

Bernston Wins Question Contest

College Student Submits Answers To Questions In Novel Manner

Einar Bernston, sophomore student at Wayne state teachers college and son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Bernston of 314 East fifth street, Wayne, was adjudged winner of The Nebraska Democrat's contest in which 17 advertisements were published on a page in question form three weeks ago. Last week the same page of advertisements was published again with the answers to the questions printed in black face type.

Many answers were received but Bernston's entry was considered the best due to its novelty. The entry was submitted as a miniature Nebraska Democrat building with the doors open. Inside and to the rear was placed a pair of wood rolls upon which was placed a long ribbon of paper upon which was neatly typed the questions asked in advertisements and their answers in red. By turning the wood rolls slowly the paper ribbon appears as a motion picture screen upon which appears the advertisements. At the conclusion was Bernston's fifty word essay telling why he liked to trade with Wayne merchants. Anyone wishing to see and inspect this entry is asked to visit the Democrat office on West third street in Wayne.

Here are the fifty words submitted with Bernston's entry: "My policy is to trade with the merchants of Wayne primarily because of the sincere efforts made in helping to build up the prestige of our community which must be a most beneficial nature to the students living here throughout the year. Their motto is evidently: 'Consider the individual'."

Second prize was won by Mrs. Ray Perdue, route one Wayne, and third prize goes to Mrs. Sant Steele of 115 West eleventh street, Wayne. If these persons will call at The Nebraska Democrat office their prizes will be awarded them. Honorable mention winners will be notified of winning theatre tickets by postal card.

Pile To Finger-print, Mug Felons for 'G' Men

Every day the drive against organized crime in America is more in evidence. The "G" men are out to get their men and are taking advantage of every facility possible to make this country a safe place in which to live.

County Sheriff James H. Pile is lending his support to the program outlined by the federal department of justice and now has a large bulletin board erected in his office upon which are thumb tacked, rogues gallery photographs of all notorious hoodlums in the country together with their fingerprints. When a hoodlum has been apprehended, his "mug," as officers call it, is taken down from the board and a notation is made as to his disposition.

All persons convicted of felony in Wayne county will be "mugged" and finger printed too, sheriff Pile said. Three photos are made, three sets of physical descriptions along with fingerprints are made out to accompany them. One of each of these sets are kept on file at the office of Sheriff Pile and the other two are forwarded to the department of justice office in Washington where they are filed for future reference.

In the event Sheriff Pile is looking for someone charged with a felony, he has a blank form he can fill out and send to headquarters. There copies of this form are made and broadcast to peace officers throughout the country. Crime detection in America is becoming a most highly specialized field of endeavor. Anyone contemplating crime these days should think twice and then think again before pitting themselves against the smart and highly organized "G" men organization.

Another cousin, Marlene Wheeler of Lincoln, will act as ring-bearer. The bride will be gowned in a high waisted yellow taffeta of sweeping princess lines and deeply quilted shoulders and hem. Her attendant, Miss Boardman, will carry out the bride's colors by wearing a long green crepe. Both will wear white slippers. Bouquets of yellow roses will be carried by each. Rehabilitation Corporation Gives Families New Lease On Life

Though modest in its claims, probably one of the most helpful of the governmental agencies set up by the Roosevelt administration is the National rural rehabilitation corporation. This agency concerns itself with taking families off relief rolls and giving them a new start in life. Headquarters of this agency for Wayne and Stanton counties is located in the Wayne county courthouse with J. I. Pederson of Hartington in charge and Richard Fanspe of Wayne his assistant.

Wayne county has 17 active cases and Stanton county has nine which are handled through the local office. Thirteen of these families which are called cases were taken from relief rolls of Wayne county and are now making good livings through their own efforts on farms of from 40 to 200 acres in size.

The average loan granted these families amounts to $600 and is furnished for the purpose of purchasing livestock, feed, seed, machinery and providing living expenses for these families until they are again able to support themselves.

The rate of interest charged by the corporation is five per cent per year and 71 persons are being benefitted through loans made to the 17 families in Wayne county, officials at the local office say.

So far this season the corporation has purchased 28 horses, 21 cows, 12 sows, 1,730 baby chicks, 821 bushels of oats, 574 bushels of corn, 17 tons of hay, 45 pieces of machinery, 3,600 bushels of seed and 3,500 pounds of chicken feed.

On farms rented for families by the corporation under a cash rent agreement, the corporation guarantees payment of rent with the understanding that its supervisors and assistants will have complete charge of the crop until the rental has been paid.

Two graphic examples taken at random from the files of the local N. R. R. C. office show how the cases are handled. For reasons which are obvious, names of the families concerned have been substituted by letters.

Mr. and Mrs. A and family of four kiddies came from Missouri to Wayne county early last winter. They had lived in Wayne county at one time but since had gone to Missouri where they had purchased a small farm. Because of crop failures and continued low prices for farm commodities they lost their land and had been living on relief.

Some household goods and a dilapidated automobile were all the worldly possessions they had on returning to Wayne county, but they were able to rent a quarter section of good farming land under a cash agreement, but found that they were unable to secure a loan with which to buy necessities for making a new start.

On April 1, of this year they applied to the N. R. R. C. for a loan of $858 with which to purchase horses, cows, pigs, baby chix, feed, seed and machinery.

The loan was soon approved and the local supervisor immediately went about the job of setting them up. Mr. A. now has good prospects. He and his little brood have taken a new lease on life and firmly believe they will be on their own in another year. Not only that, this family is saving toward a down payment on a little farm of their own.

Just prior to making application for their N. R. R. C. loan this family had been advised by persons with whom they had talked, to return to Missouri where they could go back on relief.

They have a good garden and orchard which are producing foodstuffs which they are canning for winter. Their cows provide them with a nice little cream check and they only wish they had made application for a loan long before, rather than remain on relief as long as they did.

Another case is that of the B. family, consisting of a young man, his wife and baby.

They had been farming in a small way with little or no income and were at the point of applying for relief when they learned of N. R. R. C. They are now living on 40 acres, for which Mr. B. is able to pay the rental by working for his landlord. He is interested in bee culture and already had 20 stands of bees when he made application of N. R. R. C. for a loan of $559.

His loan was not long being granted and with the money he was able to purchase enough seed for small scale truck farming and bee raising. In addition to that he purchased 500 baby chix and a cow.

Mr. B. is now taking honey from his hives and is reaping an abundance of good quality product which demands a premium on the market. His chickens are large enough for fries and his cow produces enough milk, cream and butter for his own table and provides for him a small income besides.

His truck gardening is making him a good income with which he will be able to pay off his loan and realize a profit. The outlook of Mr. B. has changed from that of despair to one of interest in his work and enthusiasm. His case and that of Mr. A. are but two out of 26 handled in this office, seventeen of which are in Wayne county. Other families are fully as well satisfied with their loans as these two and will praise this governmental agency to the skies.

Local officials of N. R. R. C. say that plans are going forward to make it more beneficial in the coming year. Its purpose is to retire as many families as possible from the relief rolls, place them in a position where they can support themselves and thus become not only a benefit to themselves but society as well.

Nelsons Return From Colorado Vacation

Mr. and Mrs. Ole G. Nelson and daughters Doris and Beryl arrived home last Friday evening from a weeks' vacation trip in Colorado.

Their travels en route took them through the recently flooded district in southern Nebraska and Kansas. While in Colorado, Denver, Boulder and Colorado Springs formed their chief centers of interest, a visit to the Garden of the Gods and a climb up Pike's Peak following a bitter blizzard there lending considerable excitement.

In Denver besides visiting relatives the Nelsons drove to Devil's Head Mountain and to Lookout Mountain, where they saw Buffalo Bill's grave. Estes park was visited on the return trip.

Crop conditions throughout the territory in which the Nelsons traveled are reported by them to be generally bad. Crops, they say, are suffering acutely from a serious lack of moisture.

The marriage of Miss Pauline Assenheimer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Assenheimer of Wayne, to Harold Jensen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jens P. Jensen of Winside, took place Sunday afternoon at three o'clock at the Trinity Lutheran church at Winside. The Rev. W. F. The bride's gown was a princess model of white satin with a floor length skirt. The high neck was gracefully trimmed with lace, and panels of lace added to the fullness of the sleeves above the elbow. The sleeves were fitted at the elbow and formed a V-shaped point at the wrist. The bride wore a picture-hat veil caught in cap style at the back of her head with orange blossoms and trimmed with lace matching that on her dress. She carried a shower bouquet of red roses.

Miss Margaret Mau of Wayne, the bride's only attendant, wore a gown of yellow organdy, fashioned with a floor length skirt and jacket of the same material. She wore white accessories and carried a bouquet of roses. Walter Jensen, brother of the groom, was best man.

Harvey Hostetter Returns From Vacation; Married

Friends of Harvey Hostetter, Wayne painter and decorator were surprised to receive postal cards from him while on his fishing trip, signed "The Old Maestro & Wife." L. W. McNatt saw Harvey and wife at the laká but neglected to send word home what the better half's name was previous to her marriage. The news came to the surface when Harvey returned from his two weeks' sojourn.

Council Approves Beer License; Cancels Old Pact

Wayne city councilmen meeting in an adjourned session approved the application of Carl E. Nicolaisen for a retail beer sales license and cancelled a contract of long standing with the C. M. St. P. & O. railroad. The city entered into an agreement with the railroad in 1912 whereby the city should furnish water to the railroad without cost on an exchange basis for soft water which the city could use in its power plant boiler. Due to the fact steam engine power has for some time been abandoned by the city, there has been no need for the soft water.

Horses, Horses, Horses

With the spread into new states of legalized race-track betting the United States has seen also a malodorous spread of gambling publicity. Some newspapers now give over their entire front pages in certain editions to results of horse and dog races, to long entry lists, "scratches" and "dope" on expected winners.

More solemn news of world doings abdicates its position of eminence and the deliberations of the League of Nations become "also rans," giving over the journalistic pole to "Tilly Tonka."

England may have sunk the system of naval ratios; Germany may have repudiated the Versailles Treaty; Moscow may have heard plans for Communist plots throughout the world, but such news pales beside the flying manes of "Teeston," "Idle Flirt," "High Delight" and "Little Dinah."

Joseph Stalin retreats to the inside pages, leaving the headlines to the odds on "Capitalist"; Mussolini is disqualified at the copy desk as "Palsie Walzie" frisks before the grandstand. President Roosevelt may upset the calculations of the National Association of Manufacturers, but none of his executive orders breaks the stride of "Snoopy Bob" on the front page.

Obviously here is no effort to lead and mold public opinion to constructive ends. Hardly is there a true reflection of public tastes and interests, for all the world cannot be sitting in the grandstand cheering the horses on, nor can the horizon of the average man be the race track fence. Of course press absorption in horse racing is a passing phase, as it was when racing was in its heyday at the Saratoga tracks after the Civil War. But is there not anger that the newspapers which set out to mirror each passing public fad will ultimately make such an art of writing down to the general public that they will find themselves consistently undershooting even the great average of human interests and preoccupations?

The Bystander

By Stan

Bunt Fleetwood, as many of you may already know, is not the type of chap who is given to self exploitation regarding good turns he does for his fellow men but occasionally he slips a bit and lets some of his intimate acquaintances in on some little act of kindness he has done.

Knowing Bunt as I do, I cannot question the veracity of a story he told me one day last week. I thought it good and thought you might too. Some of the more skeptical among you may question this yarn but, regardless of that, I am passing it on to you for what it is worth.

It all came about on one of those real warm days while Bunt had been studying temperature readings on the thermometer at the Boyd hotel corner from his favorite spot in the Hixcox hardware store a block away, by means of his powerful binoculars he is alleged to have paid $1.50 for.

After we had passed a few comments backward and forward regarding the warm pleasant weather, Bunt opined that it would be a good day for pitching bundles, provided of course he could have plenty of room by having the whole job to himself of keeping a 36 inch grain separator busy without choking the machine down.

"I prefer stacking straw, myself, especially if it's barley straw with lots of nice sticky beards in it," I replied.

"Well, there's nothing like shocking grain though," was Bunt's reply. He then launched into one of the most amazing stories. It seems that one of his former friends was in the store one day during grain cutting time and casually remarked that he'd like to have a bit of help in shocking a little forty acre field he planned to cut yet that afternoon.

Bunt said he could have volunteered to use a cradle, thus saving everybody a lot of grief by cutting, binding and shocking the whole thing himself but inasmuch as this farmer had a new power driven binder he wanted to play with, he thought it no more than right that he have the chance to "fool around with the darn thing," as he put it.

Anyway I must get on with this story. The farmer needed help the worst way. His grain was becoming dead ripe and something had to be done at once. Soooo, Bunt told him to go home and not worry. He suggested that the farmer simply get busy with the cutting and leave the rest to him.

It was 6 o'clock when Bunt left the hardware store for home. On arriving home he thought he'd first get a few pressing matters attended to before going to the country to help his friend. He didn't want to rush into the thing in the heat of the day anyway, as he put it.

While waiting for dinner he sat down for a few moments to read the evening paper and then took his time eating. After eating he went to the garden, dug a bushel of potatoes and then washed his car, thinking that by then the farmer would be far enough ahead of him so he wouldn't catch up and have to fool around lying under a shock by the water jug.

In his easy going manner Bunt put up the last shock just as the bundle carrier of the binder left it.

Then, because the grain was so heavy, the farmer was unable to get his tractor and harvester out of the field without knocking down the shocks so, with his screwdriver and pliers, Bunt tore the machinery down and carried it to the edge of the field in an empty water tank he had picked up in a pasture near by, stopping a moment as he walked to his car to put the stuff in running order again. It was just getting dark as Bunt started for home, so naturally he switched on the headlights just so others could see him coming, not that he needed them himself, he explained.

"It was the funniest darn thing about the lights," Bunt said. It seems he was driving at a death defying speed when he noticed all of a sudden that he didn't have any lights. Thinking this was queer because he had but recently put in new bulbs, he dismounted from his seat to give them the once-over, only to discover he didn't have any lights at all. Looking back over the road he noticed a pair of lights coming toward him seemingly dancing along, hop, skip and jump fashion in a manner which was quite different from that of lights of an approaching automobile.

Just as Bunt was about to get out his powerful buck-fury glasses to look for the lights, they (his own headlights) came dancing up to the car and jumped back on from where they had fallen off due to the great speed the fleet Fleetwood auto had been traveling.

Now Bunt has no way of verifying this amazing story. He's just too modest to do much bragging about it. I am of the belief he just wanted the rest of us to know there is still somebody left who knows how to shock grain when it becomes necessary. What do you think?

I am grieved by the untimely death of Will Rogers, cowboy, humorist, columnist, philosopher and actor extraordinary. Will Rogers was a great guy. Part Indian, he has always been possessed of a passion for the open road. The skyways were his chief mode of travel. He has probably done more to help commercial aviation than any man not actively engaged in the industry. He was a washout as a student at schools he attended. His parents wanted him to become a Methodist minister, it is said but Will preferred to be a clown.

Florenz Ziegfeld discovered him and starred him in the Follies with a roping act which he did while administering the makings for laughs. He packed in the customers and helped largely to make Ziegfeld. Will was always in a hurry to go places. He is probably the most widely known American. Airway fliers loved him and considered him their greatest passenger.

I have seen him get out of a big Boeing transport ship at a night stop in Iowa, after flying through inky skies from Chicago. On getting out of the ship he would stroll about the apron in front of the hangar, stretching and yawning or going into a sandwich shack for a cup of java and a bowl of chili.

He always traveled light, carrying his absolute necessities for the trip in a brief case or a small traveling bag. Odd McIntyre says he seldom if ever wore tailored clothing, having once told the beau brummel New York scribe one time that clothing couldn't do anything for him because as he whimsically put it, "I always look like hell anyway."

Will Rogers could without a doubt have become one of the greatest country newspaper editors America has yet known, had he cared to. I say country newspaper editor because he knew better how to talk the language of those living out in the hinterland than anyone I have yet known about.

His copy was always written in haste for his daily syndicated newspaper feature and he seldom read over what he had written after it was once on paper. His was a great facility for remembering names and facts. He called the ex-koiser of Germany "Bill," played polo with the prince of Wales and called him "Eddie."

Brittain's king was "George" and Henry Ford was just plain "Hank." Calvin Coolidge was his friend and he called the then first couple of the land Cal and Grace. Dolfuss and Mussolini were his pals as was Alfonso, exiled king of Spain, as was Albert, king of Belgium, who met a tragic death about a year ago.

Celebrities were not his only friends. He was an intimate terms with farmers, hotel help and airport roustabouts.

Loiterers about the business district of his home town of Claremore, Oklahoma, gave me intimate sidelances of him as I visited with them about him on an occasion of my visiting the town. Everyone loved him whether they knew him intimately or simply through his shows and articles. The world is a brighter, happier place for having had a Will Rogers. It will remember him long.

I like to attend a carnival and stay around the grounds until the last dog is hung, taking in all the side shows, getting my fortune told, riding all the rides, trying my hand at the skin games, at which I almost never win, and filling my hide with popcorn, hamburger, sandwiches with mustard and onion, and drinking bottled soda water and lemonade.

I always enjoy talking with folk who follow these carnivals from one jump to another. I have found them to be big-hearted people, ever faithful to the belief that the next place they sit down will be the pay-off.

Does your memory ever play tricks on you? Mine does and I pride myself in having a pretty good one for things I want to remember. Many are the times I have been fooled though, and for that reason I keep schedules of advertisers I call upon, news stories I have in note form and those yet to get.

In spite of a fairly good memory and my system of schedules I sometimes leave something out of the paper. The other day for instance, I went into Vene Legg's Clover Farm store to get a story regarding a district meeting of their organization at which Vene was host.

I got all the facts from Vene and Vern, came back to the office and wrote the story but plumb forgot to take it back to the machine for George to set up in type. I mention this just as an illustration to show how things of that kind sometimes happen.

Then there were five roughish Wayne chaps who journeyed over to Oakland for the rho-day-o last Thursday, to find when ready to leave for home that the keys to their car had been lost.

Accommodating souls from Wayne brought part of them home in order that those coming home could return with a fresh set of keys to begin all over again with. Up to Wayne, back to Oakland, fifty miles each way, the car owner returned to find that his keys were not lost but locked up safe and sound inside the car all the time.

Our burning question for this week is "Mr. Printer, what are you doing for those beautiful black eyes?"

And now the bystander stands by until next week at which time he will bring you a bit of Barbara's babbling regarding hay fever et cetera and et cetera also a few intimate pictures of King Levinsky as posed for The Democrat's art department on the sports pages of the metropolitan press. Don't forget I'll be seeing you and remember—Barbara and the King.

NEBRASKA'S NEW FAIR HAS UNUSUAL PROGRAM

The Nebraska State Fair is opening its gates September 1st with the greatest array of talent ever brought to the middlewest. Managers have thrown caution to the wind in their selection of attractions for they say, "This is Nebraska's Prosperity Fair and we will present the best that money can buy so that everyone may come and celebrate the return of prosperity."

The United States Army Olympic equestrian team which is in training at Fort Robinson in Dawes county has consented to exhibit at the state fair. This team was offered contracts at some of the leading state fairs, but will show only at Lincoln. In this group we have a combination of the most skillful riders and most beautiful, talented and intelligent horses, in races and presentations that are generally only available to large cities and army posts. An exciting steeple chase over barriers and obstacles will be a grandstand feature on the afternoons of September 4 and 5. The army riders will be a feature of the evening show at the grandstand on each of these days. Beauty, rhythm and grace that will equal the efforts of the most talented dancer, are offered for the grandstand patrons in these events.

COLOR DRUMS AND MUSIC FOR FAIR PATRONS

If you thrill to the strains of martial music, marching men and colorful pageant you will be more than pleased with the spectacle offered by Nebraska's own drum corps that ranks with the best in the nation. These former veterans in colorful uniforms will present complicated drills and exhibitions on Veterans' Day, Sunday, September 1, at which time there will be no admission charge to veterans with identification of membership in any of the recognized veterans' organizations or service in any of the military branches during the war.

Norfolk, Fremont, Auburn, Hebron, Lincoln, Stromsburg, Sutton and York have already informed the fair board that they will be on hand with their bands or drum corps.

STATE FAIR MIDWAY DRESSED FOR BUSY WEEK

The Barker, that picturesque individual who tells you of the wonderful shows covered by his company's canvas, will really have something to talk about this year, if the reports reaching the secretary's office are reliable. Sparkle, dash, tinsel, moving lights of midway, mechanical attractions provide the atmosphere without which no fair is complete.

Every attraction and entertainment on the midway is built with the assumption that people want something new and different. Entertainers are from the leading amusement centers and night clubs in the east and some of the attractions were those most popular with "A Century of Progress" patrons in Chicago. Two new rides, the loop-a-plane and loop-a-loop, hi-lo, doggem, and ride-o are among the new features.

Sixteen big tented attractions await the fair-goer with all star presentations as features of a mile front of midway. Billed as one of the most beautiful offerings is the "Water Circus and Disappearing Ballet," a beautiful show that was a feature of the New York Hippodrome for 16 months, and twice toured the world.

Captain Dan Riley, "a bring 'em back alive" hunter, who has penetrated Africa many times, is presenting some of his best and strangest animals. Captain "Doc" Collins with his "Louisiana Lou Showboat" will present one of the popular features of the midway.

FANTASIES OF 1935 GRANDSTAND ATTRACTION

The grandstand show is a feature to which special attention was given this year—attention so that patrons of the fair would be offered an attraction which in itself would be worth going miles to see. Offerings from many companies were considered with the final decision resting with "Fantasies of 1935." Where many shows are billed with a feature, almost any act could be offered as the "headline" of any good show. Nebraska State Fair patrons should see Fantasies of 1935.

AGRICULTURAL EXHIBITS AT STATE FAIR

Nebraska always dresses in her best when on exhibition and this year will be no exception to the rule when the curtain is raised for the Nebraska 1935 Prosperity Fair.

Exhibitors are making entry arrangements and displays on a par with anything offered before will be arranged so that visitors may know the products and accomplishments of the state. Visit the Fair and know Nebraska.

Book Reviews

"The Secret Garden" by Frances Hodgson Burnett

An old book, "The Secret Garden" is nevertheless one of the most popular choices for children. Children of almost any age will find it interesting from the little tots to whom it must be read to those in their teens. Mary Lennox, a sickly, disagreeable child, left an orphan when her selfish mother and father die, goes to live with her uncle. When she by accident finds that she has a little crippled cousin who is even more miserable than she, she forgets her own troubles and with Dicken, a jolly little neighbor boy, they teach Colin to walk. The name, the "secret garden," is taken from the locked garden in which Colin finally regains his health and Mary a good temper.

"The Red Shadow" by Patricia Wentworth

As in "Nothing Venture," Miss Wentworth has written a highly adventurous story. Supposedly concerning the unscrupulous activities of the Russian secret police, the story tells of Laura Cameron who in order to save her fiancée marries a Russian spy, only to discover that the man wishes a secret she possesses that will bring about the ruin of her country if discovered. Although the story must be taken with one eye closed, nevertheless, it is a thrilling and amusing reading.

"State Fair" by Phil Strong

Many of you saw Will Rogers in the moving picture version of "State Fair." As a tribute to him, we have chosen this book, the source of one of his finest pictures, to review this week.

Abel Frake, Iowa farmer, (which part Mr. Rogers played) takes his family to the state fair where he is to exhibit his prize hog, which wins the championship. His wife also manages to take home a goodly share of the prizes with her jam and pickles. The younger members of the family do not fare so well, however. Margy falls in love with Pat Gilbert, a not-so-slow reporter, and Wayne with a side-show actress. The description of the fair shows the author's intimate knowledge of the middle west. Those of you who have illusions concerning the fairs of the west will enjoy "State Fair."

"The Black Tulip" by Alexandre Dumas

Filled with all the romantic adventures with which French authors of the nineteenth century crammed their novels, "The Black Tulip" is the thrilling story of a Dutch tulip grower, Cornelius De Witte, who is imprisoned through the jealousy of a neighbor. How, through the aid of the jailor's daughter, Rose, he finally perfects the black tulip and wins his freedom, forms one of Dumas' most engrossing stories. Although the story is exaggerated and sometimes in error historically, the background—the unsettled Netherlands of the time of William of Orange—is excellently portrayed, giving us a clear idea of the life and customs of the Dutch people of this period.

"Congorilla" by Martin Johnson

Martin Johnson, noted explorer and traveler, has in "Congorilla" told of his wife's and his adventures with pygmies and gorillas in Africa. He tells of his adventures with the large hairy ape and blasts many legends which have been circulated concerning the customs and habits of this little-known animal.

Especially interesting is his account of their visit to the grave of Carl Akeley, noted explorer of the gorilla country of Africa, who died while on one of the expeditions. Capturing animals both dead and alive make up a great deal of the book and such happenings as six feet and six inches from death do much to make the story exciting besides informative.

What is a TATOOM?

ANIMAL, vegetable or mineral? Is it something edible? Yes. It's a vegetable. In fact, if it were not for the present fad for puzzles and mixing up the letters in a word and then trying you to unscramble them, you would recognize it immediately as a tomato!

You recognize it immediately, too, whenever you meet it in physical form, whether it is scrambled up with eggs or mingled with many other foods. For the particular virtue of tomatoes is that they add their own individual touch of flavor to any dish in which they are included.

Always Recognizable

Take a tomato omelet, for instance. Here's the way to make a most appetizing one. Chop one small onion and half a green pepper fine and sauté in one tablespoon butter till tender but not brown. Add one cup drained tomato sauce, one-half teaspoon sugar, salt and pepper if necessary, and three table-poons chopped ripe olives. Heat to boiling and pour over the omelet before folding. Do you think you would ever mistake the tomato in this combination for onions, green pepper, olives or an egg?

Or take scalloped tomatoes and pecans. Here is the way to prepare this dish. Mix contents of a No. 2 can tomatoes with three-fourths teaspoon salt, one tablespoon sugar and a few grains pepper. Have ready one-half cup finely chopped pecans and one-third cup grated cheese. Then put alternate layers of the tomatoes, pecans and cheese into a buttered baking dish. Cover the top with three-fourths cup buttered crumbs and bake in a hot 400 degree oven for twenty-five minutes. Serves six. The pecans and the cheese contribute their distinctive flavors to this recipe, but it is the tomatoes which make it a triumphant success.

Jacques Cleaners Install Pressure Filterer Output
Pressure filtration system which is said to be the latest in modern equipment for cleaning plants was installed late last week at Jacques cleaning plant. The equipment heats cleaning solvent and forces it through fabrics of clothing being processed in the washing machines.
Solvent which has already gone through clothing returns to the filterer where all impurities removed from clothing in a compound provided for the purpose.
Advantages of the system are that it allows the operator to clean more clothing in less time and at the same time constantly use heated solvent under pressure. In addition to the new equipment Jacques has a patented tumbler which deodorizes, dries and leaves garments in a fluffy condition.

Pineapple Plays Many Parts

HAVE you ever stopped to consider the multitude of dishes of which pineapple can form an integral part? It can be used in appetizers, beverages, bouillon, breads, breakfast dishes, cakes, cocktails, cordials, cups, desserts, egg-nogs, fillings, with fish, in fizzes, fritters, frozen dishes, fudge, ices, juleps, loafs, with meats, in pies, preserves, sandwiches, salads, sandwiches, sauces, shakes, sherbets, shortcake, slices, souffles, soups, tarts, and with vegetables.
We're sure that we missed a few because this delicious and nutritious tropical fruit is liable to crop up in almost any dish, but these are all that we can remember at the moment. There are no end to the desserts in which it can appear and of the drinks to which pineapple juice or syrup can add a special flavor, all its own.

With Meats, Fish, Vegetables
We know recipes for pineapple served with beef, chicken, ham, liver and bacon, meat loaf, pork chops, pork tenderloin, roast lamb, sausages and steak, and we would not be astonished to see it make its appearance with almost any other fowl or meat.
As for fish, we have seen it served with bass, codfish, crab, lobster and shrimp, and we have no doubt that accomplished housewives serve it with still other delectables of the deep.
In the vegetable field it combines well with parsnips, peas, kidney beans, tomatoes and yams,
