Herman Dahl, an Omaha teamster, was killed by a runaway team. He was standing by the side of his team when it started to run away, and the horses ran over him, hitting him fatally.

The Omaha Board of Trade is in receipt of an application from the United States Engineers, asking to have a bridge built across the Missouri River at South Omaha, between May 1st and September 1st, at a cost of $10,000,000, and that the bridge may be raised at any time at which general inundations may occur.

The case of Bryan county against E. H. Halsted to cause him to pay taxes on some signs, which he had put up in that place, yesterday afternoon. The leader of the case said Mr. Rothier, how much money could be raised for Hanley's burial. Mr. Rothier was deeply impressed by the fact that the boy had been laid to rest by the people of the town, which relieved the deceased's parents that he would do what we right.

Jack Hanley was one of the local physicians in the west. He came to Nebraska from Boston early in 1887, and located in Omaha, where he remained until that year he went into the service. His first fight was with a gun in 1888, and he was severely wounded. He was never able to get well again, and has since been a invalid.
