WAYNE COUNTY NEWS

Events of the Week in the City and County as Gleaned by the Herald's News Gatherer.

On pursuing the stock dealer and questioning the grain and produce merchants today we find that Wheat is 36 cents.
Oats 13
Corn 22
Flax 85.
Butter 8.
Eggs 8.
Potatoes 25.
Hogs, 3.60.
Fall and Winter Capes and Cloaks at The Racket.
There is rumor of a new jewelry store for Wayne.
Phillie & Son received eleven car loads of hard coal last week.
Quite a good many people are attending the Sioux City fair week.
The equinoctial storm arrived all right and a first class job resulted.
A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McDonald Friday Sept. 20th.
The Wayne Glee Club furnished music for the Woodmen picnic Tuesday.
Mahara's Minstrels at the opera house tomorrow night. Thirty people in the company.
A box of soap given away with each set of dishes purchased at the Star Grocery.
Mr. M. A. Spears has been elected a delegate to attend the state W. C. T. U. convention at Beatrice this week.
The firm of Working & Kruger has been dissolved by mutual consent, Mr. Working retiring from the firm.
The Crescents give an excellent program at the College Friday night. Everybody come and enjoy a literary treat.
Postmaster Childs has received the government weather flags which will be displayed regularly at 11:00 o'clock each day.
The Harvest Home Concert by the Baptist Sunday School was postponed for two weeks on account of the rain last Sunday.
A fine rain fell Saturday and Sunday which pleased a large number of people after the experience of three days of hot winds and dust.
Geo. Wilcox has secured the privilege of painting the staupe for the city. On the north side will be placed the business cards of a number of the merchants.
L. Garrow of Wakefield, raised 312 sugar beets that weighed a ton, an average of about 9½ pounds each. These beets grew on the celebrated Logan bottom, which runs through Wayne and Dixon counties.
The Monday club met with Mrs. D. Harrington Monday afternoon. Mrs. Welch and Mrs. Main were elected representatives to attend the State Federation of Women's Clubs at the annual meeting at Lincoln October 4th.
R. B. Leonard who lives in Logan precinct, met with quite a loss Saturday. Lightning struck his barn which was consumed, also some sheds and fifty tons of hay. The total loss amounted to about $1,200 with $700 insurance.
Considerable local matter was necessarily omitted from the HERALD last week owing to the crowded condition of our advertising columns, and to the fact that many of our readers wished us to publish a list of premiums awarded at the county fair.
G. S. Fredrickson northeast of Wayne has had a great deal of trouble in procuring water on his farm the past few years, eight or ten well diggers having sunk a number of wells without success at various depths of from 150 to 300 feet. M. P. Savidge the hydraulic well digger of this city, however, had great success in securing a fine well of water for Mr. Fredrickson at a depth of 161 feet.
The writer visited agricultural hall while attending the State Fair at Omaha and although Wayne county's exhibit was small in comparison with others, yet there is no question that on corn, potatoes, and sugar beets, she was not excelled in quality. This year was but the stepping stone and the Commercial Club should begin next spring to prepare for an exhibit that will capture first place. Wayne county can do it.
The merchants and business men of Winside have a good representative paper in the Tribune, but they are not patronizing it in the manner a paper should be patronized that has as its chief object the building up of the town it represents. These are stubborn facts that confront the people of Winside and many a newspaper has sought a new location from just such neglect on the part of the people to promote the interests of their home paper.

$100,000 to loan on Wayne and Dixon county farms at 7 per cent. Loans made without delay. Inquire of Nels Grimsley.

"Harvest Home" will be observed at District No. 66 next Sunday.
W. H. Gildersleeve went to Omaha Tuesday having shipped two car loads of cattle on that day.
There will be a Sunday School Rally at LaPort Sunday afternoon from 2:30 to 4:30. All are invited.
A cold wave set in Sunday morning and fires were started in many homes for the first time this fall.
The first frost of any consequence this fall was visible Monday morning but it was too late to do any damage.
Commencing October 1st, the post office will close at 7:30 each evening, except Saturday. A. P. Childs, P. M.
Take the HERALD now, only 25 cents to Jan. 1, 96. It will contain some interesting reading during the campaign.
The threshing machines are humming but the grain is still in the bins and some of it will stay there until needed.
Ray L. Royce, the great comedian who was here two years ago is with Heywood's Celebrities who will appear here Oct. 8.
Ladies will find baked beans, pumpkin pies, cake, bread, dutch cheese and baked chicken at the Baptist Exchange Saturday afternoon.
We still have several papers of the illustrated issue of the HERALD of Sept. 12, which we will sell at the rate of 25c. per dozen. Send them to your friends in the east.
We understand that only 60 per cent of the premiums awarded at the county fair are being paid instead of 80 per cent as mentioned in last week's issue which occurred through being misinforme.
Mrs. W. M. Witter and Mrs. W. D. Hammond assisted Mrs. A. T. Witter in entertaining a large number of their lady friends at high five Tuesday afternoon. They also entertain a number of other ladies at dominoes on this afternoon.
Pierce County Call—Pierce, Cedar, Wayne, Dixon, Dakota, and Thurston are no doubt the best agricultural counties in Nebraska. Heretofore they have not had a large enough population to push themselves to the front but they are making up for it now and don't you forget it.
A telegram to the World-Herald from Winside Monday night says that "an insurance agent by the name of Chas. E. Davis, who was suspected of being too intimate with some Winside young ladies was egged by a crowd of regulators Monday night. He represented the Farmers Mutual of Grand Island.

THE LUTHERAN SYNOD

A Good Attendance and Excellent Meetings Being Held.
The Nebraska Synod of the Lutheran church met in the Lutheran church of Wayne Wednesday at 8:00 p. m.
Hon. F. M. Northrop, in place of the mayor of the city, on behalf of the citizens, and Rev. W. W. Theobald, pastor of the Baptist church on behalf of the churches of Wayne, very cordially welcomed the Synod to Wayne. Rev. W. C. McCool, of Ponca, president of the Synod delivered the Synodical sermon.
On Thursday morning at 8:30 Rev. L. Groh, of Lincoln, led in a devotional service.
The business session was taken up principally with the president's and treasurer's reports, and the election of officers. The following officers were elected: President, Rev. W. C. McCool, of Ponca; Secretary, Rev. L. P. Ludden, of Lincoln; Treasurer, Prof. L. F. M. Easterday, of Lincoln; Statistical Secretary, Rev. H. A. Wolf, of Surprise.
The following were appointed to report the proceedings of the Synod: Rev. L. M. Kuhns to the Lutheran Observer, Rev. A. J. Mickle to the Lutheran Evangelist and to the papers of Wayne.
Rev. S. B. Barratt, D. D., Western Secretary of the Home Missionary Board, will speak tonight.
REPUBLICAN CAUCUSES.
The republican caucuses held in the different precincts last evening were the largest attended of any held in the county for years, due in part to the interest taken in the candidates for sheriff, treasurer, county judge and superintendent. The delegates elected from the different precincts so far as heard from are as follows:
Wayne, 1st Ward—C. A. Chace, G. A. Benson, H. S. McMakin and C. W. Owen.
Second Ward—I. W. Alter, Chas. S. Beebe, W. D. Hammond, W. H. Bradford and A. G. Howard.
Third Ward—F. M. Northrop, D. C. Main, J. G. Mines, Jas. Barbour and Nels Grimsley.
Brenna Precinct—C. J. Lund, Archie J. Sanday and Ed Rennick.
Strahan—Geo. Porter, J. B. Stall-smith, Frank Spahr and C. C. Brown.
Plum Creek—Wm. Powell, Star West, John Watts and Chas. Gildersleeve.
Hoskins—John Donner, W. C. Parson, E. Behmer, John Shannon, J. G. Foster.
Hunter—Mark Jeffrey, Jas. Fox, D. Cunningham, Wright Rice and S. M. Claybaugh.
Wilbur—Hans Hanson, Sam'l Freidolph, Chas. Shults, Albert Jacobs, Chapin—Geo. Lewis, W. I. Laurie.
Winside—Frank Tracy, Floyd Peters, Leslie—Chas. Worth and S. Slaughter.
There is one thing that the editor of the Tribune would like to know. That is this. If Mrs. Myra Fletcher is such a good Republican and if she has always been a good republican, why did she tell him at Mr. Brennan's speech at Wayne last fall that she was a Democrat? An answer is anxiously awaited.
—Winside Tribune.
The last issue of the Wayne HERALD was not exactly a boom number, but it was nevertheless one of the handsomest special editions issued in the state for many a day. There were engravings of sugar beet and grain fields in the vicinity of Wayne, and a few of the business houses and residences of the city. Three thousand copies of a ten-page edition were printed.—Nebraska Editor.
Last week's Wayne HERALD was a daisy, as was also the Democrat. Each contained a write up of Wayne county and its crops and resources. Wayne can show newspapers with any town in the state and have a good show for coming out "top of column, next to reading matter."—Winside Tribune.
The Harrington Herald and Wayne HERALD of last week contained first class "write-ups" of their respective counties interspersed with fine illustrations of business blocks, residences and farm scenery. It would be hard work to find two better or more enterprising journals in Nebraska.—Pierce Call.
The Wayne HERALD contained last week some very fine half-tone engravings of buildings, wheat, oats, and sugar beet fields near that city. The issue was neat and displayed the fact that McNeal & Beebe are among the most progressive newspaper men of the state.—Bloomfield Monitor.
One number of a three thousand issue of the Wayne HERALD reached us last week filled with extra fine half tone photos of the many beautiful business blocks and residences of the metropolis of prosperous Wayne county. The HERALD itself in the way of a paper is a jewel for any community to have, and it is one of the very best and brightest papers which prosper in Nebraska.—Oakland Enterprise.

THE WOODMEN PICNIC.

Although the attendance at the Woodmen picnic Tuesday was not as large as expected yet those attending had an enjoyable time as the air was cool and bracing. About 11:30 the parade which had been delayed started for Crawford's grove, headed by the Wayne band. Next came a number of Woodmen riding on a long log, followed by Woodmen and their families in Carriages. Immediately following were two wagons upon one of which were a mother and family apparently enjoying all the comforts of life; on a banner was inscribed the words, "Insured in the Woodmen." In the wagon following was a woman washing, and the children ragged and dirty, and upon the banner were the words, "No Insurance." The parade arrived at the grove about noon and owing to the lateness of the hour a portion of the program was dispensed with. After music by the band and glee club, all partook of one of the best picnic dinners ever served in the grove.
After dinner, music followed, and short addresses were made by Frank Fuller, Rev. H. H. Millard, M. H. Dodge, S. B. Russell and E. Cunningham.
Grand Army Picnic.
Carriage load after carriage load of people left yesterday forenoon for Crawford's grove where the G. A. R. of Wayne county held one of the most enjoyable of picnics, and the bus ran back and forth from the city to the grove during the day. An excellent program had been arranged by Commander Ferguson and the committee which was carried out to the letter and much to the satisfaction of the large crowd present. A splendid dinner was served after which the following program was rendered:
Martial Music.
Prayer by Rev. W. W. Theobald.
Song—America.
Welcome by the President of the Association.
Address by Rev. E. Van Dyke Wight.
Address by Rev. W. W. Theobald.

MUSPY OLD THEORIES

MODERN DEMOCRATS DIFFER FROM THEIR DADS.

Baincombe About Markets of the World and Free Raw Material—Cleveland Administration Ignores Its Just Dots.

These larger imports of shoddy were made necessary, first, by the destruction of the American clip, and second, by the low duties upon manufacturers of wool and their ad valorem feature which permitted undervaluation and compelled American manufacturers to increase their use of shoddy. Never in the history of the wool business in America has it been necessary to use so many cheap mixtures in order to prevent our manufacturers from being driven out of their home market by the shoddy goods admitted under the ad valorem rates of the Gorman tariff law.

Its Just Debts Ignored.

The shifting expedients of the treasury department to preserve from month to month the fiction of solvency are something heretofore unknown in our governmental financing. It may be that by the aid of a Republican Congress this sort of progressive fraud can be kept up without ultimate disaster, but it is a dangerous experiment. It can only be done by securing a better income before the bottom falls out.

The hope is held out that with the increased purchasing powers of the people the income of the government from its various sources of revenue will soon put the treasury on a self-sustaining basis, but new devices must be employed at every turn to preserve appearances until the volume of receipts shall meet the demands of the situation. The statutes are strained in every direction to accomplish the end, but there must be a culmination of the strain, and the prospects are that it will come before the conspirators are ready for it. If they can keep up the deception until after the fall elections their object will be accomplished.

If the overdue indebtedness of the government had been paid at maturity the balance sheet for July would have shown a shortage that would have spread consternation through the ranks of the faithful. There is no doubt of this whatever. There is the amount of twenty millions due to importers for refunding duties illegally exacted, and the seven millions of sugar bounty voted by Congress at its last session; these are items of account which do not belong in the column of assets, and it is a fraud upon the people to keep them there. And there are an infinite number of claims of contractors which have been approved but which remain unpaid because Mr. Carlisle commands that the money shall be kept in the treasury. Where the law cannot be construed to serve the purpose it is done by might.

But a settlement has got to come, and when it does come there will be a necessity for some extraordinary apologies on the part of the treasury officials, for the people will demand to know why they have been trifled with in that manner.

Protection in England.

Manufacturers of matches in the United Kingdom appeal to their customers to buy only English matches, by placing a little printed slip inside the cover of the box, asking the people to "patronize home industry, use English matches and employ British labor."

Large signs bearing the same views can now be seen throughout the country districts of England. This is exactly what the Republican party in America, namely, that the American people should patronize American home industries, use American made goods, and employ American labor. The English and American manufacturers thus have precisely the same ideas.

Following the plan of the English match manufacturers, we find in another line of goods the following announcement on the outside of a cover of a package of British goods:

- • • • • IMPORTANT. • • • • •
- Why Support the Manufacturers of •
- Other Countries When You •
- Can Obtain as good an •
- Article •
- MADE BY HOME INDUSTRY? •

This is the appeal made by a London and Nottingham cigarette manufacturing concern which finds that its offer to give a "tube to each cigarette, matches and photo in each package" is not sufficient to secure all the trade it desires. Possibly the English dudes prefer American made cigarettes and do not find that they "can obtain as good an article made by home industry" in England. The belief in a policy of protection, however, is taking very generally throughout the United Kingdom.

Grover to Tax the Growler.

Mr. Cleveland has considered several means for augmenting the financial returns, among which is the beer tax. The natural way for the recovery of the receipts is a tariff that will produce sufficient sums to replenish the treasury. That tariff cannot be too soon re-established. The treasury is paying the price of the loss of protection. Protection to American industries is, from experience, likewise protection to the nation's finances. A reasonable tariff is the only solution of the disastrous problem brought on by the obstinate enforcement of Mr. Cleveland's theories. Protection is an issue that cannot be dodged. Its suspension has demonstrated its necessity to the government as well as to enterprises and to the people.—Daily Saratoga, Saratoga, N. Y.

Importers Get Together. We are told that within the past few weeks there has been formed in New York an organization composed wholly of importers, one of the main objects of which is the establishment of values abroad of textiles for importation to this country, and that ten meetings have already been held. The existence of such an organization may render it more difficult than ever to arrive at actual market values of merchandise at the time of export, which is the important thing to ascertain in passing the goods at the custom house.—American Wool and Cotton Reporter.

OUR STORYTELLER

A MAN OF JUDGMENT.

WHEN I looks backward down the trail," said the old cattiana, "if there is one man I reflect on with satisfaction it's Cherokee Hall. This yere Hall was the modestest, decentest longhorn as ever shakes his antlers in Arizona. He was slim and light, with a thin face and gray eyes. This yere man was a card sharp from his moccasins up, an' I never knows him to have a dollar he doesn't gamble for. Nuthin' thorn, though. I sees him one night, an' he sets calmly into some four-handed poker—$15,000 table stakes—an' he's jest that sanguine an' hopeful about landin' on his feet as a cimmarron sheep. Of course, times was plenty flush these days, an' $15,000 don't seem no such glam sum. Trade is lively an' values high—aces up callin' for $500 before the draw—still we ain't none of us makin' no gunwaddin' of no such roll as $15,000 even then. The days ain't quite so halcyon as all that, neither.

"But what I likes most speshul in Cherokee Hall is his judgment. He's every time right. He ain't talkin' much, an' he ain't needin' advice, neither, more'n a pig needs a six-shooter; but when he concludes to do things you can gamble he's goin' to get it plenty right.

"One time this yere Cherokee and Dan Boggs is a comin' in from Tucson on the stage. Besides Cherokee an' Boggs along comes a female, a close herdin' of two young ones—which them infants might have been stringin' lizards an' every one a heap happier; an' sorter in charge of the whole outfit is a long, lean man in a black coat. Well, they hops in, an' Boggs an' Cherokee gives 'em the two back seats on account of the female an' the yearlin'.

"My name is Jones," says the man in the black coat, when he gets settled back an' the stage is goin', an' 'I'm an' evangelist, an' plucks brands from the burnin'."

"I'm powerful glad to know it," says Boggs. "Them games of chance which enjoys public notice in this yere climate are so various, an' I did think I shorley tests 'em all; but if deceives you names was ever open in Wolfville, I overlooks the same complete."

"Pore sinkin' 'soul," says the black-coat man, "he's a fonderin' in the mire of sin. Don't you know, my perishin' friend, you are bein' swept downward in the river of your own sinful life till your soul will be drowned in the abyss."

"Well, no," says Boggs, "I don't. I allows I was makin' a mighty dry fond of it."

"Lost! Lost!" says the black-coat man, a leanin' back plenty hopeless. "It is a stiff-necked generation, an' a sorely perverse lot."

"Well, the stage jolts along two or three miles an' nuthin' bein' said. The black-coat man groans occasionally, which worries Boggs, an' the two infants, gettin' restless, comes tumblin' over onto Cherokee an' go searchin' of his pockets for mementoes. This yere is about as pleasant an' refreshin' to Cherokee as bein' burned at the stake, but the mother she leans back an' smiles, an' of course he's plumb helpless.

"My pore worm," finally says the black-coat man, addressin' of Boggs, "whatever avocations has you an' your lost companion?"

"Why," says Boggs, "this yere's Hall—Cherokee Hall—He turns fero in the Red Light; an'," continues Boggs, a low-erin' of his voice, "he's as square a man as ever counted a deck. Actoally, pard, you mightn't think it, but all that man knows about a cold deck or dealin' is second, or any sech sinful schemes, is jest mere tradition."

"Brother," says the female, bristlin' up an' tuckin' the black-coat man, "don't talk to them persons no more. Them's gamblers an' awful mean men, an' with that she snatches away the yearlin' like they was contaminated.

"This was some relief to Cherokee, but the young ones how like coyotes an' wants to come back an' flirsh robin their victim. But the mother, she spansks 'em, an' when Boggs was goin' to give 'em some cartridges outen his belt to amoose 'em, she sasses him scandalous, an' allows she ain't needin' no attentions from him. Then she leans back an' snorts at Cherokee an' Boggs mighty contemptuous. The young ones keeps on yellin' in a unmelodious way, and while Cherokee is clam an' don't let on like he finds it much, Boggs gets nervous, an' finally tugs out his bottle, aimin' to drink a lot an' compose his feelin's, which they was somewhat harrowed by now.

"Well, I never," says the woman, "I shorley sees sots before now, but at least they had the decency not to drink before a lady."

"This stampedes Boggs complete, an' so he throws the bottle outen the stage an' don't get no drink.

"After a while the stage strikes into the upper end of a dark, rocky canyon. This yere canyon was about two miles long an' was lately reckoned some bad. Nuthin' has ever happened on the line, but these yere was the days when Victory and his Apaches was cavortin' round loose, an' it was mighty possible they was a lay-in' somewhere in the hills along the trail to Tucson. If they ever gets a notion to stand up the stage, they was shore due to do it in this yere canyon, wherefore Cherokee an' Boggs an' Old Monte, who's drivin' regards it plenty suspicious.

"There's another," says Moore, "which makes even on Boggs."

"That's right," says Cherokee, "I remembers now, there was two. The cards come some fast one time an' I overlooks a bet."

"Well, we gets in Cherokee all right, an' the nex' day around comes the female tenderfoot to see him."

"I wants to thank my preserver," she says.

"You ain't under no obligations whatever, marm," says Cherokee, raisin' up a little in the bed, while Faro Nell puts another goose-hair pillow under him. "I simply prefers to do my fightin' in the canyon to jest it at the ford, that's all. It was jest a matter of straight business—jest a preference—I has. Another thing, marm, I know you'll excuse it, seein' I'm a single man an' omused to childlike ways; but I was mighty glad for an excuse to get away from the blessed children of your'n."

Says the Chicago Examiner.

An Illinois Rip Van Winkle. One afternoon last week an old man stood on LaSalle street, near the Rookery building, in evident perplexity. He had none of that "vegetable dandruff" about him which denotes the country man, but it was clear that his clothes had not been made by a city tailor.

He shrank instinctively from the passing wagons and he lacked that "indefinite something which marks the dwellers in large towns. He looked vaguely up and down the street and then turned his eyes toward the sky, but seemingly without finding what he was searching for. His embarrassment was so evident that a hurrying business man, moved perhaps by memories of the time when he himself got up in the cold gray of morning to feed the stock, stopped to offer help.

"Are you a stranger in the city?" he asked by way of leading up to the question gently.

The old man looked at him distrustfully before he answered.

"Wal, no," he said guardedly. "I can't hardly say that. I was here in '50."

"Considerable change since then," said the business man.

"Somewhat," answered the old man, still distrustfully.

"Can I help you in any way? You seemed to be looking for something."

"No, I don't much think you kin help me," the old man said reflectively.

"I know the streets pretty well. Studied 'em up on a map afore I left home. But say, stranger, kin you tell me which way is north? These blame buildin's is so high a man can't see the sun, and how he's goin' to keep the pints of the compass straight without it is more'n I kin see."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Languages of Palestine.

As regards the languages spoken in Palestine in the time of Christ, much that is of high importance has resulted from recent exploration. A dedication of Herod was written both in Aramaic and in Greek, and there are a great many Greek texts of this age in all parts of the country, which show us that the old Canaanite religions had not yet died out, but were mingled with Greek mythology, so that the names of native and of Greek deities stand side by side.

The region where the Greeks were most numerous was apparently Decapolis, east of the sea of Galilee, and it seems to me probable that the people of Gadara, who kept swine, were Greeks, for the pig was regarded as an unclean animal by the Phoenicians and other natives as well as by the Jews. It has often been disputed whether the gospels were originally written in Greek or Aramaic, but it has now been rendered certain by exploration that Greek was very widely used in Palestine at this time, and that it was understood by the Jews as well as by the others. We have recovered the stone written in Greek, which warned the Gentiles not to enter the inner court of the temple, and have found early Jewish bone boxes on Olivet inscribed in Greek.

Had a Window in His Head.

Although "every dog has his day," says a London paper, few of the species attain to the distinction and celebrity of one which formerly belonged to the late Arthur Durham. The fame of this animal was spread far and wide about five and twenty or thirty years ago, and "Durham's dog" was as well known in scientific circles as the president of the royal society. For the better pursuit of his investigations into the state of the brain in sleeping and waking, Mr. Durham had removed a large part of the animal's skull and had glazed the orifice with a stout watch glass. The operation had been performed with the assistance of anesthetics and the dog was quite unaware that anything of the kind had occurred to him or that he had a transparent crown to his cranium. But through this watch glass the state of the circulation in his brain in sleeping or waking could be observed with the greatest accuracy and ease, and much useful information was thus supplied by him. I believe that he lived happily for many years afterward, and that he suffered no inconvenience from having a glass top.

Horned Toads.

Boys living in and about San Diego, Cal., are making money catching horned toads for the Hawaiian Government, which is importing them to destroy a Japanese bug which is ruining many crops in the island. The Government wants 5,000 toads, and is paying the boys $1 a dozen for them.

Oil and Gas.

Oil and gas stoves, while coming in competition with the old-time coal stove, have had no effect upon the sales of the latter. This is somewhat remarkable, but the history of a great many improvements in civilization is like it.

CHARM OF THE "AUTOCRAT."

Dr. Holmes wrote it when he was nearly half a century old.

Then, when Holmes was 48 years old, an age at which most men have stiffened themselves into habits, he showed the freshness of his talent by writing one of the wisest and wittiest prose books in the English language. The Atlantic Monthly was established in the fall of 1837, and Lowell made it a condition of his acting as editor that Dr. Holmes should be a contributor. Therefore, it was that the first number of the new magazine contained the opening pages of the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," which every reader followed with delight month after month, until at last the book was completed and published by itself in the fall of 1838.

Since then it is rather as a writer of prose than as a writer of verse that Dr. Holmes has been most highly esteemed.

"The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" is a most original book; not that it is especially original in form, for it is not entirely unlike the Spectator of Addison and Steele, wherein we have a group of characters described, and wherein their sayings and doings are duly recorded. In the American book the group of characters meet at the early morning meal, and one of them, the autocrat himself—does most of the talking. The other figures are lightly sketched—some of them are merely suggested; and even at the very end there is but the thinnest thread of a story. The real originality of Dr. Holmes' work is in the frank simplicity and sincerity of the Autocrat's talk. He seemed rather to be chatting with himself than conversing with others; and no such talk had yet fallen from any American lips—none so cheerful with humor, so laden with thought, so melow with knowledge, so ripe with experience. The reader is borne along by the current of it, unresisting, smiling often, laughing sometimes, and absorbing always, even if unconsciously, high and broad thoughts about life.

So ample a store of humor—and of good humor—had Dr. Holmes, so well filled a reservoir of sense and of common-sense, that he had an abundance of material for other volumes like the "Autocrat." In 1840 he published the "Professor at the Breakfast Table," and in 1872 the "Poet at the Breakfast Table."

Though these two volumes have not all the freshness of the first one, they are inferior only to it; they have the same wholesome spirit, the same sunny sagacity. And these are the qualities which characterize also his last volume of prose, "Over the Tea-Cups," issued in 1890, when he was 81 years old. In all these books there is the precious flavor of actual conversation, the table-talk of a broad, liberal, thoughtful man, full of fancy and abounding in humor.—St. Nicholas.

Cheating the Devil.

A Chinese funeral is a constant succession of efforts to cheat the devil, who is supposed to be lying in wait to capture the soul of the departed. So long as the body remains in the house the soul is safe, for the devil cannot come in; the risk begins when the funeral procession starts. When ready to march, great quantities of firecrackers and pyrotechnics that emit much smoke are set off in front of the door, and under cover of the smoke the pallbearers start at a lively trot, run to the nearest corner, turn it as quickly as they can, and stop short.

This is done for the purpose of throwing the devil off the track, since it is well known that he cannot easily turn a corner, and, to aid in the deception, whenever a corner is turned more fireworks are burned. By dint of turning quickly and trotting as fast as they can, the bearers finally arrive at the cemetery, but do not enter the gates, but go through a hole in the surrounding inclosure, for they know that the baffled devil will be waiting for them at the entrance. In the cemetery the soil is comparatively safe, though to make the matter perfectly secure the discharge of firecrackers is kept up until all the rites are ended.

Whist in a Lion's Den.

In the Hungarian messenger's favorite sensation scene is for four whist players to sit down and play a rubber in the lion's den, while a fifth stands by to see fair play—on the part of the lions. I thought I had played whist under all possible circumstances, and in company with the very strongest specimens of created beings, but this experience is beyond me. Some people are made nervous by folks looking over their hand, which (unless they are my adversaries) does not affect me at all, but I don't think I should like this from a lion; the greater attention he paid me the less pleased I should feel by the compliment. But Hungarian players do not seem to mind these things. The other day, however, it appears this very interesting performance was given once too often. The lions, with delicate forbearance, abstained, it is true, from interfering with the players, but they wait for the fifth man, whom they doubtless considered "superfluous," and made very short work of him. In spite of the selfishness that is often, though most unjustly, attributed to card players, the rubber at once broke up.

Good Reason.

Two Irishmen, driving through the country, noticed that many of the barns had weather vanes in the shape of huge roosters.

"Pat," said one man to the other, "can you tell me why they always have a rooster and never a hin on the top of them barns?"

"Shure," replied Mike, "an' it must be because of the difficulty they'd have in collectin' the eggs."

Republican County Convention.
The republican electors of Wayne County, Nebraska, are requested to send delegates from their several voting precincts, to meet in convention at Wayne, Saturday Sept. 23, 1895 at 2:00 p.
m. for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the offices of County Sheriff, County Treasurer, County Clerk, County Superintendent of Schools, County Judge, County Coroner, Clerk of the District Court, and one County Commissioner.
And also to elect nine (9) delegates to the State Convention to be held at Lincoln, Nebraska, October 2, 1895.

Also delegates to the Judicial convention, and to transact such other business as may properly come before the convention.
The several precincts are entitled to representation as follows, the apportionment being based upon the vote cast for Hon. J. A. Piper for Secretary of State, in 1894:

Brann	1	Logan	3
Chapin	2	Leslie	3
Deer Creek	1	Sherman	3
Hunter	2	Winifred	3
Hancock	2	Winslow	3
Hoskins	2	Wayne, 1st ward	3
Hunter	2	Wayne, 3d ward	3
Plum Creek	1	Wayne, 3d ward	3
Strahan	1
Total			59

It is recommended that no proxies be admitted and that the delegates present be authorized to cast the entire vote of the precinct.
Primaries to be held Wednesday evening September 25th, between the hours of seven and nine o'clock, subject to call of precinct committeeman.
FRANK FULLER, Chairman.
R. C. OSBORN Secretary.

Republican Judicial Convention.
The several counties comprising the ninth judicial district of Nebraska are hereby requested to send delegates to Republican Judicial Convention, to be held at Norfolk, Nebraska, on the 1st day of October, 1895, at 1 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of placing in nomination a candidate for judge of the district court of said district, and for the transaction of such other business as may come before the convention.
The several counties are entitled under this call to representation as follows, based upon the vote of Hon. H. R.
Corbett for state superintendent of public instruction: Antelope county 10 votes; Knox, 11 votes; Madison 16 votes; Pierce, 7 votes; Wayne, 10 votes;
total 54.

The State fair was a success in spite of the frightfully dusty weather, and Omaha redeemed her pledges in nearly every respect.
The primaries have been held. Now if "good" men are nominated the result will augur well for republican success. Of course opinions vary as to who are "good" men sometimes.
There are an hundred thousand republicans in the state of Nebraska who wouldn't care if Senator Allison, of Iowa, should be the nominee of the next republican national convention for president.
Omaha has done for the state of Nebraska an enormous amount of good.
Like the old city of New Orleans, she has advertised the state, far and wide in the magnificent parade by the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben and the feast of Mondamin. It was a gorgeous spectacle witnessed by three hundred thousand people.

The Stanton Picket gives the Forum man a touch of high life in the following:
As a general rule we pay no attention to the attacks of our contemporaries outside of the county, but occasionally, as in the case of the old fossil, Martin,
who makes a pretence of editing a paper at Wayne, forbearance ceases to be a virtue. For several months he has built up his rag sheet largely by exceptions to the Picket's editorials, and during the past few weeks has become especially insolent in his remarks. All along we have considered the ignorance of the old carbuncle and ignored his attacks, but like a cur dog that does not receive a kick his yelpings continue.

His pet word is "traitor" and his model of comparison Benedict Arnold. Martin, you are a pretty specimen to accuse others of traitorism. Where was you during last fall's campaign? Did you work for the populist nominees? Who was the traitor to James Brooks? Who gave his support to a democrat because he was a resident of Wayne, and a politician of the fusion stripe, while pretending to be loyal to Brooks? You are the man who did it, you narrow, contracted, hypocritical, old blatherskite, while the editor of this paper was working day and night for the entire ticket, including the master at whose heels you follow, and all without remuneration even for the extra papers that we sent out at his dictation, and opposing a man of our own town whose bitterest enemy we still possess for our pains. Great things you have done for the populist party, haven't you? The vote of the county shows your traitorous acts. Uncle Henry Miller can talk of the toboggan slide down which the republican party is sliding, if the populist party of Wayne county hasn't about reached the foot of the toboggan slide, what would you call it? And such men as you are responsible for its demoralized condition.
Benedict Arnold attempted to betray the armies of Washington into the hands of the British while pretending to be loyal to the former, just as you are betraying the populist party into the hands of democracy. Such men as you are traitors to the populist party and are wrecking it just as you have wrecked everything you have ever touched. Your rag of a paper is a burlesque even among populists of your county, even as they look upon you as as egotistical, ignorant crank. A. F.
Enos never proved false to a single principle advocated by the populist platform nor deserted a single nominee so long as he professed to be a populist.
When he could no longer stand the croakings of such contemptible old rangers as yourself he openly withdrew from the party, owing no man of the party a dollar or for favors that had not been repaid many fold. We may be called a deserter but never a traitor.
Such men as you, who profess allegiance to principles and party and then toady to democracy and refuse to support party nominees are the traitors. But perhaps you are not responsible. Other and wiser men than you have posed as figure heads and been made the tool of others. Perhaps yours is one of those pitiable cases after all.

Solid Truths About the South.
It is a fact that the most productive farms, where three crops a year are made, are in the garden spot of the world, which is in Mississippi and Alabama, along the line of the Mobile & Ohio Rail Road. Mississippi with open fertile prairie lands and rich valleys timbered with valuable hard woods, and Alabama the yellow pine belt, a rolling sandy loam, the paradise of the fruit grower, truck farmer, stock raiser and invalid.
The summers are cooler, the winters are warmer, the entire year comfortable for our door work. Garden the whole year round, pure air, soft water, good health, and long life for yourself and family. No blizzards, no sunstrokes, no swamps; no malaria.

American Aluminum.
 The United States geological survey announces that the quantity of aluminum made in this country in 1894 was 150,000 pounds. In 1893 the output was 133,223 pounds, and ten years ago only 150 pounds of the metal were made in the United States. The reduction of the price of aluminum from several dollars per pound to the current quotation of 15 cents, has made possible the use of the metal for many purposes for which its lightness, strength and ductility make it adaptable. In scarcely more than five years aluminum has been brought down from a mere experimental curiosity to a useful commercial product.

Right at Home.
 A skeptic, engaged in a religious discussion with a country pastor, thought to end the whole matter by declaring that there was no such place as heaven, and that, for his part, he believed in metempsychosis.
 "You believe, then," said the pastor, "that your soul may enter the body of a beast after your death?"
 "Certainly."
 "And you expect to feel quite at home, I suppose?"
 Thereupon the skeptic decided that the last word was with his antagonist.

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS.,
 Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humors, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both under humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken. When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first. No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

RIPANS TABLETS

Mr. Bert M. Moses, the advertisement and business writer of 502 Third street, Brooklyn, relates that he recently had occasion to consult Dr. J. S. Carreau, a well-known physician of 18 West Twenty-first street, New York city, for a stomach trouble which was pronounced a type of dyspepsia. "After consultation," writes Mr. Moses, "the doctor gave me a prescription, and I was somewhat surprised to note that the formula was nearly identical with that of Ripans Tablets, for which I had, on more than one occasion, prepared advertising matter. I had Dr. Carreau's prescription filed, and it proved satisfactory, giving quick relief. A week later, when I had taken all the medicine, I again called on the doctor and mentioned the similarity of his prescription and the proprietary remedy spoken of, showing him both the remedy itself and the formula. The doctor was at first somewhat inclined to criticize what he called patent medicines, but appeared to be surprised when he noted to what extent his own prescription conformed to the formula I showed him. It was practically the same. After a short time devoted to noting the careful manner in which the proprietary medicine was prepared, he wound up by prescribing it for my case. Of course I had to pay him for telling me to do this, but it was worth the cost to have such high professional assurance that the advertised article was, in fact, the scientific formula that I had supposed to be. I might have taken the proprietary medicine in the beginning and saved the doctor's fee, but I think the confidence I have acquired in the efficacy of the remedy, through the doctor's endorsement of it, is well worth the fee."

WOMAN AT HOME

THE woman in business who succeeds in winning the good opinion of the men with whom she comes in contact is the one who is not continually on the lookout for evil and who understands thoroughly the difference that exists between social and business life. The girl who starts out expecting men to fall down and worship her will have a very rude shock some day when her employer gives her an order without the preface "please," and her whole soul will revolt when she finds that there are men so thoroughly calloused to the claims of womanhood that they can keep their hats on when they ride with her on the elevator and have no scruples about taking their coats off if the day is inclined to be sultry.

The young missionary who enters an office expecting to revolutionize the moral tone of it will probably occupy her position about a week. She is too much of a mental disturbance to be endured longer, but the girl who buckles down to the duties of the day with no question in her clear eyes regarding what other people are doing will be pretty sure to win her way into the good graces of those about her and without any fussing or frowning on her part the minor courtesies to which she is accustomed will little by little be given to her naturally until the missionary work is really accomplished without so much as the elevation of an eyebrow on her part to indicate her wishes in the matter.

No practical business is run on the basis of charity; therefore, the woman who aspires to a prolonged stay in one place with the assurance of an increase of salary some day must prove that she can give an adequate return in good work for the money paid her. A pretty, winsome creature in an office is not the power she is in a drawing room, unless she proves herself capable. Mere prettiness will not bring a salary to her if she is employed to accomplish anything of consequence. Even the pretty typewriter has had her day, and now the plain one who attends strictly to business corals the best positions. If you start out in the broad field of labor with men as competitors, you must lay aside the idea that you were born to be adored by the opposite sex, and replace it with a determination to do the best you know how, working fairly for the money paid, but never, even in the hardest strife, laying aside the garment of pure womanliness which is the most winning factor in both business and social relations.

Chose a Greek Husband.
 The marriage of Mrs. P. T. Barnum, the widow of the veteran showman, and Demetrius Callias Bey, a wealthy Greek, was so quietly and well managed that not even Mrs. Barnum's brother, Benjamin Fisk, was aware of the engagement until the day before the ceremony was performed. Mrs. Barnum has been negotiating for the sale of her splendid estate in Bridgeport, and has sold or sent a great deal of furniture to Europe, where she will live in the future. Mrs. Barnum was P. T. Barnum's second wife and was his junior by forty years. She was born in Southampton, England, and was the daughter of John Fisk, and although now 45 years old, she would easily pass for 35. The groom, Demetrius Callias Bey, is a tall, scholarly looking Greek, 47 years old. Mrs. Barnum met him in Cairo, Egypt, about a year and a half ago while traveling in the East. Accident threw them a good deal together and they found that they had many tastes in common. The stately Greek was a perfect mine of information on all sorts of topics and proved a very entertaining companion. They parted warm friends and met again at Constantinople. Mrs. Barnum kept up correspondence with her future husband, and after her return to Bridgeport he came to this country, proposed, and was accepted. The ceremony was performed first at Robert Fagwood's office, 40 Wall street, New York, and after this civil rite they drove to the Greek Reform Church, where they were married in accordance with the gorgeous and impressive ritual of the Greek church by the pastor.

Rose Hartwick Thorpe.
 Rose Hartwick Thorpe was born in Indiana just forty-five years ago. She was but 16 years of age when she wrote the lines that were destined to make for her a world-wide reputation, and to raise her from a shy country girl to a celebrated personage.
 The incident which inspired the writing of the poem is described as follows: One of the neighbors having loaned her several copies of Peterson's Magazine, she read the story of Bessie and her lover, which appeared in the September number for 1865. It was related as a historical fact, and the pathetic story wrought upon her susceptible mind to such an extent that, later in the day, when applying herself to her lessons, the thought of brave Bessie intruded, and worked disastrous havoc with the mathematical problem on her slate. Try as she would she could not banish from her mind the words "Curfew Must Not Ring Tonight." Finally in sheer desperation she swept the figures from her slate and wrote "England's sun was slowly setting," etc.

In speaking afterward of the time, she says: "Rapidly flew my pencil, with sharp, regular clicks over the surface of my slate, but faster still the thoughts came crowding into my throbbing brain, while all my being seemed on fire with the triumph of impulse over duty! Which was duty, the unlearned lesson or the completed poem?" Although written in 1867, "Curfew" was not published until 1870, when it came out in the Detroit Commercial Advertiser over her own signature. The signature was frequently omitted by the papers that copied the poem. It remained anonymous, no one rising to claim the authorship, until Mr. A. A. Hopkins, who was making a collection of verse, took the trouble to find the author of "Curfew." Her inheritance, she says, "was a vivid imagination. The sky was never sifflly blue and life had no commonplace. Its delights were supremely enchanting; its disappointments and sorrows terribly real." She married in 1871 Edmund C. Thorpe. Domestic cares have prevented her from devoting her life to literature, but through the universal favor accorded "Curfew" she wrote a few other well-known poems, among them "The Station Agent's Story," "Red Cross" and "In a Mining Town."

Why a Man Dislikes Women.
 Because she stabs me in the eye with her parasol, offers no apology and looks as if I did it.
 Because she pushes for a place in trains and omnibuses and, being in, never makes any room for other people.
 Because, in public, her prattle is audible and unceasing, and includes the biographies and characteristics of all her friends by name.
 Because she discusses frocks with her sister opposite, and describes fabrics and fixings as if at her dressmaker's.
 Because, being of any class, she loves a "remnant day" and dotes on bargains. Her sister mislays her bag, loses her handkerchief, and carries her purse in her hand.
 Because she is "fluent but not lucid," and more concerned about the number of her facts than the truth of them.
 Because she reads accounts of weddings and lists of presents in ladies' newspapers.
 Because she walks three in a row upon the pavement and expects every one else to make way for her.
 Because she worships priests and deacons, as well as illustrious persons and cavalry officers.
 Because if you tell her a secret she passes it on at once to other friends—"I don't mind telling you, dear, but it mustn't go any further."

Speculations as to the Fate of Sir Walter Raleigh's Colony.

One of the most romantic legends of American history is that connected with the name of Virginia Dare, the first white child of English descent born on American soil, and the colony of which her parents were members. The colony was sent from England by Sir Walter Raleigh in 1587, and landed on Roanoke Island, under Gov. John White, who soon went back to England for supplies, and though he had left his own family on the island, did not come back for three years. When he returned the colony had disappeared, though there was no evidence that it had been the victim of violence or famine. It had simply moved, and had indicated where it had gone. Gov. White seems to have been singularly indifferent to the fate of his family, whose place of refuge he seems to have known, and he did not prosecute any search for them in person, though Sir Walter Raleigh sent five unsuccessful expeditions to find the colony.

In the July number of the Mid-Continent Magazine Frances Jones Melton gives the reasons for maintaining that the descendants of the lost colonists have been found in the Croatians, on Lumber river, a mixed people of English and Indian descent, who bear English names, and many of whom have the gray eyes, fair complexion and blonde hair of the Anglo-Saxon. In the reconstruction period the name of Henry Dell Lowrie was very familiar. He was classed as an author, and was prosecuted and persecuted by the authorities of the reconstructed State, to whom everybody not of mixed white blood was a negro. This classification was vigorously resented by Lowrie and his people, who are proud of their descent, and have kept themselves distinct from whites, negroes and Indians alike. Miss Melton gives a very interesting account of these peculiar people, and the evidence she summarizes makes a strong support for her claim that they are the descendants of Sir Walter's lost colony.—Louisville Commercial.

CATTLE IN SOUTH AMERICA.
 Expansion of Argentine's Beef Product Causing a Sensation.

In an article on the meat supply for England the South American Journal says that till recently the fattening of cattle in the Argentine Republic was confined to the native prairie grass, so that a steady supply of fat beasts for export could not be relied on all the year round, and comparatively few were good enough for the English market. The breeders were satisfied with the trade in dried beef, which enabled them to dispose of 1,000,000 bullocks per annum, chiefly of the unimproved native breed. But now the ranchmen are producing shorthorns, Herefords and polled Angus by the hundred thousands, and are laying down great areas of alfalfa to fatten them. Last year the value of live cattle and sheep exported amounted to $1,000,000, and this year it is expected to be 50 per cent. more. As the country possesses about 30,000,000 cattle and 90,000,000 sheep, with only 5,000,000 inhabitants, its export resources are enormous. It is said that bullocks giving 700 pounds per carcass can be delivered in London at $12 a head with profit. The great advance in exporting capacity is due entirely to lucern, which is thus becoming a source of vast wealth to the country, in which it flourishes marvelously. Five cuttings per annum, without manure or irrigation, yielding twelve tons of hay per acre, must pay vastly better than wheat, and great as the sensation wheat growing has been, that of meat production will probably be greater.

Housekeeping in Paris.
 Nothing is cheap in Paris except the cabs, and they are not so cheap the more often necessary. You have resolved to keep house in furnished apartments, and having with much difficulty found a few rooms which you consider habitable, face the question of household expenses, and find that what you consider mere necessities are so costly as to become luxuries. Coffee is 70 and 80 cents a pound, and not good at that. With beef at 50 cents and ham at 60 cents and butter at 80 cents a pound; with tea, very poor tea, at $1 a pound, lamp oil at 50 cents a gallon, eggs at 40 cents a dozen, and matches worth their weight in coin, with canned and preserved fruits and vegetables entirely beyond a modest purse, milk at twelve cents a quart, and gas one of the luxuries of fortune's favorites, housekeeping in Paris, unless you have unlimited income or can live without the necessities of a fairly-ordered life, is not a state to be desired.

A Bootblack's Union.
 Bootblacks in Seattle, Wash., formed a union a week ago. Its main purpose being to maintain prices and to shut out imported cheap labor. The price of shine in Seattle has stood at 10 cents as long as the average bootblack's memory reaches back until recently a number of Italians drifted in from the East and began cutting prices. The union will endeavor to maintain the price at 10 cents. Any member cutting below this will be fined 50 cents for the first offense, $1 for the second, and will be expelled from the union for the third. The union was organized with the help of the New York Union, formed in Seattle some months ago.

WHY HE SUCCEEDED.

A SENATOR'S GOOD FORTUNE BEGAN WITH A GAME OF POKER.

A Boyish Frank That Made It Necessary For Him to Go West and Grow Up With the Country—Members of the Bar Who Tried to Beat the Pet Law of the Town.

"My seat in the senate and all I have besides had root in a game of poker."

Here the senator gazed benignantly at his small audience. He was a wise, deep sea little senator, as sapient as ever went into executive session. Now and then he liked to talk about the past.

"It sounds queerly to say it," the senator continued, "but it was a poker game which lost me to the east and gave me to the west, to become in time a senator. This is the story:

"I was born and brought up in a town in Kentucky. It was a small town. You could throw a lariat about the whole outfit and drag it with a pony. But it was a highly moral town. As a community it had a pet law. It made a specialty of enforcing the statutes against gambling. No games of chance could thrive in that community. And no matter what the position in life of an offender, were he guilty of gambling he would be dealt with. Such was the impartial boast of the town. Indeed, as one citizen observed:

"They would admire to catch a judge or prosecuting attorney violating the law merely to demonstrate the Puritan fairness of local sentiment."

"It was the June term of the circuit court. There was a crowd of lawyers in town. The judge himself was from down the Ohio river. During the noon hour a quiet game of poker was talked over as one of the happy methods of passing the pending evening. The town had a habit of going to bed at 9 o'clock, and it all promised to be graveyard dull to the visiting lawyers and the judge. Whispered word went about, therefore, that a game of cards, with a meek and lowly limit, would be a good way to ward off care. But there was no place to play.

"The hotel would never do. A light in any room after 10 o'clock would have provoked the most baleful surmises and investigation as well. The prosecuting attorney was one of the foremost in arranging the coming speculation. It was he who, in the fertility of his nature, suggested the flatboat. His father was proprietor of a flatboat of ample cabin accommodation. Just then it was moored, bow and stern, at the foot of the levee. A couple of games were programmed to come off that evening in the cabin of the flatboat. It would be out of sight and hearing of the testy little burg which made a specialty of punishing gambling.

"It was 10 o'clock. The night was as dark as the interior of a cow. Two games were going on in the cabin of the flatboat. The judge, the prosecuting attorney and some nine members of the bar were engaged. It made two nice tables. Everybody was bending to the game with all of the native ardor of a Kentucky gentleman. It was about this time when, in company with a friend, I strolled on the levee in the vicinity of the flatboat. I was 20 years of age and had no money. My friend was equally well fixed. Our youth and our poverty forbade anything like poker so far as we were concerned. On discovering the old folks thus charmingly engaged a taste to be humorous swept over us. We were law students; they were lawyers. That was reason enough for the joke. As the boat rose and fell on the swell and slackened the ropes we cast her loose. Silently she drifted away over the dark bosom of the river. The jovial gamblers drew and filled and straddled and raised and called, all unconscious. At 3 o'clock in the morning, Colonel Stebbins had won $70. It was in Mexican money, and he had inkered it about his honest old frame in half a dozen pockets. It was about all of the money at that table, and Colonel Stebbins concluded he might better go. He murmured something about cold feet and promising his wife to come up to the hotel early and arose to go. The rest jeered mildly and made invidious remarks after the fashion of losers at poker just as the game breaks up. But Colonel Stebbins was inflexible. He put on his hat, bid everybody good night, stepped out into the inky darkness and carefully picked his way overboard.

"The water was 20 feet deep. The silver all but drowned the colonel, however. At last he was fished out and laid across a barrel to evict the Ohio river from his system. The whoops and yells of the voyagers at last brought a sleepy little tug to their aid. They found themselves 17 miles below the town. For $30 of Colonel Stebbins' gains the tug towed the party back.

"They arrived at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and found the town suddenly lining the levee waiting for them. They were one and all promptly indicted. In the frank enthusiasm of youth my friend and I related how we had cast these poker games drift on the Ohio. We made a grave mistake when we told this story. Publicly we were threatened with indictment; privately we were menaced with death by the gentlemen we had betrayed to the river. We took counsel of our woes and without awaiting the worst west. This was all long ago—48 years ago. My partner in sin is now a United States judge, while I am in the senate. We often discuss our destinies and lay everything to that flatboat poker game."—Washington Post.

ST. HELENA TO PARIS

THE REMOVAL OF NAPOLEON'S BODY TO ITS LAST RESTING PLACE.

Wonderful Preservation Through Nineteen Years' Interment—Spectators Moved to Tears—Impressive Ceremonies at the Church of the Invalides.

The grave in the valley of Napoleon, on St. Helena, as the place had come to be called, was surrounded by an iron railing set in a heavy stone curb. Over the grave was a covering of 6 inch stone which admitted to a vault 11 feet deep, 8 feet long and 4 feet 8 inches broad and was apparently filled with earth, but digging down some seven feet a layer of Roman cement was found. This broken laid bare a layer of rough hewn stone 10 inches thick and fastened together by iron clamps. It took 4½ hours to remove this layer. The stone up, the slab forming the lid of the interior sarcophagus was exposed, inclosed in a border of Roman cement strongly attached to the walls of the vault. So stoutly had all these various coverings been sealed with cement and bound by iron bands that it took the large party of workers ten hours to reach the coffin.

"The outermost coffin was slightly injured," says an eyewitness. "Then came one of lead, which was in good condition and inclosed two others—one of tin and one of wood. The last coffin was lined inside with white satin, which, having become detached by the effect of time, had fallen upon the body and enveloped it like a winding sheet and had become slightly attached to it.

"It is difficult to describe with what anxiety and emotion those who were present waited for the moment which was to expose to them all that was left of the Emperor Napoleon. Notwithstanding the singular state of preservation of the tomb and coffins, we could scarcely hope to find anything but some misshapen remains of the least perishable part of the costume to evidence the identity of the body. But when Dr. Guillard raised the sheet of satin, an indescribable feeling of surprise and affection was expressed by the spectators, many of whom burst into tears. The emperor himself was before their eyes. The features of the face, though changed, were perfectly recognized; the hands extremely beautiful; his well known costume had suffered but little, and the colors were easily distinguished. The attitude itself was full of ease, and but for the fragments of satin lining which covered, as with fine gauze, several parts of the uniform, we might have believed we still saw Napoleon lying on his bed of state."

The climax of the pageant in Paris was the temple of the Invalides. The spacious church was draped in the most magnificent and lavish fashion and adorned with a perfect bewilderment of imperial emblems. The light was shut out by hangings of violet velvet; tripods blazing with colored flames, and thousands upon thousands of waxen candles in brilliant candelabra lighted the temple. Under the dome, in the place of the altar, stood the catafalque which was to receive the coffin.

It was 3 o'clock in the afternoon when the archbishop of Paris, preceded by a splendid cross-bearer, and followed by 16 incense boys and long rows of white clad priests, left the church to meet the procession. They returned soon. Following them was the Prince de Joinville and a select few from the grand cortege without. In their midst Napoleon's coffin.

The king descended from his throne and advanced to meet the cortege. "Sire," said the Prince de Joinville, "I present to you the body of Napoleon, which, in accordance with your commands, I have brought back to France."

"I receive it in the name of France," replied Louis Philippe.

Such at least is what the "Moniteur" affirms was said. The Prince de Joinville gives a different version: "It appears that a little speech which I was to have delivered when I met my father, and also the answer he to give me, had been drawn up in council, only the authorities had omitted to inform me concerning it. So when I arrived I simply saluted with my sword, and then stood aside. I saw indeed that this silent salute, followed by retreat, had thrown something out, but my father, after a moment's hesitation, improvised some appropriate sentence, and the matter was afterward arranged in the 'Moniteur'."

Beside the king stood an officer, bearing a cushion. On it lay the sword of Ausertiz. Marshal Soult handed it to the king, who, turning to Bertrand, said:

"General, I commission you to place the emperor's glorious sword on the bier."

And Bertrand, trembling with emotion, laid the sword reverently on his idol's coffin. The great audience watched this scene in deepest silence. The only sound which broke the stillness was the half stifled sobs of the gray haired soldiers of the Invalides, who stood in places of honor near the catafalque.

The king and the procession returned to their palaces, and then followed a majestic funeral mass.—Ida M. Tarbell in McClure's Magazine.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rushford, N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were not sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicines referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cure of coughs and colds; Chamberlain's Pain Balm, for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest, and Chamberlain's colic, cholera and diarrhoea remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequalled by any other. They are for sale here by Phil H. Kohl and Sedgwick Drug Co.
