

Francis Flood Tells of Farm Life in Brazil

Says Progress America's Hope for Agricultural Supremacy.

Farmers and business men of Wayne and the surrounding territory jammed and crammed their way into the Gay theatre last Monday afternoon, Jan. 12, until there was not even standing room.

Francis Flood, travel editor of the Nebraska Farmer magazine, was the speaker and the occasion was the business men-farmer get-together meeting, sponsored by Wayne business men and the local Kiwanis club.

American progress is our greatest weapon for use in a combat against agricultural products of Argentine and Brazil, Mr. Flood said in summarizing his remarks. The Argentine can produce an enormous quantity of agricultural commodities and can put them on the market cheaply, he said.

Ordinarily, he stated, it would seem as if America would eventually be doomed to take second place. One thing, however, is lacking in the South American countries, according to Mr. Flood. That one factor, he explained, is education.

Farmers of South America are hopelessly ignorant of modern farming and production methods. They lack the "three-Rs: reading, writing and arithmetic." They are backward. That, said Mr. Flood, is America's salvation.

He said that Nebraskans and Iowans should distinctly understand that there is no depression in the middle-west. "You have to get into South America or some foreign country to see what depression really is," he explained.

He told of being offered an enormous ranch at $15 a section. "And" he said, "I doubt that it would have been a very good buy at that seemingly low price."

Mr. Flood spoke of conditions in Brazil, and stated that it would be possible to say practically anything about Brazil and the statement would be true of some part. "You could ask me if it rained much in Brazil and I could tell you that in some parts (continued on last page)

COMMISSIONERS LET CONTRACTS FOR 1931

Democrat Named Official Paper; to Supply Stationery.

Wayne county commissioners at their meeting Tuesday, Jan. 13, selected The Nebraska Democrat, the Wayne Herald and the Winside Tribune as the official county papers for 1931.

The Nebraska Democrat was given the contract on stationery in view of the fact that The Democrat had the lowest bid. The Wayne Herald, with the only bid submitted on legal blanks, was awarded that contract.

Frank Wilson was appointed a member of the Soldiers' Relief commission to serve for a three year term.

Funds approved by the county commissioners are as follows:

County general fund, $60,000; county bridge fund, $40,000; county road fund, $50,000; mothers' pension fund, $2,000; Soldiers' relief fund, $2,000; and Wayne county fair and agricultural association, $2,000.

County Commissioner Frank Erleben explained that the funds are doubtless larger than the expenditures will be. They are purposely made high, since an additional levy cannot be made according to law in case any fund proves insufficient.

Entertains Employees of First National Bank

J. T. Bressler, Jr. and his wife entertained the officers and clerks and wives of the First National bank at a dinner party at the Hotel Stratton last night, Jan. 14. The affair was in honor of Mrs. and Mrs. J. T. Bressler, Sr.'s birthdays.

Mr. Bressler, Sr. was celebrating the arrival of his eighty-second year.

Calendar of Events Listed This Week

The Nebraska Democrat this week presents a "Chronology of the Year 1930," edited by Edward W. Pickard, the same man who edited the "Review of 1930" published in the Democrat two weeks ago.

This chronology occupies an entire page of the paper, and is presented by special arrangement. It will appear exclusively in The Democrat in Wayne. This calendar listing of important events here and abroad will be found on page six.

The most important events of the year, 1930, are set down in order of occurrence. International, foreign, and domestic events are listed, and a necrological calendar, giving the dates of all important deaths during the year, is included.

The chronological table of events of 1930 will give Democrat readers a quick, accurate, and helpful ready-reference history. It should be saved with the "Review of 1930" for future use.

Wayne Defendants Approve Decision

Court Orders Return of $117,199.19 to Local Business Men.

J. T. Bressler, Sr., A. R. Davis, J. T. Bressler, Jr., and William Von Seggern, defendants in a land deal involving 640 acres between Concord and Dixon, learned yesterday morning that the case has been rescinded.

This means that $117,199.19 will be given back to the above named defendants and that the plaintiff will have to take the land back again.

The case was tried last June, but decision was not given until yesterday morning in the January term of court at Ponca, Neb. The Wayne men interested in the case drove to Ponca to hear the decision.

SERVICES FOR HENRY KOCH LAST SUNDAY

Pioneer Carpenter Passed Away Thursday After Lingered Illness.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, Jan. 11, at 2:15 o'clock at the German Lutheran church here for Henry Koch, 66, who passed away on Thursday, Jan. 8. He had been a resident of Wayne county for 37 years. Rev. H. A. Teckhaus read the ceremony.

Henry Koch was born on May 12, 1864, at Propstelerhagen, Holstein, where he was baptized and confirmed in the Lutheran church. He emigrated to America in 1889 and moved to Millard, Neb.

Mr. Koch was married to Miss Elsie Wessel on Sept. 25, 1890. Three years later he and his wife moved to Wayne, where he followed his trade as a carpenter. He was employed with a local lumber firm for 24 years, until sickness forced him to sever that relationship.

Mr. Koch was one of the first members of the German Lutheran church in Wayne, and in 1900 built that organization's present place of worship. The last four years of his life were rather trying, but he bore his affliction cheerfully. He is deeply mourned by his widow, one brother, Herman Koch of Millard, Neb., and two sisters in Germany and more distant relatives.

Among out-of-town people who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. August Spiel of Emerson, Mr. and Mrs. Will Gradert of Emerson, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Belt of Emerson, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford of Dillon, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Schwarten of Wakefield, and Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Warnstedt of Norfolk.

"Bad Man" Andrew Says Story Was False

Wallace A. Andrew, the bold Wisconsin bad man who left the Oklahoma state penitentiary to answer charges in Nebraska and explain the disappearance of an Iowa school teacher, is back in Wayne. He arrived Saturday evening, Jan. 12, in leg irons and handcuffs, accompanied by Sheriff Archie W. Stephens and Jim Pife.

Andrew's present abode, the Wayne county jail, is not unfamiliar to him. He left the local pastille without ceremony and by force on Sept. 28, 1927.

Down in Oklahoma, where state authorities had put Andrew out of circulation for three years on an egg theft charge, the bad man had told a story.

Explained Mystery

Miss Myrtle Sizer, Mount Vernon, Iowa, school teacher, had mysteriously disappeared. Andrew signed a confession after his arrest in Oklahoma in which he stated that Miss Sizer was with him the night of his getaway from the Wayne county jail. She shot herself, he said, when he stopped the car to inspect the motor. According to his story he had buried the body between Carroll and Wayne.

Sheriff Stephens brought Andrew back to the scene of the purported suicide Saturday night. On the way back from Oklahoma Andrew admitted that the story was purely a work of his mind, a fiction fabrication designed to get him sent from Oklahoma to Iowa.

"I had already been sentenced to the Oklahoma pen," Andrew said. "I thought the Oklahoma authorities would send me back to Iowa to clear up the teacher's disappearance and that I would be tried up here on the automobile theft charge. Then I could have served

Local Professor Says Political Scientists Favor Progressivism

George W. Norris, Nebraska's militant senator, would get a bigger hand than his opponents from members of the American political science association, Prof. J. G. W. Lewis of Wayne State Teachers' college believes. Dr. Lewis returned Friday, Jan. 2, from the association's annual convention in Cleveland, Ohio.

Members of the group lean toward a progressive outlook, he says. As an example of their political tendencies, he cites an incident which took place during the convention.

A hotel strike was on in Cleveland. Hotels classified as unfair to organized labor were picketed. Professors attending the convention had not known of the labor trouble before their arrival in Cleveland, and some of them had registered at hotels of the unfair group.

The societies investigated and passed resolutions supporting the hotel labor unions. A number of men attending the convention left their hotels as a rebuke to the management.

The Cleveland meeting was held in close association with meetings of the both sentences concurrently." Denies Earlier Story

Andrew, on his way back from Oklahoma, said that he knew nothing of the whereabouts of Miss Sizer, and that he had never seen the school teacher. The woman who was with him here in Wayne, he said, was his wife and is still alive. He can produce her, he claims, if it is necessary to do so.

Since Andrew now denies any knowledge of the existence of the shallow grave which he described in his earlier confession, Sheriff Stephens believes that it would be useless to take him on a grave hunting expedition.

Has Calmed Down

Andrew may have been a bad man once. Authorities say that he was. But his demeanor has altered considerably. His air of bravado and his "tough guy" attitude are gone. It is a subdued bad man who sits in the county jail and broods over his past mistakes.

"I've learned my lesson," Andrew says. "I tried to get by without working and it couldn't be done. I've come back to take whatever kind of a sentence they want to give me. I've found out that nobody can dodge the law successfully. After I've paid for my crimes I'm going back to Wisconsin and get to work, earning an honest living."

"Crime Doesn't Pay"

Andrew seems sincere when he says he is through with his bad man career. He appears to be anything but a "tough hombre."

"Lots of 'em think they can beat the law," he says. "Tell them for me that it can't be done. You can get away with it for a while, but the (continued on page five)

MAN GETS 90 DAYS FOR CHICKEN THEFT

John Wrage Pleads Guilty to Charge of Stealing from Employer.

John Wrage, who had been working by the month for Henry Willers, nine miles south and four miles west of Wayne, was sentenced Tuesday to 90 days in the county jail and payment of $17.45 court costs on a charge of stealing chickens.

Information sworn out by Mr. Willers was to the effect that Wrage had stolen 12 Buff Orpington chickens from the Willers farm. The chickens he said, were valued at about $10.

Wrage admitted his guilt in county judge J. M. Cherry's court, and said that he had stolen in order to get more money. Willers testified that Wrage had been drawing good pay for a farm hand.

This is the first case of chicken thievery reported in Wayne county in some time

Death Gets Heavy Harvest in Wayne

Death stalked in Wayne county this last week.

The Grim Reaper was busy all week long taking loved ones from our midst.

Mrs. Mattie Parker, Ruthvin Hart, Henry Koch, and Irvin C. Trumbauer were all taken from Wayne. One was taken by a terrible accident. One had been suffering for several years. One died after a short illness.

At Winside, a little five-year old girl passed away from the results of a cold. There were two deaths at Altona.

A former Wayne man, whose folks still live here, was killed in an accident in Ohio.

Ours—taken! And we cannot question. We can only long for their return. A lesson is brought strongly home to us.

In the midst of life we are in death.

Anyone May Take Part in Rabbit Shoot

Fire Department and Gun Club Sponsor Charity Hunting Event.

"To arms, to arms!" is the cry which E. E. "Bunt" Fleetwood and Roy Meiers are shouting this week. The two men are captains of the competing teams for the rabbit hunt to be staged Sunday, Jan. 18.

Team captains have extended an invitation to everyone who likes to hunt to take part in the shoot-fest Sunday. It is not necessary, they say, for members of the teams to belong to the fire department or the gun club, the organizations in charge of the affair.

It is necessary, they warn, for every person taking part in the contest to have a 1931 hunting license.

Hunters will meet at the city hall at nine o'clock Sunday morning and will divide into two groups. They will check in with their rabbits (if any) at a specified time in the afternoon.

Losers of the contest will buy supper for the winners.

The rabbits will be sent to some charitable organization to be used in feeding needy unemployed.

Former Wayne Man Meets Death in Ohio

Bert J. Gossard of Lodi, Ohio, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Gossard of Wayne, was killed last Friday afternoon, Jan. 9, it has been learned here. No word has as yet been received here as to how Mr. Gossard met his death. Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Gossard left here for Lodi Saturday afternoon and have not yet returned.

Bert J. Gossard was 42 years old on Oct. 13, 1930. He formerly lived in Wayne and worked with his father in the creamery business here for two or three years before leaving Wayne to accept a position in a creamery in Lodi.

He is survived by his wife and seven children, the two youngest of whom are a girl, ten, and a boy 12 years old. Had Mr. Gossard lived until August, he and his wife would have celebrated their silver wedding anniversary.

Besides his wife and children, he is survived by his parents, one sister, Mrs. Mabel Sorensen of Wayne, and four brothers, Leonard Gossard of Los Angeles, Calif., Earl Gossard of Valier, Mont., Kelley Gossard of North Platte, and Ted Gossard of Ogalalla. Funeral services and interment took place at Lodi, O.

Word was received at press time that Mr. Gossard met his death while working in the creamery. He was killed instantly when a 90 pound pipe fell upon his head, crushing his skull and breaking his neck.

Auto Snatches Life of Irvin C. Trumbauer

Services for Local Man Wednesday Afternoon at M. E. Church.

Citizens of Wayne were horribly shocked Monday morning to learn of the tragic death Sunday night at 10:30 at a local hospital of Irvin C. Trumbauer, 48, former employe of The Nebraska Democrat and an employe of the Wayne Herald nearly a score of years.

Mr. Trumbauer's tragic death resulted from injuries sustained in an automobile accident two miles west of Allen about eight o'clock in the evening.

He had gone to Sioux City Saturday afternoon and was returning to Wayne on a bus Sunday evening. About two miles west of Allen the bus was sidetracked by a passing truck and stopped while the driver investigated the damage.

Several of the passengers got out of the bus to see what had happened. Mr. Trumbauer walked a short distance down the road with two other men to investigate, and had started to return to the bus.

While they were walking back a light coupe came over a hill and sped down upon the three men. The car crashed into Mr. Trumbauer, and he sustained a fractured skull, one broken leg, a broken arm, and back injuries. His body was badly mutilated and he died in a Wayne hospital.

The MONARCH "Speed-Oven"

Brings new convenience and economy to Electric Cookery

SPEED surely does count in electric cooking! Quicker action means greater convenience... and economy. No wonder, then, that the Monarch Electric Range has so rapidly become the favorite.

Its "Speed-Oven" is the result of improved design and more effective insulation. It actually bakes biscuits in 10 minutes from a cold start! The top units, too, are quicker in their action. With insulating blocks to prevent downward radiation, they represent the greatest advance toward speed and economy.

You'll like these all-enamel Monarchs on first sight... whether you prefer the pure white, the cool, restful Nile-Green or the warm, colorful Sunshine-Yellow.

And you will find a surprisingly wide assortment of styles and sizes we have to choose from. Come in today.

Chick Specialists Say to Make Ready Now

Now is the time to prepare for the 1931 crop of baby chicks, poultry specialists are advising the American farmer who raises them.

First, a house should be made ready for them. The good brooder house has a dry floor, plenty of fresh air and provision for letting in plenty of sunlight. Direct sunlight can be admitted through one of the modern substitutes for glass or through an open window.

Cleanliness in the brooder house is a prime requisite. The interior should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected before the tenants take possession.

Warmth is also necessary. It is supplied by the brooder or brooder stove. Dampness is more fatal to baby chicks than cool air, although they must be kept moderately warm.

It is well to put the brooder stove slightly to one side of the house so the chicks will have a chance to get away from extreme heat when they eat and exercise.

The floor should be covered with a litter that is free from dust and will not harm the chicks if they eat it. Fine cut alfalfa or clover or even straw and wood shavings are suitable.

BRYAN STARTS

Governor Charlie Bryan, in his first message to the state legislature, has advocated "reform" of Nebraska banking and municipal gasoline stations. He may be sincere about it, but it looks like spumoni to us, no matter how you spice it.

A governor can recommend any measure under the sun and rest easy in the knowledge that, if it is absurd the legislature will not adopt it. For a politician to advocate an unsound but dazzling piece of hokuspocus legislation with knowledge that no legislature in full possession of mental faculties would even think of passing it, is hardly fair ball.

Bryan is really recommending a return to the old guaranty fund plan—the plan that failed so disastrously in every state that has given it a trial. It is the plan that is about $18,000,000 on the red side of the ledger in Nebraska.

Bryan is really recommending a re-mob with such a recommendation, but we feel that good democrats will realize that the play was made for the grandstand.

He puts the burden on the legislature. If they don't pass the bill, Bryan can say, "Well, I tried to get 'em to do it." If they do pass it, Bryan can say, "The legislature did it."

The municipal gasoline station proposition brings up the old, old argument about public ownership of private business. Government ownership of the railroads during the war is always brought up when a discussion of that kind starts.

Hundreds of business men have invested hundreds of thousands of dollars in the gasoline business in the state. We don't believe competition from the state would be quite fair to those men who have added to the prosperity of the state by building and by offering employment.

Neither do we believe that operators of gasoline stations are making an excess profit, as is sometimes charged. None of them in Wayne, at least, are being made millionaires.

Maybe municipal gasoline stations would be profitable. Maybe they would cost the tax-payers quite a bit of money. We don't know. But we do know that we wouldn't care to experiment right now.

Aside from these two points, Bryan is to be congratulated for his program of economy. He indicated in the campaign for office that he would try to run the state on an economical basis. His actions after going into office seem to prove that he intends to live up to his promise. He has indicated that he will not approve of any unnecessary expenditure.

Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the republican national committee, sent an official letter to republican organizations announcing that "President Hoover has maintained the American standard of living." The letter should be referred to the heads of national, state, county, and municipal unemployment committees, the Red Cross, the Salvation Army and the Associated Charities.

It was inevitable that President Hoover would sometime select "Lincoln" as the subject of a public address, which is now announced. As rough old Dr. Johnson might say, Lincoln is always the last refuge of a tottering Republican administration.

Secretary Hyde's announcement that no part of the $45,000,000 drought relief fund will be used for food loans suggests a new slogan: The administration that puts the mule above the man.

Sometimes the man who is a big noise in the office is just a small squeak at home.

You can look for a square deal only from a square dealer.

ATHLETICS IN WAYNE

Sports fans of Wayne are fortunately situated. Where most towns the size of ours have only high school athletic events, we can watch contests of two high schools and a college. That Wayne appreciates its opportunity is not always evident. Crowds at the state teachers' college contests are not always all that could be desired, and the spirit of boosting for a local institution is not always as apparent as it might be.

Wayne's athletic events are good ones. The city high school, in defeating Sioux City in basketball the other night, went clear out of its scholastic class and came back with a victory worth boasting about. The college last year won the conference championship in basketball.

Win or lose, you'll see remarkable good sportsmanship at any athletic event you attend in Wayne, because Hickman, Holder, and Dale are the kind of coaches that produce clean, hard fighting teams.

Maybe you've never been interested in sports, but we'll wager that if you go to an athletic event here, you'll get quite some mental wallop out of it.

TEN FARMER PLANKS

In a recent booklet the American Farm Bureau federation gives, among other valuable information, its platform for American agriculture. The ten planks of this platform, in condensed form, are as follows:

1. The support of sound and economical production practices.
2. Placing in the hands of producers the control of the sale of farm products.
3. Equality for farmers in the standard of living enjoyed.
4. Adjustments to give the farmers parity with others in purchasing power.
5. Development of schools, roads, rural electrification, churches, health agencies, and all other factors contributing to an ideal community environment.
6. Farmer representation on all important public boards and commissions.
7. A national agricultural policy based on a free and independent farm people, as contrasted with foreign peasant systems.
8. The creation of new and enlarged markets for American farm products.
9. Maintenance of that economic system which protects private ownership of property and provides a just reward for individual effort; public protection through regulation; it opposes communism.
10. Providing an organization to supply facilities for group action in building a permanent, prosperous, free, independent American agriculture.

This appears to be a sound platform, worthy of the support of everyone who is engaged in the country's most important of all industries, agriculture. It might well be supported by all other industries, also. —Neligh News.

THINK OF THE FUN

Dr. Charles Durden, of the First Baptist church, is quoted as being of the opinion that the man who makes 15 thousand dollars a year and spends it all is not half so well off as the man who earns 15 dollars a week and spends 12 dollars of it. To save our lives, we can't agree with Dr. Durden. We have tried hard enough to, goodness knows. We have gone over the situation from every angle. We have put ourself in the place of both men. We have made reasonable deductions for income taxes, sickness, surcharges, hours of sleep, balanced diet and the whole business, but each time we have come to the same conclusion, and that is that we would a darned sight rather get 15 thousand dollars a year and spend it all than to earn 15 dollars a week and spend 12 bucks of it.

We have even gone back through all the copy books we could get hold of and have reread all that stuff about a penny saved being a penny earned, about how if you will take care of the pennies the dollars will take care of themselves, about the wisdom of laying by something for a rainy day; we have dug into the life insurance statistics showing that 90 per cent of all men over 60 are dependent, and still—we can't get away from it—we'd rather get 15 thousand a year and spend every cock-eyed cent of it than to earn 15 smackers a week and spend 12. There's no moral to it. For all we know it may be unnormal. But if we could have our druthers, we'd take the 15 grand!—Omaha World-Herald.

A PUBLIC FAULT

Governor Bryan struck at the roots of a public fault when he refused to listen to the assemblage of county commissioners who sought to secure a raise in the gasoline tax and to advise him to keep in office a competent state engineer but one popular with those who spend the road money. He justly rebuked public officials for accepting lavish entertainment from those who desire to sell supplies to public officials by giving them entertainment and making an annual "whoopie" party for the different county officials who meet in Omaha. Mr. Bryan said he did not blame those who desire to sell supplies to the county and state for trying to make sales, but accepting favors in the way they do places county and other officials in the position where they may be charged with being influenced in the use of public patronage. He said he heard many complaints while going over the state during the recent campaign that were not at all creditable. Things relating to road work from the man with the road plow to the engineer might be satisfactory to those who ate the turkey but others who want a part get the ax. —Madison Star-Mail.

RECKLESS DRIVING

The way some of these young fellows and also the older ones drive automobiles in Pierce is a fright. The speed limit means nothing to them. Another thing that is not enforced is kids under 16 driving a car. Some are driving who are scarcely weaned. The officers should get busy and enforce these laws before someone is killed and it is too late. Better save a lot of heart-aches and observe the auto rules and ordinances. —Pierce County Leader.

When you start up hill in your car you step on the gas. When you want to get out of the valley of depression step on the gas. —Nebraska (Ponca) Journal-Leader.

A Scotchman sent the surgeon's bill to his father-in-law when he learned that his wife's tonsils really should have been taken out when she was a little girl.

When you hear some birds knocking the preacher of their church you get a pretty good idea that the preacher is a very good man. —Columbus Telegram.

If one does not like to be under obligations to others, it is advisable to accept nothing more expensive than compliments.

The business optimist rushes in where pessimists fear to tread—and frequently emerges with the bacon.

This is a small world until you run out of gas a mile and a half from a filling station.

Propaganda is stuff that the editor is a goose for printing.

The Book Box

"Visa to France," by Berry Fleming. (Doubleday, Doran—$2.50) is a gay novel. It is not one of those depressingly "funny" books, but is really downright gay and live and full of rare good humor.

This story of the Riviera is based solidly upon the actualities of its characters and not upon the considered needs of the chance reader; its ironic contradictions and cross-currents show the conflicts of human nature and are not an obvious juggling of events for entertainment purposes. Mr. Fleming has looked the hero over thoroughly and recorded his findings.

Clement Train arrives at Les Planches-sur-Mer looking for a plot for a novel. He is driving a conspicuous automobile nicely stocked with wines bearing the proper marks and the proper years. He is wearing yellow gloves for which he has paid 180 francs "as a homage to convention" and which he has made extremely dirty "as a homage to romance."

The American author in search of a plot for a novel is surrounded by most complex situations, with expatriates of England, Germany, Italy, and America surrounding him. Plots literally beat in upon him from all sides. In this atmosphere he tries vainly to find the person who will make the central character for his story and in the end gives up because he sees nothing that a plot could be made of.

This irony of a plotless author surrounded by plots carries the undercurrent of the story, but the stories within the story might well stand on their own merits. It's a gay book.

"Gold Rush Days with Mark Twain," by W. R. Gillis, is the recollections of an old man who was Mark Twain's friend in the days when he lived among the Western mining camps.

The book contains chapters about the vigilantes, frontier killings, "bad" men, hold-ups, stage robberies, and the night life of San Francisco. The tone is rather humorous, full of the rough horse play and outlandish practical jokes which the boys inflicted upon Mark Twain with tireless ingenuity. Mark's reactions to these pranks make him appear a rather vain, irascible, and sentimental creature.

Most of the incidents portray Mark in a grotesque posture, and the effect is heightened by the curious stilted journalese employed by all concerned even during the most ludicrous and ribald scenes.

"Gold Rush Days with Mark Twain" is one of those agreeable books which fill gaps in autobiographies by supplying details which great men would be glad to leave in oblivion.

The first story of Chicago's gangs was told in "Diversey" by Mackinlay Kantor, published two years ago. Now in "El Goes South" he writes about the city-dwellers who hold the ordinary jobs and ride on elevated trains. His locale is Rogers Park, the far north side of Chicago. We've had the Gold Coast there, the slums, the grain market, and the Little Bohemia. But here we have the people whose lives hang on the thread of the elevated, the stricken average.

"Memoirs of a Murder Man," by Ex-Inspector Arthur A. Carey of the New York police department shows how feeble most mystery and detective fiction is when compared with the actual exploits of the homicide bureau. Sherlock Holmes, Philo Vance, and Doctor Thorndyke never started from such meagre clues as confronted the New York police on a score of famous cases that were successfully solved.

Inspector Carey joined the New York police department in 1889 and retired in 1928. He had seen crime detection grow from a rule-of-thumb affair to a highly scientific study. His memoirs are continuously thrilling, filled with more amazing feats of deduction than a dozen detective fictioneers ever imagined, clearly and modestly written, and dotted with portraits of New York police worthies from the days of Inspector Byrnes of the old Central Office of Arthur Woods and George V. McLaughlin.

But the murders are the thing! The Moloney case, the Elwell case, the Dot King case, the Rice-Patrick affair, the gang wars in which Jack the Dropper and "Little Orgy" Orger figured, the Wall Street bomb explosion in 1920, right down to the Gray-Snyder case and that of the Radio Burglar.

Inspector Carey concludes with two very wise and interesting chapters on the philosophy of murder and murder as a specialty, in which he pays his respects to lawyers, the law, and the press.

You can get 11 exploits of the immortal Jeeves for one buck. Doubleday-Doran have published P. G. Wodehouse's "Very Good, Jeeves" in a dollar edition. Experts have said that the dollar book will pay when it can be put on a nationally advertised commodity basis. Surely Jeeves is that sort of commodity.

If Jeeves sometimes is not so funny as at others, he shares attaining fortune with Sherlock Holmes, and he shows signs of attaining Sherlock's durability. The author is a rarity indeed who, starting out with the purpose of entertaining his readers, succeeds in creating a character who outlives all the currit creations of the Somberness Boy.

Next week, we'd like to give you a review of "A Cultural History of the Modern Age," by Edgon Friedell. It is an answer to Spengler's challenge in "Decline of the West." It is "Europe Spenglarized."

Will Durant is coming to town, and you can get his famous philosophy book at Jones' book store for one buck.

Milo Kremke is stocking a number of fresh, crisp new novels. He has Harry Kemp's "Tramping Through Life" available now to those who care for it.

And the holidays are all over. Ground hog day is the next one to look forward to—but even the oaks don't declare it a holiday.

Here's an announcement taken from the Walla-Walla (Wash.) Alumnus. We thought it was clever, so we're passing it along to you:

Detroit, Mich., "The Motor City." —Announcing latest 1930 Model, the Joanne Eloise. Now on display. It's beauty challenges and holds the eye, weighs 6 lbs. 5 oz. Steam lined mono-piece, body bright red, trimmed in pink, headlights blue, rumble seat well padded and enclosed. Claxon on its lustrous wall, easily heard at night, a brilliant performer. Fuel intake regular. Exhaust automatic. It is absolutely the sweetest thing in diapers.

The minister called at a Wayne home one Sunday afternoon and the precocious youngster of the household answered the bell.

"Dad isn't home. He went over to the golf club," he told the minister. The pastor's brow darkened. And so the youngster added, "Oh, don't worry. He ain't gonna play golf. Not on Sunday. He just went over for a few drinks and a game of peker."

When one grows old, So we are told, One cannot give offense

By slamming youth— And that, in truth, Sounds pretty much like sense—provided that one is old enough to be childish or doddering. Youth always respects enfeebled old age. And senility, on the other hand, is usually extremely envious, in secret, of youth. It is this feeling of envy that brings the doddering old man to a state of second childhood where the opinions of youth, if they differ from those of old age, rankle and cannot be forgotten.

Senile old age always wants the last word in an argument, whether there's any reason for that last word or not. Childish old age wants its opinions to go unquestioned. Resentment of any difference in thought is high.

Youth knows all this, and so youth does not take offense at having his lack of age held up to ridicule. Rather, the young person feels proud of the fact that he is young and has an advantage over his ridiculer.

Were youth of the same temperament as the above mentioned undesirable form of old age, youth might strike back with remarks casting reflection on the waning power of his adversary. But youth does not follow this course for the simple reason that youth does not feel contempt—only pity.

We are thankful that the cases of "Childish" old age are few and far between in Wayne. Wayne's pioneer men and women have lived lives of usefulness, and they have not let advancing years hamper the vigorous alertness of their minds. A wise old person is naturally more brilliant than a wise youngster—the old person has had more time in which to learn the secrets of life.

She replied, "I'd like a frozen fruit cocktail, some caviar, an order of frog legs, anchovy paste, an order of fresh boiled lobster, demi-tasse, and some strawberry shortcake."

John answered, "All right. Now I know what you'd like. What are you going to have?"

Dear Scott Shots: "I am deeply in love with a boy and want to marry him. He loves me, too, but doesn't know that I have false teeth. If I tell him, he might not marry me. What should I do?—Puzzled." Dear Puzzled:—Marry him and keep your mouth shut. —Scott Shots.

We will now listen to that latest song hit, "I'm Up With the Birdies," by Bobby Jones.

"Give me a quarter's worth of rat poison," Bill McEachen demanded in Felber's drug store.

"Do you want to take it with you now," Mr. Felber asked. "No," Bill replied. "I'll send the rats in after it."

And the other day a woman went into the Rexall drug store and asked, "Have you anything for gray hair?" To which the clerk replied, "Only the greatest respect, madam."

A student came up to him and asked, "Should I leave the word 'prosperity' out of this sentence in my essay?"

And in conclusion, we state with conviction, without fear of contradiction, that tomorrow will be Friday.

'BAD MAN' ANDREW ADMITS TEACHER STORY WAS FALSE

law always wins in the end." On Monday, Jan. 12, at 3:30 p. m., Andrew went to his hearing on a charge of stealing an automobile valued at $500 from H. M. Porter's garage. The car was the property of J. H. Logan of Carroll. The prisoner waived preliminary examination and was held for trial in the present term of district court. Bail was fixed at $2,000, but the defendant did not put up bail money, so was sent to the county jail to await trial. "I can't give bail," he said. "When they arrested me down in Oklahoma, I had $250,—but it's all gone now." Andrew, in the same jail he once escaped from, is being given little chance for a repetition of his earlier feat. Sheriff Stephens says that the convict is being watched carefully at all times.

Prisoner Behaved
On the trip back from Oklahoma, the sheriff did not like to take the criminal into restaurants to eat with leg-irons clanking and handcuffs making him conspicuous.

The sheriff removed the leg-irons and cuffs before they stopped for meals. "I told Andrew that I was doing it for his benefit," the Sheriff said. "I told him that he had better not make any move to get away, because I would hate to have to shoot him. 'You got away once,' I told him, 'but you'll never do it again.'"

Andrew seemed to be grateful for Sheriff Stephens' consideration of his feelings, and assured his guard that he would not make any attempts to get away. "You don't need to worry about my giving you any trouble," he told the sheriff. "I've decided to take my medicine and get it over with."

Sheriff Stephens said that Andrew behaved like a model prisoner all the way back. The man is apparently fairly well educated, Mr. Stephens says, and seems to have a high degree of intelligence.

Pershing Offered A Million Dollars for His Story of War

The Lincoln Journal will print General John J. Pershing's "Own Story of the World War." General Pershing's story will eventually be printed in book form. But it will not come out as a book until June and July and then it will sell for $10.

Pershing accepted the offer of a group of newspapers who cooperate together in buying big features. The story is the most expensive one ever to be offered to the readers of any newspaper.

The story starts Monday and runs in the daily and Sunday Journal for the next three months. If ordered during January 1931, $1.75 will pay for three months time, or a whole year may be had for $5.50, daily and Sunday, or the daily without Sunday for $3.50 a year in Nebraska and Kansas.

The Lincoln Journal is the only daily between Omaha and Denver printing regularly at night, in fact after 5 P. M. Editions are printed right up until train time day and night. The Morning Journal comes in time for mail delivery the same day.

The Lincoln Journal gives unexcelled service on a Morning newspaper from the capital city, edited 100% for Nebraskans. All of the other big Nebraska morning dailies are printed on the Iowa line and edit for Iowa readers also. With the legislature in session you will want a Lincoln daily. The Sunday Journal has eight pages of colored comics. Calvin Coolidge and Alfred E. Smith are also writing for the Lincoln Journal. Don't give money to strangers, order direct or thru our office.

Ruthvin Page Hart, 64, passed away at his home on East Fourth street here Wednesday evening, Jan. 7, at about ten o'clock as a result of hemorrhages.

Mr. Hart had come to Wayne in February, 1930, and had been employed as a laborer. He was born on June 5, 1866, to Edward and Asenth Hart, both deceased.

He was a member of the Christian Science church. Services were held Saturday afternoon at the Beckenhauer chapel, with Mrs. E. A. McGarragh as reader. Interment was in Greenwood cemetery.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary M. Hart, and other relatives and friends.

AUTO TAKES LIFE OF IRVIN C. TRUMBAUER

tal without ever regaining consciousness.

Saturday morning he had been laughing and joking with some of his many friends in his customary good-humored way. Sunday night those same friends realized that a real companionship had passed out of their lives.

Those in the printing trade mourn the loss of a master craftsman. "Trummy" took pride in a good job, well done, and he loved his work. Several times during his lifetime he had abandoned the printing business for a trial at something else, but always came back to the work for which he had so much ability.

It is "30" for a good printer and a good fellow, whose loss is felt by the entire community.

Irvin C. Trumbauer, son of Ed J. and Anna Trumbauer, was born Sept. 16, 1881, at Jesup, Iowa.

His early life was spent in eastern Iowa, and he finished high school at the age of 13. At 14, he chose the printing trade as his life vocation. He continued in the work up until the time of his death.

After serving his apprenticeship at Marcus, Iowa, he took a position at Emerson, Neb., and from there came to Wayne where he served on The Nebraska Democrat for about eight years.

Then he went to the Wayne Herald and had worked there ever since, with the exception of work in the Omaha Printing company and on the Alhambra News at Alhambra, Calif.

While at Emerson, he married Blanche E. Kellogg on Jan. 14, 1902. To this union a son, Darold Kellogg Trumbauer, now 20, was born.

He leaves to mourn his departure, his wife, Blanche, his son Darold, his father, Ed J. Trumbauer, one brother, Frank A., and four sisters, Mrs. Blanche Roberts and Mrs. Gayle Carter of St. Charles, Iowa, Mrs. Adaline E. Burkhead of Sioux City, Ia., and Mrs. Mai L. Davis of Des Moines, Ia. His mother and two brothers preceded him in death.

He was a member of the Masonic, Odd Fellows, and Rebekah lodges.

Funeral services for the deceased were held Wednesday, Jan. 14, at the M. E. church, with Rev. W. W. Whitman officiating.

Pall-bearers were Martin L. Ringer, B. W. Wright, L. B. McClure, Park Mabbott, Willis Noakes, and Lou Winegar.

Services at the grave were in charge of the Masonic lodge, with W. M. K. N. Parke presiding.

Motor Vehicles Cause Most Accidents Here

Motor vehicles wrecks were responsible for 55% of the 10,004 accident casualties in Nebraska in 1930.

Fifty-seven percent of all accidental injuries; 26% of all permanent disabilities from accidents, and 42% of all accidental deaths in Nebraska in 1930 were caused by autos. More than 60% of all auto accidents reported occurred on public highways outside of cities and villages.

1930 accidents in Nebraska killed, injured, and disabled more Nebraska women and children than Nebraska soldiers of the World War who were killed, disabled, or wounded in action in the whole 19-month period.

Combinations of disregard for speed laws, stop sign infractions, reckless blind driving and road hogging on the part of drivers, together with sharp turns, narrow bridges, loose gravel, poor visibility over hilltops, and unmarked or unlighted road obstructions in the shape of parked cars, trucks, other vehicles, loose animals, gravel piles and road working equipment were implied in a large majority of the 5500 motor vehicle accidents studied during the year.

Motor vehicle accidents caused 4983 injuries, 126 disabilities, and 340 deaths; other public accidents caused 1,274 injuries, 83 disabilities, and 205 deaths; agriculture-employment accidents caused 872 injuries, 124 disabilities, and 73 deaths; industry-employment accidents caused 581 injuries, 80 disabilities, and 85 deaths; and home accidents caused 973 injuries, 80 disabilities, and 116 deaths.

Collisions caused the largest percentage of automobile accidents, with 1391 collisions making 25.4 per cent of the motor vehicle casualties. Collisions killed 47 people in the late.

Pedestrians were badly treated by automobile drivers, 59 being killed, 49 people were killed at railroad crossings, 32 by skidding cars, and 28 when drivers lost control. Speeding took 16 lives, and reckless driving took 12. Blinding lights caused 11 deaths.

Aviation, which comes under the head of motor vehicles, took 13 lives in the state during the year.

Nebraska Town May Lead in Paved Streets

Eight years ago the New York Times and several engineering journals proclaimed to the world that with the laying of 110 blocks of asphalt paving, nearly eight miles, Ravenna, in Buffalo county, Nebraska, deserved credit of having the most paving of any town of its size in the United States. Census figures of 1930 place Ravenna's population at 1559.

Whether Ravenna still has its pedestal is a question that could be decided only after nationwide research. Its eight miles of paving cover the entire town with the exception of a few blocks at the edge which have developed since the pavement was laid. Alleys in the business district are paved with concrete, all the rest of the paving being brick and asphalt-on-crete-base. As the town lies at the base of the hills, several of the streets were built to serve both traffic and drainage purposes.

The main street was built in form of a boulevard with electric lighting. Central parking has shrubs and flowers in the spring and summer. The streets give Ravenna the appearance of a town three times its size.

Pavement was laid at a cost of $240,000. Eleven and a half miles of cast iron watermains were laid beneath it. In eight years the pavement has never been broken.

Much of the pavement was paid for in cash. The bonds are being retired at a normal rate, only three defaults in the payment of the assessments of any property having been experienced.

INSTRUCTOR COMMENTS ON SPEECH CONFERENCE

The attempt of the Teachers colleges to train teachers to do effective work in speech education in the elementary grades was one of the most important topics discussed at the recent National Speech Conference in Chicago, according to Miss Lenore Ramsey, who attended the meeting.

Much stress was laid upon the responsibility of the elementary teacher in guiding the speech of children preceding the self-conscious period. What is learned early is considered natural. The opportunity of the elementary school lies in training the children in good speech habits early enough to make good speech natural for them.

The potential influence of the radio and the "talkie" picture upon American speech was another of the conference topics that proved of much interest to Miss Ramsey. That, eventually, only college graduates will be admitted to the profession of radio announcing is the belief of the Vice-President of the National Broadcasting Association as expressed at the meeting. He stated that in England at the present time only Honorary men from Oxford or Cambridge are commentators (announcers.)

The Speech Association is extending its efforts into new and allied fields. Miss Ramsey states. Some of these fields are debate, oratory, verse-speaking, conference speaking, radio address, story telling, psychology of speech, physics of speech sounds, pathology and correction of speech disorders, stage directing and stage craft.

WAYNE GETS BASKET BALL CHAMPIONSHIP

The Intercollegiate basketball championship of Nebraska for 1930 was awarded to the Wayne State Teachers College by the Athletic Association at its annual meeting in Lincoln, in late December. Kearney was awarded the football championship for 1930.

A new ruling was passed making it necessary for each team in a conference to play a "round robin" in football and basketball before it can be considered conference champion, the football to be played alternate seasons and the basketball to be played the same season.

F. G. Dale of the Wayne State Teachers College faculty presided at the meeting and was reelected President of the Association.

Better Breakfasts

ONCE upon a time there was a bride who made an alarming discovery. She discovered that the man who had been a Romeo by moonlight and a regular fellow by electric lights of theater and nightclub, was something entirely different by sunlight—early morning sunlight, at least. To put it plainly, he was a breakfast grouch. For years he had breakfasted at his club, behind the solitude of his morning paper.

But, being an ingenious bride, she mapped out a plan—a better breakfast campaign. No two breakfasts in the month would be identical; each breakfast would feature one of his favorite foods. He adored mushrooms, this difficult husband, so here was her menu for Breakfast No. 1—

Menu
Baked Apples
Mushroom Omelet
Bran Muffins
Marmalade
Hot Beverage

Mushroom Omelet: Beat three egg yolks well, add three tablespoons milk, three-eighths teaspoon salt and one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Beat three egg whites until stiff, and fold into the yolks. Pour into a hot, greased skillet and set over a low fire until brown on the bottom and the mixture is set. The omelet may be set in a moderate oven for a few moments. Before folding the omelet, pour over this Mushroom Sauce: Melt one and one-half tablespoons butter, add one and one-half tablespoons flour, and stir until smooth. Add one-half cup milk, slowly, and the liquor from one 4-ounce can mushrooms. When smooth and creamy add the cut-up mushrooms, and season to taste with salt and pepper. Pour over the omelet before folding. Fold the omelet over on to a hot platter and serve at once.*

Declares Nebraskans Must Conserve Water

Water, not the soil, is Nebraska's most vital resource. Rainfall is its most important income. It must be preserved.

That is the message of George E. Condra, director of the conservation and soil survey division of the University of Nebraska. He believes Nebraska's water resources are necessary for agricultural prosperity.

The supply of water under the ground is a source that must be reckoned with, Dr. Condra contends. It is the state's most important resource and should be conserved in quality and volume for irrigation, domestic and industrial purposes.

Rivers could be utilized against drought and for water power more effectively than they are now, he says. Little use is made of the Republican, Loup, Elkhorn, Niobrara, and the lower course of the Platte, he has found through comprehensive study.

Dr. Condra strongly recommends construction of storage reservoirs to hold the water during the dry seasons. River channels should be narrowed and in some cases changed from the sandy loose soil beds, over which they flow, to close-texture soils nearby in order to give quicker delivery and to prevent so much evaporation and wasteful seepage.

Nebraska has statutes on surface water, but needs a law governing the allotment and administration of underground water and to prevent its pollution. Nebraska, Dr. Condra says, must sense her lazy extravagance and enact constructive conservation legislation that will increase materially agricultural production.

Society to Preserve Trees for Memorials

Officers of the national society of D. A. R. early this year will designate another American tree which is worthy of preservation because of its historical importance.

This action will be taken in accordance with society's purpose to maintain living memorials between the present and the past. One tree a year is thus to be preserved, and all the trees that have been saved for posterity are to be kept in good health insofar as possible. Unfortunately, many of the nation's most historic trees have been the victims of neglect and some of them are in such condition that their duration of life is necessarily limited.

The famous "Land Office elm" at Marietta, O., thought to be the oldest in that state, was restored last year. So poor was the condition of the patient that a major "operation" was necessary. The tree was standing when the first permanent English settlement was made in the Northwest territory. Shading the land office, where land settlements were made of Revolutionary war scrip, and allotments of bounty lands were made and plats recorded, the tree was tied up with all the hopes and fortunes of the pioneers in Ohio.

Protection for Bees Necessary

Exercising to Generate Heat Does Not Improve Wings of Workers.

Every time a bee flaps its wings it is just one more flap nearer bee heaven, for bees cannot replace or repair worn-out tissues like other animals, B. A. Slocum of the New York State College of Agriculture explained recently. Winter protection is necessary for bees because the only way they can keep warm is to form a cluster in the hive, and the bees on the inside of the cluster flap their wings, just as people would wave their arms to generate heat. When the temperature falls below 57 degrees heat must be generated, he says.

Heat Wears Out Bees.
The bees in the cluster fit so tightly that those on the outside act as an insulator, the hairs on their bodies intertwine and incorporate tiny air particles which increase their insulating value. The generation of heat wears out the bees so that they soon become old, and if an excessive amount of heat is needed the colony may die before spring. At least the bees will be old and die more rapidly than they are replaced with young bees, making a condition which beekeepers have called "spring dwindling." It is difficult to get such colonies in shape strong enough for the honey flow.

Packing Boxes Useful.
The remedy, Mr. Slocum suggests, is to protect the hives with packing cases and to provide windbreaks. Many types of packing cases and various insulating materials are satisfactory. Detailed instructions how to pack bees is given in the free Farmers' Bulletin 1012, available at the office of publications at the New York State College of Agriculture.

Properly Housed Fowls Will Prove Profitable

(By M. A. SEATON, Extension Poultryman, Kansas State Agricultural College.)

Poultry profits for the coming year depend mainly on the pullets.

In managing most poultry flocks it is considered advisable to cull the hens to a point where they will comprise about one-fourth to one-third of the flock, and have sufficient pullets to make up the remainder. If a sufficient number of good pullets are available to carry out this plan a successful poultry year should be in sight if good management is practiced. If the pullets have been poorly developed and are small and unthrifty, winter egg production will be low.

Hens will need a well-constructed and properly ventilated house to lay a large number of eggs this winter. If a satisfactory house is not available plans should be under way to remodel or build a new one. It is advisable not to crowd the pullets. Cull and sell part of them. At least three square feet of floor space should be allowed each pullet.

Soy Bean Hay Compared With Alfalfa for Cows

Several years ago the Pennsylvania experiment station concluded a three-year feeding test in which different grades of soy bean hay were compared with alfalfa hay as a roughage for dairy cattle and the results are well worthy a careful study. Soy bean hay is not as easily cured as alfalfa or clover, partly because it is not ready for harvesting till late in the season and partly because it is somewhat coarse and does not dry out as readily as the other legumes mentioned. The result is that the quality of the average soy bean hay crop is usually somewhat below that of the common legumes. It usually produces a smaller tonnage per acre than alfalfa, but yields about as well as clover.

Have Spray Equipment in Order Quite Early

The fruit grower who runs out his spraying equipment from winter quarters in February or early March, inspects it carefully and secures all needed parts and accessories, is planning ahead profitably and doing much to prevent costly delays and failure during the busy spraying season. Much more time may be had for a careful study and consideration of the spraying equipment and its needs for effective spraying work if such matters are given attention during the winter before spring spraying work begins.

Great emphasis should be laid upon seeing whether the spray pump, valves, nozzles, hose and other parts and accessories work properly.

Black Knot Treatment in Plums and Cherries

The only effective treatment for black knot in plum and cherry trees is to cut out and carefully burn all the knots. Destroy entirely any trees that are badly infested. This disease spreads so rapidly that quick work is needed to save clean trees. It is believed that a fungicidal spray, like lime sulphur or bordeaux, at dormant strength before growth starts is a safeguard for the clean trees, but the knots themselves must be burned and careful watch kept during the season to catch any just starting. When handling these knots use canvas gloves, and do not touch the knobby or gloves on clean parts of the tree.

Coueurs Des Bois

The coueurs des bois, later called voyageurs, were, literally, forest rovers. During the French regime immense forests covered Canada, which teemed with fur-bearing animals. Hunting, therefore, and the consequent fur trade with the Indians appealed to some adventurous spirits more than farming, and as a result, a large number took to the former life and became an important factor in the pioneer development of new Canada. They figure picturesquely in early Canadian history and in subsequent fiction.

Lobster's Speed

One unacquainted with the lobster would not give it credit for much speed but it is a graceful swimmer and possesses the power of shooting with great rapidity through the water. That is accomplished by the broad plates at the end of its tail. These, put in motion by the powerful muscles connecting them with its body, strike the water with immense force, enabling the lobster to project itself many feet. Observation has shown that one stroke is sufficient to propel it from eight to ten yards in a second—the speed of a fast sprinter.

No Standing Still

To reach the port commonly known as "Success" we must sometimes sail with the wind, and sometimes we must sail against it. Conditions determine this matter. But the outstanding thing is that we must sail, not drift nor lie at anchor.—Grit.

A British Favorite

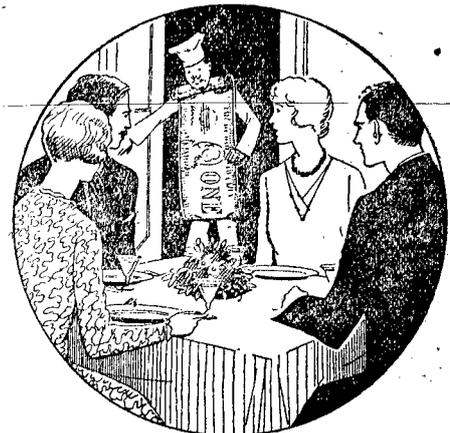

"TRY this—it's new!" says the high-pressure salesman to the American buyer, and the American buyer is apt to try it, at least, because it's new. But should this salesman step into the office of a British buyer, with this same selling talk, he would probably go out with an empty order blank. It's the same psychology which prompts the American to buy a new top coat every year or so, and the Englishman to hang on to his old coat, and like it better as it grows older.

The same holds true of food as of top-coats. The conservative Britisher likes the foods his father liked, and looks askance on commodities that are "new" or "different."

ed the list—in fact 80 per cent of the United States exports of canned grapefruit has gone to the United Kingdom.

This seems strangely at odds with the experience of salesmen who have experienced the strong dislike of the British retail trade for adding new lines to its stock. There is, however, a possible explanation. Canned grapefruit is mature grapefruit. It is picked from the trees at a later stage in the ripening process than that for shipment fresh, and consequently there is in the canned product a minimum of astringency. It has that mellow flavor that the English like. Both in the canned grapefruit juice and in the canned fruit there is a quality and richness that no doubt appeals to the British palate. At any rate this comparative new-comer is in great demand for hors d'oeuvres and in fruit salads at lunch and at dinner over there.*

A Dollar Dinner For Four

If you lived down by the sea and pulled your fish out of the water, if you had a little garden in your back-yard and pulled lettuce and green things from the soil—living would be simple, wouldn't it?

If you live in the city—well, it needn't be so complex. Just phone the grocer for salmon, fresh-caught from the sea, in cans, and string beans fresh-gathered from the garden, and fresher in cans than in the market. Pay him one dollar for a dinner like this, to serve four persons. That's simple enough, isn't it?

Creamed-Salmon and Celery 22¢
Sautéed Hominy 10¢
Stringless Beans 16¢
Lettuce Salad 10¢
Bread and Butter 8¢
Cottage Cheese Custard 30¢
Coffee 4¢

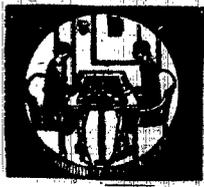

Creamed Salmon and Celery: Make a white sauce of two tablespoons of butter, two tablespoons of flour, one and one-half cups of milk, and salt and pepper to taste. Add two-thirds of a tall can of pink salmon and one-half cup of cooked diced celery. Serve on a hot platter, surrounded by the hominy.

Sautéed Hominy: Drain one-half of a No. 2½ can of hominy and sauté gently in two tablespoons of butter in a skillet until a golden brown. Season to taste with salt and pepper and pile the hominy around the salmon.

Cottage Cheese Custard: Beat two eggs slightly, add one cup of diluted evaporated milk, four tablespoons of sugar and one-fourth teaspoon of salt. Add one cup of cottage cheese, working until smooth. Pour into custard cups, set in a pan of hot water, and bake in a moderate oven, 325 degrees, until a knife comes out clean, or for about thirty to forty-five minutes. Serve cold.*

there were 200 inches of rainfall a year. You could ask me again if there was much rain in Brazil, and I could tell you that in some parts of the country it did not rain for two or three years. I would be telling you the truth both times."

He stressed the gigantic size of the Brazilian country, and spoke of ranches as large as the states of Nebraska and Iowa combined.

He told of a dairy farm with 2100 head of cattle, where no scientific principles whatsoever were applied. "Twelve and 13 year old youngsters here in America know more about dairying than owners of dairy farms in South America," he declared.

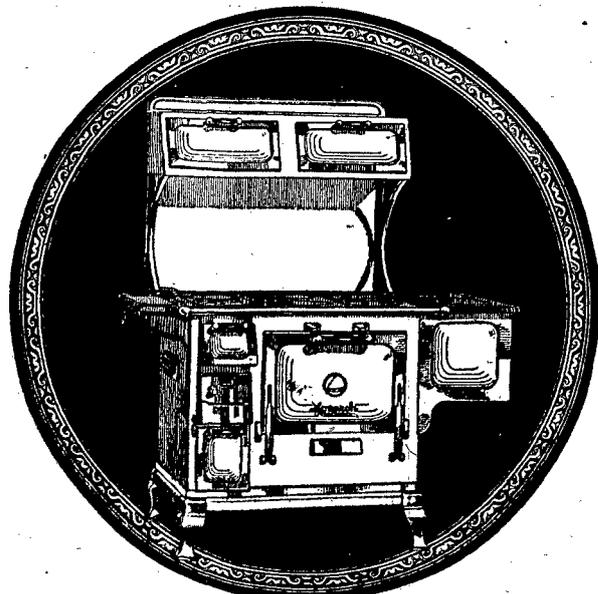

Reo de Janeiro, "city of January," he termed the most beautiful city in the world. At least, he said, it is the most gorgeous city he has ever seen. Streets and sidewalks are inlaid with varicolored tiles, he said, and nothing has been spared to make the city the beauty spot of the world.
