JAKE ZIEGLER, PIONEER CALLED

A Sturdy Pioneer and a Loyal Citizen of the County is Lost in the Passing from Life of J. W. Ziegler

Monday morning the messenger of death came to release from his suffering J. W. Ziegler, who has been in failing health for the past eighteen months, due to cancer of the stomach. The funeral service is being held at the English Lutheran church at 1 o'clock this afternoon conducted by Rev. Fetteroff.

Born at Port Byron, Illinois, January 13, 1855, Mr. Ziegler had attained the age of 61 years and 10 months when he passed away Monday, November 13, 1916. He came to Wayne county in April, 1883, and has since been a resident of the county. He first settled near Winside, and later resided near Carroll, he moved to his home near Wayne in 1902. He was one of the pioneer school teachers of the county.

April 7, 1886, he was united in marriage to Miss Joanna Heeren, who with one daughter, Charlotte, today mourn his death. He also has several brothers living.

In politics he was one of those who consistently affiliated with the democratic party, and his democracy was to him what religion is to many, a conviction that it was right, and he was ever loyal to that conviction, winning the respect of all by his steadfast adherence to what he conceived to be right.

Elected as a member of the board of county commissioners in 1897, he served from 1898 to the close of 1900, and the present courthouse was built during his term of office, and stands as a monument to his faithful work for the public.

He was elected as the first county assessor under the law creating that office in 1903, and served the four year term with credit, winning the respect of all who realized the difficulties which beset those who first served under the new law which made numerous and radical changes in the methods of other days.

As a man of sterling integrity, as citizen and officer, all who knew him bow in sorrow at his death, for a most worthy citizen has gone.

L. W. Roe Buys Beaman Store

When the bids were opened Wednesday noon for the stock and fixtures of the W. E. Beaman store it was found that L. W. Roe had valued it the highest, and it was sold to him at $2,650. Mr. Roe is not at this writing taking the public into his confidence as to his future intentions, except that the store opens Saturday. His second term as county treasurer will expire when the new year comes in. Mr. Roe has long been actively identified with Wayne and Wayne county, and he has a host of friends who will be gratified if they shall learn later that he is once more to become an active business man of this city.

There were about a half dozen bids opened, and most of them were near the estimate placed by the top bid.

M. W. A. Class Adoption

At the opera house last Friday evening there was a county class adoption of new members for the Modern Woodmen. Wayne, Winside and Hoskins furnished a class of 18 candidates, and the merry Foresters swung the ax right merrily among so much good timber. Head Consul Talbot was here from Lincoln, and also State Deputy, E. E. Kester from Lincoln. Both made interesting talks to the hundred or more Woodmen assembled. Ladies served an oyster supper, and all pronounced it a splendid time. Owing to a sudden change of date many who would have attended failed to receive notice in time or the crowd would have been larger.

At the camp meeting Tuesday evening several other members rode the goat, who were not able to get into the saddle Friday night.

Death of Mrs. Charles E. Long

The funeral of Mrs. Charles E. Long was held at the Methodist church Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Reverend A. S. Buell conducting the services. The funeral was largely attended by the many relatives and friends of the deceased and her husband and four children. The deepest sympathy of the community is extended to the father and children in the loss of mother and wife.

Myrtle Lena Courtright was born June 14, 1887 at Oberlin, Kansas. She died at the home of her parents in Wayne November 10th, 1916 age 29 years 3 months and 26 days, due to heart failure. Mrs. Long had had chronic appendicitis for some time and about a week ago the disease became so bad an operation was necessary and was performed at the home of her parents Monday. Her heart action which has always been weak was not strong enough to stand the shock and although she was rallying splendidly from the operation in every other way the vital organ ceased to work about two o'clock on the morning of the tenth.

Miss Courtright was married to Charles E. Long at Moxville, Iowa, March 22, 1905. They made their home at Moxville until a few months ago when they moved to Wayne. The deceased leaves her husband and four children, Grace, age ten, Esther, age eight, Margaret, age six and Boyd, age three, her father and mother, L. J. Courtright and wife, six sisters and two brothers.

Out of town relatives present were: Mrs. Jane Long and her daughter, Mrs. Etta Robinson, mother and sister to Mr. Long, from Moxville, Iowa; E. E. Courtright and wife, and O. A. Courtright, uncles and aunt to Mrs. Long, from Utica, South Dakota; Claude C. Courtright and wife, brother of Mrs. Long, from Truman, Minnesota, and Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Igou from Dow City, Iowa, uncle and aunt to Mrs. Long.

Card of Thanks—We wish to express our thanks to friends and neighbors for aid and sympathy extended during the sickness and death of wife and daughter; also for the beautiful floral offerings so freely given.

C. E. Long
L. J. Courtright
and family.

An Early Call

The blowing of our ghost defying fire whistle about six-thirty Tuesday morning was caused by an alarm being turned in from the Prof. Coleman residence on Faculty Row. Mr. Coleman had gone down into the basement about a quarter to six to stir up the furnace fire and had returned and gone upstairs to assist in the dressing of the children. During his absence a spark evidently from the furnace fell in some way into a large box of excelsior and kindling under the stairway. When Mr. Coleman came down stairs perhaps ten minutes later he smelled something burning and opened the cellar door to find the cause. Fire and smoke burst forth from the cellarway almost blinding him. However he ran down the stairs and finding a pail began fighting the fire. With the aid of his wife the flames were brought under control and when the fire company came a short time later the fire was nearly out. Mr. Coleman said that if the fire could have had a few more seconds in which to gain headway nothing could have saved the house. An insurance adjuster came Tuesday and satisfactory settlements were made. The damage was not large which was fortunate.

A mistake was made in sounding or sending the alarm as given at the power house the first ward being mistaken by many for the second, consequently the fire apparatus was a little slow in reaching the scene of trouble.

Jack Frost Breaks Water Pipes

The extreme cold of the past few days has proved expensive for the contractor installing an addition to the city water mains. It caught him with about thirty lengths of pipe uncovered, and the freezing is said to have broken about that number.

The Democratic Jubilee

Friday afternoon the good news for the democrats was so good that it was not possible to repress a happy expression of the gladness which filled the hearts of the democrats and republicans who had endorsed our peace-loving democratic president, and with his aid thrown from the backs of the people at least a part of the burden of the money monopoly. In this spirit of rejoicing a hundred or more of men and boys formed a parade, illuminated by torches, and preceded by a martial band from Hoskins, marched and counter marched on Main, Pearl and 2nd and 4th streets. A number of mounted men, one on the traditional democratic mule, first followed, and a crowd of spectators greeted them from the walks.

The line of march terminated at the Gem cafe, where the band and a number of others partook of a supper at which the fatted calf was served and duly appreciated, though not to the extent it might have been by the republicans who have been wandering for four years between the camps of the progressives and the standpaters, and have not got anywhere yet unless they were wise enough to come in at the democratic camp, and not a few did, thus making the celebration of victory possible.

Too much praise cannot be given the Hoskins bunch for the part they had in making the demonstration the success that it was. About a dozen carload of people from that berg accompanied the band, and more than one speaks much in praise of the musicians who came from the west edge of the county.

The Ladies of Rural Societies Listen

Miss Maude Wilson in charge of the Home Economics Extension Service at the state agricultural school of Lincoln spoke to the members and friends of the three rural societies, The Pleasant Valley, Helping Hand and Rural Home, Tuesday afternoon at the Baptist church.

Miss Wilson talked on the subject, "Furnishing the Home Economically." Due to the cold weather the attendance was not as large as was hoped for, but those who did attend received the best possible kind of information and useful and practical advice. Miss Wilson's talk dealt largely with the problems of the country home, how they could be best overcome with the smallest expense. The State farm confines its work not alone to methods of tilling the soil and stock raising to the best advantage but also in aiding the farm wife in all her duties and tasks. It is hoped that other lectures may be procured in the future dealing with other problems of the home. Such lectures as Tuesday's are well worth attending for they represent the result of thorough study and mastery of the smallest details, thoroughly tried and tested methods. Therefore they are practical and accepted even by the most skeptical.

Miss Wilson went to Walthill Wednesday where she addressed the rural societies.

Hospital Notes

Miss Stella Arnold living four miles west of town, was operated upon last Friday for removal of tonsils and adenoids.

Mrs. W. L. Gaston underwent a very serious operation last Tuesday and is doing as well as could be expected.

Miss Maud Harman was operated upon Wednesday morning for appendicitis and is resting well.

Miss Pearl Madden underwent a major operation this morning.

News From The Border

Llano Grande, Texas,
Nov. 12, 1916.

Editor Democrat:—Again we call up that "home number" and give you all our best greetings. Has been quite an eventful week. Among other things the voters of our nation on last Tuesday chose the man who should rule over us for the next four years. Election morning 4th and 5th Nebraska and North Dakota regiments started on a four day hike. We left camp about 8 o'clock and passing through Mercedes reached LaFeria our first camping place at noon. Set up our pup tents and had dinner at 1 o'clock. Rested all afternoon for we were tired all through. That evening for a while we listened to election reports coming in, which later proved erroneous. Thus was spent our election day.

We were called forth from the "land of dreams" at 3:30 a. m. Had breakfast at four a. m. and started upon our march a five a. m. We reached Harlingen shortly after 8:00 o'clock and then turned south towards San Benito, which town we reached at high noon. We were sure ready for dinner, too, as we had marched 16 miles with heavy equipment since a four o'clock breakfast. Our procession was some two or three miles long, and we marched 50 minutes out of every hour. Every company had a wagon for supplies and then besides these were battalion wagons and hospital wagons. We found San Benito to be a live and up-to-date town of about 3,500 population. They have many fine stores and business buildings, three fine school buildings, churches and residences. In a great many of these yards were orange and lemon trees, ferns, palms, roses, and honey suckles. It all seems like a fairy tale to us down here when you people talk of trains being blocked with snow. We camped on the ground where the Louisiana troops were before going home. South Dakota camp was across the street south east.

About 2 a. m. that night the wind began to blow and a half hour later rain began to patter, patter, soon water was running under our shelter tents and we were obliged to hunt other quarters as we hadn't ditched around our tents. We took possession of cook shacks of former troops and whiled away the time as best we could while rain continued till after 8 o'clock.

Our return was thus delayed a day on account of bad roads. Sun came out about noon and after drying our equipment went out town. I visited Griffin Bros. Nursery on north edge of town and found lemon and grape fruit trees laden with fruit. Oranges had mostly been picked. Along with these things were the flowers and other plants used for landscape gardening.

Another thing of interest was the sales or commission house handling vegetables. Vegetable season has just begun. That day they were shipping tomatoes, stringbeans, and peppers. Lettuce and cabbage are beginning to come in also. A little later on they said they would ship as high as ten carloads of vegetables every day.

That evening First and Second Virginia Troups came in from Brownsville on their four day's hike. That night it was our turn to stand guard and the next morning with light packs and lunches in our mess kits at 9 o'clock were homeward bound.

We kept up our regular marching time of 50-10 and ate our noon lunch during one of these 10 minute periods.

Arrived at La Feria at 4 o'clock and had supper one half hour later as the wagon train had preceded us and cooks knew we would be hungry. We then rested till Saturday morning when we finished our trip home. Yes, we were glad to see camp as our feet were tired, but we enjoyed the trip just the same. Upon our return we received our last months wages which we were all glad to see.

As ever, James J. Steele.

Important Questions Before Council

In the council proceedings one may note that ordinances Nos. 243 and 244 have passed to their first reading. They relate to the adoption or rejection of a city base or plane of reference for elevations, fixing the bench mark, etc., and the establishing street and walk grades, something in which all are interested.

Some months ago the city employed a competent engineer to make a very complete survey of the city, not only for street grades but for adequate and proper drainage. Their work is completed, and the drawings are here and form the basis for the two ordinances referred to. A representative of this paper has been looking the plans over, and finds that the surveyor has confined the recommendations as to grades as near as possible to the present grade, most of which has never been adopted as a city grade. In a few places a slight cut is made—in another a small fill is necessary. In practically every instance in the district where a walk is now in, the walk grade will remain unchanged. However it might be well for those who have property interests to see just what is proposed for their place, and if not satisfactory see how it can best be adjusted, rather than to wait until too late and then roar, for beyond a doubt the council wants to do the job in the best manner possible. Once the grades for the city established, it will be proper to begin paving, knowing just where to put it, and how it is to drain. The waterways now provided, are said by the engineer to be much too small to properly care for the water in a heavy rain or when a great snow is melting rapidly.

I. W. W. Men Visit Wayne

Last week the sewer contractor who has a contract here advertised for 100 men to rush the work to completion, and among the prizes drawn were nearly a half hundred members of that famous order known as the I. W. W. This is said by some to stand for I went work, but those who have been initiated insist that it stands for "I Will Work," and we think they are right, for from all accounts one reads they propose to work the public and those who need help for the greatest pay for the least reward in service rendered. If one may believe the stories told they ignore law, ride on the railroad without paying, terrorize people of the small towns and make themselves appear as a public nuisance where they appear in numbers sufficient to dominate the situation. Of course our diagnosis may be entirely wrong, for we have never joined the order.

Of the members who visited Wayne Chief of Police Miner lodged about forty in the city rest rooms at different times, though most of them were there for a place to sleep in shelter rather than for any acts of violence. As inmates of the city building they broke out two windows to give proper ventilation, probably, but were not notoriously bad as is reported from some places—or they might have had serious trouble of their own to attend to.

They attempted to start trouble between the contractor and the men now employed on the sewer, but they had the good sense to elect to remain on a job where they were drawing good pay rather than be discharged, and the choice was theirs between the two alternatives.

An After Election Talk

There will be an appropriate after election talk at the Baptist Church next Sunday night that you do not want to miss. Rev. W. L. Gaston will be on the carpet with one of his Sunday evening lectures and this one will be entitled "The Voice of the People" with special reference to the most exciting week of the year. Young men, young women, business men, professional men, democrats, republicans, socialists, Independents, mug-wumps, everybody else, invited to be present. The disappointed are entitled to front seats.

There will be an interesting musical program rendered in connection with the service and everything possible will be done to make this an inspiring, helpful and interesting occasion. Come early.

The morning service will be equally interesting and servicable. The ladies of the Baptist church are planning to give a chicken pie dinner and Christmas bazaar on or about December 15th.

The big Monarch cheese on display in Ralph Rundell's window weighs 250 pounds, orders are being taken and on Saturday November 25 will be ready for delivery, Phone No. 3.—adv.

The snow which came Friday night released a lot of corn huskers, Saturday and Sunday quite a number of them departed for their homes or for other fields. The greater part of the corn of this county is cribbed, but still there are many people not yet finished. Some said one good day would have finished, others have from one-third to one-half yet in the field.

Sunday we were reading election returns from Adams county, Iowa, and noticing a column of 25 years ago dope, compared election returns as to the number of votes cast, and find that in that county the total vote for governor on republican and democratic ticket was two more in 1891 than in 1916, showing that the population is not increasing as it should in that rich agricultural county. In 1891, the republican plurality was 311, and this year Harding had 279 plurality, and Wilson lacked but 44 votes of carrying the county.

Why Does Filling Preserve Teeth

When the dentist finds a small spot of decay between the teeth or in the fissures of enamel, it is his duty not only to cut out all of the decay but to extend all filling margins to what we call an immune arc, that is, to a position on the tooth where the action of tongue, lips, mastication, and tooth brush, may keep them clean. If this is done, and good material used, whether gold, silver or porcelain, it is almost certain that the filling will last many years.

A clean surface of a tooth can not decay, because decay is caused entirely by acid secreting bacteria, that find a lodging place upon unclean and rough surfaces.

BETTER MORTGAGES FOR OLD

A Story from the Saturday Evening Post
Illustrating the Practical Application of the Federal Farm
Loan Law

With us it wasn't exactly a case such as you see in the movies—the grinding miser with one mortgage on the farm, and another on the hand of our daughter, and our being given choice as to which should be foreclosed; but it was a mortgage, and it worried us. It was one of those old-fashioned loans that never fall due, are always due, payment of which may possibly never be demanded, but which may be called to-morrow. To be sure, in our part of the world the holder of a mortgage is not supposed to want more than his interest, and he is usually an investor who lives on his income and would not know what to do with the farm if he got it, and we ought not to have been worried about being foreclosed upon. As a matter of fact, though, it never seemed right to my wife or me that the loan could legally be called at any time.

The thing that bothered us was this: We had been studying our situation and we had made up our minds that there was no prospect of our ever making much headway in money matters unless we provided ourselves with better farming equipment. A 20-acre tract of the farm was so wet that it was useful for nothing but pasture; and even as pasture it was not profitable because, for lack of drainage, it was hummocky and grew a small and decreasing amount of poor grass and weeds.

The remedy was plain—underdraining. It was sour, too, and needed lime. The hill slopes, perhaps 10 acres, leading down to this flat were springy and spouty. Half the crops got off to a bad start every spring, and some years we could not get on this hillside for weeks after we should have been working it, and then the soil would be cloddy and the crops poor.

Underdraining would make these 30 acres the best on the farm and would add a good third to its productivity. With the land drained and limed we could grow clover, timothy, and possibly alfalfa, and corn enough to fill a good silo—and we had no silo. With a silo we could keep 10 cows, or maybe 15, and our milk returns would seem like affluence to us. We could see as plain as day that if we had the money to put in these productive improvements it would mean prosperity. We had studied the farm papers and college bulletins and the friendly advice given us by the Agricultural Department at Washington, and knew that wisely purchased equipment is the best investment for the farmer. We sat down and figured thus:

It would cost on the average $25 an acre to drain the 30 acres—or, say, $800 to be on the safe side. The silo would cost us $200 more. Here was about a thousand dollars called for right off the bat. Then we were not satisfied with our cows. They were fair cows, and we were very fond of them; but, just between us, they were scrubs. Not bad cows at all, but not the cows to make money on. When a farmer takes care of his own cows, and can't keep very many, he ought to keep good ones. It doesn't cost a cent more to keep a cow that yields 10,000 pounds of milk a year than it does to maintain the animal that gives only 2,500—unless you are keeping them simply for the pleasure of their society.

Besides, we had only five cows. We had three heifers coming on, which were good, dairy-bred grades, and might be good enough for our reorganized farm—or they might not. Possibly we should be obliged to pay $200 a head within a year for from 7 to 10 cows—and that might mean $1,000 more. Try as we would, we couldn't figure our way out with less than $2000 of new investment—and we should have taken twenty-five hundred, at a fair rate of interest, with the full assurance that the marriage of the money with dame nature and our own management would bring in the interest three times over every year—after we got started.

Now, I had never known the name of the owner of my mortgage. It was given to our bank, but I knew the bank had disposed of it and now acted only as the agent of the real mortgage. So I went to the bank and asked whether it would be possible for me to get from two thousand to twenty-five hundred dollars' additional on my loan, or on a second mortgage.

"Plunging pretty heavily, aren't you?" asked the cashier.

Then I explained to him that this loan, instead of being an extravagance, was really a necessity. I had it down pat, and I finally convinced him.

"Well," said he, "that farm is easily worth $10,000 after you have made those improvements—and your encumbrance will be only four thousand. It would be safe enough; but the holder of that mortgage doesn't happen to have funds for the increase now. Otherwise, should suggest that he take all of it and make a new mortgage covering the whole loan."

"But," I said, returning to my first idea, "I thought somebody might be willing to take a second mortgage—"

The cashier shook his head. Second mortgages were not a desirable form of investment. He would not recommend one to any customer of his bank. It was a violation of the bank's policy.

"It would be better to seek for somebody who would advance the whole five thousand—"

"Four thousand," said I; "or forty-five hundred at the most."

"Well," said he, "whatever it figures up to. Call next time you are in town. I'll see what I can do for you."

"Maybe the bank might make the loan?" I ventured.

"No," said he. "No, no, no! Not good banking, you know. Money is tight just now. But I'll see what I can do among our customers."

Well, the next time I went to town I called on the cashier again. He told me that, though the bank had no available funds, his father-in-law, the vice president of the bank, happened to have the money and was willing to make the loan. The interest would be 6 per cent and there would be a 2 per cent commission.

"Let me see," said I. "Two per cent of $2,500—"

"Two per cent of forty-five hundred," said he. "That is an entirely new loan, you know."

"But," said I, "I want only twenty-five hundred. I already have two thousand, on which my father paid a commission 20 years ago."

He was very patient and kind, and explained to me that in view of the fact that the whole loan was to be renewed it would be necessary for me to pay a 2 per cent commission—not to the bank, but to the bank's father-in-law, who made the mortgage.

"And what will the holder of the old mortgage do with the $2,000?" I asked.

"Oh, he will make another loan of $2,000 to some other farmer."

"And will some one get a commission of 2 per cent?" I asked.

"Certainly," said the cashier.

"Well, then," said I, "for the purpose of getting $2,500, with which to drain 30 acres of land, build a silo, and get some better cows, I shall have to pay out $90 for commissions and somebody else will have to pay out $40, making $130 in commissions, caused directly or indirectly by the borrowing on my part of $2,500. That seems pretty steep to me."

The cashier explained that I did not understand that it was the regular thing and that each loan was an independent transaction; but that if I did not want the money on that basis it would make no difference, as money was in great demand. I told him I would go home and talk with my wife about it, and would see him again when I brought in my cantaloupes. After all, $90 was all I had to pay; and, though it was plenty, I figured that it would pay me to make the loan, and I had no doubt that my wife would agree with me. When I drove into the yard, however, and began unhitching the horses she ran out to me with an expression on her face indicating that she had discovered something.

"Charlie," said she, "do you know that Congress has passed a law to help people get money on farm mortgages at a lower rate of interest?"

I was not at all enthusiastic. I had heard more or less about rural credits, and had made up my mind that the whole thing as very largely political hot air. So I grunted rather than replied.

"Humph," I said. "They have been talking about that for years. There's nothing to it."

"But," she said, "they have actually passed the bill, and the President has signed it."

"Well," said I, "you will find there's some hitch or catch in it somewhere. The Government at Washington never does things like that for the farmers. It's all bunk."

"Well," said she, "it won't do any harm to study it, will it? Don't be so pessimistic; there's a first time for everything. I have been reading about this in the farm paper, and unless the editor is mistaken this thing is going to work?"

So we sat down and read over together everything the paper said about it and it did sound convincing; but I was not convinced. So, after supper, I walked down to the home of William Allen, down the road a quarter of a mile, to talk about it, and found him and his wife in the act of reading all about it in their farm paper, just as my wife and I had been doing.

WAYNE MARKET REPORT Following are the market prices quoted us up to the time of going to press Thursday:

Over in Pierce county the big fight appears to have been warm on congressman, the candidates receiving larger votes than did the presidential electors or the governor candidates.

The people of the west and south appear to be able to meet their friends of the east and vanquish them in a political tussel. To continue to do so they must do the right things for the people.

Election was a busy day for the democrats—something like eight millions of them voting all in one day. A few remained to husk corn, or there would have been more of them listed at the polls.

Just think—every state officer that came up for election this year in Nebraska was elected by the democrats—what a glorious victory—what a responsibility placed upon the party. Continue to be democrats and all will be well.

Now let's all pull together to make this the greatest and most free and happiest people that the sun shines upon. If the golden rule and justice will go hand in hand with government for the next four years democracy of the true type will never be banished from the hearts of men.

According to the unofficial returns Congressman Stephens won by a majority of 2,801, carrying eleven of the 18 counties in the district. That was very good, considering that the wets fought him because he was dry and the dries opposed him because he was wet—and yet he made his position very plain on that question, although it was not an issue in the campaign.

Politics surely make strange bed-fellows. Our good dry church people tied the dry label onto candidate Warner, who thought he was running for Congress in this district, and at the same time the organ of the brewers—a sopping wet paper was getting his good money for a generous advertisement—and lambasting his opponent on the editorial page for being a dry man.

The editorial columns of a number of our last week exchanges show marked evidence of reference to the bundle of good things which most newspaper men stick away for use when they do not know what to say, because they are awaiting the verdict of the people already registered but not counted and the result told. It is possible that a lot of us could do far better to stick to old scrapbooks. Be that as it may, the week of election is a trying time for most papers to know what to say, and what not to say.

The Springfield Republican is of the opinion that with better leadership in the democratic party there would have been a "lively possibility" of carrying New England in the Wilson column. As it was, the normal republican majorities were reduced in nearly all of the far eastern states. The trouble with the democracy there, as the Republican sees it, is the predominance of place hunters at the councils of the party, and the disposition to crowd men of independence outside the regular party ranks.

The delay in getting returns and the long grid which judges and clerks of election were compelled to undergo in receiving and counting the vote at one sitting shows that Nebraska should adopt the plan of having a counting board to begin work about the noon hour, and from then on receive the votes at regular intervals until the polls close. It should cost no more and give results quicker and better as well as relieving the election board of so many hours of continuous service. Perhaps the eight-hour law cannot be made effective, but the 24-hour rule may be abolished.

Now we notice by some of the exchanges that Omaha is claiming that the dry amendment was not intended for Omaha. Then why were the citizens of Omaha permitted to vote on the question? When they gave out that sort of talk they evidently supposed that Sutton had been elected governor, and as an Omaha man they were to be given much liberty—but they will have to reckon with Governor Neville, and he has promised to enforce the law which the people adopted. Poor old Omaha, what a drouth, with nothing to take nearer than Kansas City. Perhaps Omaha and the town at the mouth of the "Kaw" will be on speaking terms after May 1, 1917.

The Opening Farm Sale Good At the farm sale of John Good yesterday, the roof went off to make room for prices to go the limit. Auctioneer Cunningham tells us that he never sold when things went better. Horses, mules, cows and all went way up. Ordinary milk cows sold as high as $110, and other things correspondingly high. Many people who contemplate a sale watch the prices paid at the opening sale and if they are good, decide to dispose of their surplus that way. Mr. Good took unusual pains to thoroughly advertise his sale, and we will venture that the money spent in spreading printers ink repaid him an hundred fold. It pays to advertise a farm sale thoroughly.

Election is Over And want to thank the voters of Wayne County for the nice vote given me for the office of State Representative, as I have made no promises to anyone I will go to Lincoln with a free hand to support the measures I think are good and oppose the measures I think are not good for the people of this county, and I hope with your aid that I shall discharge my duty in such a manner that you will not regret your action in sending me. I again thank you. Grant S. Mears.

Sad But True An election debt has been paid. In fact several have been paid during the past few days but the one we speak of is especially important. On the day before election and on election day two youths, names Ward Randol and A. W. Christensen of the Wayne normal, bet with their various friends and enemies, the first, seven T bone steaks and accompanying suppers and the last named gentleman six 7-bone steaks and said suppers. Be it added of course they bet on Hughes carrying the nation as president. The results are known and so on Tuesday evening at the Gem cafe the suppers were given by the defeated betters. Oh, of course it was a happy crowd, but as the writer looked in at the window at the festive board with all those luscious, beautiful steaks he could not help but notice that Mr. Randol's and Mr. Christensen's faces were lined with grief and care.

In Nebraska last spring there were 61,447 cream separators in this state, and in 17 counties there were more than 1,000 each. The cream separator has been means of saving and making many a dollar for the farmer, and many other dollars for the great creamery combine which has grown up in this state. Owing to their local organization, Wayne county has felt the grip of the cream or butter, trust less than most places in the state—and we hope to see this organization remain a living force in the community.

A graduated land tax to check the growth of farm tenantry, was one of the demands of the Farmers' National Congress, in session at Indianapolis on October 17 to 20. So far as reported there was no known advocate of single tax or of any approach to that system present at the gathering, unless Gifford Pinchot may be so considered. Perhaps, if there had been, the demand would have been stated in a more scientific form. As it is, however, it shows a trend among the farmers in the right direction. It also indicates that the alleged antipathy of farmers toward taxation of land values does not exist to the extent usually represented.

The Lyons Mirror was 83 years old last week, and it looks every day of it. For the past 27 years, Mose Warner, the present editor has presided over its destinies. Mose has told of the birth, marriage and death of a number of people who have come to earth, live and died since his first connection with the paper, which like the babbling brook goes on forever.

Stanton now has a wrestler in the person of Cal Wood who put a Chicago man, Joe Cotnosaros on his back in short order in a match at Stanton since election. Seems to me that Bro. A mild winter is predicted by the goose bone and the corn husks, the fur on the rabbit and the howling of the dog, and we may have one, but with two big snows and the mercury before the middle of November marking 8 below zero place, we are having something besides a mild fall. But then the last two weather spasms appear to have gotten a lot of bad out of the system, and it is possible that by the time winter is here we will have some mild winter weather.

EXAMINATION QUESTIONS

For Professors of Political Economy, Bankers, Attorneys and Business Men

(1) The value of all property in the United States is estimated at $187,000,000,000. Two per cent of its 100,000,000 people own 65 per cent of it. Sixty per cent of the people own 5 per cent, and the remaining 38 per cent of the people own 30 per cent. Find the value of property owned by the average individual in each class. State how many times the average holding of the individual in the two per cent class exceeds the average holding in the 60 per cent class. Explain how the two per cent got so much.

(2) A laborer receives two dollars a day and works six days a week. If he spends nothing at all, how many years will he require to save a fortune equal to Rockefeller's estimated at two billions? How can one man produce wealth equal to Rockefeller's?

How can one man produce wealth equal to one two-thousandth part of Rockefeller's estimated fortune? If Rockefeller did not produce his fortune, who did, and how did Rockefeller get it from them?

The Democrat offers a price of 5 years subscription for the best and most correct answer to these problems.

At the End of the Good Road

To see what really happens at the end of the good road, a public road specialist of the department recently had observations made in different sections of the country. The observers noted many country-bound teamsters who drove two loaded wagons, hitched one behind the other, to the end of the good road, and then found it necessary to leave one wagon by the roadside to be returned for later, while all the power of their teams was devoted to hauling a single wagon over the unimproved road.

Farmers bound for the market frequently were seen to haul wood and similar products to the beginning of the good road, there dumping them, and returning for a second load. When this arrived, the two loads were consolidated and easily hauled by a single team the remaining distance to market over the improved highway.

In one section of the country where oxen are still used teamsters were observed to bring their loads over the dirt roads with two or three yokes of oxen. When the beginning of the good roads was reached, the teamsters would unhitch the extra animals and finish their journey with a single yoke.

Among the unluckiest of election victims we must number Charles F. Murphy, boss of Tammany hall. It was Mr. Murphy's business, and it was within his power, to give the president the customary democratic 125,000 majority in Greater New York. He didn't do it. The majority is only one-third that. Tammany knifed Wilson as it knifed Bryan. Now this is all right for the pivotal state which New York has been and still thought it was. It makes Charles F. Murphy the president maker of the United States. But there's the rub. Contrary to all precedent and expectation, the candidate which Murphy rejected is become again the head of the nation. Watch the influence of the democratic administration helping next year to elect an anti-Tammany mayor in Greater New York, condemning Tammany to another and perhaps fatal four years of separation from the public till. The blow which Murphy aimed at the president is the blow that will almost kill Murphy. In which fact we find one of the consolations of the election returns.—State Journal.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh medicine, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy. It is taken internally and acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Medicine fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Sold by Dr. H. C. Henney, Wayne, Nebr. Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

RUNDELL'S COLUMN

Babylon has fallen; Babylon has fallen, and we are going to occupy the white house another four years. It went down under an onslaught of freemen's ballots on November 7th. The seating of a former slave of Senator Jeff Davis in a chair that he had deserted was the climax of the fall of the southern octopus, but it was left for the triumphant democracy under the leadership of Woodrow Wilson to deal a death blow to the house of Morgan. Wall street will never again attempt to dictate the choice of an American president.

Mr. Hughes informed Mr. Wilson that he could not repeal a surrender; neither can Mr. Hughes repeal a resignation from the supreme bench. All hail the ladies of the "Golden State," and the votes of the Scandinavians of Minnesota and South Dakota were a fitting reply to Tom Cook, chairman of the republican state convention in 1892, who said "d---n the Swedes and Danes and give us a Chinaman."

Yes, I am a lame duck with plenty of respectable company. The only one that brings the blush of shame is the Omaha candidate for governor, but it is cheering to know that the ministers and leading christians of Wayne did not vote for the lustful lecherous gentleman.

C. J. Rundell.

The political death struggle was mightily hard for some of our republican friends last week, but they finally submitted to the will of the majority, though a few of them have not yet given up all hope of a resurrection.

Marriage Licenses Issued

A marriage license was granted to John Staffers and Miss Anna Strate, November the 13th, 1916, by county judge Britton.

"Despite the outcome, the election indicates a popular revolt against the democratic administration, although of much greater intensity in the east than in the west. In that part of the country where the popular will is permitted to be freely expressed, the majority for Hughes is predominant, and he is, in reality, the real popular choice."

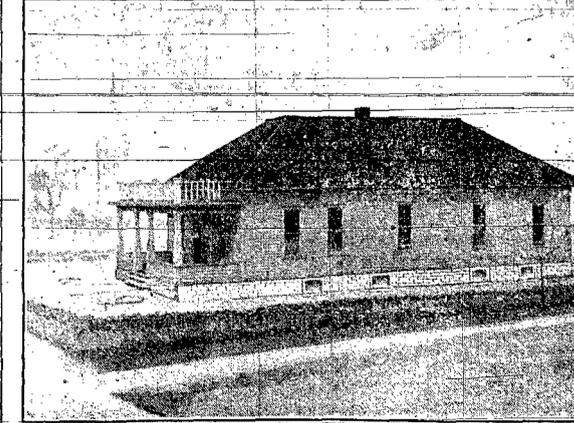

The above comment appeared upon the editorial page of the Omaha Bee in its issue of November 11. How far Mr. Rosewater comes from expressing the real verdict of the people in the recent election is best shown by the facts in the case.

President Wilson was opposed for re-election by one who was conceded to be the strongest candidate that the opposition party could draft into service. Mr. Hughes was hailed as the one man who could unite the discordant elements of the republican party and insure success at the polls. He had the active support of most of the leaders of the two factions which opposed Mr. Wilson in 1912. The record of the present administration was the real issue in the campaign, and the policy of the President, domestic and foreign, was bitterly assailed in the press and from the platform. The rallying cry was "anything to beat Wilson."

Notwithstanding this, President Wilson will enter upon his second term with the largest popular vote ever given to a candidate for the presidency, securing two and a quarter millions of votes more than he received in 1912, and nearly one million more than the combined Taft-Roosevelt vote of the same year. The endorsement of his administration was not from any one section of the country. It came from the north south east and west the Wilson territory including New Hampshire and Ohio on the east and extending across the continent to California and Washington on the west. Even Utah, the citadel of the old guard, one of the two states carried by Taft in 1912 joined twenty-nine other states in an expression of confidence in the President. So popular is President Wilson in the west that the electoral vote of only four states west of the Mississippi river will be registered against him, and this includes Minnesota, the result of which is still in doubt.

With these facts before him, it must have been difficult for Editor Rosewater to find in the returns any evidence of a "popular revolt against the democratic administration." Common fairness should have compelled him to admit that the country as a whole has given its vote of confidence to the President.
