A. P. Gossard Resigns at Creamery

Last week Wednesday, A. P. Gossard, who for nearly twelve years past has been identified with the creamery and creamery association at this place, resigned as manager for the association. Mr. Gossard tells us that he has tried, and for years been successful in helping to maintain the local organization here on a business basis—a paying basis for the members, in the face of strong opposition from the centralized creamery interests of the state, and so long as he could have the hearty co-operation of the members of the association such war could be successfully waged. But when they began, by ones and twos, to go over to the central plants for a small advance in the price of cream for such time as the central powers found it necessary to break the local organization, he could not remain, as his pay was based on the volume of business.

Several years ago the owners, Messrs. Gossard & Grothe, sold the creamery building to the Harding company of Omaha, but stipulated that the association cream be taken here at a price two cents only below the Elgin market, and this has governed since, during the manager's stay. Wm. Thies, who came here from Winside as an employee of Harding, is now in charge at the creamery, and the members of the association have no representative there. It is understood that there is soon to be a meeting of the association officers and members.

Mr. Gossard has not yet decided as to his future plans, but he has plenty of opportunity for good positions, but as some of them would take him from Wayne he is not considering them seriously at present.

Mrs. J. H. Kate Fractures Hip

Mrs. John H. Kate, 1218 Thirty-fourth street, is the first victim of early winter, having sustained a broken hip in a fall yesterday on the slippery sidewalk. In company with Mrs. Herbert Blish, Mrs. Kate was walking to the home of Mrs. George Hunter to attend the neighborhood Bible class weekly meeting, and at Thirty-seventh street and Cottage Grove avenue fell after crossing the curb. An X-ray picture taken in Methodist hospital revealed a broken hip and Mrs. Kate will undergo an operation this morning.

The above is a clipping from a Des Moines paper sent to J. E. Hufford at this place, and tells of the accident which befell Mrs. Kate, who formerly lived at Wayne and who has many friends here who sympathize with her in this affliction. A letter received after the fracture had been reduced stated that she is doing nicely, and there is prospect that she will be about again in record-breaking time for such a mishap.

A Thanksgiving Service

Sunday night Rev. W. L. Gaston will stage a thanksgiving service to which more than usual interest will attach. In his lecture he will pay tribute to the great piles of plenty piled up everywhere in his country. He will recite in graphic story the accomplishments of the year. He will paint this country in the colors of corn and wine and point with exultation to the moral, civic, social, educational and religious progress of the year. For a text he will carry twelve stones out of the bed of the river Jordan and with them build a national monument of thanksgiving. A reason will be inscribed on each stone. It will be a very unique sermon and interesting throughout. There will be plenty of good music. Come early, for the Sunday evening services fill the house.

A Train of Wayne County Cattle

Last Saturday evening a train load of Wayne county fat cattle started for Chicago to be on the Monday market. Two cars from Winside were sent by Mr. F. Weible, and nine cars went from here, three cars each by L. M. Jen and Frank Strahan, two cars by Will Mellor and one by George McEachen. The stock was accompanied by L. M. Owen, Bev Strahan, Wm. Mellor, and Don Delaney.

Monday George McEachen went to Omaha with two double-deck car loads of sheep which he has been feeding at his place west of Wayne.

Obituary--Ziegler

Jacob Washington Ziegler was born January 13, 1855, at Port Byron, Illinois, and passed away November 13, 1916, at the age of 61 years and 10 months.

He came to Wayne county in 1883 settling on a farm near Winside. April 1, 1886 he was united in marriage with Miss Johanna Heeren of Port Byron, Illinois. One daughter Charlotte was born to this union. In 1891 he moved to his farm six and one-half miles west of Wayne.

In 1902 he moved to the place where he resided until the time of his death. Besides his widow and daughter he leaves to mourn his loss, four brothers and two sisters, Wm. and F. X. Ziegler of Port Byron Illinois, D. K. Ziegler of Des Moines, Iowa, and A. M. Ziegler of Gregory, South Dakota, Mrs. Henry Schafer and Mrs. Mary Morgan of Port Byron, Illinois.

Card of Thanks—We desire to express to neighbors and kind friends our thanks for kind and neighborly acts of aid and sympathy and for floral offering during the sickness, death and burial of husband and father.

Two Great Football Games

Two mighty contests are to be held on the Normal football grounds within a week, either worthy of a "packed house." Friday (the 24th) the contest will be between the home team and the eleven from Beuna Vista college of Storm Lake, Iowa, one of the strong teams.

Coach Gross of Wisner who had charge of the athletics at the normal last year is again here and will put the fellows through stiff workouts for the Buena Vista game which will be without doubt one of the hardest fought of the season. Under his coaching the football men will be in fine shape to put over the winning scores.

The second game is to be with Union College of LeMars, Iowa, the afternoon of Thanksgiving day. Thus Wayne people who love the game will have two chances to see the best games of the season, an opportunity they will not be willing to miss. In fact the Thanksgiving game will undoubtedly bring full 500 spectators from neighboring towns if the weather and roads permit of automobile travel, and they will have to be pretty tough to stop a lover of this popular game.

John Lewis Davis Dead

John Lewis Davis, who formerly lived with his parents on a farm east of Wayne, died at Norfolk Thursday, November 16, 1916, at the age of nearly 40 years. Deceased was born at Red Oak, Iowa in 1877, and with his parents, L. A. Davis and wife, came to this county when about ten years of age.

While here they owned what is now the S. E. Aufer farm east of Wayne. A few years later they moved to Randolph, and the father now lives in Holt county. He is also survived by three brothers, Frank, of Crofton, George and Richard of Atkinson, and a sister, Mrs. J. Jurgensen of Sasakwa, Oklahoma.

The body was brought to Wayne Saturday morning for burial, and was placed in the cemetery here following a simple service at the grave.

School Notes

A debating team of ten members has been organized with prospects of still others to join. The question to be debated in the state league this year is Resolved: "That the United States Should Abandon the Monroe Doctrine." Interest is keen and prospects for a strong team are good.

Mr. A. C. Crawford of the science department is receiving wireless messages daily.

New students recently enrolled are Robert Cottrell in the ninth grade and Clell Cottrell in the sixth grade.

President U. S. Conn addressed the high school Tuesday afternoon on the subject of "Developing Individual Talents." He discussed at some length the various classes of artists, but reminded his hearers of the fact that artists and geniuses form but a small proportion of society and that success depends upon the highest possible development of talent. He concluded by saying, "It is up to you, young people, to determine what you will be for it is only your own effort that will count."

Donald Dewey was absent from the seventh grade several days because of having frozen his feet while hunting.

The seventh A. class is having a lively and interesting review of the early explorations and discoveries in the New World.

Recent visitors were Mrs. H. J. Ringland, Mrs. C. T. Ingham, Miss Bessie Crockett, Miss Hattie Crockett and Miss LaVerne Tietze.

A new duplicator has been purchased for the schools. This will fill a long felt need, and will be an invaluable aid in all departments of the school.

Another election bet has been paid. Sam Davies, checker fiend and newspaper dispenser gave Fred Blair and a party of eight a supper at the Gem cafe Thursday evening, November sixteenth. When the bet was made Mr. Davies agreed to take a lady friend if he lost but Sam believes in doing things right so he took instead three young ladies, Misses Marguerite Chace, Florence Welch and Helen McNeal.

Mr. Blair and wife, A. R. Davis and wife and F. Gamble and wife made up the remaining members of the party. A three course supper was served following which Mr. Davies, who formerly was well known in making after dinner talks was called upon for a toast. The speaker was in a reminiscent frame of mind and he told how nearly forty years ago he married a couple at LeMars, Iowa, when he was justice of the peace. Sad to relate Mr. Davies never received any remuneration for his services, for the smallest change the man had in his possession was a ten dollar note for which Sam was unable to return change. In closing the speaker related the time he was sent to the neighbors to bring home two pigs in a sack. Sam went to said neighbor's via mule, an old gray mule, sleepy, tired, worn out. But after the pigs, squirming and squealing, were loaded upon his back—well, anyway Sam walked home.

Mr. Davies still owes Mr. Blair another supper, which we are told will be given sometime after the holidays. Mr. Davies is then to delve deeper into the past and tell some more of his inimitable funny stories.

Here's Your Weather Map

Doc Bixby says that it was demonstrated fifty years ago that corn bread and sorghum made ample ration for men, women and children during the hard winters the pioneers spent in Minnesota, and is of the opinion that the high cost of living, and the high price of a lot of food stuff would climb down from its present high roost if half or more of the people would eat less, and that of plain, substantial foods.

Thirty years ago about this time there was trouble at Sioux City over the Haddock murder, the outgrowth of attempts to enforce the prohibitory law of Iowa, then a comparatively new law. Since then that law was assassinated by its pretended republican friends, and last year had a sort of a resurrection, and it is openly charged that it is again liable to be stabbed by its friends.

This is the season of the year when as a boy we used to think of buckwheat cakes and sausage; but why think of such things? Buckwheat cakes, such as "mother used to make," pitted all over as though they had had the smallpox, crisp and tender cannot be made without the old-time buckwheat flour, unadulterated and fine. Those modern substitutes wont even give a fellow the real old-fashioned buckwheat itch—and it did feel good to scratch.

M. T. Munsinger is shipping out a car or two of baled alfalfa. If the farmers would bale and ship more of this hay while it is good there might be far more profit in it than to let it stand and rot in the stack from one year to another, as has been done in the past. It is too valuable to be thus permitted to go to the bad.

Over in Iowa they are discovering, or think they are, that the suffrage amendment was defeated by fraudulent votes. Beyond a doubt, and when the day comes that it is necessary to have more fraudulent votes, as it is slowly coming, to maintain the gang of standpatters who run things in that state in power, it will stand honest voters in hand to guard well the purity of their ballot boxes or they will be counted out. When they can no longer buy the votes necessary they will undoubtedly try to get them by some other means.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.
 Wrong Eating.
 "After all," says a bulletin from a state board of health, "good health is largely a matter of what goes into the stomach."
 If a person eats heavily of rich, greasy, concentrated foods, such as fried meats, rich pastries, soggy or underdone breads, he will soon find himself seeking a relief from headache, sluggishness, constipation and biliousness, and the patent medicine route will be the way he will likely choose. Pills and purgatives will find a hearty welcome and become a warm friend to persons who so poison themselves. The trouble arising from eating food of this kind is that it ferments in the stomach, throws off poisons and creates a condition which calls for a stronger poison in the form of medicine to throw off the food poison. The medicine habit is acquired, and the digestive organs of the stomach are wrecked and no longer perform their natural functions.
 "On the other hand, whoever eats freely of fruits, vegetables, milk, butter, salads, cereals and nuts—foods prepared by nature for man—not only avoids digestive troubles, but he is spared the evil effects of food poisons, such as rheumatism, headaches, sluggishness and biliousness. He also escapes the patent medicine habit. He eats according to nature's demand and needs, and no medicine is required as an after dose."

In some parts of this state the cultivation of bees is very profitable. Where sweet clover is grown bees may be made to take a profit from it in addition to the one given as a forage plant and soil builder. We knew of an apiary in Colorado where they managed to make $100 worth of honey per acre from their sweet clover, with what the bees gathered from other sources—some from alfalfa and some from fruit tree blossoms. If more people would care for bees here the crop of sweetening would be larger.

Several have spoken of the interest they have in the little story we are running regarding the new Farm Loan law. This week we give the second installment, and next week it will be completed. It puts in simple, easy form the strong points of this excellent piece of constructive legislation. We hope that every farmer in Wayne county will read the story and that all will profit from it—and from the fact that our Uncle Sam has recognized in the people who till the soil the builders of all of our prosperity, and is planning to help them that there may be more people able to establish in this helpful work.

An item in one of our exchanges tells us that not every sensation we interpret as hunger is a real call for food. Mighty glad to hear it, for if prices stay up there we don't want to waste any energy answering a false call. But the writer did not tell what is the real call—he says it is not attended by any disagreeable sensation or "gnawing," and the sense of weakness or faintness or headache is not due to hunger, unless following abstinence from food for a period of 36 hours. All of this information will help some when we think we are hungry and the purse is low.

There was general rejoicing in Nebraska over the result of the elections. The drys won the amendment. The wets nominated and elected a governor who says he will enforce the law. The dry people also elected a lieutenant governor and the democrats elected every state officer, and if they serve the state as well as the democrats have in the past that should please every republican who believes in good government, and so leave all happy except the few place seekers who were left at home.

The visit of Governor-elect Neville to Lincoln on Saturday brought out a few things that add to the hope that he will be found on the side of a sane and not a treacherous enforcement of the new dry amendment. His refusal to join in the over enforcement program is definitely reported. On account of his pre-election pledges he cannot join with those who would like to see prohibition only feebly supported from the state house. Many thousands of dry voters gave him their ballots because they believed he would support prohibition as honestly and ably as his opponent. To do this Mr. Neville must refuse to be managed by men who believe they have a right to dictate to him because they think they placed him in the governor's chair. His whole future depends upon the attitude he takes toward the small group of men who have notoriously used the state house for their own benefit during the last four years. Every patriotic citizen of the state will hope that this new and untried man will stand the fire that is soon to snow what sort of stuff there is in him.—State Journal.

County Sunday School Convention

The Wayne County Sunday school convention was held at Wayne in the Baptist church, Friday, November 17. Fifty delegates were present from neighboring towns and school districts.

Inspiring, helpful, interesting, every session was an enthusiastic, get together meeting where new ideas were exchanged for old. Progressiveness was the key note and all the delegates were inspired by the talks and round table discussions.

The meeting was opened at 10:30 by an address of welcome by Rev. W. L. Gaston, pastor of the Baptist church and a response was given by Rev. D. P. Davies of Carroll. At 10:45 a musical program was given by the Baptist choir. At 11 o'clock an address by Miss Brown, general secretary of the State Sunday schools, was given following which the different committees were appointed.

The afternoon session began at 1:30 at which time all the Sunday school officers of all the county Sunday schools, and committees read their reports. At the business meeting the following county officers were elected: F. H. Jones president; Mrs. C. Jones of Carroll, vice president, and Julius Hurst of Wayne secretary-treasurer. Mr. Kimberly of Lincoln, general business manager of the State Sunday schools spoke on "A Successful Sunday School" and Miss Brown on "The 1917 State Convention and Other Topics". The state convention is held in June at Omaha. At 3:30 a general round table discussion was held and plans of Bible work were discussed.

Miss Brown gave a stereopticon lecture on Korea in the evening at 8:00 o'clock.

The county convention for next year was voted to be held at Winside.

Three Generations of Live Stock Shippers

Wayne was represented on Thursday's market by three generations of live stock shippers, E. B. Chichester, his son, W. L. and grandson Lynn. The two elder members of the family brought in a car each of fat cattle, while Master Lynn five years of age, marketed the pet steer that was given him as a calf when he was 2 months old. It is hardly necessary to explain the giver was the grandfather. The calf which was only two months younger than his little owner was five years old when sold today and had grown into a beef weighing 1980 pounds that sold at $11.00 per hundred, or $217.80. There have been other cattle in the yards just as heavy but at times when the market was lower than now, so that it is very doubtful if a single individual ever sold on the market for beef for as many dollars. According to the terms of the gift the money will be put in the bank and the interest compounded until Master Lynn is 21 years old.

W. L. Chichester says that about the usual number of cattle will be fed in Wayne county this season. The farmers had a big crop of corn, and feed of all kinds is plentiful. Although the price of corn is high most of them appear to be figuring on feeding it out rather than selling it.—Omaha Journal-Stockman.

The popular vote given President Wilson for a second term shows that the people are progressive and are quick to recognize and reward officers who have the courage to do things for the people instead of for the special interests. If the policies of the present administration shall be continued and be enlarged upon in the next term there is no danger but that any true representative of the democratic party who may be named will ride into the presidential chair with a great majority. It is pretty soon now to select the man, but how would Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo suit?

For once the Colonel is speechless.

Now the wet fellows are worrying about the loss of revenue to the government, owing to prohibition. Don't worry. The revenue loss can be made up and still have a lot left of the sum which used to go for booze.

More than half of the states of the union have declared for prohibition, the last election adding Nebraska, Florida, Utah, Montana, South Dakota and Michigan to the water states. In a few years more it will be easy to make it national, which will require favorable action from two-thirds of the states.

Decay of Teeth

There are some people who believe that candy or sweets are not harmful to children; but it is quite certain that they are harmful to the teeth for this reason. Normal saliva is thin and sticky, its movement having a tendency to clean the teeth. If much sugar is eaten it is changed to a thick and gluey mass sometimes of aropy condition when expectorated.

The teeth being covered with this sticky mass become an ideal breeding place for the acid secreting bacteria that produces decay of the teeth.

It was California, and had not Hughes visited that state and made faces at the progressives he might have placed Wall street in power.

Among the practical things now undertaken by the university of this state are two short-courses for the farmer lads. One is a practical creamery course of four months, the other a practical dairy farm course. There is perhaps no better department of farming for profit than the dairy, and with it goes the creamery if it is to be made to realize the greatest good for the investment. Most any one can farm by guess or run a dairy the same way, but that does not get the owner anywhere. The men who are making the successes are those who first learn the best method of doing things, and then industriously apply the knowledge in a practical manner. We might cite numerous examples. We know of two young men from this place who have taken study along these lines, and both have excellent positions at a salary far above what they might be able to receive in most any other avenue for the same outlay of time and money for school work. We are told of a farmer near here who has averaged to make $275 per month the year round, and year after year—and the greater part of it came from dairy end of the place. So whether as an employee or farmer the knowledge acquired by such a course is practical for immediate action. Then another thing to be considered is the fact that the demand for good dairy products is yearly growing better. The writer well remembers when butter, such as it was, was a drug on the market, and some of it would not bring the price of average axle grease, and probably it should not, for undoubtedly it would stop a wagon—lock the wheel. But now in the same county where this was true you get none of that kind of butter—but the butter product from that same community commands the very highest price at which butter is sold anywhere in this country. If their butter does not sell from 3 to 5 cents above the Elgin market there is something doing for the man in charge, and if he cannot bring about the required standard to get the price he is given a chance to resign. That country and the people who existed there used to be poor—now the soil has been built up to high state of productiveness; well improved with modern buildings and the owners in comfortable circumstances, and the dairy cow and practical work did it. Had the pioneers of this work had the opportunity of present day helps along that line the same result would have been accomplished in half the time, for this development has been under way there for more than forty years, and much of the knowledge gained by the pioneers in the work came from the high priced school of experience and experiments. But one thing may be said of the men and women who worked out this system, they were progressive, and alert for knowledge regarding the best methods. They were among the first to try the separator to see if it was better than their model ways of setting milk and raising the cream. If so they wanted it, and they had it.

DRY GOODS UNDERWEAR SHOES

Here are some lines of winter goods that we are still selling at last year's prices. It is only because we bought them in big supply months ago before prices went skywards that we are able to do it. As long as these stocks last they will be on sale at the old prices and you are sure of a good saving on every dollar's worth of them you buy.

Besides the goods listed here you will find a lot of merchandise all over the store upon which prices have not advanced. You can make a very substantial saving on your winter purchases if you come in time to get your goods from these early bought stocks.

Many ladies fine dress shoes are still $4.00 and $5.00. You will find the very best styles in high lace shoes of the finest, black kid or fine patent shoes with cloth tops at these prices. Many styles and all sizes are here for your selection at the same prices you paid six months ago. Such an offer is only possible, because we figured that shoes would go up this fall and bought heavily last spring and summer. When these shoes are all sold we'll have to pay $1 to $1.50 more for the same styles, so come now and get yours at a good saving.

Ahern's

Wool and cotton blankets are on sale at last year's prices because we bought 400 pair last March that were made out of 9 cents per pound cotton and 45 cents per pound wool. With cotton now 22 cents per pound and wool $1.00 per pound you can easily figure that these same blankets would cost about double today. With our hundreds for you to choose from at every price from 40 cents to $8.00 just what you paid last year.

Ahern's

Ladies and childrens coats are here at Bargain Prices. We are now ready to close them out and you can buy a coat at a good saving. We have an especially large assortment of black coats in large and extra large sizes in plush and baby lamb, and large women can get a splendid bargain if they come now.

20 fine room size rugs that we bought early this summer are still marked at the old prices. Every one of these rugs (except 2 very cheap ones) are especially nice patterns. There are Brussels, Axminsters and Velvets in 9x12 feet and 8x10 feet sizes and the prices are from $16.00 to $27.00. They are worth $3.00 to $4.00 more at today's prices. Would mother like one for Christmas?

Ahern's

We have a splendid assortment of ladies dress skirts and fine waists at the same prices you paid last spring. There are about 100 fine poplin, silk and serge skirts to choose from; mostly dark blues and blacks, and they are still $6.00 to $7.50. Plenty of sizes up to 36 waist measure and every skirt fitted without extra charge. Lovely silk Crepe De Chine waists in all colors are only $3.75.

Ahern's

Prices on most of our hosiery and underwear are the same as last year because we bought this winters supply 8 months ago. A few items in children's underwear are advanced but ladies unions are still $1.00 for fleece lined, $2.00 for part wool and $3.00 for all wool. Men's underwear is priced just the same as a year ago. Of our best selling styles in ladies and children's hose we laid in a big supply before the advance came but you'll have to come soon or pay more as 25 cent hose will soon be 35 cents and 35 cent hose will cost you half a dollar.

Ahern's

Overshoes and rubbers are still the same old prices. We bought these goods last January and got them at last year's prices and as long as the goods bought at that time hold out you can buy them as cheap as you ever did. The Beacon Falls Arctics give extra wear too. Men who bought four buckles here last year tell us they got the best service out of them they ever had from an overshoe, and they don't cost any more than the ordinary kind.

Ahern's

Next Wednesday will be double stamp day because Thursday is Thanksgiving day. We will have in a big supply of all the good things to eat for Turkey day, fresh vegetables, fruits, nuts, candies, fresh cream, butter and eggs will all be here in good supply, Tuesday and Wednesday.

An easy way to make a year subscription to the Democrat. We want a complete list of business men and women and business enterprises in Wayne who are actively or passively engaged in any business or profession of whatever kind for gain or a livelihood, whose name does not appear in the Democrat of this week in connection with their business in an advertisement. For the best and most complete and correct list we will give a year subscription to the Democrat.

Clem E. Smith and wife, from Cleveland, Ohio came last week to visit at the home of his parents, R. K. Smith and wife, northwest of Wayne. This is Mr. Smith's first visit home for eleven years, and he is doubtless enjoying it to full extent, though weather and roads have not given opportunity to get about as much as desired. When he called at the Democrat office for a little chat, he seemed pleased that he is living in a state which gave a safe majority approving the policy of the present administration. He reports that these are busy days in the east.

Presbyterian Church
(Rev. S. Xenophon Cross, Pastor)
Thanksgiving will be appropriately observed at this church next Sunday evening.
The Sunday school has attained practically all the points in the standard. Help raise the attendance another notch by being in your place.
Mrs. Horace Theobald is preparing an excellent program of music for the THANKSGIVING service next Sunday evening. Remember the hour, 7:30. The big choir will sing and the new orchestra will play.
The theme of the sermon at the hour of Morning Worship will be: "A Living Sacrifice". There will be special music under the direction of Mrs. W. E. Johnson, chorister. All are cordially invited to worship with us. Come, planning to stay to the Bible School at 11:30 Morning Worship, 10:30.
Misses Esther McEachen and Dorothy Ellis will lead the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting at 6:30. The topic will be: "The Grace of Gratitude." This will be a THANKSGIVING meeting. Read the 107th Psalm. Visiting friends are always heartily welcome at these Sunday evening Christian Endeavor meetings. Miss Henrietta Moer will sing at this meeting.
The spirit of THANKSGIVING will pervade the atmosphere of this church throughout all of next Sunday's services. The crown and climax of the day, however, will be the great THANKSGIVING service of song and praise at 7:30. The pastor will preach on the text: "Remember, All the Way." Count your blessings as you come, and do not forget to reckon the privilege of this day.
Coming: The biggest event of the season. We refer to the Bazaar to be held in the Tabernacle Garage by the Ladies Aid Society. The date has been fixed. It is Saturday, December 2nd. This will be a good place to come for a good time and to secure your Christmas gifts for friends. This excellent organization is doing a great work and should be encouraged in it. Aside from that, everyone who attends the Bazaar will more than get value received for his time and money.—adv.

Methodist Church
(Rev. A. S. Bnell Pastor)
The sermon on our Church publications was listened to by an audience completely filling the auditorium, Sunday morning.
The interest in the Sabbath school also the attendance is steadily climbing towards the 250 mark. Every member of the church, and every attendant on the church services should be studying in the Sabbath school. Everyone bring a friend next Sunday.
Twenty members of the Sunday school board met in the Beckenhauer parlors Monday evening. Important business was transacted, and it was decided to hold the Christmas program the evening of December 24.
The Scouts will hold their meetings Sunday afternoons hereafter, in the Epworth League room of the church. They usually have a week night program also.
Do not forget that the girls too are much alive in our church. The girls of the King's Heralds had a delightful meeting in the Church Sunday afternoon. The Girls will give a candy sale at the Beckenhauer parlors Saturday, beginning at 2 p. m. Come and buy all kinds of home made candy.—adv.
The Intermediate League weekly add to their numbers. They are preparing to give a program in the church in the near future.
We are having splendid prayer meetings once more. Tell your

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Next Sunday's services will be at the usual hours, the morning preaching service at 10:30, followed by Sabbath school. Boy Scouts in the afternoon, Epworth and Intermediate Leagues at 6:30.
The pastor will preach an evangelistic sermon at 7:30. Everyone cordially invited to all these services.
The W. F. M. S. will meet with Miss Bressler Friday afternoon.
St. Paul's Lutheran Church
(Rev. J. H. Fetterolf, Pastor)
The Sunday school meets at 10 o'clock. Considering the bad roads, our attendance last Sunday was splendid. We lacked only a few of reaching the hundred mark. Our goal is set for a hundred or over for next Sunday and we can reach it if every scholar does his part.
There will be the usual preaching at 11 o'clock. This is the last Sunday of the church year and a sermon suited to the time will be preached.
The offering for Tabitha Orphan Home last Sunday was $20.00. The mute appeal of the orphan should always stir our hearts to liberality. If you were not prepared to give at that time you can give it to the pastor any time up to next Monday. The congregation will be given another opportunity to give to this worthy cause in the near future. This time the appeal will not be for money but for clothing, toys and canned fruits.
The Woman's Missionary society will have their annual Thanksgiving meeting at the church on Sunday evening. This will take the place of the evening preaching. A program has been prepared that should be interesting and instructive.
Union Thanksgiving services will be held in this church next Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.
A new organ for the church has been ordered and if nothing delays the shipment it should be here in time for use during the holiday season.
The fourth group of the Aid society will conduct a food exchange at Dear's Meat Market next Saturday afternoon.
Luther League topic "Thou Crownest the Year", meeting at 6:45 p. m. The young people are urged to attend.

RUNDELL'S COLUMN

Yes, I went to hear the Rev. Gaston's sermon to the disappointment. He said that his Bible text was a command to be loyal to those in authority politically, not spiritual. Had his advice been adopted in the campaign instead of listening to the knocking birds, Mr. Gaston would have had no mourners to console.
Evidently Mr. Hughes pinned his hopes to the at other scriptural promise, knock and the white house shall be open to you.
A prediction that hard time was liable to follow the close of the world war was the only ray of hope offered to sooth the aching hearts of the disappointed. With his knowledge of political history to which his party is such a stranger, he should have told them that in 1833 weary of defeat it changed its name from Federalist to Whig and in 1854 being as they now are without an issue changed its name again to Republican. The Democratic party then was plutocratic and like the G. O. P. in 1912 deemed its self big enough to run two candidates, and lost.
As the democrats have legislated tariff out of politics, the time has come for another change of name and an issue. National prohibition is the burning question but the mighty Bryan has the first mortgage on that. A few more dry states and his nomination is certain. And the same states that elected Wilson will elect him.
The mistakes of Moses are trifling compared to the mistakes of the G. O. P. managers in the late campaign. That billion dollar Diamond Special to instruct the "ignorant" ladies of the west how to vote that they might wear diamonds proved the downfall of their candidate.
It afforded Bryan a golden text from which to lambast them with his scathing sarcasm and ridicule that delivered the electoral vote of twelve republican states including Kansas to Woodrow Wilson and he is being showered with congratulations from cabinet officers and hundreds of prominent democrats with hearty thanks and conceding him the honor of not only nominating Wilson at Baltimore, but of electing him in 1916.

C. J. Rundell.

Reform Spelling

Owing to the high price of print paper and the fact that good common sense dictates a reform the Democrat will hereafter use the following spelling for adozen words adopted by the National Educational and the National Editorial associations, and which are now in use in papers with a combined circulation of over 14,000,000. It makes a saving of 31 letters when compared with the old spelling. To be sure we may slip over on some occasions, but hope not to do so. Here are the words; new and old orthography:
Tho—though, altho—although, thru—through, thruout—throughout, thoro—thorough, thoro—thoroughly, thorefare—thoroughfare, program—programme, prolog—prologue, catalog—catalogue, pedagog—pedagogue, decalog—decalogue.
Speaking of importations, Bradstreet's last issue says that a cargo of Argentine corn has been received at Peoria, Illinois, right in the heart of the corn belt of the greatest corn growing land on earth, our Egypt. Bradstreet says it is because our people are making more money in manufacturing and other enterprises than they can grow corn, and hence we are glad to see the foe! come to our hungry (and dry) people, perhaps being it is Peoria) because they can pay for it easier in manufactured goods than we can raise it—and that is what makes a people rich.

Union Thanksgiving Services

Will be held at the English Lutheran church on Thanksgiving eve., Wednesday, November 29th. Rev. Fetterolf will preach the sermon. The committee is planning for a large union choir.
See the Democrat for wedding invitations.

A Story from the Saturday Evening Post
Illustrating the Practical Applica-

Loan Law

"What do you think about it?"
said I.

"Well," said William, "the whole thing was designed to look good and it does look good, but whether it is good or not is another thing. What do you say about writing to the Farm Loan Board, at Washington, and asking them for blanks and other things? They'll know what we want."

"They may," said I, "but unless we know, I don't see how they can. This act provides for two ways of getting money out of a new kind of privately owned bank or through cooperative associations of borrowers. I don't believe there's a privately owned land bank in this state yet that is chartered under the act, and we certainly haven't a cooperative organization of borrowers, and I don't suppose we ever will have. We aren't much on cooperation here."

"Let's see," said William, "it takes 10 borrowers to start an association. If I could find the other nine we would have one."

"Well," said I, "I will reduce the necessary number to eight."

"Are you looking for a loan?" said he.

"Yes," said I, "but I didn't know you were."

"Well, I am," said he. "My brother and I own this farm, and I have got to buy him out. I want to make some improvements, too."

"Let's do a little detective work," said I. "If we will just take up the neighbors around here, one by one, we can come pretty near telling who really needs a loan."

"Why," said he, "anybody needs one of these loans rather than a straight old-fashioned mortgage. These loans can run for 10, 15, 20 and even as high as 40 years, and they are paid off gradually by annual installments or annual dues—just a few dollars a year."

"I'd have had my $2,000 paid off years ago if I could have paid a little on the principal every time I paid the interest," I said, "but I did not have the face to offer the bank $25 or $30, and I never could save up the two or three hundred and I thought were as little as the bank would like to take."

"Now, listen," said he, "you and I are both thinking of the same thing—organizing one of these National Farm Loan Associations. The thing for us to do is to find out how it is done and then get the neighbors interested until we have eight more men or more who would rather have money at 5 per cent than 6 per cent—and maybe we can get it for less than 5—and who prefer to put their mortgages in shape so that they can pay them off after 5 years or let them run for 40 if they wish, and if they do let them run from 30 to 40 years will have them paid off by paying every year only about the same amount they would pay on their present mortgages as interest without getting any credit at all on the principal."

"Yes," said I, dubiously.
"Charlie," said he, "if we don't succeed in doing this thing we don't deserve to have cheap money or easy terms. It looks to me as if the Government had done its share and had opened the opportunity for the farmers to help themselves. If we can not help ourselves we're no good. Are you willing to admit that we're no good? Well, I'm not, and I'm going to work on this proposition of organizing a National Farm Loan Association right here in this neighborhood—now and I want you to help me."

"William," said I, "I am with you."

And this was how our National Farm Loan Association was started.

Farmers are a pretty conservative class. They must be; for new things are experiments, and the farmer who tries an experiment on anything but the smallest scale is sure, if it fails to sink in it all the profits from much larger operations. This being the mental attitude of the neighbors, Will Allen and I had our work cut out for us in persuading them to consider the matter of forming a National Farm Loan Association. It seemed sort of presuming on our part to dive right in and plunge on a new system. But we were convinced, and we worked to convince our friends on five points:

(1) Land-owning farmers can, under the Federal farm loan act, procure mortgage loans much easier than at commercial banks. This is because the commercial banks need to keep their money at command all the time, and ought not to be asked to loan much money on farm mortgages.

(2) The rate of interest will be lower under the Federal farm loan act than it has been, and more uniform all over the country. This is because the law enables great quantities of farm loan bonds to be sold in denominations of from $25 to several hundred dollars, and thus even poor people will be able to invest in farm loans. These bonds will be early sought for by investors, small and large, because each of them, instead of depending on the success or failure of one particular farmer is based on the general success of farms all over the country, and it can never be that all farms are failures. There is a guaranty fund back of the mortgage, in the form of the capital of the local association, and each one is not only guaranteed by the local National Farm Loan Association, that indorses it, but by the bond of a great Federal Land Bank, taking in one-twelfth of the United States. Each bond is not only guaranteed by this Federal Land Bank, but is indorsed by 11 others just as good.

In other words, no farm-loan bond under the Federal farm-loan act can be unsafe unless all the farm-loan bonds made under it all over the United States are unsafe. Therefore they will command the lowest rate of interest that the lender is willing to accept on a perfectly safe security, which is not taxable. That last feature ought to help a good deal. Interest rates ought to be much more uniform, because the safety is uniform; and the Federal Land Banks ought to have no difficulty in reaching loanable money, wherever it exists. That has been the trouble in our neighborhood; money that wanted to invest itself in farm loans either didn't know of our local needs or was too far away to care for dealings with us.

(3) The farmer himself may choose how long a time his mortgage shall run; and may pay off in whole or in part at will after five years. This is a great advantage, as every one of the neighbors could see.

Mr. Peterson, who was one of the last we canvassed, said that he wanted to make a long-time loan on the a mortization plan, but that there was always a possibility that he would come into some money, which he might get next year or might not receive for 30 years, or might never get. If he got it, he wanted to pay off the loan whenever he had the money, or make partial payments as low as $25 he decided on a loan that would be paid off in 36 years by paying 6 per cent a year. This feature of the Federal farm-loan act seemed to appeal to everybody. It provides so many easy methods of repaying the loan.

(4) The Federal farm-loan act provides for those who are not landowners but who are in shape to become owners of producing farms by getting loans.

(5) There isn't a lot of red tape to be tied, untied, unraveled, and bothered with.

That was hard to understand at first. We were afraid the thing would be so complicated that it would be too much for us, but we found it was as easy as rolling off a log—provided we had good security and wanted the money for purposes that are proper under the law.

It really was fun after we got into the business. It was hard to get some in, because they were timid as to the effect it would have on the holders of their present loans.

"What if we don't get these loans after all?" asked Mrs. A. L. White, who had been struggling with $400 mortgages since her husband's death. "Suppose the folks who have mortgages that we are planning to pay off get mad when they find we are forming a National Farm Loan Association and call in our loans, and then we fall down on getting the money?"

"We won't fall down," said Will Allen. "The Federal Land Bank has the money to begin business with, and after business is begun we'll have no difficulty. They don't have any in other countries. We may not get quite so cheap money as we hope to do; but we'll get the money. Besides, the people who hold the mortgages aren't that sort. What they'll do is to begin buying the Federal farm loan bonds. And, though they won't get quite so much interest, maybe, they'll have less trouble and will own something that they can sell or borrow on anywhere—no foreclosures, and a great Government system of land banks to do business with, instead of wondering whether you and I, and Charlie, here, are going to be on the dot with our interest. It isn't going to make anyone mad; and it won't make any difference if it does. This thing is not going to fail. You trust Uncle Sam, Mrs. White!"

But Mrs. White didn't come in. She said she knew where she stood under the old mortgage, and as she didn't want to borrow any more she thought she'd let bad enough alone.

It took just about a week to get 10 of us together, who rather thought we'd go into the thing and form a National Farm Loan Association. Will Allen said, though, that some always dropped out at the last minute because of cold feet, or something else and we had better get plenty while the getting was good. So we went on and collected the names of seven more. It looked as if we should have 20 members by the time we got our charter; for, though it was true that there are always some who will drop out when you are obliged to have them, it is equally certain that some will come in unexpectedly when you can get along without them. Human beings are made that way.

It was a rather exciting time when we had our meeting for the purpose of organizing. We meant to use the schoolhouse, but it was so pretty out in Smith's woods that we went over there. We decided this the day before the meeting, and sent the word round so the women could bring something along to eat and drink; and we had one of the busiest and pleasantest picnics I ever attended.

Ira Daniels brought his notary public's seal and a little typewriter; and we studied the Federal farm loan act and drew the papers accordingly. Ira is a notary public and has been a justice of the peace; but I believe Will Allen or Miss Scott, the teacher, could have drawn the papers just as well—all but the affidavits. We had to have the notary's seal on them. All we had to do was to say in the paper we signed that we desired to borrow money under the provisions of the Federal farm loan act, and did by the signing thereof enter into articles of agreement for the purpose of forming a National Farm Loan Association, to carry on its business in Walnut Township, county and State aforesaid, and vicinity.

We made the articles pretty brief, though we had the right to adopt any regulations we chose not contrary to law, but we felt that if we put nothing into them except what was necessary there would be no question as to their correctness. We all signed these articles and elected a board of six directors. In doing this we followed the methods prescribed by law for the election of national bank directors. We had a copy of the national banking act for this purpose. The Federal farm loan act requires this method of electing directors.

The directors were William Allen, James Peterson, F. J. Willcox, M. B. Smith, Alexander Pendleton, and myself. I suppose I was put on because I had taken such a deep interest in the association; but the rest were selected because they were the most responsible and safest men we had. It is an office that carries responsibility, but no salary; so the people were free to pick the best without any electioneering. Ira Daniels was elected secretary-treasurer at a salary of 30 cents an hour for time actually spent on our work. He suggested this scale of payment himself. Ira was elected by the board of directors in the presence of the meeting—or the picnic. William Allen was made president in the same public way, and F. J. Willcox vice president.

The loan committee was made up of old Mr. Alexander Pendleton—who had moved into our neighborhood after being in the real estate and loan business in the city for years—M. B. Smith, and myself. We put Mr. Pendleton on this committee because he is so cautious. He would keep the rest of us from taking chances on approving poor loans. There is no sort of use in being anything but safe in approving loans, for if we approved too large a one, or one for an unwise or illegal purpose, the Government appraiser would turn it down anyhow, as he ought, of course. If each loan is made safe the whole system will be like the Rock of Gibraltar.

Well, we gave the secretary-treasurer, Ira Daniels, the duplicate of the articles of association. After the loan committee had made a written report, stating that each of us was a landowner, or was about to become a landowner in this neighborhood, and how much money we wanted to borrow—and after we had each made affidavit according to law as to our loans—the whole bunch of papers was sent to the Federal Land Bank in our district. The formation of the association took some little effort, as I have stated, but it really didn't absorb much of our time, because we did most of the canvassing in town on Saturdays, and when we met our neighbors driving along the road or went to see them evenings. And after the association was actually formed, coming into it was easy. As a matter of fact, Ira Daniels does most of the work.

Where Johnson made a blunder. The present Blackfriars bridge is a comparatively modern structure, which replaced the bridge of Robert Mylne after the latter had endured, with much alteration and repair, it is true, for nearly a hundred years. Mylne's design, it will be recalled by those familiar with their Boswell, was attacked by Johnson with that arrogance and, let me sadly add, ignorance which he was too wont to display in subjects of which he knew very little. Johnson, with a weight of words which might have tested any bridge, declared that no structure with elliptical arches could bear heavy weights. Mylne's bridge has gone, but the elliptical form of arch remains, and very beautiful it is and adequate for a weight of traffic of which Johnson never dreamed.—Westminster Gazette.

For a similar reason Lake Trastmene has borne the name "Sanguelac" because its waters were reddened during the second Punic war by the blood of some 15,000 Romans who fell before the troops of Hannibal.

The Little Fruit Seller

A Story of a Mexican Girl

By F. A. MITCHEL.

One afternoon Leonard Hardman, a young man who had gone to Mexico to assume a position as station agent on a railroad, was in his ticket and telegraph office when he saw a little Mexican girl on the platform outside selling fruit to persons waiting for trains. The girl might have been fifteen, though in the short dress she wore she looked like a child. Among others she approached a man who, judged by the leather whip in his hand, was a driver of a team. He was talking to another man, and when the girl nudged him to attract his attention he looked down at her with a scowl, then gave her a cut with his whip.

Hardman was a strapping fellow, used to fighting his way wherever it became necessary and with enough humanity in him to feel enraged at so inhuman an act. He jumped through the open window beside him and, taking the teamster by the collar of his shirt with one hand, gave him a cuff with the other. The man put his hand to his hip, drew a revolver and fired at Hardman, but the latter grasped the weapon in time to turn the shot, wrenched it from the man and threw it to a distance. Then he pummeled his adversary with his fist till he cried for quarter. By this time others interfered, and the two were separated. The teamster picked up his revolver and his whip and went away, muttering.

Hardman when he had rearranged his disordered apparel returned to his office. The first thing that attracted his attention was the little Mexican girl standing on the platform before his window holding out an orange to him. Taking some coppers from his vest pocket, he handed them to her and took the orange, but she refused pay for the fruit. It was only an orange, but it was a token of her gratitude to her defender.

"Senior is very good," she said, expressing emotion with her fringed eyes. "You mean the other fellow is very bad," he replied. "What's your name, little one?"

"Pepta."

"Well, Pepta, if he troubles you again call on me."

"Senior is very brave, but to be brave against such a man will do no good; he will stab you in the back."

"Don't you worry, little girl," he returned. "That kind of a man is a coward, and I'm not afraid of a coward any day."

The awful was lost on Pepta. She said nothing more and showed no concern, but from that time the teamster was seldom out of her sight when he was watching Hardman. She went about selling fruit as usual, but in her basket was something besides oranges and bananas; a bag in which some living creature was evidently confined, for there was a constant wriggling within.

A few days after the fracas between Hardman and the teamster Pepta was following the latter toward the station. The man lounged along without any evident purpose, but he did not deceive Pepta. She fitted after him, now slipping behind a bush, a fence—any object of concealment.

When the man stepped up on to the platform, snatching her bag from the basket she made a dash for him, on tiptoe so that he might not hear her coming, and caught him just as he reached the window of Hardman's office. There she shook the bag bottom side up, landing a tarantula on the back of the enemy's neck. The villain uttered a yell and, dropping a revolver he carried in his hand, grabbed the viper and flung it away from him.

Meanwhile Pepta had darted back behind a corner of the station, where she was out of sight. Hardman hearing the yell looked out through the window in time to see the teamster beating a retreat. He recognized the teamster who had maltreated Pepta, but was ignorant of the cause of his flight, holding both hands to the back of his neck. Presently Hardman saw Pepta walking away with her basket on her arm as carelessly as if she had no object in view but the sale of her fruit. He called her to the window and asked her if she knew what was the matter with the teamster. For a reply she pointed to where the tarantula was crawling about.

"Well?" inquired Hardman.

"Senior, he come to kill you. I follow him. Just before he come to the window I put the tarantula on his neck."

Hardman looked grave. He had escaped being shot through the window by such defense as this little Mexican girl was capable of. It was not a man's method, but it had sufficed. A mere child had sent a strong man away howling and saved the life of another strong man whom he had intended to kill. This was too much for Hardman's equipoise of feeling. He reached out through the window, took the girl in his arms and drew her close to him.

Hardman was twenty-seven years old, and Pepta was fourteen. Had he not been a stranger to Mexico he would have realized that a girl of thirteen there was as developed as one of twenty in a more northern climate. He crossed her in a fatherly way, and she received his caresses apparently as a child. He asked her if there was not something she needed that he could give her, but she declared that there was nothing. This surprised him, for never before had he met one of the peasantry of the country who would decline a gift. Indeed, many of them did not even confine their acceptances to gifts.

Hardman sent Pepta away after extracting a promise from her that she would not attempt thereafter to defend him against any attack from his enemy, but in case she suspected the man of being about to attack him at a disadvantage she might warn him.

Pepta made the promise with an innocent mien as if she fully intended to keep it. Conscience was a matter that did not concern her. She was a child of nature, governed entirely by her emotions. As for a truth or a lie, that was simply a matter of requirement. How she kept her promise is best illustrated by the next episode in her eventful childhood, though perhaps, despite her few years, she was already a woman.

The teamster disappeared for a time. He was fighting the poison of a tarantula bite. He recovered in time, but he knew who had put the viper on him and feared her. One thing that deterred him from making another attempt on Hardman's life was the fact that Pepta was a witness that he had tried to murder the man he hated. He had counted on doing the deed without the murderer being known, but now he was aware that the little Mexican girl was watching him. He did not often see her, but felt sure that her eyes were constantly on him.

And so they were. One night he was improvising a hand grenade. He was working in a hut where he lived with a ragged curtain over the window. There was a tear in it, and through that tear Pepta was peeping. When he had finished his weapon he began to destroy certain articles. The crafty girl surmised that he was intending to kill Hardman with his bomb, then light out. He was evidently afraid of his grenade, for before going to bed he took it outside, scooped out a small hole in the ground, put it in and covered it with earth and leaves.

As soon as all was quiet in the cabin Pepta possessed herself of the bomb and carried it away. Coming to a window within which was a bright light, she examined her find, a tobacco box with explosive contents. She had seen the teamster place percussion powder under a certain point in the side of the box and mark it with a cross. She noted the cross, and returning to the cabin with the weapon which she knew was intended for Hardman, she scraped out just enough earth before the door to set the box in, leaving its crossed side uppermost and nearly on a level with the ground. Then she placed dry leaves over it.

The next day a report was heard, and later persons passing the teamster's cabin found it a wreck. The occupant was missing. Supposing that he had been killed or injured by the force that ruined his home, a search was made for him, but neither he nor any part of him was found.

For a time Pepta said nothing to any one as to her part in the explosion, but as time passed and the teamster did not reappear she revealed the secret that she had seen him making a bomb. Then it was surmised that it had been accidentally exploded, but that he had not been within striking distance. How the explosion came about without his being its victim was not known to any one except Pepta, who, remembering where she had placed the bomb, was enabled to look more directly than others for the cause. At the time of the explosion there had been a violent windstorm.

Pepta, looking for the cause of the explosion, cast her eye on the limb of a tree that had been broken. The detached fragment she found some distance from the cabin blackened as if by an explosion. She felt sure that this fragment had been blown down upon the bomb. The explosion occurred in the daytime when the teamster was away, so that he was not injured. But it is likely that when he saw his cabin blown to atoms he surmised the cause and concluded that it was time for him to depart.

Meanwhile Pepta was wandering about selling fruit apparently as unconcernedly as if she were not mixed up in an affair of a tragic nature. Every one else in that region was discussing the matter of the explosion, but the little Mexican seemed content to carry her basket about, taking in a few coppers at a time for an orange or a banana, paying no attention to the talk.

There was one who looked upon Pepta with very different feelings from the generality of persons; that was Leonard Hardman. He had learned that she was not a child, but a woman; that she loved him with all the passion of a girl of the south. He questioned her about the explosion and had learned the facts. Twice he owed her his life. What was he to do? Respond to the passion of a Mexican girl, but little more than a child and a fruit peddler?

Notwithstanding her ignoble position the fact that she had been so devoted to him affected him seriously. His life belonged to her. Without her protection he would not be living. After much thought he came to a conclusion.

"Pepta," he said one day, "how would you like to go to school?"

She looked at him inquiringly.

"If you go to school you and I might some day be more to each other than we are," he added.

"Yes, senior; I will go to school."

This proposition and its acceptance were the keynote to the future of these two persons. Pepta went to school, and there came a remarkable change in her. She is now Senora Hardman. She worships her husband and he worships her.

Union Stock Yards, South Omaha, Nebraska, November 22, 1916.—A moderate run of cattle showed up for Tuesday, some 316 cars, or about 9,000 head being reported in up to noon. On the more desirable grades, such as all classes of buyers were after, prices were somewhat stronger in cases, but on the short-fed and warmed-up steers it was a rather irregular and uncertain deal. Really choice heaves were very scarce, but right good beef cattle brought $9.80@10.30. Fair to pretty good 1,050 to 1,300-pound cattle sold around $8.50@9.50. Supplies of cows and heifers were not very extensive, but the demand from both packers and outside butchers was very good.

Quotations on cattle: Good to choice yearlings, $9.75@11.00; good to choice heaves, $9.50@10.25; fair to good heaves, $8.50@9.25; common to fair, $7.50@8.25; good to choice heifers, $6.75@7.50; good to choice cows, $6.50@7.25; fair to good cows, $5.75@6.50; canners and cutters, $4.25@5.50; veal calves, $8.00@10.00; bologna bulls, $5.00@5.50; beef bulls, $5.50@6.75.

The largest run of hogs for the season to date put in its appearance Tuesday, when 196 cars, or some 14,500 head were reported in. General conditions were much reversed, and an upturn was noted all along the line. Buyers made concessions fairly early, and desirable hogs, especially the weightier grades, started moving early at 5@10c higher prices.

A decent run of sheep and lambs showed up for Tuesday, some fifty-eight cars or 13,000 head. The fat lamb trade was a little more active than on Monday, but it was well along in the forenoon before much of an idea could be gained of what the general market would be. While the first packer offers were in most cases a little better than steady, buyers had to raise their hands before they were able to do much, and when first lambs sold it was on a 10@15c higher basis. A number of sales were reported as high as $11.75 before 11 o'clock.

Quotations on sheep and lambs: Lambs, good to choice, $11.50@11.80; lambs, fair to good, $11.10@11.50; lambs, feeders, $9.50@10.80; yearlings, good to choice, $9.00@9.75; yearlings, fair to good, $7.75@8.75; yearlings, feeders, $7.00@8.00; wethers, fair to choice, $7.00@8.50; ewes, good to choice, $7.50@7.75; ewes, fair to good, $6.50@7.50; ewes, plain to culls, $4.00@5.75; ewes, feeding, $4.50@6.25; ewes, breeders, all ages, $6.00@8.50.

Barrie and "Peter Pan."

The birth of J. M. Barrie's play, "Peter Pan," was full of romantic interest. Barrie had agreed to write a play for Frohman and met him at dinner one night at the Garrick club in London. Barrie seemed nervous and ill at ease.

"What's the matter?" said Charles.

"Simply this," said Barrie. "You know I have an agreement to deliver you the manuscript of a play?"

"Yes," said Frohman.

"Well, I have it all right," said Barrie, "but I am sure it will not be a commercial success. It is a dream child of mine, and I am so anxious to see it on the stage that I have written another play which I will be glad to give you and which will compensate you for any loss on the one I am so eager to see produced."

"Don't bother about that," said Frohman. "I will produce both plays."

Now, the extraordinary thing about this episode is that the play about whose success Barrie was so doubtful was "Peter Pan," which made several fortunes. The manuscript he offered Frohman to indemnify him from loss was "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire," which lasted only a season.—Charles Frohman, Manager and Man.

Married Money.

"Glad to see you looking so well, old man," said the friend of a newly made benedict. "This is the first opportunity I have had of offering my congratulations on your recent marriage. From the look of things I guess you've married money. Well, it was the right thing to do. That shop waiting berth of yours must have been awfully boring. Is she in? I should like to be introduced."

"Oh, she's at work," said the husband, with a placid smile.

"At work? What do you mean?" asked the friend.

"Well, you see, it was this way," replied the benedict. "She had a much better position than mine—head of her department, $8 a week. Wouldn't give it up. So there was nothing for it but for me to return from business and keep house, and here I am, you see. You have to let women have their way in some things."—London Tit-Bits.
