TALK OF AN EXTRA SESSION

After discussing that President Harris will call the Fifty-first Congress together.
Washington special: It is the almost unanimous belief of the members of the Fifty-first Congress that President Harris will call an extra session of the Fifty-first Congress for tariff legislation and the admission of new states.

The latter date is regarded as the most probable one by Major McKinley, of Ohio, who appears to be the most prominent of Indiana, who has just come from his home to succeed Governor Hoovey, and is supposed to know something of General Harrison's feelings on the subject.
It is not the only one recently from Indiana, however, who is impressed with the idea that a called session is certain.

Governor Larabee, of Iowa, has been indicted on criminal libel on account of the part he took in the noted Chester Turney case. The governor was so overwhelmed with requests for the pardon of Turney that he had the reminiscences of Turney's former neighbors against the pardon printed and sent out to each member of the legislature and to each person asking that Turney be pardoned. He did this, he states, to show the people of the state that there are two sides to the question, and claims that the bill's simplicity, which makes the complaint a simple tool in the hands of a number of his political enemies.

The bill creating Thurston county was returned to the senate by the committee to which it had been referred, recommended for passage, Senator Manning being the only member of the committee making objection. The Fenner lobby is working day and night for the bill, and as no one outside of the Wayne members are working against it, and they receive no assistance from home, it need not surprise any one to find that the bill has passed. It is a matter in which the members of the legislature generally are not interested, and it is natural that they should yield to the importunities of the Fennerites, especially as they can not see any manifestation of a serious objection on the part of this county. The fact is that Wayne and Wayne county are simply sitting lazily by watching an attempt to steal a large portion of its very best territory and its land nothing at all prevent it. Should the bill pass both houses and secure the signature of the governor, it will yet remain to test the constitutionality of the act in the courts, for if the territory sought to be detached was properly attached in the first instance, the legislature has no power over it whatever. The territory will not be finally taken until that question has been settled, no matter what the legislature may do.

NOTES OF CAMP LIFE.

(Continued from last week) The next morning angling was still the rage, and by noon 75 trout were taken. About 4 P. M. we shouldered our pieces to look for game. Mr. Whitehead, Rev. J. W. Linn and I started southward. At the outset the gun, another started me over on his back. After ascending a high, steep bank, thickly overgrown with sweet briar and underbrush, we gained a nice plateau, ascending southward to some hills beyond which were some high mountains. There is a small ravine coming from the base of the mountain, having a small stream of water. I concluded up the ravine to some grassy pastures. On arriving at a narrow, well-beaten path crossing the ravine, I sat down.

sheltered from the sun by a rock and game sage brush, to wait for deer or antelope coming to drink at the brook. Being armed with a double-barreled shot-gun, charged with buck shot, I determined not to shoot without being quite certain of killing the game, and thus retrieve my lost reputation. In a few minutes an antelope passed along the hillside about 150 yards away. Soon after the old antelope, with a half grown kid came over the hill. On arriving at the base they passed off to the east. Again in a few minutes two old and three young antelopes came over the hill and, passing directly toward me, the kids skipping around the mother in the kid innocence, while I sat quietly planning their destruction. It is possible that a human soul, possessed in the four feelings of humanity, could deliberately destroy such innocence and beauty? I confess my guilt. It was premeditated, too. My victim was marked by its cute little horns, but I was not watching the innocent creature the eye that notes the fall of a sparrow. He turned aside the fatal shaft for that moment a troop of horses, that were grazing in the ravine above, suddenly raised their heads, and with tails erect, stampeded, driving the antelope away from me. This circumstance, as my companions had already taken up the antelope and horns, and any further destruction would have been wanton cruelty. Mr. Walton ascended the mountain north of camp where he saw an elk and killed a remarkably fine one. He traveled on horseback 10 or 12 miles up the river. He said he saw about 30 deer and an antelope, expended his ammunition, but returned without game.

The morning two of the men requested permission to bring in the game. The game being dressed we all felt disposed to lounge about in the shade, very much, no doubt as the Indians spend the day after a successful hunt. The deer-skinners were accompanied by some working men, and to the occasion. The following day some of the men, two and children drove about 10 miles up the river to see a collection of animals in the possession of Mr. Miller, which he expected to ship to New York in a few days. They consisted of 9 antelope, 10 elk, 14 deer and one bear. Snake River is a beautiful stream, and passes through a very rich and fertile valley, with considerable water power capacity. We heard of one saw mill which was sold at sheriff's sale, hence we concluded the business was not a success. The saw here was about 300 yards long, with high hills on either side, reaching against higher ones, in the rear of which were steep rocky mountain peaks. This feature seems to be a peculiarity of this region. On ascending a high ridge or mountain, you almost invariably find a higher one just beyond. Southwest of camp was one of the most remarkable plateaus. It was circular in form, the diameter being an angle of 25 or 30 degrees, and with 100 feet high, with level summit, containing a probable area of 160 acres.

There was one thing that particularly annoyed our hunters. A flock of geese, passing up and down the river daily, would frequently get a shot at them, we would have a two or three wild ducks. We claim our bill of fare here was equal, it may not be, to any eating house within 100 miles of our camp. We had antelope, deer, jack rabbits, chicken, ducks, pork, eggs, butter, condensed milk, fresh milk, potatoes, turnips, tomatoes, peaches, pears, grapes, cherries, apricots, raspberries, fresh, every good thing, even bread, hard melting crackers, sweet corn, etc. Having so much to eat it became almost imperative to devise some consistent method of disposing our surplus. So we cut six willow forks, and stuck them in the ground the height of a table. On these forks sustained three or four pieces of a proper length, on which we placed our table, which we carried with us. We then attached three transverse pieces to the forks of one side at a proper height for a seat. On these we placed poles in juxtaposition, of sufficient width to form a seat. Outside of the seat we planted a row of willows to shelter us from the sun.

Wakefield Republican—A young man in town thought he would take a hand in the live-stock business as a side issue about three months ago. For a starter he invested $15 good and lawful money in a pony represented to be a fine yearling. He had purchased the boarder at a livery to the extent of about $20 worth when he concluded to unload last Saturday when he put the nag up at public sale. He never used, and the auctioneer knocked it down for $12. He will take a hand in some other line next time.

It is curious to note on how few things, strictly agricultural, farmers are so ignorant. For instance, Mr. C. A. Stewart, of Essex, Iowa, writes us that cattle feeders in his neighborhood are not agreed as to the propriety of giving salt to "feeding steers"—that is, salt in the feed for fattening. He has quite a natural appetite for salt? Does it seem to injure them when allowed to partake of it at pleasure? Do all animals regularly require salt? How is it with the human family? He got salt a necessity to every member of every family? Why, then, do let cattle have salt? The best way we have ever found is to buy the rock salt and scatter it round where every animal can get it every day or every hour in the day—freedom!

Dakota City Argus—For once the Democrats and Republicans of the county seem to be united. While it would not look exactly right for Dakota county people to assist in lobbying a bill through the house depriving them of a portion of their heritage, they do not feel as though they were selling it for a mess of pottage. While they are forbidden by policy from helping the Fenner boomers, they have a perfect right to wish them "G-D speed." This "hot" unite in favor of Dakota county people, irrespective of party are rapidly coming to the conclusion that the only really good Indians are those who have journeyed to the happy hunting grounds.

Dakota City Eagle—The Witubea Indians are making extensive preparation for breaking prairie on their new allotment this spring. We saw a large amount of flax seed will be furnished for them to sow on the raw sod.

Will Hazlegrove and Louis Ambrecht met with a little experience last Saturday with the take a good many days for them to fatten. In the morning they had crossed the lake with a team and gone to the Island in some business. It was the middle of the afternoon when they returned and they came back on the same road they had traveled in the morning. When in the middle of the lake, at its deepest point, the ice gave away, their team and wagon going into the icy sea of water. They braved the cold for the good time and saved themselves. Ambrecht crawled around and caught the horses by the head and held them above water while Hazlegrove went for help. It was a narrow escape, but they were nearly two hours before they were released and got out on safe ice.

It might seem presumptuous for us to put our general knowledge against our correspondent's twelve years of experience, but nevertheless venture the assertion that he is mistaken about red clover being a failure in this county. It has been borne in mind occasionally that red clover is a hardy, like beets, parsnips and burdock, and if not reseeded it always, or nearly always, dies the second year. Close cropping may prolong its life in a few cases to the third year, but not beyond. It follows, therefore, that in any climate or any soil, if clover is not re-seeded in some way it dies the second year. East of the divide farmers on our farm had the second crop to mature seed, and returning it off after the seed is in part ripe at least every other year. In this way clover increases in the soil from year to year.

We believe it will do this anywhere in the Missouri valley. The Housestead farm are on the Western slope, but so near the divide that we presume they are in about the same situation as the land in Crawford county. At first we had poor success with clover. It would start in the spring, appear to be a good stand and then disappear. We could not for some time understand it. Sometimes it would grow the year we sowed it, and sometimes wait till the next year and then grow. We began to notice, however, that it always grew along the side of a field next the road that was ungrazed and that it grew in a tract across the field where there had been occasional teaming. We therefore came to the conclusion that in a light, new soil, full of much vegetable matter and not so decomposed, newly sown clover needed to be pressed into the soil and a lot to take its chances on top. We were confirmed in this view by the fact that we never in any season, wet or dry, failed to secure a perfect stand when we sowed clover in the spring with any crop which we pastured with with cattle or hogs. We concluded that our previous failures were due to the fact that the soil being very light and the seasons dry, the clover was killed by its roots, had time to reach soil compact enough to hold moisture. When it failed to grow it was simply because, lying on top of the ground, it did not have sufficient moisture to start with in the start. We therefore adopted the method of harrowing in clover, using a light sowing machine, and since that have had no trouble. Experience has shown that the thing we mention in this paper is because we think it will be helpful to all Missouri valley farmers, as well as all who live on soil that is comparatively new and compact. Large quantities of "red" or "buff" formations, similar to that of Missouri valley. When these soils are worked a few years and the prairie vegetation decomposed, or as the farmers say, the "soil nature" is broken, and the clover grows with more ease. Our correspondent further says that "neither timothy, blue grass, or red-top will do it at all, and that clover or pasture." In this he is right, and he might have added, in any other locality. A pasture must have variety. It is a waste of land to sow it to but one crop or pasture. The more varied the soil, the better. H. H. H. H.

Brother Jonathan.

The origin of this term, as applied to the United States, is as follows:

"When General Washington, after being appointed commander of the army of the United States, was in Massachusetts to organize it, he found a great want of ammunition and he ordered a great quantity of powder to be procured from the West Indies."

"We must consult Brother Jonathan on the subject." The general, placing the greatest reliance on the British, was then given the name of Brother Jonathan.

"HIS NAME WAS BILL BRAZELTON,"

The First and Greatest Highwayman of the West.

A gentleman from Tucson, Ariz., in the lobby of the National hotel last night, spoke of one of the desperadoes of his town.

"I've seen," he said, "that fellow out in California has been holding up stage loads of people by himself. The dispatches speak of him as the 'Lone Highwayman.' I want to tell you that the first and greatest lone highwayman in this country lived in Tucson, and his name was Bill Brazelton. It has now been seven or eight years since he was killed. While he lived he was the terror of southern Arizona, and he did all work in a lively stable in Tucson. He was a young fellow who did not say much, but was all the time practicing with his revolver when he was not working. He was the most attractive, powerful young man I ever saw. He got so he could turn a somersault with his pistol in his hand and he could come up with a half dollar every time twenty-five yards away. He could shoot in every position, when riding or standing, and he was not long till he heard of his sudden stages all alone. He had a few feet of steel and did not seem to be afraid of anybody or anything. The greatest effects were made to capture him, but he eluded all of his pursuers. He seemed to be as free as the wind, and he was the same time. Finally it was suspected that a holder working in the stable where Brazelton had been employed knew something of him. He was taken out on the edge of town and hung up till he was almost dead, when he agreed to come on condition that the holder should be set outright, as he would kill any man who betrayed his secret at the first opportunity. The holder said that he was to go to meet Brazelton that very night and take him something to eat. He was to wait behind a log in certain part of the woods. A party of six well-armed men took the holder and went with him to the place of rendezvous. They all went behind the log and waited for Brazelton. By and by rode out of a thicket into an open space and came slowly toward the messenger. The holder held his pistol in his hand, as if suspecting that things were not all right. When in thirty yards of the log, the whole party rose and fired, killing both Brazelton and the messenger. It was one of the most dramatic incidents that ever occurred about Tucson in those troublous days. Brazelton's body was riddled with balls. He was brought to the stable and the messenger was propped up against an adobe wall and had his photograph taken, and the show-case a glass illustration of the triumph of his art."—Washington Post.

Rest. Rest first, tired and overworked mother, go to bed—deeper within your heart for each of the fact that you rest; that it means money, actual cash saved, that it means comfort and happiness for your family, my more, that it means that you shall not be taken away, when your little brood so much need a fond mother's care and guidance.

But how obtain rest with a family of children? With means so limited, the strictest economy must be practiced. "Why were the days twice as long," you plead, "could I live every moment with things necessary to be done?" Yes, seemingly true. But, give your member you rest, choosing between an overworked utility body and a healthy one, between a happy, cheerful disposition, and a worn, fretful one. When a member of the household is sick, demanding constant care, we realize, as at no other time, that we can obtain our rest, reducing it to a minimum, and still maintain a fair state of order and comfort. The woman who has not learned how to "knock" about it, has missed one of the "delights" of our modern life.

We can obtain time to favor ourselves when necessary, not only by dress, but by the choice of our occupations and surroundings. The woman who (from morning till night) dresses about her house, in her every day work dress, is not doing justice to herself and her family. How refreshing and restful would she find a period each day, when she dresses to herself in a family. How refreshing and restful would she find a period each day, when she dresses to herself in a family. How refreshing and restful would she find a period each day, when she dresses to herself in a family.

Take your sewing or mending into the cool air of the late afternoon (do not mind the litter, where you see new things, or on the porch, or under the shade of the maples, but find a quiet corner in the very practical corner of the very same window pane the day before, and sit down for thirty minutes each day on the bed or lounge, if you have "those yourself" it will prove a rest.

Ideal Husband and Wives. It may be truthfully said that less than one-fourth of the women who marry know what they are doing. They have no idea of what their duties are, much less their rights. About all they know is that they are getting married. It is to be wondered that so many are disappointed and wail themselves out of it!

It is perfectly right for a woman to have an ideal husband, yet more important that she should have a clear and distinct notion of what constitutes an ideal wife. Here are some of the trouble lines. They all want ideal husbands, but never seem to think that all they need to put an end to their troubles is to become what the trouble lines. How sadly both are disappointed. The wife who expects her husband to make her happy is free-dommed to the appointment, so is the man who expects the name from his wife. We look for our own happiness, and in so doing make others wretched.

Warm Tracks in the Snow. "There are some funny old characters among the Adirondack hunters. Old Duncan McDonald is one of them. He likes to get a quiet greenhorn into the woods and paralyze him with an astonishing knowledge of woodscraft and skill in tracking game. Dunc is one of the silent, mysterious types that you read about. He plays that he is out with a trap to be fishing through the snow. Dunc was poking along through the woods just ahead of the city chap when he saw a deer's track in the snow. He stopped short, motioned to the man to follow to hold up and looked sharply at the track, saying, "See!" Then he stopped down, picked up a stick and pointed out the mark of the deer's hoof and said: "Warm. Just now." The city greenhorn wasn't so green but what he told the story of a record and got the laugh on old Dunc."

Don't try, if you are an ordinary man to occupy two seats in a crowded horse car. Only women can do that and look at innocent as a lady in the valley all the while.

Why You Feel

So weak and exhausted is because your blood is impure. As well explain the condition of a city, by the impure blood circulating over to its minutest veins. Do you know that every drop of your two or three gallons of blood passes through the heart and lungs in about two and a half minutes, and then on its way, it takes lone and quacks, brain and nerve, and all other solids and fluids of the body?
