FIFTY YEARS OF MARRIED LIFE

Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Oman of Winside "at home" to Children, Grand-children and Great Grand-children, April 6, a Half a Century After

It was April 6, 1866, at the town of Bloomsburg, Columbia county, Pennsylvania, two residents of the county, P. W. Oman and Miss Martha E. Evert united their lives for better or worse, and in honor of the completion of a half century of wedded happiness they bid their children to come with their children and their children's children to make merry. Of the seven children born to Mr. and Mrs. Oman, all are living, except Hiram, the oldest, who was called by death a few years ago, but he was represented at the home by some of his children. The others now living are Mrs. Wm. McMillan (Minnie) who resides near Wayne; Clyde Oman of this place, Bert, who lives near Winside, George, who has a home near Wakefield; Daisy (Mrs. John Van Scoix) of Norfolk and Pearl, (Mrs. Martin Jensen) near Winside. Daisy was not able to come on account of sickness of her children.

Thus five of the children and families were present at the big family dinner served at noon last Thursday. Of the 31 grand-children, 22 were present and all of the five great grandchildren were in evidence, making a total of practically 40 persons, who enjoyed the bounteous repast.

The afternoon was given over to their many friends, about half a hundred of whom, came to pay their tribute of respect to this worthy couple on this occasion.

It was quite informal, the guests being served with ice cream, cake, coffee and cigars for those who desired. Rev. Wylie made a brief talk and to him before those present, the vows of a half a century before were renewed. Miss Charlotte White also made a few remarks, telling some of the good things she knew of this couple, who had so many years braved the storms of the troubled sea of matrimony together. Through some oversight Mr. Oman was not given opportunity to respond, and we fail to understand why he did not assert his rights and talk back. He could have held his end in a talking match or we are no judge.

Their life history is much like that of many another young couple who started in life together in those days following the great civil war when the west held out a welcoming hand to those who had the courage to try their fortune among the Indians and wild beasts of prey which many in the east appeared to believe invested this fair land. They were not with the advance guard, but kept coming to newer fields. About six years after marriage they moved to Kalamazoo county, Michigan, when beyond a doubt much of that county was an unexplored forest. In the fall of 1876, after four years in Michigan they again moved west, coming to Mills county, Iowa. A little more than 5 years later (1882) they moved to this county, which has since been their home, except for a brief time when they permitted another attack of western fever carry them to the state of Washington, but when the relapse came their good judgment asserted itself and they came back to Wayne county, where they had won a place with the sturdy pioneers of those early days.

An auctioneer by profession, the time was when Mr. Oman knew and was known to nearly every man in Wayne county, and those who knew him asked him to serve them as county commissioner, which he did well. In politics a true democrat, he is now enjoying the fruits of long years of waiting for a man of the people, by the people and for the people to fill the presidential chair and show that the principles of democracy properly followed lead to prosperity and equality for all, and the glad day might have come sooner but for the fact that so many of them had been shown before they would believe.

The faithful wife of all these years has bore well her part and been the helpmate who has cheered him on his way and helped past many a hard place in the road. But now they have but little to do save look back at a busy life and forward to the sure reward which comes to those who have sown wisely and well in this life.

They were kindly remembered by the friends, some with a good offering, and others with gifts which will be keepsakes for life. The children gave the mother a gold watch and to father a beautiful ring. A party of neighbors presented them with a handsome library table.

A Wayne County Picnic

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ley returned Tuesday evening from Long Beach, California, where they spent the winter. They report a most enjoyable winter and that both were in perfect health all the time away. Mr. Ley tells of a most enjoyable time a few days before their starting home, when as many Wayne and Wayne county people as could, assembled at Pomona, where Mr. and Mrs. Feather live and where Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Ferguson are spending the winter, for a Wayne picnic. The two ladies mentioned above and Mrs. Orth formerly of this place, were the prime movers of the plan and most royally entertained the forty representatives of this county, who assembled for the day. Mr. Ley was not sure that he could remember to tell all who were there, but he recalled besides themselves and those mentioned above, the Vincent's, the Goldie's, Chace's, Moses and family, Ed Mitchell, Mrs. Mary Jones, Newton Dennis, Capt. Merriman and some of the Skeen people. It was a happy day, long to be remembered by all. Col. Ferguson and Mr. Feather were truly at their best that day.

The Root Investment Co.

There was a hearing in the district court before Judge Welch Saturday of the petition of Elmer W. Closson and others for an accounting of the Root Investment Co., of Sholes, which resulted in the appointment of Harry B. Jones of this place as receiver for the Root Investment Co., and from this action of the court the attorneys for the Investment Co. have given notice of appeal.

It appears from what we can learn that the officers in charge of the affairs of the Investment Co., are the same persons as are active officers of the Wayne County Bank, and other stockholders of the company have never been able to secure a separate accounting of the affairs of the Investment concern. They were wanting to know where they are at.

Class to be Confirmed at Altona

At ten o'clock Sunday morning the confirmation services will begin at the church at Altona, Rev. Schmidt, the pastor, preaching. Then will come the examination of the class members and the ceremony of confirmation. Eight of the young people of the neighborhood are prepared to take upon themselves the vows of the church. They are August Mathes, Powell Dalkoetter, Rudolph Ties, Thomas Puls, Herman Becker, Powell Schaller, Selma Reinhardt and Clara Erxleben.

On next week Friday (Good Friday) there will be services at this church, and communion will be held following the preaching service, and at this time the members of the new class will receive their first communion.

Name Their Farms

Two prominent farmers have named their farms recently and had the name registered with County Clerk Reynolds. Thomas Brockman of Wilbur will have his farm known in the future as "Happy Hollow." John D. Lueers of Hunter has recorded the name of "Pleasant Hill" for his place.

It is a fine custom, and one which should be encouraged among the Wayne county farmers. By its name a place will become known, and the products from the place may also become known and if good that will become a valuable asset, increasing as the years pass.

Newbanks Gets From 1 to 7 Years

That was the sentence imposed by the judge of the district court upon John Newbanks, who pleaded guilty to the charge of robbing the safe at the Hostettler pool hall about ten weeks ago. His sentence is for from one to seven years in the penitentiary.

School Notes

In the debate held at Bloomfield last Friday evening, between that city and Wayne, Bloomfield succeeded in winning the decision of the judges.

In previous debates each team had won, defending the negative. Wayne wanted the negative, so did Bloomfield. In drawing for sides, Wayne lost and drew the affirmative. This was a great handicap, as the Garrison plan for increasing the army is losing in popular favor and congressional action daily.

Even though the handicap was great, the debate was neck and neck to the very end. Had the Wayne team met an average team, it could easily have won. But the Bloomfield team was a wonderfully skilled team and had worked together for two years in debate; in fact, last year it came within one of winning the district championship.

Wayne is satisfied with the decision and is confident that Bloomfield will win the next debate, which is to decide the championship for the district. This will no doubt be done, as Bloomfield has again succeeded in drawing the negative side.

We congratulate Bloomfield in being so lucky in drawing the right side of the question both times, and also on the fact that it has a very strong team.

The Senior class has chosen the class play to be given as one of the series of commencement events. "The Lion Tamer" is a modern play, the plot of which was suggested by Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew," and is full of dramatic interest, such as has been given each year for several years; but is one of more general interest.

The boys in the second grade had a record of perfect attendance and punctuality last week. Alta Surber of this grade has been detained at home by a slight attack of pneumonia.

Irwin Larson who returned from the west with his parents is again in his place in the third grade.

New pupils are Hazel Thies, seventh grade; Paul Thies, third; Elsie Thies, second; Harold Durant, Harold Murphey, Amelia Krueger, first; Hazel Durant, kindergarten, and John Coon, third.

Dr. J. T. House has taken charge of the Senior class for a period each day during the remaining six weeks of the school year. He will teach the high school book he is preparing for publication under the title, "Ethics and Occupations." The class is taking keen interest in the work, and feel that it is going to prove highly profitable.

Prof. J. J. Coleman, gave a very interesting and instructive talk before the high school yesterday, on the development of the orchestra. He called attention to the four classes of instruments used, and illustrated his talk with selections on the victrola.

New Firm Doing Big Business

The Democrat man made a call at the Wayne Granite Works the other day and found Messrs. Nielen & Henderson very busy unloading a large shipment of Barre granite. This granite has for years stood the test of all climates, and it has come to be known as one of the leading granite of the world, both in beauty and durability. The visit was one of much interest as we were shown around the plant by the salesman and attention called to the different grades of granite and their durability, and left impressed with the fact that the new firm is carrying a class of stock and doing a work which is worthy of the patronage of the entire surrounding country.—1.

Death of Mrs. Sam Winsor

Last week the Democrat made mention of the automobile accident in which Mrs. Winsor, who had but recently gone from Wayne, was injured. A later report states that she died a few days later. At this writing Wayne people have not been able to learn any particulars. Mr. Winsor and their only son have been living for a year or more past in Pierce county.

Social Notes

Friday was Mel Norton's 63d birthday, and Mrs. Norton thought he was old enough to have a birthday party, so made plans to entertain a few of his friends, selected from among the neighbors, forgetting to mention the fact to Mr. Norton. The evening was spent in social chat and listening to music more popular and less common these days than the victrola—for Peter Coyle was there with his good old violin, and those who know Mr. Coyle and the way he draws the bow know pretty well what the guests would be tempted to do. Ice cream and cake was served and all wished Mr. Norton many happy returns of the day.

The P. N. G. club met with Mrs. Rollie Ley Wednesday afternoon, instead of Tuesday in order that Mrs. Henry Ley, who had just returned from California might meet with them. The time was spent in contests and writing poetry. In the guessing contest, Mrs. P. L. Mabbott won the prize and in the observation contest, Mrs. Harry McMillan proved to be best. The decorations and prizes were suggestive of Easter. Mrs. Herman Lundberg assisted the hostess in serving refreshments. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Geo. Lamberson, May 9th.

The Union Bible Study Circle met with Mrs. E. B. Young Tuesday afternoon and took up the study of Cornelius the devout centurion, whose prayers and alms went up to God always. After the interesting lesson, letters were read from Jas. Lyon of the Prenjab and from Agnes Glenn of Chiba Ken, Japan, showing marvelous answers to prayer in behalf of their work. Heart to heart talks from the many mothers present, and a season of earnest prayer closed the afternoon's work. Mrs. Wm. Goldsmith will have the next meeting and all are welcome.

The Acme club met with Mrs. Walter Weber on Monday afternoon. The members responded to roll call by naming some bird, its habits or some incident. Mrs. Ingham sang a song. The remainder of the afternoon was given to current events with Mrs. Wilson as leader. At the close of the afternoon the hostess served very delicious refreshments. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Hamer Wilson.

Last Monday was little Miss Vivian Kinne's fifth birthday, and she invited eighteen of her little friends in from 3 to 5:30 to help her celebrate it. Various games were played and a kodak picture was taken of the little ones. A dainty luncheon was served and each little guest received a favor of a little basket filled with Easter eggs and a rabbit.

The Eastern Star held their regular meeting last Monday evening and elected the following officers: Worthy Matron, Miss Nettie Craven; Worthy Patron, Harvey Ringland; Associate Matron, Miss Sara Killen; Conductress, Mrs. Ringland; Associate Conductress, Mrs. James Miller; Secretary, Mrs. Mines; Treasurer, Mrs. Main.

Westminster Guild met with Miss Garlow at the E. B. Erskine home Tuesday evening with Miss Margaret Forbes leader. A very interesting evening was spent in studying the immigration question. The next meeting will be April 24 with Mrs. Wendte.

The Minerva club held its meeting with Mrs. Lewis last Monday afternoon. Mrs. McEachen gave a book review on, "From Alien to Citizen," by Steiner. A piano solo was given by Mrs. Beaman. The club meets April 24th with Mrs. Hickman.

The Monday club met last Monday afternoon with Mrs. Robert Meller. Mrs. O. R. Bowen had a lesson on current poetry. Mrs. Ben Carhart gave a book review on, "Me." The next meeting will be with Mrs. Heckert.

The U. D. club met last Monday afternoon with Mrs. James Miller. The lesson was on current events. The club meets next week with Mrs. John Hufford.

The Bible Circle girls will meet at the home of Miss Lois Corzine, next Saturday evening at seven o'clock.

$65,000 Gymnasium for Wayne

Lincoln, Neb., April 12—The state normal board reported today that at the next meeting, May 12, it would apportion the money for buildings for the coming year. This step will include the setting aside of the following amounts: For a gymnasium at Wayne, $65,000; for addition to the main building at the Chadron school, $50,000 for a gymnasium at the Kearney school, $50,000.

The resignation of President Joseph Sparks of the Chadron school has been followed by the announcement that Robert I. Elliott of the Kearney normal school faculty will be given the place. Mr. Elliott, a Wayne county man for many years, was deputy state superintendent under James Delzell and opposed the present state superintendent for the republican nomination two years ago. He is one of the most popular school men in the state and has friends in every nook and cranny of Nebraska.

Lecture, "The Black Box"

In connection with the evening service of the Baptists and Presbyterians, which will be held next Sunday in the Presbyterian church, W. L. Gaston will deliver another sermon lecture entitled, "The Black Box." This lecture will not be based upon the moving picture nor the book by that title, yet both the book and picture suggested the lecture. If you are anxious to know what is in the black box join the crowd next Sunday evening at the Presbyterian church and you will see the box opened.

Rev. S. X. Cross will conduct the opening exercises and a combined choir will render a musical program. Last Sunday night a man from Lincoln said, "You people here put up a better church program than they do in Lincoln or Omaha."

Open House at Hospital

In spite of weather that was none too favorable the visitors record book shows that nearly 100 people accepted the invitation to visit our new hospital last Friday and Saturday. We have heard no report other than that it is a most tidy place, a marvel of compactness with every bit of space so conserved that there is no waste room, and yet room enough to meet every need. The operating room is one of the best lighted and most convenient of any in the state. The last reports are that the patients there who are known here, as well as others, are doing nicely.

Mrs. Christian Benk Dies

At the home near Winside, Friday, April 7, 1916, death claimed Mrs. Benk from complications following pneumonia. Her maiden name was Hedwig Kmiecinsky, and she came to America about three years ago and was married about one year ago. The funeral was by Rev. Moehring at the Trinity Lutheran church and interment made at Winside.

School Men's Round Table

A meeting of the School Men's Round Table of Northeast Nebraska is announced for Saturday, April 15. The general session will convene at 10:30 a. m., in the commercial room at the State Normal and luncheon will be served at 12 o'clock in the dining room of the department of Domestic Science. A number of the leading school men of this section of the state have notified President Conn that they will be present, and a good attendance is expected. The following program will be given:

MORNING:

Athletics in the High School—Supt. O. R. Bowen. Medical Inspection in the Small Town—Supt. W. E. Flake, Pender. General Discussion

AFTERNOON:

What Should Science Do for the Average High School Pupil?—Principal A. B. C. Jacobs, Tekamah.

What Should We Expect from our Teachers, Outside of the School Room?—Supt. F. H. Price, Neligh.

How May the Superintendent Mould Public Opinion in School Matters?—Supt. F. C. Grant, Randolph.

General Discussion. The officers of the association are: President, U. S. Conn; vice-president, A. H. Dixon; secretary-treasurer, E. D. Lundak.

Methodist Church

Mrs. Mabel Stevens will begin special revival meetings in the Methodist church the first of May. Mrs. Stevens is a remarkable woman with a remarkable message and is winning hundreds to the Christian life in her evangelistic meetings. If you hear this gifted leader once there will be no question but that you will attend every service throughout the meetings. If her coming does not prove a blessing to you and to the entire community it will not be her fault. Remember that the meetings begin the first of May in the Methodist church and that you are most cordially invited to attend.

All of the regular services will be held in the church next Sunday. The pastor will preach both morning and evening. The Sunday school meets at 11:45 and the Epworth League at 6:30.

Baptist Church

(Publicity Committee)

The morning service at the Baptist church next Sunday will be one for the church membership. The five year program will be presented and explained. Everybody turn out.

Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Mears and son autoed to Sioux City last week to visit their son Archie at that place, returning Friday.

Miss Ruby Hughes returned to Grand Island Monday to resume her school work after a week's vacation which she spent with home folks.

Johanas Hanson is putting a fine country residence on his farm north of Wayne, Sam, Barley being foreman of the crew doing the work.

Mrs. A. A. Welch went to Kansas City Sunday to visit her son Eslee, who is located there. He met her at Omaha Sunday evening.

John Russmann has just purchased from the Wayne Novelty shop a new model, 3-speed Harley-Davidson motor car with side car attachment.

Mrs. Wm. Piepenstock and her mother, Mrs. Gilmier, and Mrs. Piepenstock's daughters, Mrs. Martin Ringer and Miss Mollie were visitors at Sioux City the first of the week, going over Monday morning.

A. E. Gustafson was here from Omaha Sunday visiting her sister, Miss Ruth Sackerson, a cousin, who had been visiting here, returned to her home at Wakefield Monday morning when he went to his home.

D. S. McVicker left Sunday evening for his new home at Douglas, Wyoming. The people of his new home will find in Mr. McVicker and family some very desirable citizens. The wife and family are not planning to go for a few weeks yet. Mr. McVicker has spent more than half of his life at Wayne, and many there are who will regret their going, but wish them plenty of prosperity.

Mrs. William Lou went to Humboldt Monday to be absent a week or ten days, visiting and looking after property which she has there.

Mrs. Dan Shannon and children from Sholes were Saturday and Sunday visitors at the home of John Shannon in this city, returning home Monday.

Mrs. W. B. Vail went to Norfolk Sunday evening to visit relatives. Her niece, Miss Mary Overrocker, who has been visiting here, returned home with her.

Wm. Assenheimer of Altona was drawn on the Federal grand jury and summoned to appear at Omaha Monday. He went down Sunday afternoon hoping to get excused as this is his busy season.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed A. Johnson and daughter Ieta, came out from Sioux City Saturday evening to visit at the home of her parents, Wm. Fleetwood and wife, and greet their many Wayne friends a few days.

Mrs. H. E. Harris from El Paso, Texas, comes this week to visit her brothers, M. S. and Sam Davies, her mother, Grandma Davies, her sister, Mrs. A. A. Welch and many friends of other days. She formerly lived at Wayne, and was among the first teachers in the Wayne high school.

Mrs. Geo. Gallup of Lyons, came last week to visit at the home of her brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Thompson, and to see the "incubator" baby, which was taken from the hospital to their home last week. The little fellow is adding about an ounce a day to his weight.

Clair Lamberson is assisting at the C. H. Fisher lumber yard, Guy Strickland thus being given a part of his time to devote to the sale of the Dodge Brothers Motor car for which he is local agent. This is a car of known quality, at a moderate price. He also appears to be the only advertising dealer at Wayne, yet it seems as though this trade center for a rich farming community would have more pushing automobile agents.

Mr. and Mrs. N. John Nelson of Oakland, were here Monday morning, returning from a visit to their old home neighborhood north of Wayne, and where they also attended a conference at the Swedish church in their old home. They moved to Oakland about four years ago, but still have a farm in this good county, and may decide to move to Wayne a little later, that their sons may have the advantage of the normal and also be at home. They will also be near their farm, which would be to their advantage. From here they went to Sioux City for a few days.

The Press cannot understand why any United States senator or any congressman or any newspaper man should favor the bill introduced by Senator Culbertson, of Texas, to permit railroad companies to pay for advertising in newspapers with railroad transportation. The political wisdom of the law prohibiting railroad companies from trading transportation for newspaper advertising has, it appears to the Press, been abundantly demonstrated and the business sense of doing advertising for transportation in cash is shown to every newspaper man who keeps books and knows his business in detail.—Butler County Press.

What About Wayne Creamery.

On another page of this issue is an article telling of the experience of a creamery in a Dakota town, the reading of which called to mind the fact that Wayne has a creamery, some of the share holders of which are doing as did the stockholders of the Dakota concern. Beyond doubt there is a crisis approaching the Wayne concern right now. If we read the signs of the times correctly not only those who have an interest in this concern and are not loyal to it, but those who are loyal to the organization are to be made to suffer for the short-sighted policy of part of the members.

The Wayne creamery has for the past ten years stood between the producer of cream and the combined creamery aggregation of the state to make them pay a fair price for the product in Wayne county. The attempts that have been made to establish a cream station here have in the past met with universal failure, but the end is not yet, and if the Farmers' Cream Association of Wayne shall allow itself to be put out of business the Democrat predicts that the price of cream at this place will quickly seek the level of prices in other parts of the state instead of holding from 2 to 5 cents per pound above the prices paid in most every other part of the state. Not only will the cream producers suffer, but all business at Wayne will be injured to a certain extent. Because of the price this organization has been able to maintain for cream the Wayne cream market has come to be known in all this corner of the state.

It is as much the fault of some of the members of the association as anyone if this condition shall come upon us. What will you, what can you do about the matter? It is time to act.

Lecture of Dr. Jenken Lloyd Jones.

It was a very appreciative audience that gathered at the auditorium last Friday evening and listened to the lecture of Dr. Jenken Lloyd Jones on the subject of International Peace. Before taking up the subject of the evening the speaker reviewed briefly his trip to Europe as a member of the Ford peace expedition. He expressed himself as being proud of the fact that he was connected with the Ford party and said that the expedition was not able to show visible results, having been beset with many difficulties from the beginning. He felt that the press was unfair in its treatment, and added that yellow journalism reached its lowest level in dealing with the peace party.

The first stop made on the journey was at Christiania, Norway, arriving there on Christmas eve and in the teeth of the worst storm that had been known in years. Here Dr. Jones had the privilege of addressing the students of the university most of whom understood his message delivered in English. From the Norwegian capital the party journeyed to Stockholm, Sweden, at which place courtesy was also extended to them. Copenhagen came next on the trip. Before leaving the party was warned that things were on a different basis in Denmark. That public discussion of questions pertaining to the war was strictly prohibited. Yet in the Danish capital one of the best features of the trip occurred. A reception was tendered this party by the leading newspaper of Denmark, following which the paper gave the expedition considerable space and attempted to define the mission of the Ford peace party. The fourth stop was to be made at the Hague, and to reach this city by rail, it was necessary for them to pass through a part of Germany. The United States had refused to grant passports for the Ford party to visit any country engaged in war; therefore the German government had no right to extend such a courtesy, and if granted, great caution would have to be observed and each member of the party carefully searched. The other alternative was to reach the Hague by way of the North Sea over waters sown with mines. After being delayed for a short time, permission was received from Berlin to pass over German territory, and, much to their delight, the officer very generously passed the entire party with out the annoyance of inquiry or search. Two public meetings were held at the Hague and there the party broke up, having held in all meetings in seven cities in Europe. The remainder of Dr. Jones' lecture was devoted to a discussion of "International Peace," which he claimed we must believe in or throw away our New Testament. The following are some of the characteristic utterances in the second part of his lecture:

"Europe knows now the awful fallacy that seems to confuse and blind so many people, 'If we want peace we must get ready for war.' Build a new battleship and you provoke the other powers to match it. Increased armaments are always increased irritants. Some profess to believe that if the European nations ever get out of the present struggle, some of them will swagger across the Atlantic with a chip on their shoulder. The conditions of safety in any nation are the self reliant, manly young men, the volunteers. We are on the eve of a new standard of courage, a new day and a new dawn or heroism. The new era will be one of law and order and not of force. Military preparedness on the part of a nation is like a pistol in the pocket of an individual; it is likely to go off at the wrong time in the wrong place and hit the wrong man. The false philosophy of preparedness came to its logical conclusion in the barbed wire trenches of Europe."

Wm. Piepenstock went to Indianapolis, Indiana, the first of the week, going with a view of purchasing a vulcanizing equipment to work in connection with the automobile tire repair outfit he is already working. It will be a saving and convenience to automobile owners to have such an enterprise started here.

Death of Prof. Clyde U. Keckley

The news of the death of Professor Clyde U. Keckley cast a gloom over the State Normal School last Monday and was learned with deepest regret by scores of friends in town who had learned to love and honor him during his residence at Wayne.

Professor Keckley was born at Alliance, Ohio, about thirty-two years ago. After completing the high school course of his home town, he entered Mt. Union college, graduating from a four-year course as valedictorian of his class, and receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science. After finishing his college course, Mr. Keckley entered upon a two year course in expression in the Ohio University, from which school he was granted the degree of Bachelor of Oratory. Following this he was called back to his Alma Mater at Alliance to teach in the academy and to serve as assistant director of athletics. Later he was teacher of English and oratory and director of athletics in the high school of Newark, Ohio, which position he resigned to accept a place in the Wayne State Normal school.

During his college career Mr. Keckley took an active interest in athletics and debating. He was chosen captain of the baseball team and for two years was captain of the University basket ball team. He also won one of the annual literary society prizes in debate. Just prior to his coming to Wayne he coached the Newark basket ball team, which won second place at the annual scholastic basket ball tournament of Ohio.

Mr. Keckley was a member of Acme lodge No. 554 A. F. & A. M.; McClelland camp Sons of Veterans, Alliance, Ohio; the Sigma Alpha Epsilon college fraternity and the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Professor Keckley began his work in the State Normal at Wayne in September, 1913, being placed at the head of the department of expression and physical training.

Under his direction the department of expression was thoroughly organized and strengthened, and his efficient work as football coach placed the Wayne normal team in a class with other colleges of the state. The part that Mr. Keckley had in this work and his standing with boys are best expressed by the following tribute paid to him by Paul A. Becker, captain of the 1914 football team, and written for a special issue of the Golden Rod. "There is one thing greater than success—the spirit that rises above adversity. It was this spirit, which rises above defeat, that has made our football team the best in the history of the school. Out of the chaos it has been put together, and the fight, the real spirit, the clean sport, the good record—all these things—are due to the untiring efforts of 'Keck', the man at the helm."

On December 25, 1913, he was married to Miss Marie Montfort, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Montfort of Lebanon, Ohio, a graduate of the Leland Powers school of expression of Boston, Massachusetts, and who was for some time instructor in the department of expression in the Ohio University.

In June, 1914, failing health compelled Professor Keckley to ask for a leave of absence from his work, and for more than a year he made an heroic struggle for life. He first took treatment at Hot Springs, Missouri, later in Kansas City and finally returned to his old home at Alliance, where the end came on Sunday evening, April 9th.

Peter Henkle went to Sioux City Saturday to spend the day with his brother-in-law, Fred Stone, who was taken to a hospital there last week for an operation of rather critical nature. Either from the grip or some overheating his symptoms indicated a gathering in the cavity of the bone above the eyes and nose, and it was to have this explored and the cause of the trouble removed that he was taken.

Charles Meister, Sr., Passes Away

West Point, Neb. April 10.—Charles Meister, sr., died early this morning at the family home at Monterey. Death was due to pneumonia after a few days' illness. He leaves a widow and large family of grown children.

Mr. Meister was 64 years of age and came here when a boy. He was the largest land owner in Cumming county, owning 1,400 acres of the best land in the county besides a number of farms throughout the state. He was one of the best known pioneer citizens of the Elkhorn valley.

He was a brother of John Meister of this city, who with his wife went to West Point Wednesday to attend the funeral.

Rev. E. C. Horn, Investigator

Rev. E. C. Horn, who formerly was pastor of the Wayne M. E. church, but is now of Minneapolis was sent, by The Tribune of that city to investigate and report on the condition of the schools under the system of Gary, Indiana, about which much had been reported. Some reports are good, others are the reverse. Mr. Horn spent three weeks studying the situation and came back with a most complete report filling two pages of that great paper. He found much to commend in their system and a few things to criticize. The report is too extensive to receive any intelligent summary in the space we have at our command. Through the kindness of E. B. Young the paper came to us.

How About Your Hogs this Spring?

The sale of Columbia Stock Powder has greatly increased the past year because it has given such good satisfaction, as has been proven by my many patrons. It will both kill and expell the worms and thereby end all digestive troubles, and keep the animal in good healthy condition the year round.

I also sell the Dip and the great Columbia Hog Oiler

The Oiler is the kind you have been wanting for some time. Come in and see it work in my hog house. There is absolutely nothing about it that is liable to break or get out of order.

The Price of this Oiler is only $10.00 and two gallons of hog louse oil with it FREE

When you see it work you will surely say that you have found the oiler you have been looking for.

Any one wishing to buy any of the above goods may call by telephone on Wisner line No. 1708. Home place one mile south west of Altona.

More About Consolidated Schools

Emil Hansen contends that he is not the only one opposed to consolidation of rural schools and sends us the following: from Iowa papers showing what some of those who have consolidated schools think, and Mr. H. agrees with the writers and does not want anything for Wayne county, except what is best for all. Here are the views furnished:

To the Editor:—"Oppose Consolidated schools" is what Mr. C. R. Riley, of Decatur county, Iowa, writes, and I do believe that more than 85 per cent of the patrons are the same. It is not the patrons who are voting for consolidated schools. I have seen that myself. A few around the town who had cars were running over the district getting every hired man and everybody they could to come in and vote in favor of consolidation and the town people were furnishing the gasoline. Besides they used many false reports.

Lots of people who were against consolidation are selling out and moving to other states. Is that the way Iowa wants to get rid of her people? No one could blame patrons for not wanting their children out at seven o'clock in the morning and not home again until 6:30 p. m.

Now talking about teachers, I have been a director for many years and have had a good deal of experience with teachers and have found that our farm girls who have attended school in rural districts have better certificates than a good many high school girls although our country schools are no good—at least that is what our state superintendent said.

Now we know what our state and county superintendents are working for consolidated schools for. Would it not be a good deal easier work for them, especially the county superintendent who would not have one-fifth of the schools to look after? But it seems to me that if our superintendents are not willing to work with us for the good of our rural schools they should be willing to step out of office and let somebody else in who will. We have never seen the time when we were short of candidates for these offices yet.

I talked with our county superintendent last winter. She was saying that she could not get out to visit the schools on account of the roads being drifted so badly. I asked her what she thought about the poor children that had to go six or seven miles in the so-called school buses. She could not answer. I believe if our state superintendent had to make that trip every morning and evening that in one month's time he would have all the consolidation he wanted.

Now there are a few words that we have all learned and they are: "thou shalt do to thy neighbor as thou would have thy neighbor to do to thee." And if you were living out away from said schools would you be in for them? I guess not. Then why should you put an everlasting burden on your neighbor?

There is one great trouble in our rural schools and that is that they are getting too many studies piled up on the teacher and pupils. For instance, domestic science, manual training and agriculture. These studies have no place in the rural schools. Now are they teaching all these subjects in the old countries where the American people claim they have such good schools? No they are not. I say let's keep our rural schools and teach the common branches up to the eighth grade and then we should have a township high school in each township. You will find a good many of them in Cherokee county which I believe is a credit both to the county and the former superintendent, Miss Kate Logan.

Mr. C. M. Schroeder from Alameda county Iowa writes that our liberty is rapidly departing and he is right. I also came from Germany as Mr. Schroeder did and will say that our rural schools are 50 per cent better than the schools in the old country but some people are trying their best to destroy them.

To the Editor:—I read an argument against consolidation in The Homestead of January 27th. It said first that a child going to consolidated school had no time to help his parents do the chores. While that is true that is not all, especially where they are consolidated with a small town. In that case there will be so much going on that it works their parents to death getting them ready to go and keeping nice clothes for them to wear. They acquire the go habit and if an epidemic gets started in the school it is sure to go through the entire school.

There is one thing I want to mention. Last winter there was a family moved near us. They had a child and they sent him to school. The teacher sent him home with instructions not to come back until the next term of school. Now that child had been going to school before he came here. I consulted the superintendent in regard to the matter and the superintendent seemed to think they had a right to do that. It seems to me that isn't right. It was two months before vacation. Now if we had had school in our rural district that child could have had two months of schooling that he didn't get.

As for the tax I don't think there is a man in the district that would kick if they had doubled our school levy but it is over four times what it used to be. I suppose if this gets in print some of the readers will call me a knocker but I don't care.

Now if there is any community thinking of school consolidation just look the matter up thoroughly before you jump into it. I think if the tenant will study the question well he might vote differently sometimes at such elections. Whenever he votes his landlord into consolidation that means higher rent. I hear lots of complaint from some of the tenants about rent being too high. It seems to me it is getting high. I have this to say for myself that a tenant who would vote that kind of tax on me would move. I have been told that one of our consolidated districts not far from here would have had to close its doors if it hadn't been for some of the citizens donating. I suppose domestic science and manual training are all right but I should think the mother was almost as capable of teaching her daughter domestic science as the young teacher. I think it would be well for each township to organize and get together and discuss these questions before they get something they don't want. If they would do this we might have some influence with our representative. Let him know our likes and dislikes. I think we have a right to let them know and ought to do so but we are too timid. Why couldn't the state print our textbooks and let the people have them at cost if they are going to take so much interest in our children. There are some that are almost too poor to buy books for their children. I am in favor of a law that a man should be a freeholder to vote on a tax proposition.

This consolidation of school districts is something you should investigate thoroughly before you jump into it as it lasts a long time. There are two things that are certain and they are taxes and death. Hardin Co., Iowa. A. W. A.

Democrats Up in the Air

"Democrats who desire the defeat of C. W. Bryan for the party nomination for Governor, and who were quite sure a few weeks ago that he had no chance are getting decidedly nervous. Two things have changed their attitude. One is that Brother William is lining up the old Bryan organization out in the state with his campaigning, while Neville is having hard sledding outside of Omaha. The other is that a lot of "wet" democrats are going over to the republicans in registration centers and are threatening to do the same thing in place where no registration is required. The reason is that Miles, the leading "wet" candidate in the republican race, needs democratic help in order to win the nomination because the republican party is predominantly "dry."

If Bryan gets the democratic nomination as a "dry" against a "wet" republican, party lines will vanish in the election. The more astute politicians figure that with Nebraska as a "dry" state and normally republican, a "wet" democrat would have no chance against either a "dry" republican or a "wet" republican. A "dry" democrat who would have no chance against a "dry" republican, but would have an even break with a "wet" republican.

The above diagnosis, as the doctors would say, is from the Pierce County Call, a republican paper, and it tells the story very much as it appears to many others. The fall election, so far as it relates to state matters will be fought out on the wet and dry issue, and the party that names a wet candidate is due to lose, for all the signs tell that the state will vote dry without fail. How does it look to you?

A Mother's View of Politics

Editor Democrat:—In your paper of recent date I read with pleasure your comment on the candidacy of Messrs. Bryan, Howard and Dunn. Allow me, a mere woman, deeply interested in what is about to take place at the polls, to tell you something of the two men, who once called Sarpy county home. Mr. Dunn was born and reared here and now makes frequent visits to his old home and the dearest old mother. I don't know how to talk politics, but I do know, if all the voters could meet Mr. Dunn's mother and could hear Mr. Dunn's peace talk and could know him as his neighbors do, his candidacy would spread like prairie fire.

Mr. Dunn is working to interest the people in a great cause, while Mr. Hitchcock ever tries to center interest upon himself. One a deep, conscientious man; the other a wavering, selfish aristocrat, who will change principles any time he thinks it may add to his own popularity. This is not a time to act carelessly or indifferent. We have men who stand for the greatest good and those who stand for the greatest wrong, and while women cannot vote, it is their duty to help choose and lift.

Edgar Howard, for many years lived here and edited a splendid paper and if any don't like him it is because they don't like open frankness. He is a man we never forget and ever admire his studious effort in pursuit of the right. MRS. W. S. ELY. Springfield, Nebr., April 4, 1916.

A Democratic Legislative Candidate

Although no one filed for the democratic nomination to represent Wayne county at Lincoln, there is prospect that the party ticket will not be left blank on the ballot in November. C. J. Rundell of this city has said that if nominated he will accept and make the race on a short platform of his own. It is:

"Equalized rights to all; special privileges to none."

That is short and to the point and sounds democratic. It will doubtless be a simple matter to nominate Mr. Rundell. On the ballot is a blank line, following the election square, in which to write the name of any one not printed on the ballot. In this case, under the proper heading, which is "Representative 20th District," write the name of C. J. RUNDELL and be sure to make your cross in the square, as otherwise, though the intent of the voter would be reasonably plain, the judges cannot legally count one for Mr. Rundell.

Mrs. Joe Jones, Mrs. Frank Francis and Mrs. Dan Davis of Carroll were guests at the Chas. Beebe home at Wakefield Friday last.

Henry Rethwisch

Republican Candidate for Renomination for the Office of County Commissioner Second District

HE has served one term, and his friends believe his record entitles him to the customary second term. He has known no faction or clique, and has served all the people impartially and justly. He has always been on the job, and always exercised his best judgment in looking after the county's business. "Fairness to all and partiality to none" has been his motto, and those who know his public service best are loudest in their praise. That he deserves endorsement by the people of Wayne county as a due reward for faithful service, none familiar with his record will deny.

Remember Him at the Primary April 18, 1916

Is this Best Type of Citizenship?

"H. D. ~~How~~ introduced the speakers to the audience, the first being Mr. Howard; who has gained a state wide reputation for standing up and advocating those things that are a benefit to the state and his fellowmen. Mr. Howard is an ideal citizen and a fearless journalist and has the honor of being the father of the movement to harness the many streams of water in the state to promote power to produce electricity for use in the cities and throughout the agricultural districts; also the practical warehouse bill which would provide for the farmers of the state a safe storage for their surplus grain patterned after the state bank guarantee law and last but not least, he was the individual who started the "dehorning" of the stockyard bulls, who took a sudden disliking to him. Everybody knows Mr. Howard to be an excellent citizen and if he was on the republican ticket we would not hesitate to give him our hearty support."

The above is taken from the editor of the Pender Republic's account of the political meeting of Messrs. Howard and Dunn at that city last week and makes one wonder what manner of partizan is the citizen who will place the party label on a man as the thing to be desired above what the man stands for. Here he confesses the excellence of the things which are good in his sight for which Mr. Howard stands as an avowed leader, yet because it is called "democratic" he cannot support these things and the good man who earnestly advocates them. Can we expect good government when men will not support what they know to be right because the thing is advocated by one not of their party? Not many who are so tightly party bound will publicly admit, and we hope that after this open confession our brother who presides over the ink spreading of the Republic will forget the label and follow the man who advocates right things.

Henry Bartels

Democratic candidate for Sheriff

Subject to the will of the voters at the Primaries, April 18.

If nominated and elected Sheriff of Wayne county I will serve the public faithfully and efficiently.

Do your duty Tuesday—vote your sentiments and then take your medicine, bitter or sweet. But vote.

A few years ago a trip across the Atlantic in an airship was considered almost suicidal—now it might be safer than on an armed liner.

Next Tuesday is primary election, and while the editor has his preferences, he will be satisfied if the voters will but give the candidates and issues careful consideration and then vote his sentiments—but don't stay away and kick about the result. Too many fail to do their duty.

For county judge, James Britton has no opposing candidate, and while a few law violators do not like to face him, when on trial, the people generally are so well pleased with the work of his court, that there has been no crying demand for another candidate to cast his hat in the ring.

J. H. Massie, who will be the democratic nominee for assessor, for he has no one opposing him for the nomination, has assessed Wayne property for the past five or six years, and has the necessary experience and knowledge of the work to do it well, should he be named by the people at the November election.

Republicans will this year have a choice between F. S. Berry and C. H. Hendrickson as their candidate for county attorney. Mr. Hendrickson's name being filed by a petition of his friends, and he accepting. There was no filing for the democratic nomination, which causes us to wonder if Kiplinger is waiting to see what leap year will do for him rather than make a political race.

There is quite a general move on the part of the standpat republican editors of the state to force the presidential nomination upon Charles E. Hughes by having the voters write his name in on the ballot on election day. They will have to do more than that if they wish to carry Nebraska for him. When they write the name they must make an X in the square if they expect that the votes can be counted legal. This suggestion is made so that those who are in the game may not lose their vote.

Whatever may be said by his enemies of Jim Dahlman's candidacy for democratic national committeeman from Nebraska. Wayne people who were in that strenuous fight for the normal location at this place, will remember that he was among those who gave valuable aid to our worthy cause, while his opponent, Art Mullen, was the leader of an aggressive opposition. We believe in reciprocity. James may have his faults, but he also has many good qualifications for the office. He is not an arbitrary boss.

Henry Bartels, who has filed as one of the democratic candidates for sheriff, hardly needs an introduction to the voters of this county. He has twice represented the county in the legislature at Lincoln, and declined to file for a third term two years ago for the reason that his farm work was so arranged that he could not afford to be from home at that time, for he is a farmer. He has served the county well in the legislature, and helped in several ways to place Wayne county on the state map. He will certainly appreciate the votes which are given him.

Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, who hopes to secure the republican nomination for president has lost a million votes in the past two weeks, should he secure the nomination, by his fight against the confirmation of the Brandies appointment to the supreme bench. The labor organizations well know that no one but a tool of the special interests would oppose this confirmation on any of the evidence so far produced as to Brandies not being eligible to the office. The people can now see what class of men have been placed on the bench in the past when they were favorably passed on by the corporation crowd. The people have been taking a long nap so far as many things relating to government are concerned. They did not wake up when a corporation tool changed his mind over night on the constitutionality of the income tax twenty years ago.

Wayne county has one candidate for office who has made a record which but few citizens of the state can equal. C. W. Reynolds, the democratic candidate for county clerk, and the republican candidate and nominee also, perhaps, for he has no opposition, is serving his 6th term in that office, and had previously served one term as clerk of the district court. This will make a 17 year sentence when this term is finished, to which two more will be added for good behavior while in office. One of the reasons for this is the fact that efficiency is his motto. For several terms some of the office hungry republicans tried to secure the place, but it is now proven that the people regardless of party want Clerk Reynolds to continue to serve them as clerk and they have just quit trying, and the result is that Mr. Reynolds can and does give all of his attention to the duties of his office instead of being out campaigning part of the season. He is ably assisted in his duties by Miss Elsie Merriman, who has held the assistant's place almost as long as Charles has been clerk.

See the Democrat for wedding invitations.

WILL GIVE $5 CASH FOR SUITABLE NAME

It may be that there is not much in a name, but there is a five-dollar bill in the right name for the man, woman or child who will put on his thinking cap and furnish us with the best name for the new Commercial club of Wayne. If you want the prize read every word of this.

The Commercial club proposes to reorganize on a broader basis for the accomplishment of more work of a community and fellowship nature. The club proposes to reduce the dues so that every one can afford to belong and become a booster for the community, rather than the town. Every farmer within a radius of ten miles will be invited and urged to join. It is proposed that farmer and merchant and lawyer and preacher, and laborer and capitalist work together to make this a great county. In adopting a new constitution the first thing is a name. We want a name. We want a euphonious name and an expressive name. We want it to sound well and to look well when written or printed. We want it to express the object of the organization and one that does not limit the occupations of its membership. It must not be too long. We cannot accept more than five words; fewer, if expressive enough, will be better.

Now think it over. Remember it is for general work by everybody for everybody; now give us a name.

The one sending the name selected will receive $5.

These directions must be strictly observed: Write the proposed name on a separate paper on which there is no other writing or printing, not even your name.

Write your name and address fully and plainly with date of mailing on another paper and enclose it with the name in an envelope addressed to W. L. Gaston, Secretary Wayne Commercial club.

All proposed names must reach the secretary on or before night mail Saturday, April 22.

As names are received they will be dated and filed.

In case of two or more sending the same name, the prize will go to the first received. — Commercial Club.

FARM DEMONSTRATOR.

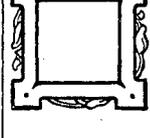

Editor Democrat; My Dear Sir: Last week I was in Norfolk and at the depot I noticed a thrifty looking "Ford" on either side of which was painted in plain characters "Madison County Farm Demonstrator." While I was looking at it a young man with a business air, plainly dressed in a storm jacket with a sheepskin collar and khaki trousers jumped into the car and drove off before I could get near enough to speak. I wanted to meet him. I wanted to talk to a man who represented the newest occupation in our whole industrial world. I wanted to meet him because I had heard of the Madison county man and what he was doing for Madison county.

Luck favors alike both youth and fools. While I was eating my dinner he came in accompanied by Prof. Anderson of the state university and they sat down at a table near mine. I made it a point to go over and speak to them. I had met Prof. Anderson before and was somewhat acquainted with him. The demonstrator was a Mr. George and I soon found that I knew him; knew his entire family, and as I talked to him about his work I was compelled to marvel at the man's fitness for his work.

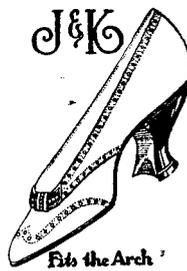

He was born in Nebraska. He was raised on a farm in Custer county, Neb. His father was an extensive and a very successful farmer on the South Loup. He graduated from the state university. He specialized in agriculture and care of stock. He studied soil conditions and agriculture in different parts of the United States. He traveled through the countries of Europe and observed well conditions there and methods in operation. He was in Europe when the war broke out. Nobody had to tell me that he lived the out-door life. His hands were hard and calloused. I knew he was a practical man and earned his salary.

He moves his office around from town to town so as to be in touch with all parts of the county. When he goes out to any farm for a special demonstration all the farmers in that immediate neighborhood are phoned and they come together and so he talks and demonstrates to a neighborhood group instead of to one man, and his usefulness is multiplied. He meets men on their farms; he meets them in their towns; he meets them in their school houses and talks to them and explains the things they should know; the things to which he has devoted his life study.

THE tenderest skin in the world is that of a new born baby. The soap that nurse uses for its bath indeed must be the mildest in the world.

If you could take a peep into the millions of nurseries where Ivory Soap is used you would know that Ivory is good enough for your bath and toilet too.

Ivory is the favorite nursery soap because it is the mildest, the purest, the finest that can be made. For the same reason it should be your favorite too.

Miss Ruth Sherbahn, who teaches at Orchard, greeted relatives and friends at the station here last evening, while returning to her school work after a visit at Sioux City.

Attorney Kingsbury of Ponca was a Wayne visitor Tuesday, coming over by automobile to look after some legal matters here and consult with his law partner, C. H. Hendrickson.

Beaman wants your grocery business and is doing more than just asking for it, he is giving you Good Store Service and Good Telephone Service in addition to Good Merchandise.—adv.

The last electrolyser is being installed this week. It is between the tracks at the station, and there was some delay in completing arrangements for its installation last fall and it went over until now.

John Shannon was at Chicago the first of the week with three cars of fat cattle from his farm near Carroll. He reports that he found a good market for the cattle of the class he had, which were pretty well finished.

Beaman's country customers find it very convenient when sending in with men to phone their order in instead of sending slip, this gives them an opportunity to ask about berries and fresh vegetables, also gives us time to have order ready when called for.—adv.

C. A. Chace returned Wednesday morning from his winter in California, but the wife and daughters will remain for some time longer, so well are they enjoying California life. He reports that Mr. and Mrs. Goldie and family are all well and happy and that he had a splendid time.

O. C. Lewis returned Wednesday from a short trip to northwestern Kansas. He says that they met a regular snow storm and blizzard out that way, but people living there did not object as they needed the moisture. He reports that the wheat, which is one of their big crops, is looking well.

Henry Lessman and wife returned Wednesday evening from Omaha, where they had been for a few days, going down to have some x-ray pictures taken of the arm which Mrs. Lessman was so unfortunate as to have broken a few weeks ago. The negatives show that the fracture is healing nicely.

Orr & Orr had an animated window display Saturday afternoon. A ton of sand in their corner window and a half dozen little folk clad in "Breadwinner" play clothes was the attraction. With rakes and shovels, dolls and other toys the little ones had a jolly time, and the passer invariably stopped to see what was going on.

A number of Wayne business men, who have a combined advertisement in the Democrat today, have started a system of check issuing as discounts for cash business. The checks are redeemable in the form of a deposit certificate at one of the local banks and are supposed to be given to the boys and girls to encourage them in the habit of saving. The plan is worthy of study.

Last week Mrs. Fred Blair went to Fremont to visit Mr. Blair, and he returned with her the first of the week, and is now here looking after the Wayne house while Mr. Mulloy has gone to Fremont to take charge of their branch clothing house at that place. Since coming home Fred has moved into the O. C. Lewis residence, and is planning to remain there a year before they move again. As the Bingville Bugle man would say, now is a mighty good time to talk to Fred, for he ketches such a cold movin that he can hardly talk back no matter what you say to him.

S. Thompson and wife came this morning from Lyons to visit at the home of their son, Geo. Thompson and wife.

Mrs. A. T. Neely from Sioux City came last week to spend a week with relatives and friends at this place.

Mrs. J. M. Millen from Colorado Springs, who has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wright, her cousin, left for home this morning.

Last week Mrs. Ed Miller entertained her mother, Mrs. Coltens from Sioux City, her sister, Mrs. Whitney of Hartington, and Mrs. Foot of Pilger, making quite a family reunion.

Beaman wants your grocery business and is doing more than just asking for it, he is giving you Good Store Service and Good Telephone Service in addition to Good Merchandise.—adv.

Beaman has just received 3 new Dinner Patterns that are beauties, these we want to sell in full sets and are placing an extremely low price on them, prices are $9.75, $13.05 and $17.05. See them in window.—adv.

Since the death of Mrs. Sam Winsor was printed on another page of the paper, the news has come that pneumonia set in while at the hospital, causing her death. The body was taken to Pierce for burial, passing through here Tuesday evening.

Beaman's country customers find it very convenient when sending in with men to phone their order in instead of sending slip, this gives them an opportunity to ask about berries and fresh vegetables, also gives us time to have order ready when called for.—adv.

Mrs. Madden does not wish the ladies to forget that her dressmaking school will open the 18th, when she will not only have a Kiester woman from Omaha to assist her, but also another assistant at the sewing tables. Your needs will have the best of attention.—adv.

Peter Burns, who travels for Swift & Co., has moved to Wayne, coming from the south, and R. M. Meyer of the O'Brien Candy Co., of Sioux City has also decided that Wayne is the best town in his territory in which to live. There is no reason why more traveling men should not make Wayne their home except that it has been a difficult matter to secure a residence here in times past. But with new buildings constantly being built this trouble is being slowly overcome. There are now about a dozen traveling men who make Wayne their home. It might be doubled.

Why pay $1.75 to $2.00 per sack FOR OTHER FLOUR when you can buy Wayne Superlative in 5 sack lots for $1.50 per sack, at the Wayne Roller Mill. adv.

Last week before Judge Welch an accounting was made between Mrs. Emily Donner, who has a life interest in a quarter section of land near Wayne and a property in the edge of this city, and Mrs. Eva Norton and others. When all claims and counter claims had been passed upon by the court, the footings showed that the plaintiff owed defendants the sum of $15.30. The court also issued a decree quieting the title of a certain bit of land which interested John T. Bressler and several others who hold certain lots in Wayne, in which Chas. M. Haft, et al were defendants. It was simply an action to perfect title, and was not in any manner contested, simply correcting the matter of neglect on the part of some one in other days.

Fat Cattle Active and Strong to a Dime Higher

HOGS STEADY TO 5c STRONGER

Another Big Run of Sheep and Lambs —Market Active and 10c Higher On Light Lambs, With a $10.60 Top—Heavy Kinds and Muttons Slow to a Shade Lower.

Union Stock Yards, South Omaha, April 12, 1916.—Receipts of cattle Tuesday were again rather liberal, about 5,800 head, and the quality was very good. Trade opened out slow, but a keen demand developed and prices ruled anywhere from strong to a dime higher than Monday. Best beefs sold up to $9.25. Cows and heifers were also in active demand and stronger, and there was considerable activity in stockers and feeders, with prices strong to a shade higher all around.

Quotations on cattle: Prime beefs, $9.10@9.30; good to choice beefs, $8.80@9.10; fair to good beefs, $8.50@8.75; common to fair beefs, $7.60@8.40; good to choice heifers, $7.25@8.25; good to choice cows, $7.00@7.85; fair to good cows, $6.25@7.00; canners and cutters, $4.50@6.00; veal calves, $7.00@10.50; bulls, stags, etc., $5.75@7.75; good to choice feeders, $7.80@8.60; good to choice stockers, $7.75@8.25; fair to good feeders, $7.40@7.80; common to fair feeders, $6.50@7.25; stock heifers, $6.75@7.75; stock cows, $5.75@6.75; Stock calves, $7.00@8.00.

Light Lambs Sell Higher.

A tolerably liberal run of sheep and lambs showed up, about 11,500 head. Packers went after the light lambs eagerly and paid about 10@15c higher figures for them, choice Mexicans reaching $10.60. Heavy lambs as well as mutton grades were slow sale at more or less shaded prices all around.

Quotations on sheep and lambs: Lambs, good to choice handy, $11.35@11.60; lambs, fair to good handy, $11.15@11.35; lambs, fair to choice heavy, $10.75@11.25; lambs, clipped, $8.50@9.25; wethers, fair to choice light, $9.25@10.40; wethers, fair to choice heavy, $8.50@9.25; wethers, fair to choice, $8.00@9.00; ewes, good to choice, $8.40@8.85; ewes, fair to good, $7.90@8.40.

Some Advance in Hogs.

The run of hogs was quite liberal, 14,500 head, but with a vigorous demand from both packers and shippers the trade was lively and prices steady to 5c better than Monday. Tops brought $9.30, the same as on Monday but the bulk of the trading was at $9.10@9.25 as compared with $9.10@9.20 on Monday.

Failure of a Promoted Creamery.

Several years ago the Twentieth Century Farmer began warning its readers against the smooth promoter who comes to your locality with glowing stories of the money to be made in organizing a creamery. We conducted an investigation by which we showed that there was at that time in Nebraska and adjoining states a well organized association which made a business of organizing creameries, regardless of the unpreparedness of the farmers in the communities visited to furnish cream sufficient for the maintenance of these creameries, and the motive power behind this organization was plainly shown to be the sale of creamery machinery of a certain make at much higher prices than should have been paid for it. This organization was driven out of this territory by the publicity it received.

The game of organizing creameries for the sake of selling machinery is, however, a profitable one and consequently we find such organizations cropping up in different parts of the country continually. In every case it is the same old story right over again.

The latest of this kind that has come to our notice appeared in Chicago Dairy Produce, clipped from a local paper, and reciting the experiences of farmers at Powers, Lake, N. D., and is as follows:

First came the promoter—a glib-tongued agitator, who received 20 per cent on the amount of stock subscriptions he secured, provided he got cash or good notes from the farmers amounting to over $5,000. He made good, got his commission and skipped to another field. In his wake came the builder who erected and equipped what he called a creamery, collected the balance of the money and passed, leaving an outfit worth perhaps one-half what it had cost our farmers. It was then found necessary to build an ice house, put up ice and buy a lot of additional equipment and supplies before the creamery could be started, which was done on credit, we are told, a man was hired to run the institution.

After running a few months it was found that sufficient cream was not forthcoming to keep the plant running and pay expenses. Some farmers who had pledged cream from a dozen cows were found to be not milking a single cow, others were bringing in such a poor quality of cream that it was worthless so far as making butter was concerned, or even goods axle grease, while others—stockholders in the creamery—were shipping cream away.

The creamery closed down for the winter in debt, and the stockholder who didn't milk any cows, the ones who brought in rotten cream and those who shipped their cream away all kicked for a dividend, which was not to be had.

The second year was a repetition of the first, and the debt increased. The third year it broke about even, but with not enough profit to pay the interest on the debt, and so with the last year.

So much for the past; the future is to be dealt with. In order to be run successfully the creamery must have the united support of all the farmers and business men in and around Powers Lake. Enough cash should be raised to pay off all debts move the creamery to a site where it can be kept in a sanitary condition and operated the year round. Then it may be found advisable to run it on a real co-operative plan, the patrons to receive for their monthly checks or at stated periods what the returns may be after all expenses are paid, according to the quantity and quality of cream they supply, the details of such a plan to be worked out by a committee appointed for that purpose.

It is to be hoped that the creamery will be kept in operation and be made profitable. With a united effort this can be done. Without unity among the stockholders the plant might as well be sold for what it will bring, the debts paid and the stockholders grin over their losses.

The spirit shown by the editor of this local paper no doubt reflects the spirit of the community. If this is the case that creamery has a fighting chance to become a real co-operative creamery and to be a profitable one. In most cases, however, the promoted creamery is doomed to complete and lasting failure. It is put into a community unprepared to receive and support it and its failure discourages the people of that community in regard to creameries to such an extent that the dairy and creamery business is indefinitely retarded. When a community is in a position to support a creamery there will be no outside promoter needed. If the people are wide awake and alive to their opportunities—in other words, the kind of people necessary to make any business venture profitable—they will do their own promoting and the creamery will meet with success.

A good friend was complaining the other day says the Humphrey Democrat of the lack of interest shown by voters in the primary elections and there is considerable truth in his criticism. To the few is left the work of naming the candidates on the various tickets. The many either do not vote at primary or general election or else wander into the booth on the date of the general election, cast their votes for the candidates who have the party label and then depart with the feeling that they have done their duty as citizens, where chances are that not five per cent of them could tell you anything about the men they supported. And yet these same men are the very ones who grumble about government, feel that the country is going to the dogs and that the public money is being squandered. They are always ready to criticize, but they depend upon the others to bring about reform. Between elections they rise on their hind legs and howl, but when election approaches they let the other fellow attend the work of picking out candidates, go in and vote the ticket picked out and then prepare for another season of grumbling. The critics of government should realize that the work of improvement and of reform is as much their job as it is that of their neighbors and it is a work which must be done in the primary election rather than at the general election. The first duty of the voter is to see that the incompetent and unfit do not get a place on their party ticket. That work can only be done at the primary and if it is done then on election day we can take choice between the parties, confident that whoever wins we will have clean and competent officials. The trouble is not in the primary but it is in you and I and every voter who do not make full use of it, make careful selection of candidates and help weed out the unworthy. If we neglect that work we should have less to say about bad government for the primary puts a most efficient tool into our hands and the system is not at fault if we do not make the best of that tool.

MCKELVIE FOR GOVERNOR.

He Will Win.

The candidate for governor who at this time is generally looked upon as a sure winner is S. R. McKelvie, publisher of the Nebraska Farmer. He is young and active, clean and honorable, knows from a lifetime spent in the state what the needs of the state are, has an exceptional record as a successful business man, has a splendid record as legislator and lieutenant governor, and he has made a clean, high class campaign which should command the respect of all thoughtful voters. These are some of the reasons why he is generally referred to as The Popular Candidate.

Cal Ritchey, writing from Eagle Butte, South Dakota, says: "As there is no better way to observe 'Cleanup Week' than to pay up your just dues, find enclosed check for $3.00 to keep the Democrat in full force, and inspire the newly married editor." Thanks. That sort of a "cleanup" just suits.

The Wayne friends of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Banks will regret to learn of her death, which occurred the latter part of March at their home at Saybrook, Illinois. The body was taken to her former home at Dunlap, Missouri, for burial. Mr. Banks is brother of Mrs. Riese, who recently moved from this county to Belle Fourche, South Dakota, and frequently visited here, and for several years terminating in 1911 made their home at Wayne. He is a soldier of the Civil war, and was known to most of the G. A. R. men.

MORGAN SUIT BUILDER

At Hartington, where the leading hotel burned a few months ago, there is prospect of a new one being built, and to insure one as large as desired, it is thought that a stock company may be formed to bear a part of the financial burden—for unless very carefully managed a hotel as large as is needed at times is not a very profitable investment. But as a community asset it is wise to have such a building.

School garden supervisors from all over the state are in session the latter part of this week at the college of agriculture at Lincoln, receiving instruction in technical gardening and in the administration of the work. A large number of towns are hiring supervisors to look after this work in connection with the local schools. In a number of other communities, gardening clubs have been formed without reference to school credit.

Farm management surveys of the college of agriculture have shown that more than half the farms of the state are returning less than hired men's wages if the capital is credited with earning 5 per cent interest. A reorganization of the farm business is all that is necessary on many of these farms to make them profitable. This reorganization does not mean the introduction of wholly new systems of farming. Instead, this reorganization would entail, in the majority of cases, merely adjustments in the present system of management.

Now Uncle Sam is going to see if all the farmers, who should, are paying a tax on their excessive incomes. That is a good evidence of prosperity when the income tax man has to come along and ask the farmer to contribute of his surplus to the government. That is a good kind of government to help sustain. We know a lot of farmers who would have been glad under other administrations to have had income enough to cause Uncle Sam to divide with them. But the prosperity was not there to make it. Most of the newspaper men are yet exempt.

A Saddened Home.

The country home of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Grandquist was saddened Saturday and Sunday by the death of their two little sons, who succumbed to pneumonia, following measles. Clyde Henry passed away Saturday morning just before eight o'clock, after all that could be done for him had failed. He was three years of age last November, a bright, manly little one.

Sunday morning early Dean Edward closed his eyes in death. He was almost two years of age. Last September Mr. and Mrs. Grandquist buried a little baby, so that they are now childless.

The funeral was from the Methodist church at this place Tuesday afternoon. Rev. Bruce Weiley of the Winside and Grace M. E. churches speaking such words of comfort as he could to the bereaved parents and friends over the little casket in which the two little ones were sleeping. Many were in attendance to show their sympathy for the stricken parents. The burial was in the Wayne cemetery.

A Record of Efficiency

The record made by Attorney General Reed is a most valuable asset of the democratic party the coming campaign. The fact that he has opposition in the primaries should cause his friends to make an extra effort in his behalf. In addition to representing the state in all criminal cases appealed to Supreme Court, Attorney General Reed has resisted their efforts to advance freight rates and passenger rates; won the O'Connor will case carrying an escheated estate worth $100,000; won the county treasurer monthly remittance case, Hall vs. Ure; won the fire commissioner case, Ridgell vs. Hall; practically won the insane tax cases, State vs. Stanton and Gage counties; and saved the tax payers more than half a million dollars last year by his intervention in the Lutten patent cases. That is enough to warrant his renomination and election.

State Treasurer Hall reports interest collections on bank deposits of state funds for the present biennium to be $48,476.91. The records of the treasurer's office show that Mr. George, his predecessor, collected for the corresponding period of time two years ago, $24,420.65. This shows an increase under Hall's administration of $24,056.26. Treasurer Hall has made two biennial state school apportionments in the following amounts; one for $470,637.04 and one for $454,410.93, making a total of $925,047.97. The two apportionments for the corresponding period two years ago were, $344,474.11 and $325,028.24, making a total of $669,502.35. This shows an increase under Hall's administration of $255,495.62.

State Auditor Smith recently filed the state's claim, in accordance with a law passed at the last session of the legislature, for the expense of auditing the valuation and accounts of the Metropolitan Water Bond of Omaha. The law specifies that the audit shall take place in January of each year under the direction of the state auditor. The audit was made by Expert Accountant DeFrance, assisted by F. A. Stech and J. J. Mahoney, county treasurer examiners from the auditor's office, and according to the officers of the Board was the most complete check-up and report that has been made since its organization. The claim filed was for $488.56, including $68.00 for the publication of the report. Last year, without the present law to govern, this work was done by private accountants at a cost of $1,364.00, Auditor Smith having accomplished the same task in a more complete and comprehensive form at one-third of its former cost, making a neat little saving to the tax payers of Omaha. The officers of the board expressed themselves as being greatly pleased with the report.

The Young Men's Democratic club held its second banquet since it was organized, last Tuesday evening at the Y. M. C. A., when a number of the older heads were invited to participate. The club is composed of the younger generation of democracy recently organized in Lincoln, with R. A. Bickford as president; James Britton, vice-president; B. G. Westover, secretary and Leon Crandall, treasurer. A toast list of speakers, comprising university students and young professional and business men of the city, had been prepared, and some very excellent talks were given. These young men indicated by their eloquence and enthusiasm that the trend of the present and coming democracy is to go forward, to keep inviolate the precepts and traditions of the party, to march in the front van guard of progress and uphold its fundamental principles as enunciated by its illustrious leaders of the past and present time. The older democrats who were the guests of the club felt the inspiration of the occasion and spent a very enjoyable evening. The club is growing rapidly and expects to do much toward insuring the success of the democratic party at the polls this fall.

A great deal has been said about the resources of Nebraska as an agricultural state and the income derived from the cow, hen, hog and alfalfa, but few people realize that nearly $1,000,000,000 is invested in corporations, which pay a tax to the state of Nebraska. Secretary of State Pool took occasion to look up the amount of actual money invested in this state in corporations, and was surprised to discover that actual money invested by corporations (not incorporated stock) outside of the railroads, is $221,536,669.49, while the railroads pay a corporation tax on actual money invested of $610,573,730. This is for the corporations filing with the Secretary of State, which does not include those that have filed since January 1, 1915, so it is probable that the amount will run well up over the $1,000,000,000 mark when these are added. This brings into the coffers of the state an annual fund of over $100,000 as corporation taxes alone and does not include the other taxes paid to the state through the usual channels.

Coming Back to Wayne

A business transaction was made in this city on Tuesday, when I. E. Ellis sold his restaurant at this place to Jacob Zolnowsky of Scotland, South Dakota. Possession is to be given on the 15th of this month. Mr. Zolnowsky was here and made the deal personally, and Tuesday noon he departed for his home to make arrangements to move to Pierce and take charge of his new purchase.

Mr. Ellis came to Pierce last October from Wayne and engaged in the restaurant business here, and during that time has given Pierce an up-to-date and first-class eating house—in fact, by far the best restaurant that Pierce has ever had. Mr. Ellis himself has made a host of friends here among his business associates, who regret exceedingly to learn of his intention to leave Pierce. They will move back to Wayne, their old home, and live there, for a while at least.—Pierce County Leader.

Ban on Bad Eggs

The United States department of agriculture gives notice that shipments containing more than 5 per cent of bad eggs will be regarded as violating the food and drugs act and suggests that country shippers candle eggs intended for interstate commerce. Under the federal food and drugs act, eggs, in common with other articles of food, are adulterated if they consist wholly or in part of a filthy, decomposed, or putrid substance.

In the opinion of the department eggs are adulterated which contain yolks stuck to the shell, black spots, black rots, or mixed rots. Moldy eggs, addled eggs, or any other egg which consist wholly or in part of a filthy, decomposed, or putrid substance come under the same classification.

New Owner of Dry Cleaning

W. A. Truman of Lincoln was here the first of the week and closed a deal by which he becomes owner of the Wayne Cleaning Works, of which Stanley Woodworth has for the past fourteen or fifteen months been proprietor. We did not meet the new proprietor, but learn that he is a practical man at this work as well as an experienced laundryman, and it is said that the new proprietor may eventually install modern equipment for a real "cleanup."

Jupiter's Moons.

The statement that Jupiter's moons can occasionally be seen without optical aid by keen sighted persons needs some qualification. Within the last quarter of a century the space penetrating power of the camera, combined with the world's giant telescopes, has added no fewer than five Jovian satellites to the four which Galilei discovered 300 years ago. Four of the five new moons were "netted" at the famous Lick observatory, on Mount Hamilton, California, and the fifth is to the credit of Greenwich observatory. But all of the new discoveries are so small and, with one exception, so distant from Jupiter that they are beyond the range of naked eye vision, even from Jupiter itself, unless an observer on the planet had better eyesight than we terrestrials. Indeed, to see Satellite IX (the latest addition to Jupiter's family of moons) a hypothetical observer on Jupiter would need eyesight capable of seeing a star 300 times fainter than the faintest visible to human eyesight.—London Chronicle.

Among the Churches of Wayne

German Lutheran Church
Rev. Moehring, Pastor

Next Sunday: Sunday school at 10 o'clock and services at 11 o'clock.

Good Friday: In the morning the pastor will preach at Winside and administer the Sacrament of the Altar. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock, the pastor will hold services at Wayne.

There are three to be confirmed next Sunday morning; Amelia Krie, Alwine Luders, and Minnie Kieper. To us it is always a solemn occasion when our children, after due preparation, profess their faith and pledge faithfulness to our Lord and His church. Hence we expect all the members of the congregation to be present on that occasion.

St. Paul's Lutheran Church
(Rev. J. H. Fetterolf, Pastor)

Bible school every Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

Worship with sermon at 11 a. m., and 8 p. m.

Luther League at 7 p. m.

For various reasons the ladies thought it best to postpone the meeting of the Aid society until after Easter.

The services for the coming Lord's day will center in the Triumphal Entry of Christ into Jerusalem. The morning service is also set apart for the baptism of children. Should it not be convenient for some of the parents to bring their children at this time, they should speak to the pastor and suitable arrangements can be made to have this sacrament administered later.

Holy week will be fittingly observed in the church by a series of four sermons beginning Tuesday evening and closing Friday evening with the preparatory service. The sermons will be appropriate to the season and will begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

Offerings for the benevolent work of the church will be received on Easter. An envelope will be sent each member to receive this contribution. More than half of the Synodical year has passed and owing to the long vacancy no offering has been taken for this worthy cause. To make up for this loss every member should contribute liberally in order that our apportionment will be fully met before the meeting of Synod. Please do not overlook this.

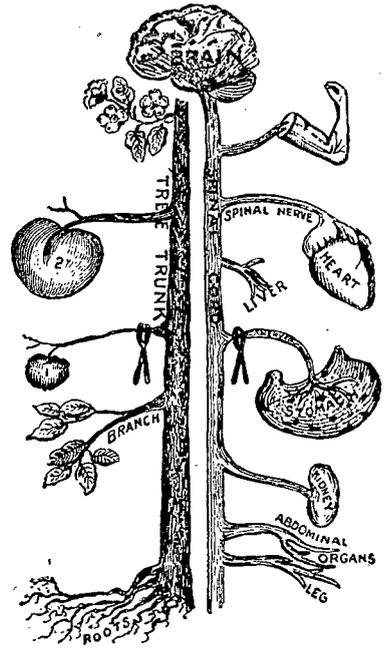

At the celebration of the Lord's Supper on Easter morning, we sincerely hope to see every member. This is also the time for the reception of new members.

Nebraska's Clean-up Week

As applied to the farm, hog cholera experts say that Nebraska's clean-up week, beginning April 10, may well be taken advantage of in cleaning up hog houses, pens and lots. A state inspector says that pigs are rarely born with disease, and never with worms and lice. Such things are acquired by the hogs from their surroundings; hence the need of destroying the disease germs, worms and lice.

All farms on which hog cholera has existed at any time during the past two years should be cleaned up promptly and thoroughly. The older hogs may have possessed a degree of immunity which enabled them to resist successfully any hog cholera virus of low power which was missed by previous clean-ups. Pigs from non-immune mothers do not possess this resisting power. The pigs from immune mothers lose their immunity after weaning.

The left half of this illustration represents the trunk, branches and fruit of a tree.

The trunk corresponds to the spinal cord, the branches to the nerves, and the fruit to the organs of the human body, as shown in the right half of the cut.

Pliers are represented as pinching a limb, also the nerves which convey the functions to the stomach, the results are immature, worthless fruit and a diseased stomach.

In the human body the intervertebral foramina are the pinchers.

The vertebrae are wrenched, displaced, occluding the openings thru which the nerves pass. Chiropractors assert that this pressure causes 95 per cent of all diseases.

The leaves and fruit are at the twig ends of the limbs.

The organs of the body are at the peripheral [endings] of nerves.

Disturbed functions in any other branch, or spinal [nerve], would have shown similar results in other fruit or vital [organs].

The Railroad Question.
This newspaper is in receipt of a lengthy communication from Mr. S. M. Braden, general superintendent of the C. & N. W. railroad, relative to the demand of the engineers, fireman and conductors and trainmen who are demanding an eight-hour day.
Mr. Braden asks for an expression of opinion. Well, our first opinion is that if the demands of the employees are granted that the present Interstate Commerce Commission, which was recruited from railroad offices and kindred commercial avocations, will allow an increase in freight and passenger rates and thereby pass the burden on to the ultimate consumer.
As a resident of this district years before the railroads arrived we hold to some old fashioned notions. Ox teams were the means of transportation those days, today we have the automobile, yet the railroads are using much of the same equipment that was in service in the latter seventies. We would not add any greater burdens on the operating officers of the great transportation lines. Those who think that those officials do not earn their money see through a glass darkly.
The difficulty is fundamental. Railroad building and operation is no longer a scientific commercial venture. It is rather a game of chess between four or five groups of daring financiers which dominate the entire transportation system.
Railroading is not a question of service any more only where competition compels service but the question confronting the operating departments is to secure a maximum to tonnage with a minimum of expense.
As a representative of the great fraction of the people who will be victimized if additional burdens are added by the transportation interest a word of caution is offered to the employees. The day is past when a man's citizenship is questioned if he inquires and compares all the conditions in other countries. Unfortunately for the railroads they come before the bar of public opinion with unclean hands.
The writer occupied an office on the same floor in the Munsey building in Washington where the syndicated railroads were getting out tons of literature pleading poverty in order to get an increase in freight rates. From conversations with some of the specialist who were in charge of the work we became convinced that those great institutions knew that the campaign was based on misstatements of fact.
When the next report of the railroads was published the dear people learned that they had been flim flammed, and the next time that the railroads cry "wolf" the cry may not be answered.
As a pioneer in the conviction that a private monopoly of a public service institution does not spell for the best interests of the commonwealth our answer is that both the transportation companies and the employees are put on inquiry before a very critical jury who are daily becoming very radical on this very question.—Creighton Liberal.

A business man in West Point hands the following hot shot to the people in his community who are always knocking the home merchant and buying their goods out of town: "It is told of a certain class of our people (who buy out of town) that the reason they go out of town to buy is because they get held up at home. I wonder how much more they get held up in the city. And these same people have never looked at home to see if they can buy as cheap here, but yet they go and knock on our business by saying these things about us and hurt our business by so doing. These people who go to the city to buy shouldn't expect to hold positions in West Point. If these same people would pay us the prices they pay in the city, we could give them better values for their money than they could ever get in the city. My advice to this class of people is to get their positions where they spend their money, and to cut out knocking on the town where they make their money, and to not knock until they at least know what to knock on."
There is Strength in Union.
The "Federated Meeting" at the Presbyterian church last Sunday evening was a splendid success both as to numbers present and also enthusiasm. There was a union choir and several excellent pieces of music were rendered.
Rev. W. L. Gaston gave a sermon-lecture on the subject, "The Markets." It was a rousing message and masterfully delivered. A lay committee has been appointed to prepare the programs.
One of the purposes of this movement is to have a Union Brotherhood in Wayne. There will be a big meeting again next Sunday evening at 7:30 at the Presbyterian church.

The above account of the Sunday evening union federated meeting came to us from one who was present, and the Democrat is glad to do what it can to encourage every move that has for its object the united effort and action of the people of Wayne and vicinity in the advancement of work for better conditions and a better and larger Wayne. Not alone in religious work should there be unity and co-operation. It should be social, economic and commercial. It should not stop at the city limits nor at the county line. It should grow and gather together all forces for advancement. Not only should we try to help ourselves—we should endeavor to create a power for good which will help others. We have been reading of the "Federated Church" at Collegeport, Texas, where something like fourteen different denominations meet in harmony beneath one roof. We do not know to what extent their work meets social and industrial problems of their community, but they certainly should do some good work in the community which might not be termed "church work" as that term is usually applied. The "Great Teacher" did more than preach—He went about doing good.

Too Busy to Join Army.
Prosperity and military recruiting don't seem to go together. In spite of the strenuous efforts made by recruiting officers recently to fill up the ranks of the army, their efforts are less fruitful than they were a year ago. There is a picturesque Mexican campaign now to stimulate interest. There is more honor for the soldier's profession. And yet word comes from nearly every section of the country that eligible men, while manifesting academic interest in military matters, are extremely reluctant to enter the army.
In the whole metropolitan district of New York, for instance, including Jersey City, the earnest efforts of the recruiting agents during the month of March resulted in only 238 enlistments, against 436 in the same month last year. The proportions in many other cities, outside of Chicago, have been about the same. Chicago, for some reason or other is always the most productive source of army and navy material.
The explanation given is that today the eligible men have good jobs, and don't want to give them up for jobs that don't pay so well and don't advance them along the lines of any permanent civil-life occupation. It isn't likely—unless a war crisis comes—that the army and navy can be recruited up to the strength called for by the new preparedness measures without added inducement in the form of better pay and facilities for occupational training.—Norfolk News.

Presbyterian Church
(Rev. S. Xenophon Cross, Pastor)
The Federated Meeting on Sunday evening was attended by a large audience.
Remember the "Junior" C. E. meeting on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Encourage the boy and girl to prepare for this meeting.
Rev. W. L. Gaston will deliver a sermon lecture at the Union Meeting on Sunday evening. The subject of the lecture will be: "The Black Box." You cannot afford to miss this lecture.
The Y. P. S. C. E. topic at the 6:30 meeting will be: "Good Prayer Meetings and How to Have Them Always." Miss Wilma Gildersleeve will lead the meeting. Several visitors were present at the C. E. meeting last Sunday. Come again.
A union choir will lead the music at the evening meeting. There will be several selections of special music. There is a plan on foot to put opera chairs in the choir loft for the use of the singers. Why not something along the line of Community Music, in connection with other forward movements in matters of community interest?
The hour of morning worship is 10:30. The sermon theme next Sunday morning will be: "The Narrow Door." There will be special music under the direction of Mrs. W. E. Johnson. Everybody is cordially invited to attend the morning service. Come early. The program will start strictly on time. Plan to stay for the Sunday school which convenes at exactly 11:30 o'clock. Mr. F. H. Jones is the superintendent of the Sunday school.
In connection with the Federated Meeting, let us begin to think seriously about the organization of a Union Brotherhood in Wayne. The united Christian manhood of the community could accomplish almost anything.

"All the News All the Time."
Sheriff George Cain was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Mell A. Schmeid, editor of the North Nebraska Eagle, charging him with assault, the sheriff was arranged before County Judge S. W. McKinley, he pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $10.00 and costs, $12.69 in all.
It seems that the sheriff took exceptions to what he deemed, slanderous articles that have been running in the North Nebraska Eagle for the past six months, concerning his wife and family, the sheriff contended that the aforesaid articles held his wife and family up to ridicule and contempt, and asked Schmeid to desist. Schmeid ventured the fact that he, Schmeid, was editor in chief of the North Nebraska Eagle, the only stem-winding valve-in-head all-the-news-all-the-time paper published in Dakota county, and as such editor-in-chief was sole judge of what was all-the-news-all-the-time.
When the smoke of the battle lifted, and ye editor had rose from the battle field he had a true, full and complete "shanty" over his right eye, and a horrible grouch, he got rid of the grouch by swearing out the complaint, but the "shanty" still remains in evidence.

Henry Rethwisch came to Wayne county in the year 1893. In 1896 he moved away only to return again in 1908, and he has lived here continually since that time on his farm one mile west and four and one-half miles north of Carroll. He is now a candidate for renomination for the office of county commissioner of the Second district of Wayne county and we firmly believe that he has performed the duties of his office faithfully and well, with absolute fairness to all. Mr. Rethwisch has made a splendid record during the term now drawing to a close and therefore is due to receive from the people the endorsement he so richly deserves. His past experience with the county affairs puts him in a position to give even better service in the future, and if impartial service is what the people want they will do well to remember Mr. Rethwisch when they go to the polls April 13. "Safety First" is a good motto to follow in the choice of a county commissioner, and the people of this county well know that work entrusted in the hands of Mr. Rethwisch will receive proper care and consideration.—Carroll Index.

Working on A Principle

It Brought Its Logical Consequence.

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Mother, I'm going to the city to make a fortune," said Joel Harding. His mother looked at him, surprised. He knew what she would say, though she did not say it. What would she and father do in working the farm without Joel? They could not afford to hire help, and if he deserted them they would have a much harder time than now.

"I'm glad," continued Joel, "of seeing you and father grinding your lives out in this fashion. There's little enough to be squeezed out of our long worked lands, and if I don't break away from them we'll none of us ever get any comfort. I was talking the other day with Mr. Ashurst, whose family has been spending the month of August with the Parkers. He says that any man can get rich if he'll do just one thing—he must save every cent till he gets enough money together to make an investment. From that time on he has an assistant—the money invested. It is making more money for him even when he is asleep. He saves some more, and this, with the interest that has accumulated on his first investment, enables him to make another. By keeping up this process for a number of years he rolls up enough to live on without doing anything, ride in his carriage and in summer time go among the farmers, drinking the milk and eating the honey that we folks work so hard to produce."

Mrs. Harding had lived long enough in the world to pick what flaws there might be in such reasoning, but a mother's first object is what her child wants. She saw that Joel had got an idea in his head, and the only objection to it he would listen to was that while he was gathering this interest bearing capital she and his father would be obliged to work all the harder, besides being deprived of the comfort to be derived from association with their only child. So she said:

"Very well, Joel. If your mind is set on going to the city to make a fortune I suppose you'd better go. You won't be satisfied here any longer."

Joel took her in his arms, kissed her and said that his principal reason for making the move was that he might better his parents' condition.

That night Mrs. Harding had a long talk with her husband about Joel's proposition. Farmer Harding was dead set against it, but when his wife had finished her arguments, which had no effect upon him, and began to plead he gave in, as husbands usually do under such circumstances, and promised that he would not oppose his boy going. The mother put her son's clothing in as good order as possible, and the next Monday morning Joel, provided with all the cash they could possibly spare, started on his journey. Looking back at his parents, he said:

"Give me five years and I'll return this money with a thousand per cent interest."

Mrs. Harding turned away with a smile, but to hide her tears, while her husband stalked into the house with the remark:

"If I understand right the principle on which he is to make a fortune he's sending us, in five years a thousand per cent interest on the money will be a violation of that principle. Success by the principle he acts upon is based on a strict adherence to that principle."

"Oh, pa, you are always figuring things out on principle. Joel is doing this for our good, and he will make good."

Joel found a position in the city at $5 a week. Disregarding a temptation to wait before saving till he had earned more, he lived on $4 a week, placing the other dollar in a savings bank. At the end of his first year he had placed in the bank $52 and as much more as had come from increase of salary and extras earned, in all some $200.

Among his fellow employees Joel was considered the stingiest of the stingy, but his employers, seeing that he possessed determination and self control, advanced him rapidly. Either he possessed business qualifications naturally or his heart being exclusively set on business, he became an adept at it. At any rate, he soon came to be intrusted with matters by the firm that were not intrusted to his fellow clerks of equal grade with himself. This naturally brought him increase of salary, and before the first five years had passed he was occupying the position of head clerk.

Joel did not forget that he had volunteered to send his father and mother, at the end of five years the money they had advanced him, with 1,000 per cent interest. They had scraped up $25 for him, on which the interest at 1,000 per cent for five years would be, with the principal, $1,275. Joel had at the end of the fifth year property worth $4,000. It was invested in railway securities which were worth not quite so much as he had paid for them. To reduce his nest egg by so large an amount, especially selling at a loss, was not to be considered. He wrote his parents that he had made the amount three or four times over, but would defer sending it to them till he could sell certain securities in which he had invested at the price paid for them.

"I told you so," said Mr. Harding to his wife.

"Now, pa, how unreasonable you are! You wouldn't have Joel lose by selling something he had bought at a less price than what he had paid when by waiting he could get more, would you?"

"No, I wouldn't," replied Harding. "And I wouldn't have him take nearly $1,300 from his capital to send to us. It would be a violation of the principle on which he set out."

This was too deep reasoning for the wife and mother, but since her husband did not blame their boy she was satisfied.

Joel did not find a convenient time to send his parents the money, as he had proposed. The price of his securities advanced, but in the meantime he had bought more at a low price and was scraping together all his assets to pay for them. During the next few years he was put in charge of the financial department of the concern for which he worked and saw many opportunities to make money that he had never been aware of before.

But all these opportunities involved capital. Not a single one could be taken advantage of without it. "You can't make money, Joel," said the head of the firm, "without money to make it with." Joel saw the truth of this statement, and in one of his letters home quoted it as a reason why he was withholding funds from his parents which he felt he should have sent them. "When I get to a stopping point," he wrote, "I'll be able to produce it all very easily."

"Yes," said his father, "if he ever reaches the stopping point. But he never will."

"Now, pa," said Mrs. Harding, "that's just like you. You're always making out that Joel is selfish. He's the warmest hearted boy I ever knew. He's doing all this work in the city that he may help us in our old age."

"My dear wife," replied farmer Harding, "you have made two statements, each requiring a separate reply. In the first place, Joel is carrying out the principle on which he set out to make a fortune, and it indicates great self control. But that principle is incompatible with his doing many things he would like to do. In the second place, if he ever makes his fortune and finds a stopping place we will be too old to enjoy the luxuries that his money will buy. We'll want only our lodging and enough to eat. We've got the farm."

Ten years from the time Joel went to the city there were changes in the firm by which he was employed. The senior partner died and was soon after followed by the junior. There was no one to take the latter's place except Joel. He was made a member of the firm and manager of the business. He had already become the slave to the accumulative principle; he now became the slave of an extensive business. At first he doubted if he was competent to manage it, and this induced him to devote his whole self to the purpose.

His attention to detail was remarkable. There was not a man under him who dared take any action whatever without consulting him. This in time broke down his health. Those interested with him begged him to leave certain details to others. He refused. Finally, to get him away from the business long enough to prevent its breaking him down entirely, some of the owners of the stock of the concern—it had become a corporation—got up a conspiracy to kidnap him. They succeeded in getting him on a yacht and carried him out to sea. This broke the spell. After a month's cruise he returned to his desk, and, finding that the business had got on very well without him, he divided it under department heads, remaining himself director of the whole.

Joel had been so absorbed in his business that he had forgotten all about his father and mother on the farm. He had at last reached the point that had danced like an ignis fatuus ahead of him. Money was now no object to him. He could show or his old father and mother with gold coin and not feel it. He would not write them; he would go back after thirty years' absence and supply every possible want.

One day a prosperous looking gentleman in a fur lined overcoat and silk hat appeared at the Harding farm. Mrs. Harding at the moment was throwing a pan of dishwasher from the kitchen door on to the grass when she saw the man and heard him call:

"Mother!"

Then he advanced and took her in his arms. Just then Farmer Harding came in, looked at the gentleman and wondered who he was.

"It's Joel, pa!" cried the old lady, beside herself with joy.

"Father, mother, I've made the fortune I went away to make when a boy. I've come back to give you everything you want. If you prefer to stay here I'll build you a palace. If you would like to travel you shall have ample funds. Tell me what way I can serve you."

The old couple looked at each other blankly. Neither spoke.

"Tell me, father, what can I do for you?"

"I don't know of anything I want just now but a little tobacco and a new cob pipe."

The heart of the man with a fortune sank.

"Mother, dear mother," he moaned, "surely there is something I can do for you."

"Yes, I need a new pair of specs. Those I have are too young for me."

A few days later Joel went back to the city, leaving his father and mother in the same condition he had found them.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

In extending a farm program to embrace as many practical ideas as possible people in the country need to consider such things as guinea fowls, bees, rabbits, pigeons and other birds and animals which will help the income without requiring much labor or investment.

Guineas are easily kept and have a usefulness aside from what revenue they return to a farmer. Their eggs and meat are delicious, they devour thousands of insects, thus picking up much of their living in the fields, and they help to guard a poultry yard from the visits of hawks. As they do not scratch the ground, they are useful in a garden, destroying bugs and worms. The flesh of a guinea is dark and tender and is greatly relished by those who like game animals or fowls.

There are two kinds of guineas, the pearl and the white, but I like the former or old fashioned guinea the best. The safest time to hatch guinea eggs is in the months of July and August. They do better at this time because the dews are not so heavy, and they will come off just about the time grass seeds begin to ripen. In my experience I find the common hen is far better to hatch and rear guineas than the guinea hen.

Guinea eggs hatch in twenty-six to twenty-eight days. They should be set on the ground in some cool, dry place where the water will not rise under them. Care should be taken to keep the hen free from lice and mites while she is sitting, as lice or mites will kill a small guinea in a short time. Do not use lice powder around eggs.

After the guineas come off they should be put in a dry pen or coop. The coop should have a board bottom so as to keep them dry, for dampness is very injurious to them. It is best not to feed the young guineas for about twenty-four hours after they are hatched. I find that the best feed for them is stale bread and boiled eggs, crumbled fine and dampened with milk. They should be fed this kind of food for four or five days, five times a day, after which they should be gradually changed to other foods. After this I feed them practically as I do other chicks.

The most critical time is when they begin to send out their wing feathers. Especial care should be taken not to let them get wet during this time. Do not feed them too much, and look out for bowel trouble. Another good thing is to look out for lice and mites. If you should happen to find any lice or mites on them a good way is to dust the hen every night, clean out the coop thoroughly and use a good louse killer.

The young guineas are lively and grow at a rapid rate. For the first few days they should be kept in a yard, but after they get spry and the weather is good they should be allowed their freedom with the mother hen. Usually after the hen weans them they fly to some nearby tree to roost. After this they will pick up most of their living from seeds, bugs, etc., but care should be taken to see that they get enough to eat.

During the winter they require about the same amount of food as the ordinary hen. They do not lay during the winter, but begin about the middle of April and will lay nearly every day until November.

Moles Not Vegetarians.

Moles eat worms, not corn, according to Dr. R. K. Nabours, zoologist of the Kansas State Agricultural college.

Because moles make their runs along rows of freshly planted corn and then the corn falls to come up, it is the common belief that the moles have eaten it and are therefore responsible for the poor stand of corn. The immediate responsibility, Dr. Nabours points out, rests on the mole's guests—meadow mice, white footed field mice and common house mice. The mole runs furiously concealment and lines of traffic for these small animals, which cannot dig runways of their own. It has been found by experiment that moles eat earthworms, grubs, insects and other animal life, but vegetable matter scarcely at all. To avoid the damage it is easier to kill the moles than the mice, and thus destroy the lines of traffic.

HOTBED PREPAREDNESS.

The Farmer Must Be Prepared to Grow Early Plants.

Preparedness is just as important to the market gardener as to the nation, writes R. L. Waits in the Country Gentleman. If you expect to produce early vegetables you must be prepared to grow early plants. This means the making of a hotbed unless you have a greenhouse.

The size of the hotbed pit will depend, of course, upon the number of plants to be started. With good management from 8,000 to 10,000 seedlings may be started under a sash 3 by 6 feet in size. In other words, two sash will be sufficient merely to start the plants for an acre of early cabbage. It is assumed that the seedlings will be transplanted into the cold frame in about a month from the date of sowing.

In Pennsylvania and New York the pit should be not less than twenty-eight inches deep for the starting of cabbage and lettuce, allowing about two feet of manure to be used. The heat from such a body of fresh horse manure will last more than a month.

It is customary to line the walls of the pit with boards. Any kind of inferior lumber will do for this purpose. The posts, however, should be sound and durable, so that it will be unnecessary to replace them for a number of years.

The top of the hotbed frame should extend from six inches to a foot above the surface of the ground. The total width should be the same as the length of the sash. The frame should slope to the south or southeast, and the upper side should be six inches higher than the lower side.

Most growers prefer crossbars about three inches wide to support the sash and to give additional strength to the frames.

If desired the frame of the pit may be made of concrete, the walls being two and a half or three inches thick. T angle irons, the ends embedded in the concrete, may be used for crossbars. This makes a very durable and satisfactory type of construction.

STUDY YOUR SOIL.

Farmers Should Learn the Nature of the Foundation of Their Farms.

No doubt the farmers of today would be more successful if they would carefully study the nature of the soil of their farms, finding out what elements they lack and going to work to supply that deficiency, writes W. D. Neale in the Farm Progress.

It may not be necessary for the farmer to have a knowledge of chemistry in order to make a chemical analysis of his soil to determine its elements. If he has an observing eye he can soon discover by growth of the crops and the color of the soil what it contains and what it lacks. After all it is not so much what elements the soil contains, but how much of nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium is available for plant food.

For instance, nitrogen produces the growth of leaf and branch and stalk. If the soil is rich in nitrogen the leaf will have the heavy dark color, and if the element exists in too great a proportion the growth will be rank and grain will be light. This is especially noticeable when wheat, oats or corn is grown where an old straw rick once stood.

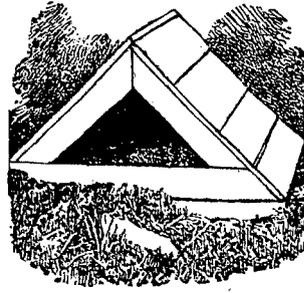

Phosphorus aids in the formation of pollen and brings seed to a perfect maturity. If this acid is lacking the plant will sometimes die before maturing seed. Potassium supplies the starch in the grain, and when this is wanting there will be no plumpness, but a shriveled condition of the grain.

The color of the soil also reveals its nature. If the soil is dark there is a great deal of organic matter in it. Organic matter in abundance means plenty of nitrogen. Clay and light colored soils denote the lack of nitrogen. There may be some exceptions, but not many.

The texture of the soil also indicates its properties. Organic matter in abundance makes the soil porous. Mellow soils contain plenty of phosphorus. If soils pack hard after rains it is the evidence of lack of nitrogen and phosphorus.

Turkey Nest.

Here is a simple and practical sort of a cover for the nesting turkey. It should be about three feet square and about two feet in height at the top of its roof. It is said that turkey hens can be moved, after they begin to set, to a place where they can be watched and cared for conveniently. Ordinarily the nesting turkey is regarded as about the wildest of the farm's domesticated creatures. The nest cover has been tested and found entirely practical.

Purchase Good Seed.

Don't purchase the lowest priced seed. In nine cases out of ten the highest priced seed is by far the cheapest. The seed doesn't cost much, after all, in proportion to the labor put on plants, once they start. A full crop is important and possible, only with good seed.

The annual meeting of the Hoskins Auto club was held April 1, 1916. There were about thirty members present and all in favor of continuing good road work for another year. The officers elected were: Ed. Behmer president; R. G. Rohrke, secretary and treasurer; trustees Simon Strate, Geo. Drevsen, P. Brumels and R. F. Kaun.—Hoskins Headlight.

Uncle Joe's Story.

Former Speaker Cannon tells this story of his early impecunious days: "One of my friends was a struggling physician. Neither fame nor fortune had come to either of us, but we were always hopeful. The years had weighed heavily on my friend, however, for he soon lost his hair, being quite bald.

"One day I greeted him with a beaming countenance and exclaimed: "What do you think, Henry? I have just bought an office safe."

"Then, Joe," said he, with the utmost gravity, "I shall buy a hairbrush."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

His Fine Marksmanship.

At the time of the second empire there had been at Compiegne a great and elegant hunting party, with a tremendous massacre of hares and pheasants and other game. Standing in chosen spots, the emperor and his followers had the game driven up before them and had nothing to do but shoot it down. These high born hunters had but to stoop to pick up the game that they shot; but they did not even do as much as that. Their valets, dressed in picturesque costumes, went about picking up their game for them. As the hunters returned after the day's sport it was noticed that Prosper Merimee, who was one of the party, was the only one whose servant was not laden with game. He was left completely in the lurch, as it were, without having taken so much as a sparrow.

"Well, well!" his literary fellows exclaimed. "How did they manage to get away from you?"

"When game is so plenty as that," said Merimee gravely, "the merit of a marksman lies in hitting nothing. So I fired between the birds."

The Dialect Was There.

Governor Bob Taylor of Tennessee was once entertaining a northern guest who was rather skeptical about the prevailing dialect in stories of southern negroes. He thought it overdrawn. To disprove the contention, Mr. Taylor laughingly made a wager with his guest that the northerner would be unable to interpret the language of the first negro they met. Accordingly they set out and presently came upon a black man basking indolently in the sun. Telling his friend to pay close heed, Mr. Taylor stepped up to the negro and demanded suddenly:

"Web he?"

The negro blinked his eyes stolidly and then answered in a guttural voice: "Wah who?"—Everybody's.

Her Best Behavior.

"I often give my pupils half of a story and ask them to finish it in their own way," said a schoolteacher in relating some of her experiences. "One day I told them about a little girl named Gertrude, who started out one Monday morning with the resolve that she was going to be as good all day long as if it were a Sunday. She started for school, but had not gone very far when she met a little girl crying. That is where I left the story for the children to finish. They were to relate what Gertrude did. This is the way the most serious boy in school completed the plot. Gertrude saw the little girl crying, so she went up to her and asked her what was the matter. "I had two pennies," said the little girl, "and a big boy took one of them away!" "Oh, that is too bad," said Gertrude. "What did you do?" "Oh, I cried, 'Help, help!' just like that," said the little girl. "Why, is that the loudest you can call?" asked Gertrude. "Yes," replied the little girl. "I have a bad cold and can't call any louder than that." So Gertrude took the other penny away from her."
