RAIN, SLEET AND SNOW STORM DO MUCH DAMAGE

Saturday evening it began to rain and continued more or less to fall during the night and part of the following day. Monday it came down slowly during part of the day, freezing slightly toward evening. Then came a very damp snow, and Tuesday morning there was about six inches of the beautiful covering the ground at Wayne; and much had melted, for the warmer ground kept it constantly thawing from beneath. About 2 inches of moisture fell.

When trees and light, telegraph and telephone wires were loaded to their capacity with ice and snow the wind came and as the snow still clung to the wires the great mass was set swinging until the great weight carried many poles and their laden wires to the ground, breaking many poles and tipping others out, where the ground was soft and yielding. Lines running east and west suffered more than the north and south lines.

South from Wayne the poles are said to be practically all down in the south part of the county. One reported 350 broken poles between here and Emerson. On the telegraph line paralleling the railroad, an average of one pole in six was broken, and the breaking poles carried all wires with them. In some instances, we are told, the poles and wires were blown and rolled quite a distance from where the pole had stood, and the wires were a tangled mass.

Work of restoring service began at once, and after two days when there was not a telegraph click at the Wayne station, an emergency wire was finally gotten into service as far west as Winslow. Foreman Hogan, of the section west from Wayne said that they put in every other pole where all were missing and stretched two wires upon them, so that orders may be sent for train service. Today, it is said a big force of workmen from Minneapolis are to be at work putting poles and lines in shape.

In the city many light wires were down, and all were in darkness Tuesday morning except a part of the business section. The work of mending the breaks went forward rapidly, and most of the patrons had light Tuesday night, and now practically every home is again lighted.

The telephone people came in for their share of grief, too and not many phones would "hello" Tuesday morning, while toll lines far and near were in a delapidated condition, and hundreds of patrons wished they had a wireless. And even the wireless suffered for their "catcher" in a number of cases was broken. In the residence portion of Wayne many telephone wires were broken, and not all are yet spliced unless the property owner has managed to hitch on again. Of course the most of the available force are working to restore the long distance service.

From a Lincoln dispatch published elsewhere it is shown that this storm was one of the most general severe storms in a number of years. Snow seems to have been heavy over a strip from 50 to 100 miles wide from north to south and extending from west to east several hundred miles. But little snow fell at Bloomfield. At Sholes a foot was reported. South from here about six inches, and the wire damage most anywhere.

THE JUNIOR CLASS PLAY AT COLLEGE, APRIL 20

Next week Thursday evening the Junior class play of the State Normal School and Teachers College will be presented at the auditorium by members of the class, under the direction of Minnie V. Wittmeyer. "Nothing but the Truth" is the title of the play, and if it happens that they give all of the truth there will be trouble brewing. It is the truth that hurts, lots of times. The cast of characters has the names of the following students, each with a part assigned, and as we have not seen a synopsis of the play we cannot tell much except to say, go and see it. Players are: John Carhart, Donald Frisbie, Robin Miller, Vernard Dickinson, Charles Jones, Margaret Jipp, Gertrude Kendall, Marjorie Miller, Hazel Tharp, Helen Eagleton, Blanche Groves.

ORR & ORR CO. SELL MERCANTILE BUSINESS

The news that Orr & Orr Co. had sold their stock and business came as a surprise to practically the entire community last week. They had so long been in business here that it was taken for granted that the same order might continue indefinitely. Messrs Larson & Larson of Randolph are the purchasers; and, as they have a similar business at that place, they will be a greater factor in the business affairs of this part of the state. R. L. Larson of that firm is to be in charge at this place, and the invoice is to begin May 1st.

Seventeen years ago next August, Wm. Orr and Wm. Morris came to Wayne from Iowa and took possession of the business just sold. For eleven years the business was conducted under that name. Then Mr. Morris retired, and about a year later A. T. Cavanaugh became a member of the company, Carroll Orr having been a part of the force and interested then as now.

During all of these years they have been building trade in the community, and active in all that was for the upbuilding of the community, and won a host of friends in both business and social circles. Of their future intentions we are not informed, and they are not sure themselves, but are not planning to leave Wayne in the near future, and expressed a hope that they might find something here that would enable them to continue to call this home. It is to be hoped that they will decide to settle here for at least the next seventeen years.

MAKING SONGS

Just now, as told at the Normal chapel Wednesday morning, there is to be an inducement offered for Normal students, past and present, to earn a prize and also become known at least to the school patrons for many years to come. Rollie W. Ley had it announced that he would give two cash prizes, one of $25 and one of $15 for best and second best college song.

Then President Conn announced that he would like to encourage Pep, and for best and second best songs—pep songs, he would offer $15 and $10 for first and second best productions along that line.

All students of the normal, or the old school before taken over by the state, who have attended at least one semester are eligible to compete for these prizes. The time for final entry is next November, about the 15th we believe.

At chapel the matter was fully explained: Miss Bonnie Hess, Miss Beechel, Dr. J. T. House, Prof. Hunter and Julius Young all giving short talks. It is reported that a little later prizes will be offered for the best music to which to set the words of the winning songs. But that is another matter.

DEATH OF MRS. KRALLMAN

Sunday, April 9, 1922, Mrs. Wm. Krallman passed from this life at her home a few miles northeast of Wayne, following an operation at a Sioux City hospital a few weeks before. She came home from the hospital the latter part of last week.

Amanda, Carolina, Louise, Echtenkamp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Echtenkamp was born at Arlington in this state, December 19, 1887, and passed away April 9, 1922, at the age of 34 years, 3 months and 20 days.

Funeral services were from the Lutheran church northeast of Wayne Wednesday, conducted by the pastor. Among the relatives from out of town who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Umberto Cehin from Fremont, Mr. and Mrs. Diemeyer, Mrs. Geo. Knecht, Mrs. T. Rines, John, J. R. and Leonard Echtenkamp, all from Arlington.

WEBER TALKS WEATHER

Will Weber writing from Dunning to tell us that the land he is advertising on another page is rolling, good soil, has a stream thru it, and is excellent grazing land, but has some under plow that grows any crop that can be grown here, and also has lots of good hay land.

In the letter he predicted the snow about the 10th or 11th, and the snow evidently met and perhaps delayed the letter. Speaking of weather he says it will be very changeable until after the 18th. Then he talks of land again—and says that there are other bargains in that county.

WAYNE YEOMEN HAVE VERY JOLLY EVENING

Last Friday evening was a regular meeting of the Wayne Homestead of American Yeomen, only as to date, but it was rather more than the regular session in the matter of business and interest manifested. It was the occasion of a class adoption, the result of the work of the district deputy, Mrs. E. Finley, who has been in this field for nearly two months. As a result, the Wayne homestead has more than twenty new members. They also have organized a degree team, and the candidates that evening were the first they had conferred the complete work on. All stood the ordeal well, and were able to partake of the generous refreshments provided by the members of the organization, and enjoy the social hour that followed.

One of the surprises of the evening was the arrival of a big car load of the members of the Norfolk homestead, who came over for a drive and to show that a fraternal feeling in Yeomanry extends beyond their city limits. State Manager Roy Merrill was also present, and with the Norfolk guests was loud in praise of the team work, and applauded their excellent drill work repeatedly. C. Clasen and wife, former members of this Homestead were among the visitors, as well as a number of the officers from Norfolk.

The visitors came with a handful of announcements and invitations for Wayne Yeomen to attend the next meeting of the Realm of Rhodanathus, which will be held at Fremont, April 24. This is to Yeomen a sort of play game, and the sport is so planned that when it is over there is a good taste, and a call for more. One who has taken this initiation whispered to the editor that candidates should see that their sandals are perfect, for the sands to be traversed are pretty hot. No Yeoman is eligible for the degree unless the possessor of a meritorious pin, which must be earned by securing candidates for at least $3,000 insurance. It may all be in one policy or in two or three. This degree is greatly enjoyed by all who have taken it—when they witness those who follow as they ride the goat.

NEIGHBORING POLITICS

Over in Thurston county they are beginning to get into the political ring, for some office. The Pender Times speaks of opening activities as follows:

Business was good this week in official primary filings. T. J. Colligan, the veteran Thurston democrat, filed for commissioner in this district; Geo. H. Blakeslee, a well known Flournoy precinct farmer, filed for county treasurer on the democrat ticket, and Deputy Sheff S. M. Young filed for treasurer on the republican ticket—and there are other booms in the making.

PROGRESSIVE MEETING POSTPONED

On account of bad weather and bad roads, the meeting called for last Monday to organize this county for the progressive party was postponed one week, according to a phone message that came to this office. As the telephone went out of business quite generally in these parts the next night we have no further information, and suppose the meeting will be held next Monday afternoon.

APPRECIATION

I wish to thank the hardware men and others for their co-operation in rebuilding lines torn down by storm and also the consumers for their exercise of patience during the time service was being restored after the storm.

R. E. Miller,
City Electrician.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to express our appreciation to the friends and neighbors for their many acts of kindness, and to those who lent their assistance in the time of need, during Dollie's long and serious illness, and for their sympathy and beautiful floral offerings at the time of her death. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Barnett and family.

WAYNE SALES PAVILION CO. ENDS SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Last week in announcing the annual meeting of the Wayne Pavilion Company, we stated that it had proven a good investment for the community—and that meant good for all—buyer, seller, and the company. The treasurer's report from which the following figures were taken, prove the truth of statements made last week.

Treasurer Henry Ley's report showed that last year the association started in with cash on hand amounting to $764.37. That they received from the Abel Construction Co. rent on the building for storage and barn, $205. They received in rent also for sales held $112.50. Their commission on the six sales held was $809.70, and from other resources a number of small items, hang-overs from last year and rebates, etc. to increase this total a little.

On the other side of the ledger we find that they paid $590 in dividends to stockholders. $41.60 for advertising; $42.12 for material and repair work; $148.10 for salaries and labor; $20.94 for lights and water; $88.20 for taxes, and have a balance on hand of $672.51.

Election of Directors and Officers

The same board of directors was named, and they in turn elected the same officers who have made the past year successful: L. M. Owen president, W. H. Gildersleeve vice president, Henry Ley, treasurer, and L. C. Gildersleeve secretary and sales manager. Members of the board of directors: L. M. Owen, W. H. Gildersleeve, C. B. Thompson, D. H. Cunningham, Henry Ley.

At the meeting of the board of directors, it was decided to pay a dividend of 10 percent, and to paint the buildings and fence. This will leave a comfortable working balance with which to meet any emergency that may arise.

The six pavilion sales passed more than $44,000 worth of property under the hammer which is an excellent showing, considering prices and financial conditions.

FARMERS UNION IN CUMING COUNTY MOVING

Down at West Point the farmer union folks held their monthly meeting, and started plans for their annual picnic late in the summer. But perhaps more important business seemed to take their attention the greater part of the session. Taxes, and tax reduction was discussed. Steps were also taken to get the matter of presenting the matter legally to the voters at the fall election to know their wish regarding the matter of bridge building. Whether the county should do the work, or let by contract to some bridge building company. From the report of the meeting questions that may be vital to the taxpayer will have much consideration in Cuming county during the coming campaign. That is as it should be—and had the voters been more attentive to their best interests in other years, in many counties things would have been different, we verily believe.

TREAT YOUR SEED POTATOES

The Agricultural College recommends that all seed potatoes be treated before they are cut for planting. This is for the purpose of controlling several diseases, most especially scab and another disease commonly called rhizoctonia. This latter disease does considerable damage to the plants frequently killing them, thereby injuring the stand of the field. The method recommended is to dissolve 1 ounce of corrosive sublimate in one gallon of hot water. Then add this solution to 29 gallons of water to make a total of 30 gallons. At all times use nonmetal vessels for this solution as it does damage to metal and in turn the solution is weakened. The potatoes should be soaked in this solution before they are cut for planting for from 1 to 1½ hours the first time the solution is used. The solution can be used for four lots of potatoes. However, the length of time for treating should be increased ten minutes after each lot has been treated. After four lots of potatoes have been treated in one batch of solution it should be discarded. This solution should be handled carefully at all times as it is a deadly internal poison. Externally there is no danger from it in so far as the handling of the potatoes in the solution is concerned.

ALL VICTIMS OF RANDOLPH SHOOTING GAINING

The double shooting that so thrilled Randolph will result in no loss of life if it is now hoped, and latest reports point that way. Mrs. Mrsny, at St. Vincent hospital in Sioux City continues to improve. The bullet taken from the back of her neck has been for the better, but now the bullet under her shoulder is causing her trouble and this will be removed by surgeons. The other bullets will not be tampered with at present unless changes in her condition can be traced to them.

Mr. Mrsny is still in Randolph and at present is under the care of S. C. Fox, who has orders to keep visitors out of the room and the door locked. These orders were issued by the doctor and Sheriff McFadden. Mrsny's condition is thought to be such that he can be taken to Hartington soon and have a hearing or be placed in direct care of the sheriff. It was thought he might be taken over this week if the roads were fit.

Just what charges will be filed by the county attorney has not been made known here, but it is known that Mrs. Mrsny's relatives are looking after her interests. The cafe business is still closed.

PROGRESSIVE MET IN CUMING COUNTY

Last week there was a meeting at West Point of the Progressives to start their campaign. F. L. Bollen was there to look after the matter and see that their action was in accordance with the law of the land. We do not mean that friend Bollen was serving as a part of the police force, but in an advisory manner, in order to have their organization in strict accord with legal requirements. A chairman and a secretary were selected, and a committee named to perform the work necessary to have petitions sufficiently signed to have the party on the ballot. Rudolph Raabe was elected a member of the executive committee for the county.

The present representative, L. Lauritsen was recommended as a candidate for the same office again. Then a meeting was held in which representatives of the senatorial district, now composed of the counties of Cuming, Stanton and Colfax; and here it was decided to favor Henry Behrens, who had already filed for the republican nomination, and have his name considered, if he would accept the honor. If he turn a deaf ear, the committee will seek another candidate.

FROM MISS LAURA LYONS

"Until further notice please send my copy of The Advocate to Elsinore, California. It is a beautiful little town of 800 inhabitants midway between Los Angeles and San Diego. There is a beautiful lake, six by two miles, just south of town. A hot mineral spring supplies several bath houses, the town, etc., which is very beneficial; hence there are a great many here for their health. The water is especially good for rheumatism, neuritis, etc. There are mountains on all sides. What a beautiful reflection in the lake when it is calm.

LOST HIS AUTO CASE

(From Laurel Advocate)
L. C. Walling, F. P. Voter and Brian Jones were at Ponca last week, where Mr. Walling's damage suit was heard. This suit was brought by Mr. Walling against a Dixon county man who ran into the former's auto damaging it to a considerable extent. Mr. Walling sued for the amount of the damage, and the defendant brought a counter claim. The jury allowed neither claim—giving each side a chance to claim a partial victory.

WEATHER BLOCKS FAIR MEETING TUESDAY EVENING

It was next to impossible for a lot of people who should be deeply interested in arranging for a fair at Wayne for this county the coming fall to attend the meeting that had been called for Tuesday evening for that purpose. At this writing we have failed to learn when another call will be for. Perhaps we may get in touch with officers later, and give a new date.

HORSE BITES SMALL BOY MAKING SERIOUS WOUND

Tuesday Master Hilbert, four or five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Libengood was bitten on the arm between the elbow and the shoulder by the gentle old mare, the pet of all the family, and the flesh badly torn fully two-thirds of the way round the arm and several inches in length. A new colt, which perhaps the little fellow was admiring is the probable cause of the animal biting the lad. He was taken to the hospital and the wound dressed, and is yet there for treatment, and is doing nicely so far as can yet be determined. If the wound heals well, it is not apt to make any permanent injury, for the little folks often outgrow what would be a permanent injury to older people.

DISTRICT MISSIONARY MEETING

Mrs. J. G. Mines and Mrs. H. S. Ringland went to Elgin Monday where a meeting of the Presbyterian missionary societies meet this week. They are officers of the district organization, and representatives from the local organization at Wayne, Mrs. Ringland is the president and Mrs. Mines the treasurer.

The meeting began Tuesday and continued for two days, closing last evening. The theme of the meeting was "Moving Forward." An interesting program was presented covering many phases of the missionary work. Among the speakers from outside of the district were Miss Jennie Moore from Tennessee and Mrs. Hsapey from China.

LITTLE NEWS NOTES

Russia is said to be forcing the disarmament questions to the front at the Genoa conference. Who said Russia was not civilized? If Russia acts consistently in favor of disarmament they may establish as a fact that they are not civilized in the sense of the word so commonly accepted.

The American Rhine claims will be paid, is the report that comes from Britain in the daily news reports.

The ranks of the striking miners are being increased daily, and the operators admit that the miners are gaining ground.

Johnson from South Dakota and Woodruff of Michigan, two republican house members have started something, declaring that the government was robbed during the war, and asking for investigation and punishment of the guilty. They claim that alien property was sold too cheap, and the profits that should have been were not realized by the government. Hop to it, and let no guilty one escape punishment; no matter who he may be.

Arbuckle was acquitted this time by a jury of his peers. Only took 'em six minutes to make verdict. Must have had them pretty well fixed.

The great conference at Genoa is moving to abolish war, and Lloyd George is a great central figure in the move. We should have had a Wilson from America to help him voice the cry of humanity—but we are playing politics.

Senator Wm. E. Crow of Pennsylvania, appointed last fall after the death of Senator Penrose, is ill, and slight hope of recovery.

625,000 coal miners are now out, says the news reports, and more quitting work daily.

Harding fired the employees in the engraving bureau for the good of the service, he is reported as saying. It looks as though the president should not openly violate the law under such a pretense unless he follow it up with criminal prosecution.

Attorney General Daugherty says that operators and miners must avoid combines unless they want to be indicted for unlawful acts.

Even Germany is taking part in the Genoa conference—and as we are at peace with that nation and all others participating in the deliberations, we should get in, and then perhaps Mexico would join us there.

The local committees are busy making preparations for the nineteenth annual convention of the Third District, Nebraska Federation of Women's Clubs, which convenes in Wayne next week, April 18th, 19th, and 20th. Probably between eighty and one hundred visitors will be entertained in the homes of Wayne. The general public is invited to attend the two evening meetings on Tuesday and Wednesday, and the ladies of Wayne and vicinity are especially urged to attend morning and afternoon sessions, where you get a glimpse of the real work that is done by the woman's club in Nebraska. MORGAN

E. D. Ingham, who formerly lived at Wisner, but is now a resident of Los Angeles, California, was here the first of the week visiting at the home of his brother Dr. C. T. Ingham and family. He also visited at Wisner, his former home, and with other relatives in eastern Nebraska.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Wydoe of Omaha, who have been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Vasey, returned home Tuesday morning. They came by car, planned to drive on to Belden, where they formerly lived and visit there. Mr. Wydoe tells us that he spent several months at Wayne about thirty years ago, and he now finds only a few of the landmarks in the way of buildings that he remembers as being here then.

J. M. Gibb, President of the Omaha Central Labor Union announces that he does not anticipate a cut this year in the wages of union mechanics.

Miss Eileen Burns, who spent a couple of days visiting with Miss Verval Willey at the Normal returned to her home at Lyons Monday.

Chas. McHenry was called to Omaha Saturday by the serious illness of his father, George McHenry, and reports that he found him quite poorly. His brother Bert accompanied him from Pender. They arranged to have their father taken to a hospital, where he will have proper care.

Thurston voted to issue and sell water bonds for water works. They first paid for the cost of the plant, perhaps, more or less in fires which it is possible that a proper system of protection might have saved. But not always will what seems adequate protection save fire loss. Look at Chicago, recently, when with the lake and river at their door, and all manner of fire fighting apparatus, buildings supposed to be fireproof melted away like pastboard toy houses. But it so often helps to have a little water handy at the start.

Wakefield and Emerson are both contemplating adding fire trucks to their equipment. At Wakefield they are making a drive for funds with which to purchase a real engine, mounted on auto trucks capable of carrying all necessary equipment to a fire, and pumping water onto the blaze in places where the normal pressur is not sufficient for good protection. When they put in that kind of a machine, they should reduce the fire risk, and be able to save the cost of the equipment in a few years in reduced cost of insurance, if the insurance people can be made to do as they should in the matter of rates.

A LETTER FROM CHARLES UNGER

New York City, March, 31, 1922.
Dear Friend Fritz:

Well at last I have succeeded in writing you a letter. I have been planning on doing so for some time and tonight I have the opportunity of dropping you a few lines. I get the Tribune every week generally on Monday morning—but once in a while it is a little late and don't get here until Tuesday. Better late than never though.

I see that you intend to have another ball team in Winside this year. I hope you succeed and see no reason why you cannot have as good a team as last year. Would certainly enjoy being able to root for the team at some of your games. Especially when you play Wayne.

I suppose I'll have to do my rooting for the N. Y. Giants or Yankees this year. I don't know of any team I'd rather root for, except of course, Winside. I saw a few of the games here last year and certainly was surprised when each of the N. Y. teams won a pennant. I also saw Babe Ruth pole one over the fence and Oh Boy! "Ain't it a Grand and Glorious feeling." The fans sure think the world and all of him here. I also learned that bonehead plays occur in big league baseball as well as in amateur ball.

Well Fritz, I suppose you have been wondering how I like the city. To be frank, I don't think you could pull me out with a team of horses. I am able to get around here now very easily and don't expect the roof of my mouth to be sunburned this summer. They haven't tried to sell me the Brooklyn Bridge yet, either.

Almost forgot to tell you that I saw Jack Dempsey on the stage and screen at the Hippodrome a few weeks ago. The pictures of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight were shown and then Jack boxed a few rounds with one of his sparring partners. The fellow that takes the title away from him will earn his money, believe me. Although he is a big man his speed is remarkable. I know the regulation ring would look pretty small to me if I suddenly found myself in it alone with him.

Well Fritz, will close now, hoping to hear from you soon. I am your friend, Chas. A. Unger.

HENRY FORD ON THE MONEY QUESTION

A man is never so certain to be right as when he stands on principles, and he never has so many chances of going wrong as when he goes in for personalities.

It is very significant that most of the impeding disagreements among the people have nothing to do with the thing immediately at hand, but with future extensions of a theory or a program which no one knows will be the best theory or program when future tasks are reached.

One characteristic, however, is quite prominent in all this work: the minds thus exercised have run ahead of the actualities and have spun out of logic and imagination scores and hundreds of complete theories and systems which look forward to a thousand years of practice.

Now, when most of these proposed systems leave the facts of today, and soar into the long future, they take different tracks. They begin their work almost at the same point, but they diverge as they extend it.

Our duty is not to prophesy but to do the next thing which stands waiting to be done. If this were our rule, action would take the place of theorizing.

Society has no wings by which to fly, at one flight from the present deepening tangle of things to the desired improvement which we are sure is coming.

The first thing to do is to take stock of what is wrong and then look around and see how it can be righted for the best interests of all the people.

It is all right to protect industry; it is all right to protect financial institutions; but to protect these from the natural and periodical consequences of a false system, while at the same time letting the populace bear the full brunt of the fallacy, is emphatically not right.

to help powerful institutions which have been crippled by our system, (that in itself is a powerful object lesson, an irresistible plea for a pro-founder remedy.

We who have been able to live and succeed under the present system have the right to say, and it is our duty in behalf of other men to say, that a system which crushes the weak and compels them to pay for the mistakes of the strong is not a system which any red-blooded man would endorse if he could see it in a small working model.

Where shall we begin? At a point independent of the frailty or folly of man—we may begin with the earth. Some men have sought to found the new monetary system on roads, but roads are not specifically productive.

But the need is a money that will flow, a money that will release the pent-up human energies and the natural forces which are waiting to remove our depression and fill the land with prosperity.

Our government ought immediately to assume its constitutional functions with regard to money. The constitution gives Congress the power to do this thing and a large part of that power has been delegated to private banking corporations.

Interest is already eating the kernel out of all our effort. The country is becoming hopelessly mortgaged before it begins. Common sense, business sense, political sense requires that we begin to make our money contribute to the wealth of the country.

FOR RULE OF PEOPLE FOR THE PEOPLE

We want some one to tell us whether or not in their opinion, it was a socialist, a democrat, a republican or a preacher or newspaper man who wrote the following. We will name the writer next week, if no one else does:

"Now come the coal mine operators to reject with scorn any congressional interference with their methods of handling a situation in which the entire population of America is vitally interested. There is so much atmosphere above the earth upon which human life, and all life is absolutely dependent; and there are veins of coal under the earth almost as necessary to the comfortable existence of humanity as the air we breathe. Fortunately the private ownership of one of these necessities is so far beyond the ingenuity of human effort to obtain as to greatly hamper enterprising effort in this direction, but the coal deposits have been largely coopered, and these men who have no notion of conducting the business of distribution for their health, imagine they can arrogantly continue to dictate terms to the workers and the consumers of the product or shut up shop regardless of anybody. Some day it may dawn upon the nation that nature's bountiful provisions for man's comfort and material advancement belong to everybody as much as to anybody, and subject at least to governmental control. And then the people by lawful and equitable means will make arrangements to put an end to strikes and lockouts, and supply this vital necessity thru-out the land at something near its true value."

MAKE YOUR VOICE HEARD

Secretary Mellon of the treasury, in a letter to Representative Fordney, chairman of the committee on ways and means of the house of representatives, says: "Ordinary expenditures for the first three quarters of the fiscal year, 1921, have been $3,783,771,000.74, or at the rate of about $5,000,000,000 for the year. . . . According to the latest estimates of the spending departments. . . ordinary expenditures during the fiscal year, 1922, including interest on the public debt, will be over $4,000,000,000."

"The nation cannot continue to spend at this shocking rate. As the President said in his message, the burden is unbearable, and there are two avenues of relief. One is resistance in appropriation and the other is the utmost economy in administration."

R. C. Leffingwell, formerly an assistant secretary of the treasury, whom I have quoted previously in these articles, and who is still deeply and actively interested in securing retrenchment in national expenditures, commenting on this utterance of Secretary Mellon, says: "Why should there be retrenchment in public expenditures? Why does the secretary of the treasury speak of current and estimated expenditures as shocking? What is the evil that we are discussing and what is its effect?"

"Government expenditures must be met from taxes. To the extent that they are met promptly from taxes and from honest taxes directly laid upon the incomes of the people, and in proportion to those incomes, exaggeration of the evil of government expenditure is avoided. Government expenditure takes the money of all the people for the supposed benefit of a portion of the people, honestly or dishonestly, equally or unequally, avowedly by direct taxation, or surreptitiously by the indirect taxation which results from inflation of currency and credit and of the public debt.

"Government expenditure takes the fruits of the earth and the labor of the people and diverts them from the productive and reproductive enterprises of men, from the natural enjoyment of the men, who by their prudence, foresight and effort, created the wealth and made it available, to the sometimes benevolent and sometimes belligerent, but almost always economically wasteful, purposes of government.

"Government exploits all of us for the benefit, or supposed benefit, of some of us. Yielding to the vague aspirations of men for a better world or a better distribution of the good things of this earth, government imposes upon all of us ever-increasing burdens in the effort to benefit vociferous and organized minorities.

"Each of the executive departments is concerned to improve its service and to discover new and useful fields of service. The entire organization of the army, of the navy, of each of the departments, independent offices and agencies of the government, is devoted to an important task. Its particular function seems of vital usefulness, even necessity. Experts in each are alive to its defects and to the opportunities for usefulness which have not been availed of.

"The secretary, or other head of the department, drawn from private life, perhaps wholly ignorant at the outset of the nature and extent of its problems, promptly becomes the advocate of the policies and demands of his permanent assistants and bureau chiefs. If he does not become such advocate, he may break down the morale of his organization and possibly lose the confidence of his personnel.

"Behind it all is the pressure of organized interests in the constituencies, which are the beneficiaries of specific expenditures, operating upon politicians, executive departments, senators and congressmen. The strident voice of greed is heard in the market place and in legislative halls; the voice of the people is barely audible.

"The fact that each project is considered separately, without reference, either in executive departments or congress, to ways and means of financing it, prevents concentration of popular opinion on the awful total. All agree that there must be economy, but as each item is presented all seemingly agree that that is not the proper field for economy. There must be economy, but there must be a merchant marine, whatever the cost. There must be economy, but the government must pay high wages to railroad employees and furnish transportation on the railroads at less than cost. There must be economy, but the World War soldiers must have their bonus. There must be economy, but Civil War pensions must be increased. There must be economy, but we must prepare for war, regardless of expense."

You know this is true. The new budget law will help very much this condition, but unless you are interested, continuously, actively, openly interested, your money will not be saved.

PLAN WOOL POOL FOR NEBRASKA FARMERS

Lincoln, Neb., April 9.—Steps for the organization of a wool pool in Nebraska, through which wool producers can market their products cooperatively, have been taken by the Nebraska Farm Bureau federation in order to eliminate the three or four middlemen necessary under the present marketing system to get the wool from the producers to the mill, the federation states.

Questionnaires have been sent out to all counties to gather information respecting the number of producers and the names of those who wish to market their wool through the pool. After this information is gathered a meeting will be called at some central point in the state, probably Grand Island, where the final arrangements will be completed, it is stated.

While there is no accurate estimate on the amount of wool that will be produced in the state this year it is believed that at least 200,000 pounds can be handled through the pool.

Most of the Nebraska wool is clipped during April and May and it is necessary that pooling arrangements be completed as soon as possible, according to H. D. Lute, secretary of the Nebraska Farm Bureau federation.

CLEANING THE DOG

"THIS is the most wonderful soap ever offered the public," explained the voluble agent, as he opened his grip. "It will clean anything under the sun. It will remove grease spots, polish tinware—"

"Oh, I have no doubt it will restore hair to bald heads and make chickens lay eggs," said Mrs. Curfew, sarcastically. "I feel quite satisfied it's made of barks and buds and healing herbs, but I don't want any of your marvelous soap, having had experience with other marvels of the same kind. Last fall an agent came along, selling a soap that would do everything you can think of, from beautifying the female complexion to chasing the cows out of the corn. The agent talked as though he had eight-day works in him, like our old grandfather's clock, and he didn't make any impression until he said the soap would heal all skin diseases of man or beast. It happened at that period that Curfew had an imitation bird dog that he traded a good watch for, and gave a dollar to boot, said dollar having been extracted from my private savings, and never returned."

"This dog had the mange or some disagreeable disease that caused him to itch in the most reprehensible manner. He was always scratching and rubbing against everything he could find, first and last. One day he upset my parlor table and broke all my best china, which I had placed on the table a few minutes before. He also upset the sewing machine and the churn, and I don't know what else."

"So when Mr. Curfew heard that the agent's soap would cure skin diseases, he insisted upon buying a cake, and after he had gone he began to wash the dog with that marvelous soap. I don't know what ingredients said soap contained, but after it was rubbed into the dog's skin that unfortunate animal became frantic and acted as though its reason tottered on its throne. Mr. Curfew tried to hold the beast, and it reached around and bit his ear almost off, and of course he released it then, and the uproar he made, as he danced around the house, holding his ear with one hand, and summoning the police with the other was simply scandalous."

"Meanwhile the dog ran off, entirely demoted. Mrs. Turpentine was crossing the road pushing her baby buggy, when the animal collided with said vehicle, and spilled her offspring into the mud. I am willing to admit that such an experience was aggravating, but I don't think it was ladylike in Mrs. Turpentine to come over to my house with her muddy infant under her arm, and shake her fist under my nose, and tell me that for five cents she'd pull all my hair out."

"Old Mr. Poppliny was standing on the corner, leaning on his cane, waiting for a street car, when the crazy dog ran against his cane and he took a header into the gutter, and I really felt sorry for him when I saw him going home ten minutes later, dripping slush and mud like a searperpet, but I couldn't sympathize with him so very much when he picked up a brick as he was passing our place and smashed a panel in our front door."

"For two days people were coming here claiming that we ought to reimburse them for damages done by that dog. It seemed that the unfortunate animal made a circuit of the town, and left a trail of desolation behind him. He upset six pans of milk for Mrs. Trumpeter, and scared Smith's family horse so it ran away and injured several members of the family, and killed eight prize chickens for Mr. Dippy, and I don't know what else. In view of which, I think we can struggle along without any of your marvelous soap."

An Intellectual.
"You often hear it said that Mrs. Glithery has all the brains in the Glithery family."
"But Mr. Glithery is a successful business man."
"Oh, yes. However, he merely makes money. While sipping tea and smoking a perfumed cigarette, Mrs. Glithery can discuss more abstruse questions that have nothing to do with housework, or the upbringing of the Glithery twins than any other woman in her set."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Blocks Easily Removed.
A prominent tradesman in southwest London expostulated with a gang of road repairers regarding a small mountain of wood blocks dumped in front of his premises.
The protest being ignored, he surreptitiously stuck a card, bearing the inscription: "Please take one," on the offending heap.

The philanthropic suggestion was quickly acted on by passers-by, and more than half the blocks had disappeared before a vigilant policeman removed the card.—London Express.

Bill's Redemption

By HUBERT RAY
Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

"He'll be making for Pike's Crossing, boys," said the sheriff, drawing rein. "If he can jump the Limited where she slows up at the cutoff, I guess that's the last we'll hear of Bill Bateman for quite some spell."

There were four in the posse. The youngest turned as white as death. "Pike's Cross? H—ll!" he said. "My wife's there with the kid. I reckon we'd better hustle, sheriff, if we're to make it before the Limited."

Bill Bateman had the brain of a man within the body of a gorilla. During the three years that he had served of a life-sentence for manslaughter of the most brutal character, his man's brain had been working incessantly, planning to make his getaway. He knew that, once clear of the penitentiary walls, once in his primitive conception of a world, anything would be possible.

Anything to one of his enormous strength and cunning. Bill was unhampered by anything except the most rudimentary elements of a conscience. He had had only one love in life, since the day when he was flung out of home by a drunken father, after his mother's death. Somewhere back in the past he had had a wife and child. He had beaten his wife, and she had run away—with the kid. That had made him mad. After that he became the terror of the township. It was for an unprovoked and brutal killing that, through the mistaken leniency of a jury, he had received a life sentence.

His chance had come at last. There was an honor system in the penitentiary. Especially the young college-trained warden wanted to redeem Bill Bateman. Now Bill's conception of honor was the premeditated selection of a fool to run the pen. And his craft had served him well. He had feigned conversion and repentance. Three months after the young warden's arrival Bill had been a trusty. He was free of everything—except the pen gates. As a lifer, he could not be allowed to pass them, as the more favored prisoners could.

One night, when he was called to his cell after the other inmates had been shut up, Bill turned upon the guard, stunned him with a blow of his huge fist, and took his keys away. He rushed the men on duty, knocked them senseless, received and laughed at a pistol bullet through the hand, and opened the gates. Five minutes later, in the dark, he laughed as he heard the ringing of the alarm bells. No one could hit his trail across the desert till morning, and long before noon he could jump the Limited, which thundered past the pen daily.

The gorilla figure slouched onto the permanent way. The Limited was almost due, and there were no signs of pursuit. He drew in a long breath. Life was his again.

Then he started as he saw the tiny figure of a child sitting in the middle of the way. A little, white-clad figure, perhaps three or four years of age, waving its arms and crying. Bill grinned; but of a sudden something turned his heart to stone.

"The kid!" he mumbled.

Then reason reasserted itself. Of course this was not the kid. The kid had been bigger than that at the time he received his sentence. Somebody else's kid! And, where there was a kid there must be a cabin. That should mean a meal, money, a change of clothes—perhaps there was an unprotected woman within.

The gorilla grin descended Bill Bateman's face as he contemplated the gorge the sheriff's party clapped spurs to their horses and galloped madly down the trail. It was touch and go whether they could reach the crossing in time to signal her.

They were too late. Beaten by three minutes! As they rounded the bend they saw the Limited swing into the cut and begin to slow down to take the curve. There had been stringent orders for this, on account of a wreck some years before. She slowed.

"I guess we're beat," cried the sheriff, drawing rein.

But the Limited had stopped. And, with renewed hope, the posse dashed forward and, shouting frantically, drew rein at the edge of the permanent way.

The youngest member leaped from his horse with an oath, rushed forward and snatched at a little figure between the metals, which screamed with pain.

"Daddy, my foot, my foot!" The little foot had got caught in the point of a switch. He worked frantically to release it.

Fifty yards distant the sheriff and the rest stood round Bill Bateman's mangled body. The huge hand still clutched the fragment of a penitentiary shirt with which it had flagged the Limited—too late and not too late.

The sheriff looked up at the driver. "Don't that beat hell!" he said, and swore under his breath.

Unspoken Wisdom.
"What is your object in refusing to be interviewed on this momentous subject?"

"Because I've been thinking things over," replied Senator Sorghum.

"But you used to be very generous in giving your conclusions to the public."

"It has recently occurred to me that what a man doesn't say is not nearly so liable to get him into trouble as what he says."

POULTRY

TURKEY HEN IS BEST MOTHER

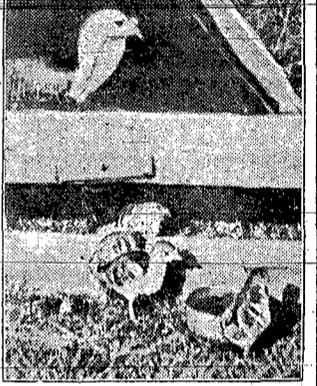

She Knows Wants of Poult and Can Talk to Them in Language They Soon Learn.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For poults, the turkey hen is the best mother that can be found. She knows their needs and can talk to them in a language they soon learn to understand. At the approach of any danger she gives a low, warning note that sends them scurrying in every direction for a weed or patch of green grass where then can lie flat on the ground safely hidden from view. While on free range, she keeps her brood together by talking continuously in a contented, purring tone, so that the poults always know where she is.

When her poults become widely separated, or if some become lost, and she hears their "peep, peep," she calls them with the characteristic yelp heard so frequently during the laying season. Now and then, while the poults are but a few days old, she catches a grasshopper or other insect and calls the poults to come and get it. They soon learn to find their own feed, however, and range out ahead of the mother hen in search of whatever they can find.

Young turkeys usually remain with the mother hen until about October or November, when the males ordinarily separate from the females and range by themselves. When two turkey hens with broods of about the same age are turned out on free range together they will remain in one flock, and as this makes it easier to hunt them up and care for them, it is advisable to turn out two or three hens with their broods together when they are given free range. It is not a good plan to have more than this number of young poults in one flock, say poultry specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture, as they may all try to crowd under one or two hens to be hovered.

GOSSINGS READY TO MARKET

Advisable to Avoid Use of Young Stock in Raising Fowls—Old Birds Are Preferred.

Geese are birds of long life, sometimes living fifteen to twenty years, and ganders are at their best at three, four or five years. The use of immature young stock should be avoided, especially for the renewal of breeding geese, but for the production of early goslings for market, it is often the custom among breeders to use eggs from young geese, as these usually begin to lay earlier than older birds. Such a practice is perfectly proper, but for breeding stock, experienced breeders prefer older or well matured geese and ganders.

BIG IMPORTANCE OF ROOSTER

Impossible to Get Best Results Without Use of Good Male—Is Half the Flock.

The male is half the flock. Without a good male it is impossible to get good results. It is more dangerous, however, to use a poor male than it is a poor female, for the reason that from one male bird a greater number of chicks carrying his blood will be hatched than where a poor female is allowed to remain in the flock.

MALES FOR BREEDING STOCK

Not Advisable to Wait Until Last Minute to Select Fowls to Head Poultry Flock.

Don't wait until the last minute to buy males for your poultry breeding pens. If you do, the best will be gone and you'll have to take what's left. A breeder sells by process of elimination, disposing of the best first. So, the earlier you buy, the better will be the stock you get.

LEGS ARE QUITE IMPORTANT

Not Only Necessary as Means of Locomotion, but They Help Appearance of Fowls.

The legs of fowls are important not only as a means of locomotion, but also in regard to the appearance of the fowls. Therefore, the legs deserve proper care and attention from every poultry raiser.

Cleaning Big Bill

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

Joe and Giuseppe, which means the same thing, perched themselves fifty-seven feet above the thirty-ninth story of the Tearah building and looked down. From where they crouched they could see the whole checkerboard of the city spread out beneath them.

The parks appeared as little patches of vivid green, the houses and office buildings were as child's blocks; the cars were crawling centipedes, the pedestrians—tiny dots that stained the whiteness of the intersecting streets and avenues.

Giuseppe adjusted the ropes about the plank.

"Here she goes, Joe!" he said.

Joe stepped upon the boards and held the ropes tightly, while Giuseppe began playing them out from the perch on which he stood. Joe went slowly down and down.

The cornice and architectural embellishments of the Tearah Tower began to rise upward. Two pigeons flapped away, and Joe saw two nests with little white eggs in them within the angle formed by two stone projections.

"I s'pose they do lay eggs like the sparrers," reflected Joe. "Funny I never thought of it."

"Let 'er go, Giuseppe!" Joe called back.

Now an enormous sphere of dingy white began to raise itself to the level of Joe's vision; then there came into view a monstrous arm of steel, looking like a stunted flagpole. Another appeared. All round the whitish rim appeared posts of metal, disposed with varying slopes. And suddenly the face of the tower seemed to tremble as the thunderous boom of Big Bill, the Tearah clock, saluted the city below.

"Aw ri, Giuseppe!" Joe called at the top of his voice.

Fastened to one side of the planks was a very long mop, a housewife's mop, such a one as a healthy giantess might have disported herself with in some gargantuan apartment. It stood in a pail containing a mixture of cleaning fluid. Joe raised the mop in his arms and staggered forward. The handle of the mop struck the cat, which overturned, tilting the planks. Joe grasped at nothing, felt himself falling, threw out his arms, and seized the great steel pole in front of him.

Next instant he was clinging with both arms around Big Bill's minute-hand as it made its way past the hour.

Far underneath he could see the checkerboard of the city, overhead the sun blazing in the cloudless sky. His cries were unheard; the projecting cornice cut off sight and sound from Giuseppe.

Giuseppe, seated on his ledge, was wolfing down his dinner. Joe, he knew, was safe underneath; there was no reason why he should disturb himself until Joe called to be pulled up. Having eaten, he lay back and began dreaming of a girl in Palermo.

When Joe's nerves ceased to quiver and strain at the gooselash that contained them, he began to view the possibilities of the situation. The swinging planks had tilted downward; a rope had slipped somewhere; it was impossible to regain his place there. His weight upon the minute hand did not impede its movement in the least. It was moving steadily downward. Very soon it pointed to a quarter past the hour. Joe lay extended on its broad surface, holding on for life and death.

Several times he shouted again, but without the least result.

The minute hand crept on. Joe perceived with horror that he was moving head downward. He hung poised over the city vertically, his head at the VI, his feet about the center of the clock.

He clung madly to the hand through a period of all but unconsciousness. As his senses gradually returned, he became aware that he was shifting back to the horizontal. Soon he could ease the strain upon his aching arms. The minute hand pointed to a quarter before the hour.

Then a new horror assailed him. Underneath was the shorter pole of the hour hand. Measuring the space between them with his eyes, Joe saw that inexorably as they drew together he would be caught, crushed lifeless, flung to the checkerboard below.

Desperately he began to shift his grasp, inch by inch downward, until his feet rested on the two-foot projection about the base of the hour-hand, at the center of the clock. He thought that if he could support himself on that, with only one arm extending round the minute hand, he might escape with the loss of a hand.

He closed his eyes. Already he seemed to feel the edge of the hour hand brush his wrist lightly. It was two minutes to twelve.

Suddenly a furious gust blew the tilted plank against the dial of the clock. And, potting himself on his stand, Joe leaped wildly toward the abyss—grasped the ropes, and clung to them.

"Giuseppe! Giuseppe!" he called. Giuseppe awoke from dreams of warm Palermo. His head appeared. "You call, Joe? You nash de job?" he shouted.

"No, I've dropped my mop," Joe shouted back. "Pull her up! I've gotta go for another, and I guess we're both out-half-a-day's pay on this deal, Giuseppe!"

WILD BIRDS DESTROY INJURIOUS INSECTS

Worth at Least $400,000 Annually to Farmers.

Establishment of Community Refuges Throughout Country Is on Increase—Useful Suggestions Given in Bulletin.

The work of wild birds in the destruction of injurious insects is worth at least $400,000,000 annually to the American farmer and horticulturist, and in recognition of their valuable aid and charm, and to encourage their presence, the establishment of community bird refuges throughout the country, on farms, bird preserves, and elsewhere, is increasing. Useful suggestions for the establishment and maintenance of community bird refuges are contained in Farmers' Bulletin 1289, issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, a copy of which may be obtained free from the department at Washington, D. C.

"On the average there are in the United States only about two birds to the acre, but where they are protected and encouraged it has been demonstrated that a very great increase over the normal bird population can be secured. No fewer than 50 pairs to the acre is the number reached in the most successful of these attempts reported. Valuing the services of birds at 10 cents each—an estimate ridiculously low, but used to insure a safe minimum—the birds of the United States prevent an increase in the annual damage done by insects of more than $400,000,000."

"A particular farm may not have so large a bird population as it should, and therefore may not be deriving the benefit which is its due. The most effective means of increasing the number of birds is protection, and protection in its best sense is afforded by the establishment of bird refuges."

A bird refuge may be established in a small way on a farm or through a cooperative bird preserve. In the latter case, the plan has proved popular and successful as a means of establishing colonies of game birds, such as pheasants.

"In creating a useful bird refuge," says the bulletin, "the first step is to insure adequate protection against all bird enemies; the second, to see that plenty of nesting sites suited to the needs of the various birds are available; and the third, to improve food and water supplies, if necessary. Bird refuges also may be established along roadways and right-of-ways with particularly attractive and beneficial results."

"Hardly an agricultural pest escapes the attacks of birds," says the bulletin. "The alfalfa weevil has 45 different bird enemies; the army worm, 43; billbugs, 67; cotton boll-weevil, 60; brown-tail moth, 31; chestnut weevils, 64; chinch bug, 24; clover-root borers, 85; clover weevil, 25; codling moth, 30; cotton worm, 41; cutworms, 98; forest tent caterpillar, 31; gipsy moth, 46; horseflies, 49; leaf-hoppers, 120; orchard tent caterpillar, 43; potato beetle, 25; rice weevil, 21; seventeen-year locust, 38; twelve-spotted cucumber-beetle, 28; white grubs, 67; and wireworms, 168."

PREPARE SOIL FOR GARDENS

Work Should Begin as Soon as Conditions Will Permit—Cultivate to Conserve Moisture.

In order to have a good garden it is well to prepare the land as soon as the soil conditions will permit, by first plowing the entire area to a depth of 8 to 10 inches, applying stable manure broadcast and harrowing thoroughly until a perfect seedbed is formed.

The surface of the unplanted as well as the planted land should be cultivated in order to conserve moisture.

ALSIKE CLOVER FOR FORAGE

Crop Is Particularly Well Adapted for Low, Poorly Drained Soil—It Adds Variety.

Alsike clover is especially well adapted for low, poorly drained land on which common red clover refuses to grow to advantage. It does not yield as much forage as red clover on soils that are well adapted for the latter, and, therefore, should not be grown in such places. It should, however, enter into every pasture mixture if for no other reason than to add variety.

SHORT-TAILED SHREWS

"I've always been so glad," said Mr. Short-Tailed Shrew, "that my name was so different from the names of other creatures."

"It wouldn't be nearly so interesting to be named anything else as it is to be known as a short-tailed shrew. There is something so unusual and attractive about the name."

"Don't you think so too?"

"I agree with you, but then of course I would agree with you naturally, as my name is the same," said Mrs. Short-Tailed Shrew.

"We're not very sociable as a rule, but you and I are pretty sociable at present," Mr. Short-Tailed Shrew continued.

"Do you know I wonder if people know how helpful we are to them?" asked Mrs. Short-Tailed Shrew.

"I am sure I don't know," said Mr. Short-Tailed Shrew. "Why do you ask?"

"Well, I hope that they do, and I hope they will learn it more and more, or rather that more and more people will learn that the little short-tailed shrew or mole shrew as he is sometimes known does everything he can to help people."

"He eats insects and bugs which are harmful and is never anything but nice in his actions."

"He has a great deal of courage, and though he can hardly see at all he will fight bravely if he has to, even if he can't see the enemy who is attacking him."

"Of course his sense of smell is very keen and strong and he can rush this way and that by feeling and by smell. "He can see light from dark, but he hasn't much to boast of in the way of eyesight or eyes."

"Some of us are fond of living in the forests, others by streams, others again by fields. We're not in the least fussy."

"We burrow in the ground and have fine runways where we go from place to place."

"Our homes are beautiful with a number of rooms papered and carpeted by soft grass and leaves."

"We eat more in a day than we weigh. That is if anyone weighed the amount of food we ate in a day they would find that we were much smaller in size than the quantity of food we had eaten."

"But it doesn't hurt us for we are so active, always so busy. We do not even rest and sleep in the winter the way some creatures do."

"That is, I mean we do not go to sleep for the winter."

"We have very keen sense of hearing. "Oh, yes, we can hear very well."

"But I must say I have no use for creatures who eat all the time and who are lazy. We must eat a lot in order to have the strength to do so much."

"And we must do a lot in order to be able to eat a lot! I don't like to hear of creatures who eat and eat and eat and who then feel too lazy to do anything. That is dreadful."

"We can protect ourselves by our bravery and also by our musk glands which have a curious odor to them which the other animals do not like, we are thankful to say."

"We can squeak and cry and we can become very angry. But we're not dreadful little creatures at all, and I do wish people would hear that we are not."

"Perhaps they will," said Mr. Short-Tailed Shrew. "And perhaps the next time they see a little dark animal which looks something like a mole they will say:

"There is a nice short-tailed shrew. We will not harm him."

"Oh, that would be pleasant indeed," said Mrs. Short-Tailed Shrew. "Well, I believe we have talked enough. I have plenty to do and then I don't bother much about being sociable and talking my time away."

"Neither do I," said Mr. Short-Tailed Shrew as he wrinkled his snout, which was his way of saying a polite good-by to Mrs. Short-Tailed Shrew.

Horse's Perilous Trip.
City Point, Belfast, Me., was recently electrified by a regular circus feat when Robin, a chestnut horse owned by Fred A. Holmes, attached to a heavy rack used for hauling barrels, crossed the long open single trestle of the railroad bridge. The driver was taken sick as the team approached the bridge, and the horse, accepting the path as a part of the day's work, carefully placing his feet on the ice-covered stringers, crossed over to solid ground.—Boston Globe.

THE LOOMING DEFICIT

(Indianapolis News)

The secretary of the treasury has announced that the government revenues for the fiscal year beginning next July will be more than $200,000,000 below the estimates. This in all probability is a conservative calculation. There has been a great falling off in the receipts from the income tax and bad business conditions have been reflected in shrinking revenues. The country is facing a heavy deficit, and that at a time when we have been almost demanding that European nations balance their budgets. Now it seems that America will herself have to do a little balancing either by increasing income or diminishing outgo—or both. Income can be increased only by the imposition of new and higher taxes—a very disagreeable alternative. Hardly less disagreeable to congress will be the necessity of refraining from spending money for objects that seem to be popular. Not more pleasant is the third possibility—namely, a large deficit.

There are however, compensating advantages. With conditions as they are congress will hardly pass any of the bills calling for extension of governmental activities at great cost. There surely can be no thought of passing the educational and physical. Congress will, one would think, decide that the country can get along very comfortably without nineteen new federal judges. The outlook for the ship subsidy program is less cheering than it was. The need for economy will have a discouraging and depressing effect on paternalistic tendencies, which is just so much to the good.

Such economies as have been suggested will not lessen the looming deficit, but only prevent its growth. One other suggestion is interesting, and that is that prohibitory duties will bring in no revenue—a fact that seems to have been lost sight of. It will be wise to think of tariff legislation more from the point of view of revenue and less from that of monopoly. It is probable that by cutting the proposed duties in two congress could double the revenue from customs. The experiment may be worth trying. The problem may be perplexing and difficult. The country will hope that it may be solved in a businesslike way.

SCRAPS OF PAPER

Any system of civil service under which the subordinate positions of the governments are considered rewards for mere party zeal is fatally demoralizing and we therefore favor a reform of the system by laws which shall abolish the evils of patronage and make honesty, efficiency, and fidelity the essential qualifications for public positions without practically creating a life tenure of office.—Republican National Platform 1872.

We renew our repeated declaration that the civil service law shall be thoroughly and honestly enforced and extended wherever practical. The recent action of Congress in enacting a comprehensive civil service retirement law and in working out a comprehensive employment and wage policy that will guarantee equal and just treatment to the army of government workers and in centralizing the administration of the new and progressive employment policy in the hands of Civil Service Commission is worthy of all praise.—Republican National Platform 1920.

TALKING NORTHERN LANDS

B. Stevenson from Omaha, of the Great Northern Development Association, drove into Wayne Tuesday evening, and spent the night here. He said that the roads were not the best but he left for Norfolk next morning just the same. He tells us that there is a growing interest in northern lands, because price and quality considered, and nearness to market. The proposed deep waterway, which will eliminate the long railroad haul when completed, between this land and the seaboard is stimulating interest to a remarkable degree. The editor was talking with one of the home folks, who has been through the Minnesota country, and he said that in his opinion the man who could sell his business here, no matter what, and invest carefully in those good lands would be making a wise movement—a safe investment that would bring better returns with less money. He evidently believes that the settlers are coming into those Minnesota cut-over lands.

The Great Northern railway is carrying people who want to see these lands on 1st and 3rd Tuesdays each month at one fare for the round trip from Sioux City or Omaha. That is getting back to the pre-war methods. Read the advertisements.

ALUMNAE IN SUCCESSFUL CONCERT

(From The Goldenrod)

Alumni of the school and other friends of Miss Fern Oman, '18, will indeed be pleased to hear of the success which she is making in the music world. The following article appeared in a recent issue of the Nebraska State Journal:

"One of the most successful of the annual operatic concerts given by Madame de Villmar and her pupils took place Monday evening at the Temple Theater. The scenery, costumes and stage settings were elaborate and the soloists had the support of a well trained chorus of considerable numbers. A scene from each of five operas was presented, in addition to several other features.

"No music student of this city in recent years can be recalled with the combination of talents displayed by Miss Fern Oman in her two appearances—as Azucena in the 'Trovatore' scene and in Gounod's 'Sapho.' Preceding the concert Madame de Villmar made a few announcements and said that Miss Oman had completed her course and on receiving a degree from the school of fine arts at the University of Nebraska this spring would enter the Ralph Dugbar school of opera at Chicago. Miss Frances Oman, also a pupil of Madame de Villmar, is already preparing for opera in Chicago. In both her roles Miss Oman's contralto tones were smooth and velvety. She was at ease on the stage and in the 'Trovatore' music displayed dramatic art way beyond that of an ordinary amateur."

Miss Sarah Saunders, '18, also appeared on the program in Carmen and Siebel.

THE RAIN

It rains. Across the furrowed field The stalking crow Plucks up the sprouting corn; Sedately marches, row on row, Then flaps into the dripping woods To mourn.

It rains. And o'er his lazy fire The invalid sits with low And fretful curses for his pains; And in his peevish mood Bewails the wet and gloom.

High in a little turret-room A lonely heart laments Beneath the eaves, The slow, still drops Strike 'gainst the pane; The dull, drab day drags on, The sad heart grieves and grieves, Shut in with loneliness and pain.

Deep down in coloring woods It rains. And all the little bluebells Lift their thirsty lips, And every fringed fern sips, Joyously the gift of life; While all along the lanes Each tiny blade of grass tells, Rapturously, the blessing, Lo! it rains.—Jane Broome Love.

A VISIT TO ANN ARBOR

(From The Goldenrod)

Friends of Miss Tamin will be interested in reading her account of a recent trip to Ann Arbor, Michigan, where she attended a teachers' meeting:

"I left 'Kazoo' Thursday morning, got up at 4:30. It was raining and rather chilly but it was nothing like a presage of the wonderful storm we had a little later. I took the suburban (electric train) in Battle Creek the Spanish teacher joined me.

"Then we had the wildest ride you can imagine; the landscape changed; every twig of every tree was coated with ice; the rails, the wire, the trolley, just the same; finally the trolley, or I don't know what, broke, when we were ten miles from Ann Arbor. The men had a very hard time tying the pieces together. There was a gigantic spark; I thought we were catching fire, and my! I thought life was good. I must say that for these few minutes I thought of the soldiers who stood 'sparks' and 'bombs' for four years in the trenches and thanked Heaven I was a girl for I would have done a poor job!

"Finally we arrived in Ann Arbor and found a good lunch at the hotel, a room, and went straight to the 'Ad.' Building of the University of Michigan. Of course we did not see much of the university but the main entrance was wonderful with all its trees glistening under the rain. (The results of the storm are terrible, however. Every minute or so a big branch broke under the weight of the ice and it is pitiful.) The office was decorated with a profusion of purple and yellow flowers. Went to the Michigan Union for a speechless dinner. A dinner without speeches may certainly be appreciated for a change once in a while; they had yells, songs, an entertainment furnished by some students dressed like chorus girls, also a speechless speech; slides of cartoons about the present educational conditions. Afterwards there was a musical entertainment at Hill Auditorium. This is a big place, too, with one of the finest organs of the U. S. I understand. The high school students and three singers produced 'Creation' by Haydn; it was one of the most interesting things I have heard this year, and I have been spoiled.

"Friday morning we visited classes. At eleven there was convocation and Dr. Vincent from New York delivered the address. He spoke about the 'yellow fever' and kept the most dignified school-masters giggling for an hour, and it was soundly scientific and thoroughly humorous! Can you beat it? Then I went to the Modern Language luncheon where Mrs. Hughes from Grand Rapids introduced me to all the members of the faculty who were present. Then went to see some old Egyptian manuscripts.

"We packed our grips and came back on the steam train which was slow but I don't care, it seems safer and I'd like even better to have a wreck on the steam train than on the electric machine; I don't think the travellers would see it happen.

"Are former members of the Wayne State Normal faculty allowed to send their suggestions for a school song, too, when they have had the opportunity to go through the same experience in their own school just a month or so ago? If so, I move that the students of harmony work their song out of Mr. Pousers' 'Wayne State Normal March'. The student poets had a hard time getting started here but as soon as they dared they did beautifully. I wish the same good luck to Wayne."

It is rumored in Nebraska that Edgar Howard who is sojourning in the sunny south is allowing himself to be introduced as lieutenant governor of Nebraska without protesting, well knowing that there should be an 'ex' prefixed to the title. Since the present lieutenant governor of Nebraska has hired out as chief lecturer to a fraternal insurance company this rumor from the south is said to be caused for some jealousy on the part of Pelham A. Barrows, candidate for congress and a direct defendant of Miles Standish. Mr. Barrows, the present lieutenant governor of Nebraska, suspects also that Mr. Howard is using language in the southland that would have shocked Mr. Howard's quaker forefathers. Mr. Barrows has received a letter from Washington stating that newspapers have quoted the lieutenant governor of Nebraska as saying: "Unless Henry Ford gets Muscle Shoals he will be the next president in spite of hell or high water and the Alabama Power company." Mr. Barrows denies the authorship of this statement. "Soon I will be ex-lieutenant governor," said Mr. Barrows, "and in the course of time I will of course become ex-congressman. As W. J. Bryan used to say 'ex' is an honorable title which once conferred upon a man can never be taken from him."—State Journal.

TERRACE HALL

ENTERTAINS GUESTS

(From The Goldenrod)

All the talent of Terrace Hall was assembled Wednesday evening at light-winking time to do honor to Mrs. Piper and Miss Jane Piper of Lincoln, who are visiting here. Gathered in the parlor the girls and their guests thoroughly enjoyed the piano solo by Mary Burnham, the violin solo by Grace Mead and Elsie Aegerter's saxophone solo. Helen Sausser's portrayal of an Irishwoman's experience with a phrenologist, Hazel Tharp's description of life among the modern Children of Israel, the touching reading of "Laddie" by Esther Talbo, and the Modern Health Crusade as described by Cleone Herrmann, carried the amusement far past the usual hour for retiring. Vocal solos by Elvira Hyspe and Velma Burnham completed the program.

In a few pleasant words Mrs. Piper thanked the girls for the attention shown her and Miss Piper.

Much chatter and laughter followed during the serving of Eskimo pies which constituted the evening's refreshment. The pies were rapidly consumed, the "dishes" thrown at whoever was convenient and then all straggled off to prepare for the visit of Morpheus.

Miss Marquardt, having deserted her domain across the way, was also a guest of the hall.

Cleone Herrmann led a well attended meeting of the Y. W. C. A. Wednesday evening. The topic, "Discipleship," was discussed by Lillian Button, Mary Burnham, Ruth Nordgren and Ruby Dobbs. Following the discussion came a much appreciated piano solo by Katherine Strickland, an amusing reading by Frances Beckenhauer and a pleasing saxophone solo by Elsie Aegerter.

Election of officers for next year resulted in the following girls being chosen: Ruth Nordgren, president; Esther Talbo, vice president; Emma Havokost, secretary; Lillian Button, treasurer. The advisers elected were Misses Beechel, Bettcher, Reis and McCorkindale.

Everyone enjoyed the program and the newly chosen officers were excused from making speeches of acceptance.

A spectacular meeting was the order of the Science Club last Monday night. This wound up a series of meetings and the fact that this was the last meeting was verified by the large number present.

Several stunts were on exhibition. Professor Britell introduced the x-ray by a short explanation concerning its history. Professor Chini gave a short talk of explanation concerning induction. Interesting experiments were performed at the induction tables. A spectacular demonstration with the spectroscope showed different color lines with different substances. The stunt that aroused the greatest curiosity was the shocking machine; no grit, medium grit and real grit were measured there. An experiment proving that the earth turns upon its axis was to be seen. We wondered which direction we were turning or if we were standing still.

The Y. M. C. A. meeting was held Wednesday evening. The topic, "How is the Christian standard of conduct different?" was discussed. The standards which Jesus set up were much in advance of his time. That the people of today should live so as to see that they are not in advance of the present era, would be a good resolution for each to make.

WHOLE NORTHWEST

IS TORN BY STORM

A Lincoln report says: A storm which has left a pathway of death and destruction of almost incalculable magnitude swept the states of the middle west Monday night and early next morning. Property loss will run into the millions of dollars, while meager reports from the storm-covered area—meager because of the fact that there is almost no telephonic or telegraphic communication to be had—state that the list of dead as a result of the storm will be a lengthy one. Rivers and streams everywhere are swollen bank full and running over, while at some points the danger from this source is not yet abated, many cities being menaced with serious flood conditions.

In Minnesota, the whole basin of the Mississippi river is overflowing, and the sleet and high winds have completely demoralized telephone lines and transportation.

In Wisconsin, practically the same condition prevails. From Missouri comes the report that two at least are dead and seven injured during the storm, while the property damage is estimated at $400,000.

Floods, dust storms, snow storms and tornadoes have been playing havoc with railway and telegraph service through the southwest.

Springfield, Ohio, reports a hundred thousand dollars in property damage and one dead. In northern Michigan the storm damage is said to be terrific.

The immensity of the area covered by the storm is fairly indicated in the above paragraphs, covering as they do the whole northwest and some of the middle western and southern states. Because of the lack of wire communication in nearly all the stricken states, the details of the havoc, the amount of damage and the number of deaths will not be known until tomorrow.

Senator Boran bases his argument against the compensation bill on the statement that the work at home during the war was just as necessary as the work in the service. That's the time the good senator socked his pedal appendage into the gumbo. If the work at home is as valuable as the work abroad, then conversely, the work aboard is as valuable as the work at home. This justifies the so-called bonus. While the men in uniform at thirty bones a month were bucking the North sea or squatting in the trenches, the work at home was wearing silk shirts and hauling down $15 per diem. If it's 50-50 Senator, let's play that way and pay that way.—Winnebago Chieftain.

DO YOU SEE THEM? (From The Wayne County Teacher) Do you see your pupils, all of them, at all hours of the day? Or do you become so interested in the recitation that you forget everybody except those reciting?

A teacher should not turn his back upon his pupils, even when he is writing upon the black board. He should so train himself, that he can see each and every pupil all the time. It is remarkable how easily this is done once the habit is well established.

Disorder is reduced to the minimum in the school where the teacher has eyes—and uses them. The eyes, in fact, should be the chief medium of control. If you are unable to see your pupils, all of them, during all hours of the day, do not blame your short coming on intense interest in the recitation; it may be from some other cause, a cause, perhaps, not essential to good teaching.
