Pond and loving hearts keenly appreciate kindnesses shown in time of sickness, and during the illness of our little child, Bessie, the hearts of our editor and wife were filled with gratitude by the many kind acts and generous aid extended by so many ladies. Truly Wayne can feel proud of her noble women.

The school children were somewhat frightened by the firemen last Thursday afternoon, while testing the water works near the school building. A panic almost ensued in Miss Penney's room and it is thought that the sickness of E. Cunningham's little boy resulted from the fright. It would be good thing if the teachers would train the children in filing out of the room and so instruct them that serious accidents may be avoided in case of fire.

Dr. W. A. Love informs us that he will soon move his family to Craig.
The doctor has been a resident of Wayne for a number of years and his numerous friends here will wish himself and estimable family health and prosperity in their new home.

At the meeting of the fire department last Thursday evening a vote of thanks was extended to the citizens for their liberal patronage in making the recent ball a decided success. A committee was also appointed to procure eighteen rubber suits for the department.

In spite of the uphill business, the city council has had to contend with and the many obstacles they have had to overcome, the city's business for the year ending May 1st, will close with all debts due liquidated, and there is certainly no one who could wish for better results. Many improvements can be made during the coming year that will greatly add to the city's welfare. Mayor Britton and the members of the council have accomplished as much as any other body of men could have accomplished under existing circumstances.

THE SOCIAL WORLD!

The Week's Happening in and Around the County Capital.

An Impromptu Party.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Neely entertained very elegantly last Thursday evening, complimentary to Mrs. Boyd of Coleridge, and Mr. T. J. Steele, of Tyndal, S. D., and although it was an impromptu affair the evening was thoroughly enjoyed in a game of high-five. Seven of the players tied for first prize, which was finally awarded to Mrs. Britton. Mr. Bressler won the consolation prize only to find there was none. At the close of the contest an elaborate menu was served. The event will long remain as a bright spot of a delightful evening. The guests present were: Messrs. and Mesdames Dearborn, Bressler, Britton, Will and Walt Weber, Kohl, Northrop, H. C. Wright, Chace, Smith, Brenner, and Mrs. H. O. Boyd and T. J. Steele.

Miss Mary Nangle and Mrs. R. H. James will entertain a number of their friends at the home of the former this evening.

Misses Myrtal Ford, Grace White and Eva Oldman and Messrs Lou Philleo, C. B. Tower and Arthur Miller drove out to the home of Miss Florence Ferris Tuesday afternoon. An excellent supper was served and the guests were royally entertained by the accomplished hostess.

Mrs. Frank Fuller entertained the ladies of the Mouday club Monday afternoon and the meeting was a very pleasant affair. A long and interesting letter from Mrs. Dan Harrington, of Salt Lake, was read before the club, after which excellent refreshments were served.

Miss Ferris' Party.

Miss Florence Ferris entertained another company of young people last Friday and Saturday evenings at the home of her parents north of town, the girls going out Friday evening and remaining all day Saturday. The boys were taken out in the bus Saturday evening, arriving there about seven o'clock. About eight o'clock a splendid supper was served, partners being secured by the fishing process. The evening was spent in various kinds of amusements and everybody was sorry when the hour for departure arrived. Those present were: Misses Ola Childs, Leta Corbit, Gertie Weber, Alma Jones, Bertha Armstrong, Regnier and Hunter and Messrs Robt. Armstrong, Frank Henry, Fen Ellis, Elmer Lundburg, Harry Jones, Chas Tower and Raymond Tracy.

KETTLE-DRUM.

Mrs. R. Philleo and Mrs. F. G. Philleo entertain a large number of their lady friends at a Kettle-drum party this afternoon from three to seven. The hostesses are excellent entertainers and the party is an assured success. The invited guests are Mesdames:

The first rehearsal of Julius Caesar was begun Wednesday forenoon. This week the Pirates of Penzance, will keep a large number of the students quite busy for some time.

Last Friday evening's literary society listened to a program consisting almost entirely of original productions, which were, all things considered quite creditable. A large number of teachers and other desirable down town people were in attendance.

W. M. Wright brought suit against T. J. Steele for $80.00 commission for the sale of real estate. The case was tried before Judge Martin Monday and resulted in a judgment for plaintiff in the sum of $30.00 and costs. Mr. Steele will probably take an appeal.

South Riverside (Cal) Bee.—Mrs. W. M. Wright, wife of a prominent attorney at Wayne, Nebraska, is visiting California accompanied by her son Fred, an interesting youth of about twelve years. Mrs. Wright is visiting Mrs. Herb C. Foster and is highly pleased with South Riverside and Southern California in general. She was formerly a neighbor of Mrs. Foster and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dyer in Wayne.

A severe rheumatic pain in the left shoulder had troubled Mr. J. H. Loper a well known druggist of Des Moines, Iowa, for over six months. At times the pain was so severe that he could not lift anything. With all he could do he could not get rid of it until he applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm. "I only made three applications of it," he says, "and have since been free from all pain." He now recommends it to persons similarly afflicted. It is for sale by Phil H. Kohl, Druggist.

F. M. McElreth of Coleridge, has traded 240 acres of Cedar county land for Kesau Bros. stock of boots and shoes. W. M. Miller of Hartington had an interest in the land and was in Wayne on Tuesday to ship his interest in the stock to Hartington. Mr. McElreth arrived yesterday and will continue the boot and shoe business here and will also put in a line of gents' furnishing goods. He comes to Wayne highly recommended as a business man and will no doubt meet with success.

The annual congregational meeting of the Presbyterian church was held Tuesday evening. Reports were made by the different church societies, the church treasurer and the Sunday school secretary, and everything taken into consideration the past year has been one of the most successful in the history of the church. Thirty-seven have been received into the church during the year, making a total of over 100 now on the church roll. The average Sunday school attendance was 337. J. T. Mattison and D. Cunningham were elected Elders. The office of Deacon was created, and Mr. Nettleton and L. M. Anderson elected as such officers for a term of three years. W. E. Howard was re-elected treasurer and M. S. Davies, chorister. A. J. Ferguson, A. L. Tucker, Ed. Mitchell, J. G. Mines and F. G. Philleo were elected as trustees for a term of one year. W. E. Wrestling Match.

Lovers of athletic sports to the number of an hundred or more gathered at the town hall Saturday evening to witness the contest between Wm. Ashmore and George Hedrick. The match was best two and three falls for a purse of fifty dollars and door receipts. Those who paid to witness the contest claim to have received their moneys worth. After a round of nine minutes, referee D. T. Working, gave the first fall to Hedrick. The next two falls were won by Ashmore, who outwinded his opponent, besides using the "strangle hold."

If a few of our subscribers will "drop around" and plunk a few dollars on subscription into our pocket book, they will have done a noble thing—paid a newspaper debt.

Randolph Times.—Wayne now has a trio of newspapers, which for beauty, enterprise and decency are not excelled from the fertile valleys of the Missouri to the dunes of the arid region of the 27th parallel.
Randolph papers show that the two drug stores of that town are great advertisers and that they do a large amount of business. Messrs Waldron & Co. and Hills Pharmacy are known and talked of far outside the trade limits of Randolph.

Pierce Call.—The speech by Miss White, county superintendent of Wayne county, was listened to by a crowded house last Friday evening. Her subject was "woman suffrage" and while we think she did not advance any new argument and was decidedly in the wrong on some of the points that were brought forward, yet as a whole the argument was clear, logical and no doubt converted some of those that were "on the fence" besides it served as an inspiration to those who believe in the cause of woman suffrage.

Columbus Journal.—C. J. Rundell, of Wayne, Nebraska, was in the city last week, and addressed the citizens gathered at the Maennerchor hall to hear the exercises at the Stock Breeders' Association. Mr. Rundell is the Nebraska director of the projected Gulf and Interstate railway, and is enthusiastic in setting forth its claims to public recognition. The methods of the company, as set forth recently in an extended article in the Journal, are out of the beaten track, and if they could be put into practice would make a revolution in railroading.

Citizens' Caucus.

A Citizens' Caucus to nominate candidates for city offices and two members of the Board of Education is called to meet at the town hall on Friday evening, March 16th, 1894, at 7:30 o'clock. A. P. Childs, Chairman.

A SAD DEATH.

RITCHIE.—Wm. Ritchie departed this life Tuesday February 6th, 1894, at 11:15 p.m. and would have been 47 years of age the 23rd of April.
It will be remembered that on February 19th, Mr. Ritchie was thrown from his buggy while enroute to the country on official business sustaining a frightful fracture of the bones of the left foot and leg, and that he was thoroughly chilled before he attracted the attention of the school children nearly an hour later. It was hoped at the time that his foot could be saved, but he grew steadily worse from his injuries until amputation was necessary. Tuesday afternoon the operation was performed by Dr. Leisenring assisted by Drs. Williams and Wightman and the limb taken off about midway between the knee and foot. The patient never recovered from the shock and died at the hour above stated.
Deceased was born April 27, 1847, in Des Moines county, Iowa, where he was married to Miss Anna Rowe February 4, 1868. In 1883 they moved to Wayne county, Nebraska, where they resided for three years and then moved to Perkins county. They returned to Wayne in 1890 where they have resided ever since.
Mr. Ritchie was a member of the M. E. church in Iowa and had signified his intention of becoming a member here. And in the suffering of the two weeks he said to friends that he was ready to go, his only sorrow being to leave his family. He leaves a wife, two sons and two daughters to mourn his untimely death and the entire community sympathizes with the stricken family in their bereavement.
The funeral will be held at the M. E. church to-morrow afternoon at 2:00 o'clock Rev. Millard preaching the funeral sermon. The burial ceremonies will be under the supervision of the Knights of Pythias of which order deceased was a faithful and honored member.

SEE! SEE!

Miss Christopher will leave for St. Paul next Saturday. Look out for a fine line of "PATTERN HATS" and "NOVALTIES" when she returns.

THE WAR!

The war in the senate over the Wilson bill still rages, but it matters not to smokers when they can procure one of those superb Perfectos, Faultless or Imperial cigars manufactured by Adams & Matur.—No one but prejudiced persons will contend for a moment that these cigars are inferior to other brands. Try one.

Oh, come back, come back, come back to the folds of the G. O. P.

Oh, come back, come back, come back and get out of the quick sand of Democracy.

Gladstone, the Grand Old Man, and the Blaine of England, has resigned the partnership.

The Sioux City Journal, in speaking of the election says that a part of the spirit of Pennsylvania drifted over into Iowa.

There are a few democrats left in Wayne county, also a few populists, who still retain a longing desire to hold office. Its useless, boys. Come back to your first love.

All together, now for Wayne, for Wayne county and for our grand commonwealth. Pull together for every interest, enterprise and industry and there can be but one grand result—success.

Auditor Eugene Moore and Treasurer Bartley will no doubt be the only state officials who will be renominated by the republicans this fall. If such proves true it will be well for all concerned.

If Cleveland had been cast forth upon the stormy billows during his recent duck hunt he would have gained some knowledge of how democracy will be treated within the next three years at the hands of the great American people.

The municipal election in Iowa Monday, resulted victoriously for the republicans all over the state. In Sioux City they made almost a clean sweep. As the New York Sun says, "it is a portent—emblazoned on the sky" for democracy.

To mule or not not to mule, occupies a prominent place in the Iowa legislature. The grand old party of the state should not be put down for a trifling Governor Jackson's plurality was large enough to plainly establish the duty of the republican legislators.

The great Tammany society of New York City, was in times past, a great protective association, American to the core, and absolutely in favor of the use of American manufactured goods. But it has proven itself a democratic party of turn coats. It is now for the Brits' because there's more in it for the Tammanyites.

The decision of Judge Grosscup, of the U. S. District court, of the northern district of Illinois, practically renders the inter-state commerce laws nugatory. The court holds that officials not answering questions the nature of which would criminate them before the grand jury are exempt from answering by the fifth amendment to the constitution of the United States.

The democratic members of congress dare not adopt Czar Reed's rule for counting a quorum. They would then be placed in a position where they would have to enact such laws as would defeat democracy forever. Ah, they must have a barrier, it is their only hope. But the people will not be hoodwinked by the democratic "campaign of education."

A year and a half ago Democratic statesmen assumed business men of the grand future before them under "a tariff for revenue only," and the "robber tariff" smashed. Here we are at the end of a full year of power, and what have they done? Wrecks everywhere prosperity nowhere; not a promise redeemed nor scarcely a bright spot in sight. (Chicago Inter Ocean.)

Nebraska sets at the front. Senator Allen has set all the statesmen at Washington agog with the declaration that there is no law for the $100,000,000 gold reserve; Billy Bryan keeps whooping 'em up; H. D. Estabrook has all the New York papers taking about his oratory; and Buffalo Bill has licked Fred May with neatness and dispatch. Nebraska is one of the greatest states in the union, and everybody is compelled to take cognizance of it. Oakland Independent.

Men die but expect to rise again. The democratic party died in years gone by but Phoenix-like rose from the ruins purged from its iniquities and stronger than ever. It has now (thanks to Cleveland) become so rotten the second time that nothing but death can purge it and again make it the respected and honored party of old. Cleveland's bull-headedness has ruined the party. He was elected on the Chicago platform in which certain things were promised the people, believing these promises would be kept the voters changed from the high tariff and monopoly party to the democratic party hoping to gain thereby. In this they have been disappointed. Why? Because Grover Cleveland has allowed Wall street and eastern corporations to dictate his policy of administration. As a consequence the south and west have been completely ignored. In return they will smite the hand that ruined them and by so doing will again put the republican party in power. The voters do not go deep enough. The party is not to blame because Cleveland has betrayed it. The democratic party continues to advocate the principles most favorable to the people. All that is needed is to put a new head on it and to do this properly the south and west should be recognized. The time has passed when a few men in New York can control the country. It is too much like the tail wagging the dog which is in opposition to the natural law of the universe. Awake, and fight for just recognition! (Oakland Times, (Dem.)

U. S. Bonds.

For the benefit of a few of our populist friends or anyone else we wish to announce that if you desire any of the U. S. Bonds recently issued by Secretary Carlisle, you can procure same in sums of $1,000 and upwards by calling on A. L. Tucker, at the Citizen's Bank. The "Wall Street men" offer the bonds at exactly the same price paid the government. All that will be asked is that the accrued interest be paid to date. These bonds pay three per cent per annum. Here's a chance for you to secure Uncle Sam's Bonds and you can have any number of them you desire. They were purchased to give credit to the government, and not as a speculation as our populist friends like to talk about. That you may verify our statement we ask you to call at the Citizens' Bank and learn for yourself. Of course it will take away some of the pop's thunder. The G. O. P. may yet prove a blessing to those who may accept of conversion and believe in the promise of "come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest" The whole country is pretty heavy laden just at present and needs a rest. Seek ye the grand old party.

Congressman Hepburn, of Iowa, made a good point in the pension debate yesterday. He made the assertion that the late Confederate States contributed not one dollar toward the payment of pensions of Union veterans, and followed this by the statement that of the $150,000,000 internal revenue taxes the South paid less than $9,000,000; of the $177,000,000 customs receipts less than $4,000,000, and of the miscellaneous receipts less than $2,000,000. In return the South is paid $9,000,000 in sugar bounty, $5,000,000 in pensions, and $5,000,000 as a deficit in postal receipts. This was a center shot and there was no reply.—Inter Ocean.

The populist record up to date in Kansas seems to be Secretary of State Osborn, convicted of criminal libel; Assistant Attorney General Allen; bounced for boodling; Labor Commissioner Todd, pleaded guilty to an assault upon an unarmed man; Adit. Gen. Artz, relieved of an office under charges of theft and forgery. This is the record of a year in the one state in control of the party which was to regenerate the country.—Sioux City Journal.

Congressman Bland says: "The people elected a Democratic majority in Congress to do business." Well haven't they done business? They have enacted more "free soup houses," and arranged for more "receivers," closed more factories and put out more furnace fires than any dozen Congresses that ever assembled. Bland should not be too hard on his "ninety Democratic majority." It has been awfully busy.—Inter Ocean.

Nebraska is sorry for her political sins and wanderings and the Lord will forgive her. She never went farther astray than to elect one democratic governor and two mixed demopop legislators, and that was not very bad considering the number of strange gods that were set up. Next fall full atonement will be made and the approving smile of Providence will rest upon us once more. York Times.

The Buffalo Express wants "the wide-eyed states of the wild West to secede and join Mexico where they belong." Our Buffalo neighbor should hold its horses. "The wild West" will be all right when it gets clear of the Buffalo sheriff and the other fellows who are now running a national slaughter house. The wild west doesn't pull down the American flag, but it will stand ready to pull down the men who did.—Inter Ocean.

"Perhaps you would not think so, but a very large proportion of diseases in New York comes from carelessness about catching cold," says Dr. Syrus Edson.

"It is such a simple thing and so common that very few people, unless it is a case of pneumonia, pay any attention to a cold. New York is one of the healthiest places on the Atlantic Coast, and yet there are a great many cases of catarrh and consumption which have their origin in this neglect of the simplest precaution of every day life. The most sensible advice is, when you have one get rid of it as soon as possible. By all means do not neglect it." Dr. Edson does not tell you how to cure a cold but he will.

The county printing articles of the Democrat of two years ago as reproduced in the HERALD last week, placed that great "organ of the tax payers" in rather a demagogical light. It attempted to wiggle out of it by avowing the Democrat was under different management and control at that time, but everybody knows that the writer of the articles on printing in the last two issues of the Democrat and those of two years ago is one and the same person, and was as much interested in said paper financially then as now. In one breath it says the commissioners gave the two old republican papers $400 of the county's money and in another avers that "it does not believe nor has it intimated that the legal rates for county printing are too high. In fact the Democrat is at loggerheads with itself as to what it believes and its position in a nutshell" is encompassed by a very frail structure. The legal printing amounts to about $400 all told, about $280 of which is for the tax list which is paid by the lots and lands advertised, hence, the Board could not make the papers a "present" of more than $120 of the "county's money" and that for all the rest of the legal printing. This the Democrat will have to acknowledge or again give itself the lie.

The Democrat says that the HERALD's county printing article "sounds like the plea of a paid attorney." This had to read because the writer had anticipated the said article when he made particular the saving of the files of the Democrat two years. Because the Democrat is under the control of a "paid attorney" it should not judge its neighbors by itself because the HERALD is owned, published and controlled by its proprietors, and is amply able to look after its interests as the Democrat will find when it takes an appeal from the bills of the HERALD, and it may be an expensive undertaking for said paper and some of its friends. The HERALD never made or offered to make a contract with the commissioners to do the printing for 1/2 of legal rates and the Board has no bond to that effect.

As to the printing of the treasurers statements the HERALD believes that if the commissioners will order the treasurer to furnish the copy of his statements in a different form, (unless the law provides for present form) the printing can be done for one-half the amount; and this paper will cheerfully accept of the change. The editor of the Democrat, formerly the Gazette, received the same rate for printing the said statements as this paper and did also when he was editor of the HERALD. The form has never been ordered changed and unless it is the same rate will be charged as heretofore.

There can be no "printing steal" because the commissioners have simply designated the HERALD and Watchman as the papers to publish the legal printing of the county for one-half each the legal rate allowed by law. If that is stealing then the editor of the Democrat is guilty of stealing year in and year out during the past as that is the rate he always received when the Democrat and this paper were awarded the printing. at any rate, that she did not open all her batteries of witchery to rekindle in the young earl's heart the kindly memory which he had so unfortunately lost. For shame, Mrs. Grundy will say, "that brazen young woman is engaged to Mr. David Maclane," and Mrs. Grundy is perfectly right. It was wrong. The young lady herself stated that fact to Lord Cleve, with a sly glance at him and another at Mr. Quentheim, and a faint pretense of wishing to leave. Lord Cleve, however, found Lady Evelyn's society charming, and the conversation on her side had focused on all about her self-imposed duties as a vendor on behalf of charity. She thought the young man had much approved by his long residence abroad, and his manner towards her amply delightful. In the result, the conversation degenerated into a not so harmless flirtation, which was kept within bounds by the opportune presence of Mr. Quentheim. As it was, they became so interested by each other's converse that they did not notice the approach of Lady Gwendale, who, accompanied by Messrs. George and David Maclane, stopped for some seconds in front of the little group without either of the three being aware of her presence. Lady Gwendale acted as a cautious general; she neither appeared to approve nor to rebuke; she did not even venture to rebuke. She was, nevertheless, just a trifle afraid that a word might escape from her daughter's lips which could be misconstrued by Mr. Maclane, and therefore ended the slight temporary embarrassment by saying:—
"My dear, Mr. Maclane has been looking for you all over the gardens." Then, seeing that the young lady rose and bowed, she held out her hand. "Lord Cleve," she said, in her blandest tones, "you must allow me to introduce myself, for I am aware that you have most likely forgotten me. I am Lady Gwendale, and your mother was one of my earliest and dearest friends."
The young man, taken aback by the lady's sudden apparition, and even more by the presence of the two Americans, whose cold gaze seemed to penetrate him like something unanny or inexplicably loathsome, he knew not why, stammered a few incoherent words. The moment afterwards he hid himself behind his seemingly unreasonable dislike to the Maclanes.
"Now that you know me," continued Lady Gwendale, in her blindest mood, "you must allow me to introduce to you my future son-in-law, Mr. David Maclane."
At these words Lord Cleve disapproved a new, and to him reasonable, reason for disliking the young Westphaler. He was shortly to marry Lady Evelyn's daughter, and strange as it may seem, the young earl suddenly considered this a personal injury.

David Maclane, in return, looked at the young Englishman as if he could give him a warm-hearted greeting. "I have an idea," said Lord Cleve to Mr. Quentheim, as they were walking back, "quite a confused idea, but still an idea, that I have met these men before. I wish Lucy were not so reticent on the subject. The pity is that the more I try to think the less my brain will lend itself to the work, and I generally break down hopelessly in any attempt of the kind."
"Why don't you go and see Sir Whittam-Cuthbertson?" suggested Mr. Quentheim. "He is the great specialist in cases of this sort, and some of the cures he has made are nothing short of marvelous."
"I don't think there is much chance for me," Herbert answered. "My injuries, I am afraid, are permanent."
"It cannot possibly do harm to try," the lawyer replied. "It is surely worth while."
"I will take your advice," exclaimed Herbert, with a hot and sudden determination in his eyes. "I'll go and call upon Sir Whittam-Cuthbertson to-morrow."

Origin of Closure Rule.
This word closure, about which we are hearing so much, came into legislative use in the British House of Commons in 1887, and is applied to a rule which cuts off debate and prevents further discussion of a motion by the minority, bringing the question to a direct and conclusive vote. The French word cloture is often employed to express the same thing. It is really an emphatic and decisive way of saying: "Come, we have talked enough about this matter; we must decide now."
From Different Standpoints.
"And this is the state penitentiary, is it?" inquired the stranger who was strolling about the environs of Joliet. "It is a pretty fine piece of architecture."
"It depends a good deal on how you are looking at it," replied the man spoken to, winking slyly at the bystanders.
"Ah, yes, I suppose it does," rejoined the stranger. "How does it look on the inside?"—Chicago Inter Ocean.

THE NAME OF JESUS.

IT CHEERS THE DOWNTHRODDEN OF THIS CENTURY.

He Was the Great Liberator of the Human Race in Body as Well as in Soul—Talmage on Christ, the Conqueror of the World.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 4, 1894.—From the startling figure of the text chosen by Rev. Dr. Talmage in his sermon in the Brooklyn Tabernacle to-day, the preacher brought out the radical truth of the Christian religion. It was Sacramental day in the Tabernacle. The subject of the sermon was "Christ the Conqueror," the text being Isa. 63: 1: "Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? this that is glorious in his apparel, traveling in the greatness of his strength?"
Edom and Bozrah, having been the scene of fierce battle, whose words are used here or in any other part of the Bible, they are figures of speech setting forth scenes of severe conflict. As now we often use the word Waterloo to describe a decisive contest of any kind, so the words Bozrah and Edom in this text are figures of speech descriptive of a scene of great slaughter. Whatever else the prophet may have meant to describe, he most certainly meant to depict the Lord Jesus Christ, saying: "Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah, traveling in the greatness of his strength?"
When a general is about to go out to the wars a flag and a sword are publicly presented to him and the maidens bring flowers, and the young men lead the cannon, and the train starts amid a huzz, that draws the thunder of the wheels and the shriek of the whistle. But all this will give no idea of the excitement that there must have been in heaven when Christ started out on the campaign of the world's conquest. If they could have foreseen the siege that would be laid to him, and the maltreatment he would suffer, and the burdens he would have to carry, and the battles he would have to fight, I think there would have been a million volunteers in heaven who would have insisted on coming along with him; but no, they only accompanied him to the gate, their last shout heard clear down to the earth, the space between the two worlds bridged with a great hosanna. You know there is a wide difference between a man's going off to battle and coming back again. When he goes off it is with epaulets untangled, with banner unspiked, with horses sleek and shining from the groom. All that there is of struggle and pain is to come yet. So it was with Christ. He had not yet fought a battle. He was starting out, and though this world did not give him a warm-hearted greeting, there was a gentle moaning to fold him in her arms, and a babe finds no difference between a stable and a palace, between couriers and chmel-drivers. As Jesus stepped on the stage of this world, it was amid angelic shouts in the galleries and amid the kindest-maternal ministrations. But soon hostile forces began to gather. They deployed from the Sanhedrim. They were detailed from the standing army. They came out from the Cæsarian castles. The vagabonds in the street joined the gentlemen of the mansion. Spirits rode up from hell, and in long array there came a force together that threatened to pit to rout this newly-arrived one from heaven. Jesus now seeing the battle gathering, lifted his own standard; but who gathered about it? How feeble the recruits! A few shorn men, a blind beggar, a woman with an alabaster box, another woman with two mites, and a group of friendless, moneyless, and positionless people came to his standard. What chance was there for him? Nazareth against him. Bethlehém against him. Capernaum against him. Jerusalem against him. Gallilee against him. The courts against him. The army against him. The throne against him. The world against him. All hell against him. No wonder they asked him to surrender. But he could not surrender, he could not apologize, he could not make a back step. He had come to strike for the deliverance of the world, and he must do it. They asked to strike for the deliverance of the world. Then they sent out their pickets to watch him. They saw in what house he went, and when he came out. They watched what he ate, and who with; what he drank, and how much. They did not dare to make their final assault, for they knew not but that behind him there might be a reinforcement that was not seen. But at last the battle came. It was to be more fierce than Bozrah, more bloody than Gettysburg, involving more than Austerlitz, more combatsants employed than at Chancellors, a gladiatorial conflict than all the battles of the earth put together, though Edward Burke's estimate of thirty-five thousand millions of the slain be accurate. The day was Friday. The hour was between 12 and 3 o'clock. The field was a slight hillock north-west of Jerusalem. The forces engaged were earth and hell, joined as allies on one side, and heaven, represented by a solitary inhabitant, on the other.

The hour came. Oh, what a time it was! I think that that day the universe looked on. The spirits that could be spared from the heavenly temple, and could get conveyance of winged chariot, came down from above, and spirits getting furlough from beneath came up; and they listened, and they looked, and they watched. Oh, what an uneven battle! Two worlds armed on one side, an unarmed man on the other. The regiment of the Roman army at that time stationed at Jerusalem began the attack. They knew how to fight, for they belonged to the most thoroughly drilled army of all the world. With spears glittering in the sun, they charged up the hill. The horses pranced and reared amid the excitement of the populace—the heels of the riders plunged in the flanks, urging them on. The weapons began to tell on Christ. See how faint he looks! There the blood starts, and there, and there, and there. If he is to have reinforcements let him call them up now. No; he must do this work alone—alone. He is dying. Feel for yourself of the wrist; the pulse is feeble. Feel under the arm; the warmth is less. He is dying. Ay, they pronounce him dead. And just at that moment that they pronounced him dead he rallied, and from this wounds he unsheathed a weapon which staggered the Roman legions down the hill, and hurled the Satanic battalions into the pit. It was a weapon of love—infinite love, all-conquering love. Mightier than javelin or spear, it triumphed over all. Put back, ye armies of earth and hell! The tide of battle turns. Jesus hath overcome. Let the people stand apart and make a line, that he may pass down from Calvary to Jerusalem, and thence on and out all around the world. The battle is fought. The victory is achieved. The triumphal march is begun. Hark to the hoofs of the warrior's steed, and the tramping of a great multitude; for he has many friends now. The hero of earth and heaven advances. Cheer! cheer! "Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah, traveling in the greatness of his strength?"

We behold here a new revelation of a blessed and startling fact. People talk of Christ as though he were going to do something grand for us after a while. He has done it. People talk as though, ten or twenty years from now, in the closing hours of our life, Jesus will help us. He has done the work already. He did it eighteen hundred and sixty-one years ago. You might as well talk of Washington as though he were going to achieve our national independence in 1860, as to speak of Christ as though he were going to achieve our salvation in the future. He did it in the year of our Lord 33, eighteen hundred and sixty-one years ago, on the field of Bozrah, the Captain of our salvation fighting unto death for you and my emancipation. All we have to do is to accept that fact in our heart of hearts, and we are free for this world, and we are free for the world to come. But, lest we might not accept, Christ comes through here to-day, "traveling in the greatness of his strength," not to tell you that he is going to fight for you some battle in the future, but to tell you that the battle is already fought, and the victory already won.

You have noticed that, when soldiers come home from the wars, they carry on their flags the names of the battle-fields where they were distinguished. The Englishman coming back has on his banner Inkermann and Balaklava; the Frenchman, Jena and Eylau; the German, Versailles and Sedan. And Christ has on the banner he carries as a conqueror the names of ten thousand battle-fields, the one for you and for me. He rides past all our homes of bereavement, by the door-bell wailed in sorrow, by the wardrobe-blows of the poor, by the dismantled fortress of our strength. Come out and greet him, O ye people! See the names of all the battle-passes on his flag. "Ye who are poor, read on this ensign the story of Christ's hard crusts and pillowless head. Ye who are persecuted, read here of the ruffians who chased him from his first breath to his last. Mighty to soothe your troubles, mighty to balk your calamities, mighty to tread down your foes, "traveling in the greatness of his strength." Though his horse be brown with the dust of the march, and the fetlocks be wet with the carnage, and the bit be red with the blood of your spiritual foes, he comes up now, not exhausted from the battle, but fresh as when he went into it—coming up from Bozrah, "traveling in the greatness of his strength."

You know that when Augustus and Constantine and Trajan and Titus came back from the wars, what a time there was! You know they came on horseback in chariots, and they were trophies before and there were captives behind, and there were people shouting on all sides, and there were the garlands hung from the window, and they had the highway all lined with arches and springs. The old mosaic to-day at Constantinople, Rimini, and Rome still tell their admiration for those heroes. And shall we let our Conqueror go without lifting a shout of acclaim? Have we not flowers red enough to depict the carnage, white enough to celebrate the victory, fragrant enough to breathe the joy? Those men of whom I just spoke dragged their victims at the chariot-wheels; but Christ our Lord takes those who once were captives and invites them into his chariot to ride, while he puts around them the ann of his strength, saying: "I have loved thee with an everlasting love, and the waters shall not drown it, and the fire shall not burn it, and eternity shall not exhaust it."
If this be true, I can not see how any man can carry his sorrows a great while. If this conqueror from Bozrah is going to beat back all your griefs, why not trust him? Oh, do you not feel under this respect your griefs falling back, and your tears drying up, as you hear the tramp of a thousand illustrious promises led on by the conqueror of Bozrah, "traveling in the greatness of his strength," on that Friday, which the Episcopal church rightly celebrates, calling it "Good Friday," your soul and mine were contended for. On that day Jesus proved himself mightier than earth and hell, and when the lances struck him, he gathered them up into a sheaf, as a reaper gathers the grain, and he stacked them. Mounting the horse of the Apocalypse, he rode down through the ages, "traveling in the greatness of his strength." On that day your sin and mine perished, if we will only believe it.

There, as he some one here who may say, "I don't like the color of this conqueror's garments. You tell me that his garments were not only splattered with the blood of conflict, but also that they were soaked, that they were saturated, that they were dyed in it." I admit it. You say you do not like that. Then I quote to you two passages of scripture: "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission." "In the blood is the atonement." But it was not your blood. It was his own. Not only enough to redder his garments and to redder his horse, but enough to wash away the sins of the world. O the blood on his brow, the blood on his hands, the blood on his feet, the blood on his side! It seems as if an artery must have been cut.

There is a fountain filled with blood,
Drawn from Emmanuel's veins,
And sinners plunged beneath that flood,
Lost all their guilty stains.

At 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon go among the places of business or toil. It will be no difficult thing for you to find men who, by their looks, show you that they are overworked. They are prematurely old. They are hastening rapidly toward their decease. They have gone through crises in business that shattered their nervous system, and pulled on the brain. They have a shortness of breath, and a pain in the back of the head, and at night an insomnia that alarms them. Why are they drudging at business early and late? For fun? No; it would be difficult to extract any amusement out of that exhaustion. Because they are avaricious? In many cases, no. Because their own personal expenses are lavish? No; a few hundred dollars would meet all their wants. The simple fact is, the man is enduring all that fatigue and exasperation, and wear and tear, to keep his home prosperous. There is an invisible line reaching from that store, from that bank, from that shop, from that scaffolding, to a quiet scene a few blocks, a few miles away, and there is the secret of that business endurance. He is simply the champion of a household, for which he wins bread, and wardrobe, and education, and propriety, and in such battle ten thousand men, of ten thousand business men whom I bury, nine die of overwork. Others, some sadder disease finds them with no power of resistance, and they are gone. Life for life. Blood for blood. Substitution!

At 1 o'clock to-morrow morning, the hour when slumber is most uninterrupted and most profound, walk amid the dwelling-houses of the city. Here and there you will find a dim light, because it is the household custom to keep a subdued light burning; but most of the houses from base to top are as dark as though uninhabited. A merciful God has sent forth the archangel of sleep, and he puts his wings over the city. But yonder is a clear light burning and outside on the window casement a glass or pitcher containing food for a sick child, the food is set in the fresh air. This is the sixth night that mother has sat up with that sufferer. She has to the last point obeyed the physician's prescription, not giving a drop too much or too little, or a moment too soon or too late. She is very anxious, for she has buried three children with the same disease, and she prays and weeps, each prayer and sob ending with a kiss of the pale cheek. In dim kindness she gets the little one through the ordeal. After it is all over, the mother is taken down. Brain or nerves fever sets in, and one day she leaves the convalescent child with another blessing, and goes up to join the three in the kingdom of heaven. Life for life. Substitution! The fact is that there are an uncounted number of mothers who, after they have navigated a large family of children through all the diseases of infancy, and got them fairly started up the flowering slope of boyhood and girlhood, have only strength enough left to die. They fade away. Some call it consumption; some call it nervous prostration, some call it intermittent or malarial disposition; but I call it martyrdom of the domestic circle. Life for life. Blood for blood. Substitution!

Or perhaps the mother, fingers long enough to see a son set on the wrong road, and his former kindness becomes rough reply when she expresses anxiety about him. But she goes right on, looking carefully after his apparel, remembering his every battle-battle-some mania, and when he is brought home worn out with dissipation, nurses him till he gets weak and starts him again, and hopes and expects and prays, and counts the days and suffers, until her strength gives out and she fails. She is gone, and attendants bending over her pillow, ask her if she has any message to leave, and she makes great effort to say something, but out of three or four minutes of inarticulate utterance they can catch but three words, "My poor boy." The simple fact is, she died for him. Life for life. Substitution!

But after awhile, the returning conqueror will reach the gate, and all the armies of the great will be with him. I hope you will be there, and I will be there. As we go through the gate around about the theme for the time being, "a great multitude that no man can number"—all heaven can tell you, not asking, right away, which one is Jesus, not only because of the brightness of his face, but because, while all the other inhabitants in glory are robes in white, scarlet, and white—his robes shall be scarlet, even the dyed garments of Bozrah. I catch a glimpse of that triumphant host, but the gate opens and slants so quickly, I can hear only half a sentence, and it is this, "Into him who hath washed us in his blood!"

GOOD ROAD PROBLEM.

THE BEGINNING OF MODERN ROAD SYSTEMS DESCRIBED.

Importance of Careful Construction and Expert Supervision of County Roads.

By W. E. Chamberlain, Member of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

With the advent of the present century the civilized world seemed to awaken to the necessity of improved systems of highways. We can see but very faintly the progress of the early days of application of road improvement from the time the barbarian hordes of the north swept back the civilization of the south and rendered useless those magnificent avenues of war and commerce, built by the Roman emperors during their progressive conquests. At the beginning of the nineteenth century the roads of England, Scotland, Wales and France were described by historians and novelists as being in a deplorable condition. In England the question was carefully considered by the House of Commons before a royal commission, culminated in a report to parliament which resulted in great improvements. Amongst the witnesses appearing before this commission, we see the names of John Loudon McAdam and Sir Thomas Telford, two men who have left their names to others to bring together out of chaos, and to leave behind them monuments of engineering skill and good judgment.

At about this same time France, under the first Napoleon, started out on the development of a system which has no superior; and under this system some forty-eight thousand miles of national and state roads have been constructed, which make travel by highway a pleasure and reduce the cost of transportation of freight to a minimum. It is not my purpose to describe the French system, as it has often been described of late, and is possibly familiar to most of your readers. Suffice it to say that the responsibility of all French roads is concentrated in the hands of a regular corps of engineers, and each mile of road is placed in the hands of capable men, who are held personally responsible for its condition, and the responsibility is gradually concentrated through overseers, divisional engineers and state engineers up to an engineer in chief, who plans and supervises the whole. One sees that it is executed according to his plan. Such a system of supervision makes it possible to keep an exact record, to experiment with different materials for the purpose of determining their value for road purposes, to study from actual experience the best way to gradually eliminate uncertainties, and above all, to fix the responsibility in each and every case.

Road building is treated as a science, and down to the most menial position, experience is the one requisite for permanent employment. The system of the United States is not so good. The position of superintendent of many miles of roads elected solely because he has a large family to support, and needs the salary, or because he has done good work during election, and must be rewarded. What is true of the United States is also true of other European nations. The work is systematized and men are educated to build and maintain.

While Europe was struggling with the problem as to best method of supervising roads, our own people were cutting roads through wildernesses and attempting to remove the trees and bridge the streams, so as to make it possible to get from point to point. Our people naturally followed the lead of the United States, and it is not strange to see the turnpike system of old England duplicated in nearly all its details in New England.

Previous to 1796, no systematic effort seems to have been made to secure a direct inter-town communication. A charter granted in that year to a private turnpike company was followed in quick succession by about one hundred and twenty like charters, covering the state with a network of fully one thousand miles of turnpike roads, costing, in the aggregate, between two and three million dollars. While ordinary engineering skill was shown either in the laying out or building of these turnpikes, their influence must have been very great in the development of a new country. And it is fair to say that the first cost of construction was in every case lost to the extent of the tolls collected at large received the benefit of at least a right of way and a graded roadway.

The effect of railroads on the turnpike may be judged by examining the toll returns of the Salem turnpike, connecting Boston with the coast, and which has been in operation since 1827. These tolls in 1829 amounted to about $12,000, while in 1840, they were a little over $6,000. The turnpike and canal have served a useful purpose, but the railroad has rendered the grade turnpike obsolete. It will be built when there is sufficient segregation of population to warrant it, and wherever it leads, prosperity will follow.

While the railroad has been built, the fact must not be forgotten that it is not to any great extent reach out into the sparsely settled parts, and its work must be carefully supplemented by the highway.

A great part of the manufactured and most of the agricultural products, moveable and immovable, on the country roads, either to or from the railroad stations, and in many cases, team transportation has to be resorted to at both ends of the railroad journey, and it must be admitted that a small saving per ton on this means a large sum in the aggregate. Many estimates have been made as to the cost of the road, and the saving in cost of transportation on good roads. The English commission, in their report of 1831 says: "The saving in the United Kingdom by the introduction of roads means the annual saving of 25,000,000 (£25,000,000) and the saving of an immense number of horses." It is claimed that the loss in the state of Illinois in transporting the freight for the railroad stations amounts to $1,000,000 annually.

Anyone who has ridden over the miles on miles of loose, sandy and bumpy roads, and who has seen the weary and of our state (Massachusetts), must have been impressed with the fact that they have been placed directly on the soil, to the passage of teams. A practical road builder would observe that in many instances nothing but native soil has been used; in other instances he would see where more or less gravel had been placed on the soil, and in certain other instances, where sand prevails, he would notice that clay from the working surface.

In the ordinary repairs, the road machine plays an important part, its use being in the main to give shape, by dragging back materials to the road. Since ceased to be of any value. So long as roads are built of a material that is loose and ruts up, the road scraper will be of great value in repairing. But the result cannot be considered satisfactory, as a road so repaired will not increase the load per horse and will, to a limited extent, shed water. Water below, but near the surface, is a destroying element, and the whole theory and practice is to get it out and keep it out. There is no division of opinion on this point. The only thing that can be done is to make a more practical way of doing this. A dirt road, under cover, would doubtless give satisfaction to light travel and it would probably retain its shape for a long time, if sprinkled just enough to prevent dust forming and not enough to make mud.

A scheme has been propounded in a French town for slinging huge cables from town to town, and attaching the house tops and rigging up cars on them that will whisk people along at the rate of fifteen miles an hour. The motive power will be electricity.

From Millitsch, in Silesia, an extraordinary case of trance is reported. Some delay occurred in the burial of a lady, owing to the grave not being ready. She was the wife of a major in the army. On the fourth day after her supposed death, the maid was placing fresh flowers round the coffin, when she was startled at seeing the body move. Finally the supposed corpse assumed an erect position. She had evidently been in a state of egina during these four days.

SENSE AND NONSENSE.

"What made Spendthrift promise his bride that as long as he had a dollar she could have fifty cents of it?" "Because she had all the money."

"This is a somewhat free translation," said the literary young woman in the book store. "No, miss," replied the new clerk. "It cost a dollar and a half."

"I don't see how you can afford to give a pair of rubbers with every pair of shoes." "My friend, there is nothing equal to a pair of rubbers for getting away with shoes!"

Customer—Among the other items on this bill you've got 'four and a half hours' work." You worked just exactly four hours by the clock. Paper-hanger—Yes, sir, but it took me half an hour to make out the bill.

"I have no objection, Tommy, to your playing with the rich banker's son," said the poor widow. "If he is a good boy, but you don't need to him, do you?" "Yes," answered Tommy. "Me and him plays leap frog."

"I should think you'd miss your watch dead!" said the confidential friend, sympathetically. "Oh, no," replied the philosopher, solemnly. "When I want to know what time it is I just take out the pawn ticket and look it at the nearest clock."

Anxious Mother—I wish, Susan, that when you give baby a bath you would be careful to ascertain whether the water is at the proper temperature. Susan—Oh, don't you worry about that! I don't need no 'mometers. If the little one turns red, the water is too hot; if it turns blue, it's too cold.

Midwinter Surf Bathing.
Sea bathing in late January. It is 14 degrees below zero in the water, and the temperature of the water was 70 degrees just light for a saltwater plunge, and much warmer than the ocean will average at the New England coast resorts in summer. The air was only slightly warmer than the sea, the mercury at noon registered 70 degrees. There was a good sea running, and the surf combed over toward the sands most gracefully and invitingly. It would break over the head and shoulders of a grown person standing up to the waist in the water. The color of the sea here appears to be paler than that of the ocean farther north, and at high noon today with a cloudless sky overhead and the rays of the sun gilding on the crests of the waves, few have ever seen a more strikingly beautiful combination of sea, land and sky.—Ormond (Fla.) Co. Atlanta Constitution.

Principles that should Govern Modern Business Architecture.
A Greek temple never needs anything but a Greek temple, a Gothic cathedral must always be a Gothic cathedral, a modern office building must always be an office building. The glory of each is its individuality and the directness with which it expresses its object. The Greek temple, the development of the Greek ideal in architecture; the Gothic cathedral was the development of the medieval ideal; the modern office building, if it is to have the rank in architecture to which its importance entitles it, must be the development of modern needs, very different styles, nor of suitability of styles; it is the natural treatment of complicated and difficult conditions in a natural manner.

Life or Death?
It is of vital importance that it should be understood by persons whose kidney are inactive, that this condition of things is directly indicative of many deadly diseases, such as diabetes, albuminuria, and all diseases of a very obstinate character in their mature stage, and a thence a fatality. They often suffer the most painful and excruciating pains in the back and joints, and are often rendered helpless by the discharge of their functions. It is to be discharged their functions. It is to be discharged their functions. It is to be discharged their functions.

Tons of Petrified Fish.
In the northwestern part of Colorado there is a region several hundred square miles in extent which is literally a vast deposit of petrified fish of all sizes and shapes. These fish beds, which contain fish ranging in size from 100 feet in thickness and extend up and down the Green river for a distance of 150 or 200 miles.—Detroit Times.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than any other, and it is incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires a constitutional cure. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

He Did Not Smile.
They were rival candidates for a vacant seat in parliament, and they smiled patronizingly when they met together in a railway carriage. "My good sir," said the rival kindly, "whatever on earth has prompted you to oppose me in the forthcoming election? You haven't a chance to win. It's a donkey to a strawberry against you."

"Indeed!" said the second rival dubiously, "but certainly, what would you encourage, but perhaps you wouldn't mind apologizing for the liberty you've taken in calling me a strawberry?"

And you could have heard a fly sneeze in the awkward silence that followed the last remark.—"P. Rits."

EARLY CORN OVER 1 FOOT LONG.
Salzer illustrates in a colored plate a new variety of corn, a giant of its kind, and offers $500 in gold for the earliest ear in 1894. In addition to this early Giant corn, which yielded in 1893 110 bushels per acre, he has over twenty other prolific field crops. He is the largest grower of corn seeds, such as oats, buckwheat, millet, sorghum, etc., in America. Fifty kinds of grasses and clovers.

If you will cut this out and send it with five to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., you will receive a free catalogue of above Giant corn and his mammoth catalogue.

Government Ownership of Railroads and Public Safety.
In proportion to the number traveling, there are the most accidents in Germany, where government ownership of railroads obtains, and six or seven times as many accidents to employees in proportion to the total number. And no wonder! The first thing which attracts attention in Germany is the careful protection to life and limb. Accidents of daily occurrence in Chicago are impossible in Berlin, a city of equal size. Contrast the efforts of the United States to save life as seen in our truly admirable life-saving service on our coasts with the conduct of these railway presidents who rush to Washington and to our state capitals to prevent the passage of laws to compel the railways to use well-known and approved safety appliances. It is claimed that there is greater freedom in the service of the vast corporations which manage national monopolies. And the freedom of the employed may be still further increased by better civil service regulations. The mobility of public service is of importance to the wages of every grade. The uniform of government is an honor, while the livery of private service is considered a badge of inferiority. It is public service which has developed the great leaders of our civilization.—North American Review.

No Time to Lose.
While living in Boston, Edison bought Faraday's works on electricity, commenced to read them at 3 o'clock in the morning and continued until his room-mate arose, when they started on their long walk to get breakfast. That end, however, was entirely "subordinated" in Edison's mind by Faraday, and he suddenly remarked to his friend, "Admiral, I have got so much to do and life is so short that I have got to hustle." And with that he started off on a dead run for his breakfast.—Argonaut.

Farm Notes. It requires skill to market small fruit properly.

It pays as well to grade poultry before sending to market as it does to grade any other article offered for sale.

Ammonia may be prevented from escaping from the manure pile by occasionally applying dry earth to the surface.

Success in gardening depends very largely on having a rich, deep, well broken soil. The garden spot should be broken in the fall.

Pumpkins can be grown very cheaply, and they are excellent for milk cows and hogs. In fact they are "good for man or beast."

Every farmer should raise at least all the fruit his family can consume, and the man who does not is not as good a provider for his family as might or ought to be.

Alfalfa, says Gleaning, is one of the most wonderful "honey plants" in the world, and bee-keepers in the vicinity of this plant have had more uniform success than elsewhere.

A nervous cow is preferable to a stolid one. The chances are that she would give more and better milk than her dull, mopey sister. There are degrees of mental development even among cows. Intelligence often accompanies profitability as a milk yielder. American Farmer.

The republicans made large gains in the municipal elections in New York state. In fact about every election that occurs is going republican, and it will continue to do so until the grand old party again comes into control of the greater portion of the face of the earth. The keynote has been sounded: fare-the-well democracy.
