

JUDGE CHERRY FINES LIQUOR VIOLATOR $250

State Sleuth Uses Clever Scheme to Secure Evidence

Allen Boock, employe of the Stratton Hotel, pleaded guilty in county court Monday to the charge of selling liquor on Sunday and was fined $250 and costs of $1.61. The infraction carries a maximum penalty of $500 fine. Mr. Boock paid $150 on the fine. Having appeared in court without counsel, Boock later appeared before Judge Cherry with Attorney Addison as counsel which resulted in a deferred argument on the amount of the fine.

No charge was placed against the owner of the liquor store as there had been no violation.

Walter Dann, state inspector of the Nebraska liquor commission, carefully trapped his transgressor. Dann and another man, presumably another state man, had spent several days in Wayne. While staying at the hotel they posed as college students and on Sunday became very thirsty. They first approached the janitor of the Stratton hotel to secure liquor for them and met with failure. It was then the sleuths resorted to utilize the advantages of confidence and friendship.

had established during their stay at the hotel with Mr. Boock. All employes of the hotel have orders to obey the law and the incident was without sanction of the management.

Judge Vacancy Still Exists

Governor's Delay Causes Much Speculation

Governor Cochran's delay in announcing the appointment of a district judge or in arriving at a decision is cause for considerable speculation both locally and throughout the state.

Attorney Brittain had no comment to make upon the status of his candidacy and had received no word at the time the Democrat went to press. Reports from other quarters reflect a similar situation.

Mayor Martin Ringer, Dr. Walter Bonthack, Frank Erxleben, Frank Korff, and Rollie Ley composed a committee from Wayne representing local sentiment and appeared before the governor in behalf of Brittain's candidacy.

District Declam Contest Feb. 12

300 Contestants to Represent 43 Schools in Meet

More than 300 contestants representing 43 high schools in district three are expected to attend the district declamatory and one-act play contests to be held at the college campus next Saturday. K. N. Parke is contest chairman. Of the total number of schools, 20 have entrants in both the play and declamatory contests. The remaining schools have contestants in the declamatory event only.

In the one-act play event, two stages with 10 plays scheduled on each stage will be run during the day. The best plays from each stage from each half day will meet in the final round that evening.

There will be five sections of declamations. The schedule of debates begins at 8 o'clock and continues through the day until all contestants have debated.

Supt. Allen Burkhardt of Norfolk is president of the association, Rex Gay, superintendent of the Bassett schools is secretary and treasurer, and Supt. L. J. Crow of Pender is the vice-president.

The district music contest will be held here April 1 and 2. More than 2,000 high school students will participate in the event. The district commercial contest will be held April 9.

College Prep Select One-Act Play Entry

College High school dramatics class has chosen the one-act play, "Dola's Learning" to present at the district one-act play contest to be held here next Saturday. The author of the play is Anna Best Joder, a native of Peru. It deals with life on the Missouri river bottoms.

The cast is as follows: Virginia Lewis as Dola Turner; Blanche Smith as Mom Turner; Jeanette Riley as Mrs. Bascum; and Ann Ahern as Mrs. Henry.

Rites Held for Winside Man

Austin Darnell Dies At Local Hospital After Long Illness

Funeral services for Mr. Austin Darnell of Winside who died Friday following a long illness at a local hospital where he had been taken a few days ago were held Sunday afternoon from the Winside Methodist church with the Rev. L. E. Littrel of Randolph officiating. Burial was in Pleasant View cemetery. He was 54 years old.

Mr. Darnell was born near Lovilia, Ia., June 22, 1883. At age of two years, he came with his parents to Red Oak, Ia., and when 12 years old they moved to Winside where he has since resided. He worked for Needham Brothers the past few years until he was unable to work.

He married Daisy Motson at Wayne on January 6, 1903, who preceded him in death 9 years ago. Six children were born to them, George of Wakefield, Harold of Florida, Mrs. Evelyn Miller and Mrs. Marjorie Lou Mann of Winside, and Mrs. Opal Williams of Sioux City. One son, Donald, died in infancy.

He is also survived by four sisters, Mrs. Ollie Oman of Wakefield, Mrs. Edythe Phillips of Coleridge, Mrs. Sadie Lackas of Randolph, and Mrs. Grace Lewis of Carroll, and six grandchildren.

During the service, Jean Boyd sang two solos accompanied by Mrs. A. T. Chapin.

Pallbearers were Charles Unger, Frank Bronzynski, Charles Needham, L. W. Needham, Charles Misfeldt, and Richard Jugel.

Name Winners of Local Declam Contest

Winners in the local declamatory contest held among students of the College Training school Thursday were named and will represent the school at the district meet next Saturday.

Homer Seace was the only entrant in the extemporaneous division and Glenn Giese was the only contestant in the interpretative oratory division. His oration was on "Fighting for the Soul of the Nations."

Blanche Smith won the dramatic decision with a reading entitled "The Unseen Witness." Bonnie Jo Martin was an entrant in this division giving "The Death Disc."

In the humorous division, Josephine Ahern won the decision with her reading entitled "Good-bye Sister." Arlene Griffith competed in this division reading "Trimming Her Husband."

File on Non-political Ticket

Mrs. Lenora Laughlin has filed as candidate for county superintendent of schools to run on the non-political ticket. Two republican candidates, William J. Misfeldt and Walt Fenske, have filed recently for county commissioner of the third district.

To Attend Board Meet

Dr. J. T. Anderson of Wayne State Teachers college will attend the State Normal Board meeting at Lincoln next Monday.

LEADERS PLAN STATE WILDLIFE WEEK

Oakland and Hartington Here Friday and Tuesday

Coach Morris took his blue and white basketball players to Norfolk Friday and gave the Norfolk high school a real battle. The game was a nip and tuck affair with Norfolk eking out a one-point victory over the Wayne High school. The score was 23 to 22.

Friday night local fans will see a doubleheader when Oakland invades Wayne and another doubleheader is scheduled for Tuesday night when Hartington brings two teams to Wayne.

Coach Morris has developed a fine team as their record indicates. The boys play an aggressive offensive game and an alert defense. Their shooting ability and team co-ordination has improved with every game. The two games with Oakland and Hartington will be hard fought and there will be plenty of thrills for the fans.

Urge Farmers to File Shelter Belt Applications

Shelter belt applications can still be made at the Farm Bureau office. The allotment for Wayne county has not yet been filled. Interested parties should contact the office and talk the matter over as this seems to be a wonderful opportunity for farmers to secure a planting of trees on their farm.

President's Ball Well Attended

Dance Realizes $156.10 For Infantile Paralysis Foundation

Attendance records at the annual president's ball hit a new high Monday evening when a large throng of dancers gathered at the municipal auditorium to dance to Jimmie Barnett's much talked of 11-piece orchestra.

Total sale of tickets, contributions, and founder memberships total $297.80 to date. Reports from neighboring towns who helped make the ball a gala northeast Nebraska party have not been received as yet but increased contributions are expected. Expenses totaled $141.70. One hundred and fifty-six dollars and ten cents will be Wayne's and northeast Nebraska's contribution for a permanent foundation for fighting of infantile paralysis.

Much praise is due Frank F. Korff, county chairman, E. O. Stratton, vice-chairman and their committee members for their efforts, hard work and excellent planning of ball arrangements in making this dance a truly successful affair. The committee wish also to thank local chairmen in the surrounding towns who voluntarily gave their time, effort to aid the foundation.

The committee was most appreciative of the "splendid publicity that local newspapers and nearby towns' newspapers gave the president's ball."

The crowd came to hear an excellent dance band with the newest arrangements and it wasn't disappointed. The committee pointed out that the orchestra was booked at a reduced price made possible by the band and the Vic Schroeder agency of Omaha.

Wayne-Chadron Conference Game

Wayne Wildcats go to Chadron Friday and Saturday to play two conference tilts. Wayne State met its first defeat Saturday when the Peru Teachers downed them 53 to 35.

Girl Born to Freeman Deckers

A seven and half pound girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Decker Tuesday morning.

GOLDEN RULE ROBBER GETS 5-YEAR SENTENCE

College Receives Inquiries Relatives to Night Classes

Several inquiries regarding evening classes in shop, modern language, education and, commerce have been received by Wayne State Teachers college authorities it was announced today.

If enrollment is sufficient to warrant the instruction of these classes, the college will schedule two or three hour classes for an evening and Saturday morning period.

Porter-Kopp Wed Saturday

Fremont Girl Becomes Bride of Wayne Man

Before an archway banked with ferns, Miss Ruth Alvina Porter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Porter of Fremont became the bride of Maurice E. Kopp, son of Mrs. Anna Kopp of Pierce. The wedding took place at the Porter home in Fremont Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock with the Rev. William Brueggemann reading the single ring marriage lines in the presence of fourteen relatives and intimate friends.

The attendants were James of Pierce, sister of the bridegroom, and Robert Porter, brother of the bride.

The bride was gowned in a navy blue taffeta. The afternoon dress had a high collar with shirring at the throat. Her accessories were black and she wore a corsage of pink rose buds, sweet peas, and white fresasias.

The matron of honor chose a royal blue afternoon dress worn with black accessories. She wore a corsage similar to that of the bride. Both men wore white carnation boutonnieres.

A two-course wedding luncheon was served following the reception. The candle-light table was decorated in the bride's chosen colors of pink and white.

The bride is a graduate of the Fremont High school. She received her degree from the Laughlin School of Nursing at Kirksville, Mo. At present she is a nurse at the Jamieson hospital.

Mr. Kopp is a graduate of the Wayne High school and is the cleaner at the Jacques Cleaners. The young couple are at home at 109 South Lincoln street.

110 Attend the Hunter Meeting

Precinct Elects Two Advisory Board Members

One hundred and ten people attended the Hunter precinct meeting held Friday evening at the Bell school. Joseph C. Johnson presided. Walter L. Moller, county agricultural agent, spoke briefly on "Extension Work in Connection with Farm and Home."

Mrs. Russell Preston and Lawrence Ring were elected members of the Farm Bureau Advisory Board to represent Hunter precinct at the executive board meetings.

Mrs. Lawrence Ring gave a brief welcome speech. Miss Bonnie Jean Kabisch played a piano solo. Pupils in District 6 gave a one-act play. A girls chorus from District 6 sang two songs. Members of the Merry Maids 4-H club sang. Merlin Preston and LeRoy Sievers gave a dialogue. A musical reading was given by Bonna Preston.

Refreshments were served by members of the El Deen and La Porte Community project clubs.

The committee on arrangements included Joseph Johnson, Carl Sundell, John C. Bressler, Otto Lutt, William Weber and Mrs. Lawrence Ring, county chairman.

Rob't Foley Apprehended In Sioux City Ring Capture

A chain of events led to the apprehension of Robert Foley, real name unknown, who pleaded guilty to robbing the Golden Rule Store of merchandise and cash estimated at $1500 Christmas day was sentenced to five years in the Lincoln penitentiary before Judge Charles H. Stewart of Norfolk Friday.

Foley, who gave Sioux City as his home, was associated in a crime ring of which five members, one of them a woman, were picked up Thursday night. Merchandise identified by Larry Brown, manager of the Brown McDonald store here, and Harold Finch, as taken from the store was found in the possession of Foley.

The other men were prosecuted in Iowa courts on charges of auto theft, fences for stolen goods, and larceny and received sentences ranging from 5 to 10 years. The woman was released because of insufficient evidence.

Sheriff J. H. Pile who has been working on the Golden Rule robbery case in conjunction with other police authorities brought Foley back to Wayne county to stand charges in county court. In his hearing in county court Friday he pleaded guilty to charges of stealing merchandise and cash, and expressly waived preliminary hearing. He was bound over to the district court and his bond set at $2,000.

Foley was also implicated in several Minnesota robberies.

He refused to give any statement to the Democrat reporter. But in answer to the inquiry of "You have heard the statement 'Crime doesn't pay,' what is your opinion?" Foley answered, "Yes, I've heard that since I was a little boy. But if I said anything on crime they would say I was preaching and so I'll just take the rap."

Wylie-Thompson Wed Saturday

Winside Girl Becomes Bride of Army Officer

Miss Alice Wylie, daughter of the Rev. J. Bruce Wylie of Burwell, and Lieutenant Harold Thompson of Ely, Minn., son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Thompson of Belvidere, were married Saturday afternoon at the George Lewis home in the presence of 50 relatives and friends. The Rev. J. Bruce Wylie read the single ring ceremony and was assisted by the Rev. Robert Wylie of Ithaca, brother of the bride.

The bride was gowned in green lace with matching accessories. Her only attendant, Miss Virginia Troutman, was dressed in brown. Wayne Thompson of Bruning, brother of the bridegroom, acted as groomsman. Miss Dorothy Seanson of Cairo sang "Forgotten" and "I Love You Truly." Miss Ethel Lewis accompanied her and also played during the ceremony.

Following the ceremony the wedding reception was held. Refreshments carried out the bride's chosen colors, blue and silver. Miss Ruth Schindler and Miss Neville Troutman, assisted by Miss Dorothea Baird and Miss Dorothea Lewis, served. The house was decorated with cut flowers.

Out-of-town guests were: The Rev. and Mrs. J. Bruce Wylie of Burwell, the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Wylie of Ithaca, Mrs. Nellie Collier of Burwell, Mr. and Mrs. W. Ingalls and daughter, Miss Roberta, of Cairo, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Thompson, Miss Virginia Thompson of Belvidere, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Thompson of Shelby, Miss Francis Wylie of Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lundak of Inman, and Miss Neville Troutman.

New Industries for Wayne

Harry J. Krusz, manager of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, recently made the following statement before a group of Lincoln businessmen: "Industrial and commercial progress in Lincoln during the next ten years will depend entirely whether businessmen here do a better job of developing the trade territory than the communities which are competing with Lincoln for business." He further pointed out that to date, Lincoln's growth and prosperity had been due largely to the location of the state university and capitol at Lincoln. Mr. Krusz then proceeded to appeal to businessmen to co-operate in a trade expansion program outlined by the Chamber of Commerce.

In many ways Wayne is comparable to Lincoln. Much of Wayne's growth and business is due directly to the location of State Teachers College here. Perhaps as a community we have not yet fully realized on the asset we have in being the home of Wayne State Teachers College. We sell ourselves short individually and as a community when we fail to adequately advertise the advantages of this excellent institution.

It seems to this newspaper that this is an opportune time for all interests which center in this community to take concerted action in selling Wayne to the world as a logical location of new industries or an ideal location for many established firms. Just now Nebraska is being widely advertised throughout the nation to induce capital to invest in industrial enterprises. Wayne will miss an opportunity if nothing is done to keep step with other enterprising cities of the state.

Wayne needs industries which process the raw products of agriculture, products which are now grown here and products which could be profitably grown. Wayne needs employment for students who have to work their way through college. Wayne needs employment for surplus resident farm labor. Good crops in the future will only accentuate the need for paying jobs. This fact is well illustrated over in Iowa where 11 counties were forced to apply for relief for people who could not find a means of livelihood. This, mind you, in a year when those counties harvested the greatest crop in history.

If this situation was given sufficient serious thought we might discover adequate capital, initiative and enterprising spirit right here in Wayne to do the job much to the benefit of the entire community.

Just whose job would it be to survey our situation? In most cities it seems to fall upon the heads of the Chamber of Commerce or Commercial club. These organizations usually encompass all business and professional people in the community, or the bulk of them. In the absence of such an organization perhaps some plan such as an "Inter Club Industrial Committee" could serve the purpose.

Most everyone can recall certain well known communities which do have small industries co-ordinated to agricultural production which have contributed to a well balanced economic community. Two such communities come to our mind; both of these towns are smaller than Wayne, one has a turkey packing plant, the other a large creamery, both of these industries have served to balance employment and steady business. Wayne already has a growing industry in its creamery.

We would be glad to give space in this newspaper freely to the expression of opinions of others at any time. So if you have some ideas along this line let us have them.

The Public Forum

Henry Herman Helmann, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men, recently had occasion to spend a few hours in a western town and here in part is his observation. "I was asked about the community. The population I was told, had not varied a great deal in the last 40 years. My imagination was spurred. I circled the village in the spring, which will bring an improvement in business," is looked for.

Nine churches I counted. Six in a dilapidated condition—abandoned. Just why did that community once have nine churches, all seemingly well-supported, and just why does the present generation find it difficult to support only three?"

Mr. Helmann being interested in character as related to credit recalled in older days when a man's measure in worth was determined by his stature in faith and wondered what the re-opening of these six closed churches would mean to that community.

The above picture is quite in contrast with this community where churches seem to be given consideration equal or above that given to other institutions. But no doubt in this community churches have their troubles too. Many attractions compete with the church yet in its "Social Creed" the church interests itself in about every phase of living essential to man's well-being.

It stresses an 8-hour working day, one day in seven for rest and worship, abolition of child labor, regulation of labor for women, suppression of the sweating system, protection from industrial and occupational diseases, social justice for all men, arbitration in industrial disputes, right of all men to the opportunity for self maintenance, protection of workers from hardships of enforced unemployment, a minimum wage, proper living conditions, social insurance, unemployment and farm relief and a demand for a new emphasis upon the applications of Christian principles to the acquisition and use of property and for the most equitable division of the products of industry that can be devised.

With these ideals and purposes for man's social well-being together with the religious, educational and other contributions of the church it is almost inconceivable that any other institution could possibly overshadow the influence of the church. But it is easily understood when one realizes that in the fair state of Nebraska more than half of its population belongs to no church whatsoever, and Nebraska is a fine church going commonwealth when compared to many other states.

To stimulate an interest in the church, the local Methodist church is sponsoring Public Forum discussions. This type of service is rather unique and undoubtedly will prove both stimulating and of benefit to the church as well as individuals participating in the discussions.

Stabilizing Employment

American business depends upon making goods and selling them to the public. When for any reason the purchasing power of the people fails, or large numbers of people decide to defer buying until some future time the whole business system goes into a slump like the present one. Therefore consideration is now being given in calm conferences in the national capital to the practices of finance and industries throughout the country. Salesmanship practices and installment buying are factors affecting business to which President Roosevelt calls attention.

The White House conferences and congress proceedings have laid stress on the importance of "employment stabilization" in the industries. There was especially sympathetic approval of this objective by representatives of industry in recent White House conferences. They said nothing was of greater importance to the automobile industry, for instance, than orderly nationwide conditions. Steady employment of their workers, steady demands for cars, installment terms were the things essential to everybody's success. Examination of practices in the industry and proposed corrections will be submitted to the White House.

It is generally understood that the broad principle of self-regulation is being urged by the administration upon all industries, and also upon the American Federation of Labor, John L. Lewis, CIO, and others who are in position to aid in ending the recession. A seasonal increase in sales in the spring, which will bring an improvement in business," is looked for. "It is a consumption devoutly to be wished." It would solve the emergency problem of self regulation of industry in a way satisfactory to the government and industry.

News Briefs

PENDER

Ten Pender landowners asked the supreme court Saturday to affirm the Thurston county district court's action allowing a 20 per cent reduction on their property tax assessments. The farmers, through their counsel, Attorney Cecil R. Boughn of Pender, told the court in written arguments, that they are entitled to the reduction because of the inequity created by high school levies in the Pender school district, in which they live, as compared with school taxes in adjoining districts.

CROFTON

During 1937 the Crofton school district and village paid off $3,000 in bonded indebtedness according to a report by County Treasurer Chris B. Alexander. The town paid $1,000 which wiped out the entire extension water bond while $2,000 was paid on school district 96 bonds. Interest of course was also paid on outstanding bonds.

WAUSA

Thieves entered the Anderson's Golden Rule store in the night between Friday and Saturday of last week, helping themselves to between one and two hundred dollars worth of merchandise. It is practically impossible to determine just what amount they took away with as clothing, groceries, meats and cake and bread, all seemed to have been of value to the thieves. Entrance had been made through one of the windows in the rear of the building.

WENDELL

Another step was taken Tuesday night towards the construction of the swimming pool the village proposes to build with the aid of a government grant, when the village board employed C. C. Koike of Omaha as consulting engineer, and authorized him to proceed with plans and the estimate to be submitted for governmental approval.

MADISON

Impetus was given this week to the drive to make permanent the local CCC camp by word that two similar camps in the state had been ordered closed at the termination of the present projects. The two camps ordered closed were those at Mitchell and Minatare, both in the western part of the state.

PIERCE

Pierce and Walthill basketball teams put up one of the hardest fought games ever seen on the floor of the high school gymnasium last Friday night. It was a battle royal between teams coached by Curley Ambrose and Carol Gast, both graduates of Pierce high and alumni of the State Teachers college at Wayne. Pierce won in the last few minutes of the game by the close score of 17 to 15.

DIXON

There's at least one trucker in Oakland, Neb., who says the Nebraska highway patrol is efficient. A patrolman stopped him the other night and checked his driver's license, the brakes, the lights, the size of his load and lastly the flares. Everything the officer said was shipshape.

"Have you," he asked, "got a match?" And pulled a cigarette from his pocket.

"No," said the trucker, "no matches, sorry."

"My dear man," the patrolman said, "what good are your flares if you have no matches to light them?"

The trucker agreed and took the matches the patrolman gave him.

ELGIN

During the high wind and sudden drop of temperature that hit Elgin the first part of the week, fire broke out early Tuesday morning in the feed storage building that was located between the elevator of the Elgin Lumber company and the sale pavilion and completely destroyed the frame building and feed that was stored in it.

The loss, which was estimated at $2,000, is partially covered by insurance.

Adjustment Through FSA Office Puts Farmers On Their Feet

By Don Herold

A review of farm plans submitted in the regional office of the Farm Security Administration for loans indicates the importance of local credit to farmers. It was reported recently by Ralph L. Hutchinson, chief of Farm Debt-Adjustment work, to Regional Director Cal A. Ward. In months past, the Farm Security Administration office located in Wayne has done considerable work in Wayne and Pierce counties in the adjusting of farmers' debts reducing the indebtedness to a point where banks and private individuals will advance credit to these farmers who they consider "safe risks" since the debt total had been adjusted.

During January, one debt totaling $638.80 was adjusted for $125 in Wayne county. It was announced today by Ray L. Verzal, county FSA supervisor. Three debt adjustments are pending in the county.

Credit Rehabilitation

"The proper use of credit, whether it be new money loaned from banks, Governmental agencies, or the present existing credit extended to farm clients, very largely determines the success or failure of the farm enterprise and the ultimate rehabilitation of farm clients."

Mr. Hutchinson pointed out that the use of "local credit" does not necessarily demand that new loans be secured from banks and other lending agencies in all cases, but, as properly applied, does mean also that the existing indebtedness of a farm client has been adjusted within the farm income and an orderly arrangement made for payment out of farm income, during the period of rehabilitation. The proper use of this existing credit, when adjusted within the farm income, has a value, for it may be used in lieu of new money. In working out the rehabilitation plan for a farm client the FSA thinks not only in terms of debts owed by the client, but also in terms of credit extended by local individuals or agencies.

Adjust 311 Cases

"All creditors have an important part in the rehabilitation of worthy farmers of their community," Hutchinson added. "The credit responsibility is and remains a community problem, but through rehabilitation service, local credit can be supplemented in working out the financial problems of farm debtor and his creditors."

Reporting on Farm Debt Adjustment activities of the FSA during December, Mr. Hutchinson said that in the Dakotas, Nebraska and Kansas a total of 311 cases had been adjusted, with a total debt reduction of $357,106. Resultant taxes paid amounted to $4,952.

Breed Hogs to Dress Out More Choice Cuts

That hogs can be bred to dress out a higher percentage of choice cuts—hams, bacon and loin—has been shown by comparison of Danish Landrace hogs with typical American breeds. United States department of agriculture meat specialists compared 56 Landrace carcasses with 240 carcasses of common domestic breeds.

The Landrace carcasses produced 18.3 per cent hams, 12.4 per cent bacon, and 16.4 per cent loin. The American breeds dressed out 17.5 per cent ham, 12.3 per cent bacon, and 12.3 per cent loin.

Landrace carcasses weighing 170 pounds averaged 1.36 pounds more ham, 0.17 pound more con, and 6.97 pounds more loin than the average carcass of American breeds of the same weight. Some American breeds produce as large percentage of loin, but fall lower in the percentage of bacon. The head of the average Landrace hog also weighs 1.7 pounds less than the head of the average American hog.

Landrace hogs were imported by the department in May, 1934, for experimental purposes. With needs of the American swine industry in mind, especially the more effective selection of breeding stock, the department selected the highly regarded Danish breed for study under American conditions.

The department does not have any breeding stock available for sale, and is working with the breed purely on a research basis which may lead to the development of better qualities in established American breeds.

Take—and Like—Your Medicine

I burn when I see somebody driving a car down our street faster than he should. Yet I'd burn if I were doing the same thing and a cop caught me and gave me a ticket. But I oughtn't to. I ought to remember that my little sledgehammer crosses that street several times a day and plays on the other side, and that traffic regulation and enforcement are for her protection. I ought for her sake, to be so loyal to traffic regulations that I would feel good about getting a ticket. There is always injustice in any ticket. We get for a traffic violation. Let's just have sense enough or some of humor enough to remember that our own ticket is invariably going to seem unjust—and let's have sportsmanship enough to take our medicine in the name of a good cause. At the present rate, according to estimates made by The Travelers Insurance Company, one out of every three children faces the PROBABILITY of death or maiming from motor accidents in the course of a lifetime. So what we need is more tickets, not fewer tickets. And no "FIX-ING". I like the spirit of that wife of a New York magistrate who some time ago appeared in traffic court and paid a fine. "I think some types of patriotism and public spirit are apt to be the bulk, but I believe we should all lean over backwards to take what's coming to us for traffic rule violations."

CHARLES F. KETTERING, Vice-President in charge of research, and R. K. Evans, Vice-President in charge of Diesel development of General Motors, look over the four cylinder 107 horsepower version of the new General Motors line of light-weight two-cycle Diesel engines, ranging from 22 to 1200 horsepower, first announced in Detroit. The four cylinder engine develops as much power as eight cylinder gasoline engines and is considerably lighter and smaller than existing American Diesels designed for similar service.

Nice Weather For Beans

Bill Adams, former Shakespearean actor and director of John Barrymore's "Hamlet" in London, is just that way. Bill happens to specialize in baked beans. He first became fond of them when traveling on the road with Sothern and Marlowe. Since joining the radio field as the palate-stirring food editor of Columbia's "Heinz Magazine of the Air," Bill has become one of the country's leading gourmets, and informal entertaining is one of his hobbies. Frequently, after his Sunday afternoon broadcasts from 5:00 to 5:30, Bill invites hungry fellow artists up to his home for supper. And it's generally baked beans and sausages. Use half a dozen tins of Boston style oven baked beans with pork and molasses. Put the beans an inch deep in a baking pan. Cover them with thin slices of onion—you'll need two onions. Pour over about a half cupful of tomato ketchup. Over the top arrange sausages about two inches apart. Bake in moderate oven for an hour and after the first thirty minutes turn the sausages so that they will brown on both sides. Small sausage cakes can be used instead of the link sausages.

Name Qualifications to Become Good Pig Club Boy

By Paul W. Durbin
Vocational Agriculture Instructor

The success of a boy depends upon whether he has the (1) interest; (2) ability; (3) knowledge and, (4) patience and confidence.

The progress one makes in any field depends upon his interest in the work. What does interest mean? In pig club enterprise, it means the boy must have a feeling or relationship between himself and his hogs. This makes him have a desire to produce the best.

How can we as adult leaders arouse this interest in young people? The first way to catch the interest of the boy is to secure cooperation from the parents which can be done by showing the children's parents that we as leaders are interested in their sons' success. We can visit the home once or twice a month during the year, and, especially at the time of farrowing. We can further show our interest by helping the boy with the difficulties in feeding and exhibiting at the fair.

Some of the pig club leaders have discouraged the interest of the children and parents by burdening them with a great amount of theory instead of giving them practical information. This information can be obtained by having the boys visit other projects which have been successful.

The second way we can arouse interest is to point out men who have a thriving hog business as a result of their information and experience gained in pig club work. We have numerous examples. Namely, a prominent judge in Hampshire, the Hampshire premier breeder, the owner of the Chester White grand champion boar at Iowa, the owner of the grand champion pen of barrows at National and many other men who have gained their national reputation through knowledge obtained in pig club work.

Aid in Selection
The third way to secure the interest is first to help the individual when he starts by aiding him in selecting an animal that is good or better than the average market hog. Help the boy to buy an animal which is superior in quality and breeding and one that he will be proud to care for and to show to the public. Some may say that it costs too much to start the project. This is hardly true, since it is safe to say that, as in all type of business we get what we pay for. We seldom get bargains in anything unless the owner does not know the value of what he is selling.

This word value to pig club members needs some explanation. There is no more discouraging feeling among pig club members than when they have to sell their live stock at market prices after having paid above market price for their start. How can the leaders remedy this situation? First, we suggest that our boys be encouraged to produce barrows. One or two boars saved from the litter are sufficient for show purposes. Some one has said, "One can not make anything by raising barrows." I believe that he is mistaken. In examining the period of hog prices, it is evident that the highest selling price is usually in the last part of August and the first part of September. The boy who has fed his barrows will have them finished at proper weight and ready for market at that time. It is also at this time of the year that we have numerous barrow shows, where the pig club boys can exhibit. The premium money won at these shows plus what they get on the market will be equal to what they will receive for them as boars in November. As leader of the Media Raritan community, I have set forth a rule that no boy may sell a boar under $40 or double his market value. This gives the breeder fair competition with the pig club members. Another question that the reader will ask is this: Where can I get good animals for my start? It so happens that the six best breeds of hogs each have a paper, the principle material of each publication being combined into one paper, thereby getting the prominent breeders together in one magazine, namely the Hog Breeder. These men have hogs for sale at private sale or public sales. Those who have the high class animals sell their animals at auction to the highest bidder. This gives the boys a chance to buy a gilt or bred sow with competition among breeders.

Best Breeds
We hear another question debated. Which is the best, a bred sow or an open gilt? The average beginner who has just bought an open gilt must run the risk of selling his animal for farrow to a good boar. The average farmer does not purchase a good enough boar to sire pigs that a breeder would wish to buy. This places the boy at a handicap at the start by not having his gilt or sow mated to a good individual. This trouble could easily be overcome in one of two ways. First, go to a prominent breeder who conducts a bred sow sale and whose sows have been mated to boars which each pig club boy will be proud to have as sire of the pigs that he is raising.

The second way, which is not quite as satisfactory as the first, is the forming of breed associations. (We are using this system since we have been started for two years.) The procedure is for several boys who have the same breed to go together and pool their money to purchase an outstanding boar to mate their sows. This system has advantages and disadvantages. The advantages are that a group is benefited by advertising the individual, they can have a better herd sire, and, lastly, are able to sell surplus stock for breeding purposes. The disadvantages are the central location of the boar so that he will be accessible to all, and that of having some one who will assume responsibility of managing the association. Thus, from personal experience, it seems that the association has been very profitable.

The second point pertains to ability. I believe we can link this with interest in that it takes a combination of both to be successful. Probably the only thing to keep a boy from showing his ability would be a physical defect. Yet we have individuals who are physically fit, but have no ability. When we speak of being physically fit, we think of the boy's health. The health of a boy is very important because if he is unable to do the work demanded by his project, he will soon lose all benefits set up before him by the hog project. Keeping one's health in excellent form makes the mind function more clearly. If the boy is able to think clearly, he will develop ability in his work. This ability when developed, will give him a sense of good judgment which will be very helpful in the completion of his club work, as well as in the success of his future life's work. He will form the habit of performing his duties regularly and punctually. This habit is very essential for success in the hog project.

4-H Members Win Scholarships

Wayne County 4-H Clubbers Eligible for Other Awards

Three outstanding Nebraska 4-H club members have been named winners of scholarships to Nebraska Wesleyan university and Hastings college. The awards, offered by the two institutions, were based on successful participation in the rural educational movement.

Two of the three were each presented with a four-year scholarship valued at $75 per year to Wesleyan. They were Merna Maahs of Lancaster county and Esley Hegwood of Perkins county. Both wrote prize winning essays in the competition together with submitting an outstanding 4-H club record.

Alternates for the Wesleyan scholarships are Lawrence Boydstrom of Saunders county and Imogene Johnson of Hamilton county. Charlotte Anderson of Clay county was awarded the Hastings college scholarship valued at $150. She is one of Nebraska's outstanding 4-H club members. Betty Jean Hansen of Phelps county is the first alternate and Bernice Schroeder of Hall county the second alternate.

Awards to other outstanding 4-H club members are to be made public soon. Canning Contest Winners. A Hamilton county girl, Ethel Marie Biens, won the 1932 4-H canning contest in Nebraska. She received a prize trip, all expenses paid, to the annual club week held on the agricultural college campus in June.

Announcement of the results of the competition have just been received by Agricultural Agent Walter Moller. Ranking state competitors were listed in the bulletin along with county winners. Ball Brothers company awarded prizes. State contest winners in order of their placings: Ethel Marie Biens, Hamilton; Margaret Brown, Douglas; Doris Anderson, Cass; Virginia Short, Red Willow; Viola Boettcher, Otoe; Lucille Otto, Lancaster; Alma Lenore, Butler; Wanda Lorenzen, Antelope; Virginia Armstrong, Deuel; Monetha Newman, York; Ardith Christiancy, Fillmore; Bernice Giernan, Dawes; Margaret Mieth, Hall; Betty Wiensham, Garden; Dorothy Lipke, Cheyenne; Doris Boyle, Kimball.

All the state contest winners previously had won either first or second in their county competition. They exhibited one jar of fruit or berries and one jar of non-acid vegetable. First place county winners received $1 in cash plus jars.

Importance of Chemical Elements in Foods

Written by Mrs. Ferne L. Sund
Various organs of the body and functions have a pronounced influence upon the consumption of certain chemical elements. We should learn how to feed emotion, passion, intellect, sentiment and certain organs and functions in the body. Each physical organ responds to such nutritive material that is peculiar to its needs. Even the brain responds to and improves under that diet which contains such nutritive material as is necessary for the activity of special convolutions according to their various mental functions. The main mineral food elements are: Iodin, Sodium, Potassium, Silicon, Calcium, Lecithin and Fluorin. Iodin and Sodium are very important mineral food elements.

Iodin is an important factor in the neutralization of certain toxic ## substances elaborated within the body. It has been proven that the thyroid gland pours an iodine secretion into the blood stream (if we use food rich in iodine) which prompts the functions to a more vigorous assimilation of Calcium, Silicon, Fluorin, Chlorin and other salts. Iodin or the thyroid secretion, has another function to perform in relation to phosphorus consumption, stirring the brain into more vigorous action and increasing circulatory activity. It also increases the rate of the pulse, increases respiration and the demand for oxygen. Many people are not conscious of the fact that they hunger for iodine. This causes a nervous disposition. It also causes a stiffness in neck muscles, tension in the arms, numbness in the fingers, dryness and perspiration in the palms of the hands and gas generation in the stomach. Foods rich in iodine are: Artichokes, carrots, mushrooms, garlic, pineapple, Bartlett pears, clams, oysters, lobster, lettuce.

Sodium salts arouse secretions. Sodium as well as chlorine and iron are needed in the blood in abundance at all times. They are very essential for bile, saliva, gastric and intestinal juices. Sodium has a beneficial effect on the tissues of the throat and on other tissues if similar nature where there is catarrh present. Its solvent nature helps bronchial phlegm and secretions formed in the canal walls. Sodium salts neutralize acid poisons. It also stimulates the walls of the stomach and those of the intestines. When we hunger for sodium food we become depressed and gloomy. The entire nervous system is under strain, causing anxiety and restlessness. Lack of sodium in food is one cause of spinal meningitis or of the acids and germs preservative of this disease. When sodium salts are lacking the brain and nerves are not supplied with proper vitality, the eye sight suffers, and the person needs spectacles. The eye muscles and the optic nerve do not possess the needed elasticity for the eye movements. The principal sodium foods are: Celery, spinach sprouts, peas, carrots, beets, artichokes, figs, cheese, goat's milk, fish, oysters, sardines, egg yolk, clams and lobsters.

Potassium salts are found in nearly all vegetables and meat. Calcium salts in food develop volitive areas of the brain and increases motor nerve impulses, especially the bone impulse. Milk is rich in calcium.

Sulphur food, little vegetables, heat and moisture set upon the skin or upon the evaporative and respiratory function. If the hair does not receive sufficient quantities of sulphur, keratin and hair oil, the hair roots die, germs thrive at the dying roots and the hair falls.

Silicon is important for the teeth, the hard membranes, the walls of the canals of the body, the outer hard coverings, the skin and other parts. Fluorin is important for the enamel of the teeth and the solidity of the bones. Lecithin is an important nerve element. Nutmeg and egg yolk have a particular effect upon the nerves. Egg yolk contains lecithin and nutmeg carries an oily substance of value for nerve matter. Tired intellectual workers should partake of foods rich in phosphorus and sulphur and certain oily substances needed by brain and nerve cells. Brain fag will then disappear and the intellect (forehead) will ache no longer. Red cabbage, cauliflower, spinach, and radishes are excellent foods for brain workers. Religious or soul emotions respond to and are improved by a vegetable and fruit diet. Emotional, altruistic, and highly spiritual women condemn a meat diet and prefer fruit, vegetables, sweet meats, candy and honey.

The fleshy brunette is fond of food rich in starch, nitrogen and plant pigments and it is these foods that produce the dark complexion peculiar to her. The wide-headed, fair complexioned muscular man is fond of meat and vegetables and thrives on such food. Meat and meat preparations in combination with protein containing vegetables build up ## the muscular system and increases vim and impulse.

The large headed, small bodied, slender, supersensitive, nervous man or woman is fond of delicacies, fruit, fish, tender meat well prepared.

The idealistic lady with tense fiber and volcanic emotions is found of sulphur carrying foods. She knows such food by instinct and craves and relishes it. Sulphur acts upon the skin, hair, nervous systems, liver, complexion and increases, heat and emotion.

Certain mental states, sentiments, emotions and appetites have an important bearing on the consumption, assimilation and distribution of specific chemical elements as well as on the elimination of waste matter from special parts of the body. Were it not for the difference in mind, soul emotion, impulses and powers and were it not for the difference in the physical organs and sensations in a special direction favoring the consumption of a given chemical food element or elements, all people would be alike in complexion, nature, texture, temperament, constitution, talents, sensations, appearance and general characteristics.

Health information should fill its needed and helpful place in every busy life.

TODAY'S RECOMMENDED RECIPE

IS YOUR BIRTHDAY IN FEBRUARY?

Then you have the lovely amethyst for a birthstone. Your flower is the violet. And I'm going to suggest a Pink Birthday Cake as most appropriate for this month of hearts and valentines.

Of course, this luscious-looking Pink Birthday Cake will come to the table aglow with twinkling tiny candles. There are all sorts of interesting ways to arrange them. If the February birthday falls near St. Valentine's Day, you might place them on the cake so they'll outline a heart—providing there are enough or not too many. Interesting metal wreaths with places to insert tiny candles have been designed especially to encircle birthday and other anniversary cakes. They are brought forth for every such occasion—and the candles are arranged far apart or close together, depending on whether sweet sixteen or venerable seventy is being honored.

Some families follow the custom of arranging the candles so they form the numerals of the age of the birthday person. Others, more reticent about mentioning age, bring every birthday cake to the table with the mystical number of seven lighted tapers. Seven for good luck, you know. In another wholly adult family, twenty-one candles for "legal age" adorn each birthday cake.

Which ever candle arrangement is preferred—the birthday person must make a wish and blow out the candles. If all are extinguished at one puff—the wish will come true that very year. But if one or two—or three candles remain lighted—it will be that many years before the wish is fulfilled—so says the tradition.

The first wedge of this particular birthday cake is removed, there will be revealed under the fluffy shell pink icing, a pink layer of cake between two white layers. Beautiful fluffy even-textured layers of deliciousness. Here is the recipe:

- 3/4 cup shortening (part butter for flavor)
- 1 cup sugar
- 3 cups cake flour
- 2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 3 tsp. baking powder
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1 cup thin milk
- 1 tsp. lemon juice
- 1/2 tsp. almond flavoring
- 1/2 tsp. vanilla
- Red vegetable coloring (about 5 drops)
- 6 egg whites
- 1 cup sugar

Cream shortening, add 1 cup sugar gradually and cream thoroughly. Sift flour once before measuring; then sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Stir into creamed mixture alternately with milk (to which the three flavorings have been added). Beat egg whites until they will hold a point. Gradually beat in remaining 1 cup sugar. Continue beating until it makes a stiff and glossy meringue. Fold meringue carefully into the cake batter. Pour one-third of the batter into another bowl and carefully blend in enough red coloring to tint a delicate pink. Pour batter into 3 well greased and floured cake pans—making 1 pink layer and 2 white layers. Bake 25 minutes in a moderate oven, 350° F.

Size of Pans: Three 8-inch layer pans. The Pink Icing which looks like a captured pink sunset cloud has the loveliest fruity tang to it! It's a very special icing that's wonderfully easy to make. No, you don't have to boil a thing! Simply beat two egg whites until they're stiff and then gradually beat in 1 cupful of red jelly. It may be currant, raspberry, cranberry or any other red jelly. The trick is to beat in only about 2 tbsp. at a time. Keep on this way until you've added all the jelly and your icing is smooth and creamy and stiff enough to stand up in peaks. If you want a more intense pink, a little red vegetable coloring may be added. Spread this icing between the layers and over the top of your birthday cake. You'll be amazed to see how much icing two egg whites and one glass of jelly will make. It's a grand icing recipe to have on hand.

Betty Crocker Advises
Question: Can you tell me what the flowers are and the birthstones are for the different months?
Answer: Following is listed the birthstones and flowers for each month in the year:

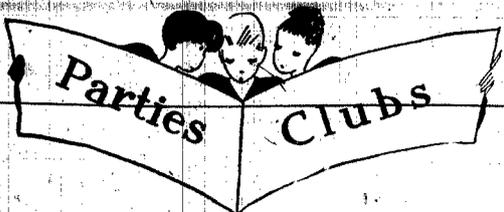

Month	Flower	Birthstone
January	Carnation	Stone

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Harder and Miss Doris Judson of Omaha, spent the week-end visiting their parents and friends.

Bureau Will Have Certified Grain Seeds

Farmers who seed small grains should buy a small amount of certified seed every few years from which to produce their own supply of seed for planting. This seems to be a good sound program for improvement of farm crops and a means of maintaining improved crops on the farm. The Farm Bureau will have samples of certified oats and barley seed for inspection at the Farm Bureau office. This will be seed produced in northeast Nebraska and the price will be in line with the average price of this seed.

Seed Law Requires Purity, Germination Test

The State Seed Law requires that seed advertised for sale must show a purity and germination test by the State Seed Analyst. A sample of approximately a cupful of small grain, sorghum, legume or grass seed and at least 200 kernels of corn is needed for a test. Seed can be sent direct to the State Seed Analyst, State House, Lincoln, or will be sent in by the Farm Bureau office.

Senior Class Sponsors Roller Skating Party

Members of the Senior class of the Wayne High school sponsored a roller skating party for high school members to raise funds for their school annual, the Kaleidoscope. More than 50 students were in attendance. Mervin Pedersen is class sponsor. Ping pong was also played. The party was given Saturday evening in the school gym. Refreshments closed the social evening.

To Give International Fellowship Tea

An international fellowship tea will be given at the Methodist church parlors next Wednesday afternoon in observance of fellowship day being observed throughout the world in all Methodist churches. The tea is being sponsored by the members of the General Methodist Aid and Women's Missionary society. A standing invitation is extended to all women and their friends of the congregation. An instructive and entertaining program is being planned. The program motif will be replica of the blue tea pot given by Josiah Wedgwood to John Wesley.

To Organize Wayne 4-H Pig Clubs

Several pig clubs are to be organized in Wayne County soon and any boy or girl who would like to join the club should either contact the Farm Bureau office or a member of the Farm Bureau advisory board. Club leaders will be organizing the clubs within the next week or two. For those who are intending to purchase a bred sow or gilt for farrowing in March will do well to make the purchase as soon as possible as breeders' herds have been pretty well looked over at this time.

To Attend State Meet

A meeting of the entire Nebraska supervisory staff of the Farm Security Administration will be held at the Cornhusker Hotel at Lincoln next Thursday and Friday, Feb. 10 and 11. For this reason it will be necessary for Ray L. Verzal, Jack M. Jones, and Miss Rena Johnson to be absent from the Wayne and Pierce county office during these days.

Gets School Apportionment

The state school apportionment totaling $3,406.01 was received by the treasurer's office it was announced today. The greatest share of this apportionment comes from interest on school bonds.

Robert Anderson of Tekamah was a week-end houseguest at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. R. Johnson.

Double Ring Ceremony Takes Place at Church of Christ

At a private church wedding, Miss Darlene Bomer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Monta Bomer, and Ernest Splittgerber, son of Hugo Splittgerber were married with Guy B. Dunning, pastor of the Church of Christ, reading the marriage lines. Seventeen guests were in attendance at the double ring ceremony which took place Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Miss Wauncita Bomer, sister of the bride, and Gilbert Dangberg attended the bridal couple.

Preceding the ceremony, Virginia Beckman sang, accompanied by Mrs. Guy B. Dunning at the harp.

The bride was gowned in a powder blue formal fashioned with a full skirt, tight bodice, and high close-fitting collar. She wore a shoulder length veil. At her throat was a gold-rocket, the gift of the bridegroom. Her accessories were gold and she carried a bridal bouquet.

Her attendant wore yellow with gold ornaments in her hair and carried a bouquet of mixed pastel flowers.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of the Wayne High school and attended the Wayne State Teachers college.

Following the ceremony, a wedding supper was served at the Pete Peterson home. The bride's chosen colors of blue and gold were carried out in the table appointments.

Immediately following the young couple left on a short wedding trip. They are at home on a farm southwest of Wayne.

IT'S TRUE WITH ANY PRODUCT

Benjamin Harrison once said, "I pity the man who wants a coat so cheap that the man or woman who produces the cloth shall starve in the process."

In producing good butter it is necessary that the farmer shall be paid a price to allow him to produce good cream; and on down the line the same principle holds true.

The producer, the manufacturer and the distributor must not starve. Nearly all of us fit into the process either as a producer, a manufacturer, or a distributor of something. As consumers we must keep this in mind.

He's An Industrial Worker!

YOU would naturally think of the man operating the tractor as a farmer. And he is a farmer, but he's also an increasingly important figure in the industrial world, not only as a consumer but as a producer. He's engaged in hoeing up a field of soy beans which later, after passing through various factory processes, you'll be using in the form of paint and varnish, soap, linoleum and scores of other products. Consumers Information points out that 91 million pounds of soy bean oil, a comparatively new crop for American farmers, was produced in one recent year. Of this amount, 2 1/2 million pounds went into the soap kettles, 5 million into linoleum and 13 million into paint and varnish. This brand new market for American farmers, who are now growing a large number of industrial as well as food products, has been developed, like many others, through the vast research programs undertaken by American industry, whose laboratories have added untold millions to the national wealth and also thousands of jobs for American workers.

Saturday Night in Japan

COME on in, the water's fine." Bathing in Japan is on a different plane from ours as these two American gentlemen can tell you. Tubs are perpendicular there, instead of horizontal, and you stand in the water up to your neck. But we shouldn't laugh at this somewhat primitive scene, according to Consumers Information, which points out that only a hundred years ago, there were only 1,500 bathtubs in the United States, all of them in Philadelphia, where they had a city water system and taxed each tub $3.00. President Fillmore installed the first tub in the White House in 1850. Advertising of the advantages of convenient and sanitary bathing started 31 years later, has continued increasingly ever since, and has made the United States the cleanest nation on earth. Even the most advanced European nations are far behind us in this respect, and the possession of a bathtub in most countries is a sign not only of opulence but ostentation. The United States is among the few countries generally educated to the knowledge that health and cleanliness go together.

Food Canning Increases

Survey in Four States Includes 1800 Farm Families

In spite of drouth farm women of the Dakotas, Nebraska and Kansas were successful in producing and conserving more food supplies in 1937 according to a report made recently by Conie Foote, regional chief of home economies to Cal A. Ward, regional director of the farm security administration.

The statement was based on a survey of 1,800 farm families in the four states of this region who were operating under home and farm plans worked out when they applied for FSA loans. Reports came in from practically every county of the region so is not a sectional report, she added.

"One of the first steps to security for the farm family is the production and conservation of enough food to fill most of their needs," Miss Foote pointed out. "The plans include an adequate garden plot, irrigation facilities wherever possible, canning and storage facilities, and meat production as well as means to can and cure it."

Of the families surveyed 98 per cent produced gardens for home use and 47 per cent increased the amount of fruits and vegetables raised in 1937 over 1936. Approximately half of the 1,800 families were able to produce the amounts of fruits and vegetables set forth in their home plans, which was quite remarkable, Miss Foote said, in view of the fact that many gardens were completely destroyed during the hot weather. Twenty-four per cent provided irrigation facilities for their gardens, while 10 per cent repaired or built storage cellars during the past year. Adequate storage space for food was reported by 80 per cent.

In conserving the fruits and vegetables 87 per cent reported progress with 73 per cent conserving more than in 1936. An average of 119 quarts of fruits and vegetables were canned per family—60 quarts more per family than a year ago. The average number of pounds of fruits and vegetables stored per family was 514, an increase of 140 pounds over the previous year.

"One reason for this was that farm security administration supervisors urged planting of large er early gardens," Miss Foote pointed out. "In many cases families were able to can vegetables out of their early gardens before the drouth set in, whereas had they waited for later gardens they would have had nothing to can."

Eighty-six per cent of the families reporting produced meat for home use, 52 per cent reporting an increase over last year. The average number of pounds of meat produced per family was 404—83 pounds more than in 1936. One hundred fifty-one pounds of meat were canned per family, on the average, the report shows, which was 46 pounds more than in the previous year.

Practically all these farms produced dairy products for their home use, 38 per cent showing an increase over the previous year and 80 per cent showing production adequate for their home needs. Poultry reports showed approximately the same results, with 98 per cent raising poultry, 32 per cent increasing production over 1936 and 75 per cent producing enough for their home use.

While the report does not nearly include all rehabilitation clients of the farm security administration it is indicative of the trends in home planning and shows what the FSA home supervisors are trying to accomplish. It will serve as a basis for home plans this spring.

Fireproof Fabrics By Simple Method

Dip Materials in Borax Boric Acid Solution for Protection

Fabrics can be fireproofed and made safer for clothing and house furnishings by a simple and inexpensive home process of dipping them in a colorless liquid, a solution of seven ounces of borax and three ounces of boric acid in five gallons of water.

This treatment, says Dr. Martin Leatherman, of the bureau of chemistry and soils, United States department of agriculture, will not protect fabrics from injury by flame or intense heat, but it will prevent the fabric from bursting into flame, and spreading fires that endanger life or cause the destruction of homes.

The borax-boric acid solution may be applied by dipping fabrics until they are thoroughly moistened, then wringing out the excess and allowing them to dry. Treated cloth may be ironed just before it is dry. Or the solution may be applied by sprinkling or spraying the fabric enough to moisten it. This method is likely to be more convenient for rugs, draperies, and upholstered articles. Addition of a little soap will make the treatment more effective for canvas and other textiles that do not wet easily.

A copy of Fireproofing Fabrics, farmers' bulletin 1786, may be obtained by writing the office of information, United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Fireproofed fabrics are particularly desirable for curtains and hangings in the home which are likely to be blown against lamps or candles, for the coverings of ironing boards, for rugs near fireplaces, and even for children's play suits. The solution is not weatherproof, and articles that are washed, such as curtains and play suits, will have to be fireproofed after each washing. The treatment does not affect the textile colors and does not injure the fabric. It does have a slight protective effect in counteracting the destructive effect of acid and sulphur fumes from stoves and furnaces.

In fireproofing fabrics, Dr. Leatherman gives detailed directions for the borax-boric acid treatment and also mentions three other useful formulas for fireproofing certain insulating materials. He also mentions several fireproofing processes developed in the bureau of chemistry and soils and protected by public service patents, but these are more complicated and not practical for home use.

Mountains Brought Closer To Seashore

THE people in the picture above seem to have both the mountains and the seashore within, surprisingly easy reach. In the light of modern automotive improvements, however, it is not as untold as it might seem for widely separated resorts to appear close together.

As a matter of fact, remarkably good beaches seem far away with practically like that offered in each of the Ivory soap contests' sixty best prizes. Being awarded in a series of six weekly contests running from January 23 through March 5, each first prize consists of a Studebaker Six Four-Door Sedan equipped with a Philco custom built radio, and includes 1,000 gallons of Texaco gasoline. As supplementary awards, $1,200 in cash prizes are offered.

This unusual contest will put the seashore, the mountains, and many other popular places practically into the back yards of sixty families before the spring.

HOWARD HEINZ, President, H. J. Heinz Company (left) closes contract with Grover Whalen (right) for 53,093 square feet at New York World's Fair on which the food concern will erect a unique building.

"Knowing your enthusiasm about the World's Fair," remarked Mr. Whalen, "I am confident you will organize an exhibit which will rank as one of its main attractions."

"We shall hope to develop something of unusual interest," declared Mr. Heinz.

Mrs. Wade, Wm. Woehler to Represent Precinct on Advisory Board

A large crowd attended the Brenna Get-Together held at School District No. 61 Thursday evening. This meeting, sponsored by the Wayne County Farm Bureau, was of considerable interest to farm families in Brenna Precinct as was evidenced by the 150 people that attended. A program of entertainment consisting of musical numbers by Marian Frahm, Pete Smith and the Rhythm Band, a one-act play by Brenna young people, a one-act play by the Brenna Circle Project club, a reading by Bonnie Jo Martin and film strips on tree plantings in Nebraska and soil erosion in Nebraska by County Agent Walter Moller was presented. Alfred Sydow, chairman of the Wayne County Farm Bureau spoke briefly on the purposes and functions of the Wayne County Farm Bureau and asked that one man and one woman be elected to represent Brenna Precinct on the Farm Bureau Advisory Board. As a result of the election Mrs. Earl Wade and William Woehler was elected to serve on this Farm Bureau Advisory Board. They with other members of the Advisory Board will be asked to meet occasionally with the Executive Board of the Wayne County Farm Bureau and represent Brenna Precinct. Members of the Advisory Board should be contacted by farm families regarding projects to be carried on by the County Farm Bureau or any problems which they wish to be brought before the Executive Board. Following the program a lunch, prepared by members of Project and 4-H Club members, was served.

Similar meetings to the Brenna Get-Together will be held in all precincts in the county.

1938 Ford V-8 Standard Tudor Sedan

MOST popular of all the Ford V-8 body types is the standard Tudor sedan, shown above. A longer hood, more sweeping lines and newly-designed front end, grille, louvers, fenders and hubcaps are featured. The car is available either with 85 horsepower or 60 horsepower V-8 engine. Interiors are attractively appointed. The front seat is full width. The seat back is divided. The sections are hinged diagonally and swing inward as they are tipped forward so as to leave a wide passageway on either side for entrance to the rear seat. Like all Ford body types the Tudor sedan has a large built-in luggage compartment. The standard cars are engineered for owners who demand the maximum of economy in first cost and operating cost.

Fruit Salad for the Luncheon Or Supper Main Course

By BETTY BARCLAY

Salad bowls should not be confined to summer alone. They are even more valuable in winter when fresh fruits and vegetables are less plentiful. They help supply the daily ration of vitamins and minerals so necessary for optimum health. Especially valuable in these combinations are the citrus fruits, since they are available in fresh form the year around. Combined with other fruits in season, they make possible delicious and nourishing salads for every day in the year and all types of occasions. Try this menu for Sunday night supper or a bridge luncheon or even surprise the family with it for luncheon or supper any day.

Beverage
Fresh Fruit Salad Bowl

The newest fashion in Fruit Salad Bowls keeps fruits separate. Greens afford contrast and background. For the salad pictured, wash and dry carefully one or more varieties of fresh crisp greens such as romaine, lettuce, watercress, endive, chicory, escarole. Arrange attractively in a salad bowl. Place on the greens in definite groups:

- 4 crescents of avocado, pear or peach, sprinkled with lemon juice to prevent discoloration
1 long banana slices, sprinkled with lemon juice
Whole, unbulled strawberries, if available
Arrange these to give a good contrast in color, texture and shape. In serving, see that each one receives a portion of each fruit. (Serves 4.) Serve with:
Lemon Mayonnaise
1 egg
1/2 cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon mustard
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
Dash of pepper or paprika
Beat in slowly, using whirl-type beater
1 pint salad oil
Beat until dressing is thick.
Banbury Tarts
Cut small squares from pie pastry. Put a spoonful of Lemon Mincemeat in center. Fold over to make triangle. Crimp edges. Bake in a quick oven.
Lemon Mincemeat
1/2 cup lemon juice
1 cup raisins, scalded, drained and chopped
3 cups finely chopped apple
1/2 cup chopped nuts
1/2 cup orange marmalade
2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon ginger
1/2 cup melted butter
Combine ingredients.

Too late she realized her only chance would have been to run—run at the first instant of attack. But already Blackadder's arms were descending past her hips to her knees; they closed, lifted her, hung her like a sack over his shoulder. If only she could get at the buttons! But she was lying on them and all he need do to keep her that way was to tilt her knees upward.

He did it twice, and that was enough to cure her. He was strong; she had never imagined a man could be so strong.

She felt him step off the pier and creep along its side until he reached the edge of the water. Immediately he sank halfway to his knees but persevered, making his way toward the right. Once he reached and turned the angle of the hacienda's outer wall he knew where he was; now all he had to do was to keep in touch with that wall, follow it so closely no eye from the ramparts above could spy him. As Joyce struggled the cloth of the coat grew hot and soggy against her face. Promptly she quieted and bent every effort to getting a little air by turning her head this way and that. She must think, and to think she must breathe. After all, this was only Helm Blackadder in the grip of an insane conviction he was doing his duty as decreed by God and Irma Sewell. Why be frightened?

She was aware of locality until he slowed almost to a complete halt, released the pressure of his right arm to take a grip on one of the hand ropes and ventured a cautious foot over the edge. An oscillation she realized her chance had come at last; once started down that treacherous incline no longer would he dare practice the trick of raising her knees. She tore at the buttons, freed one hand; quickly she untied the sleeves, threw back her head and screamed for help at the top of her voice.

"Leonardo! Tobalito! Accudete! Dirk, Dirk, oh, Dirk!"

Blackadder clamped his left arm like a vise and kept on. He was at his last gasp, thoughts racing no madly through his brain he scarcely heard her cry. Why was he here? What was he doing? What did he care whether Joyce stayed or went? Hot sweat was pouring down his back, yet an icy crust was forming on his forehead! What a fool he had been to think he could cross this bridge carrying a wildcat in his arms—a wildcat that had seemed a feather at the start and now weighed a ton!

But there was something indomitable in him—some bulldog quality that made him the slave of an idea once he had sunk his teeth in it and drove him on to domination whatever the cost. It explained much—why he was here and why he couldn't quit.

The floor of splines beneath his feet was rising—for an instant it had been level, now it was steep. He was winning—winning through. He looked up and saw a bulky shadow reaching out to relieve him of his burden. He had won! But only Dorado's left hand seized on Joyce; his right crashed into Blackadder's face, sending him hurtling backward. He tumbled, rolled. He could feel his nails breaking as they clawed vainly on the corrugated surface of the splices. His arms thrashed out. One of them struck against a rope and for his very life he wound it on his wrist. Fury blinded him; now to climb back, bury his thumbs in Dorado's double-crossing throat and—

At that moment all four anchor ropes at Dorado's end were slashed and Blackadder knew an instant of horror as the bridge fell. Treachery, and now death! But what saved him was the very depth of the gorge. The severed bridge acted as a bumper as it slammed against the opposite cliff, its dangling end reaching less than halfway down. Shaken off, torn by thorns, cut by the shale, bruised against boulders, he rolled to the bottom. Then silence—minutes of silence before he commenced to groan. Presently a frenzied voice called down at him.

"What's the matter? Who are you down there? What happened?"

Immediately there were other excited voices. Under Leonardo's direction two of the severed ropes were hastily knotted into one, another added, and Tobalito was descending backward, his bare toes seizing like hands on grip after grip. Having tied the end of the rope under the injured man's shoulders he ascended almost as fast as he had gone down and helped haul Blackadder to the top. Dirk leaned over him.

"Blackadder! You? What happened? Where's Joyce?" He took hold of his shoulder and shook it. "Answer! Where's Joyce?"

CHAPTER XIV

Joyce, seized by an arm, had been dragged forward so violently she would have fallen face down had not the same hand supported her and set her on her feet. She heard a low laugh and looked up into Dorado's unforgettable face. Nightmare—this was nightmare. He was laughing at the trick of the coat. Now he repeated it with modifications. No longer need it cover her head; let her yell all she liked. Also it was secured in place not with the buttons but by the simple expedient of a latjat wrapped around her from shoulder to waist, leaving enough loose end to bind her to the man with whom she must ride. No sooner was the operation completed than the cavalcade set off, Dorado in the lead, she at the extreme rear. Already lights were showing and people coming on the run from the hacienda, but if any shots were fired she would get them first.

Dorado convinced Blackadder's mouth was closed forever, saw no reason to hurry. The half dozen horses ambled along at a running walk, giving Joyce time to think, too much time, time enough to grow afraid.

Had she really witnessed Helm Blackadder's murder and the destruction of the bridge, or was it part of this ghastly dream? Oh, if only it could be a dream! An hour passed. Her knees grew chafed, burned and then turned numb with the pain. She swayed and would have fallen had she not been tied to the man before her, but the worst was yet to come. With the descent of the switchback path, owing to the changing of the angle of pressure, agony returned fourfold. She broke down and wept, sobbing whimperingly in her abject misery.

As relief had come to Blackadder on the level stretch from the path to the camp, so it came to her. But it was not complete.

An hour passed and she found herself released of her bonds and stretched on the army cot in Dorado's quarters. Then it surged over her. Nothing but divine rest mattered—nothing. Her eyes shut with almost a click and she slept. When she woke a fine fire was burning at the entrance to the drift and by its light she saw Dorado seated on a camp stool near by, watching her out of half-closed eyes. As hers opened wide his did also. He smiled but said nothing. They looked at each other for a long time and the longer the silence lasted the more did Joyce feel her heart grow tight and small in her breast. What magic word could save her? But it was he who spoke first.

"You frightened, hein?"

"Talk in Spanish," said Joyce, surprised she could speak at all. "It will be easier for both of us."

Promptly his heavy face brightened and he became voluble. "Ah, that's a better, much better. In castellano I can talk, tell you things, explain how simply and easily everything can be arranged if only you turn out to be as reasonable as you are beautiful."

"I don't feel beautiful," said Joyce shortly, straightening on the cot and brushing herself. "I'm thirsty—terribly thirsty."

"Ah, forgive!" cried Dorado. He turned and showed, an order. A man came running with a pannikin of water fresh from the brook and scarcely had she drained it before another retainer appeared carrying a tin plate heaped with food. "It's a molle de guajalote," said Dorado, proudly. "Knowing you were to be my guest I ordered it especially for you."

At first Joyce merely toyed with the most famous of Mexican dishes but presently hunger triumphed over anxiety and she began really to eat.

Slowly, then more slowly, for the longer each mouthful lasted the more time she gained to think. But somehow thinking didn't seem to do much good; perhaps talking—saying anything at all—would be better.

"What do you want?" she asked. "Muncy? La Barranca? What?"

"You," said Dorado briefly, smiled and waited.

"That's impossible," said Joyce after a pause. "Nobody can take me—no while I'm alive. That probably sounds silly, but I mean it."

"You make a great mistake," said Dorado pleasantly. "Two mistakes. It is not so easy to die as you think, also you would be no use to me dead. I wish you only kindness and goodness, and a long life as the Senora Pepe Dorado." He paused. "We will enjoy La Barranca together."

She stared at him over the half empty plate, set it aside on the cot but retained the three-lined steel fork. With a single sweeping movement, unbelievably swift, he leaped forward and struck the murderous weapon from her hand so violently it went flying out into the night.

"You want things to be unpleasant, hein?" he cried, his eyes flashing. "Good. From now on you eat with your fingers like the peones. You don't sleep in here where there's plenty of air, no! You sleep inside in the dark—no fire, no air, nothing. Me, I stay here and ten men more."

"All right," said Joyce, a faint light of hope dawning in her eyes. "Can I go now?"

"Yes, now," said Dorado, calming himself by a mighty effort. "Perhaps tomorrow when the priest comes you'll have more sense."

"What good would that do you?" asked Joyce quickly. "You know as well as I no marriage by a priest is legal in Mexico."

"No? You know so much, eh? Then you know that for the world the church is everything." Again he calmed himself by a mighty effort.

"Summation you won't mind so much the civil ceremony." Again he called and the same two men came back to carry cot, mattress and blankets into the innermost room. He followed, waving a brand from the fire into a flaming torch and propelling Joyce before him. He pointed with his chin along the farther reaches of the drift. "Perhaps you think you can climb out that way. Try it and I give you for a present to the men who catch you."

Left alone in darkness Joyce crept to the cot but not to lie down. Dragging a blanket over her shivering shoulders she sat on its edge; elbows on knees and her chin copped in her hands. It was no good thinking—no good at all—but she could listen, keep on listening. How often had she boasted to herself she was afraid now; fear seemed to melt her bones and set the teeth in her head to chattering. Another sound came to her ears, a single snore and soon after a veritable chorus. There was something actually comforting in the harsh dissonance and the longer it continued the more did it soothe her. Presently she fell sideways, stretched out and tumbled into unconsciousness. She awoke to the fiare of a wax match. So it was here—she had slept and the terror was upon her! Her throat thickened and closed tight as she discerned Blackadder's eyes, cavernous and glowing. Not the end after all, she thought drowsily, thank God only another dream. But his whisper took on form, became actual words.

"Joyce, don't make a sound. Listen. Do you see this rope? Wait. I'll light another match. Now look. I'm going to tie the end of it around your waist for safety, but the rest will be up to you." The second match went out but the whisper kept on. "Take the rope in your hands. That's it. Now follow it. Walk as quietly as you can, test out each step before you put down your foot. Just follow wherever it leads." His hands brushed across hers, seized the rope and gave it three sharp pulls.

"Good-by, Joyce."

"Good-by."

She had answered automatically but now something in the manner of his final whisper troubled her and she frowned but presently was intent on carrying out his orders to the letter. She had gone quite a distance before she noticed there was no slack. Even her bemused mind knew what that meant; somebody of the other end was taking it in. Suddenly the rope slanted upward so sharply she stumbled and fell to her knees. She was up again in a moment and stood quite still, wondering if the sound of her fall had been heard. Apparently not. She continued, resting more and more weight on the rope as the climb grew steeper. Several yards of the ascent were behind her when a stone that had seemed firm sank away and went rumbling downward. The next instant the roar of a dozen voices reverberated far down, far behind her, so the very earth seemed to shake. Then three lonely shots. Then an answering deafening volley. Now she knew why Helm Blackadder's good-by had lingered so strangely in her ears.

The rope was lifting her, dragging her upward faster than she could place her feet. Her knee struck here, an elbow there, and sometimes her shoulders dug into the hard beams of the raft. Breath went out of her, stayed out. Her hands still clung to the rope, but with a grip like the grasp after death. Her head drooped between her arms, struck and struck again. So this—not that other—was to be the end.

Dirk knelt beside her. "Joyce! For God's sake, Joyce! You've got to speak! Oh, Joyce, wake up, Darling, we've got to get away, you've got to ride!"

"Let up on it," advised Leonardo sharply. "Can't you see she's passed out? Get on your horse, senor, and take her. Hurry!"

Dirk mounted Tronido. "I'm ready; what are you waiting for? What are you doing?"

"You never can tell," said Leonardo, pausing to knot a tie to the rein to one of the thorn trees. "There's a bare chance the senor who went below may crawl out of this hole alive and if he does he's going to find a horse. Tobalito?"

"Give me a hand with the senorita."

Together they lifted Joyce and placed her in Dirk's arms. Sitting on the ridge of the cante he gave her all the saddle he could and trembled for fear Tronido might act badly under the unaccustomed burden, but the horse seemed to know exactly what it was all about. They started. Tobalito as guide in the lead, Dirk next and Leonardo, armed, bringing up the rear. A whinny from the tethered range pony rang out sharply across the desert air. Startled, Tobalito put spurs to his flea-bitten mount. Dirk found a trot galling, but was at ease the minute Tronido reached out into the cradle-like motion of his swinging center. He shifted Joyce so her head lay against his shoulder, passed the reins to his right hand and with his left held her knees securely. Though her coma persisted he knew she lived by the faint tremor of her breathing and because while at first she had seemed rigid and cold now he could feel his own warmth gradually stealing into her veins.

But he was troubled about something else. "Leonardo," he called over his shoulder. "Do you really think there's a chance Blackadder's still alive?"

"None, senor; he did not wish to live."

"Why do you say that?" Leonardo rode closer, not caring to shout his answer. "He really died when he came to after we'd pulled him out at the place of the fallen bridge. He spoke and told us all, but I could see it was a dead man talking."

"Are you loco?" asked Dirk. "No, for I've seen it happen before," said Leonardo. "With some men pride takes the place of blood and bone; destroy it and they die. It was so with him. His tongue talked but only to tell us of his shame; I could see his heart, and eyes were dead. He knew he could never return to his ancient path, never walk upright except to death. So he died. God and the Virgin rest his soul."

"Then why did you leave the horse?" asked Dirk. "Do you expect a miracle?"

"No," said Leonardo hesitatingly, distressed at being driven into a show of his secret thoughts, "though in my country miracles have often happened. I think I was moved, senor, in the manner of my ancestors, to make a living sacrifice to the memory of a brave man."

Dirk imagined a faint stirring within the burden in his arms, something vaguely different from the mere persistence of life. He peered down at Joyce's face, tilted against his right shoulder, and studied it in the light of the stars. It seemed deathly pale, a patch of moonlight—mere reflection of a far-away reflection. Her eyes were closed and her lips, though half open, never stirred. He spoke to her.

"Joyce, you aren't awake, are you? Can you hear me? Just move something—your hand or your lips. Show you hear me."

There was no answer by sound or sign, nevertheless so strong a feeling of content pervaded him he could not doubt all would yet be well. Tobalito knew better than to follow the barranca too closely; he made a detour through little-used paths known to few but himself. The pace slowed from a canter to a walk and Dirk, glad his companions knew no English, began to talk.

"Joyce, I love you. Whether you can hear me or not doesn't matter in the least since anyway I'll be telling it to you over and over again.

I don't know when it began or where it will end, and I don't care. I'm part of you and you of me. There's nothing cheeky in what I'm saying, really there isn't, because it's just something that's happened and can't be helped. I love you. I belong to you the way your hand belongs. You can do anything you like with me except cut me off. If you do that, you'll bleed—bleed to death."

Abruptly his face leaned lower, nearer to hers. "Oh, that's nonsense!" he cried. "How do I know? What makes me think you'll bleed? How can I keep on believing it if you don't say so? Oh, Joyce, darling, please speak, please tell me. How can you be so near my heart and not answer it? I can feel your arms and it's still—so still it's almost as if it weren't beating at all. But you can't be dead since I still live. My blood is your blood. Everything I was, everything I'm going to be, has rushed into this moment with you in my arms. Because I love you—I love you."

Tobalito debouched suddenly from the shadowy recesses of an arroyo and came to a halt with Dirk beside him; Leonardo drew level. In plain view, only a few hundred yards away, stood the white mass of La Barranca. To the right was the towering-blot of trees, melting into the inky expanse of the lake clothed with hyacinths. To the left stretched the illimitable prairie, marked here and there with the black candelabra and exclamation points of cacti. No light showed from the hacienda, yet they knew eyes were watching from every angle as they advanced toward the eastern gate. It swung open at their approach and they entered. Promptly it slammed shut behind them.

Luz took command of Joyce, still inert, and thrust Dirk back when he attempted to follow. Adan Arnaudo, gloomy because poor horsemanship had prevented his joining the rescuing expedition, led him to Don Jorge in his office where he was greeted with the news a courier had come through from Mexico City and tossed dispatches for himself and Blackadder across the now impassable barranca. Dirk opened the long envelope bearing his name with some trepidation and was relieved to find it a personal missive, written in the ambassador's own hand.

"My dear Van Suttart," he read, "at last word has reached me through General Onelia of your whereabouts. For your diligence in following out to the letter the instructions in a certain cable from the department you are to be com-

Nationally Known Fashion Authority

CONCERNING styles and fashions, women desire only that information which they know is authentic. They demand accurate reporting of the new clothing trends, with candid portrayals of the described garments through truthful illustrations. They seek the correct, the latest and finest—but never the bizarre, the extreme or sensational. They wish their fashion writer to speak of smartness and good taste, of what is practical for the average woman, and [a very important item] of garments and hats they can find in their own local stores and shops.

Small wonder, therefore, that women turn confidently to Cherie Nicholas, whose illustrated fashion articles appear regularly in this newspaper. Miss Nicholas tells what the nation's foremost designers and creators of fine styles decree shall be right for the weeks to come.

couldn't have stayed unconscious all that time—you must have heard."

"But what was it you said?" she insisted, looking him full in the eyes.

"Did you I loved you," stammered Dirk desperately.

"Was that all?"

"No, I said a lot of things. I think I said some of them over and over again."

"What were they?"

He knelt in silence, looking into her grave eyes. His hand dropped hers, the arm he had thrown across her waist grew lax. His head fell forward.

"I don't know," he whispered. "I've forgotten. I can't remember a word."

So swiftly he never knew how it happened her arms were around his neck and she had drawn his head down against her breast.

"Oh, Dirk, darling, of course I heard! I heard all you said and a lot more. It wasn't only your arms that were around me, it was your thoughts—I lay in them and dreamed. I felt safe and happy, glad to be sure I'd bleed if ever I cut you off. You kissed me once in your way, now I kiss you in mine. I'm kissing you with my heart against your face."

A dull boom rent the air and trailing it came a weird howl that passed over the house; there followed a rending of branches in the outer garden and then a terrific explosion. Dirk leaped to his feet and stood transfixed. Joyce sank back against the pillows; wide eyes staring at him questioningly. All the hacienda stirred into life with the hum of a threatened swarm of bees. Shouts were heard, presently punctuated by the thump of Don Jorge's approaching staff. Joyce half rose, her shoulders gleaming white but strong above the yoke of her filmy nightdress. Abruptly she seemed no longer too small to be a queen.

"That was no earthquake," she stated; "it was a gun—a cannon."

"The Harbor Horror"

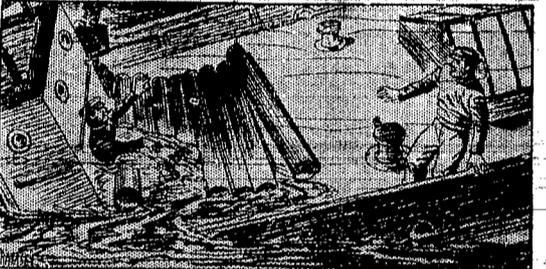

HELLO EVERYBODY: Frank V. Hann of Hackensack, N. J., is with us today, to tell us the story of the shortest sea voyage he ever made.

It was at Halifax, on October 28, 1929, that the cruise started. Frank was first mate of the steamer "Larking," which was due to sail that night.

The pipe arrived and the gang started loading it on the after deck. That pipe was to give Frank Hann the most terrible moments of his life.

It Was a Bad Night for Navigation. The ship finally got under way, but darkness shut down just as they cleared the dock.

Then, suddenly, the officer on watch spied a small light directly ahead. He called Captain Williams' attention to it and the captain, after studying it for several seconds, made out a dark mass on the water.

Williams Was... Search House.

The ship's whistles were blown to signal the tug. The captain figured—and rightly—that he would clear the tug by thus altering his course.

The captain ordered, "full speed astern," but that helped mightily little. Before the momentum of the ship could be checked they struck the hawser between the first and second screws.

Big Hole Below the Water Line. "For a moment," Frank says, "we were all stunned. Captain Williams shouted to me: 'Get below, Mr. Hann, and see how badly we've been hit and how much water we're taking.'"

Nothing in the world would save that ship. The boats were lowered and the crew clambered in. Frank and the captain were just about to get in themselves, when the captain remembered his papers and went back to get them.

"The captain had just come out of the pilot house," says Frank, "and clambered down the ladder to the deck, when suddenly the ship gave a sickening lurch, and Williams was thrown against the deck house.

Captain Williams' Terrible Plight. "I saw Williams pinned to the deck house up to his knees by tons of iron pipe.

Then followed a scene that Frank will never forget. Tears were streaming down Captain Williams' face, and his cries were terrible to hear.

The water was up to their chests now. The ship would go under any moment. The water began covering the Captain's face. Still he hung on.

The bitter fistle feud between Champion Freddy Steele of Tacoma, Wash., and Fred Apostoli of Fred Apostoli, called the uncrowned king of the middleweights.

San Francisco growing out of their recent non-title battle in New York when the challenger knocked the champion cold is a case in point. It recalls the lusty era when Stanley Ketchel, Billy Papke, Joe Thomas, "Cyclone" Johnny Thompson, Hugo Kelly, Kid McCoy and a lot more of like importance filled ring history with epic battles and their pockets with ready coin.

Steele and Apostoli will fight for the championship in Seattle in the spring. They will probably fight several times more before the books are finally closed. They will have other opponents, too, such as Young Corbett III, Glen Lee, Lou Brouillard, Solly Krieger, Jack McAvoy, Marcel Thil of France and a couple of job lot invaders from England.

Ketchel Becomes King

Perhaps the most interesting era of the middleweights was when a young coal miner named Stanley Ketchel came out of Butte, Mont., back in 1907 and announced that he intended to fight his way through a group of tough battlers to the top. Nobody paid much attention to him until one night in San Francisco he knocked out Joe Thomas.

Ketchel was matched with the Sullivan twins, Mike and Jack, and he flattened them both. He immediately became a sensation. Then a young brawler named Billy Papke came out of Kewanee, Ill. People called him the "Thunder-bolt." Ketchel fought him in Milwaukee and won after ten rounds.

Ketchel went back to San Francisco, where he stopped Hugo Kelly, who had claimed the title. He beat Thomas again and then once more took Papke on. This time it was different. Ketchel had not bothered to train and he was badly beaten.

Less than two months later Ketchel did something few fighters had ever done before. He came back and defeated the man who had taken his title from him. Ketchel went on as king of the middleweights and even fought Jack Johnson for the heavyweight belt. Outweighed, he lost after a furious battle. Late in 1910 Ketchel was shot and killed on a Missouri ranch.

Papke again claimed the title. He knocked out Willie Lewis to prove his right to the throne, "Cyclone" Johnny Thompson of Sycamore, Ill., beat Papke in Australia. Then in 1913 came a parade of good fighters to keep the middleweight tradition popular. They were Jimmy Clabby, Frank Klaus, Eddie McGoorty, Jack Dillon, and George Chip.

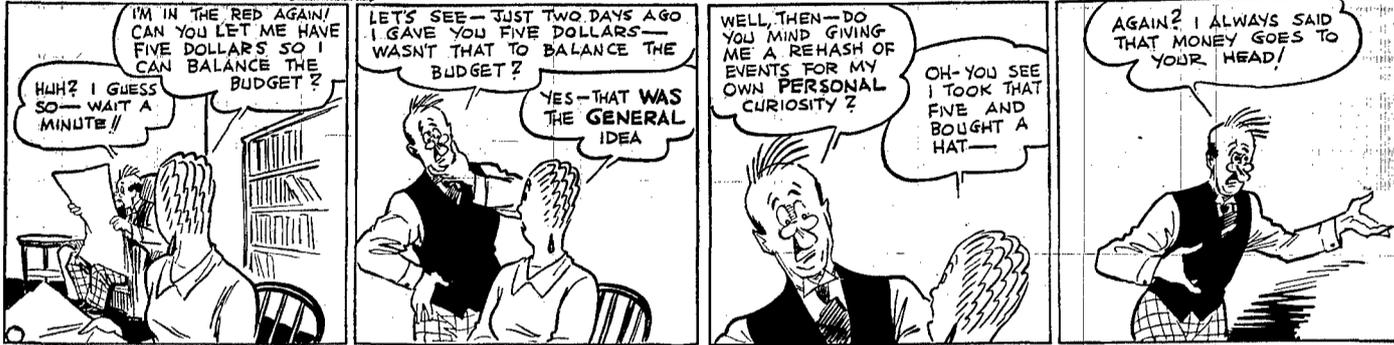

Following the reign of these titans came Mike Gibbons, known as the uncrowned king and some fair middleweights. Then the division slipped because of lack of high class competitors, although Mickey Walker and Harry Greb were exceptions. Now it appears there is a splendid chance that there will be another era like that in the days of Ketchel and Papke.

Steele and Apostoli probably come nearer being a Ketchel and Papke type of fighters than the ring has seen since their day.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field
FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington.—Business men anxious to have their tax burdens made less hampering are apt to blame the tax situation for the failure of new capital to rush into new enterprises, and thus provide employment. There is another reason, perhaps less important, but nevertheless affecting a good many hundreds of millions of possible investment funds, which has not been mentioned either inside the New Deal or, publicly at least, by the critical forces outside.

Billions of dollars of securities, just as sound on the average as those which are listed on the New York or other stock exchanges, are virtually "sterilized" by the regulations of the securities and exchange commission. They are in virtually the same situation as the sterilized gold which the government has withdrawn from the financial structure and buried in the Kentucky strong-box.

In the case of the sterilized gold, the government cannot count it in any of its credit calculations. Notes may not be issued against it. It cannot even be counted on as a reserve fund, in the banking sense. It is still the government's property, of course, but it is like an asset of no intrinsic value in the possession of an applicant for a bank loan. The banker simply passes over that without letting it enter into his calculations.

In the case of these sterilized billions, there are securities which are not listed on the stock exchanges.

In the days before the SEC, if a customer walked into a broker's office and wanted to buy, say, a hundred shares of steel, the broker was able to exercise a good deal of discretion as to what the customer must put up. The rule of the stock exchange, of course, was ten points, though this was often disregarded. That would be $1,000 on a hundred shares, with the understanding that if the stock went down the customer would have to keep putting up margin in order to maintain this ten-point protection for the broker.

Leeway for Broker

But this ten points, or margin, need not be put up in cash! It could be put up in securities. That is where the broker had plenty of leeway. Determination rested on his judgment. Shares in a little local manufacturing company, or department store, or dairy, or what-not, were "just as good" as cash.

But then came the SEC, not only with high margin rulings, but with the additional ruling that only listed stocks, that is stocks traded on the approved stock exchanges, can be counted as margin.

Now most people agree that margin trading is just a form of gambling and should be discouraged. That is why there has been no public outcry against this "sterilization" for stock account purposes, of unlisted stocks.

But unfortunately for some little enterprises which badly need capital and whose problem is actually worrying the SEC, the thing goes further than that. A, B, and C have a moth-ball factory in X. They have prospered, and would like to build a big addition, which would put several hundred men to work for many months, and then increase their regular force permanently.

It is a corporation, but, although prosperous, nobody is anxious to buy stock in it, so, especially as they have not built up a reserve—and this would be increasingly true under the tax on undistributed earnings—they simply cannot raise the capital.

Why do not the speculators who know about their enterprise want to invest with A, B, and C? Because their funds at once become frozen. They cannot use them as the base for any new venture that may turn up. And, of course, banks have come to dislike unlisted stocks for collateral loans.

Premature Perkins

So confident is Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins that her department will have the administration of the wages and hours regulation law when it is enacted, that she has had several talks with her own candidate for administrator.

In fact the conversations occurred several days prior to the action of the house labor committee in reporting out the bill. Which is so interesting in that the house committee action was rather a surprise to most members of the house.

It is also interesting because every one in touch with the situation knows that the biggest stumbling block to passage of the wage-hour bill has been the difficulty in agreeing on who would administer the law. And despite the house committee action, this problem has not been solved.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, made it perfectly clear that he did not want the administration vested in any board that President Roosevelt might appoint. He left nothing to the imagination in stating his objections. He feared such a board might lean as strongly to John L. Lewis' C. I. O., as he contended the labor relations board has done.

Not only Green, but Lewis and many members of congress have been strongly opposed to putting the administration in the hands of Secretary Perkins.

Want Some Bill

Nothing will do any bill any good until there is a majority of the house willing to vote for it, or, at least, preferring to vote for it rather than against it.

Definite progress has been made on what might be termed the main issue of the wage-hour bill. There is far more will to pass it than was the case when it was pigeon-holed before. Quite a number of members of the house, who privately wanted the bill killed and would have used any available excuse to help kill it, now have changed their attitude. They want some bill passed.

So the extreme possibility today is that some wages and hours regulation measure will become law before the present session adjourns, always remembering that the bill has passed the senate, so that it will not have to be thrown open to debate in the greatest deliberative body in the world, providing it can be gotten through before the present congress expires next January.

One little factor that contributed to the change in sentiment on the main issue was the Alabama primary. Various complications hurt Tom Heflin—his illness, his past performances, including his bolt of the Democratic party in 1923, etc. But the fact that Lister Hill made wage-hour regulation one of his paramount issues, and defeated Heflin two to one for the United States senate was impressive to most Southerners who had thought their section against such control.

Radio and Newspapers

President Roosevelt is determined to accomplish the divorce of newspapers and newspaper-owned radio stations. This is no new thought on the part of the White House, but there are indications that there will be a new move in that direction. More than a year ago bills were introduced in the house and senate aimed at accomplishing this. The one in the senate was sponsored by Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana.

Soon thereafter, however, the President made his proposal to enlarge the Supreme court. Senator Wheeler almost immediately became the spearhead of the opposition, and lost interest in doing things just because the President wanted them done. Besides, Senator Wheeler found himself for the first time in his political life, in a fight where most of the big newspapers of the country—the so-called capitalistic press—were on his side.

So the Montana firebrand underwent a slight change of heart about the wickedness of the big newspapers. In the nature of things, the radio stations had to divide their time, and it seemed to many opponents of the President that actually more time on the air was given to those on the President's side than the situation warranted.

The net result of that Supreme court fight was to convince a good many other members of the house and senate that perhaps it would be a good idea for at least some of the radio stations to have more independence than a station not owned by a newspaper, and therefore, entirely under the thumb, so to speak, of a commission appointed by the President. No one was excited enough about this phase—so minor in comparison to the greater issue—of the court fight. But the impression was made and still persists. It tied in rather neatly with the thought so often expressed by Senator Wheeler in the court bill debate—that it was not just a question of giving Mr. Roosevelt this power he was asking for—that some President of a reactionary stamp might some day sit in the White House, and the liberals of the country would be shocked at his use of this added power.

Federal Control
Moreover, this came right on the heels of a lot of ugly whispers about the federal control of radio, a situation which resulted in the President taking Frank R. McNinch off the federal power commission and putting him in the federal communications commission to clear up.

There were various little episodes, like the hiring of administration friends by radio stations wanting certain privileges, which have resulted in many of the legislators on Capitol Hill doubting whether the radio will continue to be so much purer than the daily newspapers as the President thinks.

Nor did it help much when Hugg L. Black, on his return from Europe after the Ku Klux Klan exposé, announced that he would give his explanation over the air, where it would not be distorted! Senators were still a little miffed at having been caught off base on that situation.

Clock With Only One Hand.
This seems odd, but odder yet is the time-keeping apparatus displayed. First, there is an old sundial, which, so it is said, can be used to tell the time by either the sun or the moon.

But strangest of all is a large clock, presented by Good Queen Bess. At first glance it looks very imposing and useful, but then one discovers there is something seriously amiss. There is only one hand, the hour hand.

As a result, the stranger is very likely to miss trains and buses, but in this, as in other things, practice improves even if it does not make perfect, and in time one becomes quite a good guesser. The Manx people do not mind, for after all their motto is "Time Enough."

Finn MacCool's Island

Manx Milkman Making His Rounds.

Legends and Oddities That Make The Isle of Man Very Attractive

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

MANXMEN (natives of the Isle of Man) travel all over the world and sometimes settle in out-of-the-way places, but they never seem to forget their little island, which lies almost midway between England, Scotland, and northern Ireland, set like a jewel in the Irish sea.

Tradition says the island came into existence when a legendary hero, Finn MacCool, hurled handfuls of Irish earth at some giant enemy; but, though reluctant to doubt this story, we shall be nearer the mark perhaps if we believe the geologists who tell us that it was once attached to the neighboring mainlands and is geologically akin to the English lake district.

The stories of the early inhabitants are just as strange as those concerning Finn MacCool. One hears, for instance, that fairies ruled their kingdom in Man, and that St. Patrick, fresh from triumphs in Ireland, came to Christianize the island and turn out the snakes.

But even when one leaves the legends and turns the pages of island history, the truth is exciting enough. The Celtic inhabitants were at different times ruled by Irish, Scandinavian, Scottish, and English kings.

When the island passed to Edward I of England, he and his successors presented the little kingdom to various favorites until in 1405 it came into possession of the great house of Stanley. This famous Lancashire family ruled in Man up to 1736, when the lordship passed to the duke of Athol.

Twenty-nine years later the island was sold to the British Crown. Fortunately, however, all the old laws and customs were preserved, so that today the island, which is only 30 miles long and 12 broad, still possesses its own law courts and its own legislative bodies, though enactments, of course, are subject to the approval of the British government.

Flag With Three Legs.
The first thing that strikes you during a voyage to the island is the fact that your ship is flying a red flag bearing the Three Legs of Man. This is the ancient emblem of the island, which decorates the hilt of the Thirteenth-century sword of state and in addition is seen almost everywhere.

It seems certain that this emblem is of Sicilian origin, for many Sicilian vases in the British museum bear a similar design. The only difference is that in the Manx version the feet are booted and spurred and a curious motto states: "Whichever way you may throw me, I shall fall on me feet."

Castletown, though deprived of its former importance, still retains an air of aloof grandeur. The inhabitants rather look down upon those who live in less favored places. There is an atmosphere of peace about the place, for the "trippers," who in summer turn the other towns into perpetual playgrounds, are satisfied to see the castle and then pass on.

Most of the town, built on Castle-town bay, is grouped around Castle Rushen. The streets are so old and narrow that sometimes the inhabitants, after nearly being annihilated by a motorbus, remark pathetically, "Why, there isn't room to swing a cat here!" All the same, they are proud of their old houses and would not have it otherwise.

One large square, facing the castle, is remarkable for its monuments. In the center stands a lofty column, erected, so a tablet explains, as a memorial to Col. Cornelius Smelt, a former lieutenant governor of the island. One wonders why there is no statue on the island, until some kind passer-by explains that insufficient money was forthcoming to complete the memorial.

Clock With Only One Hand.
This seems odd, but odder yet is the time-keeping apparatus displayed. First, there is an old sundial, which, so it is said, can be used to tell the time by either the sun or the moon.

But strangest of all is a large clock, presented by Good Queen Bess. At first glance it looks very imposing and useful, but then one discovers there is something seriously amiss. There is only one hand, the hour hand.

As a result, the stranger is very likely to miss trains and buses, but in this, as in other things, practice improves even if it does not make perfect, and in time one becomes quite a good guesser. The Manx people do not mind, for after all their motto is "Time Enough."

Castle Rushen is one of the finest specimens of a medieval castle in existence. The local limestone has wonderfully withstood the storms of centuries.

Robert Bruce captured the castle in 1313, by dint of a long siege. As a fortress it looks impregnable, and, in fact, was so in the brave days of old, before the development of artillery.

During the reign of Charles I, who was beheaded in 1649, the seventh earl of Derby, known to this day as the Great Stanley, built a house in the grounds after the style of his Lancashire seat, Knowsley Hall.

This great man, and his gallant wife, Charlotte de la Tremouille, played a prominent part in the British Civil war. While he raised men for the king in the Isle of Man, she defended Lathom house in Lancashire. Later, when Charles II made his unfortunate raid into England, the earl fought by his side at Worcester and was captured and executed.

They Liked the Great Seal.
Greatest of all the lords of Man, he knew how to make himself popular, so that, although the people had to support numerous troops and were heavily taxed, he was well liked. Some of his own words have come down to us and they explain the secret of his success:

"When first I came among the people, I seemed affable and kind to all, so I offended none. For taking off your hat, a good word, a smile or the like, will cost you nothing, but may gain you much."

When he died the countess was ruling in Castle Rushen and one William Christian, receiver of the island, was in command of the militia. This man at once led the militia against the countess and captured all the strong places with the exception of Castle Rushen and Peel.

The Parliamentary forces then landed on the island, and Christian surrendered on condition that the Manx should retain their laws and liberties. A few days later the countess was compelled to give in.

The castle is no doubt a wonderful specimen of medieval architecture, but one can not help thinking how dreadfully uncomfortable it must have been for all those who had to live there. Thick walls, tiny windows, and holes through which to pour boiling pitch may be admirable for defensive purposes, but do not increase the amenities of a dwelling.

Indeed, the only consolation the residents can have had is the knowledge of the even greater discomforts suffered by the prisoners in the underground dungeons. There are, it is said, ghosts haunting the castle, notably a lady in white who appears in unexpected fashion out of the main gateway at midnight.

Manx Cats Still There.
This is doubtless a myth, but the Manx cats are no myth; there are still some about, looking very strange minus their tails. Little is known about them, though it has been said that the original specimens came off a galleon of the Spanish Armada wrecked on the rocky shores of the island. But whatever their origin, they are far wilder than English cats, in shape rather like a miniature leopard.

Half a mile from the center of Castletown is Hango hill, the ancient execution ground where William Christian was shot.

This macabre hill rises from the seashore, and immediately behind it the inspiring pile of King William's college dominates an enormous green playing field. Anyone who wishes may visit this great public school, where most distinguished Manxmen, and some distinguished Englishmen, received their education.

From here one can ramble on to the fishing village of Derby Haven, formerly a center of smuggling but now remarkable as the island airport, and visit the white farmhouse of Ronaldsway, the old home of Christian and the place where he hatched his plot to rise against the countess.

CALL RECRUITS IN SYPHILIS WAR

broader interest in the fight on syphilis and the conditions which favor its spread with a war fund of $500,000 contributed by volunteers," says Doctor Wilbur, who is also president of the association.

Ray Lyman Wilbur.

Stimulated by the national campaign to control venereal disease, a few colleges and universities are making syphilis tests a part of the routine examinations required of incoming students. Judging from a survey made by the Chicago Tribune, serological diagnosis for syphilis is not a common regulation among student health services, however.

Instruction on the sexual and social hazards of the disease is far more common. Many universities, in fact, require their freshman men and women to take courses in health or hygiene revealing the character of the disease. Others confine this instruction to medical and sociological courses beyond the reach of most students.

University presidents, deans, and health directors questioned were unanimous in declaring that syphilis does not constitute a major health problem on American campuses.

Most of them agreed that students found to have syphilis and gonorrhea should be kept in school where they "could" have "adequate" treatment. Prep school leaders, dealing with younger boys, were just as certain that all syphilitics should be barred.

The University of Chicago, University of Iowa, and Dartmouth college are schools which have elected to give Wasserman or Kahn tests to all newcomers. New York university offers free tests to all students, but does not require them.

Testing began on the Midway with the winter quarter this month, taking advantage of the Chicago board of health's program of free and secret examinations, since the university health service lacked funds for this purpose.

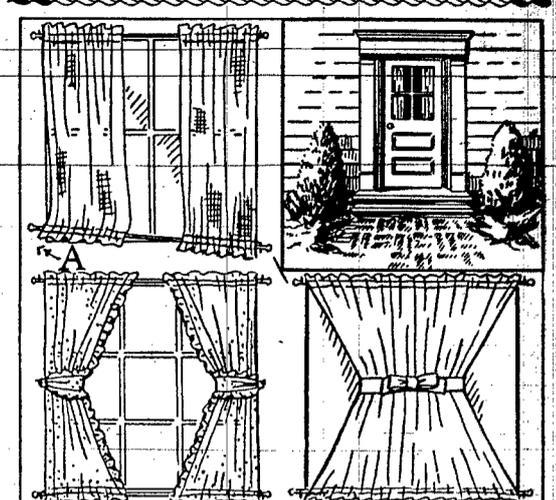

Dartmouth college began routine Wassermans last fall and found one case of congenital-syphilis among 650 incoming students.

The University of Iowa started serological testing of freshmen in 1924 and continued until 1930, reported Dr. M. E. Barnes, head of the department of hygiene. It ceased, he said, because of many objections. The university then confined its testing to food handlers, employees and others.

The echometer tells first when a shoal is near, secondly where it is

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

Curtaining Your Front Door.

YOUR front door greets your friends before you do. Is it dressed to look its best? Here are some simple rules that will be useful in selecting the material and style for front door curtaining.

Choose a fabric that looks well on both sides and that harmonizes with the outside color of your door as well as with the color scheme of the hall or room into which it opens. A simple net curtain material or plain silk are good to use but if your door is white on the outside think twice before you choose the usual ecru or pongee color. White net or silk of a color to match the shutters or the trim of the house will look infinitely more attractive and will not be too conspicuous. The curtains may be made double with a different color on the inside if need be. Pale yellow is another color that is always safe to use as it gives the effect of light shining through the door.

These curtains should be firmly anchored both top and bottom so that they do not blow about, and catch in the door when it is opened and closed. Both bottom and top rods may be fastened over hooks as shown here at A.

Every homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; curtains for every type of room; lampshades; rugs; ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents (coins preferred) to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

TIPS to Gardeners

Start Them Indoors

TOMATO, cabbage, broccoli, egg plant and pepper crop usually prove more satisfactory when they are started indoors from seed. The gardener thus may use seed of a variety from a dependable source.

About eight weeks before plants are to be set in open, sow seeds a quarter-inch deep in good soil in a regular florist's flat. Water thoroughly but not too frequently—preferably on bright days.

Good sunlight and good air circulation are important in preventing "damping off." Keep temperature fairly even at 70 to 75 degrees. When young plants are about one and one-half inches tall, transplant to a larger box or cold frame, spacing about three inches apart.

If the plants are grown in a box, place them indoors in the shade on six or eight mild days to harden them off. When plants are set in open soil, space them far enough apart to allow for full development.

Your Talent

EVERY man, every woman, every child has some talent, some power, some opportunity of getting good and doing good. Each day offers some occasion for using this talent.

As we use it, it gradually increases, improves, becomes native to character. As we neglect it, it dwindles, withers, and disappears. This is the stern but benign law by which we live. This makes character real and enduring, this turns men into angels and virtues into goodness. — James Freeman Clarke.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK...

By Lemuel F. Parton

NEW YORK.—If a prisoner hadn't jumped out of a two-story window and escaped, 123 years ago, newspapers today wouldn't be front-paging the description of the biggest star in the universe, 3,000 times larger than the sun. They should have named the star Napoleon, instead of Epsilon Aurigae. His was the touch-off of events terrestrial which finally ranged out 3,000 light years and brought news of the giant star. Chronologically, as the astronomers would put it, it was like this:

Friederich Georg Wilhelm Struve was a studious German youth who wanted to be an astronomer, but lacked opportunity for study. For no apparent reason, a ranging band of Napoleon's scouts seized him and locked him in a prison on the banks of the River Elbe.

He timed his high window-dive to the passing of a queer-looking ship, made a long, hazardous swim and was pulled aboard. The ship was homeward bound to Russia. The czar was a patron of astronomy.

The young man was encouraged and became not only director of the observatory of the University of Dorpat, but one of the founders of modern astronomy, with Herschel and Bessel.

His sons and grandsons became famous astronomers and it is his great-grandson, Dr. Otto Struve, who, with his assistants at Yerkes observatory of the University of Chicago at Williams Bay, Wis., discovers the facts about Epsilon Aurigae.

He is director of the observatory. He arrived here in 1921, after fighting with the white armies in Russia and fleeing to Turkey with their collapse. He became director of Yerkes observatory five years ago at the age of thirty-four.

At the age of ten, he was a semi-pro vaudeville musician, earning around $2 a week in Chicago's Ghetto. He was the eighth of eleven children of a tailor who earned $20 a week. He bought a mail order clarinet on the installment plan, and, by the time he was thirteen, was a full-fledged journeyman musician, but still in short pants.

He first got out in front in California, running his first band in 1931. He slumped down to $40 a week in 1934, moved in with Billy Rose, hit his stride again, and, via radio, is a recent arrival in the top-money brackets.

There was an argument and the harbor master said Mr. Gunther had clipped the cap off his head and wouldn't pick it up. It boiled up into a big international story, but Mr. Gunther came through it nicely to continue representing his country in many foreign ports.

Collective Bargaining

Collective bargaining is a labor union term referring to a method of determining wages, hours and working conditions by direct negotiation between the representatives of a labor union and an employer. Instead of acting individually, as in the case of individual bargaining, the employees act as a group in presenting their demands, appointing representatives who hold conferences with the representatives of the employers to adjust matters of dispute.

The individual employee subordinates himself to the common interest of his fellows and in return receives benefits which he could not obtain alone.

Leslie Hore-Belisha, British minister for war, peeps down the muzzle of a large-caliber gun during his visit to the Woolwich arsenal recently when he inspected guns and other fighting equipment which England is rushing to completion in its rearmament program. The program costing many billions of dollars includes the strengthening of all branches of Britain's arms—navy, army and air forces. It includes also the training of civilian population to protect itself against attacks.

COWBOY LOU

Not Jack Dalton, but Lou Gehrig, iron man gladiator of the New York Yankees, is shown above, as he appears in his first picture, "Rawhide." Lou portrays a two-listed westerner hot on the trail of a gang of cattle thieves. And while his guns are cooling off, Gehrig rolls himself a smoke—one-handed.

Du Pont Heiress and Husband

Pauline Louise duPont, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Francis duPont, and her husband, Alfred C. Harrison III, New York lawyer, shown in their car as they left the Christ Protestant Episcopal church Wilmington, Del., after their marriage.

Presiding at Utility Trial

United States Circuit Justice Florence Allen, shown as she presided over the three-judge court hearing the recent TVA-Utility company case at Chattanooga, Tenn. Judge Allen was prominently mentioned for the vacancy on the Supreme court of the United States for which President Roosevelt nominated Solicitor General Stanley Reed.

HAS "WHISTLING" EYE

Alongside the record of the man with the tick-tock head at Edward Hines, Jr., Memorial hospital near Chicago now stands the case of the man with the whistling eye. He is Henry L. Baker, pictured above being examined by Dr. Edward Wagner. A stethoscope applied to the eye records a low moaning sort of whistle. Doctors at the hospital said a tumor behind the eye caused it.

New York's Auto Dead for One Year

How that huge area of New York's Central park known as the "mall" would look if all the persons killed by automobiles for the year of 1937 were buried there is visualized by the above picture. The crosses were painted on this photograph to impress motorists and pedestrians alike of the enormity of the death toll. Police figures show that in 1937 a total of 943 people were killed by automobiles in New York.
