Fifty Years of Peace

Friday, April 9th was the 50th anniversary of the surrender of General Lee of the Southern Confederacy to General Grant who was in command of the army of the North, and to fittingly observe the day the members of the G. A. R. and the auxiliary Circle at this place arranged to observe the anniversary of the event in fitting manner. Starting in ample time, the work of preparation was neglected for a time, but when the time drew near the energetic members of the two organizations said that the day was too great a one in our history to allow it to go unobserved, and they literally put their shoulders to the wheel and with a vim such as they had known half a century ago arranged for a fine meeting in honor of the event. The ladies provided ice cream and cake for refreshments, to be served with coffee and hard tack at the close of the program.

When Post Commander Grimsley called the meeting to order at 3:30 nearly all of the old soldiers in Wayne and many of their friends besides members of the Circle were present. A. R. Davis, the son of a veteran, was asked to preside, which he did, briefly introducing the different speakers, musicians and singers.

After singing "My Country", Rev. Blessing opened the meeting with a simple prayer of thanksgiving for the peace we as a nation are blessed with. The Ballard-Pumleigh-Sherbahn orchestra next gave a selection, and responded to an encore.

Prof. Buma, who is here with Evangelist Shallcross was called into action and sang several selections called for by the audience, including some of the songs of fifty years ago. Rev. Blessing, Rev. Cross and Rev. Shallcross were all called upon for remarks, and briefly spoke to the old soldiers and their friends.

A social hour was spent discussing the dainty refreshments, and during that time numerous of the soldier men told of their experiences and observations of the people when they received the news of the victory. One man told of the people of the place he happened to be in in Missouri when the word came that the war was over where every man celebrated by getting drunk, and one man who was caught in the town fell in with the others, and had to tell his wife the next day that he had been tied and held captive all night—and he was. There was all sorts of manifestations of joy as the news came to different people, for it was the close of four years of struggle—when brother was arrayed against brother, each contending and offering his very life for a cause he held sacred, and no where was news of peace more joyfully received than in the many lonesome homes all over this broad land, where mothers, wives and helpless children, sisters and lovers waited and watched through the weary years for the return of loved ones who too often never came. The editor well remembers the joy in the family at the return of a soldier relative who had been at the front for more than three weary years.

After refreshments were disposed of the orchestra gave several lively selections to which many a foot kept time, but it was not until Comrade Grimsley drew his trusty fiddle from the case and started some of the old-time music in the good old-time way with his wife accompanying on the piano, that the dance really began, for then the old soldiers could not keep quiet. Thus the meeting closed with good wishes for all, and a desire that the old soldiers might live to celebrate many more anniversaries of that glad day.

We, the old soldiers and officers of the Casey Post, No. 5, of Wayne, Nebraska, and the ladies of the G. A. R. circle, do heartily thank the speakers, the musicians and singers and all others who so willingly helped to make the celebration of Lee's surrender to U. S. Grant—April 9th—50 years ago, such an inspiring and enjoyable event as last Friday, proved to be.

By the Committee.

News From the Wayne Normal

The stormy weather of Thursday evening kept many away from the annual concert of the Music department, but those who braved the inclement conditions were more than repaid for the effort. It has always been the custom of the department in these annual performances, to render only high grade music and after long and careful practice. As a result those who attend know that they are to hear the best music. Last year the rendition of the "Rose Maide" brought deserved encomiums. Last Thursday added the music of the opera "Martha" to the list of notable triumphs. The part of Lady Harriet Durham, the heroine of the tale, was sung by Miss Grace Adams, with fine appreciation, and she was supported in the duet parts by the perfect taste and beautiful voice of Miss Ina Hughes. A new member of the school and the chorus appeared as a star of first magnitude in the person of Miss Eva Graves. Solo parts by Messrs. Elmer Rogers, J. G. W. Lewis, E. E. Lackey and J. J. Coleman called forth enthusiastic approval. The spirited work of the chorus part was perhaps the chief evidence of the long, careful, and finished labor of the director and the individual members. The music department has again more than met expectations that were already pitched to a high key.

Last Monday Clarence Linton received notice of his election to the superintendency of the schools at Dakota City. Mr. Linton was invited to meet the members of the board a few days ago for a personal interview and his election followed. He will succeed Superintendent Conrad Jacobson, who will have charge of the schools at Bancroft next year.

Recently Ray Hickman was called upon to choose from three good positions in school work offered him for the ensuing year. On nearly the same date he received notice of his election in the manual training department at Tekamah, Hartington, Nebr., and Roundup, Montana. After some deliberation he decided to accept the school in the West and has signed a contract for $105 per month. Mr. Hickman succeeds in this work William J. Van Camp, a member of the class of 1914, who will enter the University of Nebraska.

Last Friday morning Dr. J. T. House addressed the students on the subject of Vocational Guidance. The address should have been heard by every student in school; but, alas, those who think "chapel isn't worth while" missed it. Dr. House's discussion of the subject was interesting and helpful throughout. Among other things, he said that there is an increasing need for vocational guidance because society is becoming more complex. Furthermore, the child during adolescence experiences a desire to achieve and to serve which often causes him not only to leave school but also to make a poor selection of occupation. The school, therefore, should give the youth just at the time when he experiences this world-ambition to serve also a world-view of chances. As a result he would be slower to select and more willing to prepare for greater service, thus utilizing his energy not only for his own but also for the common good.

Dr. House advocated a course of study in vocational guidance for secondary schools and higher institutions of learning. In this work the youth should be presented with accurate surveys of occupations and be led to count the cost of getting ready for a job. He should be able to find society's need for his energies and ability. He should be motivated to make the best possible preparation for doing the thing for which he feels he is really gifted. In other words, the youth's ambition should be socialized at this time so that afterwards it can never be narrowly selfish. In short, the object of such a course should be, the utilization of the world's energies for the welfare of society. In this connection, the youth should be taught that "business is life, and that it should assist him in becoming a man working for the common good. On the other hand, society should see to it that its business is conducted in such a way as not to destroy men, women and children. Brief out-

A $62,000 Land Deal

Wednesday afternoon the farms of the Caroline Wollschlager estate in the western part of the county were sold at auction at the court house in this city, and a large number of interested people, mostly from the west part of the county were present. The land was all in one body, but contained two sets of improvements and was sold in two tracts. One farm of 240 acres with the better improvements sold at $125 per acre. In the other farm are 320 acres, and it sold to Ernest Strate at $100.50 per acre. Carl Bronziski purchased the other. Both of the buyers are men living in the neighborhood and know that they are not paying above the value of the land—in fact it is thought that the larger tract was bought at a bargain, but it could not well be divided according to the terms of the sale, and it made a pretty good sized proposition for one man to handle, and hence there was not so many competing for it. The total of the two farms figure the neat sum of $62,080. Eph Cunningham cried the sale, and handled it with skill and good judgment.

Finn-Ahern

At the Catholic church in Carroll at 5 o'clock Wednesday morning, April 14, 1915, the marriage of Mr. Matt Finn and Miss Mary Ahern was solemnized by Rev. Father Kearns of this place in the presence of a few immediate friends and relatives. Miss Kate Ahern was bridesmaid and Mr. Mike Finn groomsmen.

Following the service at the church the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Ahern where a bounteous wedding breakfast was served to many relatives and friends, who extended the heartiest congratulations upon the newly married couple. The groom is son of Mr. and Mrs. James Finn, and the bride is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ahern. Both are well and favorably known in the community they have spent most of their lives in, and where they will continue to make their home for the present at least.

Myer-Pfeil

At the German Evangelical Lutheran church about 8 miles southeast of Wayne, on Thursday, April 8, 1915, Rev. Rudolph Moehring said the words which united the lives of Wm. F. Myer and Marie Pfeil of that neighborhood. The ceremony was at 3 o'clock in the presence of a few relatives and friends, the witnesses being Emma Myer, Augusta Strudthoff, Carl Pfeil and Emil Myer.

Following the marriage ceremony a reception was given to the bride and groom at the home of her parents, Chas. Pfeil and wife, at which many guests passed a pleasant evening. The bride and groom received many valuable and useful presents.

The groom is son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Myer and they will begin married life on a farm midway between the homes of their parents. Both are popular among a large circle of acquaintances.

Why Not at Wayne?

At Hoskins and Winside those who own automobiles have organized into an automobile association having for their chief object—co-operative work for better roads, and they have assurance that the county will co-operate with them in securing the desired end. One of our farmer friends who is interested in good roads for various reasons wished the Democrat to ask the question with which we head this note. He says, and we say, "Why not at Wayne, also?"

Long-Kopp

At Carroll, Tuesday, April 13, 1915, Mr. H. E. Long and Miss Myrtle Kopp were united in marriage, by the pastor of the Baptist church.

The groom is a prosperous young farmer living northwest of Winside, and the bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Kopp of this city. They will be at home on the farm near Winside.

lines of the work in law and farming were given as illustrations of what might be done in a course in vocational guidance.

Social Notes

The Shepard Psalm was the inspiring theme of discussion at a largely attended meeting of the Ladies Bible Study circle Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. W. Hiseox. Mrs. C. A. Dean led in the lesson study and Rev. Shallcross and his assistant S. S. Buma were present with words of encouragement. An interesting letter was read from Rev. Frank E. Lindgren reporting The Boone, Iowa, meeting which was attended by thousands of people, resulting in 250 accepting Christ and the organization of two fine Bible Study circles, among the young ladies and older ones. The circle meeting next week will be at the home of Mrs. A. D. Erickson, opposite M. E. church and Mrs. S. A. Lutgen will lead in the lesson study.

The Minerva club met Monday afternoon with Mrs. C. H. Bright. An interesting feature of the program was the report from the third district convention of state federation of women's clubs of Nebraska. Mrs. Britton, club delegate, gave a carefully prepared paper, touching on the chief points of interest of the three days' session. Mrs. Ley, Mrs. Berry's substitute, gave additional proof of a good time and advantages to be gained by attending such meetings. Mrs. Huntmer and Mrs. Lackey were present at Wednesday's sessions and were enthusiastic over the meeting. Mrs. Fortner led the part of the lesson on "Discussion" and Mrs. Grothe that on "Interference and Conflict."

Mesdames Huntmer, Moran and Berry are giving a series of kenningtons Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, at the home of Mrs. Huntmer. More than 200 invitations were issued. The house is decorated in roses, carnations and ferns. The color scheme in pink and white is carried out. An elaborate two-course luncheon is served each afternoon. Partners are selected by the names of different flowers, each guest being given part of the name to find who has the other part. Favors are pink and white sweet peas. On Wednesday afternoon Mrs. A. R. Davis sang a solo. This afternoon Mrs. Ed. Johnson gives a vocal selection. Friday afternoon Mrs. Clyde Oman will sing.

The members of the Pleasant Valley club, their families and friends gathered at the home of Harvey Miner last Friday evening. The evening was happily spent in games and other forms of entertainment. Prof. Lackey gave a very interesting and instructive talk on "Agriculture" which was enjoyed by all present. Refreshments were served at a late hour, after which the guests departed for their homes. Invited guests present were: Prof. and Mrs. Lackey of the Normal, Miss Florence Kingsbury, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Auken, Mrs. John Livinghouse, Mr. and Mrs. Eli Laughlin, Miss Page, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bastian and Mr. and Mrs. Roe.

Miss Lila Gardner entertained last Saturday afternoon from 2:30 to 5:30. A number of her friends came to help her celebrate her thirteenth birthday. The afternoon being fine was spent in playing indoor and outdoor games. Mrs. Walter Savidge gave several instrumental selections on the piano. A dainty luncheon was served, and each little guest left a token of friendship and good will in the form of some appropriate present.

The Acme club met with Mrs. Jacobs Monday afternoon. Roll call—American Authors. Mrs. Britell read a paper on "Sketch of Fort Marion and California Missions". The P. E. O. held an interesting session during the past week, the state inspector meeting with the local organization, and a fine meeting is reported, and a complete report was promised for this issue but it has failed to appear up to and including the 11th hour.

The Rural Home society will meet with Mrs. Clara Gustafson for an all-day meeting on Thursday, April 22.

The Special Meetings at Lincoln

The following concerning the special meetings now in progress at the East Baptist church of Lincoln is gleaned from a church bulletin issued there:

They are progressing nicely and gaining in interest. Rev. Richardson has indeed led us according to our watch-word, "Back to the Bible". The Holy Spirit is manifesting His presence in saving power. We are truly thankful for those already saved but let us have that holy dissatisfaction of the great servant of God who cried out, even in his sleep, "More yet, O God, more yet." Let every member of our church do his or her best at this time "while he may be found."

God is speaking through the evangelist and Professor Deal. The spirit of the meeting has deepened from night to night and the attendance has increased. We rejoice in growth and the incoming power which is like the incoming tide. If God is in this movement, it is sure to manifest His presence in renewing and saving power.

Christian Endeavor Convention

Beginning Tuesday, April 27th, the 5th annual convention of the first district of the Nebraska Christian Endeavor will begin a 3-day session at Wayne, holding their meetings at the Presbyterian church. A program is planned for morning, afternoon and evening sessions, and some excellent features are to be presented, of which more will be given next week.

Council Proceedings

The city fathers met in special session the evening of April 1st and took under consideration the matter of vacating an alley which has been closed for many years, and named a committee to investigate as to damages. The final result of the matter, as determined at the regular meeting, was the vacating of the alley as the committee reported that there would be no one damaged by so doing.

A resolution repealing the section of ordinance No. 222 which imposed a tax of $5.00 per day upon persons selling goods from a car within the city was repealed.

The Roberts Pharmacy was given permit to rebuild a small iron covered building in the rear of their store.

At the regular meeting Tuesday evening the votes of the week before were canvassed and ordinance No. 231 vacating an alley was passed to its final reading, and is published elsewhere.

The following claims were allowed at the two meetings:

The Wayne Tennis Club

This athletic organization held a meeting Monday evening and organized for the coming season, electing Frank S. Morgan president and Geo. Roe secretary-treasurer. The membership fee was fixed at $5 and up as far as they wish to go for adults. Juvenile members—under 18 years of age—$3.00. The president tells us that the courts have come through the winter in excellent shape, and are practically as good as last fall at the close of the season.

The Northeastern Nebraska Tennis association will hold its annual meet at Wayne about the middle of July, when a big time is anticipated. Wayne now has the best courts of any place in this part of the state, and in fact but few of the city courts are better than are to be found here.

Only 74 votes were cast at Hartington at the city election—that is, they called it an election, but it was only a ratification or vote of approval for there was no opposition to the one set of nominees.

Miss Mabel Banks of Wausa, who was one of the Wayne normal students, and is now teaching at Sioux City, was visiting friends at the station Saturday while returning from a vacation week spent at home.

Wm. Church, who moved from here to Meadow Grove about a year ago, was greeting friends at the station Sunday as he was going home from South Sioux City, where he had been called by the sickness of a sister.

The Cedar County News is publishing weekly a column of "Public Opinion" which is becoming quite interesting. The Democrat welcomes letters of interest on current question, but just now would like to have them comply with the president's suggestion as to neutrality. To discuss public questions in a dignified manner is elevating—but from a partisan point they are not so valuable.

In the spring time you clean house; the stomach, bowels need cleaning just as badly after the long indoor life of winter, heavy foods, lack of vegetables and fruits—Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will clean and purify. 35c Tea or Tablets at Felber's.—adv. Apr.

With the coming Mendelssohn choir concerts to Omaha on April 26 and 27, the Thomas Orchestra of Chicago will complete its five years' contract and it is very doubtful if the contract will be renewed. So the chances are that this will be the last time the Thomas orchestra will be heard in conjunction with the spring concerts.

Dr. Loretta M. White, a Norfolk dentist, accompanied by Dr. Crane, an osteopath from the same city were at Wayne last Thursday seeing the sights and looking after matters of business. F. O. White, brother to Miss White, expects to come here next month to begin the practice of dentistry, and the ladies were looking for a suitable office room for his use.

Mrs. J. B. Zimmer of Carroll went to Rochester, Minnesota, Monday expecting to undergo an operation for the removal of the gall bladder. She had previously undergone an operation to relieve the trouble by having the gall bladder drained—but the benefits were not lasting. She was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Ivor Morris, who will remain with her a few days.

G. W. Kingston from near Carroll took a load of fat cattle of his own raising to the South Omaha market Monday. He says that he is wondering whether or not he would not have been richer, save in exercise and experience, to have sold the bunch as feeders last fall and sold the corn and let someone else take the exercise. He might have been, and such is very apt to be the experience of the man who feeds cattle, so long as the meat combine and cattle dealers of the cities have so much to say as to the price of feeders, cattle on foot and the meat on the block.

The manner of choosing a postmaster by election was tried out at Ponca last week, says the Journal. The plan seemed to have worked well, as there was a total vote of 662 and only eight rejected ballots, which is quite small considering the first time such an election has been held here. Ballots and envelopes were sent out to the patrons on the different routes, by the election committee, the day before the election and they were permitted to vote by mail. The following shows the report of the vote cast: Homer Davey, 414; H. H. Mille, 240.

A new course in dairying has been added to the curriculum of the University school of agriculture at Lincoln, according to the new catalog of the school just issued. The course deals with the management of the dairy herd, the selection of feeds and the planning and equipment of dairy building for the farm.

We noticed J. H. Miner driving out one morning this week with a potato planter tied behind his wagon, which looks as though he was going to try a field of this famous Irish fruit. It looks as if that would be a profitable crop to grow here—if they can be grown in adjoining states with no better soil or climate for the potato than here and shipped in at a profit, there surely should be a profit in the crop here.

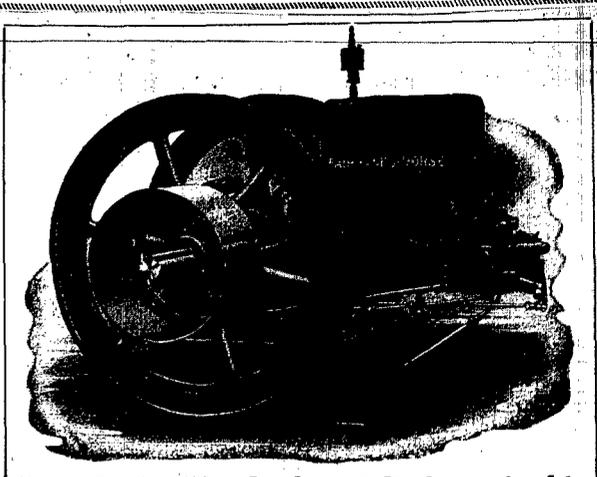

The man who patronizes a mail order house is characterized in an exchange as the only man who furnishes all of the capital in advance for the man he is buying from to do business with. Is it not a fact that the cash which goes out with the order is all of the cash and some more that the mail order man uses to purchase and pass on to you what you order. If you will pay in advance for everything that you buy when purchasing from the home merchant he can and should do better by you than by the one who buys on time.

Dean Smith was here Monday from near Winside, where he is farming a quarter section of land with his brother. The place has been rented, and it was not rented to an experienced farmer last season. They have just finished husking the corn crop grown by the man there before them, and while the part of the crop he left unharvested was not very good, it paid pretty fair wages for husking. The young man knows how to farm and we predict that he will make a better place of the farm in a year or two, if the place is not sold from under him before that time.

Mrs. E. W. Johnson and her sister, Miss Anderson, came from Oakland last week, and were met here by Mr. Johnson, who has been filling the place as station agent for the Omaha at Randolph, and together they proceeded to pack their belongings for shipment, his transfer to that office having been arranged for as a permanent thing. As operator here during the past two years he has won many friends, being always on the job, efficient and accommodating. His promotion was deserved, and yet those who worked with him here and patrons of the road generally are sorry to have him depart. Randolph people are to be congratulated.

Geo. F. Sebald, who returned from New York state several weeks ago was a caller one morning this week, weather and walks being again in condition so that he can get away from home more than was possible in the kind of weather we have had since his return. From his story of the Empire state one gets the impression that he would prefer to live in this good part of Nebraska where the soil will produce a crop without a big expense for imported fertilizing material. In that state there are many places where farms can be bought for far less than it would cost to reproduce the buildings they have, but where the land is not worth having, because it has all been worn out except the stones, and they are gathered each year as new ones heave to the surface and used to fence the farm into still smaller fields. He says that for farm purposes there is much of that land which they once pretended to farm that is not now worth anything for that purpose—worn out. That is the point we wished to make—that land will wear out. To be sure we can scarcely expect in one or two generations' to rob the soil in this county so as to reduce it to the condition of the poor land of the east, but it is sure that so long as the farmer continues to take more from the land than he puts back to that extent he is approaching the condition that prevails on many of the old worn out farms of the east. Fertilize now.

Yard Taxes on Cattle

Last week Henry Linke purchased a car of cows and heifers at South Omaha, to ship to his place here and grow a bunch of calves this summer. But he says that there is one thing connected with the deal which he does not think quite right. Here is about the way he puts it up. The stock is shipped to the Omaha stockyards people who buy it as best they can, just as it comes in—then along comes the man who wants to take this class of animals out to feed, and buys from the speculators, then he orders the car to ship out, and discovers that he cannot ship unless the animals are inspected—and there is an expense which should, in his opinion, have been taxed to the man who produced the stuff. Then all that fail to pass the test for returning to the farm are his cattle to dispose of as best he can. Should the test not show anything that will bar them from the slaughter house his loss is comparatively small—but if any are found that are unfit for slaughter the loss is much heavier—for an animal that is worth around $60 for use as a cow will not sell for more than $15 for tankage, and that is where they are supposed to be used if they are not suitable for slaughter for human consumption. Mr. Linke is in favor of some change in legislation which will place the loss of diseased stock on the man who produces it rather than the innocent purchaser. We believe with him that conditions should be better for the buyer. To the editor it looks as though the commissions paid and yardage charged up to a bunch of cattle is altogether too much. Most of the cattle are taxed about three commissions before they are done shifting between the one who owns them as calves and the one who eats the meat.

A Country Girl's Creed

By Flora Bullock, in the Country Gentleman
"I believe that the country is a better place for me to live in than the city, because it is cleaner, quieter and more beautiful. I believe that I can find no nobler work than to use all the knowledge and skill I can obtain to make my country home a place of happiness for my family and friends.

"I believe that the community in which I live is a part of my home and that I should work earnestly with my neighbors to bring more helpfulness and joy into the community life.

"I believe that God did not mean to shut me in a house, away from the free air and sunshine. I believe that all the blessings of the great outdoors are intended for me. I believe that for me, too, it is an ennobling privilege to work with nature—to care for the life-giving soil with my own hands, to sow the seed and help it grow. I believe that all my life I should plan to have some work that calls me every day into the open air.

"I believe in learning to enjoy good books, good music and good pictures. But most of all I believe in reading in nature's unwritten books the wonderful stories of plants and animals; in listening to the music of birds and insects, of wind and rain; in watching the ever-changing pictures of earth and sky. For I believe that God has given all these things to make my country home beautiful and dear to me."

Give the "Kids" a Chance

Coleridge Blade: Up to a few years ago, it never occurred to older people that "Young America" needs a place to play in. It is commonly supposed that a live boy would find plenty of amusement in selling newspapers, running errands, or hoeing the back yard garden. If he must have his game of ball once in a while, there was the street or some one's vacant lot.

As a matter of fact it often happens, even in a country town, that there was no place where a set of boys could play a game of ball without being ordered to quit.

Most American towns were laid out with no provision for the children. There was ample foresight for anything in which money could be made. Railroads and factories never lacked opportunities. Land was often given to attract them. But the cases where land was given where young people could play their games freely, and work off superfluous and threatening energy, were rarely seen.

In the larger cities the modern playground, with a tangle of yelling kidlets, is a sight to do a wholesome hearted person good. The boy who is chasing a baseball is not robbing fruit nor loafing on the street corners.

A playground entertaining a large crowd of children does not fully serve its mission unless carefully supervised by some competent person. The average boy gets altogether too much fun from tormenting somebody under his size. Also the average crowd of 12-year-olds is very far from ready for self-government.

But even if a neighborhood or a village can merely open up a vacant lot and turn the youngsters loose the results are worth while.

Spring cankerworms give promise of doing injury to both fruit and shade trees this spring in south-eastern Nebraska by devouring the foliage. The worms hatch from eggs laid by wingless moths which crawl up the trunks of the trees at night to deposit them. A single female may lay as many as 400 eggs. The worms can readily be controlled by placing a barrier of cotton and tree tanglefoot around the trunk of the tree before they begin to ascend. This season these bands should be applied immediately. The tanglefoot may be purchased, or may be made according to the following formula: Five pounds of resin, three pints of castor oil, and enough printer's ink mixed with black Virginia oil or some other heavy oil to make the mixture of the right consistency to spread well and prevent its drying out.

At Columbus they are organizing or reorganizing their commercial club, and they are going to try the following solution for the problem of financing the organization. A similar plan has been discussed at Wayne, and we may get a good suggestion or two from their plan:

A scale of membership dues was adopted and during the next week an active campaign will be made to enroll on the club's lists the name of every business man and every firm in Columbus. "Sustaining" memberships will be sold at $10 each to firms whose lines of business may receive the most direct benefit from the activities of the club. Each member of such firms, and all other individual business men will be asked to pay $5 annual dues. A special rate of $3 a year will be made for clerks and traveling men.

Nebraska will have strong representation in a moving picture reel, which will be shown all over the United States, after its initial showing at the San Francisco exposition. Arrangements have been made whereby Nebraska will be given 1,500 feet, these to include the best scenes in Nebraska. A great amount of desirable publicity will be secured for both the state and city. Twelve states and fifty cities will have representation in the reels, which will be shown for the next two or three years.

Application for Liquor License

In the matter of the application of Charles M. Sokol for saloon license. Notice is hereby given that Charles M. Sokol has filed with the Village Clerk of the Village of Winside, Wayne County, Nebraska, his petition for a license to sell Malt, Spirituous and Vinous Liquors in said Village of Winside, in the one story brick building on the West 25 feet of lot One (1) in block Seven (7) of said village, for the fiscal year commencing on the first day of May, 1915, and ending April 30th, 1916.

If there be no objections, protests or remonstrances filed with the Village Clerk, said license will be granted.

Dated this 5th day of April, 1915.

Thurston County Broke

According to the confession of Commissioner C. C. Frum of Thurston county, as given in the Pender Times, that county is financially embarrassed, especially so far as the road fund is concerned. He says that there is not only no money in the fund, but that county has $63,000 of debt besides what the road districts owe, and that the county has been issuing warrants which are discounted by the bankers, and on which the county is paying a high rate of interest. He points to two remedies—one to do without road work and bridges and other expenses that may possibly be tided over for another year and catch up, and then go onto a cash basis. The other is to vote bonds for the county and secure the necessary cash to put the county on a cash basis, and then buy for cash and live within the county income. By adopting the latter method the county could buy what it must have at better advantage, and the bonds could be sold so as to save practically half of the interest now being paid by the county. Mr. Frum has a business manner of putting the situation up to the voter. He shows them that a bridge that can be replaced now for less than $1,000 cost the county on the old plan of tick business $2,799.47—showing a saving of nearly $2,000 by cash dealing.

Moisture determinations made by the department of instructional agronomy show that there is 10 per cent more moisture in the wheat fields and one-half per cent less moisture in the alfalfa fields this spring than last at the University Farm. As compared with a year ago the amount of precipitation received during the last five months is 4.08 inches less. In the alfalfa fields this spring the water is more evenly distributed through the first six feet than it has been for two or three years and will not be subject to immediate evaporation. In the wheat fields the greater part of the moisture is in the first three and one-half feet of soil and is not likely to move much lower. The department believes that with this supply of moisture the wheat should make a good growth and not become seriously deprived of moisture unless the months of May, and June are very dry.

In Omaha, real estate transactions have been more than active and the last week deals have been made on Sixteenth Street between Farnam and Harney, aggregating one and one half million dollars. The property where the Schlitz hotel stands sold this week for $600,000. Twenty years ago, this same property was sold and the purchaser refused to take it, for $75,000. An increase of eight hundred per cent in twenty years is not bad development or bad financing. Yet that's what is happening in Nebraska.

(Rev. B. P. Richardson, Pastor)

The morning service last Sunday, which was conducted by brother Clarence Linton, was full of interest and showed much thought on the part of the leader.

The Sunday school keeps up both in attendance and interest and yet there is room for more in every class.

Brother Elmer Rogers, leader of the evening service, was encouraged by an attentive audience composed largely of young people.

We are highly favored by the presence of such noble men as Linton and Rogers, who are a source of great strength to the church.

Cheering word comes from Lincoln, where Pastor Richardson is leading in evangelistic services, that the Spirit is being manifested there in great power, some thirty having come forward during the first week of the meeting, and as our pastor will remain there over next Sunday, Prof. Brittel has kindly consented to speak for us on next Sunday morning.

B. Y. P. U. Sunday evening as usual, led by Miss Myrtle Evans. No preaching in the evening on account of evangelistic meetings at Presbyterian church which many wish to attend.

The prayer circle will meet with Mrs. Mel Norton, Friday p. m.

Wednesday evening prayer meeting as usual next week and it is expected that the Pastor will be in his accustomed place and all services held as usual on Sunday the 26th.

Morning worship at 11 o'clock. The subject of the sermon for next Sunday morning will be "The Temple of Life"—Luke 23:47. In the first book of Kings we read that when Solomon built the temple, all of the material was made ready in solitude.—"The house, when it was in building, was built of stone made ready before it was brought thither, so that there was neither hammer nor axe nor any tool of iron heard in the house, while it was in building". This was a great Temple. But a greater temple is being reared by each man today. The material which composed this temple is prepared and shaped in retirement; in the silence of the heart, in the quietness of the home. At last it stands before man, the product of his labor, his temple. The great temple of King Solomon, and the temple of the Mormons in Salt Lake City, are grand, but they can in no way compare with the great temple of life, human character.

For several Sunday evenings the pastor will speak upon the subject of prayer. Next Sunday evening the subject will be "The Call to Prayer"—Matt. 9:38.

Luther League meets at six forty-five, all young people are asked to be present. Come and enjoy the hour with us, you will profit by it.

The fifth annual convention of the First District Nebraska Christian Endeavor will meet in the Wayne Presbyterian church, April 27, 28, and 29. A fine program has been prepared and the general public is invited to any or all sessions of the convention.

Large crowds were in attendance at both services last Sunday. In the evening, nearly five hundred persons were present. Come again next Sunday both morning and evening. You are very cordially invited. This will be the closing day of the Shallcross-Buma meetings.

"Ashamed of Jesus"
(A sermon delivered by Evangelist Wm. J. Shallcross, Monday, April 12th at the Presbyterian church.)

The Evangelist took as his text, Romans 1:16—"For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth, to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."

He said: "I want you to notice that the gospel is power. Power manifests itself in the natural world in various forms. The frosts of winter crack the ground and split huge rocks. The plants burst through the earth's crust and by unseen forces raise themselves high in the air. Rains wear away the rocks. Rivers cut deep chasms in the earth's crust. Winds gather strength and sometimes sweep with terrific force the habitations of man. Mighty earthquakes shake the surface of the globe and bury a city beneath the debris of its once proud, magnificent structures. Volcanoes belch forth their cinders and fiery lava to blot out forever the dwelling places of the children of men. Forces are always at work. Many do not believe in forces until they see them. The world was unconscious of the tremendous power of steam until Watts roused the sleeping giant from the tea kettle and put him to work. Today this giant propels the great ocean greyhounds over the pathless seas, pulls long trains of heavily laden cars across the continent and drives a million spindles. The world did not know of the unseen forces that bind our universe together and keep the planets in their places until Sir Isaac Newton saw the apple fall and discovered the force, to which was given the name of gravity. The world did not know of electricity until Franklin with his kite, and string stole the secret from the forked lightning of the thunder clouds. Today this force lights our houses, runs our trolleys, speeds our electric autos and wings overland and across seas our speech and messages.

"You say you do not believe in gravity because you do not see it, cannot touch it. But let me tell you, you can feel it. If you don't believe me, just step off of that sky scraper the next time you go to Omaha. Electricity is intangible and invisible and so you might say I don't believe in it, you've got to show me, I'm from Missouri—well you can feel it anyway. If you don't think so just touch a live wire, only you'll never live to give your testimony. But the power I want to speak of tonight is the power of the gospel. You say you do not believe in it because you do not see it, neither can you touch it. But listen, as we know that there is a force which we may call gravity and that there is a force which we may call electricity, because we feel them, so there is a force which we may call spiritual power for we can feel it and we know of it and we know of it because of what it does. This power was personified in Jesus Christ. That was why he could still the tempest, walk on the sea, disappear out of a crowd, work miracles, feed the multitudes, cleanse the lepers and call forth the dead from the grave. Yes, that was why the grave could not imprison Christ nor silence forever in its dark vault the voice that is to the world sweeter than the sound of many waters. All power was given unto Him in heaven and in earth, and because he lived as never a man lived and conquered death, so we too, shall triumph over life and death and hell. Since there is atoning power in the blood of Christ we too can cry out with Paul, 'Oh Death where is thy sting! Oh grave where is thy victory!' Oh! to realize fully that this gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth. This is the greatest power in the world. Today as ever, it transcends all natural forces, all visible power. Why then do you not want it? You covet the power of money, the power of knowledge, the power of popularity, the power of influential friends. Why don't you covet the spiritual power that resides in the gospel of Christ? This power of the gospel of Christ is a power, however, that money cannot buy, armies, force nor influence win. There is only one way to get it—by obeying the voice of the Lord. Obedience is the magic word that solves for you the mystery of life and opens your eyes to the marvelous undreamed blessings of a life hid with Christ. As Christ bade the disciples to tarry in Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high, so he tells us to wait upon the Lord until the spirit shall descend upon us. Then equipped with His unseen power we shall be able to work miracles among men. Miracles truly; for is not the transformation of a life a miracle? The power of the gospel is every where in evidence. It has transformed demons into angels, brutes into patient God-like men, harlots into chaste, virtuous women, drunkards into sober men. Yes, it has made thieves honest, crooked men straight, filthy men clean and scarlet women pure as the spotless snow. It has taken poor, weak, erring humanity and manufactured it into strong, stalwart, sin-defying Christians, who keep the straight and narrow way. It has taken black hearted, sin-cursed men and women and made them new creatures in Christ Jesus. This power of the gospel found Peter a humble, cursing fisherman and left him the fearless, forceful, faithful defender of the teachings of the Christ. This gospel found Paul, the bitter, relentless foe of Christians, and left him the greatest missionary of apostolic times. This gospel found St. Augustine a godless profligate and liberator and made him the greatest theologian of his day. It found Francis of Assisi flinging himself unreservedly into the gay pleasures of the world and transformed him into a bright, shining light that flashed across the darkness of the sin of his day like a brilliant meteor. It found Charles G. Finney at the beginning of last century the avowed unbeliever, doubter, and mocker of sacred things and made of him a mighty evangel to thousands of lost souls. Today, even Rochester, New York, still feels the influence of his powerful sermons. This gospel found Ned Wright in the London Tombs—a prisoner for 25 long, sad, sullen years and sent him out a quickening power for righteousness amidst the London slums. This gospel found Jerry McCauley in Sing Sing prison, melted his heart by its sweet influence and sent him out to be the greatest power for righteousness the slums of New York City ever had. Yes, it found Billy Sunday on a Sunday afternoon half drunk on a street corner in Chicago and stirred him to become the greatest evangelist America has today.

"Will you let this wonderful power come into your life? If you will, you will be beside yourself for joy and will cry out as you feel the power thrill through your tingling nerves—the half has never been told. Then too there will spread out before you a gracious privilege of service to your fellowmen of which you never dreamed before.

"By this gospel power, countless souls have been saved, millions of homes brightened, and scores of kindreds, tongues and nations turned from the night of ignorance, superstition and heathenish practices into the marvelous day of righteousness and truth.

"If this gospel has such power why need we be ashamed of it? Do we need to be ashamed of good things? Do we need to be ashamed of pure hearts, kind words, noble deeds and lofty aspirations? Do we need to be ashamed of happy homes, where as the evening shadows gather the father calls the family together to read from the words of eternal life and then to pray to Him who is the source and giver of all good things? Do we need to be ashamed of pure, innocent childhood, chaste loving womanhood, noble virtuous manhood, of contented homes, peaceful communities, religious nations? Should we be ashamed of our dear old saintly mother, our patient, thoughtful, godly father?"

"Shall we be ashamed of the forces that make for good as the Sunday school, the church, the bible? No, we who believe in these things have no cause to apologize; no reason to hang out heads. But there are plenty of things we need to be ashamed of. We may well blush for shame that that angry word escaped us, that we lost our temper, that we slandered and reviled that neighbor of ours with our gospel tongue. You better well be ashamed of that profanity you have been using. You better be ashamed of those dirty, smutty stories you are listening to and repeating. You better be ashamed of that case of beer in your icebox that jug of whiskey in your cellar, that deck of cards where your bible ought to be, that diaphanous dancing gown in the drawer of your dresser. You need to be ashamed of that dirty, two-faced hypocritical life you are leading. Yes, you better be ashamed that you are not a positive force for righteousness, a seven days in the week Christian, a daily reader of Gods word and a faithful attendant at all places where your duty calls.

Now Christ says that if we confess Him, He will confess us. Also that whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words of Him shall the Son of man be ashamed when He shall come in the glory of the Father with the holy angels. If you don't want Christ to be ashamed of you don't be ashamed of Him. Give your heart to Him tonight."

The evangelist then related the story of two different boys who went off to college, the one faithless the other faithful to his parents, and then pressed home the need of accepting Christ now and of claiming at once as your rightful inheritance the power that will make you over in the likeness of Christ Jesus our Lord.

Perhaps it would not be the proper thing to say that a building boom has struck Wayne this spring, but the number of new buildings under way or projected would amount to a building boom in many smaller and deadier places.

There is considerable activity shown in foundation material this week. Brick and cement are being started out from this good town to the country in nearly every direction.

G. H. Wallace left this morning for Dell Rapids, South Dakota, where he lived last year to come back in his automobile which he left there when moving here, the roads being impassible for cars at that time, and it was better to drive it than to ship it.

A. E. Laase has purchased a house from C. A. Grothe and is moving it to his farm land adjoining Wayne where he will make his home, renting his residence in the west part of the city. It is expected that it will take about a week yet to get the building ready for foundation on its new site.

The Elkhorn river strayed from its banks in the vicinity of Norfolk Sunday morning and did some damage. The slaughter house and some other small buildings as well as some stock were taken by the flood, which was at its greatest height at that time. Before night the high water was rapidly receding.

The Wayne Monument works has recently installed a new labor saving machine which is known as a polisher. It does the tedious work of polishing marble or granite faster and better than a man could do it—and there is hardly work enough about it to keep the operator awake. We saw it dressing the face of a large monument the other day, and when the job was finished the stone was as smooth as glass.

This is a busy land now, the farmers having started spring work and the season opening so late it will be a constant hurry for the next month, and then they will have to cut the alfalfa. A few farmers were in their fields last Friday and Saturday, but land was not in the best condition for working at that time, but was dryer Monday and the work of wheat and oat seeding is now going on rapidly.

W. J. Weatherholt of Norfolk paid his annual visit to the Democrat this week and made the necessary deposit to keep in good standing on the list of readers of this great educator. This was his 31st annual visit, he being one of the few subscribers who have taken the Democrat continually since its first issue in 1884. There are plenty of readers who have taken the paper constantly since they first began to read it, but they are few who started with the first number and have been constant subscribers for more than 30 years.

Speaking of potato growing the Missouri Valley Farmer lays much stress on three things to be considered at planting time. Quality, quantity and hardiness, and then adds that early planting is—usually the safest time. They express no doubt of the profit to the grower if he will give the potato as good a chance as he should his corn. The paper then gives the result of some tests made and the experience of years at the business and as to seed he gives numerous varieties in their order according to results, and says that the Early Ohio is the best for the early potato, and Carman No. 3 leads all others for the late planting. Their freedom from scab, blight and bugs are the reasons given for the choice as well as prolific yields.

Seed Potatoes

RED RIVER EARLY OHIO
potatoes are in demand. Those desiring this stock for planting will find this stock very desirable.

CARMAN NO. 3 SEED POTATOES
THIS IS A FIRST-CLASS POTATO IN EVERY RESPECT AND FAR SUPERIOR IN MANY RESPECTS TO ANY OTHER VARIETY.

Jay Lawrence, a market gardener, says, in the Missouri Valley Farmer:

"If I were growing only one variety of potato I should grow the Carman No. 3, as it is an excellent yielder of high quality potatoes, and there is few unmarketable ones among them."

Growers in many states are largely raising Carman No. 3. Aside from the high yield and excellent quality, they resist the bugs, and in the event of dry weather they mature with very little moisture.

EVERY RAISER SHOULD GIVE CARMAN POTATOES A TRY OUT. CAR NOW ON TRACK. YOUR INSPECTION SOLICITED.

Crop Report

Snow has disappeared rapidly during the past two weeks, and only a few of the larger drifts in the central and northern parts of the state now show. The covering of snow since the middle of December prevented the ground from freezing to any appreciable extent so that the water from melting snow has largely been taken up by the ground, very little running off into the streams. This places Nebraska land in excellent condition for the promise of a bumper crop, as the subsoil contains more moisture at this time than for a number of years past.

Winter grain is making a fine showing and conditions are very promising. On account of the general soaking, farmers are late in getting on fields for spring work, therefore land is just beginning to be prepared for sowing.

Kill Gophers Now

Gophers are just beginning to work in your alfalfa field. Here are some ways to get rid of them. The results from a little labor expended now will pay big returns.

Select potatoes about the size of English walnuts; insert an open ended quill about two-thirds of the way through the potato, half fill the cavity in the potato (made by the quill) with strychnine; plug the balance of the hole with potato, place the medicated potatoes in a basket or pail, allowing them four or five hours to saturate before using. Take a sharp end gate wagon rod and spade and these potatoes out to the field to be treated. By probing with the end gate rod into the ground between the gopher hills, the runways are easily located. When located, carefully uncover the runway, drop in a couple of the potatoes, cover with litter and soil so that the dirt does not fill the original runway and that no light penetrates. Treat each colony in the same manner, and the field will be effectually cleared of the pests. (Note: Strychnine soaked raisins can be substituted for potatoes.)

Miss Edith Rippon from Sioux City, was here last week to visit at the home of her uncle and aunt, E. Rippon and wife.

The price of horses will be high, beyond a doubt for several years to come, and strange to say, it happens just at this time there are but two horses so far as we can learn making the season in and near Wayne. If we are right in this, it looks as though it would be a good investment for some one to secure and bring to this place a good horse or jack or both. It is an important industry in these war times, and we believe it should be encouraged. If we are wrong, will some one please tell us.

Miss Martha Zapp, for many years a resident of Emerson, died in a hospital at Council Bluffs last week, and the body was brought to Emerson for burial. She was for years the chief operator of the telephone exchange, and had a wide circle of acquaintances over the lines. She had the reputation of never losing her temper, which speaks much for a good disposition when one considers the problems the central girl has to contend with.

A change was made in the Elkhorn Valley State Bank Tuesday when F. R. Beebe sold his interest to J. H. Welch and Chas. McLeod; Mr. Beebe had a chance to enter business elsewhere and resigns to take advantage of the same; the resignation of Mr. Beebe as Cashier was accepted by the Board of Directors to take effect June first at which time Mr. Welch will succeed him as cashier.—Stanton Register.

"Do not burn cornstalks or straw but plow under all crop residues," is the advice of the department of agricultural chemistry at the University Farm. Cornstalks and oat straw are worth $3.50 a ton as fertilizers. Besides returning nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium to the soil, they help to improve the texture of the soil by increasing the humus content.

The Baroness Richter

She Was a Very Slippery
Criminal

By F. A. MITCHEL

I have been a detective for many years and have learned one thing perfectly—that is, that I would rather take the risk of placing a man under arrest, even if he be armed to the teeth, than a woman. Women are stronger in their weakness than men are in their strength, and they are much more cunning. A woman will be granted certain favors that a man would not even ask; and, though the person who has her within his grasp fears that his request is a ruse to give him the slip, he has not the power of resistance to refuse her.

One of my first duties as a plain clothes man was to arrest a woman whose name was supposed to be Vronsky, a Pole. She claimed to be a countess in her own country and was a very high stepper. She had robbed a man of several thousand dollars and had disappeared, but after an interval information came to our office that the same woman was living in apartments in another city in high feather as Baroness Richter, the widow of a German nobleman.

I was then young and full of gallantry toward the softer sex, but had no idea when I started out to run in a woman swindler that I would have any compunction at doing my duty. Going to the apartment house where the lady lived, I went up in the elevator for her suit of rooms and pushed the button of the electric bell.

A woman answered the summons who, had she not been in the uniform of a maid, I should certainly have taken for the baroness. She was comely of face, and her figure was superb.

I had been chosen for the job because I was considered capable of playing the part of a gentleman, and this faculty was expected to give me an advantage in gaining admission to the lady's presence without exciting suspicion that I was an officer of the law. I was dressed in the height of fashion and wore a solitary diamond scarfpin. I had with me a card with the name engraved on it of Dr. Henry Mortimer, 784 Harley street, London, England. I was born in England and have something of the English accent left in my speech. I also knew that Harley street was the residence of the high toned London doctors.

"Is the baroness at home?" I asked the maid.

"I will see," she replied with a slight foreign accent. "Will monsieur please to come in?"

I was shown into a luxurious living room. "Will monsieur tell me who I am to say calls?" added the maid.

Taking out a gold mounted morocco cardcase, I drew a card and handed it to her. All this while I assumed the bearing of one to the manner born and, throwing myself into an easy chair, began to tap my boot with my cane. After a brief absence the maid returned with a message that the baroness did not remember Dr. Mortimer as among her acquaintances. Would I kindly state where I had met her?

To this I sent a reply that I had never met the baroness, but had heard her spoken of with enthusiasm by a friend of mine in the Castleton club, London, whose report of her attractions had made me especially desirous to make her acquaintance. While I was giving the maid the message I noticed that her eyes were fixed in admiration upon my diamond scarfpin, and, if her mistress was the swindler she was supposed to be, the report of its value would likely be given her and would have the effect of securing me this somewhat irregular introduction.

The maid withdrew again and I was left alone endeavoring to repress my anxiety as to the success of my ruse. Presently I heard a rustle of skirts and a lady tastefully dressed in morning costume, of high-bred appearance, though not so beautiful as I had expected to find the baroness, stepped across the threshold and, with a slight inclination, waited for me to speak.

"The Baroness Richter?" I asked, rising.

"At your service." Her eyes were bent upon mine suspiciously, and she did not divert her glance for an instant. Had we been facing each other with foils in mortal combat she could not have watched me more closely.

"I am sorry to announce to you, baroness, that you are my prisoner."

"Your prisoner!" she said in a tone and with an expression denoting that she did not understand my meaning.

"Yes, it is my duty to take you in custody."

She laughed. "You are playing some game. Either you are an old friend whom I do not at once recognize or you have been recommended by an old friend to—"

"I am neither. I am an officer of the law."

Still the baroness looked incredulous. "Be seated," she said after an inquiring glance. "We etc." at the bottom of this presently Millington of the Castleton was always playing jokes upon me when we were together in London. Is he the friend who has spoken of me so highly?"

"Madame, I must trouble you to put on your hat and wraps and go with me to the police station."

She had sunk gracefully into an easy chair and upon this burst into a merry laugh. "Ned Millington is at the bottom of this, I am sure," she said. "Do you know, one day when I was at the hotel he came to my rooms unannounced disguised as a 'bobby,' and it cost me a 'pony' to get rid of him. Of course he returned the money and dined me sumptuously."

"You are wasting your time, madame. I am a detective, and you may as well come with me at once." I opened my coat and showed a badge on my vest.

Gradually a changed look came over her face, indicating a suspicion that something, after all, must be wrong.

"Are you really in earnest?"

"I certainly am."

"Will you kindly inform me what any one can want with me at a police office?"

"You will learn that when we get there."

She looked at me with a puzzled expression for a few moments, then said: "There is something queer about this, but I suppose I must take you at your word. I have no knowledge of such matters. Can I not send for some one to come to me and advise me?"

The woman looked so puzzled, seemed so uncertain as to what course to take, that I began to cherish a faint suspicion that after all some mistake had been made. I should have clapped the bracelets on her at once, but I had not the assurance to do so. Instead, I said that if she would go with me peacefully she would be permitted at the station to send for any one she chose. To this she replied that to go to such a place would be an indignity that she would never recover from and begged me to permit her to send for a lawyer. There were few telephones in those days, and I should be obliged to allow her to send a messenger. This I declined to do.

After a long struggle in words I convinced her that further importunities would not avail, and she consented to go with me, but on no account would she leave the house unless permitted to don a street costume. To this I agreed, provided she would permit me to inspect the room in which she proposed to change her apparel that I might make sure there was no egress by which she might give me the slip. Whereupon she took me through a hall, then a boudoir and told me to go into a bedroom which was at the end of the suit. I saw at a glance that there was no door leading into another room, and since the flat was on the fifth floor and no roof of another building to which she could let herself down, I permitted her to go in to change her clothing, closing the door.

After having waited fully half an hour for her to reappear, I called to her. She replied that she had nearly finished and would be with me presently. In nearly another half hour I called to her again and received a reply. So long as I could hear her voice it did not seem to me that there was any danger of my losing her, and since it had a timbre of its own I could not fail to recognize it.

Still there surely must be some game in her taking so long a time to put off one suit and don another.

At last I called that I would give her five minutes more and if she did not appear at its expiration I would open the door. To this she replied that she saw no reason for hurry, but if I was capable of opening the door to a lady's dressing room she could not prevent me. At the end of the five minutes allowed I turned the knob of the door. It was locked.

"Come out at once," I called. "or I will break down the door!"

"I see no necessity for that," she pleaded. "I can't possibly leave here without coming through the room where you are. To tell the truth, I am hunting up certain letters which, if taken possession of by the police, would compromise friends of mine. I see no reason why you should prevent my doing so. I assume that you have simply been sent to arrest me, and I promise you that when I have finished what I am doing I will come out and go with you willingly wherever you choose to take me."

I did not like the idea of her destroying evidence and knew I should be blamed for giving her an opportunity for doing so, but I did not see how I could prevent it without breaking down the door. Besides, it occurred to me that she had already destroyed the principal part of what she wished to get rid of or she would not have told me what she was about.

"I'll give you ten minutes more," I said, "and if you're not here then this door will be splintered."

"What time is it?" she asked.

"Half past 12."

"What time did you call?"

"At 11."

I heard the key turning in the lock. The door opened, and there stood my quarry in maid's costume.

"What's this?" I asked sharply.

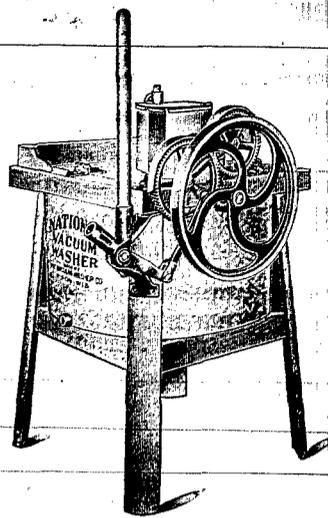

"Nothing except I am the maid. My mistress has doubtless been gone long enough to make good her escape. You may run me in if you wish to, but it will do you no good, for I'm sure there is to charge against me. I have never broken a law."

"You are in league with a thief!" I growled.

"Not at all. I don't know that my mistress is a thief. She told me that she was hiding from a brief husband, whom she expected at any moment, and asked me to receive guests in her stead."

I noticed that the maid in uniform was quite inferior in appearance to the woman who had escaped me. I concluded not to take her to the station to get myself laughed at. But in this I made another mistake, for the two women were pals and working together.

National Vacuum Washer

ADVANTAGES

It runs so easy that any child can operate it. It will not tear the most delicate fabric. It will wash heavy fabric as well as light. It will wash one piece as well as the regular amount. It can be run by hand, water, gasoline and electric power. It costs much less than two cents per hour to run the electric machine. It will wash so clean that there is no more use for a washboard, no rubbing. It will pay for itself in a very short time by the saving in clothes. It will last longer, because the tub and dasher is made of galvanized metal or copper sheets. No hoops to fall off. Can be left anywhere without fear of falling to pieces. It is made with a round metal, making a very large capacity. It is absolutely guaranteed against defects for five years.

Why You Should Use a National Vacuum Washer

BECAUSE; it washes much quicker, does it much cleaner and with a great deal less work to the operator.

Why Does It Wash Quicker

BECAUSE; the rapid action of the dasher driving the hot water and suds through the soiled clothes forces the dirt out. The agitation of the hot water makes the dirt respond immediately. Two to six minutes will remove the dirt from any fabric that can be cleaned with soap and water.

Why Does It Wash Cleaner

BECAUSE; by the vacuum principle the dirt is all forced OUT instead of rubbing part of it into the fabric.

Why with Less Work to the Operator

BECAUSE; by the vacuum principle it requires only power to handle the water, not the clothes. This eliminates the wear on the fabric and makes the machine run much easier.

In order to fully appreciate the real value of THE NATIONAL VACUUM WASHER, YOU MUST GIVE IT A TRIAL.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

Duck farming is becoming more profitable year by year. People are learning that ducks are the hardest of domestic fowls and are the easiest to feed. Matured ducks of the larger breeds are worth $1 to $1.25 each dressed. The feathers add a few cents to this.

Ducklings grow fast and reach a nice roasting size at two months, it being quite common to get a four pound fowl at this age. They are a great delicacy then, and as they bring a higher rate per pound than when matured it is considered most profitable to market them at a weight of three to four pounds. Their feed up to this time should consist mainly of bran or shorts wet to a thin mash with skim milk, adding a little cornmeal. Stale bread or crackers soaked with skim milk will also do nicely. They need a clover patch to run in. Garden stuff is excellent. A little cracked corn is needed in the last two weeks. In raising ducks to an age of six or eight months considerable grain is required in addition to the mash and green stuff.

From time of hatching to five days old provide the following mixture: Cracker or bread crumbs and cornmeal, equal parts by measure; hard boiled eggs, 15 per cent of the total bulk of crackers and meal; sand, 5 per cent of the total of crackers and meal. Mix with water or milk and feed four times a day.

From five to twenty days old the following mixture: Wheat bran or shorts, two parts by measure; cornmeal, one part; rolled oats, 50 per cent of this bulk; beef scraps, 5 per cent.

AYLESBURY DRAKE

sand, 5 per cent; green food, 10 per cent. Mix with water to a dry, crumbly state and feed four times a day.

From twenty to forty-two days old the following mixture: Wheat bran or shorts, two parts by measure; cornmeal, one part; beef scraps, 5 per cent of this bulk; sand, 5 per cent; green food, 10 per cent. Mix with water to a dry, crumbly state and feed four times a day.

From forty-two to seventy days old the following mixture: Cornmeal, two parts by measure; wheat bran or shorts, one part; beef scraps, 10 per cent of this bulk; coarse sand or grit, 5 per cent; green food, 10 per cent. Mix with water to a dry, crumbly state and feed four times a day.

Of all ducks for farm and practical purposes none stands higher in popular esteem than the White Peking. It is valuable for raising on a large scale and is the most easily raised of all. It is a very timid bird and must be handled quite carefully. It was imported from China in the early seventies and has steadily grown in popularity since its introduction into this country.

The White Aylesbury ducks are second to the popular Peking for market purposes and are bred in large numbers in Europe. In this country they are not so extensively bred as the Peking; neither have they been found so good as the latter.

The Colored Rouen duck is called deservedly popular throughout this country and is considered one of the most profitable varieties to keep. By some raisers the Cayuga is considered to be as good as the Peking for early markets, and the claim is made that it can be grown as cheaply. The Indian Runner is best for egg production, but is not equal to the others for meat.

Ducks should have a snug shelter for nights. A swimming pond or creek is not needed, but they need a trough for splashing and washing. They consume a lot of clean water.

Ducks usually lay their eggs early in the morning, and they often prefer to drop those eggs in any mud puddle about the barn lot, or as they swim in the creek. But if a house is provided they will lay in their nests if kept up until 9 or 10 o'clock in the morning. Nests can be made for the layers along one of the walls by nailing little boards about fifteen inches apart to this wall. These form a sort of stall into which you place straw. Nail a low cleat along the nest fronts, close to the floor. This prevents the eggs rolling out and does not hinder the duck stepping into her laying-stall.

Keep the Bull in Bounds.

The bullpen is a necessity on every farm. It is unwise and injudicious to allow the bull to run at liberty with the cattle.

POULTRY POINTERS.

Clean and whitewash your poultry house.
Dust the sitting hen with insect powder before giving her the eggs.
Buy a few sittings of eggs for hatching or some baby chicks if you wish to improve your stock.
Decide to increase egg production next season. Give this problem all the time you can spare for it.
Mate early layers with a good, vigorous male, allowing him from ten to fifteen pullets. Breed from young males rather than from two-year or three-year males.

LIVE STOCK ON THE FARM.

How a Grain Grower Turned a Loss Into Substantial Profit.

A number of years ago a North Dakota wheat farmer, whose exclusive grain growing had put him deep in debt, desired from his bank a loan of $1,000, writes J. C. McDowell in the Kansas Farmer. Except the horses there was no live stock—not a cow, a pig or even a chicken—on the place. The banker, a very shrewd business man, was able to analyze the problem and to discover the cause of the farmer's financial difficulties, and he agreed to make the loan only on condition that the borrower change his system of farming.

The system outlined by the banker required that a portion of the loan should be used to purchase two cows, half a dozen pigs and a small flock of poultry. It also provided for a fair sized vegetable garden. Grain farming was to be continued as before. The banker figured that the live stock and the garden would, in poor as well as in good seasons, fully support the farmer's table. He figured that in poor years the farmer would be able to play even and that in the good, and even in the average year, the farm would produce enough to gradually wipe out the debt.

The farmer reluctantly agreed to the banker's terms, received the loan and met the conditions. In five years he was out of debt and rated as a substantial and prosperous farmer and business man. To him farming had ceased to be a game of chance and had become a business.

TO IMPROVE THE FRUIT.

Thinning Advised For Those Who Want Product of High Quality.

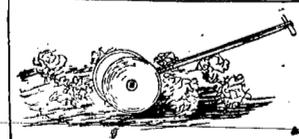

To many it is a waste of time and labor to thin fruit trees, but with few exceptions it should be done. When the tree bears a light crop little thinning is necessary, but since most trees bear too much it is necessary to thin them to obtain fruit of proper quantity and quality. The purpose of thinning is to secure large, healthy, well flavored fruit in culling out the knotty, diseased, ill flavored ones. In order to prevent waste, feed the culls to hogs and poultry.

Culling out can be gauged by no fast rule. It is seldom overdone since the fruit grows fast up to harvest time. It is best to pull each wormy and blighted fruit. Such fruit will either drop from the tree before picking or prove worthless for storage or marketing.

Thinning will also prevent good fruit from contamination. In addition, the remaining fruit has a greater chance of development because the tree is not called upon to nourish those infested. The fruit produced from trees that have been thinned is of far superior quality.—American Agriculturist.

To Cut Strawberry Runners.

When strawberries are not allowed to run over the bed, but are cultivated in hills, an implement for cutting the runners is a necessity. One of the simplest as well as one of the best is shown in the figure. The cutters are old disks from a disk harrow or cultivator and must be kept well sharpened to do their best work. The axle may be made of any bolt of suitable size threaded on both ends so that a nut and washer may be placed on each side of the disk. This clamps the two disks firmly to the axle and prevents them from revolving independently of each other. The handle should be made similar to a lawn mower handle.

The disk can be set at various widths, depending on the size of hills desired, about eight to ten inches being usual. By setting the plants in check row fashion the tool can be run in both directions, making the operation of cutting the runners a short one even over a large extent.

Alfalfa For Pasture.

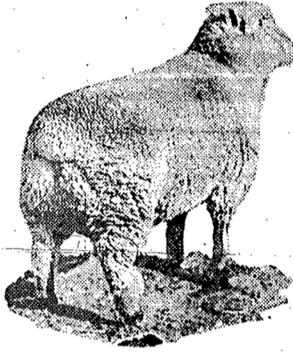

There are many known instances where alfalfa has been used for pasturing both horses and cattle without any injurious results, but as a matter of fact there is always a little danger in pasturing cattle on alfalfa. They should become accustomed to the crop gradually, and they should never be turned into an alfalfa field when they are hungry. When cattle are pastured on alfalfa one must always be prepared to handle a case of bloating. Iowa Homestead.

FARM STOCK.

The horses will soon be in heavy work. Harden their shoulders by a wash of salt and water.
Buy some sheep. April is a good month to get some good grades, and turn them loose on the corners and weedy pastures next summer.
The real stockman never permits the young pigs to stop growing for a moment.
Sheep are not found on enough farms, and it is the wonder why they are not.
A pig gives the best returns from dairy products while young.
To work the colt until it is leg-weary will develop a slow walker.

BREEDING EWES FOR WINTER LAMBS

Ewes that are being prepared for early winter lambs should be allowed to exercise freely on a fairly large lot near their shelter, with a good maintenance ration of sound hay and plenty of fresh water. They want to be in prime condition when the early pasture is ready for them about May 1. To insure this they should be sheared early, about the middle of April, depending on the season. Before they are ready to breed it is a good practice to flush the ewes. This can be done in either of two ways—by feeding them

The Southdown is the generally accepted type of a mutton and short wool sheep. It has been the sire of all other so called Down breeds, crossed on various old fashioned races which had become obsolete. The Southdown is one of the most beautiful sheep—it has a smooth, even body, round, clean barrel, short legs and broad saddle. Its mutton has long been held in high favor, the meat being sweet, tender and never overfat. The sheep shown is a Southdown wether.

a heavy ration or turning them on full pasture in May after they have been for the early part of the spring on bare lots and hay feed. This change in feeding seems to start their improvement in condition very swiftly and tends to bring them into breeding condition with considerable uniformity.

Give the ewes close attention and keep them in good condition. Their flesh should be solid, and they should be full of life and vigor. Fat is detrimental. Ewes that have had at least one lamb already are to be preferred. They have gained experience as mothers.

If on good pasture, but low in flesh, they should have a ration of a full pound per day of two-thirds oats and one-third of a mixture of bran and linseed meal. This feed should be given morning and night. Corn is too fattening, as is also alfalfa. A little good clean meadow or clover hay is good, but feed no timothy or rye at this time; also give the ram all he will clean up of these foods. Let the sheep have plenty of exercise and constant access to pure water and rock salt.

Breed the sheep about the 20th of June and, above all, keep them where they may be quiet and free from alarm. Avoid heavy feeding after conception till perhaps six weeks before lambing, when it may be renewed in moderation.

Danger From Acorns.

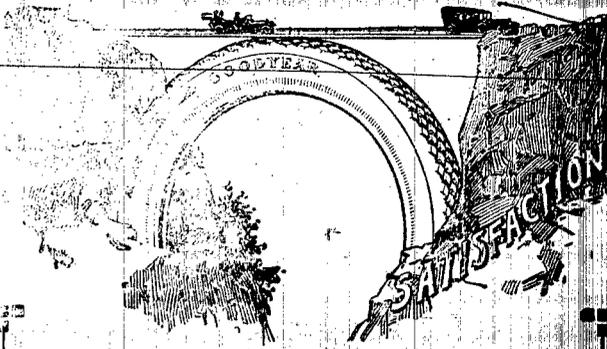

Farmers whose pastures include oak groves will do well to fence off the oak trees, for acorns are responsible each year for the death of many head of young stock. Young cattle, particularly those under eighteen months of age, according to F. B. Hadley, veterinarian of the College of Agriculture, University of Wisconsin, are most subject to acorn poisoning. Sheep and hogs, apparently, are not affected, even if they eat large quantities of the acorns, and mature cows seldom die from eating acorns, but their flow of milk is usually diminished when feeding upon pastures in which acorns are available.

Destroying Cattle Lice.

The first thing to do is to cleanse, disinfect, whitewash and perfectly light and ventilate the stable. Then wash affected cattle with a decoction of four ounces of gavesacre (arksapur) seeds to the gallon of boiling water. Repeat this application as often as necessary to eradicate the lice.

Barley as a Hog Feed.

Barley for pigs is not quite as good as corn for fattening purposes. But for growing animals, especially pigs, it heads the list of grains. It produces flesh of the finest quality. Barley hay does not possess a high feeding value.

Everett McInerney is in school in the second grade again after an absence of several weeks.

The kindergarten, first and second grades are preparing to plant school gardens on the school ground.

The lot secured for the school gardens for the fifth grade has been plowed and will be measured by the children Saturday forenoon.

The attendance and punctuality in the first grade has been perfect this week except for the absence of Aulda Surber whose home is under quarantine.

The agriculture class visited the L. C. Gildersleeve dairy herd Tuesday afternoon for practice in judging such stock. These practical lessons are proving very interesting and instructive.

Miss Sara Killen of the State Normal addressed the high school last Friday morning, giving an interesting description of Eaton college, England, the works of art found there, and the life of the students.

The sixth grade will rake a portion of the campus and conclude the afternoon's work with a picnic supper. In this grade recent work in drawing has been from poses of girls in Indian costume and boys dressed as scouts.

The seniors doing observation in the training school, at present in Miss Stocking's department are finding the work interesting and profitable. Some of these students are taking advantage of the city institute at the high school held this week for the teachers of the city schools.

The seventh grade enjoyed a debate last Friday on the question, "Resolved: That the British had more advantages than the Americans during the Revolution." The affirmative led by Thomas Moran was given the decision of the judges though the negative led by Leslie Rundell was ably maintained.

The second Junior-Senior debate occurred this morning. The question was, "Resolved, That Capital Punishment Should be Abolished". The negative was taken by the Junior team and the affirmative by the Senior team. The judges were Rev. Buell, Rev. Shallcross and Prof. Lackey. The decision was given in favor of the Juniors, which makes the second victory they have won over the Seniors.

An Opportunity to Buy Land

There has come to the Demograt through a friend an opportunity to offer for sale some excellent farm lands where there are many natural reasons why they should rapidly advance in value over the price now asked. These are lands not far from two good railroads, and handy to market. Will grow alfalfa, corn and small grain, and that can be proven, for there are farmers living on adjoining lands who have made large profits from their farms. It is not what the people here would term a corn country, yet they grow good corn crops there of a corn acclimated to that country. It is a land that the boomer has not yet struck, for a wonder, for those who are farming there have sometimes sold the crop of a single year for more per acre than the land had been selling for. They harvest three full crops of alfalfa, so any stock farmer knows that it is a desirable property to own. The writer has seen cattle hog fat from living on the native grasses.

An abundance of good water may be had at a depth of from 20 to 50 feet, and coal sells for $3.00 per ton at the near-by markets, for it is found in abundance near at hand. The prices range from $20 to $40 per acre, and the terms will be right. Next week we hope to give more information about this land, and if you are interested ask the editor of this paper for full particulars regarding this advertisement.
