Berry Gives Talk Before Student Body

Affirms Faith in American Future; Defends Gov't By Constitution

An analysis of government was presented by Fred S. Berry, Wayne attorney, when he spoke Wednesday morning on the patriotic chapel program at Wayne State Teachers college.

"In the planetary system there are two forces playing constantly against each other," said Mr. Berry at the outset of his talk. "Each holds the other in check. Throughout history there have been two forces playing against each other in human affairs—one is government and the other is liberty."

"I have an abiding faith in the future and the opportunities of this country," he declared, "and believe that we are going ahead and will ultimately solve our problems satisfactorily. There is a well defined limit to what government can do for a people and, after all, our economical problems must be solved largely by people themselves; there is no ointment that I know of which can supplant hard work, sweat and thrift."

"Depressions, hardships, hunger and want are a natural aftermath of war. You can't kill millions of people, maim and cripple other millions and burn and destroy billions of dollars of property without dis-jointing and up-setting things. In times of emergency there is much new legislation called for and much of it is hastily enacted; that some of it should go too far and impose upon the liberty and rights of the citizen to an extent not authorized by the Constitution is a natural result."

Defends Constitution "It is self evident," the attorney stated, "that unless there is a power somewhere which can keep government within bounds given to it by the Constitution, then we have no constitutional government and the government can enact any kind of arbitrary, unjust legislation which it desires to enact and there is no place where the citizen can go for protection."

"The people of the United States," he stressed, "can have any form of government they wish; they can amend the Constitution and give the government the right to regulate and dominate this or prohibit that. In other words, they can increase the circle of government and diminish the circle of liberty and human rights accordingly."

College Players To Appear Soon

Dramatics Pupils of Miss Florence Drake Apply Polish to Roles

"He and She", a three act play by Rachel Crothers, will be presented at Wayne State Teachers college next Thursday evening, July 9, by an all star cast under the direction of Miss Florence M. Drake. All members of the cast but one have appeared here in previous dramatic class productions. They are Dorothy Peterson, William Day, Donley Ferris, Elvora Hepfinger, Dorothy Terry and Arnold Peterson, Ruth Hepfinger, Elvora Hepfinger, Dorothy-Terry and Margaret Bruner.

The young people were selected from among the many on the campus who have had dramatic training because of their fitness for the roles assigned them and because their interest was such that they were able to assume the extra work in addition to their regular studies.

The play deals with an idea, the place of woman in the home and the professional jealousy which may result if she tries to combine business and home making.

"Daisy Mayme", the three act comedy of character written by George Kelly, will be given by the college dramatics class under Miss Drake's direction Wednesday evening, July 15, instead of July 14, as previously announced. This play also promises to furnish excellent entertainment. Humor, action, keen portrayal of well known American types find a place in this production.

The story concerns two middle aged sisters and their bachelor brother. The sisters, with homes of their own, make it their business to interfere with the affairs of their brother and niece, who is under his care. Their scheming to keep him from marrying an attractive woman, Daisy Mayme, who meets the situation admirably, forms an important part of the plot.

Torrid June May Mean Short Crops

Corn Crop Is Still Safe; Small Grain, Hay and Pastures Burned

Brolling in the un-relentless torrid rays of a mid-summer sunshine for the last two weeks with now and then a mere hint of rain which for some reason fails to materialize, a critical situation exists throughout the mid-west insofar as small grain, hay and pasture crops are concerned.

The corn crop in Wayne county has not been harmed as yet, persons familiar with the situation say. They predict a good crop if rain fall may be had within the next week or ten days.

Gardens and lawns in Wayne that have not been watered regularly have been burned almost to a crisp.

While light rains have been reported all around Wayne, the only intimation of relief has been shown in slight sprinkling spasms which have invariably gone around.

Temperatures have been running in the high nineties and on several days well over the century mark, while heat sufferers have sought shelter from the torrid atmosphere in the swimming pool and making drives about the countryside after sun down.

Many are the persons who have been driven from warm upstairs sleeping rooms to lawns and porches.

IT'S A SQUARE DEAL TO KEEP NEW DEAL IN HANDS OF ITS FRIENDS. The Republican platform is a promise to take over the New Deal as it stands today, and to administer it more economically and more efficiently. There is no fight with Mr. Roosevelt over the purposes of the essential features of the New Deal as at present conducted. The fight is over methods. EDITORIAL BALTIMORE SUN.

To appreciate this appraisal of the Republican platform and purpose one must understand that the Baltimore Sun has been one of the bitterest and most uncompromising foes of this administration.

The best that the Sun can say is that the Republican party merely proposes to take over the New Deal and run it better than those now in charge of it. For pathos the abdication of the Old Guard in Chicago is equalled only by the abdication of Halle Sellate at Addis Abba. It is the most tragic thing in the annals of Republicans, for they have not only forfeited their principles but their moral courage as well.

If the people and the Republican party were not converted to the new deal why should that party put forward a man to lead them who has all along spoken well of it, receiving its bounties and now pledges to carry out its essential principles? The Baltimore Sun says there is no fight over the essential features of the New Deal but over its methods.

The title of the New Deal is vested in the Democratic party and is willing to assume all responsibility for it. Due credit however must always be granted to a very large and influential Republican contingent in both houses of the Congress who helped to shape the New Deal and, most of all, assisted so cheerfully in putting the government in debt in order to relieve distress and support a staggering business world. Senator Steiwer who delivered the key-note address at the Republican national convention in Cleveland, and who so severely arraigned the Democratic party, is entitled to special mention since he voted for the NRA, AAA, TVA, the Wheeler 16 to 1 silver plan, the Frazier-Lemke Bill; and he voted against the President's economy act of 1933, and he also voted to override the President's veto of the soldier bonus bill. Even Steiwer heard from the people back home.

Anyone that is not endowed with a peculiar mental twist, which would obliterate the line of demarcation between the sublime and the ridiculous, will find plenty of humor in a situation like that. The rip-snorting senator from Oregon belittled his discontent on the floor of the convention but his oratorical brawling frightened none but his impatient if not resentful listeners. Even so sympathetic a friend as the Washington Post regarded the exhibition both dull and stupid.

Some of the generals in the Federal army on one occasion came to Abraham Lincoln and suggested that Ulysses S. Grant be supplanted on account of imbibing too freely so they alleged. To them it was a matter of great moment. Lincoln listened patiently but was interested only in the brand he used. Mr. Roosevelt is doing a good job and while the essential features of his program are well known he is not going to tell his Republican friends how it is done.

In all the frenzy of complaint manufactured by the opposition and the censure of assumed broken pledges by this administration there is a subtle dishonesty that should not escape the discerning. If Mr. Roosevelt had pledged in 1932 that he would in four years establish a banking system that would make failures a practical impossibility; that he would compel banks to insure deposits; that he would save a million farm- and a million homes from the auction block; that he would take idle youth and give them useful employment; that he would curb speculation and drive Wall street from the temple of finance; that he would give social security to the nation; that he would establish a yard stick for the measurement of utility rates and that he would allow no citizen to starve or even go hungry-if he had promised these things in detail, as they have since appeared as actual accomplishments, the whole nation would have applauded him and accepted him with even greater unanimity.

It is these things that constitute his record and on the record of his actual accomplishments he will stand.

The American people will not repudiate the New Deal and its leader. They will allow its friends and not its enemies to administer it. Its essential features are indestructible for they take into account the plain people of this country. Against that the opposition must fight until its last expiring hour.

Always Be Careful
 A number of years ago a large railroad company operating in the mid-west staged a safety campaign the theme of which was ABC which this particular railroad had to mean Always Be Careful. Accidents were reduced and the campaign as well as others staged by railroads was considered successful.

We of today face grave danger at every turn on our high speed highways. With automobiles that will do all the way from 60 to 100 miles an hour with very little effort the hazards have been increased. Weary tourists hurrying over unfamiliar roads trying to get home or trying to return home by a certain time drive at a hazard.

No good are the conditions most of the time they have little or no idea of how their machine will perform or how they will react themselves when an emergency arises. Few of them realize how their stopping distance is when traveling at the rate of 60 miles per hour.

Then there is the motorist who has been drinking. He is a menace too. Old man alcohol is making him foolhardy courageous. He wants the motorist under his thumb to pass everything on the road, meet them close and zigzag all over the highway and whatever he does make it as tough as possible for the other fellow who is trying to drive carefully. Dust, sunlight, loose gravel, improperly or unevenly inflated tires, slippery conditions, poor brakes and general carelessness in observing traffic regulations are probably the greatest causes for accidents. There is always the wise guy who always has to cut in when passing, pass on hillsides, shoot through arterial highways and turn stop or back without signaling. These are all common pests.

America's death toll due to auto accidents alone is astounding. Sudden death articles will make them pay attention for a while but there is nothing that can possibly crystallize the situation sufficiently for it to maintain its crystal state long. The thing for us all to do at all times is to keep our automobiles in first class condition at all times, never drive when drinking, observe traffic regulations and above all ALWAYS BE CAREFUL.

Well, everyone should be satisfied now. With the lunatic extreme right fringe being represented by Landon and Knox and the lunatic left making selections to fill a card for the newly organized Union party, the great majority composing the progressive element can settle down and re-elect Roosevelt and stand firmly behind the New Deal.

Mothers to be Relieved Of Duties at Camp Soon

It is going to be vacation time for scores of women from this section of the state who will soon go to Stanton on July 26-29 for their annual Mothers' Vacation camp. The first announcements concerning the camp are made this week.

For four days the women will forget completely about their household tasks. In camp they will have no beds to make, house to clean or children to look after. A balanced program of recreation, fun, inspiration and rest has been planned. Special recreational periods during the day are planned along with some handicraft work.

Each year the attendance at these camps has increased and it is expected that some Wayne county farm women will attend this year.

G. O. P. Platform of Sham Assailed By Sen. Norris; Urges Roosevelt Support

(Sen. George W. Norris, of Nebraska, who has a record of a third of a century as a progressive leader in congress, is nominally a Republican but as in 1932 he has again this year straightforwardly refused to support the reactionary G. O. P. presidential candidate and the vague and evasive Republican platform. Following are the reasons as set forth by Sen. Norris why he "bolted" the 1936 Republican ticket and is supporting Franklin D. Roosevelt for re-election. — Editor's Note.)

VETERAN PROGRESSIVE SOLON DENOUNCES 'SMOKE SCREEN' TACTICS OF REPUBLICANS

The American people, have not forgotten the dreary pictures of the Hoover administration. They remember how it failed. The chicken in every pot, the two cars in every garage, pictured by Hoover, will not satisfy the hunger of the unemployed or bring relief to suffering mothers and ragged children, who can so clearly trace their suffering and their misery to Hoover's unfulfilled prophecies. No amount of fantastic dancing around that mysterious corner, looking for prosperity, can change the situation.

As the smoke screen at Cleveland gradually rises, the American people will realize that though the voice of that convention is Jacob's voice, the hands are the hands of Esau.

How these eminent gentlemen cheered the ex-president, when in glittering generalities he discoursed on the precious value of human liberty! How they applauded when he praised the Supreme Court for its action in nullifying New Deal measures designed to bring relief to a suffering people! His comment on these Supreme court decisions brought unmitigated joy to those eminent gentlemen at Cleveland, particularly when they recalled his most recent speech which nullified any attempt to limit the hours of labor by any of the states of the union.

The same court had practically held, only a few days before, that the federal government did not have this power, and, therefore, the sacred doctrine of liberty had been preserved, and the freedom of the man or the woman to enter into a contract with Big Business to engraft human slavery upon the toilers of the nation had been upheld.

Oh Precious Liberty

How precious is such liberty to the human toiler, faced with ruin and starvation, thinking of the sufferings of his wife and children, which protects him in his right to sign himself and his posterity into human bondage!

These eminent gentlemen did not give consideration to the fact that other unemployed millions will be deprived of a living wage by the precious liberty exercised by the few who sign on the dotted line at the demand of organized monopoly and human greed!

When any monopoly or combination is able to control economic conditions so as to compel our people to sign away their right and their liberty of action, then the rights of society must be preserved by legal means, in order to restrain the oppression of the powerful over the weak.

To preserve our constitution and to preserve our democratic form of government, such reactionaries as these must be kept from control of the situation.

The keynote at that convention had no constructive note in his address. He devoted all of his great abilities to faultfinding and to criticism which was neither just nor constructive. He said, it is true, he himself had voted in the senate for some of the New Deal measures, but the people of this country should not charge that up against the New Deal, because, in the same speech before these eminent gentlemen at Cleveland he enumerated very beautifully in a general way some of the economic reforms he desired to bring about, and then he asked the question: "How can we achieve this objective?" He never answered that question, but the answer is very simple, and for the benefit of those eminent gentlemen behind the smoke screen at Cleveland, let me say that the way to achieve the moral, intellectual, and spiritual objectives of our people is simply to reelect Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The very able gentlemen who was permanent chairman of that convention delivered a beautiful speech of glittering generalities, filled with criticism, but without a single constructive idea.

All of these gentlemen failed to suggest a single remedy for existing conditions. They all admit that at the time Hoover went out and Roosevelt went in, the country was in a deplorable condition. Any fair minded man must admit that it was on the verge of destruction. Something had to be done, but these men, leaders of a great party, have failed, even by intoning, to suggest any remedy for the depression.

What Do They Offer

If the New Deal is wrong on the unemployment question, for instance, what suggestions have they to make to solve this perplexing problem? If the New Deal has not functioned properly, what have they to offer that will function properly? What specific remedies have they to offer to bring relief to a suffering people?

Constructive criticism should always be welcomed. However, men who do nothing but throw monkey wrenches into the machinery, without offering any remedy, are not making constructive criticisms. The keynote in that convention, for instance, promised that if his crowd were successful, it would reduce taxation. Everybody concedes that a reduction in taxes would be a good thing, but just how and where shall the reduction take place?

This keynote admitted they should feed the hungry and take care of the unemployed. Does he expect to do these things without money? Can it be done without taxing the people? If so, give us the formula. Come out from behind the smoke screen, and tell the barefaced truth to the American people!

When President Roosevelt took control of this government on the fourth of March, 1933, he was confronted with a condition never before faced by mortal man. Every remedy of Hoover had failed; every promise he had made to the American people remained unfulfilled.

Banks were closing all over the country. Unemployment was increasing at a rapid rate. Business was at an absolute standstill. But it must be admitted that Mr. Hoover, as he said in that memorable campaign, had preserved the Gold Standard. To him, this was more precious than the welfare of his people.

Banks might fail, business might go into the hands of a receiver, the army of unemployed might increase, mobs driven to desperation by cold and hunger might be organized, yet he had preserved the Gold Standard!

When President took over the helm of government, he had no precedents to guide his footsteps. He had to sail the ship of state into an uncharted sea. Naturally, he made mistakes. In setting up, almost overnight, machinery to cover the entire country from ocean to ocean, necessarily there were in it many cogs of inefficiency and some of graft.

Bank Failures Past

However, as one of the results of the Roosevelt administration, the banks, for instance, were put on a firm foundation and today a bank failure has become almost a thing unknown except in bitter memory.

But we see now a great combination of bankers, having had their own business preserved by governmental action, uniting to prevent the government from doing anything to help anyone else. Yet it was these same bakers of the United States in the first days of the depression who came, hat in hand, to the government for help.

They were not opposed then to having the government going into business, but when they had been placed upon an honest footing, when their own business had been saved from ruin by Roosevelt's action, then many of them, with greedy hearts and itching palms, combined to destroy every action of the New Deal.

When Roosevelt took the helm in March 1933, the farmer was in a deplorable condition. The men who produce the food we eat and the raw materials out of which our clothing is made were in practical financial ruin.

All promises of Hoover had been tried. They had all failed. Every remedy suggested by Mr. Hoover proved disastrous when put to the test.

When, for the first time in "three long years," the farmers were beginning to get the benefit of the New Deal policies, the Supreme court nullified the Agricultural Adjustment act and brought joy and jubilation to the hearts of these eminent gentlemen behind the smoke screen at Cleveland.

I do not mean by that they had any malice towards the farmer. I do not mean to say they were not interested in the well being of the farmer. But I do mean to say that if they could get any partisan advantage from the nullification of any of the New Deal measures designed to help the farmer, they would be jubilant beyond expression.

We Beg Your Pardon

In last week's issue of The Nebraska Democrat it was stated that Mrs. B. B. Hollis of Omaha, daughter of John Soules of Wayne, suffered a foot injury when a truck ran over the member. This statement is erroneous. It was Mrs. Hollis' 14-year-old son, Homer, whose foot was run over.

The Bystander

By Stan

Interesting to me was an article appearing in a recent issue of The Readers Digest which gave me some-thing of an idea of how much this country has developed in the last century. The article is as follows: Only 100 Years Ago.

There was not a public library in the United States. Almost all furniture was imported from England. An old copper mine in Connecticut was used as a prison. There was only one hat factory and it made cocked hats. Every gentleman wore a queue and powdered his hair. Crockery plates were objected to because they dulled the knives. Virginia contained a fifth of the whole population of the country. A man who jeered at the preacher or criticized a sermon was fined. Two stagecoaches bore all the travel between Boston and New York. A day laborer considered himself well paid with two shillings a day. The whipping post and pillory were still standing in Boston and New York. Buttons were scarce and expensive, and the trousers were fastened with pegs or laces. Leather breeches, a checked shirt, a red flannel jacket and cocked hat formed the dress of a real artisan. Beef, pork, salt fish, potatoes and hominy were the staple diet all the year around.

And Saturday will be Independence Day in Wayne in the real sense of the word. Wayne county farmers and business men through liberal contributions of time and money have provided far better entertainment than the average celebration will have. It's all been done locally, too. Wayne has not gone out to communities 100 miles away with the old lottery game of giving away an automobile or cash prize to disappoint thousands of persons in order that certain few may in some way or another win. I for one would favor wholesale boycotting these crews of gals who go from town to town selling chances on automobiles or a sack of cash, pocketing a commission and turn in thousands of dollars to a celebration few of us know whether or not takes place and fewer of us care about and still fewer of us ever attend.

I don't believe Wayne has ever sponsored any such wholesale skin game as that and I hope we never do. With our band, friendly people, and the old gray nag borne about the country in shining automobiles, simply telling folks that Wayne is observing Independence Day in an independent manner, I feel that we should have a large crowd of people here Saturday and when they return to their homes they will feel like they got just what they paid for and will be glad they came.

Out of the torrid day's mail comes a breezy and refreshing message from Mary Jane Simpson of Sioux City to notify this newspaper that she and Don have moved out into Morningside and want their next paper sent to 4100 Orleans Ave. Thank you for the nice things you had to say, Mary Jane. The change is being made as per request and let us hear from you again soon.

Another letter in the current week's mail bag came from our old friend Herman. Many of you who have followed this pillar have read his interesting contributions and enjoyed them. I regret not having room to publish it this week as it tells vividly of his having attend the annual rose festival at Portland, Oregon. He tells of the beauty in a mountain sunrise and numerous other beauties of the country he now calls home.

"Where were you last week and the week before?" friends ask me. I have an idea they refer to the omission of the bystander in the two last issues. Well, to be right truth-ful, the old musing machine was just too occupied with other matters to give much thought to writing the weekly letter. Even though this department has never flattered itself into the belief that it has yet contained anything very deep, its nice to feel that it was at least missed.

Musings: Wonder how dead a door nail is—or how flat is a flounder or how drunk is a hoot owl? They now have wall-basing especially built for clean-ines one's teeth — just something more to gagetify our bath rooms. I have reason to doubt if Mr. Lem-ke running as a Unionist will get far in November. Wish I could keep this cloth watch band clean. What ever became of all those fire-less cookers that were sold at big prices a number of years ago? Wonder if we could get a good rain if I washed the windows — 'I would be worth trying anyway. I predict a rather short life for the so called "swing music". It's been a long time since we've had a "Tom" show in these parts — still it has been a bit warm for Liza to cross on the cakes of floating ice. Hope they don't revive button shoes again. Wonder who is responsible for this sign language jargon that's hit the country. It's just as guch a victim of it as anyone — I get a kick out of illustrating a "man in a show-er", "morning after the night be-fore", "here am I and where are you", etc., etc. Along Nebraska high-ways you now see coy motor pheasants leading their flocks through the dust-covered grasses — In Iowa, flocks of quail are seen feeding along the roadsides. I for one would like to see a return of quail to Nebraska. — More Bob Whites might mean less grasshoppers.

"If you want to know what's wrong with your car, listen closely to your auto radio," says a Wayne radio authority. He tells me that an auto radio is sensitive to all mechanical imperfections of the machine and with its speaker tells the motorists in a code language all its own by certain sounds, when a grease job is needed or when the motor needs a change of oil. Unevenly inflated tires show up through the radio too he says. Rather interesting isn't it? —

Well, it looks like rain. That's not a Republican promise either. So far I haven't washed the windows but don't feel now as though the weather man would wait anyway. Goodbye for now and remember, I'll be expecting to see all of you at the fair grounds on Independence Day and at the races too.—Love, and kisses, STAN.

Hoppers Thrive On Agriculture

Modern Farming Suited To Needs of Pest, Says Noted Authority

Agricultural activities for the last 20 years have helped, rather than hindered grasshoppers in the Great Plains area, according to Dr. J. R. Parker of the United States Department of Agriculture.

In Montana, where hopper damage from 1930 to 1934 was estimated at more than $17,000,000, cultivation of land originally in native grass has increased their egg-laying grounds and food supply. Bare patches of fairly compact, ground appeal to most egg laying grasshoppers. The patches must be near plenty of vegetation that will be green and succulent for the young hoppers.

Formerly, continued drought dried up vegetation over a wide area, starved grasshoppers and checked heavy infestations. Today, even in extremely dry years, hoppers find enough to eat without going very far from their hatching grounds.

The effectiveness of other natural checks—fungous and bacterial diseases—that kept down the grasshoppers when they were confined to the flood plain of rivers and along small streams—has been reduced by man's agricultural activities. Hoppers are now able to spread from the low, moist land, where in rainy weather disease is rife, to higher land too dry for disease which they were unable to inhabit before the planting of corn, small grains, alfalfa, and sweet clover.

Certified Seed Use Increases

Farmers Realize Value of Using Certified Seed; All-time Record Set

That Nebraska farmers realize more than ever the value of using certified seed in the production of crops was indicated this week in the report that an all-time record number of producers have filed application for small grain certification with the Nebraska Crop Growers' Association. A total of 120 applications are on file. This compares with 45 last year. Application blanks for certified corn, atlas sorgo and alfalfa now are available and can be secured at the office of Agricultural Agent Walter L. Noller.

Darrell Bauder, College of Agriculture student who is doing the inspection work for the Crop Growers' this year, has started inspection of the small grain fields. All fields must meet specifications set up by the crop growers' to become certified.

Tractor Practical For Contour Work

Frericks of Cedar County Vouches for Success of Tractor Cultivation

Cultivation of contour row crops with a tractor seemed an impossible thing to some of Herman Frerick's neighbors in Cedar county. The latter was determined to prove it was a good practice. He succeeded. Now some of them are doing the same thing.

"Farming on the contour certainly saves fuel," Frericks says. "My gas bill has been reduced about 15 per cent since I quit farming up and down the slope."

On 60 acres of terraced land on the farm there are no point rows. These caused too much trouble in planting and cultivating crops so they were eliminated by sowing feed crops on irregular areas. Frericks has 118 acres of land in row crops and every acre is being contour farmed. On terraced fields, the terrace ridges serve as guides for contour rows. On the unterraced fields, back furrows were plowed on survey lines to conform to guides for rows.

Contour farming and terracing are only two of many soil conserving practices used by Frericks. He is practicing crop rotation, growing grass, protecting grass, and trees from fire and controlling gullies. He has 5,400 trees planted for wind-break, woodlot, posts, fuel and erosion control purposes.

4-H Workers Set All Time Record

Many More Take Part In Activities Popular Rural Movement

Increased popularity of the 4-H movement was foreseen this week as more farm boys and girls enrolled in various clubs to bring the Nebraska enrollment up to a new all-time record. Interest also increased in Wayne county.

A total of 21,086 youths in all parts of the state are now in the 4-H club work. This represents 5,000 more than at the corresponding time in 1935. The records show 188 boys and girls in Wayne county enrolled in 4-H clubs which compares with 102 for the same time one year ago, thus indicating the added interest locally in the work.

Lancaster county swung into the lead in enrollment this week with 4,111 boys and girls in the work. Sage county held second place with 332. Otoe remained in third place with 704. Clothing thus far is the most popular project with 4,121 girls enrolled. A total of 1,512 have baby beebes on feed this year.

Cane Kills Bindweed
That smother crop possess some possibilities in eradicating bindweed, Nebraska's worst weed pest, has been proved by Paul Scheer of Reynolds in Jefferson county. He uses a late seeding of cane together with following successfully.

Joe Smolsky, Jr., who for the last three weeks has been under treatment in an Omaha hospital, has not as yet undergone an operation for his illness, the cause of which was tentatively diagnosed as tumor of the thyroid gland.
