Estimate Crowd Of 1700 to Attend

Forty-Four Schools Enter District 3 Music Meet Here April 2, 3

The ninth annual district three music contest to be held Friday and Saturday at the college auditorium is expected to be one of the largest in the past several years with forty-four schools entered and an attendance estimated at approximately 1700 people.

Registration in the solo division is the largest with 200 entries. Fifty-seven glee club and chorus groups have entered. In the vocal ensemble group, fifty-three ensembles will compete.

Two bands from Carroll and Thurston increase the band registration over last year to seventeen bands. Thirty instrumental ensembles and five orchestras are registered.

Judges will be Oscar Lyder, director of the School of Fine Arts of Midland college, Fremont; Mrs. Leo Kuchanski, instructor in piano of Morning-side college of Sioux City; Frank Noyes, director of music of Hastings College Conservatory of Music of Hastings, and W. C. Temple, director of Music of Lincoln high school of Lincoln.

Ionian Quartet Here Wednesday

A Capella Ensemble to Close Wayne College Lyceum Schedule

The Ionian Quartet under the management of the Lucius Pryor Concert service through cooperation with the National Music League will be presented in an evening concert at the college auditorium this coming Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

The Ionian Quartet which was organized some years ago is an all-American ensemble of voices chosen for perfection of tonal blend, for individual quality and compass, and for all the other musicianly attributes of a true ensemble artist.

The quartet is composed of Harold Deborn, first tenor; Albert Barber, second tenor; Paul Oncey, baritone, and Hildreth Martin, basso.

Composers have written music rendered for us by many instruments; likewise a great range of fine material has gone hand in hand with great vocal advances, but it has remained for the Ionian Quartet to combine the best qualities of both and produce a program of extensive range, pure tone and movingly sensitive interpretation.

Their broad and artistic compass of selections finds a responsive reaction in their audiences since the adaptability of their program has proved to be effective to the utmost in their many appearances.

With the Ionian Quartet, "a capella" ensemble singing takes on a value heretofore little appreciated.

Wayne Second Annual Auto Show Opens Next Thursday

HOW LONG CAN A THREE-QUARTER WIFE HOLD HER HUSBAND?

YOU have to work at marriage to make a success of it. Men may be selfish, unsympathetic, but that's the way they're made and you might as well realize it.

When your back aches and your nerves scream, don't take it out on your husband. He can't possibly know how you feel.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three decades of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and go "smiling through."

EMERSON — A new highway, connecting federal highway 20 with state highway No. 9, established within the past year on old No. 20 between Laurel and Dixon, was recently completed and put into use. This road is a three-mile stretch between Concord, Dixon, and No. 20.

EMERSON — A coil of copper wire weighing 200 pounds was stolen from the linesman's storeroom near the depot during the night of March 19. A few days later a railroad detective found some new copper wire cut into bits at a junk dealer's yard at Sioux City. Authorities are still working on the case.

NELIGH — About 25 of Neligh's best hunters went out to the Ivan Briggs farm west of Elgin Sunday and staged another one of those famous crow hunts. From reports it has been estimated that over 2,500 of the black feathered birds were slaughtered at this hunt. Andrew Raiser of Norfolk was at hand to do the airplane act and he succeeded in rounding up the crows in excellent shape so that the hunters would have no trouble getting at them with their shotguns.

SCHUYLER — Sheriff Little was awakened at 4:30 Saturday morning by the ringing of his phone. Upon answering it, he was informed by a man that "I have just broken into the Gateway cafe." The sheriff immediately went to the cafe and found a front and back window broken but no evidence that anything inside had been disturbed. Upon checking with the telephone call, he found that the call had been made on the Gateway phone.

HARTINGTON — WJAG stationed in the Norfolk Daily News building in Norfolk set up remote control headquarters with Hartington Tuesday afternoon to enable the farmers of Cedar county to broadcast their desperate need for feed and seed loans in this drought stricken country. A commercial program was set aside to permit the broadcast.

PENDER — Hearing on an effort to collect 30 thousand dollars legal fees from Mrs. Nellie Craven daughter of John R. House, wealthy Pender merchant, who died six years ago, will be concluded in court. The action was brought by two attorneys, James Hanley of Omaha and Washington, D. C., and John C. Mullica of Omaha, through five nieces and nephews of Mr. House. The amount represents the charge for services in a long legal battle involving the estate.

PENDER — W. E. Roesting, Omaha, clerk in the county clerk's office, and R. Kohler, Tekamah, were fined $613 for shooting ducks and geese out of season at Tekamah Monday.

The pair had 21 ducks and nine geese in their possession when apprehended Sunday night by state and federal wardens. County Judge B. C. Enbart said the total fines of $613 were the largest ever assessed in the county.

HARTINGTON — Cash to the amount of $100 was stolen from the Chief Liquor store at Hartington early last Thursday morning. Entrance was gained by breaking a front door panel. No liquor was taken. Other recent liquor store robberies were those at Belden and Pierce where large quantities of liquor were taken. It is thought to be the work of an organized gang.

RANDOLPH — County Treasurer Rife of Cedar county, recently elected president of the Nebraska County Treasurers' association, said he is accepting delinquent tax payments without interest under the newly enacted Haycock law.

Delinquent taxes should be paid at once to benefit fully from this law and avoid the 7 per cent interest charge from last Friday when the law became effective. Some county treasurers refuse to accept payment until the courts pass on the law.

CARROLL — J. M. Johnson of Hartington was in Carroll Monday in the interest of the Nebraska Fiber Co. The baled hemp is being shipped to the Mazewood Co. of Dubuque, Iowa. The hemp will be made into plasters. They are loading two car loads a day for shipment.

Bread, beauty and brotherhood are the three great needs of man. We shall create a new social order in which everyone who renders honest service shall have these things.—Edwin Markham.

Rights — and Right

American democracy is as much on trial in the present moment as in any election the nation has known. Transfers of political and economic power are being made which under any other system would involve violent revolution. The application of democratic discussion is most evident at the moment in the nation-wide debates over constitutional changes and labor relations. The manner in which the American people are approaching both problems encourages a confident prediction that the country will pass through the present period of transition by those methods of reason rather than force which in the main have achieved all great changes in America except the abolition of slavery.

This confidence has already been warranted in connection with the constitutional issue; there is every reason to believe that whatever changes are made will be well understood by the people and sanctioned by their representatives. Despite threats of a general strike and the defiance of law connected with hundreds of sit-downs we believe the essential decisions in the field of labor relations will be made by public opinion and by an appeal to justice rather than force.

This is indicated by fears of violence among both industrial and labor leaders. It is reflected as well in the increasing popular impatience with sit-downs as in a lingering reluctance to deprive workers of new powers being used to achieve a stage of labor organization long ago reached in other democratic nations.

During the General Motors strike, Governor Murphy of Michigan was asked to answer a hard question: Should defiance of the law be tolerated for a time in order to reach peaceable settlement and avoid bloodshed? Today, in greater or less degree, every responsible citizen is putting that same question to his own conscience. For it is becoming clearer that defiance of law cannot continue to be tolerated without serious consequences. And by the slow processes of democratic discussion this decision is crystallizing.

Americans conscious that rights of workers in their jobs are not today as well recognized by the law as the rights of employers in their property are slow to enforce a legal disadvantage on labor. Citizens who know that imperatives of power have generally favored employers in labor disputes are not hurrying to declare that the sit-downs must be outlawed.

Students of labor relations who remember that workers have slowly gained legal recognition of the right to strike, to picket peacefully and to bargain collectively may have some confidence that a right to sit-down will gain the legal recognition just predicted by so good a lawyer as the dean-elect of Harvard Law school. Humanitarians may hope that some legal definition will be found for a worker's right in his job which is today recognized informally by thousands of employers in their pension provisions and funds for extra discharge payments.

Yet until the law is changed, it must be supported. That is the only way to avoid anarchy. And for the public there can be no sound basis in the argument that one wrong justifies another. Two wrongs never make a right. And there is no proof that legal wrong to labor preceded the major sit-down strike that in the Chrysler plants. Collective bargaining has not been denied. Nor has the company violated the Wagner act. The National Relations Board has never taken up the Chrysler strike as it did the Remington Rand strike. Nor has it made any decision which the company has disobeyed.

In this case as in most of the sit-downs it is workers themselves who are denying the rights of other workers to their jobs. Labor is on weak ground in this business of matching wrongs. It will win its rights better by appealing to the American people's sense of right and their willingness to incorporate it in the law as quickly as it is clarified and based upon democratic processes. The workers' demands are reasonable.

Bygone Days

March 27, 1912—

N. A. Thomas received patent papers with accompanying drawing and specifications on an improved car stop Monday. The invention covers a movable metal car stop designed to take the place of the present stool used by brakemen to assist passengers in alighting from the coaches. It is worked by a lever inside the vestibule and is locked close up under the regular lower step of the car when not in use.

Monday morning trainmen coming from Omaha brought word of a great tornado which had wrecked a large portion of the residence section of Omaha. The cyclone swept through the city from the southwest to the northeast sweeping everything before it in a strip averaging three to five blocks wide and more than six miles in length.

Mrs. Charles Strasser of Waterbury came Saturday for a short visit with her son, William Benson.

Miss Helen Johnson who has been teaching in district No. 68 resigned to go to the western part of the state. The two months of unexpired school will be taught by Miss Grace Steele who began last Monday.

The new nickels came to Wayne last week, the banks here receiving a supply which was quickly exchanged for old nickels and the curiosity of many was satisfied.

Burl Craig and family have returned to Wayne from South Dakota. They have rented their Dakota farm and this week move into their home in the north part of the city.

Shirley Sprague returned last week from a visit with relatives and friends at Sheldon, Ia., and Parker, S. D.

J. H. Foster has secured the contract for a new brick market building to be built at Wakefield this spring for J. Swanson. The building is to be 25 x 50 and modern throughout.

Thursday, April 3, 1913 —

Harry Fisher and Frank Morgan took a little hunting trip down into the reservation the first of the week and bagged 19 ducks and 4 geese.

The streets of Wayne have been given a good dragging during the past few days and it helped much in appearance and comfort of those who ride or drive. Several citizens have voluntarily dragged the roads in front of their places.

In the recent city election the following were elected to fill the town offices: C. A. Chace, mayor; H. S. Ringland, treasurer; J. M. Cherry, clerk; John Gaertner, long term councilman of the first ward and W. O. Hansen, short term councilman of the first ward; Herman Lundberg, second ward councilman, and J. G. W. Lewis, councilman of the third ward. T. W. Moran and Rollie W. Ley were elected to the school board.

J. C. Swanson is adding a dining room to his bakery and short order business and can then serve meals. A new and completely modern soda fountain is soon to be installed in place of the old one.

Sam Davies, Walter Savidge, Elwin Strong and Percy Strahan went to Norfolk Friday evening to attend the annual banquet of the Elks and report a good time.

Dr. J. T. House was at Bancroft Friday evening where he delivered a lecture under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor on "Everyday Philosophy for Everyday People."

The Timid Child

(By Dean H. H. Hahn)

A word in behalf of the shy or timid child. He is the child who "is seen but not heard". In school he goes unnoticed by the teacher, because he never violates any of the rules of conventional school discipline or disturbs the ordinary classroom routine. He thus escapes the attention of the teacher who is more concerned in teaching subjects than in studying children and in building healthy personalities.

In the home the shy child is also "seen, not heard". He is easily repressed or silenced by criticism. He usually takes a backseat in the family circle or neighborhood group, and without protest lets the more aggressive members lead. Yet for the mental health standpoint this shy, sensitive, unsocial, non-interfering, timid, and withdrawing child is as much or more of a problem than the child who bothers the teacher or worries the parent by his aggressive behavior. Because of his recessive traits he is apt to be left alone, day dreaming and withdrawing from child life as it really is and should be lived. Left to himself, such a child often fails to become happily socialized. If his traits carry over into adult life unchecked, we get the recluse, the odd, the queer, the socially unsuitable types of personality.

What guidance does the shy child need? First, he must be led to assert himself. Parents and teachers must find something he can do and do well. They must show him off to advantage and thus encourage him to approach others with confidence.

Second, never tell others in his presence that he is shy. Give him something to do, if he shows shyness in company. This gives him a sense of importance and a motor outlet for his emotions. Expression of repressed emotions is what such a child needs.

Whatever is done, his shyness must be ignored, but not the child. Finally both parent and teacher must encourage the timid child to do for himself. There is a strong tendency on the part of everyone to help him too much — to be over-protective and over-solicitous for his general welfare. This is just the sort of treatment he should not receive. Such a child must develop faith in his own abilities. He must get rid of his feeling of inferiority. This will not happen as long as his parents and teachers help him with his tasks, direct his play, choose his companions, and make his decisions. Of course, he must not be allowed to fail in his undertakings, but he should be made to feel responsible for his successes.

Some Interesting Facts

Goats — The goat's physical construction is such that he has never been known to have tuberculosis. Goat milk is free of the germ at all times.

Automobile manufacturers require 300,000 goats every year to furnish mohair needed for the interior of cars.

Bridges — Switzerland stores one of its large bridges during the winter. The bridge is taken apart and put away while there is danger of snowslides rolling down the mountain to damage the crossings.

The course of the Missouri river was changed to flow under the newly built span of the South Omaha bridge which had been originally constructed over a dry river bed.

A bridge in Nikko, Japan, is crossed only by royal family members.

POOR MAN'S GOLD

Courtney Ryley Cooper

Courtney Ryley Cooper, WNU Service.

SYNOPSIS

Jack Hammond, gold prospector, returns to Prince Rupert after a spree in Seattle and learns that a gold rush is starting as a result of some careless remarks he had dropped at a party concerning a gold discovery. He finds that his partner, McKenzie Joe Britten, has gone on north to protect their claims. Besieged, Hammond decides to tell the would-be prospectors how to reach the new gold fields. Around the World Annie, a frontier dance hall proprietor, has assembled a troupe of girls and is bent on starting a dance hall at the new camp. Jack meets about Kay Joyce, the girl in Seattle whom he loves and to whom he confided the secret of his gold strike. Going to his lawyer's home, he meets a young girl on the stairs. Jack asks Barstow the lawyer about the girl and learns that she is a volunteer client. Jack tells him about Kay whom he had admired as a little girl, but who ignored him in childhood. Timmy Moon, a mutual acquaintance, had brought them together. Kay was chilly at first but when she saw some of his gold nuggets they got along beautifully. He had met her mother and a friend of the family, Bruce Kenning, a geologist. Sergeant Terry of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police joins the gold-seekers on their trip north. Jack encounters the girl, Jeanne Towers, and she asks him to lead her a team of dogs and supply. He consents. The next day the trek to the new bonanza begins. Later, on the trail, Jeanne is lost and Hammond saves her. The gold-seekers arrive and the new camp is soon in full swing. Hammond and Joe have a secret theory. The real gold field will not be on the present site of the Big Moose river, but on its prehistoric bed, which they are seeking. Kenning turns up with messages from Seattle. Springtime comes. Then an airplane arrives bearing Kay, her mother and Timmy Moon, the aviator.

"Kay's crazy about the cottage," he volunteered. McKenzie Joe, squatted on the doorstep, turned his beaverlike head.

"I figured she would be, for awhile."

"What do you mean awhile?"

"They're city people," said McKenzie Joe quietly.

Hammond laughed, tightened his belt, stood immobile a moment, then claved about him in the half-dark room for a necktie.

"Don't you worry about that. Kay can take it. So can her mother. They like the outdoors."

McKenzie made no direct reply. He only eyed his partner.

"Kind of dressing up, aren't you?"

"Well," said Jack with a grin. "You know—their first night here. We're all going to the Slumgullion to eat. Come along?"

"None." Joe said it half brusquely.

"Little abrupt, aren't you, Joe?" he said at last.

"Not particularly."

A queer feeling of resentment shot through Hammond.

"Joe," he said finally, "what's been eating on you?"

"Nothin' but mosquitoes. I reckon."

"Let's not joke," the younger man said suddenly. "You've been different ever since we came back here."

"Me different? I ain't noticed it, Jack."

"You haven't seemed yourself. Moody—thinking about something all the time. Grouchy, like you had a chip on your shoulder."

"When?" asked Joe.

"The other day, for instance, when Bruce Kenning dropped by our tent."

"Then why be so cagey? We haven't got anything to hide."

"We've got our theory, ain't we, that the big discovery's yet to be found? This stuff that's been turned up ain't nothin' but chicken feed. We've got the richest placer claims along the new bed of Loon creek and we'll be lucky if they bring us fifty thousand dollars."

McKenzie Joe's keen eyes swept the valley.

"There's a bonanza around here somewhere, if we ever find that old river bed. The idea's worth keeping to ourselves."

"I suppose so. On the other hand, Kenning's a geologist. It might pay us to give him a little information—even cut him in."

McKenzie Joe rose and tossed the stick away.

"Not while I'm a partner in this shebang," he said. Then, hesitatingly, "I guess I'll go eat."

"You won't change your mind, and come with us?"

"Oh, not tonight. You've all got things to talk about."

Hammond watched him stalk away; it was not his imagination, he told himself, which made him feel that Joe was different. Silent, almost morose at times; working quietly and without response while Hammond planned enthusiastically for the future, when Kay would be there and Sapphire Lake a city.

"The Idea's Worth Keeping to Ourselves."

"Joe must be getting old," he said at last, and dropping down the step, hurried through the criss-cross of cabins and tents toward the trail which led to the cottage.

Kay turned from a window and strode toward him with a swinging step which matched her outdoor clothing.

"You old dear!" she exclaimed. "I thought I'd better hurry back," Hammond explained buoyantly. "Just to be sure you were really here."

"If your ears rang like mine, you'd know we were here," broke in Mrs. Joyce. "Sitting cooped up in that airplane for I don't know how many hours! She sat cross-legged on one of the two bunklike beds, poking a cigarette into a long, green holder. Kay cut in.

"Can you imagine," she asked, as she came close to Jack, and with a maternal manner, straightened his tie. "Only her close-fitting jersey imprisoned her full breasts; they touched Hammond's arm, yielding softly to pressure. "We hardly paused all the way here from Vancouver."

Hammond barely heard her; his was stinging in his veins.

"I thing we didn't have to back when we got here," growled Timmy, from his sprawled position on a rough chair. "We'd have been in a hell of a fix if this lake had been frozen over."

"But it wasn't frozen, Thicketwit," Kay jibed. She turned from Hammond and leaned over the back of Timmy's chair. She tweaked the pilot's nose. "Always the cheerful little earful He's had us smashed up a dozen times since we started."

"Well, who wouldn't be careful? Finding a place that hardly exists in a crate like that old boat of mine. A fellow's got to think of his responsibilities."

"How many stops did you make getting here?" Jack asked.

"Only a couple," Kay volunteered. "Once at Stewart lake for gas and for Timmy to study his maps. Then again at Fourcross."

Jack whistled.

"You moved right along."

Mrs. Joyce regarded her cigarette holder.

"That's what happens when a girl really wants to see a man," she observed calmly. Hammond on laughed and could think of nothing to say. Kay crossed the room and dropped into a chair.

"Now that it's over, I'm tired."

Then she added, "Couldn't we have dinner served up here?"

Hammond shook his head.

"Nothing like that. It's a matter of getting it when the cook's willing. I'll have things organized for you in a day or two—I've got a line on a woman who can come here and do the work for you."

"Wonderful," said Mrs. Joyce, with her usual lack of expression.

"And in the meanwhile," announced Timmy, "we'll eat at the Quack and Dirty and like it."

"When?" asked Mrs. Joyce.

"We're waiting for Bruce Kenning, Mother."

"As usual, we've waited for him for ten years."

"Yes—father always said he was the latest thing in mining men."

Hammond laughed louder than anyone at that. Jokes had been few for him in these long weeks of waiting.

Bruce Kenning was coming in the door. After that, the conversation became jumbled; so much to be gone over again, calls for food from Timmy Moon, monosyllabic cut-ins by Mrs. Joyce, questions to be re-answered about the trip. But at last they were down the hill and at the crude doorway of the Slumgullion. For a moment a queer feeling of trepidation shot through Jack Hammond. For the first time, he wondered what Kay would think of these crude surroundings which she would find on every side, the lack of comforts of civilization. But the answer came almost as soon as his mental question. Kay had tipped her blonde head and glanced about her at the sloping log building, with its glassless windows of mosquito netting, its faint illumination of two ancient oil lamps, its vague forms, seated at round tables, dimly discernible through the netted door.

"Isn't it cute!" she exclaimed. "Just like a movie set. Look, Mother, it's simply gorgeous!"

"Gorgeous is hardly the word, came the acidulous rejoinder from the angular Mrs. Joyce.

"Well," Hammond laughed with relief, "at least it's unique. Set this down in the main street of an American city and you'd have a crowd around it in five minutes." Suddenly he drew back. "Oh, Kay!"

"Yes," she turned from the door.

"Here's someone I'd like you to meet."

Jeanne Towers was approaching, also headed for the restaurant. She hesitated as she noticed the little throng in front of the doorway but Hammond called her forward.

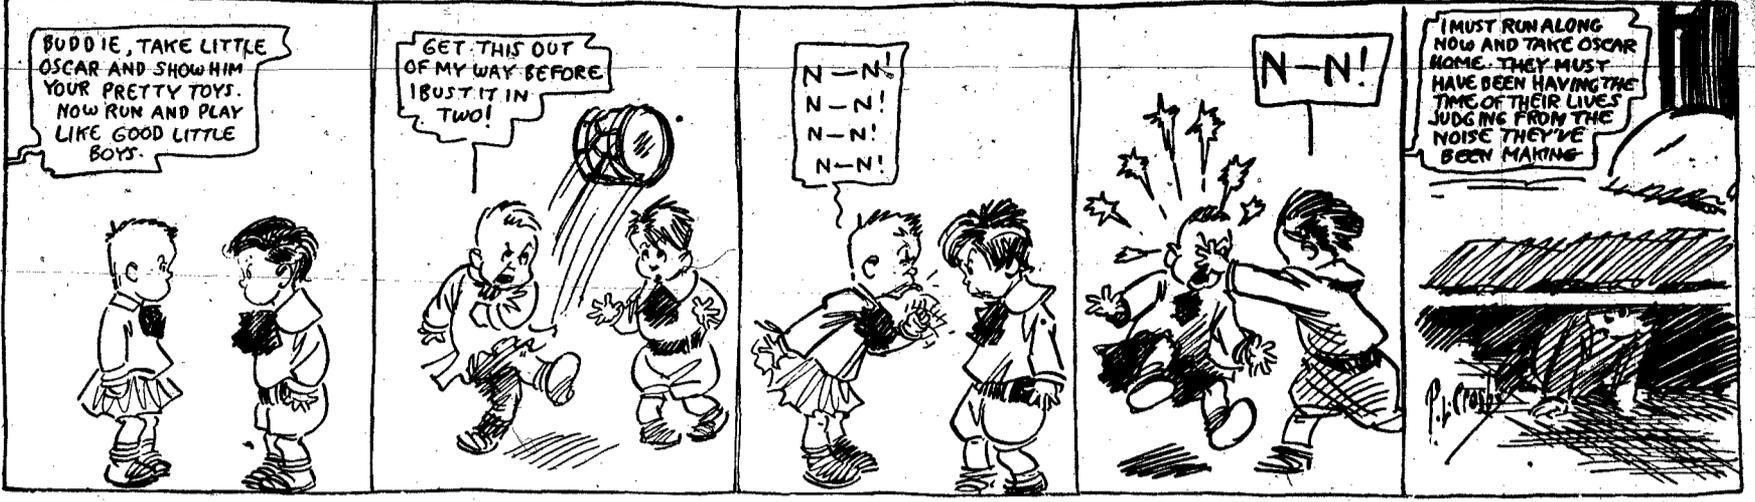

"Jeanne," he said, "here are my friends from Seattle. Kay, this is Jeanne Towers. Remember I wrote you about her?"

FARMERS TO STAGE FEEDERS' DAY APR. 16

Annual Meet to Feature National Authorities on Animal Husbandry

The 25th annual Nebraska Livestock Feeders' Day will be held at the College of Agriculture at Lincoln on Friday, April 16.

Almost interesting and timely program has been prepared. Outside speakers include an ex-football coach, who has taken up cattle business as a life's work. Jesse Harper, former coach at Notre Dame who developed Knute Rockne as a player and later went back to Notre Dame as Athletic Director following the death of Rockne, comes from his cattle ranch in Southwestern Kansas to talk to Nebraska livestock men relative to some of the problems confronting the industry. As a past president of the Kansas Livestock Association, Mr. Harper has kept in close touch with developments of the industry and undoubtedly will have a message of interest for his audience.

H. P. Rusk, head of the Department of Animal Husbandry at the University of Illinois will tell of recent developments in the Animal Husbandry field and more specifically of some of the work conducted at the Illinois Experiment Station.

Byron Demorest, Associate editor of the Omaha Daily Journal-Stockman, will have a message based on years of experience and observation in connection with recording the sales of livestock at terminal markets.

Professor R. R. Thalman will tell of the results in which molasses has been used as a large part of the ration for wintering and fattening cattle. Others in the Department of Animal Husbandry will tell of work conducted under their supervision. Feeders' Day has grown into an important event on the calendar of Nebraska livestock men. Each year a large number of representative men from all parts of the state attend this important session. An invitation is extended to all who are interested to be present at the forthcoming meeting. The sessions will start promptly at 9:15 a. m. and terminate at 3:30 p. m. An opportunity will be afforded visitors to view the experimental cattle and other livestock.

Urges Farmers to Buy Tested Seed

A wise farmer makes it a rule not to buy any new variety of grain or grass seed unless it has first been tested and approved by his State Agricultural Experiment station, says the Division of Seed Investigations of the United States Department of Agriculture.

This Bureau of Plant Industry Division, which administers the Federal Seed Act, again has reports of high priced seed which clever salesmen portray as having unheard of qualities and yielding ability. The seed — usually claimed by the salesman to be a new variety — may be an old, inferior variety with which the buyer is not familiar, or a standard variety adapted to some other territory. When the crop fails to produce as expected the first year, the unusual season or some unforeseen calamity is blamed for the failure. After trying a year or two more the farmer usually admits his folly and returns to varieties that have been found to be best adapted to his locality.

Plant breeders point out that new and better varieties of seed nearly always result from painstaking efforts and do not suddenly appear as miracles.

To Conduct Two Mothers' Vacation Camps

At their meeting March 1 the Board of Extension of the State Council of Home Demonstration clubs voted to have two mothers' vacation camps this summer — one at Curtis and one at Camp Brewster near Omaha, if dates can be arranged, the latter part of July and if weather conditions are favorable for a good attendance.

The board also decided that it would be well to have a special project on reading carried on in counties where there is a home demonstration agent to supervise the work. Clubs in home agent counties are asked to select a reading leader at the time they elect their music leader, their two project leaders, the president, secretary and treasurer.

The tentative plan is to have a training meeting held in August for the music and reading leaders. Further details for these meetings will be given in later issues of the Extension News.

It was also decided at the board meeting to hold the state meeting of the Council in North Platte about June 15 and 16, at which time the delegates of the clubs will be present. The Lincoln County Home Demonstration Council are happy to serve as hostesses for this meeting. Delegates may attend from all the counties having project clubs which have joined the State Council for Home Demonstration clubs. Other women who are interested may also attend but will not be privileged to vote.

If This Happened To Wayne!

On March 23 and 24, a severe sleet storm interrupted telephone service in much of South Dakota. Ice an inch or more thick formed on telephone wires. The wind reached a velocity of nearly 60 miles an hour. More than 5,500 telephone poles crashed under the terrific strain. Aberdeen, Pierre, Mitchell, Huron and many other South Dakota towns were cut off as lines went down. Damage caused by the storm is expected to reach $250,000.

As soon as the sleet storm struck, crews of Northwestern Bell Telephone Company men from Minnesota, North Dakota, Nebraska and Iowa were rushed into the storm area. Carloads of poles, wire, crossarms and other material were shipped at once from Western Electric Company warehouses in Minneapolis, Omaha and Chicago. Temporary repairs were rushed with all possible speed by more than 300 trained telephone men.

The prompt and thorough manner in which the job of restoring telephone service was handled in South Dakota calls attention to how well the Bell System is organized to meet such emergencies. Resources of the Bell System in men and supplies are constantly available. Standardized material and methods make it possible to restore service with utmost speed.

If it should happen to Wayne . . . if a storm should interrupt telephone service here . . . you can be certain that because of the Bell System organization, service would be restored at the earliest possible moment.

The Bell System is organized not only to meet emergencies but also to provide at all times the best service at the lowest charges. The Bell Laboratories contribute research and development. The Western Electric Company manufactures and stores equipment. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company operates long distance lines interconnecting the 23 regional operating companies, such as this Company, and coordinates their operations for nationwide service.
