The Herald has the largest paying list in northeast Nebraska and this week it is swelled with 35 new subscribers. Advertisers will take heed of the rapidly growing list of the Herald.

Send in the list by Wednesday noon of next week or we will consider that you do not approve of such methods, even though you do deplore, with the Herald, the events which led to it.

WOLF HUNT.

Bright and early Monday morning Col. Coleman and the captains commanding began the work of organizing their forces for the wolf hunt in the nine by six miles space selected south of Wayne. All morning many men were seen leaving the city and passing through from the north, and the general remark was, "where in nation did so many guns come from."

Every supporter of a shot gun bore a spirit of buoyancy and a smile was visible on each countenance in anticipation of the scenes to be witnessed at the round up, but alas—

At 11:00 o'clock the lines had been formed by the captains and as the signal shot echoed forth it passed along the line to the east, then south, then west, then north and the hundreds of men in line moved forward eager for the affray.

Jack rabbits, cotton tails and prairie chickens galore bit the dust as the large body of men moved forward and the east line succeeded in downing a wolf two miles east of Wm. Vincent's, so they say.

Up hill and down hill they passed, all interested in the spot designated as the "round-up" on the quarter section west of Eugene Sullivan's, and as they feared the place it was discovered that the north line was nearly an hour ahead of the others. On reaching the black flag set for the boundary they waited until the other lines approached. A large ring was then formed, and a thousand men and boys marched forward, each burning powder as fast as possible and as they advanced toward each other it seemed like a big army engaged in conflict, with the rattle of musketry. It was an inspiring scene in spite of the disagreeable weather. As the ring closed in it was apparent that no wolves were in the enclosure, but a few jack rabbits were surrounded. The north line out loose with another volley which was quickly followed by a volley from the south line and the men then surged together. It is estimated that about 500 jack rabbits and cotton tails were killed.

There is some talk of another wolf hunt, the location to be north of Wayne.

Omaha Christian Advocate.—Wayne:—On February 3rd, we closed a four weeks revival meeting. Miss Mae Phillips commenced with us on January 5th. The result none can tell until eternity. Wayne and vicinity for miles around was stirred. The church was literally packed from the first night. The interest never waned nor flagged and the last Sunday night probably from one to two hundred failed to gain admission. On the last night six ten bowed at the altar. During the meetings more than one hundred came to the altar seeking pardon or to be restored to divine favor. Some of these were already members of some church, Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, etc. Up to date I have received fifty-eight probationers and others will join. The meeting was remarkable in reaching the young men who have organized a praying band. Many heads of families and several old soldiers are now "rejoicing in hope." But the work is not done. On Wednesday night at prayer meeting over one hundred were out and two asked for prayers. In a probationers' or young converts' meeting held on Friday night over sixty were present and one man for whom we have prayed and worked, for four successive yearly meetings, arose and said he was determined to commence and lead a Christian life. The end is not yet.—H. H. Millard.

The effect of unwholesome literature, the fairy tale, etc., were quite lengthily discussed. Many ideas were suggested as to how the teacher could lead the pupil to read good books and take proper care of them.

After a short discussion on the subject of "Discipline" the program for the next meeting was read. Adjournment was then taken until March 14th, 1896.

THE GOLDEN DREAM

Paul's first movement was toward Aube with extended hands, but she shrank from him as if mistrusting his own powers, and giving her a reproachful look.

"Madame Dulau," he said, quietly, "I owe you an apology for my behavior yesterday. Believe me I was so overcome by surprise that I hardly knew what I said. You forgive me?"

"I have nothing to forgive," replied Nousie. "Your surprise was natural." "Then let me be brief and speak out as a man should under these circumstances. Madame Dulau, your daughter has been my sister's friend and companion for years."

"I know." "And almost from a boy, though I rarely saw her. I grew up to love your child. Of the proof of that love for her, which she knows well, I need say nothing more than that I have followed her across the sea to ask your consent to our marriage. Give it to me; it is for her happiness and mine."

Nousie looked at him pityingly, and then at her child, who was dandy pale. "Aube, dearest," she said, softly, "you are your own mistress; what shall I say?"

Aube fixed her eyes on Nousie. "Tell him, mother, that it is impossible; that he must think of me no more, and that I pray him for my happiness and yours to bid me, as dear Lucia's friend and sister, good-by forever—now, at once, and go."

"She kept her eyes fixed upon her mother, and there was not a tremor in her voice as she spoke." Nousie did not speak, but turned to Paul, whose face was set and hard.

"I can protect myself," said Paul, scornfully. "I am not afraid, and I can and will protect your child. An unfair influence has been brought to bear upon her. I cannot. I will not believe those words from her heart."

"Tell him, mother," said Aube, faintly, "it is true, and that I implore him to leave us in peace." "Never," cried Paul. "You do not know me. Aube, I will stay in spite of everything, and win you yet. You foolish girl," he continued, "you think because I find you in a home like this you ought to resign me. It is the greater reason why we should be one."

Aube shook her head. "I know you better," he said half laughingly. "Then, Madame Dulau, we will not take this seriously. I am refused, but if it is a hundred times I shall come again—always the highest seat in the place, beautiful, wealthy, and powerful; and even if they separated, that separation would not be so great."

path as if he were a serpent. Well, why don't you speak?" "I was thinking," said Nousie, simply, "of my child."

"He grasped her shoulder, and placed his lips close to her ear. "No shrinking," he said, sternly. "I call upon you for help. You shall side with me, and keep those foreign dogs at a distance. It is to save their lives. I do not want to go to extremities; but nothing shall move me now. You must help me. Why, Nousie, you ought to be proud that I ask you to give her to me for my wife. I shall be a leader soon, and your child will be one of the greatest ladies of the land. Do you want to see her taken away by this foreigner, never to meet her again?"

"He had struck the chord which vibrated most strongly in the mother's breast, and, after a pause, she drew a long and painful breath. "Tell me—promise me not to hurt him—for Aube's sake—and I will try."

"Try?" he said, scornfully. "I call upon you to help me. As for them. Huh! Let him keep out of my path. There—go to her—talk about me; make her tell you how happy we have made her at the house. She must soon come again. The horse is getting fidgety. Stand still, Nousie! Good-night, sister—mother," he added, laughing; "Here, give me a light for my cigar."

Nousie went in through the veranda and brought out a candle, whose flame did not even flicker in the hot, still night; and as Saintone lit his cigar the light was thrown upon Aube's white face as she gazed out of her window after unintentionally being a witness and a hearer of all that had passed.

"Good-night," said Saintone, exultingly. "Take care of my treasure. There, I am quite satisfied with you now. Good-night." Nousie stood holding the candle in the veranda as Saintone sprang into his carriage and drove away, and listening the driving away of the wheels in the dusty, ill-kept road.

"It is fate," she said, with a sigh. "My darling! Would it not be better if we both could die? Yes," she muttered, after a pause, as she turned toward the window from which Aube had shrunk away, and the light cast curious shadows upon her stern face, "better if we could die and go to him. We would be happy then, for we should be at peace."

CHAPTER XXI. "Pah!" ejaculated Saintone, as he drove slowly along the dark road, "a snake—a worm in my path. Kill him? Not if he keeps out of my way. If he tries to raise his head and sting me, I can crush him under my wheel. The Voudoux is a powerful strength. I thought I was safe and soon. Yes, the Voudoux is a force that shall help me in all my schemes. Get on, brute!" he cried to his horse, which had stopped so suddenly that Saintone was nearly thrown out. "What's the matter? Halt!"

He lashed at the horse sharply, for he had caught sight of a great black figure at its head, but the animal only plunged and shivered, for its bit was held fast. "Don't hurry, Etienne," said a voice; and a figure came from the side of the road and laid a hand upon his arm: "I want to speak to you."

"G'night," cried Saintone, whose heart beat fast. "Yes, Genie. Are you coming home?" "You are staying to-night," he said, simply. "Tell that fellow to loose my horse's head or something may happen. I am armed." "But you cannot turn against him," said the woman, with a laugh; "he is my brother. You see I know."

"Know what?" "Pish!" she said contemptuously, "he you think I do not know you came to me to ask me to take you to a meeting, but I was not going to have you to join us. I did not want you."

"No," said Saintone, meaningly. "But you are one of us now, and I can talk freely. You see I know." "Yes," said Saintone, "and I know, too." "You wish to quarrel?" said the woman, "but I shall not—not yet," she added, herself. "There aloud—'Where have you been to-night?'"

THE TRUMPET BLAST.

REV. DR. TALMAGE ON "BRINGING IN THE SHEAVES."

He Shows How Some Mighty Sicknesses May Be Used for the Gospel Harvest—A Powerful Sermon to an Immense Throng.

The Harvest Is Rip.—Dr. Talmage preached Sunday at Washington to an immense concourse. The subject of his sermon was "Bringing in the Sheaves," the text being Joel iii, 13, "Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe."

The sword has been poetized, and the world has celebrated the sword of Bolivar, the sword of Cortes and the sword of Lafayette. The pen has been properly eulogized, and the world has celebrated the pen of Addison, the pen of Southey and the pen of Irving. The painter's pencil has been honored, and the world has celebrated the pencil of Murillo, the pencil of Rubens and the pencil of Bierstadt. The sculptor's chisel has come in for high encomium, and the world has celebrated Chantrey's chisel, and Crawford's chisel, and Greenough's chisel. But there is one instrument about which I sing the first canto that was ever sung—the sickle, the sickle of the Bible, the sickle that has reaped the harvest of many centuries. Sharp and bent into a semicircle and glittering, this reaping hook, no longer than your arm, has furnished the bread for thousands of years. Its successes has produced the wealth of nations. It has had more to do with the world's progress than sword and pen and pencil and chisel all put together. Christ was the sickle into exquisite sermonic simile, and you see that instrument flash all up and down the Apocalypse as St. John swings it, while through Joel in my text God commands the people, as through his servants now he commanded them, "Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe."

Estimate of Values.—Last November there was great rejoicing all over the land. With trumpet and cornet and organ and thousand voiced psalm we praised the Lord for the temporal harvests. We praised God for the wheat, the rye, the oats, the cotton, the rice, all the fruit of the orchard and all the grains of the field, and the nation never does a better thing than when in the autumn it gathers to festivity and thanks God for the greatness of the harvest. But I come to-day to speak to you of richer harvests, even the spiritual. How shall we estimate the value of a man? We say he is worth so many dollars, or he has achieved such and such a position, but we know very well there are some men at the top of the ladder who ought to be at the bottom and some at the bottom who ought to be at the top, and the only way to estimate a man is by his soul. We all know that we shall live forever. Death cannot kill us. Other crafts may be drawn into the whirlpool or shattered on the rocks, but this life within us will weather all storms and drop no anchor and 10,000 years after death will shake out signals on the high seas of eternity. You put the mendicant off your doorstep and say he is only a beggar, but he is worth all the gold of the mountains, worth all the pearls of the sea, worth the solid earth, worth sun and moon and stars, worth the entire material universe. Take all the paper that ever came from the paper mills and all the men with freckles make figures on that paper for 10,000 years, and they will only have been to expiate the value of the soul. Suppose I owned Colorado and Nevada and Australia, of how much value would that be to me one moment after I departed this life? How much of Philadelphia does Stephen Girard own to-day? How much of Boston property does Abbott Lawrence own to-day? The man who to-day hath a dollar in his pocket hath more worldly estate than the millionaire who died last year. How do you suppose I feel, standing here surrounded by a multitude of souls, each one worth more than the material universe? Oh, was I not right in saying this spiritual harvest is richer than the temporal harvest? Must I tighten the girdle. I must sharpen the sickle. I must be careful how I swing the instrument for gathering the grain lest one stalk be lost.

One of the most powerful sickles for reaping this spiritual harvest is the preaching of the gospel. If the sickle have a precious stone, and yet it cannot bring down the grain, it is not much of a sickle, and preaching amounts to nothing unless it harvests souls for God. Shall we preach philosophy? The Ralph Waldo Emerson could beat us at that. Shall we preach science? The Agassizs beat us at that. The minister of Jesus Christ with weakest arm going forth in earnest prayer and wielding this sickle of the gospel shall find the harvest all around him waiting for the angel sheaf-binder. Oh, the harvest of souls! I notice in the fields that the farmer did not stand upright when he gathered the grain. I noticed he had to stoop in his work, and I noticed in order to bind the sheaves the better he had to put his knee upon them. And as we go forth in this work for God we cannot stand upright in our rhetoric and our metaphysics and our erudition. We have to stoop to our work. Aya, we have to put our knee to it, or we will never gather sheaves for the Lord's garner. Peter swung that sickle on the day of Pentecost, and what are the two hours of the Sabbath against the 1667? Oh, there comes down the ordination of God this day upon all the people, men who toil with head and hand and foot—the ordination comes upon all merchants, upon all mechanics, upon all toilers, and God says to you as he says to me: "Go, teach all nations." He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned.

Mighty gospel, let the whole earth hear it! The story of Christ is to regenerate the nations; it is to eradicate all wrong; it is to turn the earth into a paradise. An old artist painted the "Lord's Supper," and he wanted the chief attention directed to the face of Christ. When he invited his friends in to criticize the picture, they admired the chalice more than they did the face, and the old artist said, "This picture is a failure," and he dashed out the picture of the cups and said: "I shall have nothing to detract from the face of the Lord. Christ is the all of this picture."

Another powerful sickle for the reaping of this harvest is Christian song. I know in many churches the whole work is delegated to a few people standing in the organ loft. But, my friends, as others cannot repent for us and others cannot die for us we cannot delegate to others the work of singing for us. While a few drilled artists shall take the chants and execute the more skillful music, when the hymn is given out let there be hundreds and thousands of voices uniting in the psalms and hymns. On the way to grandeur that never comes and glories that never die let us sing. At the battle of London a general came to the king and said: "Those soldiers are singing as they are going into the battle. Shall I stop them?" "No," said the king. "Men that can sing like that can fight." Oh, the power of Christian song! When I argue here, you may argue back. The argument you make against religion may be more skillful than the argument I make in behalf of religion. But who can stand before the pathos of some uplifted song like that which we sometimes sing:

Show pity, Lord: O Lord, forgive! Let a repenting rebel live! Are not thy mercies large and free? May not a sinner trust in thee? An Effective Sickle.—Another mighty sickle for reaping the harvest is prayer. What does God do with our prayers? Does he go on the battlefields of heaven and throw them off? No. What do you do with gifts given you by those who love you very much? You keep them with great sacredness. And do you suppose God will take our prayers, offered in the sincerity and love of our hearts, and scatter them to the winds? Oh, no! He will answer them all in some way. Oh, what a mighty thing prayer is! It is not a long rignarole of "ohs" and "ahs" and "for ever and ever, amen." It is a breathing of the heart into the heart of God. Oh, what a mighty thing prayer is! Elijah, with it reached up to the clouds and shook down the showery. With it John Knox shook Scotland. With it Martin Luther smothered lay sick unto death, as many supposed, Martin Luther came in and said, "Philipp, we can't spare you." "Oh," said he, "Martin, you must let me go! I am tired of persecution and tired of life. I want to go to be with my God." "No," said Martin Luther, "you shall not go. You must take this food, and then I will pray for you." "No, Martin," said Melancthon, "you must let me go. Martin Luther said, 'You take this food, or I will excommunicate you.' He took the food, and Martin Luther knelt down and prayed as only he could pray, and a valence came, and then Martin Luther went back and said to his friends, 'God has led the life of Philipp Melancthon in direct answer to my prayer.' Oh, the power of prayer! Have you tested it?—Dr. Prime, of New York, in his beautiful book entitled, "Around the World," described a manseum in India which it took 20,000 men twenty-two years to build—that and the buildings surrounding—and he says, "Standing in that manseum and uttering a word, it is echoed back from a height of 150 feet—not an ordinary echo, but a prolonged music, as though there were angels hovering in the air." And every word of earnest prayer uttered has an echo not from the marble cupola of an earthly manseum, but from the heart of God and from the wings of angels as they hover, crying, "Behold, he prayeth." Oh, test it! Mighty sickle for reaping this gospel harvest, the sickle of prayer!

Forms of Little Consequence.—It does not make so much difference about the posture you take, whether you sit, stand or kneel or lie on your face or on your physical agonies lie on your back. It does not make any difference about the physical posture, as was shown in a hospital, when the chaplain said as he looked over the beds of the suffering: "Let all those wounded men here who would like to be prayed for lift the hand." Some lifted two hands; others lifted one hand; some with hands amputated could only lift the stump of the arm. One man, both his arms amputated, could give no answer except to say: "Yes, Me!" Oh, it does not make any difference about the rhetoric of our prayers. It does not make any difference about the posture. It does not make any difference whether you can lift a hand or have no hand to lift. God is ready to hear you. Prayer is answered. God is waiting to respond.

"Lift up your eyes upon the fields, for they are white already to harvest." How many have you reaped for God? Do you ask me how many I have reaped for God? I cannot say. Now, can you say how many you have reaped? I hope there are some who have brought in into the kingdom of God through our instrumentality. Have there not been? Not one? You, a man 35, 40, 50 years of age and not one? I see souls coming up to glory. Here is a Sunday school teacher bringing ten or fifteen souls. Here is a tract distributor bringing in forty or fifty souls. Here is a man you never heard of who has been very useful in bringing souls to God. He comes with 150 souls. They are the sheaves of his harvest. How many have you brought? Not one—can it be? What will God say? What will the angels say? Better crouch down in some corner of heaven and never show yourself. Oh, that harvest is to be reaped now! And that is this instant. Why not be reaped for God this hour?

"Oh," says some man, "I have been going on the wrong road for thirty, forty or fifty years. I have gone through the whole catalogue of crime and must first get myself fixed up." Ah, you will never get yourself fixed up until Christ takes you in charge! You get worse and worse until he comes to the rescue. "Not the righteous—sinners! Here is the very worst case there you see, and here is a man here who feels he is all right in heart and life, I am not talking to him, for he is probably a hypocrite. I will talk to him some other time. But if there is a man who feels himself all wrong, to him I address myself. Though you be wounded in the hands, and wounded in the feet, and wounded in the head, and wounded in the heart, and though the gangrene of eternal death be upon you one drop of the elixir of divine life will cure your soul. Tell the story of the man who was so wicked, though your feet have gone in unclean places, though

Oh, this is a mighty gospel! It captured not only John the lamb, but Paul the lion. May I gnash their teeth at it and clinch their fists, but it is the power of God and the wisdom of God unto salvation. But, alas, if it is only preached in pulpits and on Sabbath days! We must go forth into our stores, our shops, our banking houses, our factories, and the streets, and everywhere preach Christ. We stand in our pulpits for two hours on the Sabbath and commend Christ to the people, but there are 108 hours in the week, and what are the two hours of the Sabbath against the 1067? Oh, there comes down the ordination of God this day upon all the people, men who toil with head and hand and foot—the ordination comes upon all merchants, upon all mechanics, upon all toilers, and God says to you as he says to me: "Go, teach all nations." He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned.

Mighty gospel, let the whole earth hear it! The story of Christ is to regenerate the nations; it is to eradicate all wrong; it is to turn the earth into a paradise. An old artist painted the "Lord's Supper," and he wanted the chief attention directed to the face of Christ. When he invited his friends in to criticize the picture, they admired the chalice more than they did the face, and the old artist said, "This picture is a failure," and he dashed out the picture of the cups and said: "I shall have nothing to detract from the face of the Lord. you have championed with the abandoned and the lost, one touch of divine grace will save your soul.

"Whosoever will." I do not say that you will not have struggles after that. Oh, no! But they will be a different kind of struggle. You go into that battle, and all hell is against you, and you are alone, and you fight, and you fight, weaker and weaker and weaker, until at last you fall and the powers of darkness trample on your soul. But in the other case you go into the battle, and you fight stronger and stronger and stronger until the will propensely goes down, and you get the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Oh, come out of your shell! Have you not been bruised with sin long enough? Have you not carried that load long enough? Have you not fought that battle long enough?

I rattle the gates of your sepulcher to-day. I take the trumpet of the gospel and blow the long, loud, low, Roland went into battle. Charlemagne's army, had been driven back by the three-armies of the Saracens, and Roland, in almost despair, took up the trumpet and blew three blasts in one of the mountain passes, and under the power of those three blasts the Saracens recalled an dead in terror. But history says that when he had blown the third blast Roland's trumpet broke.

I take this trumpet of the gospel and blow the first blast, "Whosoever will." I blow the second blast, "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found." I blow the third blast, "Now is the accepted time." But the trumpet does not break. It was handed down by our forefathers to us, and we will hand it down to our children, that after we are dead they may blow the trumpet, telling the world that we have a pardoning God, a loving God, a sympathetic God, and that more to him than the throne on which he sits is the joy of seeing a prodigal put his finger on the latch of his father's house.

I invite any one the most infidel, any one the most esthetic. I invite him into the kingdom of God with just as much heartiness as those who have for fifty years been under the teaching of the gospel and believed it all. When I was living in Philadelphia, a gentleman told me of a scene in which he was a participant. In Callowhill street, in Philadelphia, there had been a powerful meeting going on for some time, and many were converted; and among others one of the prominent members of the worst clubhouse in that city. The next night the leader of that club house, the president of it, resolved that he would endeavor to get his comrade away. He came to the door, and before he entered he heard a Christian song, and under its power his soul was agitated. He went in and asked for prayer. Before he came out he was a subject of converting mercy. The next night another comrade went to reclaim the two who had been lost to their sinful greils. He went, and under the power of the Holy Ghost became a changed man, and the work went on until they were all saved and the infamous clubhouse disbanded. Oh, it is a mighty gospel. Though you came here a child of sin, you can go away a child of grace. You can go away singing:

Amazing grace, how sweet the sound That saved a wretch like me! I once was lost, but now am found— Was blind, but now I see.

Faith Defined.—Oh, give up your sins! Most of your life is already gone. Your children are going on the same wrong road. Why do you not stop? "This day is salvation come to thy house." Why not this moment look up into the face of Christ and say: Just as I am, without one plea But that thy blood was shed for me, And that thou bid'st me come to thee— O Lamb of God, I come, I come! God is going to save you. You are going to be among the shining ones—after the tolls of life, after you are going up to join your loved ones, departed parents and departed children. "Oh, my God," says some man, "how can I come to thee? I am so far off. Who will help me? I am so weak? It seems such a great undertaking." Oh, my brother, it is a great undertaking! It is so great you cannot accomplish it, but Christ can do the work. He will correct your heart, and he will correct your life. "Oh," you say, "I will stop profanity." That will not save you. "Oh," you say, "I will stop Sabbath breaking." That will not save you. There is only one door into the kingdom of God, and that is faith; only one ship that will carry you to heaven, and that is faith. Faith the first step, the second step, the hundredth step, the thousandth step, the last step by which we enter the kingdom. By faith we keep in. In faith we die. Heaven's reward the faith. The earthquake shook down the Philippian dungeon. The jailer said, "What shall I do?" Some of you would say, "Better get out of the place before the walls crush you." What did the apostle say? "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

"Ah," you say, "there's the rub! What is faith? Suppose you were thirsty, and I offered you this glass of water, and you believed I meant to give it to you, and you came up and took it. You exercise faith. You believe I mean to keep my promise. Christ offers you the water of everlasting life. You take it. This is faith. Enter into the kingdom of God. Enter now. The door of life is set wide open. I plead with you by the bloody sweat of Gethsemane and the death groan of Golgotha, by cross and crown, by Pilate's courtroom and Joseph's sepulcher, by harps and chains, by kingdoms of light and realms of darkness, by the trumpet of the archangel that shall call the dead and by the Lamb that you attend now to the things of eternity. Oh, what a sad thing it will be, if having come so near heaven, we miss it! Oh, to have come within sight of the shining pinnacles of the city and not have entered! Oh, to have been so near we have seen the mighty through enter, and we not joining them! Angels of God, fly this way! Good news for you. Tell the story of the redeemed, on high. If there be any let that one know it now. We put down our sorrows. Glory be to God for such a hope, for such a pardon, for such a joy, for such a heaven, for such a Christ!

HE LOVES THE BIRDS.

FRANCOIS COPPEE AND HIS FRIENDS
IN THE JARDIN DU LUXEMBOURG.

It is a Touching Sight to Watch the Post Feed His Pets in a Public Garden—A Man Who Is Loved by All and Is "Dear Master" to the Students.

Francois Coppee, the author of "For the King," has a great many friends in Paris, but none of them is more devoted than the little birds that live in the Jardin du Luxembourg. They know him as soon as they see him come in at one of the wide gates, his shoulders drooping, his head hanging forward, his face pale from ill health. They know in just which one of his pockets he carries the big piece of bread which he is going to divide into crumbs for their benefit, and they probably say in their own special language:

"Ah, here is Friend Coppee, bless him!"

They are not the only ones that know what Coppee has in his pocket. All the Latin quarter people who come and go through that corner of the Luxembourg garden which faces the Odeon know that the gentle author rarely misses a day in his devotion to the birds. And when he appears with a peculiar swollen appearance about one of his pockets they draw quietly off to a respectful distance to watch.

As soon as the circle of spectators—workmen in blue blouses, students in corduroy and elouch hats, nursemaids with barelegged children—as soon as these elements, which might possibly be disturbing, have taken themselves far enough out of the way, the birds close in around the poet until sometimes a hundred of them will be fluttering about his head or hopping about his feet. Then he takes out his piece of bread, and crumbling off one corner tosses a morsel up in the air. Instantly there is a flutter of wings, and two or three of the birds dart upward, and the most fortunate one catches the crumb in its flight and settles down again to his place in the flock.

One crumb after another is thrown out in this direction and that, and occasionally a few are scattered on the ground, so that the less adventurous and weaker spirits may have their share. Finally a good fat crumb is pinched off, but not thrown—it is held invitingly between the thumb and finger, while the poet looks at his birds as much as to say:

"Come, come. You know your friend Coppee. Give me a proof of your affection, as I am giving you a proof of mine."

There is a great flutter then among the birds, a great cocking of pretty heads, much sharp glancing of bright eyes. Finally one particularly brave little creature makes a wide curve toward the imprisoned crumb, but his courage deserts him on the way, and he circles back to his place without the prize. Coppee rubs the crumb a little, so that a tiny morsel of it falls to the ground, where it is quickly picked up. It is as if he said to his small flock:

"See, my little friends, it is a good crumb. Where is your confidence? Have I ever betrayed you?"

As if ashamed of having hesitated so long, a bird makes a dart toward the outstretched hand, poises with fluttering wings above it, picks daintily at the crumb and then bears it away triumphantly in its bill. After that it all goes merry as a marriage bell. Two or three birds will be eating from his hand at the same time. They light on his shoulder, on his arm, on his hat.

The spectators meanwhile are full of breathless interest. A child whose loud cry of delight started the birds into sudden flight is unconsciously jerked back by his nurse with an emphatic "Tais-toi." The students talk in an undertone about the dear master, as they call Coppee.

Last winter, when there was an unusual amount of snow in Paris, Coppee was particularly attentive to the wants of his birds, which in their turn were more than ever appreciative of his good offices, for the snow made pretty poor picking for them. And on cold days it was no uncommon sight to see the students rush up to the poet after he had finished his dole and turn up his coat, collar or tighten his muffler or button his overcoat.

"Dear master," they would say affectionately, "you must be more careful of yourself. You know you are not strong, and it is cold, and we need you as much as the birds do."

To the birds and the students he is always "the dear master." It was Coppee who wrote and read the poem for the unveiling of the bust of Henri Murger in that same Jardin du Luxembourg. Murger's name is idolized by the whole Latin quarter, and it is doubtful if the students would have permitted any one of whom they did not approve to take part in the ceremonies at the unveiling of his monument.

Coppee is not married, although, in French fashion, he has a friend to whom he makes mysterious references in his writings as one who is dear to him and in whose heart he knows he will leave inconsolable regret when he dies. However that may be, he will be sure of plenty of sincere mourners—the students of the Latin quarter and the birds of the Jardin du Luxembourg.—New York Sun.

Windproof.

A farmer in the Kansas cyclone district was building a stone wall. He was putting it there to stay, building it 5 feet across the base and 4 feet high. A stranger came riding by, and seeing the care the farmer was taking said to him, "You seem to be mighty careful about that wall." "Yep," replied the farmer, "I'm building her to stay." "Tain't no use," replied the stranger, "it'll blow over just the same." "Ward, let her blow over, she'll be a foot higher if she does," replied the farmer, continuing his work.—San Francisco Argonaut.

HER FIRST PATIENT.

A Beautiful Incident in the Childhood of Florence Nightingale.

There is a beautiful incident related of Florence Nightingale, when she was a child. It shows that God had already planted within her the germ which was to develop so beautifully in after days.

Her first wounded patient was a Scotch shepherd dog. Some boys had hurt and apparently broken its leg by throwing stones, and it had been decided to hang it to put it out of its misery.

The little girl went fearlessly up to where he lay, saying, in a soft, caressing tone, "Poor Coo-poo Cap." It was enough. He looked up with his speaking brown eyes, now bloodshot and full of pain, into her face, and did not resent it when, kneeling down beside him, she stroked with her little ungloved hand the large, intelligent head.

To the vicar, he was rather less amenable, but by dint of coaxing he at last allowed him to touch and examine the wounded leg. Florence persuasively telling him that it was "all right." Indeed, she was on the floor beside him, with his head on her lap, keeping up a continuous murmur, much as a mother does over a sick child. "Well," said the vicar, rising from his examination, "as far as I can tell, there are no bones broken; the leg is badly bruised. It ought to be fomented to take the inflammation and swelling down." "How do you foment?" asked Florence. "With hot cloths dipped in boiling water," answered the vicar. "Then that's quite easy. I'll stay and do it. Now, Jimmy, get sticks and make the kettle boil."

There was no hesitation in the child's manner. She was told what ought to be done, and she set about doing it as a simple matter of course. "But they will be expecting you at home," said the vicar. "Not if you tell them I'm here," answered Florence, "and my sister and one of the maids can come and take me home in time for tea, and," she hesitated, "they had better bring some old flannel and cloths; there does not seem to be much here. But you will wait and show me how to foment, won't you?" "Well, yes," said the vicar, carried away by the quick energy of the little girl. And soon the fire was lit and the water boiling. An old smock frock of the shepherd's had been discovered in a corner, which Florence had deliberately torn in pieces, and to the vicar's remark, "What will Roger say?" she answered, "We'll get him another." And so Florence Nightingale made her first compress and spent all that bright spring day in nursing her first patient—the shepherd's dog.—Everywhere.

Lucky.

No amount of cultivation can make a bad tree bear good fruit.

The Security Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Fremont, Nebraska, have added to the regular policy which they are issuing on the whole life plan a feature by which the insured may pay for 10, 15, 20 or 25 years a specified amount in addition to the regular monthly assessment, while payments, if continued through the period for which the policy was written, converts his contract into a paid up policy, payable to the beneficiary named, together with the amount of his payment to the guarantee fund and the amount of the additional payments, all of which are payable at the death of the insured. The policy also provides that after three full years, payments have been made, should circumstances arise making it impossible for the insured to continue his payments he will be carried for the full amount of his original insurance for such time as his payment to the trust fund, together with compound interest, will pay his regular assessment on a whole life policy. Or he may receive a paid up policy for such an amount as the earnings on his payments to the trust fund at 4½ per cent will pay for the amount of reduced insurance, to be paid to his beneficiary at his death.

They are writing this policy and giving the insured the privilege of saying any time during the term whether he wishes the full amount paid to his beneficiary at his death or whether he wishes a stated amount paid at his death, the balance to be paid in annual installments. Three per cent interest on the deferred payment would be added to each year's payment. This last named feature is one that is desirable in many cases, as it provides a certain amount of money being paid to his beneficiary for a given number of years, which in many cases avoids improper investments at a loss to the estate.

The law under which the Security Mutual Life Insurance Co. is organized provides that all monies held in trust for the maturing or fulfillment of policy contracts shall be invested as prescribed by law and the securities held by the auditor of the state of Nebraska to trust for the policy holders. This makes it impossible for any misappropriation of funds, or the use of any fund for any purpose except that for which the securities were deposited.

The Security Mutual Life Insurance Co. should have the hearty support and assistance of every insurable man who is interested in Nebraska or Nebraska enterprises, and is the only assessment company issuing a paid up policy and granting the above features. Insure in this company.

Cancer Of the Breast.

Mr. A. H. Crausby, of 158 Kerr St., Memphis, Tenn., says that his wife paid no attention to a small lump which appeared in her breast, but it soon developed into a cancer of the worst type, and notwithstanding the treatment of the best physicians, it continued to spread and grow rapidly, eating two holes in her breast. The doctors soon pronounced her incurable. A celebrated New York specialist then treated her, but she continued to grow worse and when informed that both her aunt and grandmother had died from cancer he gave the case up as hopeless.

Someone then recommended S.S.S. and though little hope remained, she began it, and an improvement was noticed. The cancer commenced to heal and when she had taken several bottles it disappeared entirely, and although several years have elapsed, not a sign of the disease has ever returned.

The Republican State Convention to elect delegates to attend the republican National convention at St. Louis, will be held at Omaha, April 15th. Wayne county is entitled to nine delegates.

Explorer Nansen, of Norway, it is said, has discovered the North Pole and is on his way home. Mountains abound in the ice region. The report of the discovery was the probable cause of the cold wave, Saturday.

Every member of congress is pouring hot shot into Secretary of Agriculture Morton, who seems to know so much more about farming interests than farmers do themselves. He will have to put up or get out, the law must be obeyed.

The Northeast Nebraska Press Association meets at Randolph on the 26th inst. Every newspaper man in the 3rd congressional district should be present. A banquet will be tendered the members at the Hotel Boughn in the evening.

If Sioux City will elect Jonas Cleland Mayor, and then at once begin preparation for an old time Corn Palace, the surrounding country, as well as Sioux City, will in the near future, realize the busy scenes of five and six years ago. Will you do it?

Will S. Swenson has leased the Emerson-Times, George Barker having arrived at the conclusion that "all is not gold that glitters." Mr. Swenson was successful in former newspaper enterprises and there is little doubt of his making the Times a worthy and successful exponent of Emerson and surrounding country.

The Inter Ocean says "Maine is not a good state for corn, tobacco, cotton and such, but it is running both wings of Congress and it is hoping to run the White House contingent. As far as Maine has gone, it has done well, but it is doubtful whether it could keep an administration up to its present great record on bonds, fish, and ducks."

The people throughout this congressional district are beginning to find out "who Frank M. Northrop is." One thing certain is, he is the peer of any man yet mentioned in connection with the republican nomination for congress in the district. Besides he hails from one of two counties in the district that gave a majority to the republican nominee at the last congressional election. As yet no one has disputed the fact that this part of the district is entitled to the nomination at this time. Success does not necessarily follow where any one body of republicans act "swinish."

Among the gentlemen named to represent our district in the forthcoming national convention, is John T. Bressler, of Wayne county. The Republic takes pleasure in adding its "aye" to this suggestion. Ex-Senator Bressler is a life-long republican, an honorable gentleman and a representative citizen in every respect. What of his life has been devoted to the public service challenges admiration for probity and honor, and not a word derogatory can be said of him. "We honor the Senator who honored his position." The party will honor itself, also, in selecting as one of its accredited delegates Hon. J. T. Bressler, of Wayne county.—Thurston Republic.

When democracy told you that tariff would not again be an issue, it was nothing but the wind whistling through their derby. They knew not what they said. "Big crops" and "hard times" are not synonymous. Protection is the war cry.

Ex. U. S. Senator Chas. F. Manderson, of Omaha, says that he has been urged so much to become a presidential candidate that he cannot refuse.

The Times is free to confess that there is trouble in the world of one kind or another nearly, if not quite all the time, and the man or woman who fails to get his or her share of it, is fortunate indeed. Yet the fact remains

Wages Past and Present.

The Free-Trade organs which have been trying to prove that prosperity has returned to the workmen of the United States under the Gorman-Wilson law have succeeded in discovering 200,000 persons whose wages have been advanced an average of 10 per cent. since the 1st of last April.

How far this comes from a restoration of the wages paid in 1893, before the beginning of the Democratic panic can be shown by a little figuring. According to the census of 1890 there were in the United States in that year five million persons engaged in manufacturing, mechanical and mining operations, whose earnings amounted to $2,500,000,000 a year. The reductions of wages, which began in 1892 and continued through '93-'94, amounted on the average to 20 per cent., as has been proved by thorough investigation. The actual losses to labor by those reductions during the two years and a half, were at least a billion dollars, an average of $200 for each of the five million workers, or about $90 a year. The average advance of ten per cent. received by 200,000 workers means a restoration of about half the loss, or $40 a year. For the half year since last April the restoration has amounted to $20. For the 200,000 who have received the increase of 10 per cent. the restoration amounts to $4,000,000.

In brief, but $4,000,000 of the $1,000,000,000 lost during the Democratic panic has been restored to labor. But 200,000 persons have been benefited by that restoration. Four million eight hundred thousand workers are still waiting for the restoration of a loss of $900,000,000. That is the length and breadth of the benefit which the working people of the United States have received from the Wilson-Gorman law, and it doesn't seem to be much to brag about.

The Leader, Cleveland, Ohio, October 7th, 1895.

Facts from a Democratic Document.

The Treasury Department has just issued a diagram covering the trade of this country with foreign lands from 1781 down to, and including 1895. It is a Democratic document, prepared by Democratic officials. It should be posted on every granary door on the farms of the country, and in every school district building in the land. The diagram shows plainly that the period when this country was enjoying her greatest volume of trade was under Republican administrations, and notably during the time that the McKinley Protective Tariff was on our statute books. It shows three striking facts. First, that the volume of our domestic exports was greatest by over $100,000,000 during the two or three years immediately following the passage of the McKinley act; second, that the volume of those exports has not only rapidly diminished under the present administration, but especially since the Democratic Free-Trade-Tariff act became a law; third, that the value of the imports free of duty was greater during the period covered by the McKinley act than at any time before or since.—American Economist.

The republican party is forty years old in 1896, and never in its whole history were its prospects for victory in a presidential campaign brighter than they are this year. Many republicans thought the outlook was somewhat gloomy for a time, even in 1864, 1868 and 1872, but no republican has any such feeling at present. In the three years named, when the election returns were overwhelmingly in favor of the republicans, many democrats had high hopes of victory for their party during most of the campaign. It would be hard to find a democrat in that mood in 1896.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

The Inter-Ocean says that "Protection will be the great issue in the coming Presidential contest. The public don't have to be convinced of that. The farmer, the mechanic, the day laborer, and the business men of every class note the fact that "tariff reform" (?) and tariff for revenue that doesn't raise a revenue lies at the root of all business prostration, and they will demand a speedy change. The trouble is not due to short crops, a lack of money, or unsound money, but is due to mischievous and unwise legislation, that moved our workshops to Europe."

The Nebraska McKinley Club has grown to gigantic proportions. However, if McKinley should fail to secure the nomination, the Nebraska McKinley Club will work just as hard for the nominee, whoever he may be, as they would for the man of their choice.

When democracy told you that tariff would not again be an issue, it was nothing but the wind whistling through their derby. They knew not what they said. "Big crops" and "hard times" are not synonymous. Protection is the war cry.

Ex. U. S. Senator Chas. F. Manderson, of Omaha, says that he has been urged so much to become a presidential candidate that he cannot refuse.

The Times is free to confess that there is trouble in the world of one kind or another nearly, if not quite all the time, and the man or woman who fails to get his or her share of it, is fortunate indeed. Yet the fact remains that a large share of our troubles are purely home made, and are consumed right where they are manufactured, without ever being subject to any kind of duty or revenue tax. It has also been discovered by some very wise men, who lived many years ago, that the best way to be happy is to try all the time to make others happy. People who have lived such lives as that, and there are unfortunately not so very many of them, are free to confess that they would do the very same way if they had it all to do over again. How many of us could say the same?—York Times.

Soothing, healing, cleansing, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is the enemy to sores, wounds and piles, which it never fails to cure. Stops itching and burning. Cures chapped lips and cold sores in two or three hours. Sedgwick Drug Co.

First get a man's heart, and you will not have to draw a revolver on him to get his purse.

Simon S. Hartman, of Tunnelton, Va. has been subject to attacks of colic about once a year, and would have to call a doctor and then suffer for about 12 hours as much as some do when they die. He was taken recently just the same as at other times, and concluded to try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I took one dose of it and it gave me relief in five minutes. That is more than anything else has ever done for me." For sale by Phil H. Kohl and Sedgwick Drug Co.

Is there anything more foolish than for a man to think he can serve the devil all his life and get away from him on his deathbed.

Don't invite disappointment by experimenting. Depend upon One Minute Cough Cure and you have immediate relief. The only harmless remedy that produces immediate results. Sedgwick Drug Co.

Live to make somebody happy, or you will never know what the true meaning of life is.

Quick in effect, heals and leaves no scar. Burntug, scaly skin eruptions quickly cured by DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Applied to burns, scalds, old sores, it is magical in effect. Always cures piles. Sedgwick Drug Co.

The road to blessing often winds through a narrow, dark and winding lane.

One Minute Cough Cure touches the right spot. It also touches it at the right time if you take it when you have a cough or cold. See the point? Then don't cough. Sedgwick Drug Co.

Visiting a hospital, prison or insane asylum is good medicine for backsliding.

The little daughter of Mr. Fred Webber, Holland, Mass., had a very bad cold and cough which he had not been able to cure with anything. I gave him a 25 cent bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, says W. P. Holden, merchant and postmaster at West Brimfield, and the next time I saw him he said it worked like a charm. This remedy is intended especially for acute throat and lung diseases such as colds, croup and whooping cough, and it is famous for its cures. There is no danger in giving it to children for it contains nothing injurious. For sale by Phil H. Kohl and Sedgwick Drug Co.

The preacher who would have the common people hear him gladly must make himself understood.

"Give me a liver regulator and I can regulate the world," said a genius. The druggist handed him a bottle of DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills. Sedgwick Drug Co.

HUNT FOR TREASURE

NEW YORKER'S PROSPECT FOR BURIED TREASURE

Mr. Rockefeller Objects to Having His Hood Dug Up in a Search for Kidd's Treasure and of Sailor's Ghost-Little Sugar from Cuba.

Capt. Kidd's Treasure.

SKARBO, N. Y.: During the last few days several parties from New York prospectors have been looking for Capt. Kidd's treasure. Tradition has it that Capt. Kidd sailed by the Hudson and anchored where Mr. Rockefeller's boat house now is. The pirates, it is said, hid some of his men and buried it in a sack, underneath the boards of Spook Rock, a lighthouse which he buried some of the many chests of gold and silver taken from the merchantmen on the main. Then, as was usually the case, he killed one of his men and left the other to be devoured by the sharks. The ghost haunted the rock and nightly moaned and waited to frighten the farmers until lately. Once a party of men dug ten feet and struck something hard. It was an iron bound chest. They attempted to raise it, when instantly the lights went out and the hole filled up beneath their feet. All around Spook Rock evidences of herftly explorers are to be seen. Tarrytown men visited the spot several days ago, but were driven away by Rockefeller's watchman. Mr. Rockefeller ridicules the Kidd tradition and will not tolerate the digging up of his land any more.

To Solve the Problem.

WASHINGTON: Congresswoman Phillips' bill, for the appointment of a non-partisan commission to collect information and present it in a report to meet the House. The bill has been reported to the House. A companion bill is a long report, which says among other things that the commission is designed also to benefit the business men. The disturbed condition of affairs has entailed a great loss upon the business of the community. The loss of $24,000,000 in six years to employers of labor, as shown in the tables presented by the report, is, it says, but a fractional part of that sustained by transporters, merchants and other engaged in business. A business man here and there will continue to suffer great depressions and value and increasing losses unless a better adjustment is made. Business men need and business interests require, the report concludes, a just and more satisfactory settlement of differences with those with whom they deal and upon whose labor and products successful business must depend. The better labor is protected in all rights the better will be the security for earnings.

They Listen to President Dole.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.: The steamship Monday arrived, seven y-seven days and seven hours from Sydney, via Auckland, Apia and Honolulu. President Dole returned to Honolulu February 4 after paying an extended visit to the island of Hawaii. In an interview with the Herald he said: "When I visited Hawaii thirteen months ago I saw very few natives. They did not exhibit any inclination to see me and to be friendly, and I did not intrude upon them. This time it seemed different. There was every evidence of kindly feeling on their part, and in nearly every part that I visited I was asked to address them, and at the close of the meetings they were profuse in expressing their feeling by cordial handshakes. Politics is not deeply seated in the hearts of the Hawaiians. A majority of them do not seem to care particularly for the monarchy, but they are interested in land, which, to my mind, is encouraging."

Little Sugar from Cuba.

WASHINGTON: Consul General Williams has submitted to the Department of State tables prepared by a competent sugar statistician showing that January 1 only 23,000 tons of sugar had been received at Havana of this year's crop, against 155,773 tons at the same date last year. United States Consuls at Havana, Santiago, Pinar del Rio, and Guaymas report that the planters of that part of Cuba are greatly distressed, many portions of their cane having been much retarded because hands cannot be induced to work at night, fearing an attack by insurgents. I sugar making proceeds and is averted the consul predicts a fair crop in the future.

Name Ought to Scare Her.

New York: An interesting rumor has been circulated in this city that Anelle Rivers-Cramer, the well known novelist, was about to be married again, this time to Prince Troubetzkoff, and that the ceremony would be performed within a very few days. Prince Troubetzkoff is described as an exceedingly fine looking man, more than six feet in height, fair complexion and about thirty years of age. He speaks English and French fluently. He has achieved a great reputation in the literary world, being known as a dramatist and the composer of the four act opera "Meusine."

Will Use the Starting Machine.

SAN FRANCISCO: Starting Machine realizes that the starting machine will be in general use on every race track in America in the very near future. He came to that conclusion on the very first day he saw the race at Woodlawn, and he has since made a contract with R. B. DeLoach, the American agent of Gray's starting machine. He will use the gate at all cities in which he has been detailed to do the starting.

New York Man Chosen.

WASHINGTON: The President has nominated W. A. Baldwin, New York, Third Assistant Secretary of State.

Corbett Issues a Challenge.

CHICAGO: James J. Corbett at the Haymarket Theatre, announced from the stage at the end of his first act by E. J. Maher-Fitzsimmons the right place he will return to the ring, and wages the championship from the winner. The announcement was loudly applauded.

Steal Their Essays.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.: Excitement is intense at the Brown University over the expulsion of the members from the university for the violation of the college rules because of alleged dishonesty in receiving essays.

Opened a Grave for a Whiteman.

CITY OF MEXICO: A grave in the American cemetery of this city was opened in the interest of physical research, as leading mediums of New York and Boston had declared positively that the body in that particular grave was that of a young man who died in 1709 from BURLINGTON, Vt., who came here a year ago and presumably died of typhus fever. The name of the most celebrated of mediums was not Connor who died, but someone else, and then intimated that he had escaped to Texas. The Society by Physical Research became interested and came here to investigate, and the result is that probably the body exhumed is that of Connor. But a gentleman present at the exhumation who knew Connor in the city of Burlington, Vt., said that the name of the man who was buried in that grave was not Connor in a court of justice. The bar was darker but the teeth and fillings were those of Connor. Further investigation will be made in the usual line of comparison of details of teeth with the chart of findings in the files of a New York dentist.

Sufferings Were Terrible.

CARLIACCO, Fla.: A boat containing five corpses and six men barely alive drifted ashore on Dog Island. When discovered by two fishermen the survivors were lying under the beams of the decomposed corpses of their companions. The bodies were preserved, and Gilbert Holmes, who was the strongest, related a story of awful suffering. Last week eleven men left Key West on a smack to fish on the West coast. When two days on the smack was wrecked, the men escaping in a boat without food, water or clothing. Three days after the wreck five men died from exposure. The survivors were forced to swim to the shore. The men who were left alive were for the last two days in the water, the only one conscious, and he does not remember all that happened.

An Ohio Lucretia Borgia.

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio: Coroner Shaffer has gone to Gallipolis to examine the body of a young girl, who is believed to be a Lucretia Borgia. The girl was discovered by a fisherman on the banks of the river. She was found in a boat with a dagger in her back. The girl was about 15 years of age. The coroner is investigating the case.

Destined and Far From Home.

FAXTON, Ill.: Mrs. Kauffman, residing near Harrisburg, Pa., arrived in her return from Helena, Montana, where she has been to bury her daughter. She says she left home with $90. Her memory has partially failed her, and she is unable to tell her destination, the residence of her sister, Mrs. Huff, residing somewhere about 200 miles from Chicago. She also has a quantity of money in her pocket and is accompanied by the name of Henry and John Shearer and Chris and Jacob Haney, residing near Springfield, Ill. She was out in the train there two weeks.

"Bat" Shea's Funeral.

TROY, N. Y.: The funeral of "Bat" Shea, the man who was electrocuted for murder in connection with the Troy election riots was made the occasion of a great demonstration of sympathy with the family of Shea. There was a constant stream of people passing through the pews in which the body of Shea lay uncoffined. The funeral was held at the city and casket factory some miles from Troy. The most prominent of the mourners was "Gates Ajar," bearing the inscription, "Innocent." At the funeral a large concourse of people were present. Several vehicles were required to carry the flowers.

Murder at Muncie, Ill.

MUNCIE, Ill.: Elmer Sheas, aged 26, and the prominent son of Henry S. Sheas, who owns a large dairy north of the city, was murdered and the body was found in a truck on the Lake Erie and Western tracks, near Central Avenue, by Miss Bessie Moore. His feet, one of which was bare, were frozen in the mud and his body covered with a thick layer of snow. The coroner's investigation proves that the six crates, each about an inch long, had been inflicted on or at the left temple with a sharp instrument crushing the skull, which caused death. No clue to murderers.

Methodist Book Concern.

CINCINNATI: The general book commission of the Eastern and Western Methodists, which has been in session at Cincinnati, is ordered to the western house to enlarge its publications and start another weekly. Dr. D. J. Moore, editor of the Western Christian Advocate, protested vigorously. The valuation on the estate of the publishing house in Cincinnati and New York was reported at $1,634,000, outside of the plants and stock.

Tenement House Horror.

LONDON: A number of horrible accidents occurred at a fire in a tenement house at 7 Church Street, Soho. Four children and three adults were burned to death. One man was impaled upon the railing of a landing, and was removed to a hospital in a dying condition. Several persons escaped with the greatest difficulty with burned faces and hands.

Said to Have Two Wives.

PONTIAC, Ill.: William Koever twelve years ago married a daughter of Simon Arnold, a prominent and well known citizen of Pontiac. It is now alleged that Koever has another wife, who lives in the western house to enlarge its publications and start another weekly. Dr. D. J. Moore, editor of the Western Christian Advocate, protested vigorously. The valuation on the estate of the publishing house in Cincinnati and New York was reported at $1,634,000, outside of the plants and stock.

Four Men Rescued from the Ice.

MILWAUKEE: A rowing boat containing four men from the Lake Michigan Ice was rescued from the ice. A rescue was finally accomplished by shooting a line to them from a Lyle gun, and the boat was then dragged over the ice by a team of horses.

Berkshire Breeders.

NEWARK, Ohio: Mr. A. Goldston of Lebanon, Tenn., president of the National Berkshire Breeders' Association here and E. K. Morris of Indianapolis, secretary. The convention adjourned to meet in Nashville, Tenn., February 10 and 11, 1897.

Big Smuggling Scheme.

PHILADELPHIA: The arrest of Capt. Loewitz, of the passenger steamer Riddlehead, charged with smuggling a package of opium, has resulted in the seizure of a large amount of opium. The package was found in the hold of the steamer.

PREPARED TO ESCAPE

A JAIL DELIVERY NARROWLY AVERTED AT FREMONT.

The Hog Thief Gang Becoming Tired of Jail Life—Prison Contractors Want Their Labor at a Lower Rate Than Is Now Being Paid.

Prisoners Prepared to Escape.

The officers have thwarted another plan of the hog thief gang to break jail at Fremont. A day or two ago Jailer Warnka overheard a conversation between Wheeler and Milledge which led him to believe that there was some plan to get out. He at once placed the prisoners in separate cells and searched them thoroughly. In Beem Milledge's shoes he found a piece of gas pipe about two inches long, with a piece of cloth wound around it, so fixed that it could be used as a slung shot. The plan, as near as can be determined, was when Warnka came in to let the prisoners out for their daily exercise to follow him out with the gas pipe, open the inner corridor with the key, and then the same signal at the outer door, as he is in the habit of making, and when the door was opened make a break for liberty. The prisoners have all been placed in separate cells and will be closely watched. It is thought that some of Wheeler's or Milledge's family smuggled in the gas pipe.

Contractors Seek Lower Prices.

Representatives of the penitentiary subcontractors met with the Board of Public Lands and Buildings. For quite awhile there has existed considerable dissatisfaction among the contractors, and several of them have temporarily withdrawn. The Lincoln Cooperative Company, Lincoln Range and Furnace Company, and the Backstaff Bros. were represented at the last meeting of the board. These companies have been paying different prices for convict labor, ranging from 30 to 45 cents per day for each convict. After considerable discussion the matter was laid over until another meeting, with the understanding that the contractors will resume work, but that the contractors will be adjusted by an agreement to furnish the labor to the contractors for a sum per day not to exceed an average of 30 cents to all of them.

Box Butte County Seat Fight.

The people of Box Butte County are getting very much interested in the election of their town to be the capital of the county instead of Hemmingford, since a time ago circulated a petition for a special election, securing 815 names, 115 more than the requisite three fifths of the number of voters, as required by law. When the petition was presented to the board and that body urged to act in the matter, objections were raised by the other side and the commissioners requested to postpone the election on the question until the next year. The Alliance people have now made application to District Judge Westover for a writ of mandamus to compel the commissioners to order the election forthwith.

Timber Cutting Causes Trouble.

There is considerable trouble over on the Niobrara River near O'Neill regarding the cutting of timber from an island. It appears that a man named Gray has a deed to the land, but by a recent Government survey the land is placed in Boyd County. For the past two weeks several parties have been cutting timber from the island, and they will pay no attention to the remonstrances of Gray, so he went to O'Neill and got an order in the district court commanding the parties from cutting the timber. It is reported that Gray has been notified that unless he discontinues the legal proceedings there will be trouble.

Scheme of an Omaha Butcher.

For some time past there have been rumors that some Fremont butcher was handling meat from dead sheep obtained from the late Mahoney's ranch. Mahoney states that such is not the case. He said a butcher from Omaha, whose name and business location he would not give, came to his ranch eight miles east of Fremont and said he would like to make a trade with him to buy and have him ship to Omaha the carcasses, with the pelts on, of the sheep that died. Mahoney at once concluded that things were not all right and positively refused to sell him a single carcass.

Want a Receiver Removed.

A petition was filed in the district court at Plattsmouth by Justice G. Richey, A. L. Tully and D. D. Dyer, against District Judge Ramsey to remove Chief C. P. Farnley as receiver of the defunct Citizens' Bank of that city. The petitioners are stockholders and allege that Farnley's position as receiver of the bank is very detrimental to the interests of the stockholders and depositors.

Tied Up Much Property.

C. S. Clinton of North Platte filed a bill of sale in favor of R. A. Douglas of that city, considered $2,958.55. A mortgage executed September 25 last, was foreclosed by the First National Bank in the sum of $13,900. Later a mortgage was filed on the Clinton residence property in the sum of $1,000, executed by C. S. Clinton and wife in favor of E. M. Leffage of Lexington on April 25, 1895.

Farmers Feel Satisfied.

The few light snows that have fallen in the vicinity of Plattsmouth since January have been of a great deal of benefit to the farmers. There seems to be an unusual amount of confidence among the people regarding the coming season. The farmers' work is going on as usual in their assurance that there will be no lack of moisture during the coming season.

Crime of a Young Boy.

Constable A. E. McGinnis brought a young boy, a son of a boy, to North Platte accused of criminal assault upon a young girl. The boy and girl were both from the same neighborhood. The boy had previously pleaded guilty in a justice court. The county judge continued the case to look into the matter.

The Ryan Outrage.

County Attorney Murphy swore out warrants for the arrest of Stephen McGinnis and Charles Begler for complicity in the killing of young Ryan near O'Neill. The warrant for the arrest of McGinnis is now in the hands of the sheriff. McGinnis is the man who induced Ryan to go to Bigler's upon the day he was held up.

Latest Gold Discoveries.

The latest gold discoveries in Nebraska are reported in a dispatch from North Platte. The discoveries are reported to be very rich and are expected to result in a large amount of gold being produced.

SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

Proceedings of the Senate and House of Representatives—Measures of Importance Discussed and Aoted Upon—List of the Business.

Daily Report of the Work.

In the House on the 12th the debate on the silver substitute for the House bond bill was resumed. Messrs. Underwood, Democrat of Alabama and Cox, Democrat of Tennessee favored concurrence in the substitute. Mr. Brumm, Republican of Pennsylvania favored the American money. The Senate Joint Resolution appropriating $75,000 for a joint survey with Great Britain of the boundary line between Alaska and British territory was adopted. Consideration of the bond silver bill was then resumed. Congress had nothing to do in the Senate on the bill. The bill was reported by the Senate on the 12th. The bill was reported by the Senate on the 12th. The bill was reported by the Senate on the 12th.

Wolf Hunt at Ashland.

The wolf hunt that was advertised came off at Ashland, and furnished considerable sport. The wolf was killed by a party of hunters. The wolf was killed by a party of hunters. The wolf was killed by a party of hunters.

Attorney General Harmon sent to the House on the 13th a reply to the resolution of January 7, requesting him to report what steps he had taken to enforce the law against trusts, combinations and conspiracies in restraint of trade.

The friends of the tariff bill met an unexpected repulse on the 13th, when by the decisive vote of 21 yeas to 29 nays, the Senate defeated the motion of Senator Morrill, Chairman of the Finance Committee, to report a bill to amend the act of March 3, 1879, relating to the enforcement of the Cuban question.

State Insurance Commissioner Eugene Moore has completed the estimates and records of the fire insurance business done in Nebraska during the fiscal year closing December 31. Of the foreign companies the total amount of risks written is $28,123,945.33; premiums received, $1,327,289.55; losses incurred, $71,006.75; losses paid, $71,006.75. The net loss for the year is $1,000,000.00. Premiums received in 1894 was $1,565,044.14, a loss of over $500,000.00. The losses paid in 1894 were $1,014,022.75. The statement of the home companies for 1894 was as follows:

Farmers' and Merchants' Insurance Co.	Received.	Losses Incurred.	Paid.
Lincoln	$5,881	$134,000	$11,443
Home Fire, Omaha	7,045	34,000	35,307
Omaha	1,000	1,000	2,250
Comparison with the figures of 1894 shows a decrease in business. The total loss written by the foreign companies in 1894 amounted to $2,570,225.47, a loss of over $1,000,000.00. Premiums received in 1894 was $1,565,044.14, a loss of over $500,000.00. The losses paid in 1894 were $1,014,022.75. The statement of the home companies for 1894 was as follows:

West Point Women Enterprising.

The ladies of West Point gave a large entertainment on the occasion of Mrs. G. J. Ford and Mrs. Ford's commencement. The affair eclipsed in brilliancy any social event of the season at West Point. One hundred and forty couples were present. The banquet table was magnificent and 2.0 electric lights added to the glitter of the cut glass service.

Hastings Wants Electricity.

The Hastings city council has passed an ordinance to submit the question for voting $15,000 bonds for an electric light plant and $10,000 water works extension.

$2,000 in Taxes.

The Union Pacific paid $20,000 taxes into Kearney County's treasury the other day.

Nebraska Notes.

Pleasant Hill basis of a woman pugilist. The Norfolk candy factory employs ten people. Broken Bow has organized a hook and ladder company. A. E. Wells and C. A. Trimborn have started a bank at Oakland. One of Grand Island's building and loan associations has 2120 members. Sixty-three thousand head of sheep are being bred on Dozice County range. Dr. F. Simon has been appointed local surgeon to the C. St. P. M. & O. road. A flow of artesian water has been struck at West Point, 200 feet from the surface. A Columbus man has invested in a new test drill, which plans four rows at once. Mrs. Langdon, a Norfolk woman 90 years old, fell from her chair and broke her leg. Somebody robbed the Sterling postoffice of $15 while the postmaster was away at dinner. In four weeks' revival fifty-one sinners of Nemaha joined the Methodist Church. So many children in Speller have the whooping cough that the public schools had to close. The insurance companies have paid $13,050 on the Alliance flouring mill, which burned recently. The Coer dze elevator collapsed and permitted 7,000 bushels of wheat to spread all over the township. A son of Charles Starmer, living near Howells, was so badly scalded that his left leg had to be amputated. L. D. Troxel, of Nemaha, took a blushing bride to the altar three weeks ago and has already deserted him.

George Augustus Sala had a peculiarly uncertain temper. Once at a dinner given by him in honor of Henry Irving, Lord Rosebery, who was among the guests, made speech gently bantering the writer. Sala instantly took offense and dived a terrific trade, which began with "Archibald Philip Primrose, Earl of Rosebery, you have dared this night to insult a man who has served his country in every quarter of the globe." And so on at great length, with tremendous vehemence. The table was thunderstruck, but Lord Rosebery made another speech, which soothing the fiery veteran and finally reduced him to tears.

Old Boarder—What's for breakfast? Hlop-no ham; not eggs again. Walter Girl—No, sir; not ham and eggs this morning. "Thank the stars. What is it?" "Only ham."—New York Dispatch.

"The boarders have all left Mrs. Neckbeef's house, haven't they?" "Yes, everybody of them, and the coffee would have gone away if it hadn't been too weak to crawl away."—Florida Times-Union.

NOTES ABOUT SCHOOLS AND THEIR MANAGEMENT.

How a Great Amount of Annoyance May Be Prevented—The Schoolhouse as a Teacher—Country Schools Should Have Scrap Books.

Assigning Lessons.

A great amount of annoyance to both teacher and pupil may be prevented by using great care in the matter of assigning lessons. The work given to young pupils to prepare for recitation should be simply a reproduction of the work done by the class while the teacher was "assigning the lesson," or in other words, studying with her pupils. For more advanced pupils it should be memorizing that which they already understand, or working out problems which will put into operation the principles and rules already learned. "As the twig is bent the tree is inclined," is surely true in school life. A definition learned before it is understood may cause an almost permanent bend in the wrong direction.

I have seen a boy, who had been absent when the lesson was assigned to the class, told to commit to memory such and such things, and then censured because he did not remember the order of the words in the answer which meant nothing to him. Take, for example, the first definitions in the ordinary geography—Murry's Manual, for instance. Tell pupils to memorize them without any previous talk upon them, and see what a miserable result will follow, if you try to have them tell you what is meant by that which you have compelled some of them to learn, and also notice how few will have assigned, I. e., give you the word as it really is.

I do not forget that it is thought we are after and therefore thought should be the body; but, teachers, don't neglect to clothe it in the best garment possible. It is quite right, in fact it is very desirable, to have the student give you the thought in his own words, but then I would have you impress upon him the idea that writers who have spent years of study upon the subject are better prepared to express the thought than any student can be, and, therefore, it is very desirable that they commit to memory the better expression prepared for them. Don't be discouraged if you find parents coming to you and trying to impress upon you that their children know the definitions, only they could not "give it just as it was in the book." If you are sure that the pupil understands what he has to memorize, insist upon it. Every thought well expressed paves the way for the next and in recitations insist that the expression be well formed.

Are you assigning a lesson in spelling? That is merely memory work with the greater part of the class; but try to teach them to train the eyes as well as the mind. I found that having the words written by the pupil was a great help, and with poor spellers I have requested that they bring to the next recitation each word written five times. This I have found to be an excellent home task for the poor speller, as in this way he is compelled to give proper attention to the lesson, and in a few months I have always noticed a decided improvement. Remember, this applies only to the pupil who usually has a poor spelling lesson. Have him bring in the paper for two weeks, then try him for a time, and as soon as he shows signs of neglect in preparing review the demand for written work. Say to him pleasantly: "Well, John, perhaps you cannot memorize, but you can write." He will see the justice, and that he may avoid writing, he will memorize.

In mathematics always be reasonably sure they can do the work assigned. Let them do addition one day more for task work, unless you are certain they can do subtraction. A few moments taken at the close of the school for giving one example similar to the work assigned will often help in home or task work. Don't assign heavy tasks, for by so doing you only multiply work for yourself. Would space permit, I might mention many devices for making home task interesting, but each teacher can find plenty of her own, if she will occasionally assign herself the task.—Normal Instructor.

The Teacher's Personality.

The teacher with a winning, pleasant personality possesses a strong ally in her school work. Pupils are quick to perceive and appreciate a teacher's personal attractions. Refractory pupils succumb to the power of personal influence when compulsion fails.

A teacher's personality is a subtle combination of manner, speech, appearance—her individuality. I visited a school where a lady teacher of rare ability presided. Her power over the school was like witchery. Her boys adored her. She was a loving companion with the girls. The little children trusted her like a mother.

I made this teacher a study. I tried to find her great power. She was not pretty, but her countenance was lighted by a sweet, animated expression. She was not finely dressed, but her clothing was the perfection of neatness and taste. Her hair was always becomingly and prettily arranged; her manner was frank and friendly; her inspiration sympathetic. She was a living inspiration to her school. I heard a boy, one of her pupils, say, "I would rather have any other teacher whip me than to have a word of reproach from Miss S."

During the noon hour she remained at her school, as did most of her scholars, and she took this occasion to learn the inner lives of her pupils by mingling with them in friendly intercourse, by hearing her manner with them in the shade of a tree. By her hearty kindness she made all feel that she had a special regard for the welfare of each of them.

The teacher who does not value the importance of her personality sufficiently to be neat in dress can hardly hope to secure her pupils' respect. Whenever teachers appear in the school room with elbows out, with soiled dress fronts, buttons missing from her shoes, hair slovenly, etc., so that pupils make the teacher's untidiness a subject of common remark—then more than a hint should be given them.

With no one does an attractive manner and neat external appearance have greater power than with the teacher, for the children are much influenced by these things.—School Education.

Fern-Bark Making.

Few are the schools in rural districts that are supplied with any kind of reference books. A very useful book can be compiled by teacher and pupils. A scrap book can be bought for a small amount, or one made of cambric, with board covers, and the leaves filled with historical and geographical sketches, anecdotes and biographies of eminent men, notes on travel and descriptions of natural curiosities.

In my school was a large class of well advanced pupils who became much interested in gleaming from all classes of papers such extracts as were suitable. As the articles were brought, they were placed in envelopes properly labeled, and were pasted in the book when quite a collection was on hand.

An index neatly written on first page aids in finding the subject to be referred to.

All articles should be placed in their proper departments and blank pages should be left for future use, so that sketches and extracts brought in later can be put under their correct head.

Interesting facts about plants and animals, pictures and scenery and persons of note, all found a place in our "Encyclopedia."

Pupils will take more interest in this book of their own manufacture, and refer to it more than they would to a whole set of Encyclopedias.—The Public Schools.

A Superintendent's Note to Teachers.

Teachers: The following are some of the good points discussed at our last grade and general meetings. Let us see if we cannot establish at least as many in our meetings this week. Come thoroughly prepared in all of the work:

1. No one can conscientiously follow the direction of another and succeed.
2. That which best defines a man is not what he is, but what he is trying to become.
3. All "realities" must exist first as "ideals."
4. The teacher must "think" herself into a knowledge of the art and science of instruction.
5. Education is "conditioned" by the fact of self-consciousness.
6. Life is not the absence of wrongdoing—it is a noble effort.
7. Intellect is necessary to the highest moral actions.
8. The function of moral instruction is to clinch the good habits.—Geo. I. Miller, in Iowa Schools.

Remember

- That good use of language comes, from much practice.
- From knowing what one wishes to say or write.
- From a desire to say it well.
- From having an object in saying it.
- From noting how good talkers say things.
- From keeping the eyes open.
- From keeping the mouth shut when there is nothing to say.

Educational Intelligence.

The Chicago School Board had the Cook County normal schools offered to them by the County Board of Education; it costs $85,000 a year to maintain it; of this the city now pays $6,000.—It was decided to accept the offer.

State Supt. Sabin, of Iowa, has divided the Committee on Rural Schools, of which he is chairman, appointed by the National Council of Education, into four sections with the following topics for study: Schools maintenance; supervision; supply of teachers; instructor and discipline. He has outlined a series of topics under each head, which promises a valuable study of this important subject.

During the past year a new department has been added to the Haskell Institute, Lawrence, Kan., namely, the commercial department, making this one of the most complete institutions of its kind to be found anywhere. The establishment of this department and the increased attendance in the normal department, established a year before it, has brought to this institute a large number of advanced students.

The Northwest has another State institution in the form of the new Idaho State Normal School, located at Lewiston. The institution begins work on a solid basis. It not only has a splendid building, fully equipped with laboratories, libraries, spacious recitation halls and an auditorium with a seating capacity of 700 people, but it is fully endowed with 500,000 acres of timber land, a very valuable. The school was first opened with an enrollment of fifty-two.

Notwithstanding the fact that Chicago built eleven school houses last year and rents 213 rooms in private dwellings for school purposes, 11,000 or 12,000 children are deprived of school accommodations. The city superintendent of schools says that twenty buildings of average capacity are needed. These figures, however, do not cover the inadequacy of accommodation, for many thousands of children in the first grades attend school only part of the day, their places being taken by others for the second session. No doubt the number of children receiving partial instruction is greater even than those who do not attend school at all.

Official Figures of Exports.

The Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury Department enables us to show how we have been capturing the markets of the world. Here are our exports of American products and manufactures for six years, 1890 to 1895.

Exports of American products:

Year	Value
1890	$845,987,711
1891	957,333,551
1892	923,237,315
1893	854,737,771
Protection average	920,324,087
1894	807,512,116
1895	807,543,849
Free trade average	807,543,849

During the four years of McKinley protection we captured foreign markets worth, on an average, $920,324,087 a year. During the two Democratic years our captures were worth only $807,543,982 a year. The breach in the wall of protection cost us $121,780,000 in each year of 1894 and 1895. The sooner the wall is repaired the less costly it will be to us.

The Democratic Roosters.

Not long ago I was in the city of Plainfield, N. J., a city of 10,000 inhabitants and rapidly becoming a fashionable suburb of New York. I strolled into a barber shop. I always like to talk to the barber. He knows everything and has a cheerful way of letting go of it. So I asked him how things were coming in Plainfield. He said things were bad enough in Plainfield. I asked him what was the matter with Plainfield. "Well," said he, "these New York roosters don't help a town much." I asked him what he meant. "Why," said he, "it means those fellows doing business in the city of New York. They buy what they need and get shaved before they start home, and just roost in Plainfield." And as I crawled out of that Democratic barber's chair I made up my mind to do everything I could by vote and by speech to prevent the Democratic party from converting the people of the United States into English roosters, doing business in Loudon and merely sleeping in the United States.—Hon. J. P. Dolliver, M. C., of Iowa.

"Freedom from Taxation."

We wonder if the free-traders are studying the latest returns from the Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury Department, and if they are comparing them with the returns of former years. If so, they are somewhat silent as to the comfort they are depriving, and are not explaining to the people just how the conditions compare with their theories of 1892. Let us examine our imports of free goods for five years:

Imports of free goods twelve months ending Dec. 31:

Year	Free of duty.
1891	$429,335,677
1892	446,978,931
1893	417,342,291
Protection average	431,218,963
1894	388,371,483
Free trade average	384,774,307
1895	381,073,150

That McKinley "extortion" tariff, as the free-traders call it, gave us an average of $431,218,963 of free goods every year, upon which no duty was paid. The free trade (so-called) tariff bill has given us an average of only $384,073,150 worth of free goods. The tariff for protection enabled us to get, each year, $47,145,816 worth more goods without paying any duty on them than we get now since we were "relieved" of the "great burden" of McKinleyism. What a "relief" it has been to pay duties upon $47,000,000 worth more goods a year under "freedom from taxation." Better let us have a little more "taxation" of the McKinley sort. Then we can get 12 per cent. more free goods.

The Seat of the Trouble.

Restore again the policy of the Republican party and reverse the balance of trade in our favor and the effect will be, as it always has been heretofore, to stop the outflow of gold from our shores and bring to us instead the yellow metal sufficient to make good the balance of trade in our favor. The real seat of the present trouble is largely if not wholly due to a false economic policy insisted upon by the opposition in the face of overwhelming facts as well as the logic of the present unfortunate condition of our national well-being.—Hon. Robert J. Gamble, M. C., of South Dakota.

The Era of "Cheapness."

The British manufacturers have been enabled to pour into the country vast quantities of cheap, flimsy goods, kept out under former protection tariffs, and the American manufacturers have been forced to meet this cheap competition by reducing the quality of their goods correspondingly. This is sufficiently proved by the immense increase in the importation of shoddy and other cheap substitutes for pure wool.—Morning Journal, New Haven, Conn.

Grover's Great Record.

Grover Cleveland will go into history as the President who doubled the national war debt in four years. If the interest on his loans were added to the principal the national debt left by the Harrison administration would be almost doubled. There is a great deal more English style about keeping up the national debt than the American people like.—The Republican, Binghamton, N. Y.

National, Not Sectional.

It is the policy of the Republican party to not only extend ample protection to the manufacturers of the New England States, but it is the policy of the Republican party, as evinced by all the legislation they have enacted in the past, to likewise extend protection to every article in which the Southern people are interested.—Hon. Jeter C. Pritchard, United States Senator of North Carolina.

Wage Earners' Issues.

The less in wages to those engaged in strikes in Connecticut last year, as estimated by the State Bureau of Labor statistics, was $929,400. The loss to employers was $92,800, less than one-tenth of the amount lost by the wage-earners.

The Day Has Dawned.

It is a relief, sir, to know that the day has already dawned for a return to American policies and American institutions.—Hon. Binger Hermann, M. C., of Oregon.

Spring Headgear Must Be Ingeniously Contrived to Present Decided Novelties, for It Seems as if Almost All Feasible Types Were in Present Use.

Milinery Modes.

New York correspondence: TRIMMING millinery as yet casts no shadow before it to form waiting women of what is coming, but due point is certain, the new headgear that is donned at Easter time must be ingeniously contrived to present decided novelties, for it seems as if almost all the feasible types were in present use. It seems utterly impossible that all the current styles in headgear will be cast aside with the first of April, and appears more than probable that, instead of bringing a general change, Easter will see a blending of the winter modes into those of spring. With the latitude that is now permissible, there is no excuse for an unbecoming or unsuitable hat, and the woman that wears such should rightly feel the law's heavy hand. She has all the shapes in the world to choose from, she may have a big hat or a tiny one, may trim it with all the colors of the rainbow, or make it all one color, nodding plumes, perky bows, flashing buckles, velvet, silk, satin, lace, fur—all is fash that comes to her net, and all is fashionable that comes to her hat.

At present the newest idea in millinery is a type of hat that has uncertain shape and outline, and that is made from a twisted fold of velvet, plaid velvet, or some rich bright shade preferred. The fold takes remotely the outline of a hat, and wire holds whatever shape it has, though when it is on the head it looks as if it wasn't meant to come off. On the hat of this sort, appears at the head of this column, a series of the very popular crepe poppies is set above the edge of the velvet, making as much of a brim as the hat can boast. These poppies are as big as your hand, and may be bigger if the hat is large enough to stand it. They are merely soft rosettes of crepe of some delicate shade, and in the center of the rosette is set a whirl of poppy stamens. That's your poppy. Whole hats are made of such, and it is permissible that they should quite swamp the velvet so that only an edge of it shows against the hair. At one side a flare of algrette rises, at the back the edge or brim narrows till it lies against the hair, and the top presents a creased surface of the velvet, so that the algrette shows in all views.

The loose drawing of the hair from the brow, temples and sides of the face has exerted a far greater influence on recent millinery than most women realize. Such dressing of the locks absolutely demands a setting of picturesque outline in the hat. The method followed by the best milliners this season is to build on a very smart foundation a hat of large surface and brim, after the manner of the second pictured one. The building is done by weaving in and out along the narrow brim of the foundation.

sort. Such a hat is worn well on the top of the head, and the hair rolls softly under the curving trim that makes the brim.

So much of the newest output of our best hat makers is so pronouncedly gorgeous with brilliant effects as to plainly convey the warning that the day of spangles and flasheries is at high noon, and not a bit on the wane. Under this exaggerated treatment the simple-minded felt becomes a blaze of metallic arabesque, and when such a felt is turned sharply back from the face, then slashed above the brow, making two paddle-wheel affairs that flare to either side, and when these paddles are spread all over with big designs carried out in metallic tissue, set with gleaming rhinestones, the investigator will begin to realize that she is in more danger of putting too little than too much of pronounced effect on her best hat. Cock's-quills are again the rage, and they, too, have succumbed to the spangling tendency so long displayed by plumes. These quills are now set mainly in at all corners of the hat, and stick out "slantingly" in every direction; indeed, not unlike the effect that might be produced if the hat had been set up for expert archery target and every arrow had come home. The Fox's Reputation for Smartness.

was well sustained by a member of the tribe near Fairmount, Maine, one other day. A couple of hounds and a hunter were after it, and the fox led the hounds to a frozen pond, and out on the ice so thin that it just supported the fox, which escaped, while the hounds went through and were drawn out.

loop and the side ones, the hair rolls softly. At the back a series of loops lies close to the hair. To give the needed touch of audacity without which the modern girl of the moment would seem merely commonplace, a pair of plumes is set in front, upstanding smartly, their tips nodding in different directions.

Whenever a hat comes from the maker with brim and crown that can be easily recognized, it seems as if the milliner at once seizes upon it and devotes all her energies to destroying the outline of said brim and crown, and to elaborating the whole into something new and strange. A favorite method is presented in the third illustration, and consists of setting a wide ruffle of silk against the sides of the hat, the lower part of the ruffle being held by a hat band, and the top rearing a waving edge far above the original crown. This edge is held to irregularity and grace—one and the same thing these days—by wire. Tucked down safe somewhere between the ruffle and the side of the hat is a plume, or a bunch of plumes, and the tips rise still higher and bend gracefully over the edge of the ruffle. The band by which the fall is held to the hat is as elaborate as you like, and is knotted into a bow on one side that fits an end or towards the general uprising above. All brims are either cut narrow or rolled, close at the back and a knot of ribbon, or a bunch of bows should always lie under the brim and against the hair. The brim itself is softened in effect by setting net or lace against it; indeed, by the time the milliner has completed her transformation of the hat not an inch of its original surface is visible or of outline to be traced.

The same idea of ruffles can be made to supply the scheme for an entire hat, and a pretty interpretation of it is next shown. An appearance it is like a double ruffle, one frill standing up for the sides of the hat, the other flaring horizontally to serve as brim. A band holds the two ruffles to their respective duties, and the resulting hat may or may not have a crown or top. Sometimes investigation discovers a little tiny wire or felt affair with a modest low crown and a narrow brim, both of these features having been overreached by the applied frills. Such a foundation serves merely to give firmness to the ruffles and to attach to the hat the dual flare of plume, a lairre of uplift of some sort. Such a hat is worn well on the top of the head, and the hair rolls softly under the curving trim that makes the brim.

The friends of the tariff bill met an unexpected repulse on the 13th, when, by the decisive vote of 175 yeas to 125 nays, the resolution of the Senate of January 21, 1936, relative to the resolution of the House of Representatives of January 21, 1936, relative to the resolution of the Senate of January 21, 1936.

14th, when the final vote was taken on concurrence in the Senate free coinage amendment, was 175 yeas to 125 nays. The motion to concur was defeated—125 yeas to 175 nays.

An analysis of the vote shows that 184 Republicans voted for the free coinage amendment, and 88 Democrats, 25 Republicans and 7 Populists for concurrence. The debate which preceded the vote was of an interesting character.

The personal rivalry between the two leaders of the opposing factions of the Democratic side of the House added to the interest of the occasion. Mr. Daize of Pennsylvania closed in behalf of the Republicans. The House then took a recess until 8 o'clock, the evening session to be devoted to private pension bills.

The Senate amendment to the bills to incorporate the national society of the Disabled, of the National Soldiers' Home, and the grant of a pension to the widow of a soldier who died in the service of the United States.

A bonus of $150.00 and a building site has been offered the Norfolk Creamery Company, for which the company agrees to put in a Separator and further agrees to operate the same for five years, also to pay the same price for pure sweet milk as they do to the patrons of the Norfolk Creamery. The contract has been drafted and signed. It is expected that the creamery will be running within the next thirty days.
