REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For Representative in Congress. G. W. E. DORSEY, of Dodge County.

Emperer Frederick, of Germany, died last Friday.

Gen. Sheridan is reported as gaining strength.

Stour City is just fairly tickled to death over the beauty of the special "Corn Palace" train it sent to the Chicago convention.

There is yet nothing to indicate what the result of the Chicago convention will be. Balloting will begin today but it is not probable that any nominations will be made before tomorrow.

The Omaha Bee took it almost as a personal insult that Thurston was selected as temporary chairman of the Chicago convention, but even the Bee is compelled to recognize the ability which he discharged the duties of the position. It says:

The speech of John M. Thurston, in assuming the office of temporary chairman, is every where recognized to be one of the best ever made. The tone of the time for the session of the convention. It was admirable in conception, eloquent in expression, forcible in delivery and replete with fact. The volume of charges which accompanied the speaker's periods marked the powerful effect it produced. In its treatment of the candidacy which the various friends of Mr. Blaine are attempting to force upon the convention against his known wishes, he has done much to dispel the danger of an early Blaine stampede as the strenuous efforts this morning of Senators Jones and Hale and Messrs. Phelps and Boutelle. Two New Jersey delegates who had announced their intention of breaking for Blaine at the first chance told me tonight that Thurston's presentation has decided them that they would be doing their beloved leader a shameful political wrong by such a move. Let credit be given where it is due. It is a credit to every way equal to the occasion. He covered himself with glory and deserved all the enthusiasm he evoked and all the applause he evoked.

The race for temporary chairman of the national convention was a tie between Thurston of this state and Estes of California, the chairman casting the deciding vote for Thurston who thus won the honor.

The Nebraska great bull-brawl about the Beck's delegation intending to vote for Depew seems to have been a little scheme to enable it to claim that its influence prevented the delegation from going to him. The delegates say that in their comparison of notes it was agreed that all candidates Depew was the only one whom they could not support under any circumstances.

The accession of the new emperor of Germany is the cause of a great deal of apprehension among the European countries, as on him, more than any other depends peace or war in Europe. Every sentence he utters in public is carefully scrutinized and analyzed. The general opinion is that with an impetuous young ruler, ambitious of military renown, war is a question of but a short time and a suitable pretext.

The Chicago Herald contains the following complimentary reference to a prominent Nebraskan. "The Hon. Mr. Thurston. Does any Chicagoan remember John M. Thurston? He is a delegate from Nebraska and is chairman of the delegation from this state. He was formerly the driver of an express wagon in this city, and began his business career in that humble capacity. He had remarkable ambition, studied nights and devoted hours every day to a thorough course of reading. Going to Nebraska he identified himself with the politics and growth of that state and has won fortune and honor. Speaking of John Thurston yesterday Chicagoan, of Iowa, said: 'No, I didn't know that Thurston was formerly an expressman in Chicago but I do know that he is one of the most successful men in political life to be found west of the Mississippi river. He is a great I regard as almost infallible. He is a logical reasoner. His public speaking has great individuality, and is full of life.' Mr. Thurston left for the east at 2:30 yesterday afternoon, but will return on Saturday.

LIBERATION OUT OF THE LORRAINE (H. E. KETOWICZ)

Another law should authorize county commissioners to provide for disposing of the county lands at least on the best terms obtainable for the county, and also to let the job of leasing the county lands to the lowest bidder, just the same as contracts are let for other services. Require that bidders shall have resided in the county a given number of years, men of good standing and qualifications, to give solid, first hand bids. There is no good reason why the or any other county should be compelled to pay two thousand dollars annually, more or less, to men in the office of clerk and treasurer, more than the service is worth, and more than other equally competent and trustworthy men would do it for.

Every four years we have a presidential election. Great excitement usually prevails, and in the uncertainty, values are unsettled and the direct money goes to farmers and business men, and is scattered in millions of hands. I have been something of a student of politics in this and other countries, and I have long been of the opinion that the presidency, as an elective office, should be abolished, that the president should reach that office by promotion, for a limited time and with no possibility of a second term. Nay, with more progress, the whole country elect a speaker of the house as they now elect a president. He serves two years, then president of the senate two years, then secretary of state two years, then president, two years, after election to be in line of promotion in case of death or disability of the president. That would make the presidency a purely executive office, and it largely out of the mud of politics.

There are numerous other things that might be changed for the benefit of the public. The fact is the government is being run in the interest of party and class. The political leaders of both parties want no settlement of the tariff question at present. They try to magnify the differences to make it appear there is really something to fight about, keep the two armies circling each other in political battle, while they slide into the good old one-way business of the country. Very independence in politics is a very beautiful theory, but amounts to nothing in practice. No doubt there are thousands of honest republicans who would like the republic, but they cannot go to the democratic. That party is owned and controlled by the big end of the confederacy through its money power. And where can the honest democrat go? Not to the republicans, for that is firmly in the grasp of the corporations and the money power. If any one doubts this, let him look up the names of the officers and representatives in Washington, and then the delegates at large from this state to the national republican convention, men who do not, and can not, represent the republican voters of this state. Nevertheless they are sent up by the republican machine. Like conditions prevail in other states, and in the democratic party. Any third party movement is a waste of time and effort. There is then but one way, as I look at it. That is, for the poor man, the rank and file of both parties, to fire out these candidates, and their offices, and self-constituted leaders as fast as possible, and elect poor men of their own class to the conventions of the legislative, or congress, to the U. S. senate. In short to rescue the government. It has fallen among thieves and been swindled, and is waiting for the good Samaritan. A poor man who is sufficiently educated to read and write, and understand plain English, and is honest, with the public interest at heart, would be an ornament to congress now. If a congress could be drawn as a jury, it would be a vast improvement over the present one. There might not be so many plumed knights with shining lances, ready to bleed the public, nor so many tall speculators with red noses and black records, but there would be rarely more money-bags, honorable men than now. This country is exposed to such men in office, what it needs is more honest ones, even if they are not so many. If the war of the rebellion was brought on by smart men, political tricksters and scoundrels, who, while pretending to represent the people of the south, really manufactured the sentiment and feeling, which, under their urging and lead, brought on the war. Traitors to their own constitutions, to the government and the human race, ought then to have died like dogs at the end of a rope, and yet, thanks to the caucus, the convention, and the political machine they have served in congress most of the time to the present. There is now far more bribery, deception, and all kinds of corrupt practices in the elections and political management than formerly. How long shall we continue to have a political machine which elects those political bosses and corruptionists to the office?

How Birds Learn to Sing.

Most people probably imagine that birds sing by instinct; that the song of the robin is as natural to him as his red breast, that the bluebird is not more liable to change its note than its color; and that, amongst the songbirds, will always sing the same beautiful song. This common impression, however, is erroneous. Young birds will never sing the song peculiar to their tribe if they have never heard it, but if associated with some other bird, will learn its song instead. A retractor once built its nest under the eaves of a house, and was a caged chaffinch hung in a window underneath. The retractor learned the chaffinch's song. Another retractor was not so good to repeat the notes of a blackcap which had its nest close by.

The wren and wheatear have usually but little variety of note, but will become much better songsters if confined with other birds, and the bullfinch will be taught to whistle complete tunes, although its own notes are harsh and insignificant. On the other hand, the nightingale in confinement will sing the song of the wren, which had been taken from the nest when only two or three days old, and which, not having any other school to imitate, almost learned to articulate, and could repeat the words "pretty boy" and some other short sentences. He educated several linnets under the three best singing larks, the skylark, woodcock and titling, every one of which, instead of the linnets' song, would sing entirely to that of their respective instructors. When the note of the lark was thorough, he, being the linnets which had learned it in a room for three months with two common linnets which were in full song. The educated linnets, however, never borrowed any passage from the other birds, but adhered steadfastly to that of the lark which it had learned. At Kington, in Radnorshire, he saw a golden-wren take song from a lark, and uttered no proper note of its species. The bird had been taken from the nest when it was two days old, and was hung in a window opposite a small garden, where it had no lark to hear and learn from. The song, having never had the opportunity to learn that of the golden-wren, birds taken from the nest two or three weeks old have already learned the call-notes of their species. These and many similar facts go to prove that birds do not sing by instinct. They learn their songs from their parents. If they have no opportunity of hearing their own species, they will learn any other instead; just as an American child takes French when a few weeks old never heard speak English if he never heard an American word.

Some Wise Sayings.

Learn to say no to yourself. We're words idea, what an ideal world this would be. A friend without discretion is more to be feared than an enemy in armor. Fear of sickness is the first call for a doctor; the rest is only a question of time. Children obtain the majority of their knowledge of evil and consequent desire to taste it from the talk of the parents. Every profession of religion that does not make a man kind to his parents, wife and children is a mistake in the article. Money may make many mistakes, but never went back 4000 years to attack a dead man. Truth is as indifferent to public opinion as the general public is to truth. Give an friendship to one who obliges you by thinking more of you than of themselves. Every time you strike your own child you admit your incapacity to govern yourself or others. The best friend is the one who gives the best advice. The biggest cross in heaven is for those who were the most natural on earth. God may have you for rewards, but he never set an advance on you. Let every man be himself as God intended and the world will grow steadily better. One who is cast out of fear, so does fear out of love. Every thinker and utterer of good thoughts is a power, pushing his way through the masses by the power of good thoughts. Ignorance and superstition.

Nervinase as a Medicine. Sleepless people—and there are many in America—should court the sun. The very worst epidemic is landman; the very best is sunshine. Therefore it is very plain that poor sleepers should pass as many hours of the day as possible in the sunshine, and few as possible in the shade. Many women are married, do not know it, and do not know the sunshine out of their houses and their hearts; they wear veils, they carry parasols; they do all that is possible to keep off the sunbait and yet the most potent influence which is intended to give them strength and beauty, and cheerfulness. It is not time to change all this, to get roses and color in your pale cheeks, strength in your weak but, the women of America are pale and delicate. They may be blooming and strong, and their light will be a potent influence in this transformation.

Mississippi (Who has just built a new house). "Our decorator told me I ought to have a globe for the hall." Dealer: "You mean a globe, madam. Here's the one." Mrs. De Troy: "But it is a square one to fit in a parlor corner near the fire-place."—Tad. -
