

THE WEEK'S DOINGS IN SENATE AND HOUSE.

A Comprehensive Digest of the Proceedings in the Legislative Chambers at Washington—Matters that Concern the People.

Lawmakers at Labor.

Opponents of the bankruptcy bill which passed the House Saturday afternoon by a decisive majority, the vote being 157 yeas to 81 nays, were not confined to either of the great political parties or any section. State delegations were divided as to the propriety of such a bill and the members of the Illinois delegation were by no means favorably disposed toward the measure.

The Senate passed Monday in debate of the resolution for bond investigation, ignoring the river and harbor bill. The House discussed Senate amendments to the naval appropriation bill. Quite a number of bills were passed during the day, mostly of minor importance.

The opponents of four battle ships sustained defeat in the House Tuesday on the proposition to accept the Senate amendment to the naval appropriation bill, reducing the number to two.

The Senate again put in a day Wednesday debating the subject of investigation of recent bond issues. The House served notice on the Senate and the country that it had transacted its business and was ready for the final adjournment.

By a vote of 51 to 6 the Senate Thursday inaugurated an investigation, to be conducted by the Senate Committee on Finance, into the facts and circumstances connected with the sale of United States bonds by the Secretary of the Treasury during the last three years.

The House Friday voted to give each member $100 a month for recess clerk hire. A bill was passed to appropriate $5,000 for the deportation of the Canadian refugee Guro Indians from the State of Montana.

Big Electrical Plant. Mariposa County, California, is to have the third largest electrical power developing and distributing plant in the United States.

Etiquette of Introductions. Two ladies can shake hands on being introduced. It is considered good form.

When an introduction is given the name should be pronounced in a clear, distinct tone.

It is bad form to introduce on the street or any place of amusement.

A hostess should always extend her hand to a stranger when brought to her house for the first time.

At a dinner party the hostess introduces the lady to the gentleman who is to take her in to dinner.

MAILS IN ALASKA.

A Letter from One of the Carriers Tells Something About Its Difficulties.

The difficulties and hardships of carrying the mail in the Arctic during the winter season is shown in a letter from T. Constantine Healy, manager of the Yukon Express and Transportation Company.

"The wind, which was northerly," says the letter, "continued so severe and blustering that they did not care to take the job, so between the head of the canyon and Sheep Camp we put in our time till the middle of January trying to move our outfit. The weather was severe during all this time, and we had but two days that we could work at all.

"At Big Rock, on the other side of the summit, Mr. Gasch and I bade good-by to Mr. Stewart and native, and started out for this side. We reached the place where we had pitched our camp at the head of the canyon, had our supper, and were complimenting ourselves on finally getting across the range, when about 3 o'clock in the evening the Indian appeared, surprising us very much.

"Mahmaloose! Mahmaloose!" (It is death, it is death), and holding his hands over his face, which was freezing. He finally turned back. Stewart was compelled to do the same, after picking the outfit so that it could be found. It was 11 p. m. when Stewart arrived in our camp, and it was indeed a pleasant surprise, as he was so far behind the native that we had almost given him up.

"After holding council Mr. Gasch and myself returned to Healy & Wilson's camp that night. Here we found Harry Davis, whose services we immediately secured, bought another dog from one of the natives, and started out to try the summit again. Davis and Stewart and Joe, the native, got over the summit on the 23d, and are now on their way down the lakes, as the Indians report going good on the other side.

"This is only giving you a simple outline of our difficulties. The wolves came into our cache at Stone House and carried off all our dog food as well as a Winchester rifle. With this and much other bad luck, you can judge what kind of humor we are in. We wish you and the people to understand that we bucked the summit of the range from Dec. 20 to Feb. 2. We did as well as any men could do, and better than a great many, finally succeeding. We are trying to do the people of the Yukon Valley a service in giving them a regular mail route. We shall not be caught again as we were this winter, as we are going to have caches made at regular intervals of seventy or eighty miles all along the river, which will enable us to travel much lighter.—Alaska Searchlight.

Toulouse Geese.

The Toulouse are the largest kind, and the Chinese are the smallest of the domestic geese. The latter are very hardy and productive, laying from fifty to seventy eggs in a season. The birds and eggs are smaller by nearly half than Toulouse or Embdens, says the Orange County Farmer.

Very early hatched geese are the best for stock, or very late birds in their second year, as the eggs are not reliable for hatching purposes until the parents are over fifteen months old.

Women Revivalists.

Two young unmarried women have been conducting a revival at Malta Bend, Mich., during the past week or so, and with "wonderful" results.

Very Proper.

CAPTURING MARKETS OF THE WORLD.

FARM PRODUCTS STILL CHEAPER

We quote some of the prices of farm products, published by Bradstreet's, and also give the prices of similar products four years ago, in the good old times of prosperity:

Table with columns for 1892 and 1896 prices for various farm products like Steers, Sheep, Hogs, Horses, Beef, Pork, Lard, Butter, Cheese, Rice, Beans, Peas, Potatoes, Onions, and Wool.

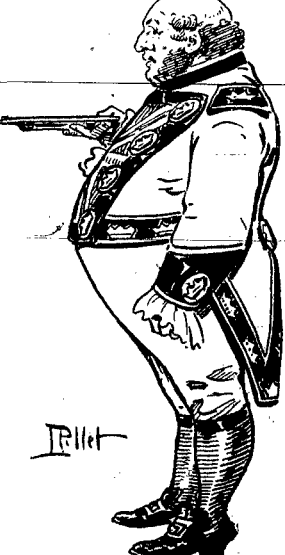

The farmer can figure out his increased profits since the "good times" were inaugurated at the beginning of 1896. He can also figure out his profits since the good old McKinley tariff times of 1892. He can also figure out, from the advance in the price of sugar and the lower prices of his own products, how much less sugar he now gets for his meat, butter, cheese, beans, peas, potatoes, wool or onions than he got in 1892.

The Value of Labor.

No worthy American wants to reduce the price of labor in the United States. It ought not to be reduced, for the sake of the laborer and his family and the good of society it ought to be maintained. To increase it would be in better harmony with the public sense.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS

THINGS PERTAINING TO THE FARM AND HOME.

Intensive Farming in Practice—Two Uses for Corn-cobs—Our Barnyards Too Large—Gypsum Not Good on Strawberries—The Dairy Cow.

Results from a Quarter Acre.

Two years ago I planted one-fourth of an acre in early potatoes. As soon as we were done working the potatoes we planted tobacco between the rows of the potatoes. When the potatoes were carried off and the ground cultivated, when the lot had the appearance of a tobacco field, writes a correspondent to the Orange County Farmer.

The best crop of corn that I ever raised was grown on a four-acre lot, on which the second growth of the previous year's clover crop was left standing and then plowed down. The ground was thoroughly prepared before planting, for I held to the theory that ground cannot be prepared after the crop is planted.

Uses for Corn-cobs.

I utilize my corn-cobs in two ways—by grinding with the grain, and by kindling fires, says a writer in the Country Gentleman. The experiment stations have shown beyond discussion that cob meal, when fed to cattle, is fully as valuable, measure for measure, as clear meal, owing, it is presumed, to the fact that the cob separates the particles of grain that the digestive secretions of the animal can more thoroughly act on them.

The Size of Barnyards.

As the farmer in the closing days of winter is busy scraping up the scattered manure in his barnyard to draw away to the fields he will almost always admit that his barnyard is larger than it should be. Our large barnyards are a relic of the times when stock was mainly fed out of doors, and the large surface was intended to make it convenient for feeding so that stock would not crowd each other.

Gypsum on Strawberries.

It is not a good plan to sow gypsum on strawberries. It will usually encourage so large a growth of clover that it will be nearly impossible to keep the rows clean even for the first year. The gypsum has besides no special effect in making a large growth of the strawberry vines.

The Dairy Cow.

The modern dairy cow is an extremely artificial development, and as such should be entrusted only to the expert breeder, feeder and handler, just as a complicated machine is placed in the hands of none but skilled mechanics.

limit. Feed not only a liberal ration, but compound the same with carefully taking pains to have it well balanced. Of course, it is always well to know just which grains and fodder are most easily and cheaply obtained, and as much of these should be used as possible without injuring the quality of the ration.

Apple Orchards as Windbreaks. Wherever forests are cleared off there soon comes a demand for a windbreak of some kind to shelter buildings and stock from cold blasts, and to protect the farm from the severest winter winds.

Sharpening Tools.

Before the season for outdoor work begins all the hoes, cultivators and other farm implements should be got in condition for effective use. Labor is too dear to be wasted in working with a dull tool, and the farmer stands in his own light who allows labor to be thrown away because the tools he works with are inferior.

Oats and Peas.

One of the best early feeds for stock, especially breeding animals, may be secured by sowing oats and peas somewhat thickly, either to be pastured or cut for soiling. For this purpose it is best to sow fully three bushels of seed per acre, while if the crop is to be grown for its grain two bushels of seed is a great plenty.

Due to Tree Agents.

It is due to the tree agents and even to the tree peddlers and scampers to say that there are doubtless thousands of fruit trees now growing that would never have been planted if they had not stirred up sleepy farmers by their wonderful stories to buy and plant, when the same men would not have gone three miles to a local nursery of their own accord.

Odds and Ends.

One part acetic acid to seven parts water rubbed well into the scalp once a day, will, it is said, induce a new growth of hair.

To remove a grease spot from wall paper, hold a piece of blotting paper over the spot with a hot flatiron for a few moments.

Trying to piece a stale bread in a white muslin cloth and dropping it in to your kettle with your boiling cabbage. It will absorb all the offensive odor.

According to a wholesale furniture dealer, the best furniture polish is made of one-third alcohol and two-thirds sweet oil. Apply it with a soft cloth and rub with another cloth.

When your stove has burned red and your blacking won't stick to it, put a little fat fried from salt pork into the water in which you dissolve your blacking and try again.

Try chopping your bread instead of kneading it so long. It is a great help. Put plenty of flour on your bread board and on your dough, when it has been stirred very stiff, and turn your bread often as you chop it.

Try to avoid having the bread and cake crack open while baking. This cracking on the top is caused by having the oven too hot when the loaf is put in, and the crust formed before the heat has caused the dough to expand.

You may remove the tightness caused by a cold almost instantly by mixing ammonia and sweet oil, or fresh hen's oil will do, shaking it thoroughly and rubbing it on the nose and forehead. By adding laudanum you have a splendid liniment.

Fruit is not a complete dietary in itself, but it is excellent to accompany a meat diet. The acid contained in the fruits assist digestion, and it is for this reason that apple sauce should be served with roast pork or goose, the fat of which is rendered more assimilable by it.

Farmers may make a mistake in overlooking their local markets. When articles are shipped to the large cities, owing to inducements in the shape of better prices, the commissions and cost of transportation may leave less profit than could be secured nearer home. Butter and eggs can always find a good market and ready sale, being in demand everywhere.

CHAPTER XIII

On receipt of a telegram, Mrs. Meason, despite the very delicate state of her health, started at once for Spain, and one day arrived, quite unexpectedly, at the Castle when the duke and duchess were to dinner.

At the sight of her grandmother Constance was quite overcome. She crossed bitterly, and passionately kissed the old lady's face and hands, greatly to the annoyance of the duke.

"My dear Constance," said Mrs. Meason, "how pale you look! Why has the sun of Spain brought no roses to your cheeks?"

"Your grandchild, madam, infinitely prefers the fogs of England," said the duke, grimly.

"Well, is it not natural? It is her home; she is an English woman." The duke shrugged his shoulders.

It was a great consolation to Constance to have her grandmother with her, and during the days which followed the old lady's arrival she seemed more contented than she had been since her marriage.

"Do you mean to say," said Constance, hoarsely, "that this which you have told me is true; that the whole story of my poor mother's sorrow was a fabrication?"

"Not at all; the story of the poor lady's sorrowful death was true—it was altered in the telling, that was all. The blame of the whole thing was, for your benefit, laid at the door of the Harrington family; whereas the sole cause of it was Mrs. Meason herself; and your mother was a gentle loving girl, and was received by your father's family with open arms.

past; recalled the day when he had asked Constance to become his wife, and she had consented. Yet, she had loved him then, he felt sure of it; but how soon her love had changed.

"She was false as perdition!" he cried, "and yet I go to London because I wish to breathe the same air with her, to be near her, although the very thought of it almost drives me mad."

"He waited till most of his comrades had gone ashore, then he too landed, drove to the station, and was just in time to catch the train to London."

Arriving, Frank called a hansom, and giving his servant the name of the hotel at which he meant to stop, ordered him to follow with the baggage.

He dined, then he strolled out into the streets. How desolate everything seemed; and yet things were going on much in the same old way. The Strand was thronged, and people hurried along, hardly giving a glance at the pale young fellow carrying his arm in a sling.

"Good heavens, Captain Howarth," exclaimed the little lady as Frank went up to her; "then it is really you. When I first saw you I thought it was your ghost! A ghost!"

"Why should you think it was my ghost, Lady Seaford?"

"Why? My dear sir, everybody believes you to be dead. It was reported that you were killed in action, and the report was never contradicted."

—he disliked Mrs. Meason. They quarreled, and no one was to blame but the lady. Her tyranny finally separated husband and wife, and hastened the death of the latter.

WORDS TO CONGRESS.

REV. DR. TALMAGE ON "BEFORE THEY ADJOURN."

He Wants Some Things Done and Some More Undone—A Grand and Hopeful Sermon of Interest to National Legislators.

Our Washington Pulpit. Never was a timelier or more appropriate sermon than that preached by Rev. Dr. Talmage last Sunday morning.

By residence in Washington I have come to find out that many of our public men are persistently misrepresented, and some of the best of them, the purest in their lives and most faithful in the discharge of their duties, are the worst defamed.

"I have seen no one," he said. "Ah! the poor child will go crazy when she hears you are alive. Ever since that report came she has been in terrible grief, wore the deepest mourning and positively refused to go anywhere; but of course that will be all changed now. Every one expects her to be the sensation of the season, and I have no doubt she will be; she is more beautiful than ever she was in her life."

Frank started, bit his lip and was amazed to feel that his face was flushing painfully.

"I have seen no one," he said. "Ah! the poor child will go crazy when she hears you are alive. Ever since that report came she has been in terrible grief, wore the deepest mourning and positively refused to go anywhere; but of course that will be all changed now. Every one expects her to be the sensation of the season, and I have no doubt she will be; she is more beautiful than ever she was in her life."

Frank said nothing, but as he listened a cold sneer curled his lip. The countess saw and fancied she had told enough.

"Well, an revoir," she said, "now that you are here and not dead, I hope you will come and see us."

Mechanically Frank raised his hat, and the brougham moved away. When it had gone a few yards the countess gave the order:

"Go to No. 104 Park lane."

Solemn Scenes. Again, before the approaching adjournment of our American congress, it ought to be decidedly and forever settled that no appropriations be made to sectarian schools, and that the courtship between broken up, and that this country be forever temporarily settled. I wish it might be completely and forever settled.

But when I told him that no religious denomination in America had any privilege above the others he could hardly understand it. The Greek church first in Russia; the Lutheran church first in Germany; the Episcopal church first in England; the Catholic church first in Rome; Mohammedanism first in Constantinople. The emperor wondered how it was possible that all the denominations in America could stand on the same platform. But so it is, and so let it ever be.

By residence in Washington I have come to find out that many of our public men are persistently misrepresented, and some of the best of them, the purest in their lives and most faithful in the discharge of their duties, are the worst defamed.

But now that I am speaking of national affairs from a religious standpoint, I bethink myself of the fact that two other gospels will soon lift and fall, the one at St. Louis and the other at Chicago.

There are people in this country who do not believe in God, and it would be an insult to them. "Well, there are people in this country who do not believe in common decency, or common honesty, or any kind of government, preferring anarchy. You very often regard a man who does not believe in God any more than you should regard a man who refuses to believe in common decency."

There are three great reasons why you and I should do our best for this country—three great reasons: Our fathers' graves, our cradle, our children's birth-right. When I say your fathers' graves, your pulses run quickly. Whether they sleep in city cemetery or country graveyard, their dust is very precious to you.
