequently has to remain unsold in the yards at Sioux City. The Tribune says that the people object to being all day in a third class coach that is crowded to the limit to travel a distance of 50 miles. The fact that the company will bury all passengers who die of old age on a trip over the line free of expense does not suit the live young fellows who can usually reach their destination before death overtakes them. The case will be argued before the commission soon.

MAKES BACKACHE QUICKLY DISAPPEAR

A Few Doses Relieves All Such Miseries. Bladder Weakness, Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism Promptly Vanish

It is no longer necessary for any one to suffer with backaching, kidney trouble, have disagreeable bladder and urinary disorders to contend with, or be tortured with rheumatism, stiff joints, and its heart-wrenching pains, for the new discovery, Croxone, quickly and surely relieves all such troubles.

Croxone is the most wonderful remedy yet devised for ridding the system of uric acid and driving out all the poisonous impurities which cause such troubles. It is entirely different from all other remedies. It is not like anything else ever used for the purpose. It acts on the principle of cleaning out the poisons and removing the cause.

It soaks right in through the walls, membranes and linings, like water in a sponge, neutralizes, dissolves, and makes the kidneys sift out and filter away, all the uric acid and poisons from the blood, and leaves the kidneys and urinary organs clean, strong, healthy and well.

It matters not how long you have suffered, how old you are, or what you have used, the very principle of Croxone is such, that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. There is nothing else on earth like it. It starts to work the minute you take it and relieves you the first time you use it.

If you suffer with pains in your back and sides, or have any signs of kidney, bladder troubles, or rheumatism, such as puffy swellings under the eyes or in the feet and ankles, if you are nervous, tired, and run down, or bothered with urinary disorders, Croxone will quickly relieve you of your misery. You can secure an original package of Croxone at trifling cost from any first-class druggist. All druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if it fails in a single case.

A conference of pastors and school teachers for the purpose of bettering rural conditions will be held at the Nebraska University Farm from June 11 to 17. Aside from the addresses of Nebraska pastors and faculty members of the agricultural college, Rev. Mathey B. McNutt, field secretary of the department of country life of the Presbyterian church, and William A. McKeever, professor of philosophy of the Kansas agricultural college are on the program. Agricultural problems as well as those of a religious and social nature will be discussed. The conference is intended for all those interested in the betterment of rural life. Special conferences will be arranged for women.

Sixteen Madison county men were admitted to citizenship by Judge Welsh at Madison Monday. Chas. H. Kelsey says Judge Welsh has the largest and heaviest district in the state. Five counties, all large and pretty well populated cause him to administer to between 70,000 and 80,000 people and Mr. Kelsey says the cases of litigation in this district both outnumber and outweigh in amounts involved any of the other districts. A three-weeks session will probably be held at this time. Mr. Kelsey points out that with a smaller district it would be possible to hold court every two months, thereby hastening the settlement of claims. Litigation is decreasing in quantity, according to Mr. Kelsey, but the amounts involved are greater. —Norfolk Press.

At Norfolk they are planning for a meeting to be addressed by a single-tax advocate of national reputation, and are having trouble to find a suitable place in which to hold the meeting. The auditorium is occupied, and the rental asked would be prohibitive for a free educational meeting. The Y. M. C. A., built no doubt by donations from the citizens, is also considered almost private property, and for religious meetings. The auditorium of the high school building was used for the suffragets, and some objected to that. Why, we cannot see. What is or should be more free to the public for educational purposes than the school building we cannot conceive. Paid for by the public, owned by the public, they should be free to be used by the public for any educational purpose; the schools, of course, having the first right, but the idle hours should belong to the owners. Wayne is fortunate in having in addition to a fine high school building a city building with a fine auditorium and the only regret is that it is not used more for public gatherings of an educational nature than it now is.

Of Cedar county political gossip the Blade at Coleridge has the following to say:

John Reifenrath of near Fordyce has filed for float representative for Cedar and Knox to go before the democratic primaries.

F. O. Binderup of Wynot, has filed as a candidate for County Superintendent before the democratic primaries. W. E. Miller will also run for his fourth or fifth term. Miss Dwyer, of Randolph will not now go before the democratic primaries. It is reported that Chas. Culler of Hartington will be the republican candidate as he will have no opposition to his nomination.

It seems that Randolph is not as favorable to Sheriff McFadden as had been reported and that he will likely have a democratic candidate to oppose him. Should their man decide not to run then they will ask for recognition with a democratic candidate or county clerk.

It looks as if Frank O'Gara will walk into the county attorney's office practically without opposition should he desire to stand as a candidate.

Randolph parties say there is some doubt whether John Kuhl will enter the democratic primaries for state senator against E. B. Hishman, present county treasurer.

Judge Cave informs the Blade editor that there were not so many widows in Coleridge already that the Mrs. Blade would have cause to mourn or rejoice as hit her fancy. He is not a candidate for county judge and is not "in the hands of his friends" either. The republicans have about dispensed finding a candidate to oppose Judge Bryant. He's too foxy for them.

The woods are full of congressional aspirants. All seem to think the bosses can defeat Stephens but it may develop that the men who elected the postmasters also will vote in the primaries and at the general election and if they treat the bosses there as they did in the postoffice elections they won't be very good to them.

Henry Korff will probably be re-nominated and re-elected for state representative.

Farmers Co-operative Laundry

Last week the Democrat said a few words about advantages which we believed could be obtained by real co-operation between town and country, and now we pick up an exchange which tells of a successful operation of an institution of which Wayne is in dire need, and if city and country should unite on the enterprise it would pay its own way and greatly reduce the burden of every household that participated in the enterprise. Here is the article for your consideration.

The first farmers' co-operative laundry in the United States is now in operation at Chatfield, Minn., where it is doing much to eliminate for the overworked farm woman the terrors of "blue Monday." Chatfield is only a small village and the laundry's patrons are almost entirely obtained from the open country around. Coarse clothing of all sorts, overalls, rugs, bed clothing, and fine fabrics as well are handled at a uniform price of 5 cents a pound for washing and ironing. An extra charge is made for such articles as need to be ironed by hand. The laundry is managed in connection with a co-operative creamery, paying to the creamery a reasonable rental for the use of a part of its building. Modern machinery was installed at the beginning and an experienced laundryman engaged as superintendent. For the first year of operation, which has just closed, the receipts were $5,403. 70 per cent of which was paid out for wages. Patrons received a dividend of 10 per cent and the stockholders 6 per cent additional. The success of the innovation will, it is said, prove most encouraging to rural workers everywhere.

P. S.—Since clipping the above the editor accepted an invitation, reluctantly, to assist the wife and daughters with the family washing, the "wash-lady" being away on a vacation, and if the women of the community really wish to create sentiment for a co-operative laundry they should make an excuse for the man of the house to arise at the peep o' day and assist in the task of cleansing the dirty clothes. We can conceive of nothing that will make a stronger appeal, for "self-preservation" is the first law of nature.

Depths to Which Crops Use Moisture

"Oats, spring wheat, barley, and corn feed to a depth of four feet," says bulletin No. 140 of the agricultural experiment station of Nebraska. "Winter wheat feeds to a depth of six or seven feet; perennial grasses dry the soil out to a greater depth. Alfalfa will send its roots to greater depths for water than any other common farm crop if water is available in all intervening portions of the soil to supply the roots while making this growth. In this manner alfalfa on the second bottom lands usually obtains permanent water supply. The roots frequently go down to the sheet water where it is within twenty or thirty feet of the surface."

Winside to Have New Rural Route

A new rural route has been outlined from Winside, and an examination of applicants for the position of carrier will be held at this place on June 13 to select the best qualified applicant. Applicants who pass a creditable examination will be considered eligible for vacancies which may occur within the county for a time following the examination.

The new route necessitates the replotting the other routes some, and this has been done and sent to the department for approval. The new route will go northwest from Winside as a general direction, and will be 28 miles in length.

When Catalog Houses Were Young

Before us is an article telling of the great orders of catalogues placed in these days by the mail order houses. It says that the improved printing equipment of the city offices enables these books to be made in great numbers. It is no unusual thing to find printing plants, says the article, to deliver from 40,000 to 50,000 each day for a week to some firm. Another house gave an order for a job which took 6,000 tons of paper and 125 tons of ink (that looks like too much ink, but the paper says so) But the writer started to tell of the early days, when working in a job establishment in Chicago when one of the regular jobs was to get out a catalogue almost every month for what was then the leading mail order house of the city. Their "price lists" consisted usually of from 32 to 48 and sometimes 64 pages of a pamphlet about 6 by 9 inches in size. These were ordered by the ton. The forms were kept standing and changes and corrections were made by hand composition and the form electrotyped to print from. Occasionally, when holiday time or some special season was coming the changes of copy came in with an order for two tons as quick as possible. This was back in 1885-6. The mail order houses have today reached a magnitude never dreamed of in those days, and they prove the power of persistent advertising to gather in such wealth, for as a rule they have all become rich and powerful. It is a long stride from two tons of catalogues to 6,000 tons.

Why Should We Carry Accident and Health Insurance?

Because no one is immune from accident or sickness. They are no respectors of person. Accidents of the most serious character oftentimes arise from the most trivial causes, causes that cannot be averted. They lurk in every foot-step. Our 20th century improvements have made accidents more numerous and naturally accident and health insurance is becoming popular and a necessity. Sometimes it is inevitable and the only time to provide against sickness is when we are in good health.

The story of Chas. S. Mellon relative to the looting of New Haven railway indicates that the recent election of a president by the people rather than the interests came none too soon; that the death of such a man as he shows Morgan to have been not a bad thing for the American people. Should show the railway commission that they had far better cause an investigation of the mismanagement of railroads and the stealings from them by their officials and owners than to raise a freight rate and thus compel the people to contribute vast sums of money for the rascals to divide among themselves with a scoop shovel. Two prices or more were paid for some roads and no one knew why; loans were made of vast sums of money where influence was needed or silence required. It was one of many rotten deals made possible by lax laws and officials placed in office by the interests.

There is a strong and apparently growing sentiment for Governor Morehead to become the nominee of the democrats again, waiving the pledge or statement which he repeated so frequently during the last campaign: If there is a practically unanimous demand from the party for him to again lead it, he should not refuse without good reason, but if he has to fight to get it and head a rump convention if he fails it will be far better for him to adhere to his pledge. No one can doubt but that he meant what he said, and he has not yet said anything different; in fact, he is announced as a candidate from his district for the congressional nomination—and that may be the cause of the demand that he stand for re-nomination for governor. The record as governor is not bad, and with past experience another term might be better.

Aurora business men have agreed to pay $600 for a series of band concerts during the summer. At Seward the business men have engaged a band from Lincoln for a Saturday evening concert each week. The business men of that place have raised a fund of $3,600 to be used during the season for public enterprises, and from this the cost of the concerts is to be taken. We suggest that the secretary of our commercial club send a stamped envelope to the secretary of the commercial club at that place and see if he can be bribed to tell how they raised the money. Seward is no larger place than Wayne, but their commercial club appears to have a better plan to raise money than we have put in practice here.

Roosevelt is home again, and regaining health from his recent fever. He was met by a tug at quarantine and taken directly to his pier at Oyster Bay—and there was no public demonstration. He talked no politics and mildly asserted that he had been misquoted by some papers that have been pretending to quote him on political questions. But it is enough for one announcement to tell that he is home.

An Official Visit to Our School

Our high school was honored by official visitors last week. Two men, one of whom has right to use an official title drove to the capital from the west part of the county, and stopped their car at our imposing school building and sought entrance. They seemed a bit mystified by the appearance within, but as a lady appeared they inquired for Abe Carter, and were informed that she did not know whether he attended there or not but he was not in her grade, and suggested that they ask at the office. Finding no trace of Abe here they asked for an interview with Chas. Reynolds, if he was not busy, and looked about for the office of county clerk—and then they espied the kindergarten tots marching out—said "excuse us—we thought it was the court house," and withdrew thinking if they were as small as they felt they would pass for the least of the little ones so proudly marching. When they found the county assessor, to whom the official was to report, they let the joke get away, but as Mr. Carter was pledged to secrecy we had to apply at the school for particulars. The visitors wondered what had become of the jail and some of the trees and the officials they used to know, but knew that Wayne is a progressive county and thought some changes had been made.

The Sequel

Perhaps it is as well to tell the rest of the story here and now. The editor used to attend school a little, and so thought it would do no harm to visit our "knowledge box" as the school house was frequently called in earlier days. Seeking to know if there was really much similarity between the court house and the school house the editor got his bearing and started, arrived safely and was given a hearty welcome and a courteous reception, looked around and was as much surprised as the visitors of a few days before.

We humbly began our investigation at the basement—saw the room in which the little fellows were learning to use their hands as well as their brains. With measures and corn they were taught to measure and some of the tables of other days in a practical way. If two pints make one quart they proved with the measure; 12 inches one foot, 3 feet one yard were proven and shown so that they could prove it. There was no "learning their letters," they were "taught" practical things in a practical manner. The foundation for reading was laid here. The word and the picture of the article were side by side—the sound of a letter or a combination of letters was taught and before one knew it, the little ones were reading.

But there was too much else to see to stop long in this foundation department of learning, and taking a short cut the writer crossed the hall to see a magnificent display of the finished products of all the grades which were placed there for public inspection, and we were ashamed of the meagre number who had called to inspect. Not to exceed a dozen during the day, when the invitation was to all, and the men's names were conspicuously absent from the list.

In this room one could trace the work of the school from the crude specimens of penmanship and weaving of the primary room to the well-made maps, drawings, basket weaving, painting, sewing, cooking and cabinet work of the different grades to the seniors. Twelve steps in twelve busy years—when the children of our city put in the greater part of their waking hours—and not one parent in ten ever goes to see what they are doing—what the teachers are accomplishing or realizing what we owe to our public school system. Small wonder that teachers grow weary of the work and seek other fields of employment—the wonder is that they accomplish what they do—that they remain in the work—for if one sees what they are doing for the next generation he will realize that their work is not all for the money consideration. They have higher and broader conceptions of their work than the salary consideration, and they should be given more of the encouragement which would be gladly given if the parents would but take the time to know what they are doing.

But let's go back to the basement room and see the crude specimens of penmanship and follow them to the finished composition or thesis of the dignified seniors. See the weaving grow in perfection, look at the sewing—for the girls have finished garments there that are a credit to them. Hand-some leather purses are made, fruits are canned and preserved, the art of cooking is taught and with it a knowledge of food values of different foods and the chemical effect of different combinations. The products of the manual training department were equally as good as those of the domestic science, and consisted mostly of wood work, for they have not room or tools yet for the iron or other work. Foot stools, wall pockets, brackets, chairs, tables, desks and the like were well and handsomely made. The Democrat hopes to see these practical features of school work enlarged upon—and also that the parents will take a more active interest in the work for its encouragement and betterment. Our schools are good but could be made better with your co-operation. Why not reform and help the work? We are glad to report that the visitors the last day of the exhibit were far more numerous than those of the first day, and those who attended felt more than well paid for the time given.

W. E. Roggenbach from the south side of the country, who gets his mail from Wisner, was a caller this morning, and among other things told us he is selling lots of Columbia Stock Powder, for which he has a county agency. Last season he disposed of more than three tons and those who used it are satisfied and he is expecting a greater sale this season. For exterminating worms in pigs and preventing cholera he thinks it has no equal. This season of the year is the time to start the little pigs right—they require less of the powder now than when older and never let worms and disease get a start. Of all of the entertainments given at Wayne in the year, it is safe to say that none are more appreciated or give better satisfaction than the class play given annually by the senior class at the college, and the one this year, which is to be presented next Tuesday evening, if any exception, will be because it is better than the others. The selection of that clean, classic story, "The Crisis" written by Winston Churchill in itself assures something exceptionally good. The cast of characters is selected from the class all of whom are more, or less known to Wayne people and a friendly feeling comes of the acquaintance. Their training under the direction of Prof. Keckley has been thorough and the play will have more the staging of a professional than an amateur effort. It is safe to predict that those who do not secure seats early will not get the best seats. The actors will be in appropriate costumes, a most complete lot having been secured from the city, and nothing aids more than proper costume to the interest in a play.—adv.

SECURITY CALF FOOD

We wish to call your attention to Security Calf Food, a food especially prepared for calves. Young calves require proper food (and just as much so) as young babes require proper food. Security Calf Food is put up to take the place of "Mother's Milk" for young calves, as "Baby Foods" are put up to take the place of "Mother's Milk" for babies. Security Calf Food replaces the whole milk from the time the calf is 3 days old and at the cost of less than two cents per day. Your calf requires from eight to ten or twelve quarts of whole milk a day. This is worth from 2 to 3 cents a quart and it will cost you from 20 to 30 cents a day to feed your calf with whole milk, while you can raise or fatten your calf on Security Calf Food for less than two cents per day and raise just as good a calf. Security Calf Food does not have to be cooked or bothered with; just mix a measureful (you will find a measure in each pail or package) with whey or skimmed milk; stir up well. There is no danger from indigestion or scours from using Security Calf Food and the calves like it. We guarantee that you can raise as good fat and healthy a calf on Security Calf Food as on whole fresh milk. We guarantee to refund in cash for every pail or package of Security Calf Food that does not give perfect satisfaction. Or if preferred you may secure a pail on 30 days trial.

OXFORD EXPERIENCE

BY WAYNE YOUNG MAN

AS SEEN BY W. F. CROSSLAND

Narrow and Crooked Streets and Old Customs Excite Interest of Americans.

Oxford, England, April 10, 1914.
I am afraid that I have been rather negligent in writing of Oxford and its surroundings, but the place so grows on one and improves on acquaintance that what I would have written a few weeks after I arrived would hardly have been an accurate account. One must live in Oxford for some time, must become accustomed to the perpetual clouds and rains, and must overlook a real of the inconveniences before the real beauty and delightfulness of the place can be appreciated. It is then that one's impression of Oxford as seen from a distance comes back, and with it a deeper sense of the richness of the place, of which you never tire.

As Oxford is one of the older towns, it grew up without any of the conveniences of broad and straight streets as most American towns have, for the streets are the old Saxon roads, narrow and crooked, which have been used for a thousand years to bring the produce and to drive the cattle and sheep to market, a practice, which even now in this town of forty thousand, is quite frequent. It is rather a queer sensation for an American, who is accustomed to straight streets, to become bewildered in this maze of streets and lanes, which change their names every block or two, and usually end in a blind alley or a stone wall. The business section is scarcely more fortunate, for there all traffic is frequently blocked by a small herd of sheep, or by the ancient horse tramways, which are such a very poor substitute for walking. It is only recently that the town fathers have permitted a few gasoline busses to operate; but the horse-car traction service is still patronized by a large majority of the older generation, who have ridden in the old trams for so many years, and who prefer to trust the animal conveyance in bringing them to their destination. On Guy Fawkes Night, which corresponds to Halloween in America, the Oxford students take complete charge of the service, and institute various new routes, which had not been scheduled. The towns take these disturbances more or less as a matter of course, having become accustomed to them through five or six centuries.

A very striking feature of nearly every building, whether it be a shop, a store or a home, is the elaborate system of fortifications, which seem to be proof against all attempts of burglars. In the evening each of the shop and store windows is heavily barred and barricaded; all of the colleges have barred windows, giving the general appearance of prisons; each home is surrounded by a high stone wall, decorated with pieces of broken bottles,—of which there are many in England,—and crowned with several very uninviting rows of rusty spikes. It does look as if the Englishman's home were his castle—at least a very highly fortified place. But one learns that these precautions are not taken against either the graduates or against thieves, but are the relic of a hundred years ago, when Oxford had but one or two policemen. The police service of today is very efficient, the policemen being exceedingly obliging and polite, and capable of keeping everyone in order except the undergraduates.

One of the really humorous institutions, which you are aware of before you have been in town half a day, is the town band, a private organization, composed of half a dozen squeaky violins, a flute, one cello and two base horns, the latter instruments being the only ones that are audible when the musicians are performing. The general musical effect is by no means improved by the half a dozen barrel organs, which are manipulated by Italians, or rather by their wives, the latter turning the crank and pulling the musical (?) instrument from place to place, the former engaged in the laborious task of picking up the pennies. When two of these organs come within speaking distance of one another, the effect is wonderful. But most touching of all is the plaintive wail of a sick violin, played by a starved beggar, who is a master at bringing out the most mournful and pathetic tones, which cannot but touch your heart and pocket-book.

It is to the university rather than to the town that the interest of the visitor attaches. Instead of a number of buildings on one large campus, as an American might expect, the twenty-three colleges which comprise Oxford university are situated in various sections of the town. Each is a large edifice of crumbling gray stone from two to six hundred years old, which with its high wall and barred windows, might very easily have been mistaken for a prison. The porter admits you through the heavy oak-and-iron gate into an enclosed grass plot called the quadrangle, which the rooms of the students face. You visit the chapel, with its beautifully stained glass windows, and the Great Hall, where the professors and students take their evening meal. The portion of the establishment which will please you most is the beautiful gardens, which are the pride of every college of Oxford, and are one of the many subjects of rivalry among them. It is here in the stately trees, the ivy-covered walls, the grass, which is green during the whole year, and the many tastily arranged flower-beds, that you see one of the many blessings of the disagreeable rainy weather.

Each of the twenty-three colleges is in itself an independent institution, subject to the university only in the question of degrees. The college prepares the student for the grand examination, the passing of which entitles him to a degree, and the university confers this degree. This leaves to the colleges the complete supervision of all matters of discipline and other phases of student life. The preparation for the final examination is effected largely by means of the tutorial system in which the student presents his professor with two or three essays, the result of his week's reading and study. As the work is exceedingly thorough and covers even the minute details of the subject, no small amount of the reading must be done during the vacation, which follows each of the terms, and during the long summer vacation. This is a little inconvenient for the American who would prefer to spend all of his vacation in travel on the continent. The professors do take a vital and personal interest in anyone who is willing to work, and are willing to devote any amount of their time to him; but they do not strongly insist on working, if a student is disinclined to apply himself. Oxford is a regular paradise for the man who desires to study; and it is also a very pleasant place for the man who wishes to loaf.

The surroundings of Oxford form a very appropriate setting for the city itself. The large meadows with their hedge fences, the extended parks, which are green throughout the winter, the athletic fields of the various colleges, the quaint stone farm houses, and best of all, the Thames river with its tributaries, which are a sort of pleasure resort during the spring and summer. There are several hills overlooking Oxford, from which a delightful view of the city may be had. Two or three castles, a portion of the old city wall, an old Roman camp and various other places are a source of interest to visitors.

My Christmas vacation was spent entirely in London with two Americans, Mr. Keys of Kansas and Mr. Riggs of South Dakota, in seeing the innumerable places of interest. Westminster Abbey, where all the British sovereigns are interred, was the most impressive place of all. St. Paul's Cathedral, the British Museum, The Old Curiosity Shop, the Tower of London, the Great East End or slums and a host of other places afforded a varied series of sights. The most fascinating of all was to see and study the crowds of the poorer people, who congregate at Hyde Park Corner on Sunday afternoon to listen to the harangues of any speaker who wishes to speak. Some of the speakers were pitifully weak and illiterate, but the crowd was always good natured, often interrupting them with the sympathetic words, "Shame, Shame," whenever an especially touching scene was portrayed. The suffragette speakers seemed to attract the largest crowds, and as a rule these gatherings were more or less turbulent. A very extraordinary aspect of any argument put forth by any speaker was the persistent use of quotations from the bible, which was regarded by the speaker and listeners alike as final authority in the controversy. On Christmas eve, we three Americans, for want of a better occupation, decided to go out and sang Christmas carols for the general edification of the public, after the manner of the beggars, who had serenaded us several times during the evening. We discarded our hats, and turned up our coat collars to give the general effect of one suffering from the cold. After five or six more or less successful performances, we found that we had collected the fabulous sum of four cents in farthings and halfpennies, which we divided equally between two shivering beggars, whom we met on our return to the boarding house.

Among the Churches of Wayne

Presbyterian Church

Rev. Alexander Corkey, Pastor.

The Memorial sermon will be at the Presbyterian church at 10:30 o'clock, by Rev. Alexander Corkey. The soldiers will assemble at their hall and attend the services in a body. The ladies of the G. A. R. request the wives, daughters and widows of the old soldiers who do not belong to the order to come to the church where seats will be provided for them with the ladies of the G. A. R.

"War and Peace" will be the subject of the Memorial sermon at the Presbyterian church next Sunday morning. Special prayer will be offered in the interests of peace, and the relation of the Kingdom of God to war will be set forth.

In the evening the congregation will unite in the union Baccalaureate services at the M. E. church when the address will be given to the graduates of the State Normal School.

Children's Day will be observed on June 7th, the first Sabbath in June. There will be a united service for church and Sunday school, and an appropriate program, entitled, "The Banner of Love" will be given by the members of the school. The ordinance of infant baptism will be administered by the pastor, and the cradle roll membership will be presented with the customary floral gifts.

During the absence of the pastor this summer the pulpit will be supplied for a month by Rev. Henry W. Siebert, Ph. D., of Newark, N. J. Dr. Siebert is the able pastor of the First German Presbyterian church of Newark, and is also editor of the Deutsche Abtheilung, a paper which has a large circulation amongst the German people of America. He is an eloquent preacher in both English and German, and his visit in Wayne will be an interesting one not only for the members of the Presbyterian church but also for the entire community. He will also be one of the speakers in connection with Wayne's celebration of the Glorious Fourth.

The communion of the Lord's Supper will be observed on Sabbath, May 31st, at which time there will also be a reception of new members into the fellowship of the church.

Baptist Church

Rev. B. P. Richardson, Pastor

The musical numbers furnished by the choir under Prof. Davies' leadership last Sunday were unusually fine. With the help of all our singers it is not difficult to present high class numbers. Every member of our choir should feel the responsibility of this department of our work. By making the choir efficient you are materially aiding in the worship of the church. Your work here is appreciated. You lead the people's worship.

Some Sunday evening in June we are going to have the entire evening for music. Christianity is a singing religion. It is rich in sacred, gospel songs. When you come to church, come ready to join in the singing. Worship the Lord with singing.

"The Enlargement of Zion" will be the subject of our Sunday morning sermon. Zion represents the church. There are two ways to enlarge Zion. See the text, Isa. 54:2.

June 14 is Children's day. We want to give the evening hour for the children's prayers. We are planning an observing "Family Day" at the morning hour. The purpose of this service is to get both the parents and the children present, and to sit together as they used to do. Wouldn't it look nice for every family connected with the church to come to worship at the church together? It is worth striving for, even though it will not be fully realized.

Next Sunday evening our congregation will join in the baccalaureate services of the state normal at the Methodist church. The young people's lesson will have to be short for this reason. Begin on time.

How would you like to be a member of a church that had no prayer-meeting? What are you doing to keep the prayer meeting of our church in good condition? There are three reasons why you ought to attend prayer meeting. You need its help, your friends need the character it helps build in your life, and the church needs the spiritual power generated at the prayer meeting.

St. Paul's Lutheran Church

(Rev. Blessing, Pastor.)

Sunday school every Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

Regular divine worship every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The subject of the sermon will be "Jehovah Our Banner", Ex. 17:15. Man at one time was a war-like creature, but as the centuries passed on, he changed his attitude and now does he look upon war with an exclamation of hatred. Yet there have arisen times when he could not but fight, thus we hear Paul say, "He beareth not the sword in vain". That is whenever it is lifted by a righteous and duly authorized hand, for the cause of justice and humanity. Thus it was when Moses led the children of Israel into Rephidim, and the Amalekites came against them, fighting was called for. It was not a case like that at the Red Sea, when the Israelites could do nothing to help themselves. The command therefore was not "stand still and see the salvation of the Lord" but rather "go out and fight". Obedient unto the command the children of Israel went out and fought, relying upon Jehovah for their strength and thus Jehovah gave them the victory. Afterwards Moses built an altar and called its name "Jehovah-Nissi," meaning Jehovah is my banner.

There will be union services next Sunday evening in the Methodist church.

The Ladies Aid society met at the home of Mrs. Rogers last week. The meeting was well attended and a profitable and very pleasant afternoon was spent. The ladies completed their plans for the dinner and supper which they will serve Decoration day. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. A. D. Erickson, on Thursday, May 26th. Choir rehearsal every Tuesday evening.

A cordial invitation is extended to all who wish to worship with us.

Methodist Church

Rev. C. L. Myers, Pastor

Next Sunday we will open the doors of the church to receive into full membership such as are ready,

If any desire, by letter or on pro-

Junior church at 4 o'clock. Special program next Sunday and illustrated sermon. Some appointments will be made. Eighteen names were enrolled at the past meeting.

A large number were present Wednesday evening for the study and the interest is increasing with each meeting.

A committee of ten has been named to secure entertainment for the 250 delegates we are looked for to attend the District Sunday School Convention. Will you assist them when they call on you?

If you have a receipt for a lot at the Assembly park please hand it to me that it may be recorded. The records have been burned.

Memorial addresses will be made in all the churches and all are requested to attend.

Address Friday night by Chancellor Fulmer.

CATHOLIC CHURCH

(Rev. Father Kerns, Pastor)

Sunday morning is beginning of 40 hours devotions. Services at 10:15, and again at 7:30 in the evening. Monday morning there will be mass at 9 o'clock and devotions at 7:30 in the evening. Mass Tuesday morning at 6:30 and 8 o'clock.

German Lutheran Church

Rev. Moehring, Pastor

Next Sunday there will be the Sunday-school session at 10 o'clock and preaching by the pastor at 11 o'clock. All are welcome.

Tennis Notes

The local committee of the state tennis tournament are trying hard to set a date for the meet that does not conflict with any of the big doings in Omaha or Sioux City and they have practically decided on August third. It seems that at Sioux City they are trying to revive the old tri-state tournaments and the committee have written there to find out what date that will be held, if they have it, and if it conflicts with the date now agreed on for the state meet here the local committee will change their date.

The local enthusiasm continues to grow warmer, there now being fifty paid up members but they are not crowded and can use more members. Better go in and help a good thing along.

Open Letter to Prospective Legislative Candidates

Now that your attention has been called to the fact that under our constitution the individual enjoys all rights not denied by statute; a corporation has no rights unless provided by statute—hence your patriotic impulses with the liberal salary paid you by the people will doubtless enlist your sympathies on the side of the people. The revenue laws of this state are a disgrace to the people claiming to be civilized. Their makers must have been impressed by that passage in Holy Writ—to him that hath shall be given, to him that hath not shall be taken away even what he hath.

The widow owning a cow and a few chickens to aid her in keeping the family intact and in school and the drayman wearing out a team, harness and dray to make a living for his family must pay the same rate of taxation as the owner of large flocks and herds and forty or more farms. The only exemptions are to such as can own U. S. bonds, greenbacks or bank notes on assessment day. They can enjoy the street and road and bridge, schools and school houses, courts and court house without paying a cent to maintain them. Is this industrial justice? This outrageous system has aided the result shown in our last census. Home owners increased less than 8 per cent; renters over 16 per cent. The Goddard estate in this and other countries and large individual holdings all occupied by renters (called peons in Mexico), have not diminished. As a patriotic legislator do you approve and commend this state of society?

What greater hope has the renter of owning a farm at present prices than the Mexican peon. If renters increased at such a high rate from 1900 to 1910, a period of high protection to industrial worker, what may we expect in 1920? Is this condition an evil? Is it against public policy? If so, what is the remedy?

The remedy will be the subject of my next letter.

C. J. RUNDRELL.

City Clerk, Mayor.

Could You Blame Him?

The ideal! To think of such a thing is preposterous. Who ever heard of any one being so down right mean as to call a newly married man right out of bed at 11 o'clock at night for such a trifling matter as to make contracts with base ball teams for the fourth of July. Now this happened right here in Wayne and Martin Ringer, chairman of the base ball committee for the fourth was the victim. A week ago last Saturday a committee from a nearby base ball team called upon Mr. Ringer at 11 o'clock. Martin being a good natured fellow would not have cared had this only happened once but last Saturday night at about the same hour comes another committee on the same mission as the first and this was more than Martin could stand so he just got up and opened the window and told the gentlemen if they wanted to make any contracts with him, they would have to call around at his office Monday. Of course he thought of a whole lot of mean things to say but refrained from speaking his mind, but who could blame Mart?

Jay Jones and John Morgan drove Phil Sullivan's car to Sioux City last week and when returning the car turned turtle with them near Emerson, but neither of the gentlemen were hurt and the only thing that was damaged about the car was the wind shield, the glass of which was broken.

300 LICE Or More on One Hen

It is by no means uncommon. No one would expect to fatten a steer with that number of lice on his blood, but many expect to fatten an old hen to go ahead shelling out eggs while lice and mites are sapping her very life. We have counted over 200 dead lice under a row of ten hens, on a roost board painted the night before with Lyle's Lice Killer. This great little double duty contact kills mites, lice, bedbugs, etc. about the roosts; the vapor kills lice on the chickens sitting over it. Put it only in airtight cans. Robert Wykoff has no remembrance of anything that occurred before he was five years old, except being caressed by a woman who seemed to love him very dearly, and even this is scarcely a memory with him. After that he became cognizant of being a member of a family. A man whom he understood to be his father, a woman whom he understood to be his mother gave him what he needed, especially clothes, which were much better than those of the other children of the household. When Robert was eleven years old he was sent to a boarding school. There he associated with boys who were much more refined, much better dressed, than those he had been accustomed to. When he went home at vacation he became ashamed of his parents and his brothers and sisters. They were of a different stamp from those he had seen at school.

Bob did not go home again after that during vacations. He preferred to remain at school. His parents and brothers and sisters did not manifest much affection for him, and he cared little about them. It seemed as if he and they were a different kind of people. And he wondered why this was so. Why had he always been dressed like a gentleman while they wore rough clothes?

The school he attended was of a very good class, but its principal was more interested in making money than in the welfare of the boys. Robert was constantly being punished for some petty offense or for leading his schoolmates to rebel against the tyranny of the principal. The latter received plenty of money for his pupils' tuition to warrant giving them every comfort, including excellent food, but he skimped them in all possible ways.

One day when the food had become so bad that the boys could stand it no longer Bob led them into an old fashioned "barricade," such as at times had occurred in English schools before the middle of the nineteenth century. They bought provisions with spending money procured from home, took possession of the schoolroom and locked the doors. The rebellion did not last long, for a door was broken down. The principal entered and soon quieted the meeting. He questioned the boys as to their leader, but none of them would tell, and he proposed to punish all alike, whereupon Robert assumed the whole responsibility and was expelled from the school.

By this time Robert was fifteen years old, and rather than go back home he resolved to make his own living. Between a mercantile life and farming he chose the latter, and since the season for planting was at hand he found a place as a farm hand. He went to work with a will, rejoicing in the change from the tyrannies of the school and his unpleasant home to a life wherein he lived almost entirely out of doors, attending to cattle, planting and gathering in crops.

This period Bob Wykoff remembers as the happiest of his life, for here was born a boy's love for Molly Erskine, a little girl he one day saw trudging along a road with some milk she was going to deliver to a neighbor. He carried her milk for her and many another burden from that time forward for three years. Then he was eight years old and she was fifteen.

One day Bob was sitting on a moving machine driving a pair of horses over some rough ground when he saw a man coming toward him. When he came near enough Bob recognized his father. He had been hunting the boy for a month and had traced him from the school he had left long before. He told Bob that he was not his father, but that he came of wealthy stock and his grandfather had died and he was heir to several million dollars. Bob said that didn't make any difference with his finishing his job and remained on his machine till it was time to quit.

Bob then went to the farmhouse, bid goodby to his employers, found Molly Erskine and told her of the great change in his life. She cried when he parted with her, but he assured her that he would come back to her.

Bob's conductor told him on the way that he was the son of parents who had been disowned by his mother's father because they had married contrary to his will. His father had died soon after the marriage, and his mother, who had nothing to live on, was taken back by her father on condition that she come alone. Bob was then put under the care of persons who agreed for a consideration to take care of him. On the death of his grandfather, being the only male descendant, he was made the old man's heir.

When Bob reached his home he was taken into the arms of the woman he remembered as belonging to his babyhood. He had occupied an unnatural position for fourteen years and was now suddenly made the possessor of unbounded luxuries.

One day Molly Erskine was standing in the door of her father's farm when a young man drove up behind a spanking team and, throwing the reins to a lackey, leaped from the wagon and caught her in his arms. Bob claimed her for his wife. But she refused. She said that he had entered a sphere in which he was born and in which she would not follow him lest he should become ashamed of her. But Bob would not release her, though he consented that she should go to a girls' school for three years. When she had finished her education they were married, and Bob did not have any reason to be ashamed of his wife.

A New Corn Planting Record

J. M. Roberts, who farms the Clark home ranch, we believe set a new record for corn planting last week. The Democrat man saw Mr. Roberts in town Thursday afternoon and he said that he was planting corn out there, and he believed he was knocking records some. After stretching the wire Tuesday evening for an 80 acre field he started in Wednesday morning in good season, and when he came to town Thursday afternoon he said that he expected to finish the piece at noon the next day, making the time two and one-half days for the 80 acres. That he had planted 21 rounds that morning or 84 rows, and that the man who works for him had come to the field at noon with a new team and was trying to break his record. Monday, Mr. Roberts was in town Monday and the Democrat snoop asked how he came out, and was told that he made the stunt on time, and had nothing to do Friday afternoon but to wind up the wire, which took one round with the planter. Mr. Roberts said that he had the planter started as early as six o'clock each morning and kept it going until the man came at noon with a fresh team. The man worked until 6:30. Mr. Clark says that the field contains more than 80 acres. Who can beat it?

POINTS THAT DENOTE A GOOD DAIRY COW

For the man who must buy cows it is difficult, even after years of experience and with a thorough knowledge of the good points of a prime milker, to pick the good ones every time without some sort of what you might call "personal acquaintance" with the beast writes a correspondent of the Farm Journal.

We all know that form goes with function in large degree, and unless the fanner is willing to sell the cow on a guarantee or you have a chance to see her milked once or twice the only way to judge of her qualities and consequently her value is to look her over critically from the standpoint of the

A dairy cow of fine promise is the pure bred Holstein here pictured. She comes from a family of great milk producers and is named Lindenwood Nudine Johanna. At the age of one year, ten months and seventeen days this cow produced 26.56 pounds of butter in seven days, a great record for a senior yearling. Her owner is G. W. Rising of Fayette, O. As the photograph shows, she is a well formed animal of the dairy type, with an udder of exceptional development for so young a cow.

Judge who assumes that points of outward appearance indicate the inward characteristics.

Here are the main points in a good milker from the point of view of a stranger, who must use his eyes solely: Head small and clean cut; muzzle large; forehead straight or concave; neck long and thin, but not scrawny; horns somewhat small; eyes bright and prominent; shoulders thin; loin broad, but not thickly fleshed, as in beef cattle; thighs thin; hind quarters long, deep and strong; flank high; legs short and wide apart; tail long, slim and loosely jointed; frame markedly wedge shaped from all directions; udder set broadly, high up behind, square and high up on abdomen, not loose, pendulous or fleshy; milk veins large and prominent; chest deep and with well sprung ribs; belly large and deep; teats medium sized, evenly placed and wide apart. A fleshy udder, fine to touch when empty and retaining the size and form after milking, indicates a tendency to inflammatory troubles. The skin should be clean and thin, free from the ribs and with a fresh color; hair fine, thick and short; temperament active and docile; large feeder.

The main points in selecting good dairy cows are the large, well balanced udders, that are not fleshy; the large, roomy bodies, showing in the first case an ample laboratory for the formation of milk and in the latter case a capacity for taking care of large amounts of feed.

Such are not always profitable cows, but they usually are. Cows are seldom profitable that give less than 250 pounds of butter in twelve months.

Age of Cattle.
The calf when born has two pairs of incisors; the other two pairs appear during the first month, says Professor G. E. Morton of the Colorado experiment station. When a calf is eighteen months old it loses the middle pair of milk incisors and grows a permanent pair. The next pair, one on each side, is replaced at twenty-seven months of age, the third pair at thirty-six months of age, the fourth or outside pair at forty-five months. The time of appearance of these incisors varies within rather narrow limits, so that we are able to tell the age of young cattle fairly accurately. The calf also has a temporary set of molars which are later replaced with permanent ones, but they are not considered in estimating the age of the animal.

Spoiling Calves' Udders.
A common bad result of sucking among calves is spoiling of udders later on from garget and similar troubles, says Dr. A. S. Alexander. Milk fed calves confined to a pen often learn the vicious habit of sucking one another's udders. Where this takes place it almost invariably happens that the udder will in time secrete milk, and such milk sours, clots and leads to garget (inflammation of the udder or mammitis or mastitis). This will be news to many a man who has not been a close observer, but we know it to be a fact.

Cholera a Fifth Disease.
If it were not for hog cholera pork raisers would be living in the lap of luxury. The time will come when there will be no more excuse for hog cholera than for the human cholera, that until a century or so ago periodically devastated Europe and America. Both are essentially fifth diseases.

Warm the Frosty Bits.
These are the days when the humane driver always warms the bridle before he harnesses his horse. A little warm water should always be poured over the bit before it is placed in the horse's mouth.

DAIRY WISDOM.

With the cows on dry feed it is a good plan to add warm water to the milk before it is strained in the creamery or separator. The selection of the bull to head the herd is of the greatest importance. He is half of the herd from the breeding standpoint, as his influence will stamp every calf and make it better or poorer than its dam. Don't churn in a cold room if you expect satisfactory results from the butter. Better cows mean a lessened cost of production. Good butter can not be made unless conditions are right. If you have trouble with the cream find out what is wrong and remedy it.

SAVE THE RUNT PIG.

With a Little Care it May Develop into a Valuable Animal. There are some farmers who recommend killing all the runt pigs. This might be a good plan when hundreds of pigs are farrowed every year on the farm. However, if the pig crop is small and the price of pork continues on the ascending scale it will pay to give the runts extra care and develop them into good hogs. If the runt is left with the herd he will no doubt always be a runt, but if separated and given extra care he may make as good a hog as most any of the herd. Often a runt has good qualities that will show themselves if given a chance.

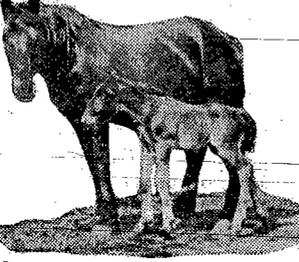

It is best to put the runts together in a pen and give them the slops that are rich in milk. It will be well to put some bran and shorts in their slop and to soak the corn given them so that it will be easily digested.

I tried this plan of feeding with a runt pig a neighbor gave to my boy, says a correspondent of the Farm and Ranch. When marketed he was fat and fine. It was not long until he showed but little evidences of being a runt.

AVOID SORE SHOULDERS.

Poorly Fitting Collars and Harness a Frequent Source of Trouble.

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Thus, at this season, before the press of spring work begins there is opportunity to fit collars and harness so as to avoid troublesome shoulder and other sores. Among the most important causes of shoulder sores, says C. L. Barnes of the Colorado Agricultural college, are improperly fitted collars, too large collars, loose harness, too wide collars at the top and not cleaning the collars and the horses' shoulders after a day's work. The first thing one will notice is that the skin over the affected part is hot, dry and painful. Then the horse will show pain when put to severe pulling. As time goes on a swelling appears just above the point of the shoulder.

Splendid draft colts can be raised without cost regardless of what the average farmer believes if the careful experiments of the Kansas station may be believed. Alfalfa, corn fodder and pasturage, with a combination feed of corn, 20 per cent; bran, 25 per cent, and oilmeal, 5 per cent, have seemingly made colts grow better than oats, and at a cost of 20 per cent less. A pound of the grain mixture contains the same digestible elements as a pound of oats, and as an energy producer the two are alike, pound for pound. A day's ration of oats costs 10.5 cents against 8.5 for the mixture.

der; it later fills with serum and if it is not opened becomes infected, and an abscess is the result.

In the first place, have the collars fit the horse snugly (too loose collars are worse than tight ones), keep the harness tight, clean the collar every night and wash the shoulders of the horse with cold water.

If one can treat the sore shoulder before it fills with serum, bathe it with a liniment that will not blister, and do not work the horse. If the serum has formed, then open the cavity freely and treat with mild disinfectants until healing takes place and the skin has healed over. Oftentimes after pus has formed and the horse has not been put to work for some time the pus becomes cheesy and later dries into a hard bunch. Then when the horse works again the shoulder becomes sore. The only remedy is to have this hard, firm tissue removed and treated with disinfectants until healing is complete.

The Necessary Silo.
Few facts in agriculture have been more clearly and conclusively established than that the silo is a necessity to the stock farmer. When we consider the various conditions under which the numerous experiment stations all over the country have been conducted it is surprising to find the results so similar and all pointing to the one conclusion.

A Surreptitious Gift

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Martin," said my father to me one day, "I have been speaking with your mother about you, and we have decided that it would be pleasant for us all if you would go to Stuttgart and make the acquaintance of your cousins. When I came to America I left a sister, of whom I was and am today very fond. I cannot leave the business to make the trip myself, but later, when you have taken my place in its management, I hope to do so. It is better that you should go now before you have become absorbed in other matters."

I was delighted with the prospect of a trip abroad. My father not only gave me a liberal sum for the trip, but a separate amount which he intended that I should turn over to the family. I was going to visit. "They are very sensitive," he said, "and I rely on your tact to turn this money over to them without hurting their feelings. I don't know exactly how they are situated, but I fear they are not overburdened with this world's goods."

I found my aunt and my cousins exactly what my father had described them. Never was there a more amusing and, to me, touching instance of a family striving to put the best foot forward. Having been coached as to this by my father, on my arrival at Stuttgart I put up at a hotel and announced my arrival by mail rather than go at once to their home, thus giving them time to make any preparations they might wish to hide their real circumstances. I heard nothing from them for twenty-four hours, when my uncle called on me and apologized for the delay in welcoming me, saying also that on no condition would the family permit me to remain at a hotel, but that their guest chamber needed attention, and they had been overhauling it.

I thanked my uncle for the proffered hospitality, but declined on the ground that I was troubled with insomnia and must be in a house in which I could go about at all hours of the night. However, I accompanied him to his home, a house of diminutive size, but very neat, and my aunt welcomed me affectionately. My cousin Anna, a girl of eighteen, I found so comely and with such a kissable pair of lips that I took advantage of my cousinship and tasted them at once.

All expressed much disappointment that I would be prevented by my insomnia from making their house my home during my sojourn at Stuttgart, but I was quite sure that they were much relieved. They invited me to dine with them, and, fearing they would be mortified at having to sit at a meager table, I declared that I was a victim of dyspepsia and would only accept their invitation if they would promise not to tempt me with any except the plainest food. And, remembering that sausage was a common and inexpensive food in Germany, I said that sausage was about all I ate. It did not occur to me that no worse food could be used by a dyspeptic till my aunt expressed surprise.

I spent a couple of weeks with my relatives, they trying to hide their poverty and I trying to hide the fact that I noticed it, or, rather, pretending that I could not use what they were unable to give me. And all this time I was studying how I could turn over to them what my father had sent them without their knowing whence it came, for I feared their pride would be hurt if I offered it in the form of money, yet I knew that was the only form in which it would meet their requirements.

The only method of giving them pleasure without racking my ingenuity was to ask my cousin Anna to show me the attractions of Stuttgart, paying the expenses, of course, myself. Going about in that way with a pretty girl brought about a love affair. Indeed, though my father had not mentioned the matter to me, when I saw Anna I suspected his real motive in sending me abroad was to make a match between her and me. At my rate, long before the end of my visit I proposed to her and was accepted.

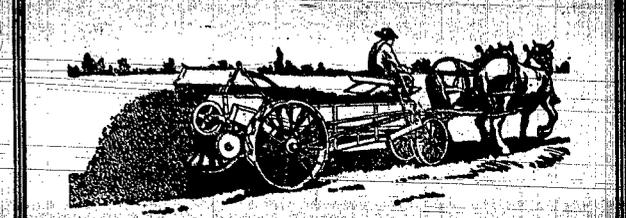

The time of my departure drew near, and I had found no plan by which to leave my father's gift without hurting the beneficiaries. The amount was the equivalent of $1,000 in American money and could not be surreptitiously transferred in any ordinary manner. There was an old clock in the house which I thought I might pay that amount for, but when I expressed a desire to possess it my aunt begged me to accept it.

All ordinary plans I tried having failed, I was forced to a special expedient. Anna consented to return to America with me, and I went for a tour through Europe. I said goodby, then went to my hotel, made myself up as an old man, watched for my uncle to leave the house, followed him till he entered a trolley car, took a seat beside him and slipped a roll of bills into his side pocket.

When I returned from my tour I found that my fiancée had a very nice wedding outfit, but no one of the family hinted whence came the wherewithal to purchase it.

Since my marriage I have no trouble in making gifts to her family. I give the money to her, and she passes it over to them. My father in time transferred the management of the business to me and went abroad to see his sister and her family. When he returned he brought them with him.

Something About Government Ownership

It was an epoch in the world's history when the Bell System opened a long distance line between New York and Chicago, in 1893, and demonstrated that speech could be transmitted 1,000 miles. Today the business man in Denver sends his voice clear and distinct into the office of the New York merchant, 2,000 miles distant. of the great Bell route from New York to San Francisco, and transcontinental conversations over the Bell System will be one of the wonders ushered in by the Panama-Pacific Exposition next spring. Last year the first 900-mile telephone line was built in Europe, where practically all telephone systems are government owned, two decades after a thousand-mile line had been in successful operation in the United States.

Mrs. John Hoag was here last week from Delavan, Kansas, where the Hoag family moved about four years ago from near Altona to their present home where they are happily located. They had lived in this county nearly a third of a century, coming here with the pioneers. She visited at Claus Kay's and with James Harmon, both of whom were neighbors to them in the pioneer days. She was also at Randolph, where they have property yet and at Wakefield at which place she has numerous friends.

His was of an eccentric disposition. His paper was a free lance—and he consistently hated deception and hypocrisy. His paper was quoted far and wide for its pungent and truthful sayings. He nearly always had a skinning for some victim and the paper was always watched to see whose hide was on the rack for the week. He was a postal railway clerk in the early days and before the time when civil service was thought of, and lost his head by a change of the administration, and just stayed at Fayette, which at that time was the end of his postal run, which started at Davenport, and was about 130 miles in length. It was when the postal card was new, and Oo said everybody read them, and took that name for his paper.
