INTANGIBLE TAX RETURNS LARGER THAN YEAR AGO

Class A Intangibles in County Nearly Three Times the Returns of 1928.

DECISION MAY AFFECT RATES

About 3,000 people in the county have filed reports under the new intangible property tax law, with still some returns coming in some time after the deadline has been reached, according to William Assenheimer, Wayne county assessor.

The comparative returns for 1928 and 1929 are as follows:

	1928	1929
Class A .....	$506,000	$1,490,000
Class B .....	421,000	650,000

The new law has brought many new reports in, with almost three times the amount of Class A intangibles that were reported in 1928. This is due in part, Mr. Assenheimer believes, to the fact that the new law does not make public the individual returns, and for this reason people are not so reluctant to file statements of their property holdings. But the intangible tax returns of the county are still much under the combined statements of the banks.

Class A intangibles includes money, stocks, checks, drafts, etc., while Class B includes shares of stock, notes, book accounts, etc. The tax rate on Class A intangibles is 25 cents per $100, while on Class B the tax rate is 80 cents per $100.

The recent decision of a local court that the present intangible tax law was unconstitutional will have no effect on tax payments until the supreme court hands down a decision on the law. If the law should be declared unconstitutional by the supreme court, than intangible would be taxed at the tangible rate, which is higher.

Arab Flute Players Masters of Melody

The flute is the most interesting of all the Arab instruments and the hardest to play. It consists of a long reed hollowed out, about half an inch in diameter and from two to three feet long. It has eight stops, but there is no sort of mouthpiece. The sound is produced by the player blowing across the top of the flute at some particular angle which I have never been able to discover, and producing the softest, saddest, deepest note one can possibly imagine.

To the most unmusical, the sound of the long flute must appeal, and when accompanying one of those love ballads of the South it is enchanting. These flutes are used to accompany all kinds of songs, but chiefly those concerning the exploits of heroes and the love-lays which hold such a big place in all Arab melodies. Occasionally it is used to follow religious chants, but not always.—R. V. C. Bodley in "Algeria From Within."

Milkmaids are Obsolete

MILKMAIDS, those picturesque figures of prose and poetry, have vanished from our mundane scene. This is partly because men do the milking now, but mostly because the latest statistics reveal that more than a billion and a quarter pounds of evaporated milk were consumed in the United States last year.

Men Milk Now

To produce this quantity of milk 600,000 cows had to work, if you call it work, twenty-four hours a day for twelve months. At the present rate of increase in consumption virtually the entire cow population of the nation may be working for condenseries a few decades from now.

In the immaculate Government inspected dairies where not only evaporated, but condensed and dried milk are produced, men, as we have said, do the milking now, and the cow has become a pampered creature whose every physical want is promptly attended to. She is not only fed correctly, but groomed to perfection, and carefully kept in the best of health. The importance of correct feeding is due to the fact that the vitamin content of milk is directly affected by the amount of vitamins in the cow's diet, and dairymen are now feeding much more intelligently than in former years.

"While no food can be considered a perfect food," said R. Adams Dutcher, Head of the Department of Agricultural and Biological Chemistry of Pennsylvania State College, in a recent article, "milk in all its various marketable forms comes about as near to this ideal as we can hope to find in a single food product."

The hostess served a two-course luncheon.

Hogs and Steers on Upward Trend Market Forecast

Beef and Pork Prices Higher in Next Month; Poultry Lower, Says Neb. College of Agriculture.

Higher prices for hogs and choice steers, steady to higher prices for eggs and butter, and lower prices for poultry are the probable market prospects for the next thirty days, according to the July Nebraska farm outlook report from the college of agriculture. What will occur in the wheat and corn market will be largely determined by crop progress and marketings.

Some setbacks in the wheat market may occur during the season of heavy marketing but more firmness seems probable for later in the season, it says. The prospect of smaller world supplies of wheat should largely offset the downward trend in price caused by the usual heavy marketing. Canadian and southern hemisphere conditions have been somewhat unsatisfactory for the wheat crop.

Further improvement in the hog prices seems probable during the next thirty days. With fewer hogs on farms and the season of usual lighter receipts ahead, prospects indicate better prices. The decrease in the spring pig crop points to a stronger price situation for the fall and winter of 1929-30.

Choice grain-fed steers will probably command higher prices, but lower grades of slaughter cattle will be in a less favorable position as the movement of grass cattle increases.

The usual trend of butter prices is upward from July to August. With smaller receipts to be expected, and with the present price three-cents under a year ago, a firmer trend should develop by the end of the next thirty days.

The general business situation shows less evidence of recession than it did a month ago. Industrial activity continues at a high level. Farmers may experience greater difficulty than a year ago in financing feeding and storage operations due to the present credit situation. The recent recovery of farm prices points to improvement in farm purchasing power over what was anticipated earlier in the year.

Cedar Co. Cat Rears A Strange Family

To be the stepmother of both a young coyote and a grayhound pup in addition to her own feline family is the unique record of a cat belonging to Scott Millard, Hartington attorney. Mr. Millard came into possession of a baby coyote a short time ago, and after due persuasion, his cat took the youngster into her family. Although the wolf insisted on taking his sustenance in somewhat rougher fashion than pussy was accustomed to, she became very solicitous about his welfare, and made it her first mission in life to keep him clean, spending hours every day at the task.

Then Mr. Millard acquired a tiny grayhound pup, and sought to add this to the cat's charges. Although her family already had grown out of bounds, the cat big-heartedly took over her new charge, and is now rearing him also.

Cute in a Baby—Awful at Three—and it's Dangerous

by Ruth Brittain

Thumb-sucking does look sweet in a baby, but it is disgusting in the three-year-old and sometimes it hangs on until fifteen or sixteen. The habit may cause an ill-formed mouth or induce adenoids; and it always interferes with digestion. Finning the sleeve over the hand; attaching mittens, or putting on cardboard cuffs, which prevent bending the arms at the elbows, are some of the ways to stop the habit.

Another bad habit—irregularity in bowel action—is responsible for weak bowels and constipation in babies. Give the tiny bowels an opportunity to act at regular periods each day. If they don't act at first, a little Fletcher's Castoria will soon regulate them. Every mother should keep a bottle of it handy to use in case of colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, loss of sleep, or when baby is cross and feverish. Its gentle influence over baby's system enables him to get full nourishment from his food, helps him gain, strengthens his bowels.

District Farm Picnic To Be at West Point

Farm Problems to Be Discussed in Large Gathering August 9.

A picnic for northeast Nebraska, one of four such picnics in the state, will be held at West Point August 9. Sponsored by the state college of agriculture and the state farm bureau federation, in addition to various entertainments and a playground for the children, there will be a discussion of farm problems, led by such experts as Chester H. Gray, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau federation, and George Farrel, in charge of the agricultural extension work in the north central states. E. A. Tyler, financial and insurance director of the Nebraska farm bureau, also will speak.

The program will begin at 10 o'clock in the morning, and thru the cooperation of the various county organizations, there will be entertainment all day.

Other district picnics will be held at Bridgeport, August 6, Gibbon,

August 7, and Crete, August 8, with the same program in each place.

Carroll R. R. Man Invents His Own Mowing Machine

All the inventors are not dead yet. One has turned up at Carroll with a mowing machine that shortens the time it takes to mow a section of weeds along the railroad track from two weeks to eight hours.

The inventor is Jerry Frahm, section foreman on the G. St. P. M. & O. at Carroll, and his machine is merely a sickle from an old mowing machine attached to a flat push car, with an engine to run the sickle.

With a helper, Jerry pushes the car slowly down the tracks while the machine runs the sickle. When the end of the section is reached, the men turn the car around, and they mow back again. It is an easy eight-hour day's work for the two to mow the weeds that way. It used to be a hard two-week's job with a scythe.

"A contract has been let for graveling between Wayne and Wakefield. When that is done, Emerson will be within about eight miles of gravel. We have not given up hope.—Emerson Tri-County Press.

A newly wedded couple over in Laurel the other evening were given a free ride on a wrecking truck with a large spot light turned on them down the main streets of the town. Why in the name of all that's holy treat defenseless people that way?

In somewhat incoherent but none-the-less eloquent language, J. S. Comell, of Council Bluffs attacks in the World-Herald an anonymous writer who had misrepresented living conditions in Russia, the point at issue seeming to be the regularity with which Russians bathe. Mr. Comell claims the peasants in the poorest villages take baths and change their clothes at least once a week, as a rule and he has this to say of the author of the offending article. "The more I think about the lies in the article and the men that is writing such articles the more I pickchuring them for idiotic snobs that spending several thousand dollars for dog burial and give nothing to . . . help poor children. Of course snobs have idea that children not as clean as cats and dogs."

A CAKE OF SOAP

He drifted into the Democrat office. A dingy fellow with a dingy bundle or two—evidently spare clothes—hooked under his arm. A good physical specimen, but in need of a bath. He was looking for work, he said, but when we named two or three places in town where he might find farmers who were short of harvest hands, he accused us of being not exactly liars in telling him that there were jobs open, but at least of being grossly misinformed, and asserted that nobody had any need for help anywhere—he had learned that from bitter experience.

An argument ensued and ended when we told him that we knew where he could get a job if he were looking for one.

Our friend's eyes filled with reproach, and he told us of the care he had given his aged mother, of the endowments he had bestowed on hospitals, and of his ill health which had resulted in his present economic condition.

Before we could devise some method of stopping the flow of language, our dingy brother of the road had launched an economic dissertation and began to quote the celebrities with amazing alacrity. "Millions of men," he added, "Are out of work. This is an economic condition brought about by machinery. There are not enough jobs to go around." His glance swept the shop. "You have an automatic typesetting machine here haven't you? And you have seen the automatic presses in the larger cities? They are fine, aren't they? But you'll have to admit that they throw men out of work."

His last statement was the straw we grasped. He meant that without our labor saving devices he could also be working in the Democrat office. We knew no statistics and we could think of no celebrities at that moment whom we could call upon for help, but we took a chance. "You are wrong," we said. "There are more printers today than there ever were."

It worked! Our friend dropped economics and said that he guessed he would take the next freight out of town. Farther west farmers might need help in the hay harvest. He asked us for a five-cent piece. He said that he was dirty and wanted to buy a bar of soap for a bath. We gave it to him. If he had requested money to help provide for his mother, if he had asked for a lunch, we would have refused with all the hardness of our heart; but an appeal for a cake of soap—who could refuse that? We felt that we were adding to the purity of the world when we handed him that nickel.

But after he was gone, we wondered. We wished we felt as cocksure of things as we had talked. Here was this man who, for some reason or other, was out of work and crawling about on the rough fringes of the world. Why was it? He had not deliberately got himself into his position. He wanted prosperity and friends and a good time as much as we. But heredity, or environment, or his own perverse nature—call it what you will—had put him where he was. Or perhaps after all it was the present economic drift.

Every adjustment is certain to hurt somebody, and perhaps our machine age with its industrial combinations that are seeping even into small towns like Wayne, will not provide in the end the greatest good for the greatest number. Or perhaps it will. Some people are certain that they know what the result will be. We wish we were. The tramp may have been right. At any rate, we do not begrudge him that cake of soap.

Gleaned From Exchanges

NORTH PLATTE COMMENT
In an adjoining column The World-Herald prints today some letters commenting on the disgraceful affair at North Platte, where two hundred Negro residents were forced to flee the city in fear for their lives.

These include denial that there was mob action, criticism of the governor for intervening to restore their constitutional rights to the exiled Negro citizens and an effort to justify the whole affair as a "clean-up" crusade. One writer, wholly in sympathy with the lawless brutality practiced, attributes it to the klan.

The World-Herald has no information to justify it in believing or disbelieving this was klan action. The assumption of the writer, however, is not unnatural since the outrage was similar to others that have been perpetrated by that organization elsewhere in the past. Wherever the responsibility lies the thing was atrocious and the best way North Platte can defend the honor of their community is in co-operating to protect their injured citizens and to bring those guilty of the atrocity to justice.

However orderly the crowd may have been about the home of the criminal whose capture the police were attempting, there seems to be no denial that this crowd, estimated in the reports to have numbered five hundred, went to the homes of all Negro residents and forced them, by threats of violence, to leave the city. The accounts tell of shots fired at some of the exiles who attempted to escape from the highroad into the fields and of mothers, with no means of conveyance, forced to trudge into the country carrying babies in their arms.

What a travesty on decency and justice to speak of this as compelling respect for law and cleaning up the city! It is the very antithesis of law and order. It menaces the peace and dignity of the state more than all the bootleggers in Nebraska put together.

North Platte is not the first community in the state forced to face an ugly fact like this. A riotous mob can happen anywhere. We haven't forgotten that one happened in Omaha not so many years ago. When it does occur it only makes a bad matter worse to attempt to condone or minimize it. It should be North Platte's pride that order has so soon been restored and that its frightened citizens are able to return to their homes and the cowardly and brutal persecutors are now doing the quaking for fear of detection.—Omaha World-Herald.

THE PERFECT HEN

In Omaha, Nebraska, according to a reliable Associated Press dispatch, one R. T. Renwald, a poultry fancier, has bred a hen that has neither wings nor toenails. Normal hens, it appears, "are bothered each year with the moulting of their wing feathers and during this period egg production falls off. The new type hen, having no wings, can keep right on laying the year round, producing on the average, Dr. Renwald hopes, three hundred eggs a year. Also the new hen can't fly."

In the egg-laying qualities of this hen, we must confess, we have very little interest; for it has been our observation that no matter how many eggs the hens manage to lay the price of eggs never comes down. But in certain of her other qualities we have a lively interest, and predict a great increase in the national happiness as a result of them. The trouble with hens, most reflective citizens will agree, is that when they are not laying eggs they are wandering into other people's yards, digging holes under the rose bushes. But the new hen seems to be doubly restrained from this antisocial activity. To begin with, she has no wings, so that she will find it extremely difficult to fly over the fence and get out of her own backyard. But if she does get out, then she has no toenails with which to dig holes under the rose bushes. It would be hard to imagine a more ideal hen, and we trust she will come into general use throughout the United States and insular possessions thereof.

If somebody would only breed a tomcat, now, without any vocal chords, life would be practically perfect.—New York Evening World.

IT DOESN'T SOUND REAL

A letter in Los Angeles court records attests the reality of Mrs. Claude Derrin. Just the same she sounds more like fiction than twentieth century fact. She left her husband for no apparent reason on earth but that she preferred poverty and hard work to wealth and leisure.

Ms. Derrin's case reminds us of the apocryphal story of the young man employed as a porter, who was left a legacy of a few thousand dollars. He promptly left his job and went in for luxury and high living. At the end of a year he was back at the old place apparently contented and with no regrets over his squandered patrimony. A little later he was informed that he was the beneficiary of another small bequest. "Good Lord," he groaned, "have I got to go through all that again?"

The parallel ceases only at the point where Mrs. Derrin decided she didn't have to "go through all that" and ran out on her prosperity. Everything might have been lovely if Mr. Derrin hadn't homesteaded a claim in Wyoming and if that claim hadn't happened to lie right over a reservoir of oil. He seems to have accepted the economic change with equanimity but Mrs. Derrin just up and quit, returning to her old job of waitress in a restaurant and leaving a letter explaining, "I can't stand expensive things."

It isn't so strange that this lady failed to find happiness in sudden wealth. There are undoubtedly plenty like her, more perhaps than we poor wage slaves imagine. What is unusual is that she had so clear an understanding of her unhappiness and the resolution to put an end to it by drastic action. She saw that there is lots more fun in wanting things that you can't have than in having things that you don't want.—Omaha World-Herald.

Sioux City Market Report

(Furnished by Steele-Siman Com. Co.)

Bearishness ruled the trade on all classes of live stock this week. Fairly liberal receipts in the aggregate at leading centers along with extremely hot weather and weakness in the market for dressed products at eastern consuming centers led to declines in the live stock markets.

A top of $16.35 was paid for two loads of steers weighing a little better than 1,000 pounds and for three loads of 1,300 pounders, the highest price of the season, beating last week's crest by a dime. Several sales were made at $16.00 to $16.25 with a big showing at $15.50 to $16.00. Bulk of the medium and strong weights sold at $14.00 to $15.00 and light and yearling grades at $13.00 to $15.25 with plain shortfeds and grassers on down to $12.00 with some commons down to $11.00 and under.

Choice light heifers sold at $14.00 to $14.60 with plainer grades and heavier weights on down to $12.00 and under. Grass heifers ranged downward from $11.00. Fed cows sold at $10.00 to $11.50 with a few koshers higher. Bulk of the grass and shortfed cows sold at $8.00 to $10.00 with plain grades down to $7.50. Cutters sold at $6.50 to $7.25 and canners at $6.00 to $6.50 with old shells down to $5.50.

Receipts of stockers and feeders were the heaviest of the season. Sales were made largely at $9.50 to $11.00 with some up to $12.50 and down to $8.00 and under. Feeding cows brought $6.50 to $7.75 and heifers, $8.50 to $11.00.

Hog receipts were too heavy for the good of the trade and other bearish factors entered the trade to force a sharp decline in prices. Light hogs held up better than the heavy grades and sows. A loss of 25 to 50c was scored, compared with the close of last week.

On the second session, the top was $11.50. Light and medium weight butchers sold at $11.25 to $11.50 to shippers and around an $11.00 average to packers. Strong weights sold from $11.00 down to shippers and extreme weights ranged on down to $10.25. Light sows sold at $9.75 to $10.00 with strong and heavy weights at $9.25 to $9.75 and extreme weights at $9.00. Stags brought $9.00 to $9.75. Pigs sold downward from $10.50.

Increased receipts of lambs forced values 50c and more lower. Western lambs topped at $14.50 on Monday but were lower on following days. Native lambs topped at $14.25 on the initial session and $14.00 on the next day. Choice light clipped ewes topped at $7.00.

A Close Shave

"Mamma," said little Elsie, "Do men ever go to heaven?"

"Why of course, my dear, why do you ask?"

"Because I never see pictures of angels with whiskers."

"Well, that's because they get there by a close shave."—Nebraska Educational Journal.

THE WEEK'S NEWS

Bits You May Have Overlooked in the Daily Press.

Mrs. DePriest Talks
 Mrs. Jessie De Priest, wife of Congressman De Priest, whose presence at a recent White House tea caused a social tempest down south, talked of her experience recently before 300 women of the Pilgrim Baptist church in Chicago. Catholic Women and Dresses
 At the annual convention of the National Catholic Women's society at Salem, Oregon, a resolution was passed deploring the present trend of girls and women to display too much of their physical form, and, so doing, becoming sources of temptation to men, young and old. Another resolution declared that the motive behind birth control was the desire on the part of many mothers to escape the sacrifices demanded of them.

Tags "Sane Drivers"
 G. E. Cress, sheriff at Mason City, stops motorists driving at any ordinary rate of speed and hands them red cards. After they have recovered from their surprise enough to read, they discover that it is a card complimenting them on their sensible driving.

Omaha-Cosmopolitan
 Fully Nettleton, who writes for the Christian Science Monitor, recently paid a visit to Omaha. He characterizes the metropolis of Nebraska, "Omaha strikes the visitor as surprisingly cosmopolitan for a city so far inland. Omaha is one of the easiest cities in the United States in which to be a pedestrian."

Wickersham and Prohibition
 There was buzzing around the table at the 21st annual convention of governors at New London, Connecticut, when the first official expression from President Hoover's crime commission was read before the convention by Governor Roosevelt, of New York. There was buzzing over the country also. The letter, written by George W. Wickersham, head of the commission, said in part, "If the national government were to attend to preventing importation, manufacture and shipment in interstate commerce of intoxicants, the states undertaking internal police regulations to prevent, sale, saloons, speakeasies and so forth the national and state laws might be modified so as to become reasonably enforceable and one great source of demoralizing and pecuniarily profitable crimes removed."

 This letter caused diverse comment.

Comments
 Governor Aulfield, of Missouri said, "Interesting and constructive, emanating from New York which has done away with its own enforcement laws."
 Andrew J. Volstead claimed that the suggestions "would in effect repeal the Eighteenth Amendment in wet localities."
 Governor Hammill, of Iowa: "The mention of modification denotes weakness. We should educate and build for the thing that is right."
 Governor Roosevelt, of New York: "It is purely a speculative matter."
 Governor Ritchie, of Maryland: "I dissent from Mr. Wickersham's suggestion that the states must take over the enforcement of the Volstead act within their borders. I have already pointed out that this is neither their constitutional nor their moral duty."
 Senator Watson, of Indiana: "Chairman Wickersham's statement was an effort to enlist the support of the states in doing their full constitutional duty."

Cold Spell With Byrd
 During the month of July temperatures with Byrd in the antarctic have averaged 50 degrees below zero, with one day 71 being recorded. At 70 degrees below kerosene and gasoline freeze, candles have to be warmed before they will burn, and porous rubber crumbles at a touch. At present it is night, and the sun will not rise until August 22.

The Russo-Chinese Melee
 Great Britain, France and the United States are working actively to avert war between Russia and China. Secretary of State Stimson reminded these two powers of the Kellogg peace pact. Both governments admitted their obligations under the pact, but both declared that they stood ready to repel an armed invasion.

Farmers Must Organize
 Alexander H. Legge, chairman of the federal farm board, and Vice-Chairman Stone have sent word to the American farmer that he must build cooperative organizations. The board pointed out that it is directed to work thru the marketing organizations. Just how further organizations to represent the majority of unorganized farmers remains to be seen.

Mrs. Catherine Warner, 91 year-old Elgin woman, died very suddenly from heart failure about two weeks ago, while enroute from Elgin to St. Edward in an automobile driven by her granddaughter, Miss Cera Merchant. The sultry weather and the approach of a storm probably brought on the heart attack.

Book Chat

A Pender poet wrote this bit that I picked from an Omaha newspaper. And I suspect that she is a young poet. Most of us do not have the hardihood to remain poets after we are older and the few who do, cease to compare life to berry patches and roses. But I may be mistaken about her age.

HUH?

By Agnes Macklin

Life is like a patch of berries,
Just as sure as you are born,
And you have to step right lively
Or you'll tread upon a thorn.

Life is full of sweets and roses,
And the one who finds a host
Is the game lad who exposes
Himself to pricks the most.

There is another book out about Lindy, "Lindbergh, His Story in Pictures," by Dr. Francis Trevelyan Miller, and it is up-to-date enough so that it contains a photograph of his wife. The wise ones prophesied that the moment Lindy was married the girls would lose interest in him and he would be forgotten. But Lindy continues to get front page writeups in the newspapers, and it seems that Putnams are having little trouble finding a sale for this book. It is a picture record of Lindbergh's career, from babyhood on, with a profusion of photographs taken in the years since he has become a public hero. It is put out in the same style of binding as "We".

I note a review of "Young Mrs. Grebley," by Booth Tarkington—the book is in the public library—which claims that if Sinclair Lewis had written the same book he would have raised a hullabaloo, and that Tarkington is just as merciless about certain types of women as Sinclair Lewis could be.

Booth Tarkington has a polite way of laughing at us that does not make us too angry, while Sinclair Lewis is too serious in his censure for us to be entirely comfortable. We are almost sure that he means what he says. And then too, he is more inclusive in his portrayals. After reading one of Tarkington's books we can say, "Oh well, those are only certain people anyhow. He does not mean us." But we feel that Lewis is saying, "There you are. Look at yourselves." And unless we have a strong sense of humor we do not like it.

Start For Calif.

Omaha Youths Are Stopped in Seward

Johnny White, Billy White and Charles Doran, three Omaha youths left Omaha one day last week on a furniture truck, intending to go to California, but when they got to Seward at 5 o'clock that evening and saw the Blue river they decided to stop off here and go swimming. And from there they went back to Omaha on a passenger train at night. In the meantime they had two swims in the river, and a lot of experience with officers. They also spent the night in the county jail and slept on blankets—the boys said to be sure and say they were in the jail office and not in jail. They said all the officers were their friends—the county judge, the county attorney and the deputy sheriff. Part of the time was spent at Deputy Sheriff Imig's store and they had a good time helping about the place.

Dick Kelpinger, a fourth boy, started out with them, but he decided to return to Omaha after he had got to within about 30 miles of Seward, and caught a ride back.

The boys had ten cents when they left Omaha, but one Seward man gave them a dollar to get something to eat with and another one gave them a quarter, so they felt they were well supplied with funds. Deputy Sheriff Imig also provided them with some eats after they fell into his hands.

While the boys were having a good time their parents down at Omaha were considerably worried until they finally located them there. Asked if they thought there would be a brass band at the depot to meet them when they got back one of the youngsters said no, but that there would probably be some folks there with ball bats.

MONKEY BUSINESS

Some results of the early-in-the-morning Sunday flood here were not without a humorous aspect. A couple of Michigan tourists, sleeping in the Randolph Park, had their dreams interrupted by the engulfing waters, and their hasty attempts at exit terminated in the branches of the closest sizeable tree. Hanging there, scantily clad, they decided, with emphasis, that this was the worst of three floods within their experience. Whether or not their decision to take to the branches was reversion to type, and as such, Darwinian evidence, is a moot question—it may have only been an aversion toward Nebraska dampness. When queried Sunday on whether they planned to sleep in the park again that night, they answered affirmatively, saying that they had the two biggest trees in the park well in mind. Their property loss totalled one pair of shoes. Randolph Times-Enterprise.

Cedar Co. Sheriff Seeks Man Who Is Already Locked Up

A Hartington man made complaint against Claude Smith one day last week, claiming that Smith had passed him a bad check. A warrant was consequently issued for Smith's arrest and Peter Clarence, Cedar County sheriff, went out to arrest him, only to discover that he already was serving time on a sentence in the state penitentiary.

Sheriff Clarence issued last week a warning to bootleggers in Cedar county that henceforth all of them taken under arrest would have their finger prints taken and kept on file for future reference. This is a part of his drive to clean up the liquor in the county. Several stills and large amounts of liquor were destroyed recently, by the county officers.

FARM STOCK

IN MAKING AND FEEDING SILAGE

Best and Cheapest Form in Which to Store Feed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Some important points to observe in the making and feeding of silage are discussed by live stock specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture in a revised edition of Farmers' Bulletin No. 573-F, "The Making and Feeding of Silage," which is now ready for distribution to interested persons.

"Silage," the authors of the bulletin say, "is the best and cheapest form in which to store succulent feed. Many forage crops can be made into silage; but corn, where it can be grown successfully, makes the best silage."

"Silage is suited for feeding to all live stock. Dairy cows, not on good pasture, need it perhaps more than other classes of animals, because the succulence it supplies is helpful in the production of large quantities of milk. It is a cheap and economical feed for beef cattle, from breeding cow to fattening steer. Sheep like it and it is well suited to their needs. Even horses and mules may be fed limited quantities of good silage with good results."

A method of making silage, known as the Ronning method, has come into use in the last few years and is considered the easiest known method of making silage. The standing corn is harvested and cut into proper lengths for the silo by a machine drawn and operated by a tractor. The cut corn is delivered to a wagon box drawn alongside. It is then hauled to the silo and pushed off into a blower which elevates it into the silo. When a pit silo is used the work of filling is still less. Making silage by the Ronning method requires approximately the same size crew as when a harvester and bundle elevator is used, but the advantage lies in saving the labor of handling the heavy bundles.

A copy of the bulletin may be obtained by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Practical Methods of Destroying Hog Mange

(By J. W. Lumb, Extension Veterinarian, Kansas State Agricultural College.)

Crude petroleum will turn itself into a money maker when used as a destroyer of mange of swine.

The three most practical methods of destroying mange are hand applications, spraying and dipping.

Hand applications may be satisfactorily provided if only a few hogs are treated. The hogs are confined and applications made with a brush or cloth. Petroleum should be rubbed over the entire hog, including inside the ears.

Spraying, if carefully carried out, will destroy mange. The hogs should be confined in a small pen, bedded with clean straw. A spray pump or sprinkling can may be used. The hogs' ears should be lifted so that spray material will coat the lower side. They should be left in the pen for an hour to become well saturated by contact.

Dipping is the most effective way of applying material to hogs for controlling mange. Concrete or galvanized iron dipping vats are more or less permanent and not prohibitive in expense for the large hog raisers.

Swine should be dipped at least twice, 12 to 14 days apart, and old beds burned. The house and sleeping quarters should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected.

Use of Self-Feeders Is Most Satisfactory

The use of self-feeders is the most satisfactory system of growing hogs we have found. With hand feeding so many times in the busy season, and that lasts all summer on most farms, a little neglect in chores checks up the desired growth. Living in a good, clean, legume pasture with self-feeders for corn and protein feeds and an opportunity to get at some minerals, the pigs are at fault if they do not make good. Last year corn was so scarce in our neighborhood that we ran the pigs through with a little less than they would have liked. The pigs were slowed up by it, too, but with an all-winter rise in the hog market the financial returns were not so disappointing. Related pigs do not always meet that kind of a market reception. The general trend has always been the other way.

Pigs Over Summer

Spring pigs that are not to be fattened for the early fall market may be carried through the summer on good pasture and a limited amount of grain. The pigs should receive enough grain to provide for normal growth, since they cannot develop on pasture alone. Pigs handled during the summer in this way will be in good shape to follow steers in the feed lot this fall and winter, or they may be fattened for market, as soon as the new corn crop is ready.

Housekeepers Asked to Watch for Pest

Mediterranean Fly Threatens All Fruit in Country.

Housekeepers throughout a large section of the United States are being enlisted by the United States government as inspectors and scouts in the effort to repel a thoroughly dangerous foreign enemy—the Mediterranean fruit fly—which has already invaded the country.

Fruit from Florida, where the infestation of the fruit fly was first discovered, has been placed under an embargo, but only after much fruit which may have been harboring the pest, had been shipped to distant states. Federal authorities urge the utmost care in inspecting any fruit imported from Florida.

Except for the watermelon and the pineapple, all fruits grown in the United States are vulnerable to the attacks of the Mediterranean fruit fly. The fly is to be found in the form of small maggots or worms, inside the pulp of the fruit. When these maggots have reached full size or when they have been working for some time, the infestation is easily discovered, since they will destroy most of the pulp. Before that time, any fruit which is conspicuously soft, or in which any sort of worms or maggots are found, is open to suspicion.

Destruction of such fruit is urged by the government. To make sure of killing the maggots, the fruit should be boiled or baked for a long period. Throwing it into the garbage is the surest method of giving the maggots an opportunity to grow and spread.

Fertilizing Value of Manure Is Overlooked

Many farmers who pride themselves on their farming technique, their fine barns, and their good-looking homes and gardens, neglect their barnyards. Too often the manure pile blocks one or more of the doors into the cow barn, and the cattle going in and out cover themselves and the barn floors with filth. Too often the litter carrier is broken or absent and the pile starts at the door and grows in all directions, uncontrolled. Every farmer realizes the fertilizing value of his manure, but not so many know that the most valuable part of it is the liquid which more often than not is allowed to drain or leach away. An ideal setting for the manure pile would consist of a high shed with a cement floor which would conserve all the liquid manure, placed at least 40 feet away from the barn. But few farmers can afford such a building. The next best plan is to level the barnyard so that the drainage can be controlled and led off to benefit some part of a nearby field or garden. Keep the manure at least 20 feet away from the cow barn and surround the pile with a light fence to keep the animals from tramping over it.

Date of Seeding Wheat and When to Harvest

That the date of seeding wheat has little or no effect on the time of harvesting is the conclusion which may be drawn after looking over the seeding and harvesting dates kept for the past 36 years on plots at the North Dakota experiment station.

In the years of 1896, 1901, 1908, 1920 and 1924 the date of harvest was August 10, but the dates for seeding in those years respectively were May 6, May 4, April 18, April 26 and April 22. In some instances there was a variation of a month in the date of seeding, while in every instance the date of harvest came on the same date.

Late seeding of wheat is not advocated by the station, however, as it is usually followed by a short straw and a lighter crop, taking the weather conditions into consideration.

Turkey Is Roamer

Many poultry men consider that turkeys are naturally a roaming bird and that they can pick up their feed from all over the farm. It has been found, however, that much better success with turkeys can be enjoyed by keeping them confined and by following out the definite up-to-date practices that have been found economical and efficient. Another practice which should be kept in mind in handling the turkey flock is that of feeding sprouted oats or fresh well-cured alfalfa meal.

Feeding Steers

The Ohio experiment station recently conducted a test showing that where silage was used in large rations for fattening steers, $18 more per acre for corn could be realized. There are many experiments carried on by many of our experiment stations which have demonstrated conclusively that silage will lower the cost of beef production. With this evidence, certainly agricultural advisers would do well to urge a greater use of the silo.

Feeding Sweet Clover

So far sweet clover hay has not been observed to in any way injure sheep or horses. Its bad effects seem to be confined to cattle. Then, too, sweet clover pasture has never been known to produce this trouble. Thousands of farmers have used sweet clover pasture for years without any bad results. The North Dakota experiment station has conducted a sweet clover pasture test with calves without discovering bad effects.

FROCKS OF SHEER NOVELTY WOOLEN CHIC FOR IMMEDIATE DAYS

ULTRA-SMART are the new zephyr-weight woollens. Everywhere in the realm of fashion style leaders are expressing enthusiasm for woollens of the newer sort, many of which are that sheer and dainty no one would think of even remotely associating them with the woolen "has-beens" of the long ago.

In this day of miracles, woollens have been touched by the magic wand of Twentieth century genius with the result that many of the modern weaves have been rendered as delightfully wearable in the summer months as during any other time of the year. So it is that a considerable part of fashion's program for the immediate months revolves about diaphanous woollens such as are sure to prove a lure to every fashion-loving woman.

So far has progress been made in point of airiness and daintiness, some of the very newest woollens are truly lacelike in their weave. Frocks of these woolen laces are tremendously chic and as yet distinctly exclusive.

In matter of patterning there is a merry war going on in the realm of modern woollens, as also among other fabrics, between stripes, plaids, checks and dots. Sometimes the plaids win, again the checks or dots while in the case of the swagger daytime frock in the picture stripes come out victorious. The stripes in this sheer material, which is part rayon and part wool, as so many of the choicest weaves are this season, exploit the very genteel color combination of black and gray. A costume such as this will be found ideal for general wear.

Among the many delightful thin woollens exploited this season one of the most indorsed is wool georgette. Ensembles of this sheer woolen are especially desirable, for, while they present a trim tailored effect, they are cool enough for summer wear. These very attractive dainty woollens come not only in smart solid colors but they are also obtainable in stripes, also small almost invisible check patterns. A very new woolen material—just the thing for the making of the blouse to accompany the wool-georgette ensemble—is so fine and thin it quite resembles shantung. It is especially smart in the new eggshell tint.

One kind of woolen weave for the frock with a woolen of entirely different character, yet related in color, adds zest to this season's fabric vogue, such as a gray tweed coat flecked with violet with a violet georgette frock.

Increasing interest is also shown for printed wool challis, with emphasis on bordered patterns. The border, in fact, is making a definite place for itself in wool fabric design, the narrower trimming bands being best liked.

Slippery Thief

For years a mysterious thief, too smart to be caught, has stolen electric light bulbs from subway stations in New York city. The loss runs into thousands annually. Stories by passengers who have caught a glimpse of the thief from cars have given police a good idea of the way he operates. Waiting until the platforms are empty he takes out two or three bulbs and puts them into his pocket. It is believed he goes from station to station and at the end of a day collects many dollars' worth of bulbs. The wonder is he isn't out after bigger game in New York city.—Capper's Weekly.

Busy Human Heart

The adult heart—the only organ in the body whose muscles never rest nor sleep during life—makes an average total of 108,000 beats every 24 hours! How does this busy organ find time to "eat" and fortify itself for its arduous labors?

Prof. Y. Kato of the Okayama Medical college, Japan, says in Popular Science Monthly that nature has provided what he described as little "dinner palls" from which the muscle fibers of the heart are ingeniously "fed." These "palls" are tiny, disk-like organs between the muscle fibers, and their duty is to collect food materials from the blood and pass them

A Royal Dish

WHEN a Queen enters a kitchen, she is bent upon concocting a kingly dish, and usually Her Majesty has but a few minutes to spare.

Fit for Royalty is that popular delicacy known as Chicken à la King. There is one way to prepare it that is so simple that even a Queen might condescend to turn her hand to it. All that is required is one green pepper, a can of boneless chicken, a small can of mushrooms, a small can of pimientos, and a white sauce.

Here is how Her Majesty makes Chicken à la King. The next time that you feel majestic, try making it this way.

Chicken à la King

Chicken à la King: Make a white sauce by creaming over a low flame, one-fourth cup butter with two tablespoons flour. Gradually add one and one-half cups milk, and cook slowly, stirring constantly, until thick. Season with salt and paprika. Sauté one diced green pepper in a little fat, and add it to the white sauce. Add one diced canned pimiento and contents one small can mushrooms. Dice the contents of one No. 1 size can of boneless chicken, and simmer it for ten minutes in the sauce. Be sure that the cooking is very slow, as rapid boiling will make the dish far less delicate. Serve on toast on biscuit halves or in patty shells.

Chicken à la King is excellent to serve at a chafing dish party, for Sunday supper, or for an after theatre spread, or for that luncheon that you desire to make "an occasion."

Gothic Leader Interred Under Calabrian River

Most regions have their buried treasure stories. Cosenza, chief city of Calabria, has one of the oldest and best, according to a writer in the Washington Star. It is at Cosenza that Alaric, first Gothic leader to conquer imperial Rome, was buried along with priceless treasures captured in Rome. Laden with the riches of the dying empire, Alaric and his barbarian hosts marched south to conquer Africa and the grain which abounded there. In Calabria Alaric died of the fever. His followers buried his treasure with him in the fashion of the day, but they made sure that the dead chieftain's repose would not be disturbed, either by avenging enemies or covetous treasure hunters. They diverted the course of the River Busento and buried Alaric far below the river bed. Then they restored the river to its channel. For security's sake they put to death every one of the prisoners who had helped bury Alaric, and marched on. The grave has never been discovered, though Alaric died 1,500 years ago. Legend has it that the grave is near the confluences of the Crati and the Busento rivers at Cosenza. When I saw this spot it was mostly a dry gravel bed with a narrow stream at which the village women washed their clothes. During the rainy season it is a large river. Its secret holds the same fascination for Calabria that the Nemi galleys hold for Romans.

Recreation Time Must Be Used to Advantage

Work is healthful but it must not have depressing associations. Pauses or changes in monotonous work will cut down boredom and monotony. Rest periods should not necessarily be used for rest, but for relaxations in diversion and recreation. But unless our play actually gives us relaxation, there is no benefit. American life at present is so arranged that play is not relaxation, but hard work, says Dr. Lauren H. Smith in Hygeia Magazine.

"Evening used to fall with a hush and tired men came home to rest in contentment. Evening now falls like a ton of bricks. If the house is quiet before midnight the evening is considered a failure. Are we going to give ourselves play, or is it to be frenzy?" he asks. "In order to gain play and rest we must use our time-savers to get ourselves more peaceful leisure than more excitement."

Method in It

At the dinner party one man caused a mild sensation. He was seen to be smoking cigarettes with a silk handkerchief tied tightly around his eyes.

One of the guests found the sight more than his curiosity could stand, and asked another diner the meaning of the phenomenon.

"Oh, haven't you seen him before?" exclaimed his fellow guest. "That's old Tightwad. I thought everybody knew him."

"But I still don't understand," said the other.

"Well," exclaimed the knowing one, "he's rather an artful sort of chap. He tells people he can name any cigarette just by smoking it, and so he never has to buy any."

Ants' Skyscrapers

Compared with the structure built by the termites and the great skyscrapers of our cities are insignificant achievements. Man, who is five or six feet tall, has built or plans to build to a height of 1,208 feet. The termites, only three-sixteenths of an inch from end to end, erect apartments rising twenty feet into the air.

Therefore man's buildings are only about one-seventh as high as the dwellings of the ant, relatively—that is considering the great difference in their respective sizes. The cubic space in an ant hill will contain a million times more inhabitants than the largest human habitation.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Highest Capital

La Paz, Bolivia, is the loftiest capital in the world, for it stands on a mountain top 12,470 feet above sea level. This is 2,000 feet higher than Quito, in Ecuador, and 6,000 feet higher than Mexico City. Its nearest rival for height is the far distant Lhasa, which stands at an altitude of 11,830 feet. The mean temperature of La Paz is 50 degrees Fahrenheit. But the cold nights are unrelieved by fireside comforts, as the folk have nothing to burn, there being neither coal nor trees in the desolate mountainous regions around the city.

Plant Heart Beat Doubled

Plants have no beating pulse that propels the sap upward, and such pulsations as have been recorded are due to the trembling of improperly adjusted instruments and not to the beating of the plant, experiments recently performed by several American and European plant physiologists indicate. The findings are directly in conflict with those of Sir Jagadis Chunder Bose, who announced some time ago the "beating heart" theory in regard to plants.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Fair Enough

Phil Falkins joshed Sam Sellers 'tother day for wearin' gray pants with his dinner jacket at Mrs. Olsen's reception. "The pants," grinned Phil, "is what you might call breeches of etiquette."—Farm and Fireside.

Corn Smut Will Decrease Yields

Disease Is Caused by Certain Type of Germ Belonging to Molds.

"The enlarged outgrowths or galls which may now be seen on the corn is smut," according to W. E. Brentzel, botanist and plant pathologist at the North Dakota Agricultural College. "This trouble," he says, "is somewhat similar to wheat smut although different in many important respects. Corn smut never goes to wheat and wheat smut never goes to corn. Seed treatment will control covered smut of wheat but has no value in the control of corn smut.

"This disease is caused by a certain type of germ belonging to the class known as molds. These germs may now be seen as a black powder falling from the corn smut galls. They pass from one season into the next by wintering over in old diseased stalks, sometimes in the soil and may also live in manure for several months. During the summer while the corn is growing the smut germs move about as dust in the winds and find lodging on the corn. The funnel-shaped pockets in the tops of corn and the pockets at the base of the leaves collect dust and water. When the germs or spores lodge in pockets containing moisture they begin to grow and in a short while form the smut ball which we now see in the corn fields.

Will Grow on Any Part.

"Corn smut is not particular about which part of the plant to grow on. When the parasite attacks the ears the grain usually is a total loss. When other parts of the plants are smutted, such as the leaves, tassels, silks and nodes, the amount of loss is hard to estimate. Often the plants are broken over, sometimes by the excessive weight of the smut galls and sometimes by the weakening of parts where the smut growth comes out. In one way or another smut is causing heavy losses in some fields.

"Growers have asked whether silage made from these smutted ears, and stalks will injure cattle. It is very true that these smut galls have an ugly appearance and some may hesitate to feed them to a fine lot of cattle. However, so far as is known corn smut has never caused any disease or ill effects when fed to cattle. In experiments conducted by the experiment stations of South Dakota, Kansas, Michigan and the United States Department of Agriculture cattle were fed corn smut in heavy amounts. In no case was any injury done to the cattle resulting from the smut.

Only Known Remedy.

"The only remedy known to avoid losses to the crop is to destroy the nearby source of the disease for the next year. In fields where this means of control is impractical it is necessary to rotate crops. Smut resistant corns have not been developed yet but plant breeders are having some success in this direction. It is hoped that in the near future we may have developed a variety of corn which will resist smut."

Big Quantity of Humus in Soil Most Desirable

One of the important explanations of the desirability of having a quantity of humus or decomposing organic matter in the soil is found in the capacity of humus for soaking up and storing water which is thus made available later for use by growing plants. Experiments have revealed that 100 pounds of sand can hold only 25 pounds of water, and 100 pounds of clay soil can hold only half its weight in water. In contrast, 100 pounds of decaying organic matter may hold as much as 180 pounds, or nearly twice its weight of water. Most soils are mixtures in varying proportions of sand, clay, silt, and organic material. As a rule the greater the proportion of organic matter contained in the soil the greater its water-absorptive capacity, and the greater reserves of moisture it will retain for resistance to dryness and hot weather.

Eradicate Barn Flies With Creosote Spray

Flies grow in filth and the first step in cleaning up a place is to remove all the dust, straw, manure, etc., from the barns and haul it out to the fields. Spray the floors and walls with a very strong solution of creosote. It is better to use this dip in its original strength if you can do it. After the dip has soaked in for a day or two, spray again with kerosene, following that with an application of naphthalene crystals. Be very careful of fire. Keep the hogs away from these breeding places and it is likely you will have no further trouble.

Improved Roads Needed for Operation of Farm

For economical operation of spray rigs, farm roads should be kept in good condition. An occasional dragging is not alone necessary for this. In addition to dragging it is necessary to have the road well drained. Many growers find that it pays to own a ditcher. They use this for their peach orchards to keep the drainage in good shape and then use it in keeping their roads well ditched. Spray rigs are heavy and dragging them around through the mud is hard on teams and expensive in time.

Mrs. W. J. Finerty passed away at Fort Morgan, Colorado, Tuesday, July 9, at 11:50 o'clock in the morning at the home of Mrs. Basil Lugeneel where she had gone to spend the day. She was talking and laughing with Mrs. Lugeneel when she had a heart attack, dying instantly. Her many friends were grieved to hear of her sudden death.

Mrs. Finerty's life was a lovely example of friendship and honesty. She was of a kind and loving disposition, always ready and willing to extend a helping hand to any who were in need, never thinking of herself but of others.

Ida Mae Harman Finerty was born February 24, 1874, at La Porte, Nebraska. In 1884 she moved with her parents to Randolph, where she grew to womanhood. She was married to W. J. Finerty, December 25, 1906, in Wayne, Nebraska. Two years later they moved to Gordon, Nebraska, where they lived until moving to Fort Morgan, Colorado, a year ago.

Little Demand Found For New Paper Money

After the first few days after its issuance, when the new bills were given out exclusively by the local banks, Uncle Sam's new paper currency has not been greatly in demand and most of it has found its way back into the banks.

Wayne banks have between 10 and 15 thousand dollars of the small-sized bills on hand, but people seem to be content to wear out the old bills before they demand the new ones, and there has been little call for them after the novelty wore off.

Fineest Grand Stand West of Chicago Nears Completion

FRONT VIEW OF NEW GRAND STAND ON NEBRASKA STATE FAIR GROUNDS

The above sketch is of the outside view of the new grandstand on the Nebraska State Fair grounds. It is a fineest grandstand west of Chicago. The men on the Board. They are the building men, pay for it, and are on the decorative plan of the stand. One of the great things about it is the way the roof is designed. It is a masterpiece of architecture. It is a masterpiece of architecture. It is a masterpiece of architecture.

The grandstand is another step in Nebraska's progress. A quarter of a million dollars has been spent (not tax money—the stand must pay for itself) to make it possible for you to watch the races in comfort and visit your friends in a building surpassed by none of its kind west of Chicago.
