GARDENS OF SIDON.

SCENES OF RARE BEAUTY IN THE OLD PHENICIAN CITY.

An Ancient City Noted For Its Many Groves and Gardens—Phoenicia as She Appears Today—The Dress of Its People. Their Garments and Their Arms.

The dewdrops glittered in the light of the just rising sun, and the air was heavy with sweet odors of hundreds of orange and lemon trees with white blossoms. The scene was a picture of marvellous fertility. Orange thickets, yellow and white with their double burden of fruit and flowers; lemon, apricot and fig trees, interspersed with the more tropical palm and date, all growing in the greatest luxuriance. At times we saw the queer shaftlike leaves of the banana, often 10 feet in length. An occasional mulberry orchard explained the presence of an enterprising silk manufactory near by. Every few yards little brooks babbled along, the absolute essential of this luxuriance.

It is not strange that this paradise of flowers and fruit is much frequented by the inhabitants of the crowded, dirty town. No one can ride through these fair gardens and fail to perceive why the worship of the old Sidonians was so closely connected with the grove, and how from nature's rich profusion about them they learned to worship the idea of fertility, which was the essence of their religion. The ancient Sidon, too, was not crowded down close by the sea, but was situated farther back in the plain, and thus was enriched by a ring of emerald.

On the outskirts of the gardens we came to the catacombs of old Sidon, which have been excavated by the French. In the soft limestone rock extend long series of connected chambers which have contributed a few rude statues, several sarcophagi and mummies to the very few mementos which we have of that enterprising people who secured their alphabet in Egypt and carried it to Greece, and thus transmitted, with certain changes, the letters with which we communicate our 19th century ideas. More of the aesthetic art of Phoenicia is to be seen today in Athens than in all Palestine. There in the Mycenaean room one can see the richly inlaid daggers, the beautiful ornaments and the facsimiles of the beaten gold cups which were also manufactured by these artisans of oriental antiquity to grace the temple of Solomon at Jerusalem. Every ruin of that ancient world, whether in Phoenicia or not, when laid bare bears ample testimony to the skill and enterprise of this Semitic nation of traders.

Leaving these old tombs and the thoughts that they inspired, we were soon studying Phoenicia as she appears today. On our left extended the Lebanon range, while in the distance rose Mount Hermon, clad in snow, glistening like Pentelic marble in the midday sun. On the right was the blue sea, into which we ere long took a plunge. Before us the narrow bridle path extended, now through fertile although only half cultivated fields, now over a rocky promontory, which often jutted into the sea. Habitations were rare and generally huddled together for protection against the Arab incursions.

On the highways we often met these modern representatives and probable descendants of the ancient Midianites: tall, muscular fellows, with the dark Semitic countenance and black beard, clad with the striped abba, a square piece of goat hair cloth folded and sewed above the shoulders, the chief garment of the patriarchs and the mantle of Elijah the Tishbite. Underneath they wore the kirbaze, the long flowing tunic, which appeared when they threw back their abbas. About their heads was tightly wrapped the milken keffiyeh, crowned with the two heavy goat hair coils, which encircled the tops of their heads like a large, black serpent. About the waist was tightly bound the girde, adorned with huge, odd shaped knives, or, if he be a civilized Arab, with pistols.

An ugly looking spear 15 or 20 feet long completed the outfit, an outfit well calculated to engender green envy in the heart of an American cowboy. A little detour enabled us to visit the black tents of Kedar, the abode of these perennial campers out. It is a rectangular edifice 15 or 20 feet long, supported on poles which 40 or 50 centuries of inherited experience has taught them to skillfully place at exactly the right angle. This palace of thickly woven goat hair cloth is held in position by strong guy ropes. The sides are raised or lowered at will, according to the position of the sun or the direction of the wind.

Within a curtain separates the women's apartment from the common reception room. The cooking outfit, like the dwelling, is characterized by its severe simplicity, since fortunately the Arab does not demand a many course dinner, and long years of practice have taught him to dispense with a superfluity of dishes, which is generally more than one for a family. A Sleep Walking Feet.
In the swampy districts of France the men are accustomed to walk over the marshy ground on stilts. A sleep walker on one occasion buckled on his stilts and crossed a swollen torrent in the dark. On awaking he had not the courage to perform the same feat in daylight.

DISCIPLINE.

Can it be true that you have read to vain... I was struck with a 'how I've got you' air and asked...

TAKEN IN.

The first turning to the left brought us to the Three Travelers a good third-rate hotel. We knew from the size of Glen that there was bound to be a hotel de France somewhere...

After admiring our first Virginitex we wandered on to the bridge. The setting sun was turning the leaves to blood. Even Bopper, the Philistine, said it was fine.

The crowning insult came. Never before in France, and never since, have we been asked to pay our bill in advance. Bopper stormed; my mildness counseled revulsion.

Once we passed a worse night. But our plight with the Three Travelers was enough to encourage early rising. We shook the dust of Glen from our feet at 8:00 A. M.

After a delightful morning's walk of nearly fourteen miles, we came to the dainty little village of Bonny, at about 10 o'clock.

The last house in the village toward the south is a long, one-story building with a little double-story porch at the end nearest the village.

As we approached, the postern of the courtyard gate was thrown open and a little man sprang out. He had a pair of dark blue trousers, with a pair of strips of blue down the side.

He had a look of a Gendarme. As we approached, the postern of the courtyard gate was thrown open and a little man sprang out.

He had a look of a Gendarme. As we approached, the postern of the courtyard gate was thrown open and a little man sprang out.

he turned upon us with a 'how I've got you' air and asked: 'Your resolves, if you please?' At this veritable 'stand and deliver' Bopper, with some pride, produced his purse, containing some 700 francs.

When I furnished over 1,000 francs before him, he could only add: 'Nor you, either!' Pleased at the favorable impression our resources had made upon the poor brigadier, who had probably never seen so much money at one time in his life before, Bopper deigned to produce our railway return tickets from Paris to London.

He would give no explanation. On the sounding of a little bell, a gendarme entered and saluted. 'He was not our keeper, whom we saw, grimly keeping guard at the door. The brigadier handed his big report to the man, who withdrew.

'English spies, of course,' sneered Bopper. 'English pickpockets more probably,' retorted the brigadier, who certainly scored there: 'but no, gentlemen, it is neither. I may be able to tell you when I get a reply to my telegram.'

'Do you mean to say you telegraphed all that about about us?' asked Bopper, with a pride he could hardly conceal. 'That you, perfectly, it is the rule.' 'Where did you telegraph to?' 'At your gentleman make questions. Pardon me, but I must ask you.

Dupont was annoyed. Bopper was furious. I am a philosopher. The bell rang again. We were conducted to a sort of cell, where we had a form to sit on. We were looked in. We both felt secretly aggrieved at not being put into irons.

Dupont had again put on his apron, and was busy dandling a little girl of 4. Madame was preparing the beans for dinner. Bopper soon made his way into the parental hearts by undoing a bandage round the ears of the eldest—a boy of about 9—and after examination prescribing some specific.

Dupont, however, put it in a somewhat better light for the authorities. 'We had been making careful inquiries about the prison. (So that miserably obedient we had so much admired was the state prison. 'I think I desire to get into it.) We had sat for an hour on the bridge carefully examining it. In our hotel we continued our investigations so far as to arouse the suspicions of our landlady.

'What was the Spanish prisoner's crime?' My opinion now is that Dupont did not know. He asserted that duty forbade him to tell. 'Only I may let you know that he had only been in prison for a fortnight (his term was fourteen years), and that he escaped during the night in his shirt.'

'Your surnames and Christian names?' 'I gave these, and a priest named Gervais wrote them down. Suddenly —he did not even put in the "Messieurs." "You may put yourself on route." We took him at his word, and were soon swinging along the highway. As we passed the big stone marking the boundary between the Loiret and the Nièvre, we heaved a united sigh at being out of the commandant's beat.—Corhill.

ALLIGATOR BEDFELLOW

peculiar incident of a Newport Couple's stay at a Chicago Hotel. Fads are popular, and the absurd penchant of some individuals who depart from the ordinary in life is excused by the devotees of fadism.

A constable served notice on Clerk Will Cunningham that the Muggs baggage must not be removed from the hotel, as it had been attached to cover a claim of $30 due a ticket broker, who wanted the right end of an excursion ticket to Florida, which Mr. Muggs failed to give up.

There's something cold and slimy in that bed, and it's alive.' Together they entered the room, and turning back the coverings, a young alligator about two feet long came into view, snapping viciously at the intruders.

'I've been bit,' said the officer. 'There's something cold and slimy in that bed, and it's alive.' Together they entered the room, and turning back the coverings, a young alligator about two feet long came into view, snapping viciously at the intruders.

THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

One Cause of it said to be the Construction of Warehouses for Salt. Before the revolution the government established warehouses at which the inhabitants were compelled to purchase their stores of salt.

On making this annual purchase he had to state the different purposes for which he intended to use the salt during the ensuing year. In the event of his being discovered salting his soup instead of his pork, according to his statement, or his pork instead of his soup on the day he had named, he was liable to a fine.

As a matter of course, some of the important towns were exempt from the gabelle, as well as influential officials and magistrates in the country white nobles escaped it altogether by receiving donations of salt under the name of franchise. We may well ask why this law was never abolished or modified. Simply because it returned millions of francs to an empty exchequer. And why was it not imposed on the untaxed provinces. Because these provinces and provincial states in which the clerical and noble element preponderated, who would have resisted to the utmost an infringement of their rights, and whom the government was afraid to offend.

In the Galtice or Gaultice mountain, situated between the counties of Cork and Tipperary, there are seven lakes, in one of which, called Lough Dilveon, it is said St. Patrick, when banishing the snakes and toads from Ireland, chained a monster serpent, telling him to remain there until Monday. The serpent is reputed to call out every Monday morning in Irish. 'It is a long Monday, Patrick.'

TABERNAACLE PULPIT

DR. TALMAGE PREACHES ON A FRUITFUL SUBJECT.

And They Came Unto the Brook of Eschol and Cut Down From thence a Branch With One Cluster of Grapes.

BROOKLYN, June 19, 1906.—Rev. Dr. Talmage, in selecting the theme for today's sermon in the Brooklyn Tabernacle, chose one peculiarly suitable to the season of fruits, the titubating 'Grapes from Canaan.' And they came unto the brook of Eschol, and cut down from thence a branch with one cluster of grapes, and they bare it between two men.

The long trudge of the Israelites across the wilderness was almost ended. They had come to the borders of the promised land. Of the six hundred and thirty thousand who started from Egypt for Canaan, how many do you suppose got there? Five hundred thousand? Oh, no. Not two hundred thousand, not one hundred thousand, not fifty thousand, not ten; but only two men.

There's something cold and slimy in that bed, and it's alive.' Together they entered the room, and turning back the coverings, a young alligator about two feet long came into view, snapping viciously at the intruders.

But this morning I bring you a larger cluster from the heavenly Eschol—a cluster of hopes, a cluster of prospects, a cluster of Christian consolation; and I am expecting that one taste will be the tip of the long fiber of the heavenly Canaan.

But this morning I bring you a larger cluster from the heavenly Eschol—a cluster of hopes, a cluster of prospects, a cluster of Christian consolation; and I am expecting that one taste will be the tip of the long fiber of the heavenly Canaan.

First, I console you with the divinely sanctioned idea that your departed friends are as much yours now as they ever were. I know you sometimes get the idea in your mind, when you have this kind of trouble, that your friends are cut off from you, and they are no longer yours.

I console you still further with the idea of a resurrection. I know there are a great many people who do not accept this because they have no witnesses; but my friends, there are no doubt passages—I could bring a hundred, but two swartly passages are enough—and one David will strike down the largest Goliath.

There is plenty of light for the man who does not love darkness. The only weak people are those who are not sure they are right.

IOWA STATE ITEMS.

—H. C. Leggett, a farmer of Fortia, was killed in a runaway. The Masonic Grand Lodge met at Davenport on the 6th, 7th and 8th.

—The trial of the famous Sioux City blackmailing cases has begun at Le Mars. —Newton B. Ashby of Cedar Rapids has been appointed consul general to Dublin.

—Rock Island railway employees declare that ghosts nightly hold high carnival on the bridge over the North Lizard, near Fort Dodge. —Fire was discovered in the second story of a brick building at Cedar Rapids, occupied by G. K. Barton & Co., dry goods merchants. Loss on stock and building is about $6,000, covered by insurance.

—The postoffice at Lyons was opened by professionals and about $800 in 2-cent stamps and cash taken. The fireproof vault doors were drilled and the bolts knocked down. The thieves have not been caught. —Thomas Tull, of Charleston, Ill., in search of his missing wife, found her at Ottumwa with a Free Methodist preacher named Lockard, living on the south side. Tull did not seem to care to prosecute his wife, but instituted habeas corpus proceedings to secure possession of his two children.

—In the Plymouth county district court Judge Ladd sentenced Hayden McFarland to twenty years in the penitentiary for killing Tony Warner. David Reeves got nine years and six months for shooting his wife in an attempt to kill. Henry Scheder was sent for three years for burglary. —A shocking suicide occurred at Charles City recently. Mrs. Ed. Atherton, a prominent lady, under temporary derangement of mind caused by sickness, slipped out of the house while her husband was asleep and plunged head foremost into a rain barrel and was drowned.

—Eva Markley and Joseph Mahew were arrested at Lyons, charged with being the parents of a two or three days old child found in the river at that place. The child was found in the river dead, and on being called on to account for it Mahew waived examination and in default of heavy bail is in jail awaiting trial. The charge is murder. Judge Hoyt at West Union sentenced Olive and Aslack Thompson, who, on the night of March 25, attacked Louis Johnson with knives and clubs, leaving him for dead, to the penitentiary for a term of three years. Henry Fatman, the Oelwein forger, was sentenced to the penitentiary for six months. More original cases have been turned off at this term of the district court than at any previous term for years.

—The county seat contest in Linn county is waxing warm. The court house committee of Marion issued a manifesto urging the voters of Linn county to sustain the proposition to bond the county for $25,000 for a new building. A committee of 150 prominent citizens of Cedar Rapids has been appointed to sustain the proposition, and has already commenced an aggressive campaign in that direction.

—A serious fire broke out in the Fuent coal mines, situated in Mexico, about four miles from Eagle Pass, Tex., and operated by the National Railway Company. There were sixty miners at work in the mines at the time of the breaking out of the fire, and it is feared that the entire number are suffocated as the works are situated some distance from the mine entrance, in which the fire raged for several days. —A cyclone passed over the northwestern part of Wayne county, Indiana, at Economy, the residence of Mrs. Rachel Lowe was completely destroyed and the Fenimore pump factory demolished, out-houses destroyed, and fences blown down. The path of the storm was about half a mile wide and great destruction resulted, although no lives were lost. The rainfall was tremendous and all streams ran high with water.

—Passenger Train No. 12, east bound, on the C., B. & Q., was boarded at Nodaway by five men. A few miles out three of them climbed over the coal tender and covering the engineer and fireman with revolvers, ordered them to stop the train and accompany them toward the rear. This was done and the fireman was ordered to uncouple the baggage car from the train. The fireman told them it was a World's Fair express train and carried no express matter. The robbers were thus disconcerted and thereupon ordered the cars recoupled and the train proceeded. Meanwhile the express messenger (for the fireman had told a lie) had secreted several thousands of dollars in a wood box, where he hoped it would pass notice of the robbers.

—Mr. and Mrs. John Sinn, who were arrested for burglarizing the Northwestern depot at Laverne, were both found guilty of the crime charged. At the trial both Sinn and his wife swore that the woman committed the crime unaided, and that her husband knew nothing of it. The prosecution succeeded in proving by circumstantial evidence that the woman was perjuring herself in the hope of saving her husband from punishment. And the jury found them both guilty. Sinn was sentenced to eighteen months and his wife to six months in the penitentiary. —Hog cholera has got a firm foothold in northern Iowa, South Dakota and Nebraska. In many localities whole herds have been wiped out by it, and careful estimates show that fully one-half of the young hogs have died in the last two months.

The financial jugglers should remember that it is the people who have the last say.

A free ballot would give the south an industrial prosperity that it can never hope for without.

The German election only needed Weaver and Mrs. Lease to have been as exciting as a populist meeting in Alabama.

One member of the cabinet—Secretary Gresham—draws a pension of $30 a month, notwithstanding his $8,000 salary.

Secretary Carlisle has very kindly consented to see the public two days in each week. Isn't this to the administration that was to be so close to the people?

Sandow, the strong man, who has just come to this country, might be employed to try to pull the democratic party out of the hole into which it is sinking deeper and deeper.

That eminent democratic editor, Clark Howell, of Georgia, says, "Mr. Cleveland's cabinet is Mr. Cleveland." This isn't complimentary to the members of the cabinet, but it is strictly true.

Business failures continue to occur, while the administration does nothing. Does any sane man believe that Benjamin Harrison would have folded his hands and allowed things to drift from bad to worse?

If ambassador Bayard keeps on praising the mail subsidy act of the "billion dollar" Congress, which made possible a line of American steamships to Europe, he will get himself recalled and read out of the democratic party.

It is probable that a few republicans will object to nominating Judge Maxwell to the supreme bench this fall, but the HERALD will wager dollars to doughnuts that he receives the republican nomination if he desires it, and that isn't all.

What value does the Congress of the United States put upon a human life, anyway? We shall see when it discusses the cases of the 22 unfortunate who lost their lives by the collapse of the floors in Ford's old theatre at Washington.

There is absolutely no excuse for the financial inaction of the administration. The people of the country regardless of politics are ready and willing to support the administration in any proper effort for the relief of the financial stringency.

Senator Quay's view of the financial situation might with profit be adopted by the administration. He said recently: "There should be no politics in this matter. It is purely a question of business and should be settled on business principles."

Secretary Carlisle's intentions may be, and doubtless are, good, but candor compels us to say that he has already demonstrated his unfitness to be classed with the great men who have been his predecessors at the head of the Treasury department.

The brightest man slips up occasionally. For instance Murat Halstead in obtaining a financial policy for the present administration and Congress, says that currency issues of state banks upon the security of silver should be authorized. Authorized by who? Neither the administration nor Congress has an iota of authority over state banks.

In a few short months another election will be held but just what the democratic party will advance now we are at a loss to know. The business and prosperity that was to follow in the wake of the democratic victory last fall, has failed to materialize to any alarming extent.

State Auditor Moore has declined to accept a number of the vouchers of Commissioner General Garneau because they are the result of needless expenditures.

United States Senator Leland Stanford died very suddenly of apoplexy early yesterday morning, at his home at Palo Alto.

The celebrated Lizzie Borden murder trial came to an end yesterday by the acquittal of the defendant.

McKinley and McKinleyism are good enough for Ohio republicans.

The statement of Auditor Moore shows that the assessed valuation of the railways in Nebraska to be $28,573,580, and that of the telegraph lines to be $192,951,10. The total railway mileage in Nebraska is 5,564, 82 with 292,577 miles of telegraph wire. Assessment ranged on railroads from $3,000 to $11,000 per mile on the B. & M. and the U. P., being the maximum limit. The total assessed valuation of the C. St. P. M. & O. on 260 miles is $1,302,700.

A Case of the Laws of Trade. (American Economist.)

For some time we have been running steamers from San Francisco to Australia. We did not pay them any subsidy, but they received some aid in Australia. These steamers built up a commerce which was worth about twenty million dollars to us. The other day a line to Australia was started, sailing from Vancouver, the western end of the Canadian Pacific, and ending at the Sandwich Islands. It is to have a subsidy of $125,000 per annum from the British Government and will undoubtedly also receive the aid now given to the American line, and the American line, which cannot expect any aid from this administration, will undoubtedly be driven off the ocean.

A Great Opportunity (American Economist.)

Mr. Cleveland and his party have the opportunity of a lifetime. It will be remembered that last year, July 27, Representative Hopkins, a Republican member of Congress from Pennsylvania, brought a resolution before the House to ascertain what steps had been taken to inquire into the affairs of the American Sugar Refining Company. Mr. Hopkins stated at the time that every Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee would vote to repeal the duty on refined sugar "if opportunity to vote on it were given by the majority of the committee." The Democratic majority in the committee, however, failed to afford the opportunity.

It is just a year since the Sugar Trust bought up all the competing refineries in Philadelphia, at a cost of about $20,000,000. Within the year the price of refined sugar has been so advanced to the consumers that enough money has been made to pay the regular dividends, also to declare an additional dividend of 10 per cent, and to carry over a cash surplus of $5,000,000.

This monopoly has further refused to supply information concerning its affairs to the Superintendent of the Census, and has managed to evade the laws regulating trusts. The Democratic party has no better opportunity to make a record for itself in the people's interests than by special legislation aimed directly to crush and wipe out this giant monopoly of the United States. Will they do it?

The Columbian Fair.

There was a time when the management of the Nebraska state board of agriculture thought of not holding a fair this Columbian year, with most western states, particularly those near Chicago. Better and wiser conclusions prevailed. It is regretted that at best, a very small proportion of the people will be able to go to Chicago, and that those thus deprived should not be cut off from the great object lesson and annual recreative occasion of a state fair.

To meet the emergency and keep step with the Columbian year demands, extraordinary arrangements have been perfected and all efforts are being made to render the Nebraska state fair and exposition to be held at Lincoln, September 8 to 15 next, the grandest entertainment of the kind ever held in the west.

In the agricultural product line the great factor return at the same time from the west to the world's fair and return. This will bring many strangers from Chicago to see the "New West" this fall. Exhibitors are invited to bear this in mind.

Six hundred dollars is the capital prize this year, for best county collective exhibit, with five other minor ones, not less than one hundred dollars.

Dr. M. J. Davis is a prominent physician of Lowell, Mass., and has been actively engaged in the practice of medicine at that place for the past thirty-five years. SPREADING SUNSHINE

BLIND JENNIE'S PATHETIC STORY OF WAYS OF DOING GOOD.

She Has Built a Temple in a Tenement, Where She Holds Sunday School Each Saturday and Sunday—She Has Scattered Sunshine in Many Homes.

In a little east side tenement she lives, a woman "sore afflicted unto God," yet who knows not the nature of repining. Ah, no! If you ask any child of the neighborhood to tell you the happiest, sweetest, most tranquil person in it, I wager they'll shout with unanimity, "Blind Jennie!"

And it is true as true can be. The light has gone forever from the eyes, a blight rests on the feeble body, but on the peaceful soul and on the mind illumined are lights no doctor's or magician's skill could conjure up, and Jennie, "Blind Jennie," everybody's friend in Lewis street, basks in eternal sunshine.

A simple little story, Jennie's, a story that I might fill full of tears, I suppose, and much sentimentality. But what is the use of weeping if Jennie smiles? Is it not better to rejoice that the little heroine has found so much good to do in the world which has so little good to offer her?

She was struck by lightning many years ago—at least, that is the cause her mother gives of her blindness. This mother, with whom she lives, is a little flighty at times, and that is one of Jennie's crosses, but it is her unflagging industry, going about the streets peddling soap, matches and jimmicks, which pays the rent and brings bread to the poor tenement which the two call home. The bad boys often chase the old woman, taking advantage of her feeble mind, and harass her greatly. There is no crueler beast in the jungles of Asia than the bad boy, and he has not the beast's excuse for cruelty.

After Jennie had been blind some time the disfiguring disease attacked her face. It ate away her mouth and nose and compelled her to wear a thick veil whenever she went out to the church or Sunday school. Doctors said it was a cancer, and attempts were made by kind friends to get Jennie admitted to the Cancer hospital, but the physicians there said that it was no cancer. And so, with that cruelty which sometimes marks the conduct of our hospital attendants, sworn to mercy and kindness, poor Jennie was driven from, one institution to another, and none would have her. None would have her! Shame be it on the name of every one!

And so she retreated to the poor little tenement behind another tenement and prepared to live out her life as best she might.

And then began her Sunday school. She did not seek for scholars. They came to her, as the sparrows did to look for crumbs upon the window sill. They were the children of the very poor. Some of them were of Hebrew birth, like Jennie, others were Roman Catholics. Others did not know if they had been born to any creed, unless it were the creed of poverty and anguish.

How they crowded into that little room! What comfort they found there under the spell of the blind girl, who seemed to them to talk with the tongue of angels! How they awakened the echoes of a region which usually resounded to the songs and curses of the drunken and the vile!

Two Sundays in Jennie's week—Saturday for the Jews and Sunday for the Gentiles.

One day a little girl came up to the room. "I want to come to Sunday school," she said.

"But there is no Sunday school till after dinner."

"Well, I ain't going to have no dinner today, so I guess I'll stay and wait."

You may be sure that she was made welcome, and that she did have dinner that day with Jennie and her mother.

And that is the kind of child who belongs to Jennie's Sunday school. There are fully 50 who belong to it, and who attend either one day or the other.

Jennie's knowledge of the Scriptures and of the hymns sung in the mission and at her home is marvelous. If the words of a hymn whose music attracts her are read to her several times, she remembers them forever after. The singing is one of the great attractions to the little ones.

The members of Jennie's class do not meet at stated hours, but run in whenever they desire.

Ah, what a glorious thing it was that the hospitals turned Jennie from their inhospitable doors! She would have been so useless in those warm and cheerful rooms—a recipient of their aims and nothing else, whereas she has turned her tenement into a temple and filled one of the darkest corners of the city with the light and the grace of God.

Hope Mission chapel keeps its eye on Jennie and her mother and keeps the wolf from entering at the door, as it would do sometimes if they were left absolutely unaided. The good people, who are not overruled themselves, help them out with the rent and the coal man.

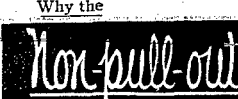

A few days ago the missionary went shopping for Jennie, and this was what he bought after paying out $3 for the rent: Quilt, $1.50; cot, $1.25; underclothing, $1.75; pillow, 74 cents; sheets, 98 cents; two cups and saucers and two knives and forks, 84 cents, and washboard, 18 cents.

"The fund from which we drew these little purchases," said Pastor John B. Devins to me, "was only $87, but we found that Jennie absolutely needed them, and that settled the matter with us."

There was a great time when Jennie's Sunday school celebrated Christmas. Such songs, such games, such recitations! And then there was a collection for the support of a Presbyterian church in Pratt, Minn., and when Jennie came out of the range of her little ones on that one whole dollar to go to that worthy fund!

I wonder if any millionaire in New York gave so largely of his stores as did "Blind Jennie's" children—New York Herald.
