CHRISTMAS and candy are almost synonymous. There should be boxes and boxes of candy about at Christmas time, some of it in those beautifully lithographed tin boxes which can be kept and used as receptacles for ties, gloves, handkerchiefs, wool for knitting, sewing materials, cigarettes, manicure sets and all sorts of odds and ends that it is convenient to have segregated from the rest of the contents of a drawer and to be able to carry about with you. But it's fun to make some of the candy yourself for Christmas—not only fun but it results in delicious varieties of candy which no regular manufacturer makes. You'll make a hit with this fresh made candy, so here are some recipes to show you how. Try this unusual

"Peace on Earth Good Will Toward Men." We believe that thought reigns generally among folk dwelling in this great midwestern area on the day following Christmas. Christmas was fittingly observed here. Decorations were in keeping with the holiday. Homes were made happy by the homecoming of those most dear who for some time have been absent. Many soon will be returning with the happiness only a visit to the old stomping ground can give them. Yes, Christmas was a happy time for Wayne folk. All the kiddies were amply provided with goodies and toys of all kinds. Tables in every home were loaded down with good foods. Everyone sent out and received his share of greeting cards. Yes sir, Christmas is a great time of year. We should be happy if we can remember it with thoughts of "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men."

Again as ever, "hope springs eternal in the human breast". We are told that an extra great effort is being made to secure a free bridge across the Missouri river at Sioux City. That would be just dandy for Sioux City, but not so good for cities in northeast Nebraska. Persons living in northeast Nebraska hesitate just a bit about going to and from Sioux City with their business as long as they have to buy even the smallest bit of the bridge each time they cross. They consider going to the Iowa town a luxury now but might not if they were allowed to cross free. No, we don't want a free bridge to Sioux City. Already there is too much business going over there. Let us continue to make going to Sioux City with our business a luxury and so help keep from paying for the bridge unless we make use of it. And too we must remember that Iowa has a sales tax involving the use of scads of pennies. Penny taxes paid in Iowa will never help Nebraska.

Again as usual there'll be a lot of effort wasted by many in making resolutions for the New Year. The time to make resolutions is now. There is no advantage in waiting to decide to do better. No resolution is ever worth the effort it takes to make it unless he who resolves expects to keep the pledge he has made to himself.

President Roosevelt's birthday falls on January 30. Soon we will again be making preparations for the annual Warm Springs charity ball in honor of our chief executive. The Warm Springs fund is a worthy one and everyone whether he dances or not should plan to observe this annual affair for the sake of those kiddies, many of whom will be able to dance should we do our bit to help them.

Many political commentators believe that President Roosevelt's recent Atlanta speech marked the opening gun of his 1936 campaign. The speech, well phrased, delivered in the President's best manner, amounted to a vigorous defense of his national stewardship.

The President stood solidly behind his farm policy, his spending policy, and his money policy. He claimed fine results for his acts in the fields of banking and security regulation. He stated that the size of the public debt does not menace American credit, saying, "The credit of the Government is today higher than that of any other great nation." He forecast a dwindling deficit.

From this speech, it seems certain that the President will ask re-election on his record, will make no apologies and will make no major change in general policy.

He was so "punch" drunk he could not speak for five minutes after reaching his dressing room. Louis collected $38,800 for his part in the mix-up. Paulino's share was $19,000. BETTER OFF DEAD

The nation is beginning to realize the horror of automobile deaths that reached a total of 35,000 last year. Not so well realized, but perhaps even more horrible, is the situation of those who were involved in automobile crashes, were not killed—but would be better off if they had been. Their ghastly plight has been described in a new booklet by J. C. Furnas, author of the famed "—And Sudden Death", entitled "Better Off Dead". Here is an excerpt: "They weren't doing more than 45 around a slight curve. But centrifugal force and pull had dragged them a couple of feet the wrong side of the white line . . . one of those semi-head-on, angling crashes . . . Two passengers, bleeding, unconscious, were loaded into the ambulance. They were on the point of driving away when the policeman discovered the third.

"He was doubled up like a broken stick and thrust halfway through the narrow back window of the wreck, his head between his knees. They didn't dare to move him till they reached the hospital. He was still alive and conscious. He had proved that by stealing the policeman's gun and trying to shoot himself.

"The spine was snapped clean, bent at an acute angle, and the bare end protruded through a rent in the skin like the stump of a horrible, bony tail.

"Thanks to the doctors that man is still alive . . . He has been operated on 25 times. He is always in acute pain and paralyzed from the waist down."

Too horrible, too nauseating for print? Perhaps it is—but it's the truth. And it doesn't described an isolated example. Thousands of people have emerged from automobile accidents to become helpless, pain-ridden cripples all their lives. They live on to remind us of the awful price we pay for speed, for recklessness, for incompetence at the wheel. Yet their agonies will not be entirely in vain if they teach the lessons that will save us from becoming members of that tragic legion who would be "Better Off Dead".

All the time I hear more opinions as to what should be done regarding this face feeler, ear twaker business I've been telling you about for some time. Myrtle, the gal who brings you coffee and rolls in a local hotel coffee shop, tells me she can at least tell face feelers from ear twakers. She says, after casually observing, that face feelers are those guys who are pondering over just what to do about the beads they have. To shave or not to shave, seems to be the question with this type.

She further reasons that the ear twaking variety is composed of those who are supposed to have already shaved but wonder whether or not they were able to get all the lather from behind their ears with that last furtive swish of the damp towel before they race off to a quick snack and the day's conquest.

Then there's Thelma and Annie who work in a cafe I drop into often. It's really remarkable about those gals—I mean how quickly they are able to provide hot coffee and glazed doughnuts for you when you're in a hurry to get somewhere. Annie thinks the whole thing is a lot of foolishness and further goes in to say that she wouldn't be guilty of even noticing those wise guys who line up on the stools across the counter from her of mornings.

Annie thinks these fellow are all right in their way but doesn't feel there's any advantage in giving them the idea they're even human. It's quite probable that her philosophy is rather good in spots. But Thelma. Well, Thelma has given this matter some thought and on occasions will discuss the matter a bit with you. She tells me there's another type common at the particular time of day face feelers and ear twakers are seen about. "They're floor gazers," Thelma says. From what she has to say about them I'm led to believe that these fellows have the feeling that the burden of the future of humanity rests upon their many shoulders. She tells me they're "old shrewdies" and will hardly speak . . . they just look stern like, nodding first at the coffee urn and then at the plate of pecan rolls . . . they sit cross-wise on their stools absently stirring sugar into their coffee all the while gazing at the floor and apparently expecting the pattern of the linoleum to give up the answer to their deep quest. Very thoughtfully they spread a smear of butter across a torn bit of roll, take a bite, chew it ponderously and then wash it down with a gulp of coffee. Repeating the process until the supply is exhausted, this type tosses a dime on the porcelain topped counter and strides to the door still without a word but apparently leaving the place with the satisfaction of having eaten and arrived at some conclusion with which the day's problems have been solved.

One of my operatives in whom I have considerable confidence tells me of hearing a fellow on the street tell his gal friend, "I'll take you up to the funeral home and leave you". Well, it was nice of the fellow to take the gal to the funeral home but why should he feel like telling everyone about it?

This colyum is conducted by Serge Stanislaus Norriaky for his own amusement. Ha-ha, ha, ha, now that lets all of you out. Now if there's any of you who really feel that you can help the cause along, send in something and I'll try to make something of it. It might interest you to know that we have a brand new year starting next week. Better get going right now on practicing of your writing "1936".

Let me hear from you or better still, drop in and see me some day.—STAN.

Nothing succeeds like success. A large number of people have been enjoying for a long time that delicious sea food—canned mackerel. Now the news of the pleasure they have experienced has been noised abroad, and the consumption of canned mackerel is increasing by leaps and bounds. Try some of these recipes.

Mackerel Maitre d'Hotel: Open a one-pound can mackerel (a large oval can) being careful not to break the fish. Remove contents to the shallow, greased baking dish from which it is to be served. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and minced parsley, and heat in oven or under broiler. Make Maitre d'Hotel butter by thoroughly creaming one-third cup butter and one tablespoon chopped parsley, adding one tablespoon lemon juice, slowly and seasoning with salt and pepper. Just before serving the fish, spread this butter over the top. Serves six.

For Breakfast or Lunch
Breakfast Mackerel: Remove the contents of a 14-ounce can fresh mackerel in large pieces and lay in a shallow pan. Dust with paprika and cover with four strips of bacon. Bake in a hot oven until the bacon is crisp. Serve with wedges of lemon. Serves four.

Mackerel Shepherd Pie: Drain a cup of canned diced carrots and half a cup of canned peas, and add to two cups white sauce. Flake the contents of a one-pound can fresh mackerel and tork very carefully into the sauce, so that it remains in fairly large flakes. Pour into buttered baking dish and pile fluffy, seasoned mashed potatoes on top. Brush with melted butter and bake in a moderate oven until very hot and the potatoes golden brown. Serves eight.

SALES EXEMPTION IS

RAISED FOR POTATOES

Any potato grower whose average annual sales of potatoes during the years 1932-1935 were 50 bushels or less will receive a tax free allotment of potatoes equal to such annual sales under regulations for administration of the potato act which were announced by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. In order to obtain tax-free allotments, each grower will file an application under which he will establish his past sales. County officers will announce the time for filing applications. If a grower's past sales during the base period, 1932-1935, were 50 bushels of potatoes annually, he will receive tax exemption stamps for the potato allotment year which began December 1, 1935, equal to 50 bushels of potatoes. If his average sales were 30 bushels, he will receive tax exemption stamps equal to 30 bushels. Farms which produce five bushels of potatoes or less annually were specifically exempted under the provisions of the

TELESCOPING WAGON TONGUE

GIVES CLOSE, ONE-MAN HITCH

A wagon tongue which telescopes makes it possible for the tractor farmer alone to hook together two, three or more loaded wagons—like elephants tail to trunk—without the difficulty and danger encountered with a noncollapsible tongue. The device was developed by the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering.

It makes corn harvesting with a husking machine a one-man job. The farmer who has filled, for example, three wagons, can alone hitch them together in the soft soil of the cornfield. He drives his tractor in front of one wagon, extends the tongue just the right distance, hooks it to the tractor, and baks until the tongue is fully collapsed. There it latches itself. He repeats for each wagon.

Hooking a string of loaded wagons together, even with two men and on hard ground, requires lengthy and expert maneuvering and often results in mashed fingers.

The telescoping tongue was demonstrated for the first time at an exhibit of corn-production machinery developed by the Bureau and the Iowa experiment station at Ames, Iowa. Among the exhibits were the basin forming lister which checks erosion and holds moisture, a new auxiliary snapping roll for mechanical pickers which lessens shelled corn waste, new methods of using check wires on corn planters, and plow attachments such as trash shields and the self-aligning disk jointers. Tests show the latter reduce draft 10 to 15 per cent.

SOIL SAVING FURROWS

LIKE LINES OF FIREHOSE

Like long lines of fire hose at a third alarm fire, or a miniature front line trenches, contour furrows are beginning to stretch across hillside pastures in soil conservation projects of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Typical of the specialized machinery being developed to conserve the nation's soil resources is the ingenious device in use on the Mankato, Kansas, project. A U-shaped knife slices a strip of sod some 4 inches deep and about 16 inches wide. Curved rods place the uniform strips, grass side up, on the downhill side of the furrow. An attached roller, slightly concave so as to give more pressure at the edges, packs the strip firmly in to place. The machine is pulled by truck, team or tractor.

Within a year or two grass covers the bottom and sides of the furrow, so that there is no loss of pasturage. Water that once ran away now soaks into the soil or creeps slowly along the serpentine furrows.

Contour furrows conserve moisture, help to develop more permanent pasture, keep feed from washing away, and promote a greater variety of vegetation.

POPCORN PARTIES The Latest Fad

PARTIES must be full of pep. So must popcorn if it is to pop properly. So why not combine the two, as so many people have been doing recently, and have a peppy popcorn party at which everyone will have lots of fun? Be sure to have your popcorn peppy. That's fifty percent of the fun. Every kernel will pop if you get your corn in cans because nothing but selected kernels are put into these receptacles, and they are hermetically sealed with just the right amount of moisture in each, so that there will be no "old maids" left to sort out. Provide Costumes Although this is not necessarily a costume party, it's a good plan to provide long kitchen aprons for everyone, for not the least part of the fun is making dainties with the popcorn after it has popped. You can either make these aprons yourself in pretty pastel colors, or you'll find some very attractive ones in the stores. There's a thrill, too, for young folks in cooking things together. It suggests all sorts of pleasant future domestic possibilities, and perhaps the corn will not have done all the popping before the evening is over. Some young man may pop the question to a pretty girl whose hands look so alluring as they busy themselves with dainty confections on a board or in a bowl. Dainty Confections And here are some recipes for a few of the confections which
