B.P. Women Give Party For Pioneers

Early Settler's Wives Tell Of Their Part in Wayne County's Growth

At one of the most outstanding Business and Professional Women's club meetings yet to take place in Wayne, pioneers of Wayne county were honored guests at a Thanksgiving party which took place Monday evening at the L. A. Fansie home.

Introduced by Mrs. Grace Welch Lutgen, who gave a short account of the salient points in Wayne county history, Mrs. Lon Hunter told of her early experiences and recollections of this county when there were only thirteen families settled at LaPorte. Her family was one of the first to come to Wayne county. Because of the population dearth, Mrs. Hunter related, it was necessary for one man to hold two offices when the county was first organized. Keeping the county funds in a safe place proved to be no problem to Mrs. Hunter's father, who was treasurer, as an excellent place was provided in a little hole in the floor under the ash box, which was there for the purpose of saving ashes for soap making.

Mrs. James Brittain, one of the several pioneer speakers of the evening, all of whom were introduced by Mrs. Lutgen, told of the first Christmas tree which was in reality a rather symmetrical box elder. It was elaborately decorated with candles and cotton batting.

On the first train that ever came through Wayne Mrs. M. P. Ahern rode to Wayne to make her home after her millinery and dressmaking shop in Jackson burned down. She established her business here and the present Ahern department store is the result of its growth. Mrs. McCracken, in her brief talk, told of the blizzard of 1888.

Mrs. A. A. Welch told of childhood days in Iowa, of driving oxen teams and of her early life in Wayne. Mrs. P. C. Crockett also gave a short talk, as did Mrs. J. M. Cherry. A letter which the late John T. Bressler wrote to his father in 1870 was also read to the club members by Miss Dorothy Bressler. James Ahern gave a brief talk following the business meeting.

Music for the social meeting was furnished by Mrs. Gayle Childs, Mrs. Edwin Melby, Miss Jeanne Wright, Miss Harriet Lamson, Miss Frances Kiker and Miss Helen Toy. Program chairman was Miss Ruth Ross.

Democrat Classified Ads Bring Results

Last week, for the first time in a number of years the Democrat resumed classification of want ads. The result was that a number of want ads "keyed" to receive replies at this office, drew many inquiries.

The fact that so many replies were received shows clearly that there is considerable interest in a classified section. Buyers and sellers meet on a common ground in this department as there is always someone who has something he wishes to sell and always someone to buy it.

Nebraska Democrat classified advertising rates are reasonable. Anyone who has something he wishes to sell, or if he wishes to purchase or swap articles, will find the best results in this medium. Ads may be telephoned in or mailed to this office. Rates for classified advertising will be quoted upon request. Simply telephone 145.

The first speeches will be mailed on Wednesday, November 27 and it is expected that the decision will be made by judges near the middle of December. The judges have not yet been appointed.

Many Persons Attend Exhibit

Necklace of Human Hair One of Many Things Displayed Saturday

Three hundred curios and antiques furnished the incentive for the large number of persons who attended the antique exhibit at St. Paul's Lutheran church Saturday afternoon and evening. It was sponsored by the Young Women's Missionary society and was made possible by the contributions of those living in this vicinity who possessed articles of the required nature.

A gold ring 200 years old, an elaborate necklace of human hair which was fashioned in loops similar to the childhood dandelion chains, two bullets picked from a Civil war battlefield, the gavel used by Grant Mears when he acted as temporary chairman of the house of state representatives, a mesh wire hair rat used in effecting a now outmoded style of ladies' coiffure, a bandarilla which was used by bull fighters in Spain to antagonize their victim, an old flax flail with flax, and a remnant of a genuine Paisley shawl—these are but a few of the novel articles which attracted a large crowd to the St. Paul church.

Not only were many of the articles decades old, but also many of them were foreign to this part of the country and to the United States.

The rug made from an African bush cat's skin, which is owned by the Rev. and Mrs. H. A. Teckhaus, was one of the more unusual displays. A copy of the "New York Clipper" which contains the account of Lincoln's assassination, along with several editorials on the tragedy, attracted considerable interest.

Among other out of the ordinary articles which featured the exhibit were a black mourning bonnet with a long veil attached, old German song books, ancient Bibles, a vine twisted cane which was used by Mrs. Wilbur Spahr's grandfather, who was a general in the German army, white kid beaded wedding slippers, collections of old and obsolete coins, a hand hammered copper pan belonging to Carl Bernston which came from Sweden and is over 100 years old, a Washo Indian basket which is woven so closely that it is water tight and if shelleaked could be used for cooking purposes, a homespun bedspread, and a man's beaded green knit purse with slits for coins and paper money.

During the hours that visitors browsed about the tables of exhibits, an old Edison phonograph which used cylindrical wax records was played.

City Accepts New Building Contract

Council Meets in Special Session to Release Builders

Wayne City Councilmen met in special session Tuesday evening at the City Hall and passed a resolution accepting the general contract of Beckenhauer Brothers of Norfolk for the construction of the Municipal Auditorium which is to be dedicated some time within the next 60 days.

With the exception of a number of fixtures and pieces of equipment to be added, the building is complete and ready for occupancy. Until these jobs about the buildings are completed, however, the government will not accept it, according to Charles T. White, construction engineer of the Public Works Administration, who has been overseeing the construction work on the building since excavating was done in March.

Need of such a building in Wayne is already being shown by the fact that a long list of events are waiting to be scheduled to take place there as soon as conditions will permit.

Otto Beckenhauer of the contracting company, of Norfolk, George Grebe, architect of Fremont and Charles T. White, PWA engineer attended the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Sprague and son Edwin were Sunday evening visitors in the Frank Griffith home.

Wayne Makes Plans For Returning Thanks

That Wayne citizens will return thanks in a fitting way a week from today is shown by plans being made for observing the Thanksgiving holiday.

With the exception of food stores, cafes, filling stations and garages, all the businesses will be closed all day. Grocery stores and markets will close at 10 a. m. for the remainder of the day, thus accommodating last minute shoppers who forgot things the day before.

There will be no mail deliveries either on the city carrier system or by rural free delivery Thursday, according to Postmaster J. M. Strahan.

And oh, yes! The editorial staff wants the rural reporters to know that the Nebraska Democrat for next week will be published and mailed on Wednesday in order that the force can enjoy the holiday, too.

Johnson Talks At Chapel Service

Hastings Meeting Attended By Thirteen Students, Two Sponsors

"The First Nebraska Regiment in the Spanish-American War and the Philippine Insurrection of 1899 was the subject upon which Prof. J. R. Johnson of the Wayne State Teachers college history department addressed members of the chapel audience Wednesday morning.

Featuring the life of John M. Stotsenburg of the University of Nebraska who served as a colonel in this regiment and whose life was climaxed by being killed in action, Prof. Johnson cited many instances where the activities of Stotsenburg made history for Nebraska in the Spanish-American conflict.

After the termination of the war and the subsequent outbreak known as the "Philippine Insurrection", America gained control of the Philippine Islands and not until last Friday, November 15, did they relinquish active control. Manuel Quezon was inaugurated on this date as president of the new Filipino Commonwealth. Commenting, Prof. Johnson stated "The United States is to be commended in giving the Philippines their independence. It is definitely in line with our avowed policy of non-imperialism."

NUMBER 46

JOHN G. DAVIDSON
Editor and Publisher

Entered as second class matter in 1884 at the post-office at Wayne, Neb., under the act of March 3, 1879.

"While we cannot build walls around ourselves and hide our heads in the sand, we must go forward with all our strength to stress and to strive for international peace."
—President Roosevelt.

Common opinion is that within another year the G-Men will be out after potato hi-jackers.

One of our big shots of the government's band of brain trusters is credited with being the originator of the phrase: "the more abundant life." It was not, however, until he got a "fat" job with the administration that he emphasized the "more abundant"!

Secretary Hull has invoked the Kellogg pact but most European nations who signed it seem to have forgotten what it was all about.

Evidently the tax payers of the state are to pay for the street car strike in Omaha. Governor Cochran ordered the national guard to that city for guard duty during the strike, and the extra session of legislature in Lincoln last week passed an appropriation bill amounting to $34,359 for the guards expenses during their stay in the Nebraska metropol.

Europe, or par of it at least thinks that a curb should be put on Italy, and with that end in view, agreements are being sketched and conferences held the same being intended to make war difficult to carry on and attended with uncomfortable consequences both before and after the fact. In the mean time, the Fascist armies have made a twenty mile advance. Mussolini after all, may not be very different from an American commander who is remembered for his pointed order: "Damn the torpedoes. Go ahead."

An aged man, quoted in the Topeka Capital, tells how he has managed to get along in the world for 103 years: "I have at whatever I wanted and turned pleased, if I could get it, and if I couldn't get what I wanted I got along on something else. I go to bed when I get sleepy, sometimes at 8 and sometimes at 12. I chewed tobacco until I was 90 and then quit because I couldn't get the kind of chawin' tobacco I liked. I have taken a drink occasionally all my life since I was a young feller, but I never made a drunken fool out of myself. I have managed to keep my nose out of other people's business and that is the reason it keeps in shape. Professional reformers always made me tired and since I am not as spry as I used to be, they bore me more than ever. I am willin' that anybody can have any fool opinion he wants to have, provided he doesn't try to force it on me. I have known a lot of men who used to tell me what to eat and all that. I followed the last of them to the grave nigh onto 20 years ago."

It has always been interesting to us to note the fine degree of accuracy with which some of these holier than thou are able to draw the line between right and wrong. We refer particularly to those persons who are forever looking across the fence with the idea in mind of attempting to discipline someone for doing something they would really like to do themselves but refrain from doing so for reasons they are a bit vague about stating.

Liquor business to most of us has always been a distasteful form of traffic. It has probably been one of the greatest problems facing this democracy in its development. There is little doubt but what our country would be far better off without liquor traffic but it is apparent that the will of the people is such that manufacture and sale of liquor has become a legitimate business.

Taken from the realm of gangsters and placed upon the market where the light of day can reveal to everyone just how the business is conducted, advertising of the goods naturally had to follow. The distillers and brewers recognize the benefits of advertising and eagerly make use of it. Several distillers are advocating moderation in the use of liquor in their advertising.

We note that certain publications have shown a tendency of reluctance in taking hard liquor advertising but have shown no scruples whatever when it came to taking some nice big juicy national beer advertising accounts. In many instances these very publishers who take beer accounts, without a doubt billing the agencies handling them at "boosted" rates, now sit in the seat of judgment and judge other publishers who have yet to be shown how the line may be drawn between one type of liquor advertising and another.

Few persons who drink beer will refuse a hard liquor drink. Practically all hard liquor drinkers drink some beer, thus the market is practically one and the same.

These publishers will tell their readers that "Advertising has for its social aim the acquaintance of the public with products that will benefit the purchaser as well as the user." They then concoct and sell some catch-penny form of "sucker" (so-called) advertising, called advertising because their conscious hurts them in calling it out and out fraud, as it really is. Such advertising is or no earthly use to anyone save the publisher who bills his unsuspecting victim for a bunch of baloney advertising at the end of the month.

Yes, it has been interesting to us to note the fine degree of accuracy with which some of the holier than thou are able to draw the line between right and wrong.

The Bystander

by Stan

How many of you remember that old game entitled "counting white horses?" It had to be brought to mind by a friend in order for me to remember of ever having heard of it before. The friend and I thought the game should be given just a bit of change in view of the fact this is a gasoline age and darn few white horses are ever seen these days.

It occurred to us that there'd be fewer marriages if every fellow and gal had to kiss his or her fingers, slap his or her palms and count these rare beasts one at a time until the century mark was reached before the favored one could be met.

We came to the conclusion that white horses should be discarded in favor of something a bit more common such as perhaps face feelers or ear tweakers. Ever see a face feeler? There's lots of them. You have to be a fairly early riser to see many of them, however. Many of them are found perched on stools of a morning, placidly dunking doughnuts in coffee during a slight pause in that zero hour composed of last minutes just before work at the office or store begins. Watch for them at the places designated and I'll venture a guess that it won't be long until you have reached your quota. And what's the reward for seeing your hundred face feelers. I wish some of you wise guys or gals would drop me a line suggesting just what should be given those who first stumble on to 100 (no more and no less) good old fashioned face feelers.

Of course, I have mentioned that ear tweakers could be counted, but in order to play this game according to the rules you really should decide just what you are looking for. It must be one or the other. For instance you can't have twenty-five face feelers associated with seventy-five ear tweakers. Neither can you divide them fifty-fifty. You must have either one or the other.

Yep, you've guessed it. The big issue of the game is to be able to guess of which you are likely to see the most. Maybe your every day life would have something to do with which type of humanity you would see the most of. Now let me hear from all of you. I think this game offers unlimited opportunities. Perhaps some of you know of different classifications of contestants. Very possibly face feelers and ear tweakers do not entirely cover the ground. Let me have your ideas on this matter. This is a plea of persistence for unlimited assistance. Won't you please give me a lift?

Then there's the matter of Herman and Barbara. What to do, what to do! For reasons that are quite obvious, since I have learned their identities, I have tried hard to keep their confidences by not disclosing to anyone who they are. Barbara accuses me of writing Herman's letters and Herman, the old rascal, accuses me of writing Barbara's comments. I wish to take this opportunity of stating a matter of fact. Both Barbara and Herman are genuine, living, breathing, eating, sleeping, working playing human beings. Neither knows the other well. Both know of their own existence but question the existence of the other. For that reason I will disclose their identities next week by publishing in this pillar, recent photos of these two good friends of mine. Watch for them!

Every little while I am seized with the desire of doing something for the good of humanity. That's on the level, too. My last desire to get into harness is exemplified in my wanting to form a society for the inspiring of courage to those who would rise up and howl down pests of various kinds. I would call the society the "Rise Uppers and Howl Downers". How do you like it? Don't you think it fairly reeks with originality? Of course the name is a bit cumbersome but it can always be cut down to RUAHD or some other silly abbreviation. But even abbreviating the name of such an important organization could not possibly take from its importance.

The purpose would still be there for all of us know that there are always those present who should be risen up against and howled down. Just figure out for yourselves some of those who should be risen up against and howled down and report them to me. It will crystallize public opinion in favor of this organization and make everyone wonder how we got along for so long without it. Everyone will without a doubt want to join, even most all of those who most of us would want to rise up against and howl down. Please voice your opinion to me regarding just what can be done for building and maintaining interest in such a worthwhile society.

Personal nomination for the most picturesque bit of writing for the week just past in the daily press. The very odd McIntyre's description of early dawn. Part of it is as follows:

"New York.—Everyone now and then should muggle up from the deep fathoms of slumber between the hours of 4 and 5 a. m. It's the climatic hour when all existence seems to pause as though swooped into sudden, bewildering stillness. Poised to plunge or go on.

"Hospitals recognize it and nurses become especially tiptoe. It is the hour when the slender cord of life so often snaps. The hour when the city noises crescendo from the slow melody of the pavan to strident jazz. The hour when night throws off its shadowy cloak to become another day.

"Everyone seems portentous. One is riding betwixt a world that has gone, and a world being born. No coloring is so exquisite as that suffusing sheen of an approaching day. This morning I saw a star twinkle out and in the frozen quiet it became a flash of drama.

"A fluff of cloud that ordinarily would pass unnoticed, took on the quality of wonder, changing from gray to sea-water green to shell pink and then in a chattering burst of splendor to the blood red poppy. A prelude to that disk of polished copper anent.

TALE TELLING

by the TATTLER

Now to be frank, we don't really invite you to read this column today... no penalty of course, and we solemnly promise to behave properly and to refrain from either corrupting the morals or mentioning Communism... but anyway you might not be a bit interested in the subject matter... you see, we learned somehow that people just have different tastes, especially when it comes to books.

Of course, this may not turn out to be another book review because the Tattler sort of feels a personal confession coming on. And if the confession should win over the book review, well, perhaps too many people shouldn't be let in on it. That fellow who said confession was good for the soul didn't specify whose soul. And if this one bores you unmercifully, what possible good would it do you to reading the stretching paragraphs yawning before you? Yes, we mean yawning, because maybe you will be too eventually. So you really should stop reading right now.

Truly the Tattler's face grows quite red at the mention of this book. Why? Well, it's a bit personal. Sh-sh-sh - gather 'round close now, because it's a touchy subject... the old conscience backfires now and then... but it's like this... A very obliging acquaintance of the Tattler who does not live in this vicinity took pity on a certain lass's general ignorance and offered to provide her with a liberal education of the very noble sort... elevating... instructive... practical... all that. You know, the kind that one hopes to acquire some day if he continues in college long enough and reads the right sort of magazines and scans the most expensive ads.

Quite an intriguing idea it seemed at the time because the supposedly impossible short cut to learning was almost within one's grasp, or so the concerned informant was saying. Naturally the Tattler was too wise to swallow that... you know - sophisticated... one can't appear naive these days, even if one is... anyway, sometimes it pays to give false impressions... so with supremely sophisticated "wisdom", the eagerness was held in leash and suppressed into an appearance of mild, courteous interest with just the merest trace of skepticism.

Now to speed up the story. With a remark that stung with refined, cultured sarcasm, the one so concerned, over the Tattler's intellectual welfare disappeared into his office and emerged a moment later with an eye full of ogling zeal and in one hand a large volume in a dull, unromantic appearing jacket. Obviously this book was to be the source of the COMPLETE EDUCATION. With a reluctant and yet unselfish hand the book was shoved before the Tattler's eyes, and her ears could almost hear the unspoken thought, "I am going to trust you with this book because it is worth passing on to someone else. But I hope you return it soon as it is greatly prized."

That was last June or July. The Tattler, after being wished a pleasant and successful reading adventure, embarked on the seas of learning. Is this supposed to be a confession? It is... And the guilty feeling of the Tattler arises from the fact that it is now near December and the unselfish friend has not yet had his book returned to him. But he will shortly... In the meantime the Tattler is suffering from a very acute case of conscience.

If a book borrower were ever justified in keeping overtime a volume, however, the Tattler is that person, or anyone else is who borrows the book in question. It is truly quite a liberal education in itself, but believe you me, it is no short cut to learning. AH is earned that is gleaned from its nearly 900 pages of fine print. The Tattler is still digging at it, and the end is not far from sight. Maybe it shouldn't be such difficult reading for one, but can the Tattler help being kind of, well, thick skulled? Anyway, it's a good book, and worth any amount of anyone's time.

It is said by reputable critics to be incomparably more than a mere chronicle of one human being's life. It's supposed to be an autobiography. But they claim that what the author really succeeded in doing was the writing of psychological history of that period of American history during which he was contemporary. The author is considered by many as America's most distinguished journalist, and the Tattler is under the impression that he is still living, though he must be a very old man by this time. The keen powers of observation he possesses coupled with the great ability for deductions or inductions - whichever method he uses - make his book a tussle from start to finish. Only the Tattler hasn't finished it yet... Please, Mister, may she keep it for just one little week longer? It's really in use, you know.

Oh yes, the name of the book? The Autobiography of Lincoln Stephens.

Carnegie Portrait Presented To Libraries for Centenary

ANDREW CARNEGIE

THE generosity of a famous Scotchman, Andrew Carnegie, will be observed with gratitude by thousands of persons in scattered portions of the globe next week during the centennial celebration of the great philanthropist's birthday anniversary which occurs Monday, November 25. Mr. Carnegie has given away 350 million dollars of which sixty million have been contributed toward free public libraries. The Wayne Public Library is one which has received financial assistance from this source, and it will join with the 1,945 other Carnegie libraries in the United States in the three day celebration of Mr. Carnegie's one hundredth birthday. The celebration takes place in the United States November 25, 26 and 27. In the English speaking world there are 865 Carnegie libraries other than the 1,945 in the United States. As a part of the celebration the Carnegie Corporation of New York is presenting to all Carnegie libraries in the United States and the British dominions and colonies a reproduction of the above portrait of Andrew Carnegie which was painted by Luis Mora. The Wayne library recently received its copy which is framed for permanent display. Carnegie, industrialist, benefactor and writer, was born in Dunfermline, Scotland in 1835 and emigrated with his family to the United States in 1848. His memory will be honored in his native city November 25. Other ceremonies will take place in New York, Pittsburgh and Washington, D. C., while special programs and exhibits will be arranged by many Carnegie libraries.

PRUNES are PRICELESS

CANNED fresh prunes are not only called by some canners (who ought to know) "the best thing that was ever put into a can," but they are mighty accommodating about the ways in which they can be served. Beginning with breakfast, here are some of the ways: Cracked Wheat with Canned Prunes: Bring two cups water and one-half teaspoon salt to boiling, add seven-eighths cup canned cracked wheat, and let boil directly over the fire for five minutes. Then cook over hot water for an hour and a half. Make the night before, and simply reheat in the double boiler in the morning. Serve with canned fresh prunes, and top with milk or cream. Serves four liberally. Keep the Children Happy Another prune dish that will help to keep the children happy at breakfast is this: Cassole of Figs and Prunes: Turn the contents of a 9-ounce can figs, one cup of canned fresh prunes and one-third cup water into a sauce pan and simmer slowly for about fifteen minutes. Serve hot. Serves five, or four liberally. Still another tempting breakfast dish is shredded wheat with canned fresh prunes and cream. The prunes should be left in the can overnight, then drained, washed, over the shredded wheat which has been cooked in the oven. Cream may be added, half or part evaporated.

Randolph Takes Wayne In Last of Season 13-0

Wayne high school went down to defeat 13 to 0 in the concluding game of its twenty-fifth gridiron season when Randolph high school furnished the opposition at Wayne State Teachers college field Friday.

For both schools the game was to decide the conference championship of the season. Goal threats and constant sea sawing across the field characterized the encounter.

Placed in a tough spot, Wayne was forced to punt from the 20 yard line early in the second quarter. The punt was blocked by a Randolph man who fell on the ball after it had rolled across Wayne's goal line. Thus the first touchdown for the visitors was made.

Wayne proved to be a threat in the third quarter when a rally was made. Late in the fourth stanza Randolph blocked and recovered a punt on the Wayne end of the grid, lost possession of the ball, regained it on an intercepted pass, and on a reverse play put over the touchdown making the score 12 to 0 in favor of the visitors. They then made the extra point good and clenched the conference championship for 1935.

Modern Method of Making

COOKIES

The children run from near and far To dip into the cookie jar!

THAT'S one of the immemorial prerogatives of childhood. So prevalent is it, in fact, that a vast cookie baking industry has been built up to keep all the cookie jars in the country comfortably full so that children can exercise that prerogative. But, after all, it's fun to surprise them. They all know the contents of the innumerable cartons of delicious cookies that save modern housewives so much preparation and baking. But when they plunge their eager hands into a cookie jar—a real old-fashioned cookie jar—which they know contains cookies made at home, the pleasure of uncertainty as to the nature of their treat is added to their anticipation of something delicious.

Apricots Inside!

Almond Apricot Squares: Cream one-half cup shortening and one-half cup sugar, add one well-beaten egg, and then on fourth cup apricot puree. Stir together two cups pastry flour, one-fourth teaspoon soda and a few drops salt, and add. Stir in two-thirds cup finely chopped blanched almonds. Chill well, roll very thin and cut in squares. Place on a greased sheet. Will not spread. Bake at 350 degrees, a hot oven, for eight or nine minutes. Makes five or six dozen cookies.

Dried Apricot and Nut Cookies: Put one cup dried apricots through a food chopper. Then combine them with one and a half cups condensed milk, one cup canned nuts, coconut and one cup chopped nuts, drop by spoonfuls onto a greased baking sheet and bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, for from twelve to fifteen minutes. Makes about thirty cookies.

Molasses and Coconut: Molasses or Ginger Cookies: Boil one cup molasses a minute, add one cup sugar, one cup shortening, two teaspoons ginger, two teaspoons cinnamon and two well-beaten eggs. Add four teaspoons soda mixed with one-fourth cup vinegar. Add about five cups of flour to make a stiff dough. Roll thin. Cut as desired. Bake in a moderate—375 degrees—oven for about twelve minutes. Use also for making gingerbread men. May sprinkle with sugar before baking if desired.

Coconut Fluffs: Cream one-third cup shortening and three-fourths cup sugar, add one well-beaten egg and then one-third cup canned raspberries, mashed but not sieved. Stir together one and a half cups pastry flour, one and a half cups baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon soda and one-fourth teaspoon salt, and add. Add one cup bran and one cup canned moist coconut, and chill. Drop by small spoonfuls on a greased pan, about two inches apart. Bake in a moderate—350 degree—oven for about twelve minutes. Makes three or four dozen cookies.

V-8 LEADERSHIP

ON OCTOBER 31 of last year, Henry Ford announced his intention to build a million Ford V-8s in 1935. We are pleased to report that this goal was reached in exactly ten months instead of a full year.

One million cars and trucks is an impressive total. But figures by themselves mean nothing. It is what they represent that counts. Selling a V-8 at a low price has brought a new kind of automobile within reach of the people. Producing it has provided steady work for hundreds of thousands of men in the Ford plants, in associated industries and on the farm.

These million Ford V-8 cars and trucks have helped to make things better all around. In the first ten months of 1935 the Ford Motor Company paid out, in the United States alone, $140,119,326.00 in wages and $523,111,399.00 for materials.
