

Ringer, Ahern, Moller Ask For C.C.C. Camp for Wayne

Whether Conservation Camp Can Be Formed Governs Location

Considerable interest has been aroused in Wayne county for the establishment of a CCC camp to carry on soil and water conservation work. This has come just at a time when the President has started budget balancing methods and has asked that a reduction in CCC enrollment be made.

Martin Ringer, J. J. Ahern and County Agent Walter Moller met with officials in Lincoln regarding the establishment of a camp in Wayne county. It was learned then that the possibility of locating a camp within the county depended upon whether a soil conservation district can be formed. Since the last meeting of the State legislature the Soil Conservation Districts Law provided for the establishment of such districts.

A district shall be on the watershed basis so far as practical. A district should comprise of not less than 20,000 acres of land, larger numbers of acres are suggested. The organization of districts and the determination of boundaries is under the direction of the State Advisory committee. Districts are governed by a board of five directors elected by the state committee with probably one local farmer serving. They receive no pay but are entitled to expenses. Participation in the conservation program by individual land owners within the district is voluntary. Land owners only can petition for a district, and only land owners can vote. The cost of the organization of districts will be borne by state funds. The cost of operating the districts will be borne largely by the federal government.

The organization of a district may be started by 25 land owners signing a petition making application to the State Committee. Within 30 days after the receipt of the petition the State Committee shall give legal notice of a hearing at which all persons with-in the proposed district or other interested may be heard. Within a reasonable time after the hearing the committee will give due notice of a referendum at which land owners within the proposed district may vote for or against the organization of a district. Seventy-five per cent or more of those voting must favor the organization of the district. If the vote is favorable the State Committee appoints a supervisor who files an application with the Secretary of State requesting that he designate the district as a legal subdivision of the state. Following this due notice is given of election of four supervisors and the State Committee conducts such election. Five years after the organization of a district it may be dissolved by a majority vote.

The possibility of establishing a district in Wayne county is being considered by the Wayne County Farm Bureau and other local organizations including civic clubs in Wayne. Further information regarding the establishment of a district will be gladly given by calling at the Farm Bureau office.

Wayne County In Government Shelterbelt

U. S. Forest Service Has Granted County 8 Miles of Plantings

Through the Shelter belt project carried on by the U. S. Forest Service Wayne county has been allotted eight miles of shelterbelt plantings for 1938.

The size of the shelterbelt strips are 7 rods wide and at least 160 rods long consisting of 10 rows of trees and shrubs. Planting will be planned to give the maximum benefit to the individual farms on which they are located. The strips will be planted either on the north or south sides or in a strip through the farm.

In the agreement drawn up between the land owner and the Forest Service the land owner agrees to prepare the ground for planting, furnish fencing materials for a barb wire fence, and cultivate the trees until no longer needed. The Forest Service will furnish the trees, plant the trees, and furnish labor to construct the fence. During the first year aid will be given the farmer in caring for his trees which includes distributing poison bait for the control of rabbits.

Trees become the property of the land owner as soon as they are planted. He agrees not to sell or destroy the young trees, but later on may use any of them for fire wood, fence posts or other purposes.

A few plantings still remain to be located. Anyone desiring a planting of this type should contact the Farm Bureau office immediately.

Wayne County Farmers Apply for Corn Loan

A total of 120 farmers in Wayne County now have made application for a federal corn loan of 50 cents on the 1937 produced crop, a check-up at the county Agricultural Conservation office shows. Some of the producers have their corn sealed up and the loans have gone through rapidly.

That the corn which is being sealed up under the federal program is of good quality is indicated by the fact that not a single sample submitted to the state ACP office has had too high a moisture content. All of the corn has graded above No. 3. Banks, for the most part, are accepting the notes from producers.

Most of the applications for the corn loans in Nebraska are coming from the northeastern section. Farmers in Burt, Cuming, Dixon, and other counties have shown most interest in the plan. More than 3000 samples will probably have been tested for moisture content in the state ACP office at Lincoln by this week.

The corn loan is available between December 1, 1937, and April 1, 1938, to producers who cooperated in the 1937 Agricultural Conservation program. The loans bear interest at 4 per cent and will mature 10 months from the date of making. No loans though will mature later than November 1, 1938.

Corn loan application blanks and other necessary loan forms, except warehouse certificates, may be obtained from the Wayne County Agricultural Conservation office.

Accomplishment of FSA in Neb.

Changes in Program, Factual Gains, Future Activities Outlined

Lincoln, Neb. "With the beginning of a new year, government agencies, as well as individuals should check up on their record of accomplishments," said Regional Director Cal A. Ward today when making a report of Farm Security Administration activities.

He listed the following as the chief changes in the program during the past 12 months:

- 1 Establishment of the Farm Security Administration under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act to make rehabilitation loans and purchase farms for tenants; such program to be a long-time approach to problems formerly handled by emergency agencies.
- 2 Discontinuance of the old Resettlement administration with certain of its functions transferred to the new Farm Security administration with a consequent reduction in overhead expenses.
- 3 Transfer of the Land Utilization program to the bureau of agricultural economics.
- 4 Initiation of the tenant purchase loan program and setting up of state and county FSA Advisory committees.

"While the above changes are largely administrative, a look at our record shows progress particularly in the line of rehabilitation," Ward said. "Sound farm and home plans, which are the basis for our loans, have resulted in some marked changes in the trend of agricultural practices in this region."

He stated that a summary of farming activities showed a shift from one-cash-crop farming to a balanced farm plan in all parts of the Dakotas, Nebraska and Kansas. In the western part of these states, he said many farmers are

Health Officers Unite In Drive

New York — Federal, state, county and city health officers, "G Men" of the medical world, are eager to go into action behind the new national Foundation to fight that crippling, maiming killer—Infantile Paralysis.

In every state in the Union these doctors who guard the public health have swung to the support of the "Fight Infantile Paralysis" campaign. Keith Morgan, chairman of the committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday, declared today.

Headed by Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States over 400 of these health officers have joined the Medical Council in connection with the campaign.

They are from the ranks of the practicing physicians who President Roosevelt called "The front line fighters of this sickness."

Speaking for the U. S. Public Health Service, Dr. Parran declared:

"The problem of Infantile Paralysis is a problem concerning every far-reaching citizen; the plan to use the celebration of the President's birthday for the purpose of raising funds to support this foundation puts the key for its solution directly in the hands of the entire country at large."

"There should be no hesitancy in the matter of response, for there can logically be no reason for any such hesitancy."

Nebraska makes a very good showing on the list, Chairman Morgan said. Among the health officers in Nebraska acclaiming the new permanent Foundation is Dr. E. E. McMahon, of Omaha, Director of the Douglas County Hospital, who, in accepting membership on the Medical Council of the campaign said:

"During our recent epidemic of infantile paralysis in this city, all cases were concentrated at this institution, (Douglas County Hospital) and I have had the opportunity of noting all the phases of this disease as to its different methods of inception, better treatment and results. I am therefore, very sympathetic and interested in your plan of action."

"Hence, I will be very glad and happy to accept service as a member of this council in whatever capacity you may see fit to place me."

The campaign this year is centered behind the new Foundation. People everywhere will be asked not only to join the new Foundation but also to attend the celebrations on Saturday, January 29, in honor of President Roosevelt's birthday. All of the funds derived from these celebrations will go to the Foundation.

Speaking of the Foundation, as created by the President, Chairman Morgan said:

"These health officers realize the importance of making a united fight against the disease. They know that infantile paralysis cannot be conquered by haphazard methods."

"In the World War each city did not fight independently. They were joined in a united effort. Now at last all cities are to unite in this war."

"The grim terror—infantile paralysis—every year in some town, some county, some state produces fear, panic, death and human wreckage. They are the four horsemen of an American Apocalypse we are sworn to conquer."

The four fronts of immediate action of the Foundation are:

- 1 Scientific Research.
- 2—Epidemic First Aid.
- 3—Proper Care—Disseminating to doctors and parents Present and New Knowledge of the proper care which may prevent said after-effects, such as crooked backs, curvature of the spine, twisted bodies, contracted limbs.

Predict Increased Milk Production for 1938

That milk production for the first of 1938 for the country as a whole will be larger than for the same period in 1937 was the forecast made this week by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in the U. S. department of agriculture.

Total milk production in December was about the same as a year earlier in contrast to November 1, when production was 4 per cent less than a year earlier. Crop correspondents reported feeding about 20 per cent more grain per cow on December 1 than a year previous.

This heavier rate of feeding probably will be maintained during the winter. Feed supplies are relatively large and prices for dairy products are high in relation to feeds.

Everybody Wants to Know—

Everybody wants to know what about 1938? What will it bring to me? Is the question up in the air of those individuals who carry upon their shoulders economic responsibilities and who do not feel the pressure of economic strain, be he a businessman, farmer, laborer or professional man.

Nineteen thirty-eight will not be a simple year. It will bring its share of new and complex problems. In some cases it may bring increased work without profits. In other cases it may bring further restrictions with losses. In still others it may bring loss of position in the field and even bankruptcy.

On the other hand 1938 may bring refreshing rain in proper season for the farmer. It may bring business, new business, and increased old business for the merchant, banker, professional man and increased hours of work and greater pay for many working men.

Doubtless there are things individuals can do which will have an influence in determining which factors mentioned will be their lot in 1938.

Wise leadership and sound management will undoubtedly pay as much in dividends in 1938 as it has in years past. In fact, what else may be relied upon to solve these economic puzzles? There may be some baffling problems which challenge beyond capacity, but most difficulties will respond to accurate decisions.

More and more it is evident that no matter how insignificant a business is it cannot stagger on and on indefinitely without a chartered course. Plans based upon knowledge, experience and judgment are always better than no plans at all.

Hard times tend to discourage and dishearten most everyone to a certain degree so perhaps in thinking of a better year in '38 some attention should be given to ones morale and the morale of those about us. It would strengthen one's morale to solve early in '38 a few of those economic tornadoes which beset him so in '37.

There is still something new in the way of better management in every one's tasks if he will honestly search it out. Already some have begun readjusting and are studying expansions which will alter and replace ideas which proved faulty in '37. They feel the urge of necessity and are determined to come through in '38.

It Has Happened Before!

After every depression in this country there were temporary recessions before complete recovery was attained. It is also a matter of record that after every depression, business and employment, manufacturing and agriculture advanced to levels never before approached. It has been eight years now since we began submerging into the deepest and longest depression in history. Today after a courageous struggle we have made at least some strides of progress. Conditions and prospects have improved enormously over four or five years ago. For the most part the depression complex is not with us today.

It is axiomatic that our social order is no super-organization. It is as human as are the individuals of which it is composed. It can achieve no more progress than its leadership affords and its leadership can go no further than its members are willing to go. It is not likely, with our spiritual and material resources that we as a nation will ultimately re-establish prosperity which will make the Great Depression remembered as the precursor of Great Prosperity?

Domestic Discord

Within the space of a few days we heard of a young couple headed toward the divorce court and of an aged lady who mourned the passing of her husband with whom she had spent over 50 years in a happy life.

The lady who mentioned the young divorcees said, "It's too bad they had only been married a year." Why is it that society has so many men and women who were so keen to live together that they gladly faced the hazards of matrimony?

least provocation they rush to the divorce court to regain their former freedom? Why is it that when a home gets broken up the failure is given so much publicity and when a couple successfully lives but their years together it's scarcely mentioned?

A few years ago there were an average of nearly 600 divorces in this country daily. It seems that far too few people entering into marriage seem to give much thought that married life is an additional series of situations calling for adjustment. It is a mystery why folks so eager to live together cannot discuss their problems with each other in entire frankness with good temper and without incrimination. Marriage problems solved or unsolved have an active effect upon every social relation; they color business, amusements, education, religion and our every thought enhance every moment of our lives.

When all aspects of marriage are genuine and mutually solved there is no relationship yet among humans which approaches the high bond of fellowship which expresses itself in the life of the happy family.

The President's Message

We will not soon forget the picture obtained Monday a President speaking to congress, to industry, businesses, to farmers, laborers. Pleading with all alike to bond their best efforts for self preservation and the preservation of each other. It was not in contrast to another picture under similar circumstances only a few years ago when Herbert Hoover was the speaker. In both instances their messages stirred our heart and it is beyond our understanding how any American could refuse to lend his mite in cooperation with the government to help that Citizen to a happier life.

A Live Town

When traveling did you ever drive an extra hour or so in order to put up for the night in one of those places we commonly label "a live town?" My partner Mr. Burriss and I did that a couple of weeks ago while returning from Minneapolis. The live town of our objective was Spencer, Iowa. Not that there were no good places between Spencer and the Twin Cities to stay all night, for there were several of them, rather we wanted to stay in what we considered the best town on our route. When we reached Spencer on that Tuesday night, it was 10 o'clock and we had been without sleep for just 40 hours. In order that there be no misunderstanding about the cause of our long period without sleep I would like to explain that we spent those hours Wednesday up to 12 P. M. getting out the paper, from 12 midnight we had spent the time driving to the Twin Cities to select a newspaper press and returning to Spencer. It goes without saying that we were a little sleepy. Now in spite of our fatigue our interests were drawn to a conversation taking place among some businessmen of Spencer.

These men were discussing the 1938 Spencer Fair. We feel the time spent listening to those men was more than worth while and we pass on what we learned. About 20 years ago a group of farmers and business men organized a stock company and started what has today developed into the Nation's Largest County Fair. Stocks have been retired, all improvements paid for and the property has been given to the country.

We could not help but think of the experience of other county fairs during the period in which Spencer was building the country's largest county fair. The defunct Tri-State Fair at Sioux City and the Ft. Dodge defunct fair kept coming to mind. Presently we ventured to make inquiry. The answer given was that in Spencer there is an organization known as the Commercial Club which comprises in its membership every business and professional person in the town. "When we meet, we deliberate, then act as a unit in unison" said one man. There is plenty back of that statement and our conclusion is that there are few towns larger or smaller than Spencer that could not profit with Spencer as its example. Spencer is widely known and influences a broad trade territory not alone because of its great county fair but because of its many other advantages, and the key to its outstanding success is "pulling together."

Many Soybean Varieties needed for Varied Uses

Breeding to improve the soybean is only beginning, but the chances are bright says W. J. ... of the United States Department of Agriculture. New varieties are needed, even though the department and the States have already imported more than 10,000 lots of seed.

Soybeans are particular in their local requirements, are more variable than many plants, and are grown for a variety of purposes. A good forage variety for one area may not do at all well elsewhere. A good forage bean may not be a good milling bean, or be useful as a vegetable.

Some growers want soybeans for forage; others for oil and meal processing; still others as vegetables. The result is that each local area in the soybean regions needs a soybean variety that will do well in that particular place and for a definite purpose. Such an area may even need two or three varieties—one for forage, one for high oil or protein content for the mills, and a third for the table.

The soybean is a self-fertilized plant. Artificial crossing is difficult and tedious, but it can be done. The 10,000 lots that have been imported have supplied some varieties desirable in certain localities. They also offer a wealth of material for combining in new hybrids that will meet the needs—area by area—of American soybean growers.

NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field
FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington.—Most New Dealers are predicting a revival of the wages and hours legislation bill sometime this winter or spring, and in a form in keeping with the Roosevelt objectives. But at the moment it is very difficult to see how this is going to be done.

The difficulties are not technical—actually the new bill would start out with an enormous advantage so far as parliamentary procedure is concerned. But the trouble is to find some formula for government control of wages and hours, or rather government banning of too small wages and too long hours, on which enough members of the house could agree to obtain a majority.

The majority which was apparent for the bill just a few weeks back, and which forced the bill out of the rules committee pigeonhole, was fictitious. It was a simple log-rolling proposition, under which a number of enthusiastic farm relief advocates traded their signatures to the discharge petition, plus the promise of their votes, in order to prevent a bloc movement of the Northern wages and hours advocates against their farm bill.

Just before the coalition was made it appeared that both bills were doomed. The Southern members, through their strength on the rules committee, had been able to pigeonhole the wage-hour bill at the preceding regular session. This was the surprise of the legislative year, but what really fooled every one was that this strength persisted. So it looked as though the bill would stay pigeonholed.

Weakness of the farm bill forced the coalition, and then it looked as though both bills were sure of passage, though neither was strong enough to stand alone.

There's the Rub

With that strange episode now history, the new picture is: How can the men who want a wages and hours bill agree on something strong enough to stand alone?

No compromise so far has been reached on any of the important difficulties. For example, who is to administer the law. William Green and his friends in the American Federation of Labor do not trust the idea of a board. They fear that President Roosevelt would appoint another group as friendly to C. I. O. as they think the national labor relations board is. Neither the A. F. of L. nor the C. I. O. is enthusiastic about entrusting administration to the Department of Labor.

But there enters another complication. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins is distinctly unpopular in Capitol Hill. There are quite a few members of the house who would not vote for any bill, on final passage, which gave Secretary Perkins this added power. Particularly bitter in this group are a few Southerners who still resent an unfortunate remark the secretary made in her first year in office, to the broad general effect that a bigger market for shoes could be built up for Northern factories if so many people in the South would stop going barefoot!

But for eleven months, or until the congressional election of 1933, this wage-hour bill will continue to have a tremendous technical advantage. It has passed the senate. That passage holds until the present congress dies. Nothing changes between sessions. So it is not a question ever of beating a filibuster. It is merely a question of writing a bill which 218 members of the house and 49 senators would rather vote for than against.

The Case of "Jimmie"

There has been a lot of joshing about President Roosevelt's training up his elder son to take his place. "My Little Boy Jimmie," as the President introduced him back in 1932 from the rear platform of his campaign train, has steadily been moving into the public eye ever since. In that campaign Jimmy was used as a mouthpiece for a great many things which "Papa" did not want to say at the time. For example, he predicted the speediness with which beer would return if his father should be elected.

Then it was James who entangled his father with James M. Curley, then mayor of Boston and one of Jimmie's very good customers in the insurance business. It looked for several years as though this alliance of Curley and young Roosevelt were going to march down through the years. It appeared as though Curley would step from the governor's chair, when he got tired of that office, into the senate, and that James would become governor of the Bay state.

This idea of James Roosevelt's running for governor of Massachusetts still persists. It would be a logical stepping-stone. Friends insist that Jimmie would like it very much. Meanwhile the objectionable alliance with Curley has been terminated. The split between the Roosevelts and Curley became, apparently, irreconcilable when the President, during a campaign swing through the Bay state in the closing days of the 1936 campaign, failed to mention Curley's name, though Curley was on the Democratic ticket with the President, and was at the time governor of the state.

As to Curley

It is impossible ever to estimate the extent of the effect of any particular thing in politics. There are too many complications. But enthusiastic Roosevelt fans believe Curley would have been elected had the President supported him with anything like the ardor that Curley had shown for F. D. R. in 1932, or since. And naturally, while the Curley following does not go this far, it is extremely bitter over the "ingratitude."

Which is very interesting, because Jimmie brought Curley into his father's campaign in 1932, sat in with Curley on Massachusetts patronage—to the great indignation of the two Democratic senators, David I. Walsh and Marcus A. Coolidge—and then is generally suspected of being the cause, though he had not intended to be, of the split! For there are many who think that the prime reason for bringing Jimmie to Washington was not to train him up for the presidency later on, helpful as this training might be, but to get him out of the trouble his father feared he was getting into in Massachusetts. And part of this trouble was his association with Curley. It was suspected by some of the President's advisers that Curley had made it appear too easy to Jimmie to capitalize political friendships in writing insurance. Especially, as for some reason there is less attempt to camouflage that sort of thing in Massachusetts than in some other states.

But there is little doubt as to what is going on right now. The President is putting more and more power into Jimmie's hands.

Farley vs. LaGuardia

Friends of James A. Farley are telling the big politician that he can easily be elected governor of New York in November even if the Republicans should nominate Fiorello H. LaGuardia. The arguments are rather interesting in view of the thumping majority that LaGuardia piled up in the recent New York mayoralty election.

Time is one of the important elements. They insist that when the gubernatorial election is held LaGuardia will still have three more years to serve as mayor under the term to which he was elected last month. Yet the term he may be seeking as governor would be for only two years.

So many of the New York City voters who thought he made a good mayor in his last term, and who voted for him to have four more years rather than to turn the city over to the Democratic bosses, will think it would be poor strategy for them to help send him to Albany.

It is also contended that scores of thousands of New Yorkers who thought LaGuardia should be continued as mayor would oppose the idea of the mayor becoming President of the United States. On this point the illustration of Alfred E. Smith is used. Smith was elected governor in 1918, was beaten in the Harding landslide of 1920, came back in 1922, weathered the Coolidge 1924 Republican landslide comfortably, and was re-elected triumphantly in 1926. Yet more than 100,000 New Yorkers who had voted for him for governor at his lowest ebbs, and several times that number who had voted for him in his good years, refused to vote for him for President. It should be borne in mind here that in 1922 Smith was at the flood-tide of his strength.

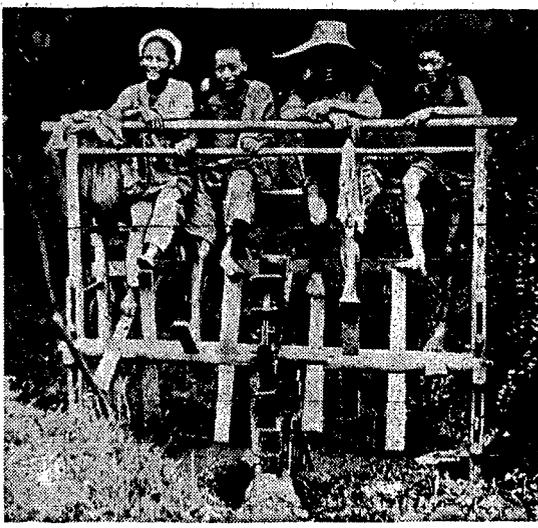

Other Angles

Which would seem ample proof that plenty of people will vote for a good public servant for some offices, but will not necessarily support the same man for President.

There is another angle, involving Tammany, which is not so well understood in the country as it is in New York City. Tammany, at the recent mayoralty election, was sulking. It had been beaten in the primary. Control of the Democratic party in New York City had been taken over by the outlying bosses, those of Brooklyn, Queens, the Bronx. Many Tammany leaders were sore—were not at all displeased with seeing the men who had ousted them from control take a licking from LaGuardia.

Farley is a master compromiser and pacifier. His friends do not doubt that the full strength of all the Democratic organizations in the greater city would be thrown behind him in a gubernatorial race. Also, Farley has never relaxed his grip on the upstate New York Democratic organization. He built that organization in the period from 1923 on. It could be depended on to do its utmost for him.

But there are a good many upstate Republican leaders who would not want to aid LaGuardia in his presidential ambitions. They would not be averse to see Farley polishing him off, and thus clearing the way to the nomination of "their kind" of Republican.

Pumping Water for Irrigation in Inner China.

Four Great Chinese Cities
On the Yangtze and Han Rivers

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

OF THE four Chinese cities to which the government of the republic moved due to the pressure of the Sino-Japanese conflict, Hankow stands out as the city of most importance. Because of its excellent communications with Canton and Hong Kong, many of the important government activities were moved to this inland port.

Hankow lies about 600 miles up the Yangtze. The city proper sprawls over a wide area of the north bank of the river where the Han pours its muddy torrent. Across the Han lies Hanyang, and across the mile-wide Yangtze, Wuchang. The latter city is older than Hankow for it was flourishing when Hankow was a mere fishing hamlet. Both Hanyang and Wuchang are now a part of "Greater Hankow" with more than a million and a half inhabitants.

Hankow's harbor sees little activity. Ungainly junks move about the water manned by expert rivermen nearly as easily as modern giants of the sea in our busy seaports. They range from craft with rotten hulks and gaping holes above the water line to huge high-pooed craft, adorned with brightly painted carvings and plates that make them look like floating circus wagons.

Small matting-covered sampans dart here and there by the muscle-power of perspiring coolies whose families fill the air along the shore with the singsong chatter of the Orient. It is estimated that 25,000 native boats ply in and out of Hankow and its sister cities. Meanwhile modern steamboats from lower Yangtze points come and go on schedule.

The Hankow Bund Looks Occidental.

The Hankow Bund, stretching along the Yangtze for two miles, is disconcerting to the traveler seeking purely Chinese panoramas. Trees shade the wide boulevard while the landward side is flanked by modern banks and business buildings that are not unlike those of New York, London, Paris and Berlin.

Beyond the Bund, upstream, the roofs of concrete warehouses form a portion of the city's skyline. Here hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of cotton, silk, tea, wood oil, beans and many other products of a vast area of China served by the Yangtze and Han usually are stored, awaiting shipment.

Beyond the warehouses begin the foreign concessions. The British concession, oldest of all, was established in 1861 when Hankow was opened to foreign trade. Then, in order, came the Russian, the French and the old German concessions, each marked by wide streets and modern residences and shops. There are several electric light and power stations in the city.

A native city in the background also seethes with commercial activity to the tune of noises that strain the visitor's eardrums. Some of the narrow lanes are paved with flagstone while others are mere ruts. Nevertheless, they are the playgrounds of thousands of children, and the busy streets of a city which has been called the "Hub of the Universe."

To the foreigner, the pedestrians in their loose-fitting clothing resemble pajama-clad citizens on parade, but the wearers are by no means ready to retire. Business in Hankow is almost a religion, and nearly every man seen on the street has to do with the enormous amount of commerce that flows through and past the port.

If a traveler knows the advertising code in Hankow, he can locate any type of business by reading the shapes and colors of the shop signs which project over the narrow thoroughfares. For instance, gold placards use salmon-colored boards with bright green characters. Druggists' boards are gilded. Black, gold, red, and green are the predominating colors. On each sign is a motto and when a store changes hands, the sign is valued somewhat the same as American "good will."

Important governmental departments also were moved to Changsha and Chungking.

Fireworks of Changsha.

Changsha is a city of fireworks, literally and figuratively. The Fourth of July firecrackers used by the American small boy before the "Safe and Sane Fourth" was so widely enforced were imported heavily from Changsha.

It is the capital of the hilly province of Hunan, important because it contains enormous coal fields, many unworked, and because in it, to the north of Changsha, is the huge lake, Tung-ting hu, which acts as a reservoir for the Yangtze floods.

Among Changsha's most interesting sights are the wheelbarrows that climb stairs. Some distance ahead of the regulation wheel there is another smaller one. In climbing over flagstone steps or bridges, the handles of the wheelbarrow are lowered until the auxiliary wheel rises above the next higher step. Then the wheelbarrow, which often carries 300 or 400 pounds, seesaws from wheel to wheel until the next level stretch of the flagstones is attained.

Changsha is closely linked with New Haven, Conn., for there is, just outside the rapidly disappearing wall, in which the inhabitants once took great pride, one of the best known mission schools in China, which is Yale's contribution to the education of the Chinese.

A large part of Hunan is an unworked field of anthracite and bituminous coal and at Pinghsiang, which is connected with Changsha by railroad, there is one of the mines which furnishes fuel for the great iron works at Hanyang.

With about 500,000 inhabitants, Changsha rules a province of 22 million and is one of the cleanest cities in China. Many of the streets are long and straight and at one time the city itself was divided between two magistracies. The bazaars are full of life and interest, some of the candies being famous for miles around.

Chungking a Busy Port.

Chungking is a busy river port lying about 1,500 miles upstream from the mouth of the Yangtze river. It is the chief port and point of entry for the rich province of Szechwan, said to contain the natural resources of an empire.

The far-reaching trade of Szechwan is conducted entirely by river craft from Chungking, whose population of half a million is crowded into a small triangle formed by the junction of the Kialing river with the Yangtze.

Fields at the back of the city, making the third side of the triangle, have gradually become entirely filled with graves of countless generations. This has resulted in hopelessly enclosing the great port of Chungking upon its rocky promontory between the two rivers, and making its expansion impossible, ancestral graves having heretofore been considered inviolable.

Through the centuries the city has increased in population, but without expansion of territory, until overcrowding has almost passed belief. The city being built on a rock, there is no possibility of proper drainage, so that Chungking ranks high in odors, even among Chinese communities.

Many Valuable Exports.

However, enormous wealth is hidden away behind Chungking's rather dismal exterior. The products of an empire have passed through her gates for centuries, rare and valuable goods destined for the markets of the world. These include some of the most sought-after products of modern commerce, so valuable as to be worth transporting 1,500 miles to the mouth of the Yangtze and thence half round the earth. Among Chungking's exports are musk from the glands of Tibetan antelopes, widely used in perfume making, and wood oil, pressed from the seeds of the fruit of a tree, valuable in the manufacture of varnish. Chungking's hog bristles are famous among brush manufacturers the world over and she exports an insect wax used in the preparation of medicines.

Three Little Words

NEXT time you or yours want "something nice to wear," remember me and my three little words: Sew-Your-Own! Yes, Milady, sew-your-own because it pays big dividends. It's good for you! Instead of worrying about clothes you can't have, you'll be humming about all the pretty things you can have—and all because you sew, sew, Sew-Your-Own! Won't you join us today or very soon?

White House or Cottage.

Even if your home were the White House, Milady, you would need a little frock like today's 1413 to see you through your housekeeping chores. It has that style usually reserved for expensive frocks and its simplicity will fascinate you. A young collar tops its shirtwaist styling, while the trim short sleeves and shirred yoke are features to be appreciated every time you put it on. It will make you smart in crisp new gingham, and it's more than chic in silk crepe.

So Simple, So Sweet.

Little Miss Two-to-Eight will use her very nicest three-syllable words to exclaim over this frock (above center) designed especially for her by Sew-Your-Own! It is one of those so-simple, so-sweet little affairs that every mother and every daughter has a weakness for. The new prints or criss-cross gingham will look more than appealing on your little "forty pounds of charm," especially if the trimming is of gay red ribbon to match the bows on her hair.

That Poured-In Look.

"Something nice to wear," in the full sense of the phrase, is the brand new frock at the right.

Your teas and bridge will be dates to look forward to with this smart model in black satin or velvet, awaiting your call. Fashion says: "That poured-in look," and Sew-Your-Own said "when" just in the nick to make this your most figure-flattering frock. It is equally effective for the sub-deb and young executive. It belongs in every well-groomed lady's wardrobe. Why not in yours?

Ex-Heavyweight Champions Now Ten in Number

IF THE alumni chapter of ex-heavyweight champions of the world were assembled under one top, ten members would answer "Here" to the roll call. One or two of them would be grizzly and doddering. Several would be well off financially and perhaps a couple might be called wealthy. One would be down and out. Three of them would tell you they were still active in this fighting game and one would predict confidently that he will be the next heavyweight champion.

Never before in history, probably, have there been so many living ex-heavyweight champions. Six of these ten former kings of pugilism have won and lost their titles in the last ten years.

Can you name these fighters? Well, never mind, here they are: James J. Jeffries, Jack Johnson, Jess Willard, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney, Max Schmeling, Jack Sharkey, Primo Carnera, Max Baer and Jim Braddock.

Jeff Lives in Comfort

Jeffries, who won the championship by beating the great Bob Fitzsimmons at Coney Island in 1899, lives in modest circumstances out on the Pacific coast. He made the mistake of trying to come back against Jack Johnson in 1910 after officially retiring for want of competition in 1905.

Jack Johnson

Jack Johnson, regarded by many as one of the greatest fighters of the lot, is just about getting by financially.

Jess Willard, first of the crop to make size a championship qualification, is, like Jeff, living in comfortable circumstances on the West coast. Besides his size, Willard had a good right hand to recommend him, but it wasn't good enough the day he met young Jack Dempsey.

Jack Dempsey, who inaugurated the golden days of million-dollar purses, abetted by the late Tex Rickard and his manager, Jack Kearns, is keeping himself active and prosperous as the proprietor of a New York restaurant constantly patronized by sports celebrities and tourists. He occasionally goes into the ring as a referee. His conqueror, Gene Tunney, last of the great heavyweights and the only one who ever stayed retired after he had scaled the heights, is wealthy.

Second Raters Rule

When Tunney retired a crowd of second raters scrambled for the crown. One of them, Jack Sharkey, was unpredictable. At times he looked great. At other times he looked awful. But he collected enough of the world's goods in his ring career to be financially independent. He was beaten by Max Schmeling in a bout in 1930 which was generally considered to have resulted in the election of a successor to Gene Tunney and in turn licked Schmeling in 1932. Now at the age of thirty-two, Schmeling, considered wealthy in his native Germany, is tuning up for a return engagement with Champion Joe Louis, whom he knocked out in 1936.

Primo Carnera, the clodhopper who was imported from Italy and given a first-class exploitation by experts, is the most pathetic case among all the ex-heavyweight champions. Shattered in health, he is back in his native land practically without funds. Carnera, like Willard, went in for size in a big way, but he had nothing at all but size and a fair amount of speed to recommend him.

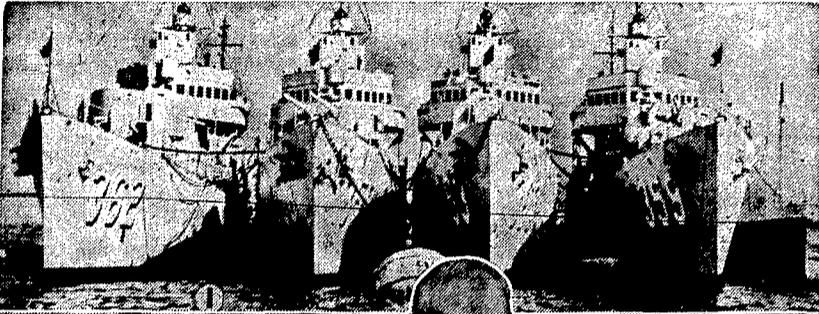

Primo Carnera

Carnera was awarded the championship in a fight with Schmeling in 1933.

Max Baer, who has been described as "the ex-champion who could fight but wouldn't," has been active in the ring within the last year. Max always seemed to be able to get a laugh out of everything, that is until the night in June, 1935, when he saw his title slip away in a 15-round bout with Jim Braddock.

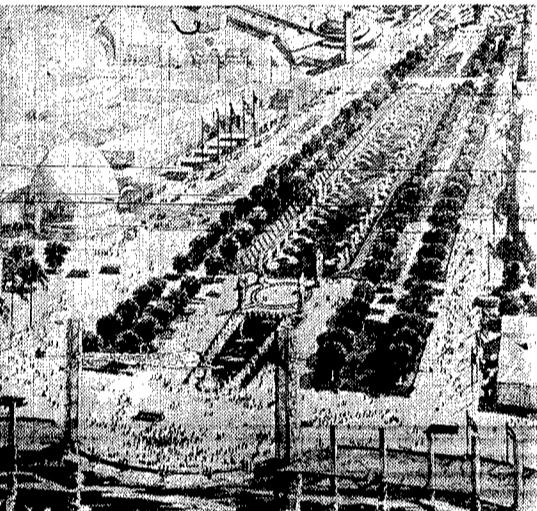

The last member to join the ex-heavyweight champions society was and is the quietest of the lot. He's Jim Braddock, who came back from the ranks of dock-wallopers to grab the championship. He was almost forgotten when he met Baer. He was almost forgotten during the time he held the championship and had little opportunity to capitalize on it before he went down under Joe Louis' punching in 1937.

"While Eight Men Died"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO, EVERYBODY:

Here's a red-hot one—right from the sixth floor of a burning building in mid-Manhattan. Joe Miller of New York City is the lad who sends it in, and Joe is also the hero of one of the most thrilling rescues I've ever heard of. It happened this way:

In March, 1923, Joe and his brother were living together in a room in the rear end of a furnished apartment, on the sixth floor of a building at Eighth avenue and Fifth-seventh street, New York. If you're a fireman in that neighborhood, maybe you remember what happened there on the night of March 26. But this yarn is more concerned about what happened to the people in the building. And here is the story:

Cut Off From Stairs by Flames.

It was a bitter cold night. Joe slept a few hours when he awoke suddenly. He seemed to hear faint shouts of: "Fire!—Fire!"—coming from somewhere overhead, and saw his brother leave the room, only to come back a moment later, grab a blanket and yell to Joe to do the same.

Joe was only half awake. Before he could get out of the room, his brother was back, shouting that the stairs were afire—that they were cut off—and with that, he ran to the window and disappeared over the sill.

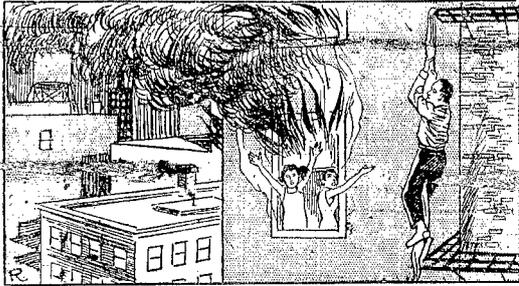

Joe went to the window and looked out. Six stories below lay his brother, groaning and shouting to Joe not to try to follow. Joe turned away them—went out into the hall trying to find the door of the rear apartment, where the fire escapes were.

The smoke was so thick in the hall that he had to crawl along the floor. He found the other apartment, but the door was locked. Gasping for breath, he struggled back to his own room and once more found himself looking out of his open window.

As he stared out of that window he noticed, for the first time, a brick smoke stack running up the side of the building and held to the wall by steel brackets. Those brackets were so placed that one was about two feet below each window sill on every floor. It was a four-foot jump to the nearest bracket, but Joe had to take chances. He climbed to his window sill, leaped—and made it.

Two Women Burning at a Window.

Then, as Joe stood hesitating on that first bracket, he saw a terrible sight in a window next to his. Two screaming women were caught in that window with the flames so close to them that one's negligee had caught fire and she was forced to take it off.

Joe did some quick thinking—and some even quicker acting. He pushed back one woman who was getting ready to jump, and climbed back into his room again. There, he took the sheets from his bed, tied them together and tossed one end to the girls. Then, leaping back to the bracket again, he tied the other end of the sheets.

The knotted sheets made a rope that was only about eight or ten feet long. It would do to get from one bracket to the next one below it, though, and that's just what Joe used it for. Carrying one girl in his arms, he slid down to the bracket at the fifth floor. He shouted to the other girl to follow, but she was so unnerved that she could do nothing but stand in the window and scream. So Joe went back up that rope of sheets, climbing hand over hand, to carry the second girl down as he had the first.

It was a tough job, sliding down that rope with a woman in his arms. To make matters worse, the knot that held the sheets together began to slip. For one breathless moment Joe thought it was going to let go and hurl them both to the court five and a half stories below. But the knot finally tightened and held, and Joe deposited the second woman on the fifth floor window sill.

Carried Them Down a Rope of Sheets.

The fire on the fifth floor was as bad as it had been on the sixth. Joe broke in a fifth floor window, grabbed two more sheets from a bed, and went back to repeat his performance on the floor above. He carried the two women down to the bracket at the fourth floor level and then it was the same thing all over again. Two sheets from a fourth floor bedroom, and the long, heart-breaking struggle of carrying the women down another flight.

At the third floor, Joe met the firemen coming up after him. The fire there was under control—the stairway clear to the street. The girl Joe held in his arms had fainted on the last lap down the improvised rope, and there was a struggle before the firemen could get her through the third floor window. The other girl followed the first, and at last Joe, reeling with exhaustion, clambered through the window and made his way, staggering, to the street.

By this time, the whole upper part of the building was in flames. Joe went around to the rear in search of his brother, but he was gone. Firemen had picked him up and sent him to a hospital, and there Joe found him later, with both legs broken and suffering from internal injuries.

Eight people were burned to death in that fire—plenty more were injured. But the casualty list would have been just three names longer if Joe hadn't been able to use his hands and feet—and his head.

Largest of All Woodpeckers

Largest and handsomest of all woodpeckers is the ivory-bill which is as large as a crow—21 inches long. It is named for its ivory white dagger-like bill, with which it can dig through a tree. A famed naturalist once took a wounded ivory-bill to his hotel room, left it there alone less than an hour. When he returned, the bird had backed down a mass of plaster from one wall, pecked a fist-size hole through the laths and was working on the weather boards. Bluish black of body, the ivory-bill has a flaming red crest and a white stripe along the neck.

Some of the Oldest Rocks

A large part of geologic history is revealed more clearly in the walls of the Grand canyon than in any other place in the world. Forming the walls of a narrow inner gorge in the lower part of the canyon are some of the oldest rocks (Archean) known to geologists. These were once largely sediments (limestones, shales and sandstones), but have been so altered by the great heat and pressure of mountain-making movements that their original character is lost entirely. No traces of life have survived the metamorphism of the rocks of this first era.

Formations in Shenandoah Valley

The most famous of all the natural formations in the Shenandoah valley are the caverns and the great stone arch the Natural bridge. In this land of caverns forces of nature, at work in prehistoric times, made a vast underground world of architectural beauty. The largest and best known of these underground wonderlands are the Caverns of Luray. Endless caverns and Shenandoah caverns, at New Market.

Raven Looks Like Crow

American ravens are over two feet long, have a wing spread of about three feet, and look like a large crow. Headed for extinction, they are ordinarily found only in Oregon, Montana and South Dakota. Once they were common all over the United States. Ravens nest in desolate regions, as far as possible from men. But, after being captured, they can be tamed easily.

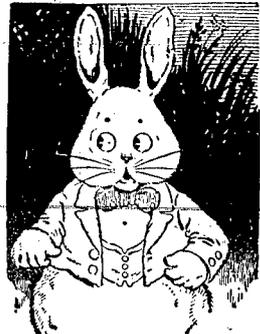

LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

by Thornton W. Burgess

THE NEWS REACHES PETER RABBIT

IT ISN'T often that Peter Rabbit doesn't know what is going on in the Green Forest and on the Green Meadows, but once in a great while it happens. That was the case the time that everybody was looking for the storehouse of Busy Bee so as to make a friend of Buster Bear, who is very fond of honey. It happens that Peter had been staying very close to the dear Old Briar Patch in the daytime, visiting the Green Forest only at night. Now, of course, no one looked for the storehouse of Busy Bee at night, and so Peter didn't know anything about it for some time. When he did hear about it, he was very much put out because he had not known about it before. Peter is one of those people who want to be the first to know what is going on.

Now, Peter was quite as much afraid of Buster Bear as were any of his friends. In fact, it was because of Buster that he had given up going to the Green Forest as much as he used to or would have liked to. So when he heard that there was looking for honey for Buster Bear, he was filled with a great wish that he, too, might hunt for the honey. He might, he just might, find it. And if he did, why he and Buster Bear would be friends as long as they lived, and that would be perfectly splendid. The more he thought about it as he sat in the dear Old Briar Patch the more splendid it seemed, and he began to wish that he could climb trees like Chatterer the Red Squirrel and Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel, or else that he could fly. He thought flying would be even better.

But he couldn't do either, and so couldn't quite see how he had the least chance in the world to find the honey which would make Buster Bear his friend. He sat in the dear Old Briar Patch and thought and thought. Jimmy Skunk came along and noticed that Peter was studying over something.

"Hello!" he exclaimed. "Got something on your mind, Peter Rabbit?"

Now, Peter didn't like to admit that he wished he could find the honey of Busy Bee, so he pretended not to hear Jimmy's question. "Hello, Jimmy Skunk!" he exclaimed, as if he had just discovered Jimmy's presence. "How are you?"

"Fine," replied Jimmy. "I'm glad to see that you haven't gone crazy like everybody else."

"What do you mean?" asked Peter.

"Why, everybody in the Green Forest is running around with their heads tipped back until they look as if they certainly would break their necks. They're all looking for honey, and to see them you would think that they expected it was going to drop right down on their noses. I never did see such foolishness, and all just to try to please Buster Bear. Some day one of them will walk right into his clutches, for you can't look up and watch where you are going at the same time. If I wanted to find that honey I wouldn't go about breaking my neck to do it. No, sir, not much!"

"What would you do?" asked Peter so eagerly that Jimmy looked at him sharply.

"I'd ask some one who knows, or else I'd watch Busy Bee and find out where she goes to," replied Jimmy.

Peter didn't say anything more, but he did a great deal of thinking, and he did wish that Jimmy Skunk would hurry away. You see, he had thought of a plan. He had thought of some one—a friend of his, who ought to know all about Busy Bee and her honey, and he was anxious to go hunt him up. So for once Peter didn't want to talk, and after a little Jimmy Skunk went on his way to hunt for fat beetles.

Magazine Solicitors.

HOUSTON, TEX.—What has become of all the struggling collegians, ranging in age up to fifty-five, who used to solicit magazine subscriptions so they could spend another semester at dear old Bushwah?

We counted that day lost whose low descending sun didn't find us signing on the dotted line. And sometimes we got the wrong magazines and sometimes we didn't get any magazines at all and once in awhile we got the magazines we'd ordered and then didn't like them.

But our consolation was that we'd staid all those earnest undergraduates to complete the education for which they panted as the hart panteth after the water-brook.

Can it be that the gallant army packed the campuses until vast numbers got crushed in the jam? Or is it—that many of them are getting too old to travel around? Lately there has been an unaccountable falling-off in the business. We are bearing up bravely, since now we have more time in which to lead our own lives.

P. S.—I have on hand a complete file for 1935 of the Northwestern Bee Raiser which I would like to trade for a ukulele.

Matriarchy's Approach. SOME inspired philosopher—and not a woman either—declares that within a century women will dominate every imaginable field of human endeavor.

What do you mean, within a century? If the prophet will leave out the ancient science of growing chin-whiskers and the knack of making a sleeping-car washroom look like a hunk's seat.

Since Henry the Eighth, the two greatest kings England had were both queens—Elizabeth and Victoria. Men thought up war and improved the art of war and now are hoping to perfect it to the point of exterminating the species, but 'twas in the midst of bloody warfare that Florence Nightingale laid the foundations and Clara Barton built the structure of mercy by method and life-saving by skill and tenderness and sanitation.

Take this country at the present moment; for energy, for readiness of speech, for range of interest, for versatility in making publicity and, incidentally, acquiring it, for endurance under strain, what man amongst us is to be compared with the first lady of the language, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt?

Banishing Sectionalism.

ON ONE stretch of road down here—and it is not a main-traveled highway and this not exactly the tourist season—I saw cars bearing license tags of nine separate states, ranging from New Hampshire and Florida to Utah and Oregon, besides one from Hawaii and one from Puerto Rico. And next summer Texas cars will be boring into every corner of this Union and the folks riding in them will be getting acquainted with their fellow-countrymen and finding out that, when you know the other fellow, he's not so different, after all.

Like most evil things, sectionalism and parochial prejudices and with Vermont neighbor to Virginia and the Dakotas talking it over with the Carolinas, there's seed being sown which inevitably must sprout a finer yield of Americanism than any our land ever produced—if only we keep the tares of communism and the chaff of snobbery out of the crop, only make patriotic service a thing of elbow-grease and not of lip-movements.

What price, then, the wearers of the black shirts and the white sheets; the parlor pinks, the yellow internationalists and the red flag wavers?

Freedom of the Press. DICTATORS invariably cancel freedom of the press and curb freedom of education. Otherwise, they fail.

Although he uttered the words over 250 years ago, Governor Berkeley of Virginia spoke for all the breed of political tyrants when he said: "I thank God there are no free schools, nor printing, for learning has brought disobedience and heresy into the world, and printing has divulged them."

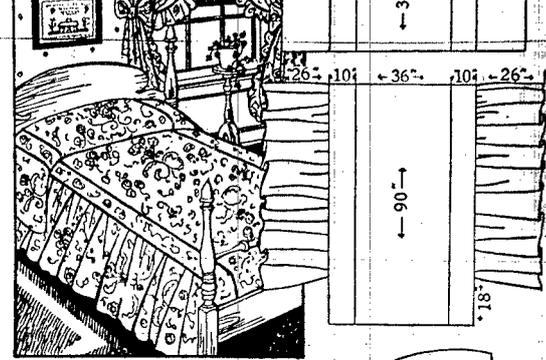

Foulness in drama or literature, like a skunk penned under a barrel, eventually destroys itself by just naturally choking to death on its own smell.

Control of the newest medium of publicity, the radio, is easy. But information put in type keeps on traveling. No people ever stayed free once the press—and the school teacher—had been muzzled.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Making a Chintz Bed Spread With Corded Seams.

WOULD you like to make a chintz bedspread to match your curtains? Of course, such a spread must have seams in it, for most chintzes are only 36 inches wide, while the average double bed is about 64 inches wide. But seams need not detract from the beauty of the spread.

Eleven and a half yards of 36-inch-wide chintz will make this spread and pillow cover for a double bed. In the diagrams at the right I have given the dimensions for cutting these for a 54-inch-wide bed. It is best to cut the center portions first; then cut the 18-inch side sections for the pillow cover; then the 10-inch strips for pillow cover and spread. This leaves a long 26-inch-wide strip for the side ruffles of the spread.

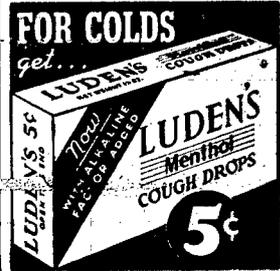

Cable cord for the corded seams may be purchased at notion counters. Prepared bias trimming may be used for the cord covering. Baste the covering over the cord, as shown here at A; then place the covered cord in the seam, as shown, and stitch as at B, using the cording foot of your machine.

HOTELS

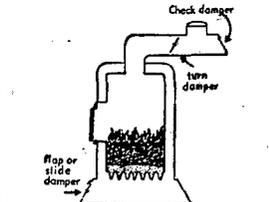

Home Heating Hints By John Barclay Heating Expert

Maintaining Even Temperature in All Rooms Depends Upon Proper Use of Dampers

The health and comfort of your family during cold weather depend much upon whether your heating plant delivers a dependable, steady, even heat. And the efficiency of your furnace depends upon the proper use of dampers.

The turn (or smoke pipe) damper never should be used for the day-by-day control of heat. This damper should always be kept as nearly closed as possible without retarding the free burning of the fuel, or causing any gas to escape into the basement.

If you have no thermostat on your furnace, the every-day control of heat should be left to the check and ashpit (flap or slide) dampers. To get more heat upstairs, close the check and open the ashpit dampers—they should operate together—when one is closed, the other is open. If the house is warm enough, close the ashpit and open the check damper.

It's very important to bear in mind where these dampers are located. The check damper should be between the chimney and the turn damper, the latter being between the check damper and the furnace.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Dr. Doan's Pills, Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nationwide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Accomplishment of FSA In Nebraska
turning from grain crops in an expansion of live stock enterprises. Soil conservation methods are being followed in all parts of the region.

More silos, particularly the trench type, have been built the past year than ever before. Farmers are showing increased interest in cooperatives.

"All of these are good indications, I believe," said Mr. Ward. "They point to a more balanced agriculture."

Despite drouth in large sections of the region, the general record of repayment is good. The grant program, which provides family living for destitute farm families, has diminished and is not as serious as it was a year ago.

A summary of activities in Nebraska reveals that there were 9,626 farmers operating under standard FSA loans as of December 1 and that a total sum had been extended to them of $7,247,148.

That amount of money includes 185 cooperative loans in an amount of $121,174, which were extended to groups of farmers working together. These were largely for establishment of purebred sire and stallion rings and for purchase of harvesting equipment.

Of the total amount loaned $3,638,986 will be due the end of the year and by December 1 $1,774,598 has been repaid, which is a fair record considering drouth conditions, Ward said.

Through the assistance of volunteer county committees in this state up to December 1 a total of 2,945 farm cases had been adjusted since September 1, 1935, reducing an original indebtedness of $11,137,863 to $7,595,609, affecting a reduction of $3,542,254.

Taxes of $189,952 were paid as a result of these settlements. Throughout the region a 37.9% reduction has been secured on debt cases settled which means that farmers who formerly had practically no ability to pay were then able to pay the remaining 62.1% to their creditors.

In February of last year when the grant load was at its peak, Mr. Ward said, 24,886 Nebraska farm families were receiving monthly grants. In November of this year there were 10,488 farm families on grant rolls at an average monthly grant of $17.73.

While the number of families receiving this type of aid will be increased as the winter progresses, it will no where near reach the high of last year, he predicted. In November of this year the total sum certified for grants in Nebraska was $186,039, while the cumulative amount of money certified for grants in the state reaches $3,888,111.

Ward emphasized that the FSA in making loans were trying to encourage a type of agriculture which would help reduce the necessity for grants.

Machinery for administering the tenant purchase loan program of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act has been set up and applications for loans are coming in, Mr. Ward stated. Only residents of Cedar, Dawson, Polk, Gage and Morrill county are eligible and they must, of course fulfill specified requirements before they can qualify.

These counties were selected by the new Nebraska Farm Advisory Committee. Five or six loans will be made in each county this first year, an approximate average loan of $6,000. The total allocation for Nebraska for this purpose is $197,105. Nominations are now being made for county committees in these counties. They will consist of three farmer members, appointed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. The State Farm Security Advisory Committee will consist of nine members, all prominent leaders in agriculture.
