Prohibition in Iowa.
 Much has been said, both pro and con, in regard to the prohibition law of Iowa, and now since we have been there, "we can speak intelligently upon the subject.

That Prohibition does prohibit in Iowa, there is no question of doubt, and that the law is a magnificent success, no one can truthfully deny. During our six weeks sojourn in the State, we failed to see one drunken individual. We in Jefferson saw a circus come to town, which called to gether several thousand people but no drunkenness was manifest and no police were necessary to preserve the peace. Had the same circus been in an Indiana town, say LaFayette, it would have taken all the regular police, besides an extra squad, to have preserved a semblance of peace, and should have been liable for a lawsuit. We are sorry to say this about our own city, yet it is only too true.

Another strong argument in favor of prohibition in Iowa is that there are now fifty-five jails in the state that have not a single occupant, and the office for sheriff, for the most part, has had to go a begging.

There has also been in the State where strong drink can be obtained, and there who "understand the ropes," as the saying goes, can get it, yet they have to be saying, alas! just the same as if it were anything or something any other crime. In all the towns we passed through, not a saloon sign was to be seen, and no doors stood open inviting young men in to drink; no bad companies were seen; no boys were "loving the boys" to come in, to their eternal shame and ruin. All these truths cause us to shout, hail Prohibition Iowa.

Sioux City as it is.
 A correspondent of the Methodist Herald writes thus of Sioux City, the spot where the worthy Haddock fell to his untimely death in the struggle against the ruin anarchism of Iowa. Every room and building formerly occupied by the rum traffic is now used for some honorable and legitimate business. The city has a milk-milk driven out of the city, at least five men engaged in lines of business helpful to see and profitable to the city have come in. The largest grocery establishment, at once the glory and shame of the city, because of its immense traffic and its blighting curse is now occupied by a wealthy commission firm handling butter and eggs. The city has no more saloons, and the same time has a blessing and not a curse to patrons. Never in all her history has Sioux City so prospered and flourished as under absolute Prohibition.

Daville city of 5,500 inhabitants in the center of a distilling region of Kentucky is free from the curse of liquor. For fourteen years it has had total abstinence, and prohibition has prevailed all this time. Proprietors of drug stores are placed under bonds of $1,000, and are not allowed to fill a prescription containing whiskey if a man wants whiskey he is to get it on a new prescription. Doctors are placed under bond not to prescribe whiskey except in cases of actual illness.

The Woman's Journal prints the following: "A young man of Jackson, Mich., called upon his lady-love and she met him at the door. By some means not explained, which in the hallway she found that his breath smelled strongly of whiskey. She led him to the door and with more of sorrow than of anger in her voice, she said: 'Joe, this county has voted on the prohibition question, and now I am going away. I vote no. Now don't come back until you have got around on the side of the majority.'"

With the present rate of progress of intemperance and resulting alcoholic insanity and degeneracy, the race which are the bearers of modern civilization and civilization to it will be an inseparable concomitant. — Dr. E. C. Spitz.
 The manufacturers of Hudson, Mass. have formed a league, and propose to give the preference of employment to good, sober American citizens. They further agree to discharge, when practicable, all men of intemperate or vicious habits, and when that is done the one discharged will not be employed by any member of the league until he shall give satisfactory proof of reform. The result has been good.

OUR NEIGHBORS.
HARRINGTON NONPAREIL.
 J. F. Browne returned home from Pierce county last Monday evening, and reported that he had seen several bridges for the county. He has now nine bridges to build in Wayne, making seventeen for that county since the first of May.

RANDOLPH TIMES.
 The town was white Monday with the tents of the survivors on the Sioux City, Randolph, and Wauzau city railroad. It was told at the time that they were going to Sioux City to begin setting the grade stakes, and they left early the next morning. All of them were sober, and it would not make much of the stakes and the grade fight after them to Randolph. Location stakes have been set to the Holt county line, and the survey has been made much farther. One of the engineers told us that as the line advances west it becomes cheaper to build it: Amen and amen!!!

COLERIDGE SENTINEL.
 The new school building which $2,000 bonds were voted some time ago has again been heard from. The bonds were made out and sent to the state auditor and approved and have been returned. The red tape is mostly all tied up and now the bonds are again in the hands of the directors all ready to put on the market. It is a pity that the bonds were not put up for sale when they were first sprung when they will go into the market early and the building pushed to completion which could not be done this fall. Therefore there is no prospect of a new school building in Cedar Co. next summer as there will be in the neighborhood of $4,000 to put into it when the work begins.

STANTON REGISTER.
 The weather for the past two weeks has been the most kind for mowing and ripening corn. For many days a couple of weeks longer Stanton county will have a better crop of corn. Already our feeders are beginning to locate steers, which are now worth from two and a half to three cents. In spite of the much talked of prospect of a hard winter, the market for the spring steer is coming. It is our opinion that the cow boom is coming.

YOUNG JOURNAL.
 Anna Oziva West left Ponca last Friday for St. Louis, Mo., where she expects to fit herself for teaching and future usefulness among her own people. Oziva has no children, but she has been a member of the family of Geo. H. Francis, during all her life, and she has the privilege and care to their home. She was a member of the Presbyterian church and Sabbath school, and of the Local Temperance Legion, and aided, as she could so well, in singing at entertainments for any good cause. Oziva was beloved an I respected and will be missed not only in her home but by her associates. Under the supervision of Rev. A. L. Biggs, we trust she will make rapid advancement and become eminently fitted for life work she has chosen.

Their Business Booming.
 Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at Van Camp & Perrin's as the fact that the members of our party are giving away to their giving away, bottles of our new grape fruit tonic. The result is simply enormous in its value. This is simply enormous in its value. This is simply enormous in its value. This is simply enormous in its value.

It is a pretty good time for Republicans to repeat the question of 1840, "Do you know how Maine went?" Harrison's letter of acceptance follows soon after Cleveland's, and even a democrat must confess that it is the ablest paper of the two.

Oregon, Vermont and Maine, all to the front with the largest republican majorities for years. How has the north is going in November. It will be a solid north against a solid south.

There will be a democratic convention and speech in Wayne Saturday, but it is not likely that there will be any attempt to create enthusiasm by inquiring whether the convention has heard from Maine.

The democratic senatorial convention met at Norfolk Friday evening last and nominated Dr. A. Hear of Norfolk, for senator from this district. The nomination is a good one, but if the republicans make a judicious nomination there will be no trouble in beating him.

A plurality of more than twenty thousand for the state ticket, the largest at a state election for twenty years, and equal to Blaine's plurality four years ago, a solid republican delegation in congress, and an almost solid republican Legislature, is the story told by the Maine election Monday. It is pleasant reading for republican ears, but it shows that the traditional wet blanket to the democrat is hopes.

Cleveland's long-delayed letter of acceptance has at last been given to the public, and a great disappointment it must be, even to his most ardent admirers. It is long, a mass of verbiage and few ideas, and simply repeats, in substance, a number of the president's messages to congress. A prospect, the tariff is made a prominent feature, and with owl-like gravity the assertion is repeated that the price of any article on which a tariff is levied is enhanced by the amount of the duty, a statement so often proved untrue that its repetition in such a document is ridiculous. The letter reads like a lecture by a fourth rate college professor to a freshman class in political economy. Its dreary platitudes make a poor substitute for the lunge call for which the democracy were looking.

The Philadelphia Times, one of the most uncompromising Cleveland papers in the country spots two silly yarns of its democratic brethren thus: It is reported from day to day in the columns of the General Harrison publically declared, during the turbarailway strikes of 1877, that "one dollar a day was enough for working men." As General Harrison is never drunk and has never been idiotic, of course he never said so. He has never been regarded as especially sympathetic with industrial people, but those who accuse him of making such a declaration must die in ignominy or with deliberate intent to mislead.

It is reported from day to day that General Harrison voted and spoke in favor of free admission of Chinese into the United States, and every man of ordinary intelligence knows it to be false. He voted against a Chinese bill because it was in conflict with our treaty obligation, and President Arthur vetoed the bill on the same grounds. Whatever may be his views on Chinese labor, he did not speak or vote for its free admission when in the senate.

Letter from W. A. E. Allen.

RAWLINS, Wyo., Sept. 9th, 1888. Ed. Herald.—Leaving Wayne Aug. 7 we arrived here on the 9th. Rawlins is 300 miles west of Cheyenne, Arizona, City and Carbon are the only towns worthy of notice intervening. The next town west is Green River, 142 miles distant. Eighteen miles west of us is the continental divide. We crossed it a few days since by train. The ascent is so gradual that a stranger would pass it unnoticed. The altitude of this town is 7,000 ft., the population 2,000. The water here is good, receives its existence through its subsurface, and is said to be without impurity. All the things we saw, including the surrounding country are barren hills, high rocky mountains and small plains, cottonwood, juniper, sage brush, covered with sand, gravel and sage brush. The business of the place is furnishing supplies for the frontier of the town, with three settlements south of us, distant from 10 to 175 miles. These supplies are carried over steep, rough mountains, by ox and mule teams. Three wagons are coupled together loaded with supplies, to which are attached eight span of horses or mules, or from eight to ten mules. Such teams are to be seen almost daily. The Shoshone Indians were here a few weeks since to carry government supplies to Lander, 100 miles north. Their train consisted of about a hundred wagons, all of the same make, besides a multitude of ponies, colts and some Jacks. They were accompanied by the squaws, children, and possessions. We happened out to see them, accompanied by some friends. As the wind blew hard the women had some trouble to keep their hair and skirts adjusted, which greatly amused some of the young squaws, who could not be induced to laugh at their undisturbed air or subsistence. We saw something of their culinary art, if it deserved the name, and their custom in hanging their hung over poles suspended from their wagons, exposed to the smoke, dust and flying fire. The Indians greatly enjoy a visit to town. The children are fond of confections, toys and saw blades, who took special pleasure in jumping on the locomotive while the train was made up. It seemed probable we should give to the illustration of the fine Indian story we read of in our school days, "when one fell down, there would be left four."

The town is well supplied with churches, and each has a pastor, but the attendance is poor. About two hundred persons would probably be an average attendance at the four churches. Three of the churches are wooden structures. The Presbyterian is of grey sandstone, and exhibits exteriorly the most tasteful. The Methodists claim the strongest interest.

The public buildings are of the usual style of the western states, grand and commodious. The public school building, on an eminence north of town is of grey sandstone. The court house, built near by is a fine structure in Grecian style of architecture, constructed of the same material, and well lighter north with the portentary is being built of the same material. Red, white and gray sandstone abound here, and some of the distant mountains are so covered with white rocks that a stranger passing through might suppose them to be made of such.

In visiting the cemetery one is surprised at the number of early deaths. Of forty five, eleven died under one year, fourteen under twenty years, one at age thirty and one at eighty. From these facts we infer that the climate is here fatal to early life.

Within a radius of twenty miles of Rawlins there are but few ranches. Nothing can be accomplished in agricultural pursuits here without irrigation, and that must be by artificial means. The future prosperity of Wyoming as in the past must depend largely upon grazing. It is especially adapted to sheep raising.

To keep down flesh these salt water baths morning, a handful of rock salt to a basin of water. Its use and strengthening to the system, says the Chicago Herald. Sassafras tea, without milk, may be taken and cream of tartar, making a drink by pouring a pint of fresh boiling water on a table-spoonful of tartar, letting it cool and flavoring with lemon and a little sugar. A draught of this half an hour before meals is a notable purifier of the blood and an occasional dose of opium salts, jalap, either aperient or cathartic, may be taken, always with the advice of a physician. To check abnormal craving for food Dr. Naphey's roomedown chewing a grain or two of roast coffee. Ladies of Italian men without milk are excellent to supply appetite without making flesh; so are water-cresses and tender radishes. And all these are among the best purifiers of the blood and preventives of consumption. Scrophulous and delicate girls should be brought up on these simple but potent remedies, together with carrots and parsnips, which last are the best food for quick and healthy plumpness. The richness of a milk diet is a common cause of too long feeding on parsnips on the Channel Islands, and the finest, fairest children in some parts of Scotland use it as daily food. A carrot poultice is admirable for softening the face, acting as a purifier by absorption, and mechanically as a moist application.
