From Ireland.

Charles Doherty, an article on Ireland in the January Centennial, is quite as follows: "The paper survives in architecture. Buildings were generally square and of wood, or round and of stone, and painted with bright colors. After Christianity was established and the use of the conservative best of the people took a form of tower or round tower, and the tower was the mainstay. As early as the twelfth century, when the Norman people began to make stone the rule instead of the exception, Giraldus, the traveled prelate, talks of ecclesiastical towers, which according to the custom of the country are slender and lofty and moreover round." He knew that they were powerful but did not suspect that this form of tower represented an inheritance from a pagan religion any more than he saw the paganism of the rites at the shrine of St. Brigit. Yet unnumbered Irish traditions have kept the thread of fact without being able to give the historical sequences. In his immediate use the round tower was a sort of military necessity, and came after the rule of monastic settlements by the pagans from a Celtic. During the middle ages it was a place of security which could not be burned down like the timber churches met by the English soldiers. It was a belfry whence hand could be raised to the sky to summon to school or the faithful to prayer. It was a watch-tower, and in the days of the military usage back to Anglo-Saxons. In a political and highly artistic sense it represented the rule waiting for the future. It was the Irish who beated ideas in other things, we can persuade how the writer saw the tower. It is still in hands because the Irish round tower was a tower and beacon, and more so than any other tower which led them to the study of the tower. The Northmen caused the demand, but supplied the material, and the Slavonian craftsmen, driven from the East by the military, found their way to Ireland, and supplied the science to rear towers more durable, and simpler in design, than anything Ireland had seen before or has since. The history of towers, derived from a worship of the heavenly bodies, supplies a very remarkable chapter in the archeologists of the last century perceived in America the tower. In America the tower, with its high entrance and adaptation to watchers and war worship is found in the great cities of the Indian. Towers in Mexico and Yucatan were in use for the same purpose. One of the towers preserved at Ardmore the bands which the Irish had brought to the tower, and the tower was built in the tower. The tower was built in the tower. The tower was built in the tower.

A Sensational Will Contest.

A contest of this kind came up in the courts which will greatly interest St. Louis. Congressman Glover and his wife were the main parties. Mrs. Glover's father and mother were in an intricate affair, and society has many versions, more or less correct, circulating. Representative Glover claims that the $100,000 given him at his marriage was only a wedding present and not his wife's share of the property. Presents That Were Presents.

Ray Gould is said to have presented each of his children at Christmas with $25.00 in raised gold. In addition, the old man, George J. Gould, who now resides in New York, has been reported to have presented $25.00 worth of various rare articles which have been presented to his children.

EFFECTS OF SMOKING.

A Physician Writes About the Evil Consequences of the Narcotic. Regarding the evil effects of using tobacco a physician writes in the Scienceman. It is a habit that is becoming more and more prevalent, and is subject to a long train of nervous affections. It impairs the nervous constitution and transmits these impaired constitutions to children. Such children are feeble, excitable and liable to be cut off by any serious disease. Often they do not thrive well, are stunted in growth, and do not attain the stature of their parents before them. If they take up the habit of tobacco using early in life, as very likely they will, growth will be still more interfered with, and they will present a curious spectacle of the phenomena of old age mingled with the features of youth.

Already a noticeable diminution of the stature of our people is observable. The general average of height is less than that of our fathers. Men of full six feet in stature are far less common in this country than they were thirty or fifty years ago. A like falling off in height is observable among the females. Among other causes tobacco-using by the parents, and especially by the mother, is a prominent cause. It is a cause that is powerfully working the degeneration of the vital powers and arresting development. This habit also exerts an influence on the brain as well as on the nerves. It obscures the perception and deadens the sensibility. Tobacco-using students make less advancement than others in their studies. The permanent impairment of the intellectual powers will be proportional to the degree of indulgence and its duration. If continued through several generations there can but result mental degeneration.

The excessive use impairs all the besting organs, arresting development and obscuring the natural powers, and its direct tendency is to produce degeneracy of the race. Already its work has begun, and if not checked, it will continue to work, and ultimately leave a race of driving idiots. He who loves his fellow-man, let him raise his voice against this practice.

The Poodle Mustache.

Among the individual dogs which have earned a good name in their country's history was one which, in A. D. 1763, shared the case of a man, General de Meuse, who was besieged by the French in Landau. He not only escorted his master on every sortie, but contrived to ascertain all the mining proceedings of the besiegers, and to report them to the general. He was thus, thanks to the dog's sagacity, able again and again to ward off impending dangers.

Probably, however, no dog has ever rendered such signal military assistance as the celebrated poodle Mustache, who shared the vicissitudes of the French army through most of the wars of the Consulate and of the French Empire. He won special honors at Austerlitz, and was decorated in the field of Austerlitz by Marshal Lannes, as a reward for having rescued his regimental standard from an Austrian soldier when in the act of snatching it from the grasp of the standard-bearer. He was, however, severely wounded. The poodle poodle hero of the assault, and then, seeing the tattered colors in his teeth, dragged them triumphantly till he reached his own camp.

Many are the incidents recorded of the bravery and sagacity of this prince of poodles. In the van of scouting parties he detected many an Austrian ambush, and on at least one occasion he drew attention to the presence of a disguised spy in the camp. Moreover, to his vigilance was due the failure of a night attack by a body of Austrians. The poodle hero of the assault of Balboe the French were apparently ignorant of his vision.

Woman's Other Weapon.

Down in Vineland the other evening a young girl from Stanton, who is now there for treatment for some wasting lung trouble, was followed on the street by a fellow who seized the opportunity as she was passing a dark and lonely spot to grab her by the shoulder and attempt to shove her into a shop. Instead of fainting the girl swung her arm around and hit him twice, once on the jaw and one on the ribs, with her elbow before he could gather his wits to "holer." And then he called to the doctor who put her in a plaster cast, but says if he doesn't eat anything or say anything for three weeks his jaw will be all right, but that his rib will never come straight again. THURSDAY, APRIL 25, 1890.

Henry G. Pearson, who until a short time ago was postmaster at New York, died last Saturday.

The proposed prohibitory amendment to the Massachusetts constitution was defeated by a majority of over forty thousand.

The President has named the members of the commission to treat with the Sioux for a cession of a part of their reservation.

The passengers from the steamer Denmark, which was abandoned in mid ocean, were picked up by the steamer Missouri and all safely landed.

A herd of buffalo was discovered last week in Manitoba. Where they came from is a mystery, as it was supposed that there were no more in that country.

Forty cow-boys were taken from Kansas to Minneapolis last week to take the place of striking street drivers. The men who had been employed to take the place of the strikers before were driven off, but the cow-boys were not interfered with.

An American tool possession one of the Alaskan islands a few years ago, pretended he was sent out by the government, and was getting along famously until he took it into his head to hang several of the natives. This naturally created trouble, and the self-appointed king is to be tried for murder.

The "innocent purchaser" received a serious set-back in a Iowa court last week. Suit was brought on a note given in the notorious Bohemian Oats swindle, and a verdict for the defendant was returned, although the note had been sold by the original holder and was in the hands of an "innocent purchaser."

The prohibition conference at Lincoln last week adopted the following resolution: Resolved, That while the prohibition party of Nebraska cling tenaciously to its organization, believing it to be an absolute necessity to the securing of ultimate prohibition, we will nevertheless in readiness to unite with all lovers of home of whatever party or name for the purpose of carrying this prohibitory amendment.

Oklahoma was opened to settlement at noon Monday, and the rush of the thousands of people into the country furnished such a sight as has never before been seen in the history of the world, and probably never will be again. For years thousands of people have kept that country before their minds and although hundreds for but ten thousand could be of mind when the signal flag announced that the hour had come fifty thousand men engaged in the mad rush for homes, and where on Monday morning was wilderness today there is a dense population and cities have literally sprung into existence in a night.

Endless content will doubtless arise over the claims and town sites, but for the expected bloodshed has not come. The same rush, only less vigorous will occur where the Cherokee strip at the Sioux reservations are declared open to settlement.

Harrington Herald.—It is stated that during the heavy rainstorm of last week Thursday, hail fell in large quantities to the west of Ponca. Some of the billsides were white, while Bill's bill appeared to be covered with drifts of hail at 6 o'clock p. m. It is reported that the small stream just west of town passed 20 feet in 4 hours and that the hillsides 4 feet deep in many places. No damage is reported.

Ponca Journal.—The city or town which was laid out on Mr. Hart's farm last winter, and which was expected to be on the line of the Ogden Short-Line Railroad is found to be a mile and a half out of the way, the road being located where the hillsides of Mr. Hart's place. If the new town is to be one and one half miles south of Mr. Hart's place it will be some 18 or 20 miles distant from Ponca. The distance south from the present town country does away with the prospect of ever moving the county seat to it, and it so far from Ponca that its coming a trading point is not to be feared in the least. The building of a town this far south will, as we are told, dislodge some six or eight miles distant.

Hooper Herald.—The Winnebago Indians are highly elated over the establishment of Thurston county which includes their reservation. The Indians are beginning to recognize the ballot box and as parties have pledged themselves to erect and furnish free of charge, suitable building for county purposes, until they see fit to build one of their own, provided the county seat be voted to Flourvau, there is a favorable prospect of the voting that way, as they would much rather have the county seat located on their reservation. The Indians are making rapid strides toward civilization in the way of farming, and it is not to be wondered at they are looking to their interests in other matters.

Stanton Register.—It is rumored the B. & M. has bought the grade and right of way of the U. P. from here to Schuyler, and will build the road. It behoves Stanton to be up and doing. Let us get the road where it will do some good. If the B. & M. has taken possession of the grade they will build the road, and do it. Norfolk votes bonds to the Norfolk & Yankton which is very likely to be done. If the road is built it will be a big thing for Stanton, unless it leaves the town a mile or two. A cross road will give us a competing line and help the town wonderfully.

Dakota City Eagle.—John Orr on Monday shipped a car load of head-cattle hogs that was ever sent out of Dakota county. He has 100 head that will average more than 600 lbs., and among them are some the weight over 300. He sold them in Sioux City at $4.50.

Again does Dakota county supply St. Paul with her Easter beef, a thing that has occurred every year for some time past. For this market it takes nothing but the best beef, and nothing is selected but grade and thoroughbred cattle. On Sunday evening Wm. H. and Thos. C. Clapp drove forty-two head of yearling and year-old steers to St. Paul, which they had sold to Wm. H. and Thos. C. Clapp, Sioux City, and which were shipped Monday morning. The 2-year-olds tipped the beam at an average of 1,701 pounds and the yearlings at 1,245 pounds.—They received $4.50.

Emerson Era.—The last legislature passed a bill to create the county of Thurston, and fixed the northern boundary of said county north of the southern boundary of Dakota county, the width of the lap being about 189 feet, though there has been no objection by the voters living in the territory proposed to be stricken from Dakota county, and no action on the question.

The several paragraphs in this paper which mention Thurston county were put in type Tuesday morning and presented the situation as it appeared at that time. Tuesday afternoon Messrs. Abbott and Downs and two other gentlemen from Pender were in town. Mr. Abbott stated that the location of the northern boundary line of Thurston county through Dakota county was a mistake of description, the intention being to run along the northern boundary of the reservation. The people of Thurston do not want any part of Dakota county and will not claim it. Mr. Abbott holds that the error in the description does not invalidate the act creating Thurston county.

Buckley's Archer Station.—The best salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Piles, Sore Throat, Chapped Hands, Childs, Corns, and all Skin Eruptions, and positively cures Piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price per box. For sale by Van Camp & Ferris's.

ROAD NOTICE.—All claims for damages by reason of a proposed road commencing at the west corner of section seven, township 23, range five east, and running thence east on section line to northern corner of section eight, township twenty-five, range five east, must be filed in the office of the Clerk of Wayne county, Nebraska, on or before noon of the 10th day of June, 1890, or such road will be located without reference thereto. By order of Commissioners.

Wm. MILLER, Co. Clerk.

Dated April 11th, 1890.

Legal Notice.—Charles Johnson, Defendant, will take notice that on the 1st day of October 1888, the First National Bank of Wayne, Nebraska, plaintiff herein, filed its petition in the District Court of Wayne county, Nebraska, against James Britton, John T. Bressler, Charles Johnson, William H. and Thos. C. Clapp, and William O. Gamble and Hiram W. Rissh, the object and prayer of which are to recover from said defendants the sum of eight hundred and twenty-eight dollars and forty two cents ($828.42), with interest at 10 per cent, due upon a promissory note dated November 26th 1887, executed by defendants. The said promissory note was issued under the firm name and style of the Wayne Manufacturing Company and payable plaintiff's order and that to these defendants due this said note the sum of eight hundred and twenty-eight dollars and forty two cents ($828.42). On the 8rd day of December 1888 an order of attachment was issued in the District Court of Wayne county, Nebraska, and the following property attached thereby as the property of the said Charles Johnson to-wit: The interest of said Charles Johnson in the S. E. 2 of section 26, township 23, range 5, east, in Wayne county, Nebraska.

You are required to answer said petition on or before the 1st day of April, 1890. Notarized and Witnessed.

Testing Square With a Wife of a Husband.

A certain little army surgeon, who was stationed at Bangalore, had received a very pretty girl out of an orphanage who had brightened out his speculation. She was very fond of gawdy and amusement, and after her marriage, appeared much fonder of passing days in the evening at a ball than in the company of the little doctor. Nevertheless, although she kept late hours in every respect she was very correct. The doctor, who was a quiet, sober man, preferred going to bed early and rising before the sun to inhale the cool breeze of the morning and the lady seldom came home till past midnight, he was not very well pleased at being disturbed. At last his patience was wearied out, and he told her plainly that if she stayed out later than twelve o'clock he had resolved not to give her admittance.

At this a young man, who, like all pretty women, imagined he would do no such thing, laughed heartily, and from the next ball to which she was invited, did not return till half-past two in the morning. As soon as she arrived the palanquin bearers knocked for admittance, but the doctor, true to his word, put his head out of the window and very unpleasantly told his wife she might remain where she was. The lady, consoled, exultantly told her husband she was treated, but in vain. At last she screamed and appeared to be frantic, declaring that if not immediately admitted she would throw herself into the well, which was in the grounds not fifty yards from the bungalow. The doctor begged that she would do so if it gave her any pleasure and then retired from the window.

His wife ordered the bearers to take her on the palanquin to the well. She then skipped away towards the bungalow, and stationed herself close to the door against the wall. The bearers commenced crying out, as if postulating with their mistress, and then, detaching a large and heavy stone, two of them plunged it into the water, after which they all set up a howl of lamentation. The little doctor heard the heavy plunge, followed up by the shrieks of the palanquin bearers. "Good heavens!" cried he, "is it possible?" and darted out to the well in his shirt.

As soon as he had passed his wife rushed indoors, crossed the mat on the floor, and appeared at the window from which her husband had just disappeared.

The doctor discovered the ruse, but too late. It was now his turn to expostulate. But how could he hope for mercy, rendering none? The lady was forever denied. "At least, then, throw me my clothes," said the doctor.

"So even your slippers to protect you from scorpions and insects," replied the lady, shutting the windows.

At daylight when the officers were rising, they found the poor little doctor, pacing the veranda up and down in the chill of the morning with nothing but his shirt to protect him.

The Doors Bothered Him.

An elderly man, well but rather colorfully dressed, crossed the road from the post-office one afternoon recently and headed for a hotel near Broadway. His progress was slow and erratic, but he soon found himself in front of his destination. It happened that this hotel has two entrances, within a few feet of one another, and much alike in appearance.

The wayfarer paused in front of one door, slowly read the inscription upon it, and with a satisfied smile turned to enter. But the smile quickly faded away, for as he took the first step he caught sight of the outer door. He hesitated a moment and then walked over to the second entrance. There he balanced himself carefully and smiled once more as he stepped out the sign, but again the smile disappeared as a furtive glance showed him the first entrance still in good and regular standing.

The pilgrim backed out to the curb and studied the situation. Beyond question he could see two doors at once and the fact seemed to annoy him. After a little reflection an idea struck him. He covered one with his hand and slowly turned his head, bringing one door into range and then the other. Next he took out a pair of glasses, carefully wiped them, and put them on, but still both entrances appeared as plain as ever. His fingers were baffled and he had to seek outside assistance.

"My friend," quoth he to a passer-by, "kindly show me the door."

"Certain," said the other, "which one do you want?"

"Which one? No, there's two, hey? Well, I thought there was right along, but I've got quite a notion."

But the old man looked relieved just the same, and when he entered the hostelry he walked carefully like a person who realizes that one can see many curious things if he only looks through the right kind of glasses.—New York Times.

A Kangaroo Drive.

Kangaroos are a great scourge to the farmers in some parts of Australia. They destroy the grass and literally massacre the sheep. The plain people force the farmers to devise means for killing them off, and a "drive" is the one generally employed. A yard with a high fence is built on the plain, and two fences run from it for a long distance, across together like the letter V, and all the men, boys and blocks in the neighborhood are mounted on horseback, and scour the country for miles around. They drive the kangaroos into the jaws of the V, and thence across the top, where the blocks enter with clubs and begin the work of slaughter.

Mr. Knox describes a little "drive" his party had on their own account. These were ten or twelve kangaroos feeding quietly, and we were within a few hundred yards of them before they were aware of it. At the first alarm they rose on their hind legs and took a look all round, and a second later they were on their feet, and began to trot. They seemed to go thirty or forty feet at a time, but our host said it was little more than fifteen feet. We let loose the dogs, which up to this time had been kept behind us, and they went at any and every kangaroo. The dogs are kept for this purpose, just as fox-hounds are kept in England and France or deer-hounds in Scotland. The dogs soon overtook and pulled down a young kangaroo and then they were put on the trail of an "old man" kangaroo, as a full-grown male is called.

The "old man" led the dogs a lively chase. He made directly for the water, several miles away, which is their quarry. If he can not reach water, he takes his stand with his back against a tree, and in that position is a dangerous evasive to approach. We followed the dogs as closely as we could, but did not come up with them until the kangaroo was at bay in a pool where the water just left his forelegs clear as he stood upright. The dogs swam around him or stood on the shore of the pool when we came up. The pool was small, and the kangaroo realized that this was his safest retreat, and he was evidently determined to die game. A shot from a rifle in the hands of one of the men finished him.—Philadelphia Times.

Huntin' an A R Cushion.

It was one afternoon during the leisure hours of Wilbur F. Storey's life that A. S. Truitt, then attorney for his papers, received a per-emptory telephone message from the editor to "come over at once." This could not be disregarded, and the lawyer hurried over to the residence of Wilbur F. Storey, who was out of temper. He said that a man had put an air cushion of some sort under the elevator in the building, and now insisted upon pay for it or declared that he would take it out. Mr. Storey said he did not want to pay for the air cushion, as Mr. Patterson had told him it was no good, and he did not care to walk up and down stairs, so he asked Mr. Truitt to step any attempt to interfere with the elevator. Mr. Truitt was at a loss what to do for a moment. He went down to see Mr. Patterson, and they secured the assistance of Mr. Storey's colored man, whom they directed to go into the elevator car and direct it high enough to allow them to get under it. Mr. Truitt was so confident they could take out the air cushion and get it aside until the police called for it, he would not interfere with the running of the elevator. Well, he and Patterson groped about for the bottom of the air cushion, but in vain, and then they finally realized that the "air cushion" was only a pun, and that the patent inventor of the light fit of the car in the shaft of the compressed air beneath it would use a sudden fall. This was true, and Mr. Storey was angry at being charged with something he had not got.—Chicago Herald.

Something to be Thanked For.

"Have you done anything for me?" asked the condemned man in a pitiful tone, as he uttered the words.

"Yes, indeed," said the local politician, gleefully.

"Oh, what is it?" demanded the murderer, "a pardon?"

"A commutation of sentence."

"No."

"Then in mercy's name, what?"

"I have succeeded," said the lawyer, "in having the day of your execution changed from Friday to Monday. Friday is an unlucky day, you know,"—Chicago Blade.

Prince Blism-roc's Son.

Prince Blism-roc had just excused himself for dinner and placed his spoon in his soup to begin eating the other day when a telegram was handed to him. "The message requires an immediate reply," said he, excusing himself to his guests, and his eyes soon withered and suggested one thing—that the prince should get cold, then—that Herbert should grow hot, and that the prince, having returned to his apartment, should refer to the message as a suggestion of the prince's son, and that he should have a very different opinion.
