Farm Placement Plan Outlined

Two Services Cooperate to Place Nebraska Farm Workers

Concerted effort to serve the labor requirements of Nebraska farmers and to place as many agricultural workers in gainful occupations as possible is now being made by the Nebraska State Employment Service and the National Reemployment Service.

Volunteer representatives will aid the placement activities of the Employment Service in various communities where the opening exists some distance from the office.

When orders for farm workers with special qualifications as to experience, nationality, age or other qualifications are received, the Employment Service manager can by means of a State Clearance System located in the state office of the National Reemployment Service, make available the applicants of the various districts in the state.

The farm placement service is with out charge to anyone concerned, as are the placement services of the two organizations in other fields.

Wayne Hears Bishop Oxnam Talk Sunday

Head of Omaha Area Gives Sermon at Methodist Church Sunday

Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of the Omaha Area of the Methodist Episcopal church in his sermon on "A Sense of What is Vital," pointed out how in many commonplace matters the more we know, the deeper and more intelligent and helpful is our interest and love. He addressed the Wayne Methodist Episcopal church Sunday morning at 10:45 o'clock.

Bishop Oxnam chose his text from Philippians 1:9:11, which reads, "It is my prayer that your love may be more and more rich in knowledge and in all matter of insight, enabling you to have a sense of what is vital, so that you may be transparent and harm to anyone in view of the fact of Christ, your life covered with the harvest of righteousness which Jesus Christ produces to the glory and the praise of God."

He laid considerable emphasis upon what is vital in religion — not this particular nostrum or panacea or one sided point of view — but it is personality that is vital. Whatever affects that is the concern of religion and to affect it favorably, to produce the abundant life, that is the task of religion, he commented. The Bishop defended the right of the church to speak in such matters as war, world peace, economic justice, because those matters affect people, and are thus vital.

Bishop Oxnam made a semi-humorous play upon the meaning of the word "transparent" in the matter of religious character, which he interpreted to be not so much that people could see through one another, or read their thoughts, as that they would be unafraid for all men to know what goes on within their minds and hearts. He concluded his sermon with a reminder of the inevitable harvest, which he plead with his audience to make a "harvest of righteousness."

Bishop Oxnam came to the Omaha Area of the Methodist Episcopal church from the presidency of the De Pauw university, a Methodist school located at Greencastle, Ind. He was elected Bishop at the 1936 General Conference and is the youngest member of the Board.

Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

People on their way home about 9 o'clock noticed first a reddish tinge in the west which kept growing brighter giving one the impression that a large fire was raging in the distance. Later the lights spread and were brilliant in their colorings, mostly red with streaks of green. The eastern sky was the brightest and it seemed to all come from a point directly overhead. Business Trend

Current business, on the average, is maintaining the relatively high levels reached at the end of 1936 and the beginning of 1937. The short-term outlook, so far as production, sales and profits are concerned, is good. The long-term outlook is questionable.

In those three sentences is found the theme song of most of the business writers at present. They have at hand the cold statistics which, with a very few exceptions, are encouraging. But the year puzzled by various conflicting tendencies and opposed trends.

There are three principal elements that make it extremely hazardous to attempt to forecast the course of industry and business beyond the next few months.

One of these elements is political. At this time the Supreme Court issue naturally overshadows everything else. It is certain that it will be a long time before the proposal is brought to a vote. But there is at least an even chance, once the showdown comes and the "heat" is turned on, that it will pass.

Second element is labor. John L. Lewis and his CIO didn't get anywhere near all they demanded in the General Motors strike. They did get some concessions, and more important got official recognition as a bargaining agency in employer-employee difficulties. Mr. Lewis is now known to be looking at the coal and steel industries and considering plans for conquering them. Other strikes are in the offing—particularly in textiles. The "sit-down" technique has apparently become an established phase of striking strategy, and laborites believe that both employers and government officials will hesitate to extort sit-downs, even though they have court injunctions behind them, because of the possibility of violence and bloodshed. With great labor-capital was impending, the investor and the industrialist are naturally cautious. A big strike not only imperils property—it also reduces purchasing power, perhaps to the tune of billions, and so shrinks the consuming market for goods and services of all kinds.

The third element is what Roger Babson, who won fame when he forecast the 1929 collapse, terms "The Coming American Boom." Mr. Babson is not alone in this—practically every commentator of experience feels that a real speculative boom will result, that there is a grave danger that security values will be forced up beyond reasonable levels, and that a real speculative boom will result to be followed by a crash of almost unimaginable severity. It is not believed that current stock, bond and real estate values—taking them by and large—are excessively high, but the danger exists. It is a noteworthy fact that officials of the New York Stock Exchange are worried about this, are issuing warnings to the public, and are cooperating with SEC experts in efforts to prevent ballooning of prices. But past experience definitely shows that it is a very difficult job to restrain a gambling mad public. Worst phase of this, say the authorities, is the extraordinary amount of activity in "nickel stocks"—people are buying low-priced issues simply because they are cheap, not knowing whether there is a real worth back of them or not, and this heavily stimulated demand, of course, boosts quotations.

Summing it up, it can be anticipated with reasonable certainty that, barring a major epidemic of strikes, the business situation will be relatively unchanged until after the middle of the year, may even improve somewhat. But there are too many jokers in the deck to look ahead to the end of the year and into 1938 without resorting to plain guessing. It is significant that only the amateur, inexperienced prognosticators are confident of what will happen when the experienced authorities just shake their heads.

Courting Disaster

During the past eight years, legislators have shown an increasing tendency to tamper with natural economic forces—such as the law of supply and demand. This is probably a natural trend, born of the human wish to miraculously force prosperity. Unhappily, no matter how well meant such efforts are, their social and economic wisdom is a matter of grave doubt.

Example of this type of tampering is found in legislation to curb free competition in the retail field, through the elimination of established mass merchandising methods, the limiting of advertising and promotional efforts of various kinds, law-enforced price-fixing, etc.

Thousands of bills to achieve such ends have been introduced in state legislatures and Congress. Some of them have passed. And the upshot is a definite "consumer" rebellion against this sort of legislation.

If we eliminate competition and attempt to negate the law of supply and demand, the consumer must pay the price. Such a law becomes, in effect, a tax against him, to be paid through increased cost of the necessities as well as the luxuries of life. And in a time such as the present, when natural influences are gradually raising the general cost of living, artificial boosts place millions of consumers in an untenable financial condition.

Retailing in the United States has far surpassed that of any other country. One reason is that it has been on a free competitive basis. Prices have ebbed and flowed naturally, due to the working of supply and demand, reductions in mercantile overhead, elimination of handling, etc. All types of retail units—large and small, corporate and partnership, chain and independent—have prospered, and the consumer has benefited with them. To drastically change that amazingly efficient system is to court disaster.

Germany and United States

In Press Fight

Germany and the United States seem to be having a verbal war because Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia of New York City referred to Hitler as a "brown shirted fanatic." Secretary Hull instructed Ambassador Wm. E. Dodd at Berlin to apologize. The German press came back and criticized our American institutions.

The thing which seems inconsistent about this whole affair is that many of our editors and commentators in the United States have called our own President and other high officials far worse names than a "brown shirted fanatic." We take it without a murmur. Have we lost some of our respect and loyalty? I doubt if we have, for if some outsider should make the same remarks we would be up in arms.

Nations are somewhat like families and individuals. People sometimes say things about their families or themselves that if the same remark were made by an outsider there would probably be a near riot. The similarity between the individual and the nation breaks down in some respects. A person will say things about himself not because he thinks it, but because he wants to be assured by the listener that there is nothing to the assertion. This is not true of our critics, however, who call our leaders almost anything they please.

Let us take the beam out of our own eye before we try to remove the mote from our sister nation's eye!

Some time soon Congress will be called upon to consider what Business Week terms "the broadest farm program ever advocated in this country."

The program, product of Secretary Wallace and his associates, will include many factors. Soil conservation—whereby crop control can be indirectly obtained—will be part of it. A potential cure for the grave farm tenancy problem—thought by some men, Republicans and Democrats alike, to be one of the really burning issues of the time—will be offered. And provision will be made for crop insurance, advocated by both the president and governor Landon in the last campaign.

One idea of Mr. Wallace's is the "ever normal granary." Under this plan, surplus crops would be stored in subnormal years; thus, in theory, stabilizing prices and adjusting supply with demand.

Bone Worriers

The country right now is affected with a biged of bone worriers—people who are past masters at destructive criticism of all measures regardless of merit proposed by the administration.

HISTORIES OF WAYNE CO. SCHOOL DISTRICTS

Interesting Data is Being Collected by County Supt. Pearl C. Sewell

(From the Wayne Co. Teacher)

This Community (District 28 South)

It hasn't been so many years ago that this community was without some of its beautiful and modern homes.

Probably at one time it was the home of the Omaha Indians. Among the first settlers to come here were the Fred Peperkorn and Westerhouse families.

When some of the first settlers came to this part it was mostly prairie with hardly any trees, but plenty of grass and huge sunflowers.

When some of the settlers came here the land west of Winside was known as the "dry lands".

The early settlers of this community began to till the soil with machinery drawn by horses and run by hand. Many of the settlers can recall being tired in the evenings after walking behind the plow or other machinery the whole day.

The early settlers did not have any of the modern vehicles, but were accustomed to taking the family to church, town or to the neighbors in buggies or wagons.

The first car came into this community in 1907.

The church that the people of this community attended was the country church located four miles east and one mile north of Winside, which was built in 1898.

The children of this community first attended in district 28 North, but it was decided that it was too far for some to attend, so another school house was built in 1889 and called, District 28 South.

The oldest settler of this community is Mrs. Louise Westerhouse, who is 92 years old.

Five of her great grand children are attending in district 28 South at the present time.

A History of School District No. 13

By Catherine Dilts

The school in District No. 13 of Wayne County, generally known as the "Dilts" school because of the proximity to the home of the late Levi Dilts, is located in Logan precinct; one and one-half miles south of Wakefield on state highway No. 92.

Fifty-six years ago in 1881 school district number 13 was organized, with O. F. Craven, David Ewing and John T. Mettlen serving as the school board. The school house was erected, and on November 7, 1881 the districts first term of school was opened with Miss Jenale Frazee as teacher.

Nine pupils, Bessie Ewing, Sadie Ewing, Jenn Crane, Bird Crane, Mary Mettlen, Jenn Mettlen, Herbie Mettlen, Ella Johnson and Eddie Johnson were enrolled the first day of school. A month later the names of Frank Mettlen, Gus Mettlen and Lizzie Mettlen were added to the roll making in all twelve pupils who were in attendance during the first year that school was held in district 13. These pupils came from the families of David Ewing, O. F. Crane, John T. Mettlen and Alonzo Johnson. A four months term of school was held in each of the first two years. Later the district held school five, six and eight months during the year, until the present nine months school year was established.

Formerly the school year was divided into three terms held in the fall, winter and spring, and not as at present for a school year. Occasionally a different teacher was employed for each term of the school year. No one remains in the district who lived there in the first year of the school's existence. Among those now residing in district number 13, Mrs. Levi Dilts who came there in December of 1882, has lived in the district the greatest number of years.

Two former teachers, Mrs. Carl Anderson (Miss Ruth Erickson) and Mrs. Arthur Borg (Miss Alice Larson) reside within the district. Miss Pearl

Sewell, superintendent of schools in Wayne county, is a former teacher of school district No. 13. Miss Myrna Mae Neal is the present teacher. Fourteen pupils are enrolled in the school. Alfred P. Borg, Roy Sundell and Charles Pierson compose the school board.

A few years ago an unsuccessful attempt was made to move the school house from its original site, where it now stands, to a new location.

The school house has been enlarged and new furniture has replaced the old desks and seats decorated with the carvings of their occupants of years ago. The green shutters are gone from the windows and further change has been wrought in the outward appearance of the building by an addition to the front. Yet, if perchance a pupil of fifty years ago should again pass that way, he would recognize the little country school house wherein he first received instruction in what were then considered the three fundamentals of an education, reading, writing and arithmetic.

History of School District No. 15

At a meeting held July 19, 1880, presided over by S. V. Wilbur, school district No. 15 was organized.

At this meeting John Wilbur was elected moderator, Ferrin Long, director and R. H. Wilbur, treasurer. One-half acre of land was leased from Ferrin Long for a school site. However in 1885 this was increased to one acre.

The word "leased" was used in the records but it was actually loaned to the district to be used without pay as long as the ground was used by the school.

It was agreed at this first meeting to build a school house eighteen by twenty-six feet "to be covered with Fine Lumber and Shingles and Said House not to cost more than five or six hundred dollars."

The records of this meeting show that they intended to hold three months of school that winter, but the school house was not completed until the following spring and the first school was held that summer.

Clara Wilbur was the first teacher and the following persons were listed as being of school age: Eugene Wilbur, Geo. Wilbur, Frank Wilbur and Mattie, Charles, Minnie and Josephine Long.

In 1883 D. W. C. Wood moved into the district, Frank and Samuel being of school age.

The district was being rapidly settled at this time. The names of Jas. Bush, John Benning, Adam Grier, Frederick Krei, John Goss, Beutow, Eli Jones and John Hanson appear in 1885 and during the following year the Jeffrey family arrived.

At this time the district began to be called Wilbur District due to the prominent part taken by the Wilbur family in the settlement's activities.

Previous to 1889, both summer and winter terms of school were taught. Grades were unknown at this time. The children who were too small to work attended the summer school, which was usually taught by a woman. In the winter, large as well as small went to school. A man was always employed at this time.

At first roads throughout the settlement were mere trails following the hill tops, but as people began leaving their farms, roads were gradually established in their present locations.

There were no telephones before 1906 and autos were unknown. Later cars appeared and the writer remembers the time his teacher heard a car coming and dismissed school so the pupils could see it.

In 1911 the school house was moved from the corner where it had been located to its present site a few rods east of the old location. At this time the building was given a thorough repairing. Since then only minor repairs and improvements have been made.

The present teacher, Bernice Kimball is the fifty-third teacher to be employed. There have been forty-six women and seven men teachers. Essi Spahr taught six years, the longest taught by any teacher.

POOR MAN'S GOLD

CHAPTER IV

Synopsis: Jack Hammond, gold prospector, returns to Prince Rupert after a spree in Seattle and learns that a gold rush is starting as a result of some careless remarks he had dropped at a party concerning a gold discovery. He finds that his partner, McKenzie Joe Britton, has gone on north to protect their claims. Besieged, Hammond decides to tell the would-be prospectors how to reach the new gold fields. Around the World Annie, a better dance hall proprietor, has assembled a troupe of girls and is bent on starting a dance hall at the new camp. Jack muses about Kay Joyce, the girl in Seattle whom he loves and to whom he confided the secret of his gold strike. Going to his lawyer's office, he sees a young girl on the stairs. Jack asks Barstow the lawyer about the girl and learns that she is a volunteer client. Jack tells him about Kay whom he had admired as a little girl, but who ignored him in childhood. Jimmy Moon, a mutual acquaintance, had brought them together. Kay was chilly at first but when she saw some of his gold nuggets they got along beautifully. He had met her mother and a friend of the family, Bruce Kenning, a geologist. Sergeant Terry of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police joins the gold-seekers on their trip north and tells Hammond he will not let the girl-Jeanne Towers make the trip because she does not have equipment. Jack counters her and she asks him to lend her a team of dogs and supplies. He suggests that she go back home, but she says she can't. He lets her borrow the team and supplies. The next day the trek to the new bonanza begins. Later, on the trail, Jeanne is lost and Hammond saves her.

"A good lead dog would have been able to pick up the trail." Suddenly he said, "Too tired to go on?" "Can we reach camp?" "We'll have to make our own camp." He looked about him, in the lowering dusk. One chance was as good as another—memory told him that they had been working for some time to the left. Certainly shore could not be so far away. "We haven't much to kick about. Everything in the world to eat on that toboggan and there's a sleeping bag for you." "But you?" "He grinned. "It won't be the first time I've piled in with the dogs."

There was a different spirit now, concern for her safety had placed them on a new basis. Silently they worked forward, bent against the drive of snow. Going was increasingly difficult, the white, sticky fall had covered the harder pack for a full six inches; their snowshoes sank deep and came up heavy, leaden. A half hour of terrific exertion followed. The world was black now, but Hammond urged her forward.

"I think I see the shore line ahead," he commanded. "Keep going if you can." "I'll keep going," was her sturdy answer. The search ended within a hundred yards, in low-boughed spruce, a rocky shore line, and tumbled deadwood.

Again Jack saw that she had told the truth when she had denoted herself as being of the North. She asked no questions. She did not even query their camping place, driving the dogs to the first level spot where twisted tree growth formed a shelter from the wind. Then, as the huskies sank to rest in the snow, she turned deliberately to her next self-appointed task, the digging under old drifts or to windward for dry bits of pitch wood, for unmoistened cones and a handful of brittle spruce needles, meanwhile sweeping near-by surroundings with appraising glances. In that she told Jack Hammond much of woodsman-ship, he knew that she was searching for a birch tree and its inflammable bark, but there was none.

The spruce needles cracked into a feeble blaze as he fed them with a second match. Jeanne handed him a crushed bunch of fine dead twigs. Then he took the larger fuel from her, stick by stick, until the blaze leaped high. At last he

Six days later, a struggling mass of humans slipped and slid across the hummocked ice of the Likken river. Hammond came along, passed Jeanne Towers, asked a cheery question, and went onward.

His thick clothing smeared by frost and soil, Jack Hammond worked with pick and shovel at the bottom of a deep pit. He filled a moosehide bucket with boulders and stony soil and signaled to McKenzie Joe to raise and dump it. Joe obeyed, turning the rough handle of an equally crude windlass. He was a beaverlike man of huge shoulders and stocky frame; with a great effort he carried the bucket away and emptied it. Returning he called down:

"Hey, Jack. Ride the bucket up." "Knocking off work early, aren't we?" Hammond queried, when he poked his head out of the crude shaft.

"Look," answered McKenzie Joe. With a movement of his eyes he indicated the far-away camp. "It was a new trek from Fourcross. Men were shooting, and hurrying about, musing their dogs to the first open space unoccupied by the tents of other gold seekers, and tearing at their toboggan loads as though they had only a matter of minutes in which to begin life in a new land. At this distance, they looked like so many black, two-legged ants, outlined against the white of the snow-covered Sapphire Lake. McKenzie Joe rubbed his heavy fingers through matted, gray beard.

"There ain't nothin' crazier'n a bunch of bushed placer miners," he said at last. "Let's clean out that pit and knock off work for the day."

"Sure," said Hammond. "Then go down to town and find out how to make a million."

He glanced toward the bed of the frozen Big Moose. Great fires burned there, dozens of them, where men, and the few women who had made the galling journey, worked at a dream of fortune. It was tough going now. The gravel must be thawed out. Water for panning must come by dog team from the community water hole, cut through the four-foot thickness of lake ice.

"Well, let 'em work down creek all they want," said Joe. "The real gold's somewhere else. The Big Moose didn't always ride along over against those mountains. It traveled over here somewhere—and here's where we'll find the bonanza."

"Big as hen's eggs!" Hammond laughed. "Make it a goose; it's just as easy."

They returned to work, finally, to clean out the pit. It was a test job—the first of dozens, maybe a hundred, which they knew they must sink in their search for an age-old river bed, long covered by the overburden of erosion. At last, with the moosehide bucket raised, they started back toward "town."

The days were growing longer. Spring already had arrived in climates farther south; summer was on the way. But up here, everything remained under a burden of white. Hammond glanced far to the right.

"One less moose," he said. "There's Olson with a supply of meat! The pack that man can carry!"

They watched him angle across the drifts toward the main trail, his rifle dragging, the hind quarters of an Alaskan moose on his back. "Think I'll go beg some of that," McKenzie Joe said. "The way those wild men are coming into this country, there won't be a lot of game left."

or ask questions. You understand that, don't you?"

"Yes—I've known that." "Just the same," the man went on, "I've thought of something funny. Suppose for instance, I lent you a little money—you know, to build a shack with. And then—" he added, stilling her exclamation—"suppose I did what I could to get things going for you. I've just been thinking that it really would be a whole of a joke on somebody, if you'd take this bunch of supplies you've been dragging through for me, and really start that grocery store."

Five minutes later, Jack Hammond turned away, with a hand at his throat.

"I didn't think she'd cry about it," he mumbled, once more back at the fire. He sat there a long time. Then at last he stretched, went over to the dogs, disturbed them with a moccasined foot, and rolled in with them. The sun shone the next morning. They were back at camp in an hour. The endless journey began anew.

IN SAN DIEGO lives a gentleman who runs a delicatessen store. He is locally famous for his antipathy to all things English. Perhaps the fact that his ancestors on both sides were Irish rebels may have a bearing upon his prejudice.

Last summer, I think it was, or maybe it was the summer before that, a British warship visited the California ports. When she reached San Diego members of the crew were given shore leave. One of the sailor men, a little Cockney, walked into the Native Son's establishment. Even at the risk of offending a prospective customer, the proprietor regarded the youth with a hostile stare.

"What do you want?" he asked shortly. The Englishman was fidgeting a one pound note. "It'd like it if you'd change a quid for me," he said. "Is that so?" snapped back the Californian. "Well, young fella, lemme tell you something—in the first place I don't chew and even if I did, I wouldn't be swappin' quids with nobody, let alone a durned Britisher."

Some Interesting Facts (From The Fact Digest)

Fingerprints . . . . .
The late John Dillinger had numerous operations performed to alter his finger prints. At his death experts studied his prints and found 113 points of similarity despite the surgical operations.
Chinese used fingerprints as a signature on contracts more than 1400 years ago.
Fingerprints, to some expert readers of the "whorls and curls," tell "also" the race of the person whose prints are registered.
Dogs . . . . .
Dogs are brought into the United States from foreign countries without any great difficulty but importing a dog into England requires a six month quarantine period for the "foreigner" after leaving the ship.
Five hundred million dollars have been invested in dogs in the United States by 8,500,000 owners of the household pets.
Automobiles have ventilated rest compartments for the comfort of dog passengers.

Apples . . . . .
Apples were used as moth preventatives in the days of ancient Rome. A person's breath is usually sweetened after an apple is eaten.
Half an apple a day is the average consumption by every man, woman and child in the United States.
Mayo clinic doctors say that apples are unsuited for four out of every five persons who visited the clinic in Minneapolis for examination.

Cigarettes . . . . .
American cigarettes may be bought in China at half the price that people pay for them in North Carolina where great numbers of cigarettes are made.
The "pack a day" smoker indirectly pays the government $22 in taxes yearly.
In the period of 1921 to 1933 consumption of cigarette tobacco increased from 45 billion to 109 billion annually in the United States.
It has been reported that President Roosevelt smokes two packs a day. He uses a long wooden holder.
Surveys in 1935 showed that more than 14,000,000 females over 15 years of age were cigarette smokers.

PASTURE SITUATION NEEDS IMPROVING

Drouth Has Retarded Grass Stand, Farmers Plan 1937 Contest

Early spring and summer grazing time may be far distant but to thousands of Nebraska farmers it is a "live" problem right now as they go about planning their 1937 farming operations. Improving of grasslands will be one of their main objectives this year in view of what has happened to pastures during the past few years.

Last year proved to be a very unfavorable year for improving grazing lands due to the unfavorable weather conditions. Many old native pastures were completely killed out. For the most part, farmers failed to get good stands of new seedings. The same problem, if not more serious, faces them in 1937.

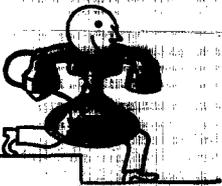

In 1935 a total of nearly 900 farmers in Nebraska studied their pasture management closely by entering the second annual statewide pasture contest. Throughout the year they kept accurate record of all expenditures and receipts on their grazing land and also a record of all grazing and other details. Late in the fall practically all of the entrants attended a clinic and banquet held in Omaha.

Now details of the third annual statewide pasture contest have just been announced. The event will be again sponsored by the Nebraska College of Agriculture, the Agricultural Extension Service, the Omaha Chamber of Commerce, the Nebraska Crop Growers' Association and the Nebraska Livestock Breeders' association. County and state winners will be named late in the fall as in previous years. The entries will be limited to 30 farmers to each county.

Designed to help stimulate good pasture management and to bring out some of the more practical grazing practices of farmers, the contest is already attracting considerable attention. Through this event farmers make a close study of their grasses and take advantage of other research work done by participants in the preceding year.

S. C. S. Dams Hold

about four-tenths of 1 per cent have failed completely under stress of heavy rains. Fewer than 500 dams have been disabled, and they were easily repaired. The dams range in size from stabilization structures 1 or 2 feet high to storage dams about 20 feet high.

Shallow Contour Furrow Saves Soil and Moisture

Shallow furrows, cut by an ordinary plow following the contours of sloping and hilly pastures at right angles to the slope, rank among the least expensive and most effective of erosion-control and water-conservation measures, according to Charles Enlow, chief agronomist of the soil conservation service.

Studies indicate that shallow furrows, close together, give better results than deep furrows farther apart. Shallow furrows and more of them do not turn infertile subsoil to the surface and do not prevent passage of farm machinery over the ground.

Calculations made by the service give a good idea of the amount of water which contour furrows hold. For example, each linear foot of contour furrow six inches deep and 18 inches wide will hold about 5.61 gallons of water. Thus, the water-holding capacity of contour furrows on a 160 acre pasture, with furrows averaging 20 feet apart, is at least 2,250,000 gallons of water.

"Our observations show that contour furrows in pastures will hold a considerable share of the rain and melting snow where it falls and where it will do the most good," says Enlow. "Furrows have been plowed under widely varying climatic, soil, and slope conditions, and in almost all instances they have held water, prevented quick runoff, and encouraged absorption of moisture. These facts have been established by measuring and comparing penetration on contoured pastures with adjacent pastures not contour-furrowed."

U. S. Breeders Import More Purebred Horses

Importations of horses from foreign countries increased greatly during the past year, according to a report by the United States Department of Agriculture. There were 353 horses imported for breeding purposes in 1936, as compared with 419 in 1935 and 207 in 1934, according to records kept by L. M. Dean, of the Bureau of Animal Industry, who is responsible for certification of purebred animals for free entry under the tariff law.

More than four-fifths of the purebred horses imported were of the draft breeds. There were 469 Belgians, 117 Percherons, 103 Clydesdales, and a few each of four other draft breeds. The largest number of these imported horses of the light breeds was 69, followed by the hackney, represented by 44 animals. Importation of other livestock, as shown by the latest summary compiled by the Bureau for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1936, show a total of 15,866 head of all classes of purebred animals, which includes dogs and cats. This figure is nearly 42 per cent greater than the total importations of breeding stock for the same period in 1935 and 107 per cent greater than the total for 1934.

RANDOLPH — One of the strangest pets in Cedar County is owned by Wayne Littrel, young son of Rev. and Mrs. E. Littrel of Randolph. It is a porcupine not quite a year old. The porcupine was captured by Wayne last May during a trip the boy and his brother took to the Black Hills. The porcupine has become a great pet and answers to the name of Billy.

LAUREL — The Laurel fire department was summoned to the state highway department garage just back of the Youngberg garage Friday evening by a gasoline explosion. Harold Schwarzenbaugh was working in the building at the time filling a road maintainer with gasoline. The explosion is thought to have been caused by static electricity igniting the vapor. Schwarzenbaugh was quite severely burned about the hands and face when he carried the blazing bucket of gas out doors, thereby averting a blaze.

ELGIN — Elgin friends of Sybil Anderson of Chicago, a former Elgin girl, will be pleased to learn of her recent success. Miss Anderson has revised a hygiene book which has been accepted and published by Rand and McNally. Since Christmas she has been to Boston, New York City, Washington, D. C., and twice to Cincinnati where she has sold the book to various universities.

ELGIN — William Henney, Jr., was decorating a show window in his father's drug store one morning last week. He was carrying thumb tacks in his mouth and had the misfortune to swallow one. He tried to cough it up with no success and an examination by a doctor showed that it was located near the bifurcation of the bronchus. The doctor advised a trip to Omaha where the tack could be removed with the use of a bronchoscope. The doctor and his patient hurried home to get ready. In a few minutes the doctor's telephone rang and the father stated that the trip was not necessary. Bending over to shine his shoes, Henney, Jr., had coughed, and out had flown the offending tack. It is estimated that the trip and medical attention would have cost one hundred dollars.

WEST POINT — The Nebraska Supreme court Tuesday sustained a Douglas county district court verdict against the Interstate Detective Agency of Omaha and three of its members, awarding Leonard Doescher of near West Point, $1,000 for false imprisonment. Doescher brought suit against the agency after they had placed him in jail at West Point, July 5, 1933. He was accused of stealing from the estate of Gottlieb Schiebl.

SCOTTSBLUFF — Plans are under way for the construction of a commercial artichoke processing plant at Scottsbluff. This will be the first Construction will start about April 1 and the plant will be in operation the latter part of October.

NEWMAN GROVE — All children in the schools, both grade and high school, will be offered free inoculation for diphtheria as soon as plans being made by the Woman's Club are completed. Funds from the Christmas Seal fund will be used to finance this worthy undertaking.

NEWMAN GROVE — An optimistic farmer is Andrew Dablsen of near Newman Grove. Friday March 6 he sowed 15 acres of Polgam oats. This variety is an early one and will withstand a late freeze. He paid $1.00 a bushel for the seed and sowed it at the rate of about one bushel to an acre.

WINSIDE — Although an effort was made to reorganize the Big Ten League this year, the task seemingly was not possible. Wisner and Stanton joined other leagues, and two or three other member teams were not interested in re-entering the league. One or two other towns probably will not even organize baseball teams. Winside plans to reorganize its team and will play independent ball this year.

PENDER — A drive to combat cancer commences March 21 in Thurston county. An army composed entirely of women will carry on this fight. Mrs. J. F. Conway is captain for Thurston county.
