FIRST FREEZE OCTOBER 8

Monday morning all garden vegetation which had not been put to bed the night before in heavy blankets, met its Waterloo. It was the first frost, and it was sufficient. We did not need another one to convince the most skeptical that we had a frost. The mercury registered as low as twenty degrees below the freezing point. Tomatoes that had not been taken in out of the cold were frosted, and the plants sprang green and thrifty the day before withered in the morning sun as tho they had been clipped with a sickle.

It is seldom that the first frost has come later than this year and it did but little damage. Most of the corn was well out of danger, a few re-planted fields did not get in the clear, and would not have done so in the kind of weather we are apt to have in October.

L. C. DAVIS

L. C. Davis died at his home at Minneapolis, Minnesota, Monday after a brief illness. Mr. Davis married a Wayne girl, Miss Jennie Gaertner, two years ago and is well known here. Mrs. Davis spent some time this summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Gaertner. The young folks had recently moved into their own home and was comfortably settled when death took away the young husband. Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Gaertner went to Minneapolis to attend the funeral.

Rev. and Mrs. Gordon of the Baptist church left this morning to visit at Grand Island and attend the state convention at Hastings a little later.

DID YOU GET THAT LIBERTY LOAN BOND?

Wayne county will soon have an organization perfected whereby every man in the county will be reached and asked to buy a Liberty Loan bond. At the time Uncle Sam made the first plea for help there were many people who did not understand just why the loan had been asked. Now, thanks to one of the most thorough advertising campaigns ever planned everybody understands, and it remains only for the committees to do their part and the rest will be easy for Uncle Sam to get and there is plenty of it in Nebraska. This is one of the grandest ways to do your bit—let Uncle Sam have some of your surplus money until we have won this war and he will hand it back to you with interest and the thanks of a grateful people. The allotment for Wayne county is $280,200. The minimum asked from the state of Nebraska is $29,692,400 and the maximum is $49,200,000. The bankers tell us that the outlook in Wayne county is encouraging and that the amount asked will not be hard to get. The great necessity of our government is understood and the call to Wayne county people will meet with a ready response.

Following are the committees appointed:

A. E. Gildersleeve, Brenna; Geo. Farran, Chapin; Dan Davis, Deer Creek; C. W. Anderson, Garfield; Sam Rbw, Hancock; F. S. Benson, Hoskins; S. B. Aufer, Hunter; C. A. Killian, Leslie; G. W. Alstrope, Laramie; Wm. Assenheimer, Plum Creek; C. O. Sellon, Sherman; Aug. Wittler, Strahan; Walt Gabler, Winside. The city of Wayne as follows: First ward, Clyde Oman; second ward, J. H. Massie; third ward, H. B. Craven. These men will each have assistants that the work can be done as quickly as possible.

CHRISTMAS BOX SUGGESTIONS

The Red Cross has sent out suggestions for preparing Christmas packets for American soldiers, how to be made, wrapped, and what to put in.

Chapters will receive direction as to the date when the packets should be shipped to France and also as to the dates when those intended for the home cantonments should be ready for distribution.

"Money for these gifts is not to be taken from Red Cross funds but should be contributed by individuals for this specific purpose."

Mrs. Lindsay, director of Women's Work for Nebraska, states that quilts made of cotton scraps, either in full size or one yard square for the babies in France, will be acceptable. These can be shipped with other hospital supplies.

There are many varieties of work offered to all who are willing to help in the Red Cross service for "Home and Humanity."

Let us each one find something to do and do it with a will.

BRINGING IN THE CATTLE

Last week John Shannon loaded 90 cars of cattle in the western part of the state, more than 2,000 head, for feeding in this part of Nebraska. They arrived here the first of the week, and 1,100 head went to the Butler people at Magnet; four ears went to Mr. Shannon's farm near Carroll; Wm. and Lloyd Gildersleeve took 240 head; Ted Perry 190 head; Frank Strahan 110 young animals; Wm. Watson 31 head; and a number of ears went to Omaha and Sioux City for distribution from those points. Mr. Shannon still has about 1,000 head to bring in from the range yet this month.

FOOT BALL NEWS

The foot ball team from the Normal went over to Yankton, South Dakota, Saturday and were trimmed up right by the college team at that place. When the smoke cleared away the score stood 71 to 0 in favor of our friends across the river. We are just getting a line-up for this season, and could not expect boys who have never even watched a game of foot ball to match up with Yankton's crack team. We have good material at the Normal this year and Prof. Brenaman will undoubtedly get some good work out of them. Wednesday evening they went to Laurel for a practice game and will put in all their spare time to get in trim to have a 50-50 match with Yankton later in the year.

Miss Dolliver has had a great deal of experience in many lines of work for women and her address was full of information as well as inspiration. She told of how the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense came to be organized, the plan of organization, its object, of the work the woman's committee has already done, what it is doing at the present time, and what it hopes to accomplish in the future. Much was said along the line of food conservation.

The days of the big ranch in Nebraska are rapidly nearing an end. The famous "Grass Ranch" of 2,237 acres has just been sold in small tracts by its owner, Robert Lucas. The ranch brought $238,785, or an average of $106.60 an acre. It was sold in 20, 40, and 80 acre tracts to suit the purchasers. Most of the tracts were purchased by near by farmers, the majority of them purchasing for their sons. And as an evidence of Nebraska prosperity, more than 75 per cent of the purchasers paid spot cash. Hoskins Headlight.

ARTICLES MADE FOR RED CROSS ARE NOT SOLD.

The following statement has been issued by Harvey D. Gibson, General Manager of the American Red Cross: "A story is being circulated to the effect that sweaters, socks, and other articles knitted for the Red Cross are being sold, either to the public in shops or direct to the soldiers. This is emphatically not true. No articles whatever, either knitted or otherwise made by Red Cross workers and turned in to any any Red Cross Chapter, Branch, or Auxiliary, or to any supply warehouse, are sold either to the soldiers or in shops."

"If any wilful case of this sort should come to the attention of headquarters, the Charter of the Red Cross Chapter or subsidiary sanctioning it would be immediately withdrawn with full publicity. Should it transpire that an actual instance of the above character occurred wherein an individual sold articles after their having been turned in to the Red Cross, such action would be clearly in violation of the fundamental law covering the Red Cross, and we would take vigorous steps to prosecute the offender."

"It is also true that any case of persons, other than those acquiring the right prior to January, 1905, using the name or emblem of the Red Cross to assist in the sale of merchandise, is a violation of the provisions of the federal criminal law, and the offender should be reported to the United States district attorney for prosecution."

"There is no way to prevent people from making the same type of articles as are produced by Red Cross workers and selling them for their own advantage, thus subjecting the Red Cross to unjust criticism. Should they use the name or emblem of the Red Cross in connection with such sales, however, they will be vigorously prosecuted."

DWIGHT N. CONNABLE DEAD

Word comes from Vivian, South Dakota, that Dwight N. Connable, formerly of this place passed away October 2nd. He was a man of about 70 years of age, and lived at Wayne 25 years ago, farming what is now Roosevelt Park, and supplying the people with milk. One of his former patrons tells us that he was a peculiar and popular man, and his morning greeting referred to the weather and any bit of news which happened to be uppermost in his mind, always ending with "pint or quart, this morning."

He was born at Battleboro, Vermont, and was a member of the A. O. U. W. at this place, and retained his membership until his death.

BITTEN BY A DOG

Joe Munsinger had the misfortune to have his lip bitten by the family dog the first of the week, cutting it open so that it required several stitches when he went to the local hospital to have the gap closed. The dog was in the auto, and Joe went to take him out and the animal represented the attempt and snapped Joe's lip. The wound is doing nicely, and will soon be well.

LaFollette has made plenty of enemies who will be willing to have him fired from the senate, even though they agree with his peace talk, and would do the government worse than the senator, if they dared.

The new three cent stamp which we will have to begin using next month, should buy the kaiser's picture on the gummed side, then we would have the satisfaction of "licking Bill" every time we had to pay the extra cost of sending a letter.

Governor Neville is to resign from his office if the war continues until the Nebraska 7th regiment shall be called. That is the way the state is now made. That's another reason for wanting the kaiser to surrender. Governor Neville is needed as badly at the head of affairs of state as at the head of regiment in France, as we look at it. He is giving us a good business administration.

In England the people are planning to provide land for the soldiers who return from the war. It might be wise to think along that line in this country of much land and too few owners. We favor a graduated land tax, putting at least a double tax on land not used by the owner, in order that the owner who does not use it will sell it to some one who will own and use it. Small owned farms well tilled would add millions to the wealth of Wayne county, and every other community in a good agricultural country.

Congress has adjourned. It did some good things, and some not so good, and left undone some things it might have done. One thing it failed to do was to measure up to the standard in the conscription of the government's full share of the wealth now being amassed as "war profits." Take from war the profit and you take from many an incentive to bring about conditions which will lead to war. "The love of money is the root of all evil" has been said by one who is credited as a wise one. It is a simple statement of fact and that frequently takes a wise man to state it tersely and concisely.

SOCIAL NOTES

Mrs. W. A. Hiscox Entertains
The W. A. Hiscox home was the scene of a delightful party Monday afternoon when Mrs. Hiscox invited a party of elderly ladies to help her celebrate Grandma Hiscox eighty-fifth birthday. Mrs. J. E. Hufford assisted the hostess. The home was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves and flowers. The afternoon was spent knitting and telling tales of by-gone days. A delicious two-course luncheon was served. The table was decorated with a huge white birthday cake with the word "Mother" and the date "October 8, 1917," put on in red sugar icing.

The afternoon was one to stay long in the memory of those present and they wished Grandma Hiscox many more such happy birthdays. Places were laid for sixteen guests. Beside Grandma Hiscox there were the following guests: Mesdames J. W. Mason, John Morgan, R. Craven, H. M. Crawford, J. M. Ross, M. A. Pryor, Margaret Bush, Lucy Rosa, S. E. Auker, Kila Land, T. W. Alter, A. T. Witter, Anna Springer, Armstrong and Grandma Davies. Out of town guests were Mrs. Lucy Rosa of Arlington and Mrs. Anna Springer of Fremont. The oldest present was Mrs. Davies who is in her ninety-third year. Mrs. Wm. Fleetwood and Grandma Reynolds could not be present on account of sickness.

Grandma Hiscox received many gifts of flowers and other tokens of remembrance. She is a dear old lady with a smile for everyone. Physically as strong as she was at sixty, living her declining years radiating a cheerfulness that is contagious. It must be a wonderful source of satisfaction to realize, when the tide of life is ebbing, that one can say, "The hour of departure is at hand. I have kept the faith. I have finished my course, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord shall give me in the last day, but not to me only but to all those that love his appearance."

The Democrat trusts that Grandma Hiscox may have many more happy birthdays.

The Minerva club met Monday with Mrs. Henry Ley. This program was the first to take up the real work of the year. Mrs. F. S. Berry was the leader and she proved her efficiency. She gave a brief outline of the year's work founded on "Women in Science" by Mozsans. The subject covers the strides women have taken from the time of ancient Greece up to the present day. It also dealt with the education and social status of Grecian women. Mrs. Berry is an interesting speaker and her talk was enjoyed very much. Mrs. J. G. W. Lewis gave a pleasing talk on the subject of "Woman's National Council of Defense." Mrs. Lewis is a patriotic little lady and is deeply interested in any work for our country's good at this time. Mrs. House read a poem written by an American soldier in France. She also told about the author and origin of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Miss Holland, a returned missionary from Malasta, was a guest. At the close of the meeting it was voted that at the next meeting each member should hem a towel for the Red Cross. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Chas. Craven.

The D. A. R. will meet with Mrs. V. L. Dayton, Saturday, October 13th.

SHOLES SAYINGS
Rev. McKenzie of Carroll was a very interesting visitor at the A. M. Helt home last Friday afternoon. Mrs. Lotgen sang two very pretty solos. Mrs. Geo. Fortner and Miss Redmond gave readings. A paper by Mrs. J. H. Boyce on "The Moral and Physical needs of One Day's Rest in Seven" was very good and was greatly enjoyed. Mrs. Win. Beekenhauer led discussion on "The Child and His Money." It was a subject that interested mothers especially and all took part in the discussion. Mrs. A. M. Helt played several selection on the Victrola. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Carroll Bruner Friday, October 19.

A Family Reunion
On Friday of last week a family reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Merriman, all of the brothers' and sisters' being present. They were B. J. Agler of Thornton, Iowa; S. C. Agler of Marathon, Iowa; J. W. Agler of Winside; Mrs. C. E. Hunter of Wakeland; and Mrs. Elmira Merriman and Mrs. Henry Merriman of Wayne. Other out of town guests were Fred Agler and son Orlo of Dows, Iowa and Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Hoydar of Crofton, Twenty-six friends and relatives were present.

Saturday afternoon Mrs. L. A. Fanske entertained in honor of little Miss Margaret Elizabeth's fifth birthday. Mrs. Fanske proved to be a most delightful hostess as she invited every child in Wayne of the same age or near the age of Margaret. About forty-five children attended the party bringing with them little gifts for the tiny guest of honor. Mrs. Perry Theobald, and Misses Florence and Lila Gardner were on the entertaining committee. The children enjoyed themselves immensely. At 5:30 Mrs. Fanske served luncheon.

The Shakespeare club met with Miss Beechel at the Homer Seace home Tuesday evening. Miss Mary Mason entertained the ladies with an account of her trip to the Ozark mountains this summer. Mrs. M. A. Phillips gave a very interesting description of the state penitentiary at Stillwater, Minnesota. While the ladies were talking the rest of the members plied their Red Cross needles. The next meeting will be with Miss Nettie Craven.

The Union Bible circle met with Miss Myrtle Hutchins Tuesday afternoon and took up the discussion on "The Return of the Children of Israel from Captivity." The discussion was led by Mrs. O'Connell. It was decided to have a post card shower this week for a former member, Mrs. Flora Abbott, who now lives at Crawford. The next meeting will be with Mrs. B. W. Noakes.

The Coterie club met with Mrs. Arthur Ahern Monday afternoon. A very pleasant afternoon is reported. Roll call was answered from an assigned topic. Mrs. A. R. Davis read a paper on Italian opera. She also played several selections on the Victrola. Mrs. Wm. Mellor read a paper on the story of "Madam Butterfly." The next meeting will be with Mrs. Don Cunningham Monday, October 15.

The Helping Hand society will hold a social at A. E. Halliday's barn seven and a half miles northwest of Wayne Friday evening, October 19. Everybody cordially invited. The proceeds will go to the Red Cross. A splendid program has been prepared and supper will be served. Fifteen cents admission will be asked.

Miss Florence Gardner entertained the members of her Sunday school class Tuesday evening by taking them out for a hike and giving them a wiener roast in a grove west of town. After enjoying their luncheon the kiddies were taken to the movies as a fitting finish for an evening of great fun.

A child's party is being held this afternoon for little Mary Etta Whitney at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Whitney. The little Miss is five years old today and a number of her little friends are helping her celebrate the happy event.

The ladies of the P. N. G. club met at Winside Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Ed Dotson. The members of Wayne attended in a body. They took up work for the Red Cross and spent a pleasant and profitable afternoon in our neighboring town.

The U. D. club met with Mrs. Wm. Morris Monday afternoon. The time was spent knitting for the soldiers. A covered dish luncheon was served. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Chas. Craven.

The D. A. R. will meet with Mrs. V. L. Dayton, Saturday, October 13th.

J. M. Leifer, who lives nine miles southwest of Wayne had a narrow escape Sunday. Himself and wife and hired man were driving near Hoskins when they were met on a culvert by a reckless driver in a Ford.

Mr. Leifer says that he saw trouble was coming, and in an attempt to avoid a collision ran his car off the grade, bringing it to a stop at the did so, for the car tipped over, but

A STORY OF A STORY

At the movies last Thursday evening we saw "Polly of the Circus." The story all thru was intensely human. Polly, left alone by the death of her mother who was a circus performer, had no other home but the circus and, as natural as the flowers to bloom after their kind, Polly followed her mother's vocation. The story was told to prove that beautiful characters, like the flowers mentioned above, can grow in the most sordid surroundings.

After an accident, Polly was taken to the home of a young curate and nursed back to health by a negro mammy, the housekeeper. As the weeks went by, love crept in but the young man went on with the duties of his church realizing his position. His church folk held an indignation meeting when they learned the girl had completely recovered and, in a body, they went to him and demanded that he either give up his church or send the girl away. As is usual in such cases in real life, a party of women with time hanging heavily on their hands meet in regular session "for the good of the church." In many cases the meetings are in the nature of a mill where characters are ground to bits and scattered to the four winds of heaven. The writer has seen many such cases and in fact in our years of public life have suffered hours of heartache caused by the grinding of just such mills. A woman unprotected in this world, whether she lives where poor little Polly fought out her existence, or whether she lives in our own beautiful city of Wayne, meets with this same condition. The fight for existence is no harder than the fight for something she holds dearer than life. Why must this be true? A woman with the care and love of a husband, the four walls of a home within which to find peace and comfort, children to bring God's blessed sunshine into her life; not a blessing worth having that she does not possess, yet, think of it, in the idle time she has she holds her nose in the air and scores her less fortunate sisters. The Church has failed in her mission to a great extent because the sin of criticism has her bound and shackled. It lives, a menace, within God's church where He meant there should dwell nothing but faith, love.

JOE COX WRITES

The following letter was received by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Roskopf from Joe Cox, who was formerly postal clerk at the Wayne postoffice. Joe has many friends here who will be glad to hear from him.

Great Lakes, Illinois, Oct. 4, 1917

Dear Friends:

I received your letter a few days ago which was forwarded to me from Newman Grove. I was glad to hear from you and I want to thank you for your kind treatment of me while I was with you.

I am getting to like the navy fine. I got my outfit yesterday and Saturday will be my twenty-first (and last) day in the Health Detention Camp where all recruits stay for twenty-one days. That day I go across into the main camp.

Here we get three "shots" for typhoid, a vaccination. A general physical examination plus a dental examination, a diphtheria test and a test for meningitis. I got my last today.

Well, I hope to return to my old position at Wayne sometime but I hope to see some action first.

We still live in tents, have good enough eats, and altogether live a healthy life so I am feeling fine. Tell all my friends "hello."

Very truly, JOE H. COX.

COLONEL NEVILLE

He is now in command of the new Seventh Regiment of the Nebraska National Guard Reserve. For the moment he retains his office as governor, wishing to close up some unfinished affairs of state. Naturally, the public will anticipate from me a brief statement regarding the situation. Perhaps it may be best to offer now nothing in addition to the interview I gave the daily newspapers when Governor Neville made public his acceptance of his commission as colonel. That statement follows:

"Yes it is true that Governor Neville is now colonel of the seventh Regiment Nebraska National Guards Reserve. I issued a commission to him last Saturday. The commission was issued following presentation to me of the written desire of practically all the officers of the new regiment. At no time has Governor Neville ever spoken to me on the subject of a commission. I acted in harmony with my well known advocacy of and allegiance to the plain principle of majority rule. The officers of the new regiment wanted Governor Neville as their colonel. I granted their request. I did not know that he would accept the commission, but now I am glad to know he is not annoyed by my action, and that he feels highly honored by the call of the men of the regiment to lead it wherever duty or honor may direct the way.

"Of course the acceptance of the commission by our governor will be a call to me to occupy the high office he now holds. I shall obey the call, altho none who have been near me can doubt that I shall do so reluctantly. It is a position of great dignity and abundant opportunity, but also post of immense responsibility. I have never felt myself quite qualified to do full justice to that exalted position, but, firm in the faith of those political and governmental principles which I have so long advocated, and confident that the people of Nebraska will be kind to cover with the white mantle of charity my every fault or foible so long as I shall not swerve from the pathways of rectitude, I shall approach the high responsibilities of the position always in humility and always unafraid.

"It is not for me to know the date of the retirement of Governor Neville. He will announce the date at his pleasure. My one best hope is that I may be able to so act under the impending responsibility as to leave a record which may even in small measure approach the general excellence of the record achieved by Governor Neville, who has worn the gubernatorial honors with rare grace and instant probity."

I shall at this time add nothing to the above statement, save only the declaration that in all things I shall, upon assuming the office of governor, endeavor to carefully carry out the general policy of Governor Neville's administration. As to the men and women now holding employment by appointment of Governor Neville, they will please believe that none will be disturbed in the enjoyment of office as long as good service shall be rendered, not to me, but to the state.

EDGAR HOWARD.

HIS MOTHER'S SON

He has gone to join the fightin', leavin' mother here an' me—I hadn't much chance days gone by to study jogafe,

So my mind is ruther hazy about where our boy has gone,

But his ma showed me a paper that some jogafe had drawn

And we started where we're livin', and we crossed a lot o' land,

And we went acrost an ocean, me a-holdin' of her hand

And a follerin' the finger of the other hand that went Over land and over ocean to where he has pitched his tent.

And where he will do his fightin' fer to make all people free,

And I hope that God forgives the pride that mother feels and me

When we think of him way yonder, straight and tall and clean and true

Helpin' do the things his country has been called upon to do.

We was always proud, I reckon, since he was a little tad—

The day he was born his comin' made our hearts so ful and glad

That my heart swole when I looked down in his mother's smilin' face

And I went and told the critters, ev'ry critter on the place

An' he'd lay in a clothes basket on a pillow in the shade

Of a tree, his ma beside him, an' the furrows that I made

Was the crookedest I reckon—that a fellow ever drew,

For no matter where I started they would work back to them.

And I'd kiss the baby's mother and I'd hug the baby, then

I would say giddap and start in on my plowin' once again,

Only to come back to love them at the end of every row—

I believe there's heaven yonder, but I know there's one below.

Then he grew and went to college when the destrict school was done,

Went off there to study farmin', an' went at it like 'twas fun!

Then he showed me about farmin'

I had farmed sence I was growed,

But his knowledge made me wonder

MR. HOOVER'S WARNING

(From The Public) Exhorting the nation's business men at Atlantic City, Mr. Hoover draws a horrid picture of impending state socialism involving bureaucratic control of the Prussian type. If business does not voluntarily cooperate for the winning of the war, he offers them defeat of this socialism as their reward, and makes it clear that he is willing to do his share "if we receive this support." He said, "we will have demonstrated the falsity of radical claims as to the necessity of socializing our industries." Again, he tells them that there is the choice between democracy and bureaucracy, and by democracy he means the voluntary cooperation of business men for winning the war. Mr. Hoover is a practical man faced with the necessity of getting immediate results. If he and other administrators at Washington can control prices and regulate business by fiat, and at the same time convince business men that they are voluntarily surrendering personal advantage, so much the better for everyone. But to accomplish this is out of the question, and Mr. Hoover knows it. What he probably implied was that if business men now yield gracefully to government control and surrender some of their excess profits during the war, they can at its close go back to the old laissez faire game of getting all the traffic will stand. But if Mr. Hoover sees the crusade against profiteering as merely a war measure, the people do not. Either they will deliberately choose the state socialism which Mr. Hoover so dreads, with all its bureaucratic tyranny, or they will insist upon such radical changes in the fundamental rules of the game as will render state control unnecessary. In either event, they will reject Mr. Hoover's description of the present system as democratic. As between Bethlehem Steel and United States Steel, Morgan and Rockefeller, Astor and Vanderbilt, one coal mine owner and another, the system may be democratic enough. It is a system based on the ownership of the land and natural resources by comparatively few men, and on the right of these men to use their ownership for extraction. The people will either take that right away from them by taxing land values and thus purge private industry of privilege, or they will authorize and direct their government to continue price fixing after the war, and eventually to take over the entire management of industry. They probably will resort to both of these remedies, in different fields. The American spirit dislikes state socialism as fervently as Mr. Hoover. But between even a cumbersome and vexatious bureaucracy and a grinding plutocracy it will choose the former. There are worse things than state socialism when control of an industry is divided between government officials and representatives of the workers employed in the industry. That sort of state socialism is coming for our railroads and telegraphs. Taxation of land values is coming for urban and agricultural lands. Mr. Hoover surely did not "think thru" the subject when he delivered his Atlantic City address. He is intent on immediate results. But he is too big a man to stop with them. Cannot we be confident that before his task is done he will be converted to the need of radical changes in the fundamental rules that govern production and distribution? If he cannot reconcile himself to state socialism, let him inquire into the merits of the proposal that industry be freed of privilege and given a new birth of freedom by removing the land from monopoly control.

Americans will do well at this moment to take note of some visible saving benefits of free speech and writing. There will be those so lost, under the stress of war, to American habits and principles that it is seductive to criticize for instance, the work of an exemption board. For does not that discredit the operation of the conscript system and so hamper the war? But in practice, outcries against decisions of exemption boards have been free and frequent. What is the result? The result is that exemption boards have been able to discover and correct errors, thus curing local discontents which would in reality vastly hamper war work. The same force is working in the case of coal. Secretary Lane had too generously agreed with bituminous coal operators upon $3 a ton for coal at the mines. Now a czar's chancellor would say that to oppose that action was embarrassing to the government and hence, in the face of war, was treason. It was embarrassing to the government, indeed, to have the mistake published. But the result was much lower coal prices and a public in better spirit for the war. Even the new lower prices are being questioned loudly, for instance, in Iowa. Still fairer prices may be the result. In such public discussion, indeed, lies the chief defense against profiteering abuses which, if allowed to go on, will dangerously depress the war spirit of the people. In general, the evils sure to arise and thrive under cover of suppressed freedom of criticism are sure to weaken the country much more in its war operations than could any exercise of lawful freedom. —State Journal.

Gardner for a day, and incidentally stocked Wayne dealers who might wish them with choice apples. He reports the demand for apples fairly good, notwithstanding the higher prices, and that it has been difficult for the association to get the apples to all orders, as growers think they will profit by holding for higher prices.

The Telephone's Part in the Great War

As we become larger participants in the great war, the demands of the government upon the telephone industry for men, for equipment and for local and long distance service are greatly increasing.

New construction needed to meet the increased demands for service by the government and by private activity due to war conditions has been held back by the shortage of both labor and materials.

In this time of the nation's greatest need you can "do your bit" by asking only for such equipment as you must have and by making only such local or long distance calls as are absolutely necessary.

It is about time for some one to tell a good corn husking story. The 100 bushel a day fellows are going to have a snap this year. Prices for picking they tell us, will be around 10 and as high as 14 cents a bushel. Farm help is going to be scarce and the writer heard a young slip of a girl say one day last week that she expected to go into the field this fall in place of her brother who was called to the colors. She said she thought about a week of practice ought to put her in the 60 bushel class at least. Well, we admire her spirit, girls like that one are as much to be lauded as the boys who answered their country's call. And Wayne county will have many such girls in the field this fall.

Last week Nels Nelson arrived home from a visit of several weeks with relatives in western Michigan, and reports a splendid time. Not the least pleasure of the trip was a trip across the lake from Milwaukee by boat, for he used to sail the lakes, and when he found that Uncle Sam had taken for use the boat from Chicago on which he planned to go, he trotted to Milwaukee and sailed from that port across the lake. He says things look prosperous there, but that they got their first frost some time ago. On his return trip he noticed that Illinois and Iowa had also been visited by Jack Frost, and they were not worrying about whether or not the corn crop was injured, for its fate was known. Not in many places did crop prospects compare at all favorably with those of this part of Nebraska.

HIS AMERICAN WIFE

How She Obtained Justice
In Berlin

By F. A. MITCHEL

Minna Selfridge, American girl, was quite a belle in Berlin shortly before the Pan-European war broke out. Two Germans, Count Herman Burnhardt and Heinrich Weber, were aspirants for her hand. Count Herman was not to the lady's taste, but Weber, blue eyed, fair haired Saxon, was very much so. She accepted his attentions, and it was evident that his rival was much disgruntled. The count was an important functionary at court and considered himself insulted by a commoner aspiring to the hand of one he desired to possess himself. He was arrogant enough to show his displeasure even to Miss Selfridge.

When the war broke out Miss Selfridge had become Frau Weber. Neither Count Herman nor Weber was in the army, but both were kept busy in Berlin in the civil service. Those were days when every one to whom the slightest suspicion was attached suffered vigorous treatment. One morning as Weber was about to leave his wife for his duties of the day a file of soldiers entered his house, arrested him and took him off to prison.

The blow fell upon him and his wife like a clap of thunder out of a clear sky. Frau Weber had many friends among the German women and was not long in learning that the cause of her husband's arrest was that he possessed an American wife; that Americans were largely hostile to Germany, and complaint had been lodged with the government that Frau Weber had persuaded her husband to desert his country in the hour of its need and go with her to America.

Frau Weber went at once to Count Herman Burnhardt and laid the matter before him, asking his intervention. She called his attention to the fact that he was in a position to show a truly noble nature in assisting one who had been his rival and favoring one who had declined the honor he would have conferred upon her. The count promised to do all in his power to right the matter, assuring her that he would appeal to the emperor.

Several days passed, and Frau Weber, not hearing from the count, called upon him to learn the reason for his not keeping his promise. He told her that the emperor's time was all occupied and it was very difficult to get his attention for a moment except in most important matters connected with the war. However, the count was watching for an opportunity, and if one occurred he would at once avail himself of it.

Frau Weber had been at court and had met the emperor. She wrote him asking that her husband be released on the grounds she had stated to Count Herman. But whether the pressure of his time prevented or whatever the reason, she received no reply.

Every day women in Berlin were more and more called upon to take the places of men who were needed at the front. One day Frau Weber appeared at the office where a charge would be made against any one for disloyalty and offered her services as a clerk. She met with a refusal. The government had its eyes on all foreigners and knew very well that she was an American. What was worse, her husband was a prisoner charged with intending to go to America to escape military duty.

One evening a young man whom Frau Weber had met in society before the war met her in the street. He stopped to speak with her, but only for a moment.

"I dare take only time to say a few words to you, for you are watched, and I will be compromised. I am employed in the bureau of justice and know who made the charge against you and your husband. On your promise not to reveal from whom you received the information I will tell you."

"I promise."

"Your enemy is Count Herman Burnhardt."

He raised his hat and passed on; the interview not having lasted a minute.

It would be impossible to find words to express the mental condition of the American at this intelligence. Astonishment, horror, anger, followed in quick succession. Then came deliberation as to how to make use of the information to effect her husband's release.

The more she thought of obtaining this release the more plainly she saw that, having no evidence against the count which she could use, an application in her husband's behalf would not avail anything. The only person she might influence through her knowledge would be the count himself. But if she went to him and accused him of the contemptible deed he would shrug his shoulders and declare that some enemy was accusing him falsely.

Could the count be compelled to withdraw his charge? Surely this was the only possible way of vindicating Weber. But how could force be applied to the accuser? The only man who could do so was Weber himself. But he was a captive. Minna pondered long in trying to find some way to bring power to bear on the count. Desperately desperation brought her a desperate reme-

Having formed a plan, she proceeded to put it in execution. Her first object was to obtain a disguise. Going to a coiffeur's, she bought face paint and a wig. Having changed her complexion from pink and white to olive, she painted a rosy tint in each cheek. Her own hair was a light blonde; her wig raven black; her hands, too, she gave an olive tinge. This was all that was needed to make her unrecognizable.

Court Herman frequently dined at a restaurant in the Unter der Linden. Minna went there hoping to find him, but failed. On several different days she dined in the place where she had often dined with him, and one evening she was about to leave it when the count entered. He took a seat at a table and ordered his dinner. Minna went back, sat down at a table near him and ordered a dinner.

Presently the proprietor was attracted to a commotion in the vicinity of the count's table. A woman had accused him of having insulted her. The count protested. The woman declared he had said to her that in entering a restaurant without an escort she had placed herself without the pale of treatment as a lady. She said that she was an American and simply followed the custom of her country. The proprietor at first sought to quiet her and, failing, asked her to leave the place. She appealed to an army officer sitting near for protection till her husband could be summoned.

"There is no need of that," said the count. "I am perfectly willing to give you my address and shall be ready for any message your husband chooses to send me." And he threw a card on the table occupied by the lady who took it up and immediately left the restaurant.

The same evening while Count Herman was at work in his office—for in wartime he never rested—a messenger brought him a note, which read as follows:

Count Herman Burnhardt:

My wife informs me that you insulted her in a restaurant on the Unter den Linden this evening. I desire that you will give me satisfaction at once. I am an American and a stranger in Berlin. With my acquaintance, whatever consequently may have to call upon to act as my second. I am therefore compelled to fight you without one. You are welcome to as many attendants as you like. Yours,

ELIHU WAGSTAFF,

Little Rock, Ark., U. S. A.

The count, though vexed, could scarcely restrain a smile at this uncouth way of entering upon a combat.

"Tell Mr. Wagstaff," he said to the messenger, "that I will meet him, tomorrow morning and will name the time and place later. I will provide him with a second. As the challenged party, I choose pistols, but if he prefers any other weapon, I will cheerfully give way to him."

When an hour later a captain in the army, acting for the count, notified Mr. Wagstaff of the time and place of meeting he was received by Mrs. Wagstaff, who said that her husband had gone to bed and, since his nerve depended on his sleep, she would not awaken him. She would say, however, that since the count was pleased to give up the choice of weapons her husband would fight with foils.

When the captain reported this to the count the latter expressed some concern that he had not seen Mr. Wagstaff. He would have withdrawn from the matter, but his second expressed dissatisfaction at such a procedure, stating that he was bound to fight or suffer the consequences.

Count Herman was on the ground, attended by a surgeon, at the appointed hour and also with two seconds, the one for himself, the other for his opponent. A bundle of foil had also been brought. A few minutes after his arrival a carriage drove up, and out stepped Frau Weber. Her hair and her complexion were her own. She wore a cloak that reached to her feet. Advancing to the party, she threw open her cloak and revealed her figure in fencing costume. The count on seeing her was paralyzed; the others were amazed.

"Count," she said, "you are doubtless aware of the reason for this encounter. Will you send your attendant out of hearing, or shall I make my demands in their presence?"

The count was silent for a moment, then motioned the others to retire. When they had gone Minna said to him:

"You have acted a shameful part in lodging a false charge against my husband under circumstances that you know full well."

The count essayed to speak, but she stopped him.

"Either you must sign a paper retracting your charge or you must kill me or I will kill you."

Once more the count attempted to argue, but the woman, drawing a foil from beneath her cloak, stopped him with "On-guard!"

"Where is the paper you wish me to sign?" he asked.

Minna drew a document from a belt she wore and handed it to him. It read:

"I have been mistaken in my charge against Heinrich Weber and withdraw my suit."

Minna drew a fountain pen from her corsage and offered it to him. He accepted it, signed the document, and handed it to her.

"It is enough that you have sought revenge upon a successful rival to ruin you as soon as the fact becomes known. I shall not use this paper until convinced that you do not intend to secure my husband's release. If you do not see that he is freed within two days I will send it to the emperor himself."

Re-entering her carriage, she was driven away. The attendants received no explanation from their principal. Within a few days Weber was released and returned to his duties.

Physical Examinations.

There is a side to the whole problem of physical examination which is very important. I am interested in physical examinations, not to shut men out of work, but to use them more intelligently and to give them a proper chance. Oftentimes employers and the men affected do not know that something has gone wrong with an employee. There was one concern that did not care two straws about physical examinations and would not pay any attention to the question. One day an elevator man took up a party of investors who were going to a board meeting in the establishment. He was seized with heart disease right between the floors, but fortunately the elevator stopped itself by the rarest good fortune. The executives of the plant now agree that physical examinations are no idle luxury. Men owe it to themselves, the company owes it to itself, and the company owes it to its employees to have such examinations.—Meyer Bloomfield in Industrial Management.

May Be the Oldest Book.

In an ancient Samaritan synagogue at Shechem a double roll of parchment is guarded jealously and is zealously preserved. It was to Shechem that Abraham came in his first visit to Canaan. Near Shechem Jacob sank his famous well, and the returning Israelites heard here for the last time the voice of Joshua. Shechem was the first residence of the kings of Israel and was a city of refuge. Here at Jacob's well Jesus met the woman of Samaria. Here the great Justin Martyr was born. After the division of Israel into two kingdoms Shechem became the religious center of the northern kingdom, and Jeroboam's self-appointed faith degenerated into the Samaritan worship of our Lord's day, which is perpetuated in the old synagogue which holds this scroll.

This double roll of parchment, possibly the oldest in the world, contains the first five books of the Old Testament and may be as old as the days of Jeremiah.

Joy of Pockets.

The pocket has to be lacked before it is properly appreciated, the London Chronicle says. This writer had taken his pockets as a matter of course until one evening he attended a fancy dress ball in costume which, he discovered when too late to remedy the defect, was absolutely pocketless. The question at once arose what to do with the pocket handkerchief, money, cloakroom ticket, and so on. The handkerchief, of course, went up his sleeve, but it took some minutes to devise receptacles for coins and other necessities in the lining of the cap, the heels of the shoes, and the cuff of the coat. All night long, however, he felt lost through having no place to thrust his hands into. Since then he finds himself frequently putting his hands into his pockets to experience the sheer joy of knowing that they are there.

Care of Harness Leather.

Harness leather cannot be neglected without injury that lessens its durability. It should be washed and oiled frequently. The washing should be done in tepid water with a neutral soap and a sponge or stiff brush. After rinsing in clean tepid water the harness is hung up to drain a little while before oiling.

For driving harness neat's foot or castor oil is best, but for heavy harness there may be some tallow in the oil. The applications should be light for driving and liberal for heavy harness. The oil, warm to the hand, is rubbed thoroughly into the leather while it is still wet from the washing. Excess oil which the leather is unable to take up should be removed with a clean dry cloth.—New York Sun.

A Legend of Agincourt.

For many centuries we English have plumed ourselves upon the victory of Agincourt. But the French have an account of the affair not so much to our credit. It was arranged, according to this fable, by the two leaders that only the nobles on each side were to fight. King Henry V. then artfully ennobled his whole army and hence got the best of the enemy. Shakespeare unwittingly gives a little countenance to the legend when he makes the king declare in his address to the soldiers: "Be ye ne'er so vile, this day shall give ye your condition."—London Standard.

Wrong Either Way.

"I understand your automobile has got you into trouble."

"It's always getting me into trouble one way or another," replied Mr. Chuggs. "When it runs I get arrested for speeding; when it refuses to run I get arrested for profanity."—Washington Star.

Meat Pies.

Meat pies are made most satisfactorily by first cooking the meat and vegetables as for a stew. Line a pan, earthenware dish or casserole with biscuit dough rolled fairly thin, put in the meat, vegetables and gravy, cover with dough and bake in a hot oven.

DISEASES OF COWS.

Bloat or Hoven is Most Often Caused by Eating Wet Clover.

Bloat in cattle is also known as hoven, or tympanites. It is characterized by a filling up of the left flank and by the formation of gas, writes G. H. Conn, D. V. M., in Kimball's Dairy Farmer. It is brought about by a wide variety of conditions, but chiefly by eating spoiled feed or feed that is wet with dew or rain, or it may result from eating too fast, which produces indigestion with a rapid fermentation and formation of gas. It may also result from choke, due to the closing of the gullet, which prevents the belching of the gas, and consequently the retention of gas causes the bloating. It may also result from the eating of frozen roots or grass or vegetables, such as turnips, cabbage, and the like. It is caused most often from eating clover which is wet with dew or rain and in many cases is fatal before the animal is found.

The swelling in the left flank becomes so great that it sometimes extends above the level of the back. Breathing becomes fast and difficult. The eyes have an anxious and painful expression. As bloating continues the animal shows symptoms of great pain and may reel and stagger when it walks. Death is caused from the pressing forward of the diaphragm upon the lungs, which results in asphyxiation.

If the animal is in immediate danger it should be tapped immediately. If it is not possible to procure immediately a trocar, which is made especially for tapping, use a sharp butcher or pocket knife. Do not attempt to procure antiseptics and sterilize the spot where the incision is to be made if the cow is in immediate danger.

The animal should be tapped midway between the last rib and the point of the hip and about the same distance from the backbone. When the animal is not in immediate danger a rope gag is made by tying knots in a rope and placing this bunch of knots in the mouth and passing the ends of the rope up over the head, where they are tied. The animal by chewing the knots in an effort to dislodge them will cause the secretion of saliva with swallowing. The gas will then pass off by way of the gullet or esophagus.

There are several anti-ferments that are good for the treatment of bloat in preventing the formation of the gas. From two to four tablespoonsfuls of spirits of turpentine given in one-half pint of linseed oil or in milk will sometimes be all that is required. Possibly the best treatment is one-half tablespoonful of formalin in one quart of water as a drench. This treatment has been credited to workers at the Kentucky State Agricultural college.

OVERALLS FOR HORSES.

Method of Protecting Animals From Flies In Hot Weather.

The following way of protecting horses against flies, described in Popular Mechanics, might be found useful in other regions than those mentioned:

During the summer months, in the Canadian agricultural communities adjacent to Hudson and James bays, farmers are forced to swathe their horses in

POLITELY SEARCHED.

A well dressed man leaving a Washington theater recently, absorbed in reflection on the performance he had just witnessed, noticed a crowd of theater goers lingering at the entrance. The W. D. M. did not flatter himself that he was the center of attraction, although he had been somewhat prominent in his home town, and, glancing backward, saw a party leaving the theater, of which the president was the center. This was the cause of all the commotion. At this juncture the W. D. M. lost his equilibrium, stumbled and fell in a heap in the president's path. An alert corps of ever present secret service men, instantly on the job, lifted the prostrate W. D. M. to his feet and courteously brushed him off, handing him his hat, cane and glasses. The W. D. M. later confessed to friends that he had a faint suspicion that in the brushing process he had been systematically and incidentally "risked" for concealed weapons.—Indianapolis News.

The Turk and the Crescent.

The crescent was not originally the emblem of the Turk. It was first used by the primitive Christians of Constantinople and the eastern provinces of the old Roman empire as an emblem of the growing influence of Christianity. It was not until about the year 1453, after the Turks had overrun Asia Minor and part of southern Europe and had captured Constantinople, that the Turks adopted the crescent as their national emblem. The Koran prohibits the use of images and symbols in the religious ceremonies of the strict Turks or the internal decoration of the temples and mosques, the rule being so strict as not to allow the martial or civic decoration of the greatest generals or sultans, successful commanders or other distinguished persons.
